A short, to-the-point summary of the plot precedes each complete libretto.

FOREWORD

"The poetry is primary, the music should illustrate it and color it and emphasize the meaning without interrupting the action or weakening it by superfluous ornament. It is much the same as the relation of harmonious color, well disposed light and shade to accurate drawing, which should animate the figures without altering the outines."—Cristoph Willibald Gluck, 1767

Even in 1767, it was clear that the relationship between poetry and music in opera is a crucial one: to balance, illuminate and characterize one another. Very often, the literary richness of opera is lost in the genius of its musical content. This volume was compiled to celebrate the poetry, the drama and the history of the operatic genre.

Throughout its long and varied history, opera has played various social, political and artistic roles. The librettos themselves modulate from the sublime to the ridiculous, exploring fantasy, politics, religion, secular life, love and death. Operas have been written for librettos based on Greek mythology, biblical stories, political events and fairy tales. While all of the following operas are currently performed for audiences of similar natures and tastes, with a wide level of social and artistic acceptance, it is important to recognize that the poetry and stories have been performed and received in a variety of contexts. For instance, Beaumarchais' controversial La Nozze di Figaro, adapted for the opera by Mozart and Da Ponte, was banned in France in the late 1700's due to the then-scathing criticism of the aristocracy. Whether they follow in the steps of the popular commedia del arte Italian style seen in Leoncavallo's I Pagliacci, which laid the foundations for the mime tradition in France, or in Monteverdi's courtly and formal manner seen in L'Incoronazione di Poppea, part of the first cornerstones of modern operatic form, these librettos serve not only as extraordinary literary and musical accomplishments, but also as instruments in the understanding of history.

The following librettos also serve as a tool to enhance the operatic experience for the student, the historian and the opera buff. The enjoyment of opera as an art form is incomplete without the poetic experience; it is unfulfilled without a deep grasp of the story that is illustrated in the libretto and brought to life in the score. In Wagnerian opera, especially, where the complexities of character and plot are sometimes virtually undecipherable, the ability to clarify the plotlines frees the listener to enjoy the music without confusion.

Never before has such a collection been compiled: it is now possible to explore the beauty and intricacies of the poetic side of opera in a more complete way than ever before. It is the hope that opera lovers may see the outlines and further appreciate the harmony within the rich and historical operatic tradition.

Fidelio (1805)

MUSIC BY LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN

LIBRETTO BY JOSEF SONNLEITHNER, BASED ON FRENCH LIBRETTO BY JEAN NICOLAS BOUILLY; SONNLEITHNER'S LIBRETTO WAS REVISED BY STEFAN VON BREUNING IN 1806 & BY GEORG FRIEDRICH TREITSCHKE IN 1814

This lyric two-act opera, set to a libretto by Josef Sonnleithner (after Jean-Nicolas Bouilly's Léonore, ou L'Amour conjugal for Gaveaux) was first performed at the Theater an der Wien in Vienna on November 20, 1805. The story begins at a state prison near Seville during the eighteenth century. Leonora, disguised as a youth named Fidelio, is working as an assistant to Rocco, the chief jailer, so as to find out where her husband, Florestan, is imprisoned. Florestan disappeared two years' prior - a rumor spread that he died, but he is actually being held by Don Pizarro, the prison governor, which Leonora suspects. Marcellina, the daughter of Don Pizarro, is in love with Fidelio. Don Pizarro, pleased with his assistant, promises that Marcellina and Fidelio will be married. Fidelio asks that "he" be permitted to assist Rocco more; Rocco agrees, stating that Fidelio must not visit the prisoner held in the dungeon for the past two years. Don Pizarro is given anonymous warning that Don Fernando, the Minister of State, plans to make a surprise inspection of the prison on the following day. He plans to murder Florestan, but Rocco will not kill him and will only agree to dig his grave. Fidelio overhears this plot, and when Pizarro departs "he" reminds Rocco that this is the day when the prisoners come out for a brief walk in the fresh air. Rocco tells "him" that Pizarro has agreed to the wedding of Fidelio and Marcellina and that "he" may come with him to the dungeon to dig the grave. Pizarro re-enters and objects to the prisoners being allowed out, but Rocco replies that this was in celebration of the King's birthday. The prisoners return to their cells, and Fidelio and Rocco go down to the dungeon. Florestan, starving and ill, thinks he hears Leonora calling him from heaven. Fidelio and Rocco begin to dig the grave. Leonora resolves not to let the prisoner be killed (she doesn't yet know it is her husband); when she gives him food she recognizes him. Florestan implores Rocco to give a message to his wife that he is alive, which Rocco refuses to do, and Lenora tries to calm him. Pizarro enters, prepared to stab Florestan. Leonora reveals herself and threatens him with a gun. A trumpet announces the arrival of Don Fernando, and Pizarro must greet him. Fernando promises to free all of those unjustly imprisoned and is shocked to discover Florestan, whom he thought to be dead, alive before him. When he is told the truth, Pizarro is arrested, Leonora frees her husband and all celebrate the fortunate outcome.

■ ACT I

SCENE I

(The Court Yard of a State Prison. In the back ground the principal gate, and a high rampart wall, over which trees are seen branching out. In the gate, which is closed, there is a little door for foot-passengers. At the side of the gate is the gate-keeper's lodge. The side scenes on the left (of the spectators) present the dwelling of the prisoners. All the windows are grated; and the doors, which are marked with numbers, are strongly bolted. At the foremost wing (a side scene) is the door of the residence of the Turnkey. On the right stand trees, inclosed within iron railings; which together with a garden gate, point out the entrance to the castle garden.)

(Marceline is seen ironing linen at her door; near her stands the firepan in which she heats her irons. Jacquino, who keeps closer to the door, opens it to several persons, who present him with parcels, or packets of letters: he carries them into his little room.)

JACQUINO: Jetzt, Schätzchen, sind wir allein, wir können vertraulich nun plaudern.	JACQUINO: Now, my little treasure, we are alone, now we may chat in confidence.
MARCELLINE: Es wird ja nichts Wichtiges sein, ich darf bei der Arbeit nicht zaudern.	MARCELINE: Surely it cannot be so important, I dare not tarry at my work.
JACQUINO: Ein Wörtchen, du Trotzige! du —	JACQUINO: A little word, you cross one, you!
MARCELLINE: So sprich nur, ich höre ja zu.	MARCELINE: Well, speak; I'm all attention.
JACQUINO: Wenn du mir nicht freundlicher blickest, so bring' ich kein Wörtchen hervor.	JACQUINO: If you look so cross, I won't say a word.
MARCELLINE: Wenn du dich nicht in mich schickest, verstopf' ich mir vollends das Ohr.	MARCELINE: If you won't please me, I'll stop my ears altogether.
JACQUINO: Ein Weilchen nur höre mir zu.	JACQUINO: One moment only listen,—
MARCELLINE: So hab' ich denn nimmermehr Ruh'.	MARCELINE: Never more shall I be at rest.
JACQUINO: Dann lass ich dich wieder in Run', ich, ich habe, ich habe zum Weibe dich gewählet, verstehst du?	JACQUINO: I will then leave you alone! I have chosen a wife, and you know that it is you.

MARCELLINE: So rede, so rede nur zu.	MARCELINE: Chatter away, chatter away.
JACQUINO: Und, und wenn mir dein Jawort nicht fehlet, was meinst du? Wir könnten in wenigen Wochen—Zum Henker das ewige Pochen.	JACQUINO: And if I got your consent, what mean you? And in a few weeks we might— The deuce, this eternal knocking.
MARCELLINE: Das ist ja doch klar, so sind wir ein Paar. Recht schön, du bestimmst schone die Zeit, so bin ich doch endlich befreit!	MARCELINE: Surely, that's plain enough. Why we are then a pair. This is charming. You are already settling the time, and I am released at last.
JACQUINO: Da war ich so herrlich im Gang, und immer, immer entwischt mir der Fang.	JACQUINO: Oh, I was so happily pleased, but I am always losing the catch.
MARCELLINE: Wie macht seine Liebe mir bang, wie werden die Stunden mir lang. Ich weiss, dass der Arme sich quälet, es thut mir so leid auch um ihn! Fidelio, Fidelio hab' ich gewählet, ihn lieben ist süsser Gewinn.	MARCELINE: How tiresome is his love. My hours last now for ever, I know this wretched one is his own torment; I pity him. But Fidelio is my choice, and to love him my greatest delight!
JACQUINO: Wo war ich, sie sieht mich nicht an!	JACQUINO: Where was I? She does not look at me.
MARCELLINE: Da ist er, er fängt wieder an!	MARCELINE: There he begins again.
JACQUINO: Wann wirst du das Jawort mir geben? Es könnte ja heute noch sein. Du bist doch wahrhaftig von Stein.	JACQUINO: When shall you give your consent, and why not today? You are really as hard as a stone.
MARCELLINE: O weh! er verbittert mein Leben. Jetzt, morgen und immer und immer nein. Ich muss ja so hart mit ihm sein.	MARCELINE: Alas, he embitters my life, now, tomorrow, and always no! I really must be hard with him.
JACQUINO: Kein Wünschen, kein Bitten geht ein.	JACQUINO: And all desires, entreaties, are in vain!
MARCELLINE: Er hofft bei dem mindesten Schein.	MARCELINE: A shadow gives him hope.
JACQUINO: So, so wirst du dich nimmer, nimmer bekehren? Was meinst du? Wie? Dich anzusehn willst du mir wehren? (Man hört pochen.) Auch das noch? Du hast mir so oft doch versprochen. Zum Henker das ewige Pochen.	JACQUINO: And will you ever be stubborn? What say you? You even forbid me your sight? (Knocking at the door.) Also this? You promised me so often. Oh, the deuce! that eternal knocking.
MARCELLINE: Du könntest nun gehen. So bleibe hier stehn. Versprochen, nein das geht zu weit. So bin ich doch endlich befreit. (Wiederholts Pochen.)	MARCELINE: You may go, or stay here. I promised you? No, not so quick. Well, released at last. (Knocking at the door.)
JACQUINO: Zum Henker, es ward ihr im Ernste schon bang, wer weiss, ob es mir nicht gelang.	JACQUINO: In truth, she was frightened. And who knows if I did or did not succeed.
MARCELLINE: Das ist ein willkommener Klang, es wurde zu Tode, zu Tode mir bang.	MARCELINE: That was a welcome sound. I was frightened to death.
JACQUINO: Nun habe ich doch diese Thür heute schon 200 Mal geöffnet, so wahr mein Name Caspar Eustach Jacquino ist. (Zu Marcelline.) Endlich können wir wieder mit einander sprechen. (Pochen.) Potz Kuckuk! Da geht es schon wieder. (Er geht um zu öffnen.)	JACQUINO: Now, if I haven't opened this door already two hundred times today, my name is not Casper Eustach Jacquino (to Marceline). At last we can chat again (somebody knocks). Zounds! There again? (He goes to open).
MARCELLINE: Es ist keine Einbildung von mir, das ich ihn nicht mehr so lieben kann wie früher.	MARCELINE: It is no fancy of mine that I can no longer love him as I used to.
JACQUINO: (Aus der Thür hinauseilend und dieselbe hastig schliessend.) Ich will es beherzen. Schon gut. (Zu Marcelline.) Nun hoffe ich, wird uns Niemand mehr unterbrechen!	JACQUINO: (To the person who has been knocking, shutting the door after him hastily) I'll take care of it. All's right. (To Marceline.) Now I hope nobody will interrupt us.
ROCCO: (Hinter der Scene.) Jacquino! Jacquino!	ROCQUO: (Calls behind.) Jacquino! Jacquino!
MARCELLINE: Hörst du? Der Vater ruft!	MARCELINE: Do you hear? Father is calling!
JACQUINO: Gut! Er kann ein wenig warten. Also um wieder auf unsere Liebe zu kommen.	JACQUINO: Well, he may wait a little; but to return to our love matters.
MARCELLINE: Mache, das du fortkommst. Der Vater wird dich nach Fidelio fragen wollen!	MARCELINE: Be gone; father's inquiry will be after Fidelio.
JACQUINO: (eifersüchtig.) So? Wirklich? Ja, da muss ich wohl eilen!	JACQUINO: (with jealousy). Yes, indeed; then all haste is not enough.
ROCCO: (Hinter der Scene.) Jacquino! Hörst du nicht?	ROCQUO: (behind the wings). Jacquino, don't you hear?
JACQUINO: (laut.) Ich kommen schon! (Zu Marcelline.) Bleib hier, meine Liebe. In zwei Minuten bin ich wieder bei dir! (Ab, in den Garten.)	JACQUINO: (loudly). I come quickly; (to Marceline) stay here, my love; in two minutes I will be with you again. (Goes into the garden.)

ZWEITE SCENE

SCENE II

MARCELLINE: Armer Jacquino! Er dauert mich fast. Das Mitgefühl, welches ich für ihn habe, beeinträchtigt meine Liebe für Fidelio. Ich glaube wahrhaftig, dass Fidelio mich auch gern hat, und wenn ich wüsste, was mein Vater denkt, so könnte mein Glück bald vollständig sein. O wär' ich schon mit dir vereint, Und dürfte Mann dich nennen! Ein Mädchen darf ja, was es meint, Zur Hälfte nur bekennen Doch wenn ich nicht erröthen muss Ob einem warmen Herzenskuss, Wenn nichts uns stört auf Erden. Die Hoffnung schon erfüllt die Brust Mit unaussprechlich süsser Lust. Wie glücklich will ich werden, Die Hoffnung schon erfüllt die Brust Mit unaussprechlich süsser Lust, Wie glücklich, glücklich, ja wie Glücklich will ich werden, In Ruhe stiller Häuslichkeit Erwach' ich jeden Morgen, Wir grüssen uns mit Zärtlichkeit, Der Fleiss verscheucht die Sorgen, Und ist die Arbeit abgethan, Dann schleicht die holde Nacht heran, Dann ruh'n wir von Beschwerden.	MARCELINE: Poor Jacquino! I almost pity him. The compassion I feel for him still enhances my love for Fidelio. I really believe that Fidelio is very fond of me too; and if I knew my father's mind, my happiness might soon be complete. Oh, how happy would I be, if in wedlock united with you, And I would call you my husband. But silence becomes best a maiden who's in love, they say. But I need not blush at a kind and heartfelt kiss, Where nothing on earth disturbs the hope that fills my breast. Oh what delight! what bliss is mine! How happy I! each morn fresh joy does bring, With fond embrace in union blest, each other's heart we tell All care we bid fly from our door, the labor over, fair night approaches, And brings sweet rest to us. Oh what delight, etc.

DRITTE SCENE

SCENE III

ROCCO: Guten Tag, Marceline. Fidelio ist also noch nicht zurückgekehrt?	ROCQUO: Good day, Marceline! So Fidelio has not yet come back.

MARCELLINE: Nein, Vater!	MARCELINE: No, father.
ROCCO: Die Stunde naht, um welche ich die Briefe, welche Fidelio abholen sollte, zu dem Gouverneur tragen muss. Fast werde ich ungeduldig. (Man hört pochen.)	ROCQUO: The hour approaches when I must take the letters to the governor, which Fidelio was to call for. I am beginning to grow rather impatient. (Knocking at the door.)
JACQUINO: (aus Rocco's Hause.) Ich komme schon! Ich komme schon! (Läuft an die Thür und öffnet.)	JACQUINO: (Coming out of Rocquo's house.) I'm coming directly, coming directly. (Runs alertly to unlock the door.)
MARCELLINE: Er hat sicherlich bei dem Schmied warten müssen. (Erblickt Leonoren.) Da ist er! Da ist er!	MARCELINE: He has surely been detained at the smith's. (She observes Leonora coming in.) There he is! there he is!
VIERTE SCENE	SCENE IV
DIE VORIGEN: Leonore trägt auf dem Rücken einen mit Lebensmitteln gefüllten Korb und über dem Arme Ketten, welche sie über das Wachthaus legt. Sei hat eine Blechbüchse an der Seite hängen.	(The above. Leonora carrying on her back a large basket, with provisions, and on her arms fetters, which on coming in she deposits in the gatekeeper's room. A tinplate box hangs from her side by a ribbon.)
MARCELLINE: (zu Leonora eilend.) Wie beladen er ist! Guter Gott! Seine arme Stirn! (Sie wischt Leonoren den Schweiss von der Stirn.)	MARCELINE: (Running to Leonora.) How he is laden! Good heaven! his poor forehead! (She takes her handkerchief, and endeavors to wipe Leonora's brow.)
ROCCO: Warte! warte! (Hilft Leonoren den Korb ablegen.)	ROCQUO: Stay, stay! (He assists her, together with Marceline to take the basket from her back.)
JACQUINO: Wahrhaftig, es war der Mühe werth, den Burschen einzulassen. (Ab in das Häuschen; er kommt bald wieder und passt auf die Andern auf.)	JACQUINO: Well, it was worth while to run so fast to let the fellow in. (He enters his little room, but returns soon pretending to be busily engaged, when, in reality, he is trying to watch the others.)
ROCCO: Armer Fidelio! Dieses Mal hast du dich zu sehr beladen!	ROCQUO: Poor Fidelio! This time you have indeed burdened yourself too much.
LEONORE: (das Gesicht abtrocknend.) Ich muss gestehen, dass ich ein wenig müde bin.	LEONORA: (Advancing by the side, and wiping her face and brow.) I must confess I am a little fatigued.
ROCCO: Wie viel macht es zusammen?	ROCQUO: What's the amount of it altogether?
LEONORE: Ungefähr 12 Piaster, — hier ist die genaue Rechnung.	LEONORA: About twelve piastres;—here is the exact account.
ROCCO: Bravo! Potztausend, da sind ja Dinge darunter, für welche man den doppelten Preis erhalten kann! Du bist ein gescheuter Bursche! Ich begreife kaum, wie du es so Klug anstellst. Du kaufst Alles wohlfeiler als ich. Seit sechs Monaten habe ich dir den Einkauf überlassen, und du hast mehr verdient, als ich in einem ganzen Jahr. (Beiseite.) Jawohl, der Tausendsassa gibt sich die Mühe nur wegen meiner Marceline.	ROCQUO: Well done. Zounds; there are articles amongst it of which twice the prime cost may be got. You are a sharp lad! I scarcely can conceive how you manage matters so cleverly. You buy every thing cheaper than I do. During the six months I have let it over to you to buy the provisions, you have gained more than I have in a whole year! (Aside.) Ah! it's evident the rogue gives himself all this trouble for the sake of my Marceline.
LEONORE: Ich thue alles in meiner Macht.	LEONORA: I endeavor to do all in my power.

ROCCO: Ja, ja, du bist ein braver Junge. Man kann nicht eifriger oder geschickter sein. Nein, nein, du steigst täglich in meiner Gunst, und die Belohnung wird dir nicht ausbleiben. (Blickt abwechselnd Leonora und Marceline bedeutsam an.)	ROCQUO: Yes, yes, you are a worthy lad. It is impossible to be more zealous or more skillful. Now, you are getting every day more in my favor, and be assured a reward will not be wanted. (While speaking the last words, he glances alternately at Leonora and Marceline.)
LEONORE: (verwirrt.) O glaubt nicht, das ich meine Pflicht bloss des Lohnes wegen thue.	LEONORA: (Confused.) Oh, don't think I fulfill my duty merely for the sake of reward.
ROCCO: (wie worher.) Still! Denkst du, ich kann nicht in dein Herz blicken. (Er lacht über die steigende Verwirrung Leonoren's und geht dann nach dem Hintergrunde. Marcelline hat Leonoren die Zeit über liebevoll angeblickt.)	ROCQUO: Hush! (glancing as before.) Do you think I could not look into your heart? (He is pleased with the increasing confusion of Leonora; he then steps aside to look at the fetters. Whilst Rocquo is commending Leonora, Marceline manifests the greatest interest, and gazes on her with continually increasing emotion.)
MARCELLINE: Mir ist so wunderbar. Es engt das Herz mir ein. Er liebt mich, es ist klar—Ich werde glücklich sein.	MARCELINE: What rapture do I feel, my heart is oppressed! He loves me it's clear, I shall be happy.
LEONORE: Wie gross ist die Gefahr, Wie schwach der Hoffnung Schein! Sie liebt mich, es ist klar, O namenlose Pein!	LEONORA: Alas, what danger! and hope is but vain! She loves me, what pain.
ROCCO: Sie liebt ihn, es ist klar, Ja, Mädchen, er wird dein, Ein gutes, junges Paar, Sie werden glücklich sein.	ROCQUO: She loves him, it's clear; yes, girl, he is yours. A good young couple; they shall be happy.
JAQUINO: Mir stäubt sich schon das Haar, Der Vater willigt ein, Mir ist so wunderbar, Mir fällt kein Mittel ein.	JACQUINO: My hair stands on end, her father consents; I don't know how I am nor what to do.
ROCCO: Höre, Fidelio! Obgleich ich nicht weiss, wo und wann du geboren bist, und ob du überhaupt einen Vater gehabt hast, so weiss ich doch, was ich thue. Ich mache dich zu meinem Schwiegersohn.	ROCQUO: Hark, Fidelio! Though I don't know how and where you were born, and if you haven't had any father at all, yet I know what I am about; I make you my son-in-law.
MARCELLINE: Wollt Ihr wirklich, Vater?	MARCELINE: Will you, indeed, father?
ROCCO: Heida! Wie eilig! (Ernsthaft.) Wenn der Gouverneur nach Sevilla abgereist ist, haben wir mehr Zeit. Du weisst, dass er dort alle Monate hinreist, um Rechenschaft über Alles zu geben, was in dem Gefängnisse vorgeht. In wenigen Tagen muss er wieder fort. Am Tage nach seiner Abreise heirathet Ihr, darauf könnt Ihr Euch verlassen!	ROCQUO: Heyday! how quick. (Seriously.) As soon as the governor has set out for Seville we have more leisure; you know he goes there every month to give account of all that occurs in the prison. In a few days he must be off again. The day after his departure I give you to each other—you may depend on that.
MARCELLINE: Den Tag nach seiner Abreise; das ist sehr klug, Vater.	MARCELINE: The day after his departure; that's acting very prudently, dear father.
LEONORE: (verlegen.) Den Tag nach seiner Abreise. (Bei Seite.) O welch neue und grausame Verlegenheit!	LEONORA: (Before much puzzled, but now assuming a joyful air.) The day after his departure. (Aside!) Oh! what a new and cruel embarrassment is here!
ROCCO: Nun Kinder! Ihr liebet einander von Herzen, nicht wahr? Aber das ist nicht Alles, um die Ehe glücklich zu machen. Wir brau-	ROCQUO: Now, my children! you love each other dearly, do you not? but that's not all that is required to make marriage happy; there is like-chen leider—

(Macht die Pantomine des Geldzählens.)

ARIE. ROCCO: Hat man nicht auch Geld bei Leben, Kann man nicht auch glücklich sein,
Traurig schleppt sich fort das Leben,
Mancher Kummer stellt sich ein.
Doch wenn's in den Taschen fein klingelt und rollt,
Da hält man das Schicksal gefangen,
Und Macht und Liebe verschafft dir das Gold,
Und stillet das kühnste Verlangen.
Das Glück dient wie ein Knecht für Gold.
Es ist ein schönes Ding das Gold, das Gold,
Es ist ein schönes Ding, das Gold,
Ein goldnes, goldnes Ding, das Gold, das Gold.
Wenn sich Nichts mit Nichts verbindet,
Ist und bleibt die Summe klein,
Wer bei Tisch nur Liebe findet,
Wird nach Tische hungrig sein.
Drum lächle der Zufall auch gnädig und hold,
Und segne und lenk' euer Streben,
Das Liebchen im Arm, im Beutel das Gold,
So mögt Ihr viel Jahre durchleben.
Das Glück dient wie ein Knecht im Sold,
Es ist ein mächtig Ding, das Gold, das Gold.

LEONORE: Ihr könnt leicht so sprechen, Vater Rocco; aber es giebt noch etwas Anderes, was uns nicht minder werthvoll sein würde, und das ich, wie ich mit Bekümmerniss sehe, nicht von euch erhalten kann!

ROCCO: Und was ist das?

LEONORE: Euer Zutrauen! Verzeiht den Vorwurf, aber oft sehe ich euch aus den unterirdischen Gewölben des Gefängnisses ausser Athem und ermattet kommen. Warum erlaubt ihr mir nicht, euch dorthin zu begleiten? Ich würde glücklich sein, wenn ich euch beistehen und eure Mühe theilen könnte.

ROCCO: Aber du weisst doch, dass ich den strengsten Befehl habe, Niemand zu den Staatsgefangenen zuzulassen.

MARCELLINE: Aber es sind hier ja gar zu viele in diesem Gefängnisse. Ihr arbeitet euch noch todt, lieber Vater!

LEONORE: Sie hat Recht, Vater Rocco, ein Mann soll sicherlich seine Pflicht erfüllen, aber ich denke, es ist nicht mehr als recht, sich für diejenigen zu schonen, welche uns angehören und uns lieben.
(Sie umarmt ihn.)

wise needed.
(mimicking the handling of money).

AIR. ROCQUO: If we have no money, love cannot bring comfort,
Sadly life drags on, and sorrow follows.
But when the coin jingles in the pockets,
Then fate is our prisoner.
Yes, gold brings love and power,
And fills all our wishes.
Happiness is the slave of gold;
Oh what a precious thing is gold!
Nothing with nothing united, what remains?
At dinner sweet love, and after dinner hunger;
May fate smile upon you and bless your endeavors.
Arm in arm, plenty of money in the purse;
Many a year may you thus live.
Yes, happiness is subservient to gold; oh, what a precious thing is gold!

LEONORA: You can easily say so, Mr. Rocquo; yet in truth now there is something else which would not be less precious to me; but I observe with sorrow that with all my endeavors I cannot obtain it.

ROCQUO: And what is this?

LEONORA: Your confidence. Pardon the reproach; but frequently I see you return from the subterraneous vaults of this castle, quite out of breath and spent with fatigue. Why don't you allow me to accompany you there? It would quite delight me if I could assist your duties, and share your toils.

ROCQUO: But you know that I have the strictest order not to admit any one whatever to the state prisoners.

MARCELINE: But there are far too many in this fortress; you work and weary yourself to death, dear father.

LEONORA: She is in the right, Mr. Rocquo; a man should certainly fulfill his duty; (tenderly) but I think it is but justice we spare ourselves for those that belong to us, and love us. (She grasps his bosom.)

MARCELLINE: (Rocco's Hand ergreifend.) Ein guter Mensch muss suchen, sich für seine Kinder zu erhalten.

ROCCO: (gerührt.) Ja, ihr habt Recht! Die schwere Arbeit würde zuletzt zu schwer für mich werden. Der Gouverneur ist zwar sehr streng, aber er muss mir erlauben, dich mit mir in die geheimen Gefängnisse zu nehmen.
(Leonore zeigt grosse Freude.)

ROCCO: Da ist jedoch ein Kerker, in welchen ich dich niemals nehmen kann, obgleich ich dir vollständig vertraue.

MARCELLINE: Wahrscheinlich in den, wo der Gefangene sitzt, von welchem ihr schon mitunter gesprochen habt!

ROCCO: Du hast es gerathen!

LEONORE: (forschend.) Ich glaube, es ist schon lange her, das er im Kerker ist.

ROCCO: Länger als zwei Jahre.

LEONORE: Zwei Jahre, sagt ihr? Er muss ein grosser Verbrecher sein!

ROCCO: Oder er muss mächtige Feinde haben, das läuft auf dasselbe hinaus!

MARCELLINE: Und habt ihr nie erfahren können, woher er kommt, und wie er heisst?

ROCCO: Oft hat er gewünscht, mit mir darüber zu sprechen.

LEONORE: Aber?

ROCCO: Aber für Leute wie wir, ist es am besten, so wenig Geheimnisse zu wissen, wie möglich, und deshalb habe ich ihm nie zugehört. Ich hätte mir schaden können, ohne ihm zu nützen.
(Geheimnissvoll.)
Armer Mann! Er wird mich nicht lange mehr plagen, er kann nicht lange mehr aushalten.

LEONORE: (für sich.) Gerechter Himmel!

MARCELLINE: O, lieber Vater, nehmt Fidelio nicht zu ihm! Er könnte den Anblick nicht ertragen!

LEONORE: Warum nicht? Ich habe Muth genug!

ROCCO: (sie auf die Schulter klopfend.) Ach, wenn ich dir erzählen sollte, wie ich zuerst gegen mein Gefühl zu kämpfen hatte, und ich war ein ganz anderer Bursche, als du mit deiner zarten Haut und deinen weissen Händen!
(Terzett.)

MARCELINE: (Pressing Rocquo's other hand to her bosom.) A good man must endeavor to preserve himself for his children's sake.

ROCQUO: (Looks at them both much affected.) Yes, you are in the right. The heavy labor would in the end become too much for me. The governor is indeed very severe, but yet he must permit that I take you with me into the secret dungeons.
(Leonora manifests a powerful feeling of joy.)

ROCQUO: There is, however, one dungeon, into which I shall never be able to take you though I am perfectly confident of you.

MARCELINE: Probably where the prisoner is confined of whom you have already sometimes spoken, father.

ROCQUO: You have guessed right.

LEONORA: (Inquiringly.) I believe it has been a long time since he was taken.

ROCQUO: It has been over two years.

LEONORA: (Violently.) Two years! you say. He must be a great criminal.

ROCQUO: Or he must have great enemies—that means nearly the same thing.

MARCELINE: And could you never learn where he comes from and his name?

ROCQUO: Often, indeed, has he wished to speak with me about all that.

LEONORA: But?

ROCQUO: But for folks like us it is best to know as few secrets as possible, therefore I have never listened to him. I might have gossiped to my injury, without doing him any good. (Mysteriously.) Well, poor fellow, he will not much longer plague me, he cannot last a very long while.

LEONORA: (aside). Great heavens!

MARCELINE: Oh, dear father! do not take Fidelio to him, this sight he could not bear.

LEONORA: Why not? I have courage and nerve enough.

ROCQUO: (Tapping her on the shoulder.) Bravo, my son, bravo! Ah! if I were to tell you how I had to struggle with my heart at the first, in my situation; yet I was quite a different fellow, to what you are, with your fair skin and white hands.
(Terzetto.—Rocquo, Leonora, Marceline.)

ROCCO: Gut, Söhnchen, gut, hab immer Muth,
Dann wird's dir auch gelingen.
Das Herz wird hart durch Gegenwart
Bei fürcherlichen Dingen.

LEONORE: Ich habe Muth, mit kaltem Blut
Will ich hanab mich wagen.
Für hohen Lohn, kann Liebe schon
Auch hohes Leiden tragen.

MARCELLINE: Dein gutes Herz wird manchen Schmerz
In diesen Grüften leiden,
Dann kehrt zurück der Liebe Glück,
Der Liebe Glück und unnennbare Freuden.

ROCCO: Du wirst dein Glück ganz sicher bauen.

LEONORE: Ich hab' auf Gott und Recht Vertrauen.

MARCELLINE: Du darfst mir auch in's Auge schauen,
Der Liebe Macht ist auch nicht klein.

ALL: Ja, ja, wir werden glücklich sein.

ROCCO: Der Gouverneur soll heut erlauben,
Dass du mit mir die Arbeit theilst.

LEONORE: Du wirst mir alle Ruhe rauben,
Wenn du bis morgen nur verweilst.

MARCELLINE: Ja, guter Vater, bitt' ihn heute,
In Kurzem sind wir dann ein Paar.

ROCCO: Ich bin ja bald des Grabes Beute.

LEONORE: Wie lang bin ich des Kummers Beute.

ROCCO: Ich brauche Hülfe, es ist wahr.

LEONORE: Du Hoffnung, reichst mir Labung dar.

MARCELLINE: Ach, lieber Vater, was fällt Euch ein?
Lang' Freund und Rather müsst Ihr uns sein.

ROCCO: Nur auf der Hut, dann geht es gut,
Gestillt, gestillt wird euer Sehnen.

MARCELLINE: O habe Muth, o welke Gluth,
O welch ein tiefes Sehnen!

LEONORE: Ihr seid so gut, ihr macht mir Muth,
Gestillt wird bald mein Sehnen.

ROCCO: Gebt euch die Hand und schliesst das Band.

LEONORE: Ich gab die Hand zum süssen Band.

MARCELLINE: Ein festes Band mit Herz und Hand.

ROCQUO: Good, my son, good! be ever of good cheer,
Then will you succeed. The heart gets hardened
When often in contact with horrible scenes.

LEONORA: I have courage; with calmness
Will I venture down, for high reward.
Love will endure high suffering also.

MARCELINE: Your good heart will suffer
Woefully in those dread vaults; but the joys of love
Await you in return, and happiness will be yours.

ROCQUO: Your fortune is in your own hands, my lad.

LEONORA: I confide in God and in right.

MARCELINE: You may espy in my eyes, that love's power is not small.

ALL: Yes, yes, we shall be happy.

ROCQUO: Today the governor consents that you share my duty.

LEONORA: You destroy my rest if you delay till tomorrow.

MARCELINE: Good father, intreat him today; the sooner is our union.

ROCQUO: I shall soon go down to my grave.

LEONORA: A long time I have been a prey to woe.

ROCQUO: I need help, and it's true.

LEONORA: A ray of hope fills me.

MARCELINE: Ah, good father, what do you think?
Long, long you'll be our friend and consoler.

ROCQUO: Only be prudent, and all goes well;
Your wishes are gratified.

MARCELINE: Oh, have courage; oh, what ardor!
Oh, what a deep feeling!

LEONORA: You are so good, you inspire me with courage,
My desire is fulfilled.

ROCQUO: Shake hands and be united.

LEONORA: I have given my sacred pledge—
Ah! what bitter tears it cost me.

MARCELINE: A lasting tie, with hand and heart—
Oh! sweet and welcome tears.

ROCCO: In süssen Freudenthränen.

LEONORE: Es kostet bittere Thränen.

MARCELLINE: O süsse, süsse Thränen!

ROCCO: Aber nun ist es auch Zeit, dass ich dem Gouverneur die Briefschaften überbringe.
(Man hört einen Marsch.)

ROCCO: O, er kommt selbst hierher!
(Zu Leonoren.)
Gieb mir die Büchse, Fidelio, und dann entfernt euch!
(Leonore giebt Rocco die Blechbüchse und geht dann mit Marcelline ab.)

FÜNFTE SCENE

Rocco, Don Pizarro, Offiziere und Wachen.
Während des Marsches öffnet sich das Hauptthor nach Aussen. Offiziere und Soldaten marschiren hinein, darauf Don Pizarro, dann wird das Thor wieder geschlossen.

DON PIZARRO: (zu den Offizieren.) Drei Wachen auf die Wälle! Sechs Tag und Nacht auf die Zugbrücke, eben so viele in den Garten, und wer sich nähert, wird sofort vor mich gebracht.
(Zu Rocco.)
Rocquo! Ist etwas Neues vorgefallen?

ROCCO: Nein, Herr!

PIZARRO: Wo sind die Depeschen?

ROCCO: (Nimmt die Briefe aus der Brieftasche.) Hier!

PIZARRO: (die Briefe öffnend und durchfliegend.) Immer Befehle und Vorwürfe! Ich würde niemals fertig werden, sollte ich auf Alles dies achten! Doch was sehe ich? Ich glaube, ich kenne diese Handschrift! Lasst uns sehen!
(Tritt vor; Rocquo und die Wache ziehen sich zurück. Er liest:)
„Ich benachrichtige Euch, dass der Minister erfahren hat, dass unter den Staatsgefangenen, die Ihr unter Aufsicht habt, mehrere die Opfer Eurer Willkür sind. Er reist morgen ab, um Euch mit einer Untersuchung zu überraschen. Seid auf Eurer Hut und seht, dass Ihr Euch gut haltet!"
(Unruhig.)
Ha, wenn er entdeckte, dass dieser Floristan hier in Ketten liegt, den er längst für todt hielt! Eine kühne That muss und kann alle meine Unruhe beseitigen!

Ha! welch' ein Augenblick!
Die Rache werd' ich külen!
Dich, dich rufet dein Geschick!
In seinem Herzen wühlen,
O Wonne! grosses Glück!

ROCQUO: In sweet tears of joy.

LEONORA: It costs bitter tears.

MARCELINE: Oh! sweet, sweet tears.

ROCQUO: But now it's time that I carry the papers to the governor.
(A March is heard.)

ROCQUO: Oh! he comes here himself; (to Leonora) give them to me, Fidelio, and then depart. (Leonora takes the tinplate box which is suspended by a ribbon, gives it to Rocquo, and goes away with Marceline into the house.)

SCENE V

Rocquo, Pizarro, Officers, Guards.
(During the March the principal gate opens from without; Officers with a detachment enter, then Pizarro. The gate is again closed.)

PIZZARRO: (To the officers.) Three guards on the rampart, six day and night on the drawbridge, the same number on the side of the garden, and whosoever comes near is immediately brought before me. (To Rocquo.) Rocquo, has anything fresh occurred?

ROCQUO: No, sir.

PIZZARRO: Where are the dispatches?

ROCQUO: (Taking the papers out of a box.) Here they are.

PIZZARRO: (Opens the papers, and goes through them.) Every commands and reprimands. I should never be done were I to pay attention to all this. What do I see? I fancy I know this writing; let's see. (He opens the letter, advancing a step. Rocquo and the guards step back—he reads.)
"I inform you what the minister has learned; that among the state prisoners there under your charge, several are victims of arbitrary power; he departs tomorrow to surprise you with an examination. Be on your guard, and endeavor to keep yourself right." (Disturbed.) Ha! if he should discover that I have this Florestan lying here in chains, whom he has long ago thought to be dead! One bold deed can and must disperse all my anxieties.

Ah what a moment! Yes, I'll be revenged.
Your fate calls! Yes, I'll pierce his heart.
Oh, joy! high delight! Already I was

Schon war ich nah im Staube,
Dem lauten Spott zum Raube,
Dahin gestreckt zu sein.
Nun ist es mir geworden,
Den Mörder selbst zu morden.
In seiner letzten Stunde,
Den Stahl in seiner Wunde,
Im noch in's Ohr zu schreien:
Triumph, Triumph, Triumph!
Der Sieg, der Sieg ist mein!

WACHE: (leise.) Er spricht von
Tod und Wunde,
Non fort auf unsere Runde,
Wie wichtig muss es sein!

PIZARRO: Hauptmann! (Giebt ihm leise Befehle.) Steigt mit einem Trompeter aug den Thurm. Schaut mit der grössten Aufmerksamkeit nach der Landstrasse von Sevilla. Sobald ihr einen Wagen seht, welcher mit Reitern umringt ist, lasst mich sofort ein Signal hören! Ihr verstehet? Sofort! Ich erwarte die grösste Pünktlichkeit. Ihr steht mit Eurem Kopfe dafür! (Hauptmann ab.)

DON PIZARRO: (zu den Wachen.) Fort auf eure Posten. (Wachen ab.)

DON PIZARRO: (zu Rocco.) Rocco!

ROCCO: Herr?

PIZARRO: (sieht ihn scharf an, für sich.) Ich muss suchen, ihn zu gewinnen; ohne seine Hülfe kann ich meinen Plan nicht ausführen. Tritt näher!

PIZARRO: Jetzt Altar! Jetzt hat es Eile, dir wird ein Glück zu Theile; du wirst ein reicher Mann! (Ihm eine Börse gebend.) Das geb' ich nur daran.

ROCCO: So sagt doch nur in Eile, womit ich dienen kann.

PIZARRO: Du bist von kaltem Blute, von unverzagtem Muthe durch langen Dienst geworden.

ROCCO: Wass soll ich? Redet, redet!

PIZARRO: Morden!

ROCCO: (erschrocken.) Wie?

PIZARRO: Höre mich nun an. Du bebst, du bist ein Mann? Wir dürfen gar nicht säumen, dem Staate liegt daran, den bösen Unterthan schnell aus dem Weg zu räumen.

ROCCO: O Herr!

PIZARRO: Du stehst noch an? (Für sich.) Er darf nicht länger leben, Sonst ist's um mich geschehen. Pizarro sollte leben? Du fällst, ich werde stehen!

crouched in dust,
A prey to base mockery stretched to the ground,
But now it is mine to kill him that would have killed me.
In his last hour, the steel in his bosom.
Yes, I cry aloud in his ear—
Triumph! the victory is mine!

GUARDS: (In an undertone among themselves.) He speaks of death and vengeance. Watch carefully.
And mind well on your rounds—it must be important.

PIZZARRO: Captain! (He leads the captain forward and speaks softly to him.) Ascend the tower together with a trumpeter. Look with the greatest attention towards the high road to Seville.
As soon as you perceive a carriage surrounded with riders, let me instantly hear a signal. You understand, instantly? I expect the greatest punctuality. With your head you answer for it. (Captain exit.)

PIZZARRO: (to the Guards). Away to your posts. (The Guards retire.)

PIZZARRO: (to Rocquo). Rocquo.

ROCQUO: Sir!

PIZZARRO: (Looks at him attentively for a short time). (Aside.) I must endeavor to win him over; without his help I cannot execute my design. Come, approach!

PIZZARRO: Now, old friend, haste! your fortune's made. You're a man of riches. (Gives him a purse). There, this is only to start.

ROCQUO: Oh, quick, ah, say, in what can I serve you?

PIZZARRO: You are of old blood, of undaunted courage from long service.

ROCQUO: Speak! what shall I do?

PIZZARRO: Kill.

ROCQUO: (alarmed). Whom?

PIZZARRO: Listen, You tremble; are you a man? We must delay no longer, on account of the state; quick, a subject so bad must be gotten rid of.

ROCQUO: Oh, Sir!

PIZZARRO: You still hesitate. (Aside.) He must live no longer, or I'm undone. Ha! Pizzarro should live in fears! No! you die. I stand.

ROCCO: O Herr! die Glieder fühl ich leben, wie könnt' ich das bestehen! Ich nehm' ihm nicht das Leben, mag, was da will, geschehen. Nein, Herr! das Leben nehmen, das ist nicht meine Pflicht.

PIZARRO: Ich will mich selbst bequemen, wenn dir's an Muth gebricht. Nun eile rasch und munter zu jenem Mann hinunter, du weisst!

ROCCO: Der kaum mehr lebt und wie ein Schatten schwebt?

PIZARRO: Zu dem hinab, ich wart in kleiner Ferne. Du gräbst in der Cisterne sehr schnell ein Grab.

ROCCO: Und dann? Und dann?

PIZARRO: Dann werd' ich selbst, vermummt, mich in den Kerker schleichen. (einen Dolch ziehend.) ein Stoss und er verstummt. Er stirbt in seinen Ketten, zu kurz war seine Pein, sein Tod nur kann mich retten!

ROCCO: Verhungernd in den Ketten ertrug er lange Pein, ihn tödten heisst ihn retten, der Dolch wird ihn befrei'n. (Don Pizarro ab nach dem Garten zu, Rocco folgt ihm.)

SECHSTE SCENE

Leonore stürzt aufgeregt auf die Bühne und sieht den Abgehenden nach.

LEONORE: Abscheulicher! Wo eilst du hin? Was has du vor?
Was hast du vor im wilden Grimme?
Des Mitleids Ruf, der Menschheit Stimme
Rührt nicht mehr deinen Tigersinn.
Doch toben auch die Meereswogen,
Dir in der Seele Zorn und Wuth,
So leuchte mir ein Farbenbogen,
Der hell auf dunkeln Wolken ruht,
Der Blick so still, so friedlich nieder,
Der spiegelt alte Zeiten wieder,
Und neu besänftigt wallt mein Blut.

ARIE: Komm Hoffnung, lass den letzten Stern der Müden nicht erbleichen,
O komm', erhell' mein Ziel, sei's noch so fern, so fern,
Die Liebe sie wird's erreichen.
Folg' dem innern Triebe,
Ich wanke nicht, mich stärkt die Pflicht
Der treuen Gattenliebe.
O du, für den ich Alles trug, könnt ich zur Stelle dringen,
Wo Bosheit dich in Fesseln schlug, und süssen Trost dir bringen!
(Ab.)

ROCQUO: My frame is trembling! how could I bear it? No; I'll not take his life; let happen what may. Sir, I am not bound in duty to kill.

PIZZARRO: I'll do it myself if your courage fails. Only quick, haste down to the man you know.

ROCQUO: Who scarcely lives the semblance of a shadow?

PIZZARRO: Yes, to him, to him down. I at short distance wait. And quickly, prepare a grave for him in the cistern.

ROCQUO: And then?

PIZZARRO: You give a signal; and I'll quickly descend into the dungeon. (Draws a dagger.) One blow, and he is dumb.

ROCQUO: Famishing in chains his sufferings are great; to kill him is to save him, and mine is rest. (Exit Pizzarro towards the garden, Rocquo follows him.)

SCENE VI

(Leonore appears in great agitation from the opposite side; she observes those that go away with increasing anxiety.)

LEONORA: Monster! Where are you going in such a hurry? what design breeds your rage?
Nor pity's call, nor humanity's voice,
Nothing moves your tiger mind.
Yet I see the storm of passion rages within your soul,
But I still perceive a ray of hope on heaven's face;
It brings me calm, restores my soul;
In fond recollection of past happiness my heart now beats anew.

ARIA: Sweet hope forsake not this lingering heart!
Oh! let a ray of joy console my sorrowing love.
See, my bosom beats, I hesitate not—
Yes, a wife devout—I bring—fresh vigor.
(Exit into the garden.)

SIEBENTE SCENE

Marcelline aus dem Hause, Jacquino folgt ihr.

JAQUINO: Aber Marcelline!

MARCELLINE: Nicht ein Wort, nicht eine Silbe! Ich will nichts mehr von deinen thörichten Liebesgeschichten wissen, und damit Basta! —

JAQUINO: Wer hätte das gedacht, als ich mich zuerst in dich verliebte, damals war ich der theure Jacquino. Jacquino hier, und Jacquino da. Der liebe Jacquino legt die Bügeleisen auf das Feuer, der liebe Jacquino legt die Wäsche zusammen, er bringt den Gefangenen die Packete, kurz er muss Alles thun, was ein Mädchen von einem ehrlichen Burschen verlangen kann; aber seitdem dieser Fidelio—

MARCELLINE: (schnell.) Ich läugne nicht, dass ich dir gut war, aber sieh, ich bin offenherzig, es war nicht Liebe. Fidelio ist mir theurer. Ich finde zwischen ihm und mir eine grosse Harmonie.

JAQUINO: Harmonie mit einem solchen Vagabunden, der, weiss Gott woher, kommt; den dein Vater aus reiner Barmherzigkeit aufgenommen hat, und der—

MARCELLINE: (ärgerlich.) Der arm und verlassen ist, und den ich doch noch heirathen werde.

JAQUINO: Glaubst du, ich werde das zugeben? Es soll nicht in meiner Gegenwart geschehen, oder ich möchte euch einen Possen spielen.

ACHTE SCENE

Die Vorigen, Rocco and Leonora aus dem Garten.

ROCCO: Zankt ihr euch schon wieder?

MARCELLINE: Ach, Vater, er neckt mich immer.

ROCCO: Und warum?

MARCELLINE: (lachend zu Leonora.) Er will, ich solle ihn heirathen, ihn lieben, und ich—

ROCCO: Ruhe! Wahrhaftig, hätte ich meine einzige Tochter bis zu ihrem sechszehnten Jahre mit so viel Sorgfalt erzogen, blos für ein solch feines Herrchen?
(Lächelnd.)
Nein, Freund Jacquino, ich habe meine Pläne!

MARCELLINE: Ich verstehe!
(Sanft zu Leonora.)
Fidelio!

LEONORE: Beendigen wir diese Unterhaltung. Rocco, ich bat euch so oft, den armen Gefangenen, welche in den oberen Gefängnissen wohnen, zu erlauben, im Garten die freie Luft zu geniessen. Ihr verspracht es mir, habt es stets verschoben. Heute ist das Wetter schön; der Gouverneur kann jetzt nicht kommen.

MARCELLINE: Ach ja, ich bitte mit ihm.

ROCCO: Meine theuren Kinder, ohne die Erlaubniss des Gouverneurs?

MARCELLINE: Aber ihr habt euch so lange mit ihm unterhalten. Vielleicht sollt ihr ihm einen Gefallen thun, und da wird er es nicht so genau nehmen.

ROCCO: Einen Gefallen? Du hast Recht, Marcelline, darauf hin will ich's wagen. Wohlan denn, Jacquino und Fidelio geht und öffnet die kleineren Zellen, und ich will zu Don Pizarro gehen und ihn aufhalten, zugleich will ich mit ihm zu deinen Gunsten sprechen!
(zu Marcelline)

MARCELLINE: (küsst ihm die Hand.) Ich bitte dich, lieber Vater!

NEUNTE SCENE

Die Vorigen. Chor der Gefangenen.

GEFANGENE: O welche Lust! In freier Luft
Den Athem leicht zu heben, nur hier, nur hier ist Leben, Der kerker eine Gruft.

EINER: Wir wollen mit Vertrauen auf Gottes Hülfe bauer,
Die Hoffnung flüstert sanft mir zu:
Wir werden frei,—wir finden Ruh'.

ALLE: O Hoffnung! Rettung! welch ein Glück!
O Freiheit, o Freiheit, kehrst du zurück?

EINER: Sprecht leise, haltet euch zurück,
Wir sind belauscht mit Ohr und Blick.

ALLE: Sprecht leise etc. etc.

ZEHNTE SCENE

LEONORE: Nun sprecht, wie ging's?

ROCCO: Recht gut, recht gut; zusammen rafft' ich meinen Muth und trug ihm Alles vor, und sollst du's glauben, was er zur Antwort, mir

SCENE VII

(Marceline, from the house, Jacquino follows her.)

JACQUINO: But Marceline.

MARCELINE: Not a word, not a syllable. I will hear nothing more of your silly love tales, and that's enough.

JACQUINO: Who would have said this, when I earnestly fell in love with you? Then I was dear Jacquino; dear hear, and dear there. Dear Jacquino puts the irons to the fire, dear Jacquino folds up the linen, he takes the parcels to the prisoners; in short, must do all that a maiden asks of an honorable lad; but since this Fidelio—

MARCELINE: (hastily). I don't deny I was good to you; but look, I'm open hearted. It was not love. Fidelio is more endearing; I find a great harmony between him and me.

JACQUINO: An harmony with such a vagabond, who comes from God knows where; whom your father out of mere charity, received at the gate, and who—

MARCELINE: (angrily). Who is poor and forsaken, and whom I shall as yet marry.

JACQUINO: Believe you I shall suffer that? It will not take place in my presence, or see I might play you a trick.

SCENE VIII

(The former, Rocquo, Leonora, from the garden.)

ROCQUO: Are you both quarreling again?

MARCELINE: Ah, father, he ever will tease me?

ROCQUO: And why?

MARCELINE: (laughingly to Leonora). He wants me to marry him, to love him, and I—

ROCQUO: Silence! Surely, my only daughter, whom I have brought up with such care to her sixteenth year, (pats Marceline on the cheek) and all for this fine gentleman? (looks smilingly upon Jacquino.) No, friend Jacquino, other thoughts fill my mind.

MARCELINE: I understand father (tenderly and softly), Fidelio!

LEONORA: Now let's end this conversation. Rocquo, I begged of you many times to suffer the poor prisoners, those that dwell above ground to walk about in the free air of the garden. You promised it me, but continually defer it. Today the weather is fine; the governor does not come here at this time.

MARCELINE: Oh, yes; I entreat with him!

ROCQUO: My dear children, without the permission of the governor?

MARCELINE: But you were speaking to him for a long time; perhaps you are to do him a favor, and then he will not be so particular.

ROCQUO: A favor? You are in the right, Marceline! On this risk I may venture it. Well, then, Jacquino and Fidelio, go and open the minor cells, and I will go to Pizzarro, and detain him, at the same time (turning to Marceline), I'll speak to him for your best!

MARCELINE: (kisses his hand). Do so, dear father!
(Exit Rocquo. Leonora and Jacquino open the gates of the prison; they retire with Marceline in the background, and observe, with sympathy, the prisoners, who shortly make their appearance.)

SCENE IX

The above: Chorus of Prisoners.

PRISONERS: Oh, what enjoyment to breathe the fresh air of heaven! Here only is to live; the dungeon is a tomb.

A PRISONER: Let us trust in heaven with confidence!
Hope softly whispers—"You will be free, you will have peace."

CHORUS: O Heaven! Deliverance! what a blessing! Oh, liberty returns?

ONE: Speak softly—restrain yourselves! We are watched by eyes and ears.

ALL: Speak softly—restrain yourselves! We are watched by eyes and ears.

SCENE X

LEONORA: Now speak, how did you succeed?

ROCQUO: Well! very well! I composed my mind and mentioned every thing. And, would you believe it? That he gave the answer? He al-gab; die Heirath und dass du mir hilfst, will er erlauben. Noch heute führ' ich die Kerker dich hin.

LEONORE: (erschreckt.) Noch heute? O welch ein Glück, Welche Wonne!

ROCCO: Ich sehe deine Freude; nur noch einen Augenblick, dann gehen wir schon Beide.

LEONORE: Wohin? Wohin?

ROCCO: Zu jenem Mann hinab, dem ich seit vielen Wochen stets weniger zu essen gab.

LEONORE: Ha! wird er losgesprochen? so sprich, so sprich!

ROCCO: O nein! o nein! (Geheimnissvol.) Wir müssen ihn, doch wie?—befrei'n. Er muss in einer Stunde, den Finger auf dem Munde, von uns begraben sein.

LEONORE: So ist er todt?

ROCCO: Noch nicht, noch nicht.

LEONORE: (bebend.) Ist ihn zu tödten deine Pflicht?

ROCCO: Nein, guter Jung, zittre nicht; zum Morden dingt sich Rocco nicht. Der Gouverneur kommt selbst hinab, wir Beide graben nur das Grab.

LEONORE: (bei Seite.) Vielleicht das Grab des Gatten graben! Was kann fürchterlicher sein!

ROCCO: Ich darf ihn nicht mit Speise laben, ihm wird im Grabe besser sein!
Wir müssen gleich zum Werke schreiten, du must mir helfen, mich begleiten. Hart ist des Kerkermeisters Brod.

LEONORE: Ich folge dir, wär's in den Tod.

ROCCO: In der zerfallenen Cisterne bereiten wir die Grube leicht. Ich thu' es, glaube mir, nicht gerne, auch dir ist schaurig, wie mich deucht.

LEONORE: Ich bin es nur noch nicht gewohnt.

ROCCO: Ich hätte gerne dich verschont, doch wird es mir allein zu schwer, und gar so streng ist unser Herr.

LEONORE: (für sich.) O welch' ein Schmerz!

ROCQUO: (für sich.) Mir scheint, er weine.
(Laut.)
Nein, nein, du bleibst hier, ich geh' alleine.

LEONORE: (ihn fassend.) O nein! O nein! ich muss ihn seh'n, den Armen seh'n und müsst' ich selbst zu Grunde geh'n.

BEIDE: O säumen wir nun länger nicht, wir folgen unserer strengen Pflicht.

lows the marriage, and that you assist me. This very day you shall go with me to the dungeons.

LEONORA: (breaking forth). To-day! what happiness, what delight!

ROCQUO: I can see your joy. Only another moment and we both will go.

LEONORA: Where?

ROCQUO: Down to that man whom for weeks past I have continually diminished the food.

LEONORA: God, is he also free?

ROCQUO: No, oh no (mysteriously.) We—yes, we must free him. In one hour your lips are closed—He must be in his grave.

LEONORA: Then he is dead?

ROCQUO: Not yet! not yet.

LEONORA: (starting back). And must you kill him?

ROCQUO: No, no, my fine fellow, never fear—Rocquo is no murderer. The governor himself comes down—we only dig the grave.

LEONORA: (aside). Perhaps to dig the grave of the husband, oh! what can be more horrible?

ROCQUO: I dare not nourish him; in the grave he finds rest. We must proceed to work. You must help and accompany me. The goaler's bread is hard.

LEONORA: I follow you, till death.

ROCQUO: In the old cistern, we'll dig the grave with ease, believe me I don't like it, and you seem to shudder too.

LEONORA: I'm quite prepared, confide in me!

ROCQUO: I willingly would have spared you this. But, all alone, the work's too much.

LEONORA: (aside). Oh what grief!

ROCQUO: (aside). I think he weeps.
(aloud).
No, you remain here: I go alone.

LEONORA: (clinging to him). I must see him, the wretched man, even on my own peril.

BOTH: Then let's delay no longer; we follow duty's call.

ELFTE SCENE

(Marcelline und Jaquino, hastig auftretend.)

MARCELLINE: Ach, Vater! Vater, eilt!

ROCCO: Was hast du den?

JAQUINO: Nicht länger weilt.

ROCCO: Was ist geschehen?

MARCELLINE: Voll Zorn folgt mir Pizarro nach, er drohet dir.

ROCCO: Gemach! Gemach!

LEONORE: So eilet fort!

ROCCO: Nur noch ein Wort! Sprich, weiss er schon?

JAQUINO: Ja, er weiss schon!

MARCELLINE: Der Officier sagt ihm, was wir jetzt den Gefangenen gewähren.

ROCCO: Lasst alle schnell zurücke kehren.
(Jaquino geht ab in den garten.)

MARCELLINE: Ihr wisst ja, wie er tobet und kennet seine Wuth.

LEONORE: Wie mir's im Innern tobet, empöret ist mein Blut.

ROCCO: Mein Herz hat mich gelobet, sei der Tyrann in Wuth.

ZWÖLFTE SCENE

Don Pizarro, zwei Offiziere und Wachen.

PIZARRO: Verweg'ner Alter, welche Rechte legst du dir frevelnd selber bei, und ziemt es dem gedung'nen Knechte, zu geben die Gefang'nen frei.

ROCCO: (zitternd.) O Herr! O Herr!

PIZARRO: Wohlan! Wohlan!

ROCCO: (eine Entschuldigung suchend) Des Frühlings Kommen, das heitere, warme Sonnenlicht, dann (sich fassend) habt ihr wohl in Acht genommen, was sonst zu meinem Vortheil spricht? Des Königs Namensfest ist heute, das feiern wir auf solche Art. (Heimlich zu Don Pizarro.) Der unten stirbt, doch lasst die Andern jetzt fröhlich hin und wieder wandern; für jenen sei der Zorn gespart.

DON PIZARRO: (halblaut.) So eile, ihm sein Grab zu graben, hier will ich stille Ruhe haben. Schliesst die Gefangenen wieder ein, mögst du nie mehr verwegen sein.

DIE GEFANGENEN: Leb' wohl, du warmes Sonnenlicht, schnell schwindest du uns wieder; schon sinkt die Nacht hernieder, aus der so bald kein Morgen bricht.

SCENE XI

(Marceline, and Jacquino, rushing in out of breath.)

MARCELINE: Oh father, hurry!

ROCQUO: What's the matter then?

JACQUINO: Tarry no longer!

ROCQUO: What has happened then?

MARCELINE: Filled with rage, Pizzarro follows my steps threatening you.

ROCQUO: Quiet! peace!

LEONORA: Hasten then!

ROCQUO: Another word more! speak! knows he then?

JACQUINO: Yes, he knows already.

MARCELINE: The officer told him of the new indulgence the prisoners have.

ROCQUO: They all must quickly return.
(Jacquino exits.)

MARCELINE: You know how he rages, and are aware of his fury.

LEONORA: How my heart beats! my soul is all in arms.

ROCQUO: My heart rejoices, let the tyrant rave.

SCENE XII

(Pizzarro, two officers, Guards: the above.)

PIZZARRO: Audacious old man! what rights are you criminally assuming?
Does it become the hireling servant to deliver the prisoners?

ROCQUO: (embarrassed). Oh Sir!

PIZZARRO: Well, and—

ROCQUO: (seeking an excuse). The coming of spring, the serene ray of the sun, besides—consider—(recovering himself)—what pleads in my favor—(taking off his cap)—Our gracious king's birthday—we celebrate in this manner. (Secretly to Pizzarro.) The one below dies; but suffer the others an happy hour in the free air; reserve your fury for him alone.

PIZZARRO: (softly) Then hasten to dig his grave; here all must be quiet. Shut up again the prisoners, and never be so daring again.

PIZZARRO: Farewell, warm ray of the sun, soon you'll vanish again. Night breaks upon us, and never to behold again the morn.

PIZARRO: Nun, Rocco, zög're länger nicht, steig' in den Kerker nieder. (Halblaut.) Nicht eher kehrst du wieder, bis ich vollzogen das Gericht.

ROCCO: Nein, Herr, ich zög're länger nicht, ich steige nieder. (Für sich) Mir beben meine Glieder, o unglückselig harte Pflicht!

LEONORE: (zu den Gefangenen.) Ihr hört das Wort, drum zögert nicht, kehrt in den Kerker wieder. Angst rinnt durch meine Glieder, ereilt den Frevler kein Gericht.

MARCELLINE: (die Gefangenen betrachtend.) Wie eilten sie zum Sonnenlicht, und scheiden traurig wieder; die andern murmeln nieder: Hier wohnt die Lust, die Freude nicht.

JAQUINO: (zu den Gefangenen) Ihr hört das Wort, drum zögert nicht, kehrt in den Kerker wieder. (Rocco und Leonorebeobachtend.) Sie sinnen auf und nieder; könnt ich versteh'n, was jeder spricht.

■ ZWEITER AKT

ERSTE SCENE

Dunkles, unterirdisches Gefängniss, links eine alte Cisterne mit Steinen und Unkraut bedeckt. Im Hintergrunde eine Mauer mit Eisengitter, durch welche man eine Treppe sieht, rechts einige Stufen und die Thür zum Kerker. Eine Lampe brennt. Florestan, allein, sitzt auf einem Stein, eine Kette um den Leib, deren Ende in die Wand gemauert ist.

FLORESTAN: Gott, welch' Dunkel hier, o grauenvolle Stille,
Oed' ist es um mich her, nichts lebet ausser mir.
O schwere Prüfung, doch gerecht ist Gottes Wille,
Ich murre nicht, das Maass der Leiden steht bei ihm.

In des Lebens Frühlingstagen
Ist das Glück von mir gefloh'n,
Wahrheit wagt' ich kühn zu sagen,
Und die Ketten sind mein Lohn.
Willig duld' ich alle Schmerzen,
Ende schmählich meine Bahn,
Süsser Trost in meinem Herzen,
Meine Pflicht hab' ich gethan.
(In einem Zustande der Verzückung, jedoch ruhig.)
Und spür' ich nicht linde, sanft säuselnde Luft,
Und ist nicht mein Grab nur erhellet?
Ich seh' wie ein Engel in rosigem

PIZARRO: Now, Rocquo, tarry no longer, descend into the dungeon. (Softly.) Do not return until my will has been accomplished.

ROCQUO: No, Sir, no, I tarry no longer, I hasten down. (Aside.) My limbs tremble; oh, severe and dread duty!

LEONORA: (to the prisoners). You hear the word—then linger here no longer. Return into the prison; fear overpowers me! Does no judgment overtake this wicked man?

MARCELINE: (looking at the prisoners) We hasten to behold the light of day—But part again in sorrow. Alas, no cheering ray of joy or hope within these melancholy walls does dwell.

JACQUINO: (to the prisoners). You hear the word, tarry no longer, return into the prison! (Aside, looking upon Rocquo and Leonora). Ah, you are meditating; I wish I knew what each does mean.

■ ACT II

SCENE I

(The Stage represents a dark subterraneous dungeon; on the left of the spectators is an old reservoir covered with stones and rubbish. In the background are several openings provided with gratings in the wall, through which a staircase is seen, leading down from above; on the right, the lower steps, and the door in the prison. A lamp is burning, Florestan alone, he is sitting upon a stone, a long chain round his waist, the end of which is fastened to the wall.)

FLORESTAN: Oh, heavens, what dreary gloom! what awful stillness this!
All is desert around, naught breathes life but me,
Oh! heavy trial! but let the will of God be done.
I do not murmur; you know when the cup of sorrow is full.

In the days of my spring, happiness, all happiness has fled.
Truth I boldly spoke, and chains are my reward;
These sufferings I bear willingly, and die with resignation;
Sweet solace feels thus heart, I fulfilled my duty!
(In a state of inspiration but with calmness.)
Do I not hear soft murmurs in the air?
Does not a ray of light surround my grave?
Yes, I behold, clad in roseate vapor

Duft
Sich tröstend zur Seite mir stellet;
Ein Engel, Leonoren, der Gattin so gleich,
Der Führt mich zur Freiheit, in's himmlische Reich!
(Sinkt zusammen und bedeckt das Gesicht mit den Händen.)

ZWEITE SCENE

Rocco, Leonore, Florestan. Die beiden ersten steigen die Treppe herab mit einer Laterne, einem Kruge und Werkzeugen sum Graben. Die hintere Thür öffnet sich und das Gefängniss wird matt erleuchtet.

LEONORE: (halblaut.) Wie kalt es ist in dieser unterirdischen Höhle!

ROCCO: Das ist natürlich, es ist so tief.

LEONORE: (sich ängstlich nach allen Seiten umsehend.) Ich glaubte schon, wir würden den Eingang nicht finden.

ROCCO: (sich nach Florestan umsehend) Still! da ist der Gefangene!

LEONORE: (halblaut, suchend, den Gefangenen zu erkennen.) Er scheint ganz ohne Bewegung zu sein.

ROCCO: Vielleicht ist er todt!

LEONORE: Meint ihr wirklich?

ROCCO: Nein, nein! er schläft nur! Lass uns das benützen und mit der Arbeit beginnen. Wir haben keine Zeit zu verlieren.

LEONORE: (bei Seite.) Es ist unmöglich, seine Gesichtszüge zu erkennen; Himmel, hilf mir, wenn er es ist!

ROCCO: Hier unter diesem Gewölb ist die alte Cisterne, von welcher ich dir erzählte. Es wird uns nicht lange nehmen, an die Oeffnung zu gelangen. Gieb mir deine Haue und komme her. Du zitterst? Hast du Furcht?

LEONORE: O nein! Es ist nur so kalt!

ROCCO: Vorwärts denn! Du wirst bei der Arbeit bald warm werden. (Sie beginnen zu graben.) Während des Melodramas benützt Leonore den Augenblick, wenn Rocco sich bückt, um den Gefangenen zu beobachten. Das Duett wird stiller gesungen.

ROCCO: (arbeitend.) Nur hurtig fort, nur frisch gegraben,
Es währt nicht lang', so kommt er her.

LEONORE: (gleichfalls arbeitend.) Ihr sollt ja nicht zu klagen haben.
Ihr sollt gewiss zufrieden sein.

a beauteous angel like my Leonora,
Stand by my side, to point me out the way to liberty and to celestial bliss!
(He sinks exhausted by his last agitation, upon the rocky seat; his hands cover his face.)

SCENE II

(Rocquo, Leonora, Florestan. The two former, who are seen through the aperture by the light of a lantern, carry a pitcher and the tools for digging. The back door opens and the stage becomes half lighted.)

LEONORA: (in an undertone) How cold it is in this subterraneous cave!

ROCQUO: That's natural, it being so deep.

LEONORA: (looking anxiously around on all sides). I thought already we should not find the entrance.

ROCQUO: (turning towards Florestan.) Silence, there is the prisoner.

LEONORA: (half loud, endeavoring to recognize the prisoner). He seems quite motionless.

ROCQUO: Perhaps he is dead.

LEONORA: You don't mean it!

ROCQUO: No, no, he only sleeps. Let us take advantage of that and proceed to work, we have no time to lose.

LEONORA: (aside). It is impossible to distinguish his features, but; oh heavens assist if it is him!

ROCQUO: Here, below this rubbish is the old cistern, of which I told you. It will not take us long to get at the opening. Give me your pick-ax, and come here. You tremble. Are you afraid?

LEONORA: Oh no, it is only so cold.

ROCQUO: Well, then, go on; you will soon get warm with your work. (They begin to dig.) (During the symphony, Leonora takes advantage of the moment when Rocquo stoops to observe the prisoner. The Duet is sung throughout in an undertone.)

ROCQUO: (while at work). Only get on quickly, and with smart digging; before long he will come down.

LEONORA: (also working). You shall not have to complain; for to me no labor is too hard.

ROCCO: (einen grossen Stein hebend.) Komm hilf! komm hilf! doch diesen Stein mir heben, Hab' Acht! Hab' Acht! er hat Gewicht!

LEONORE: Ich helfe schon, sorgt euch nicht,
Ich will mir alle Mühe geben.

ROCCO: Ein wenig noch.

LEONORE: Geduld!

ROCCO: Er weicht.

LEONORE: Nur etwas noch.

ROCCO: Er ist nicht leicht.
(Sie rollen den Stein auf die Bühne und schöpfen Athem. Rocco gräbt weiter.)
Nur hurtig fort, nur frisch gegraben,
Es währt nicht lang', da kommt er her.

LEONORE: (ebenfalls wieder arbeitend.) Lasst mich nur wieder Kräfte haben, Wir werden bald zu Ende sein.
(Betrachtet den Gefangenen, während Rocco von ihr abgewandt mit gekrümmtem Rücken arbeitet, leise.)
Wer du auch seist, ich will dich retten;
Bei Gott! Du sollst kein Opfer sein.
Gewiss, ich löse deine Ketten;
Ich will, du Armer, dich befrei'n.

ROCCO: (sich schnell aufrichtend.) Was zauderst du in deiner Pflicht?

LEONORE: Nein, Vater! nein, ich zaud're nicht.

ROCCO: Nur hurtig fort, nur frisch gegraben;
Es währt nicht lang, so kommt er her.

LEONORE: Ihr sollt ja nicht zu klagen haben,
Lasst mich nur wieder Kräfte haben,
Denn mir wird keine Arbeit schwer.
(Rocco trinkt. Florestan erhebt den Kopf, ohne sich nach Leonoren umzusehen.

LEONORE: Er ist erwacht!

ROCCO: (mit dem Trinken einhaltend.) Er ist erwacht, sagst du?

LEONORE: (Florestan in der grössten Aufregung betrachtend.) Ja, er hat soeben sein Haupt erhoben!

ROCCO: Ohne Zweifel wird er wieder tausend Fragen an mich stellen. Ich muss mit ihm allein sprechen. (Kommt aus der Grube.) Steige du statt meiner hinein und räume, so viel du kannst fort, das wir die Cisterne öffnen können.

LEONORE: (hinabsteigend, zitternd.) Was in mir vorgeht, ist unaussprechlich!

ROCQUO: (lifting up a large stone on the spot where he went down). Come—Help me to lift this stone. Take care; take care; it is very heavy.

LEONORA: I'll help you directly. Never fear; I'll exert myself to the utmost.

ROCQUO: A little more.

LEONORA: Patience.

ROCQUO: It moves.

LEONORA: A little more.

ROCQUO: It is not light. (They roll the stone over the rubbish, and take breath. Rocquo sets to work again.) Only get on quickly, and with good smart digging. He will soon be here.

LEONORA: (also working again). Let me only gain breath again. (Observes the prisoner, whilst Rocquo, turns away from her, works with his back bent.) (softly.) Who ever you are, I will save you. By all that's sacred, you shall not fall a sacrifice! For certain I will loose your chain; I will set you free, you poor wretched man.

ROCQUO: (starting up quickly). What, are you at your work?

LEONORA: No, father, no! I do not hesitate.

ROCQUO: Only get on quickly, and with good smart digging. He will soon be here.

LEONORA: You shall not complain; for no toil is hard to me. (Rocquo drinks.) (Florestan recovers himself, and raises his head up, without turning towards Leonora.)

LEONORA: He wakes!

ROCQUO: (suddenly stopping, while drinking). He wakes, you say?

LEONORA: (still looking towards Florestan, in the greatest agitation). Yes—he has just raised up his head.

ROCQUO: Doubtless, he will put me again a thousand questions; I must speak alone with him. He will soon, now, have overcome it all. (He comes out of the grave.) Do you go down, instead of me; and clear away as much as you can, so that we may open the cistern.

LEONORA: (She goes a few steps down, tremblingly). What passes within me is unspeakable.

ROCCO: (zu Florestan.) Nun, habt Ihr ein wenig ausgeruht?

FLORESTAN: Wie könnte ich wohl Ruhe finden!

LEONORE: (für sich.) Diese Stimme! Wenn ich nur sein Gesicht einen Augenblick sehen könnte!

FLORESTAN: Willst du ewig taub gegen meine Klagen sein, grausamer Mann!
(Er wendet sich bei diesen Worten nach Leonoren.)

LEONORE: Gott des Himmels! Er ist es!
(Sie fällt besinnungslos am Rande der Grube nieder.

ROCCO: Was wollt Ihr von mir? Ich befolge die Befehle, welche mir gegeben werden; das ist mein Amt, meine Pflicht!

FLORESTAN: Sage mir denn nur einmal, wer ist der Gouverneur dieses Gefängnisses?

ROCCO: (für sich.) Ich kann es ihm jetzt wohl ohne Gefahr sagen. (Laut.) Der Gouverneur dieses Gefängnisses ist Don Pizarro.

LEONORE: (sich aufrichtend.) O Barbar! Deine Grausamkeit, ja dein Name giebt mir meine Kraft wieder!

FLORESTAN: O sendet, so schnell ihr könnt, nach Sevilla. Fraget dort nach Leonora Florestan.

LEONORE: Gott des Himmels! Er ahnt nicht, dass sie ihm jetzt sein Grab gräbt!

FLORESTAN: Saget ihr, dass ich in Ketten hier bin.

ROCCO: Es ist unmöglich, sage ich euch! Ich würde mich ruiniren, ohne euch zu helfen.

FLORESTAN: Wemm ich denn bestimmt bin, hier zu schmachten, o, lasst mich nicht so langsam meinem Ende entgegengehen!

LEONORE: (aufspringend, aber sich fassend.) O Gott, wer kann dies ertragen?

FLORESTAN: Habt Mitleid und gebet mir nur einen Tropfen Wasser—sicherlich, das ist wenig genug!

ROCCO: (für sich.) Es dreht mir das Herz um.

LEONORE: Er scheint ihn zu erweichen.

FLORESTAN: Ihr antwortet nicht?

ROCCO: Ich kann euren Wunsch nicht erfüllen. Alles, was ich euch anbieten kann, ist der Rest Wein, welchen ich im Kruge habe.

LEONORE: (bringt den Krug.) Da ist er, da ist er!

FLORESTAN: (Leonoren betrachtend.) Wer ist das?

ROCQUO: (to Florestan). Now you have reposed again a little?

FLORESTAN: How could I possible find repose?

LEONORA: (to herself). That voice! If I could only see his face for an instant—

FLORESTAN: Will you always be deaf to my complaints? cruel man. (With the last words, he turns his face towards Leonora.)

LEONORA: God of Heaven! It is him. (She falls senseless on the edge of the grave.)

ROCQUO: What do you require of me, then? I fulfill the orders given to me;—that is my province, my duty.

FLORESTAN: Only tell me then—at once—who is the governor of this prison.

ROCQUO: (aside). Now I can tell him well enough, without danger. (Aloud.) The governor of this prison is Don Pizzarro.

LEONORA: (gradually recovering herself). Oh, barbarian! Your cruelty—your very name restores me to my strength.

FLORESTAN: Oh! send—send as quickly as possible to Seville. Ask there for Leonora Florestan.

LEONORA: Lord of mercy! He does not suspect that she is now digging his grave.

FLORESTAN: Tell her that I am lying here in chains.

ROCQUO: It is impossible, I tell you, I should be ruining myself, without doing you any benefit.

FLORESTAN: If, then, I am condemned to pine away here, Oh! let me not so slowly linger to my end.

LEONORA: (springs up, and then restrains herself). Oh God! Who can endure this?

FLORESTAN: For pity's sake, give me only a drop of water;—surely that is little enough.

ROCQUO: (aside). It goes against my very heart.

LEONORA: He appears to soften him.

FLORESTAN: You give me no answer.

ROCQUO: I cannot procure you what you request. All that I can offer you is a remnant of wine, which I have in the pitcher.

LEONORA: (bringing the pitcher with the utmost haste). There it is; there it is.

FLORESTAN: (looking at Leonora). Who is that?

ROCCO: Mein Gehülfe und in wenigen Tagen mein Schwiegersohn. (Giebt ihm den Krug. Florestan trinkt.) Es ist nicht viel, aber ich gebe es euch gerne. (Zu Leonoren.) Du bist ganz aufgeregt.	ROCQUO: My assistant;—and in a few days, my son-in-law. (Hands the pitcher to Florestan, who drinks.) There is, truly not much wine; yet I am glad to give it you. (To Leonora.) You are quite agitated.
LEONORE: (verwirrt.) Wer könnte ruhig bleiben? Ihr selbst, Meister Rocco!	LEONORA: (in the greatest embarrassment). Who could help being so? You, yourself, Mr. Rocquo—
ROCCO: Ja, es ist wahr! Der Mann hat so eine Stimme.	ROCQUO: It is true,—the man has such a voice—
LEONORE: Ja, sie dringt bis in das innerste Herz.	LEONORA: Yes;—it penetrates to the inmost recesses of the heart.
FLORESTAN: Euch werde Lohn in bessern Welten, Der Himmel hat euch mir geschickt; O Dank, ihr habt mich süss erquickt, Ich kann die Wohlthat, ich kann sie nie vergelten.	FLORESTAN: May you find a reward in the next world. Heaven has sent you to me. Oh, thanks! you have sweetly revived me. I cannot reward thy kindness.
LEONORE: Der Himmel schicke Rettung dir, Dann wird mir hoher Lohn gewährt.	LEONORA: Heaven send you deliverance; then will I be highly rewarded.
ROCCO: Mich rührte oft dein Leiden hier, Doch Hülfe war mir streng verwehrt. (Leise zu Leonoren, die er bei Seite zieht.) Ich labt' ihn gern, den armen Mann. Es ist ja bald um ihn gethan. Ich thu' was meine Pflicht gebeut, Doch hass' ich alle Grausamkeit.	ROCQUO: Your sufferings often moved me; but to keep you was strictly forbidden me. (Softly to Leonora, whom he takes aside.) I was glad. Heaven knows, to refresh the poor man. But it is already all over with him. I do what my duty imposes, yet I abhor all cruelty.
LEONORE: (für sich.) Wie heftig pochet dieses Herz, Es wogt in Freud' und scharfem Schmerz! Die hehre, bange Stunde winkt. Die Tod mir oder Rettung bringt.	LEONORA: (aside). How my heart is beating; my life fluctuates between joy and grief. The awful hour beckons on, that death or deliverance does bring.
FLORESTAN: (für sich.) Bewegt seh' ich den Jüngling hier. Und Rührung zeigt auch dieser Mann; O Gott, o Gott! du sendest Hoffnung mir. Das ich sie noch gewinnen kann.	FLORESTAN: (to himself). I see this youth here affected; and this man also shows compassion. O God! you send me hope, that I may again find her for whom alone I live.
LEONORE: (leise zu Rocco, indem sie ein Stückchen Brod aus der Tasche zieht.) Dies Stückchen Brod, ja seit zwei Tagen. Trag' ich es immer schon bei mir.	LEONORA: (softly to Rocquo, while she draws a small piece of bread out of her pocket). This piece of bread I have carried about me for the last two days.
ROCCO: Ich möchte gern, doch sag ich dir. Das hiesse wirklich zu viel wagen.	ROCQUO: I would most willingly; but I tell you that would indeed be venturing too much.
LEONORE: (schmeichelnd.) Ach, ihr labtet gern denarmen Mann!	LEONORA: (winningly). You like to refresh the poor man.
ROCCO: Das geht nicht an. Das geht nicht an.	ROCQUO: That will not do; that will not do.
LEONORE: (wie vorher.) Es ist ja bald um ihn gethan!	LEONORA: (as before). It will very soon be all over with him.
ROCCO: So sei es, ja so sei's, du kannst es wagen.	ROCQUO: So be it then; you may venture it.
LEONORE: (in grösster Bewegung, Florestan das Brod reichend.) Da, nimm das Brod. Du armer, armer Mann!	LEONORA: (in the greatest agitation, handing Florestan the bread). There, take the bread, poor man.
ROCCO: (für sich, sehr gerührt.) Es ist ja bald um ihn gethan!	ROCQUO: (to himself, much affected). Yes, it will be very soon all over with him.
FLORESTAN: (Leonorens Hand ergreifend und an sich drückend.) O Dank dir, euch werde Lohn in bessern Welten!	FLORESTAN: (grasping Leonora's hand, and pressing it to himself.) Oh, thank you! thank you! May heavenly bliss be your reward.
ROCCO: Armer Mensch!	ROCQUO: Poor fellow!
LEONORE: O, das ist mehr, als ich ertragen kann!	LEONORA: Oh, more than I can endure.
ROCCO: Est ist ja bald um ihn gethan.	ROCQUO: It will soon be over with him.
FLORESTAN: O, dass ich euch nicht lohnen kann! (Err isst das Stück Brod.)	FLORESTAN: Oh, that I cannot reward you. (He eats the piece of bread.)
ROCCO: (nach kurzem Stillschweigen zu Leonora.) Alles ist fertig. Ich will jetzt das Zeichen geben.	ROCQUO: (after a momentary silence, to Leonora). All is ready. I am going to give the signal.
FLORESTAN: (zu Leonora, während Rocco geht, um die Thüre zu öffnen.) Wohin geht er? (Rocco öffnet die Thür und giebt das Zeichen, indem er laut pfeift.) Ist dies der Vorbote meines Todes?	FLORESTAN: (to Leonora, while Rocquo goes to open the door). Where is he going? (Rocque opens the door, and gives the signal by a loud whistle.) Is that the harbinger of my death?
LEONORE: (in äusserster Aufregung.) Nein, nein, beruhigt euch, lieber Gefangener!	LEONORA: (in extremest agitation). No, no, calm yourself, dear prisoner.
FLORESTAN: O, meine Leonore! Ich werde sie nie wiedersehen!	FLORESTAN: Oh, my Leonora! shall I never then see you again?
LEONORE: (scheint zu Florestan hingezogen zu werden, bezwingt sich aber.) Mein ganze Herz zicht mich zu ihm hin. (Zu Florestan.) Bleibt ruhig! Vergesst nich, was ihr auch hören und sehen möget, dass eine Vorsehung über uns waltet. (Sie geht von ihm nach der Cisterne su.)	LEONORA: (She seems to feel herself drawn towards Florestan, and strives to overcome the impulse). My whole heart draws me to him. (To Florestan.) Be composed I tell you. Do not forget whatever you may hear and see—do not forget that there is a Providence above. (She separates from him, and goes towards the cistern.)

DRITTE SCENE

SCENE III

Don Pizarro, in einen Mantel gehüllt.	(Enter Pizzarro, disguised in a mantle.)
PIZARRO: (Zu Rocco mit verstellter Stimme.) Ist Alles fertig?	PIZZARRO: (to Rocquo, in a feigned voice). Is all ready?
ROCCO: Ja wohl, die Cisterne braucht blos geöffnet zu werden.	ROCQUO: Yes; the cistern has only to be opened.
PIZARRO: Gut! der Bursche muss fortgehen.	PIZZARRO: Good. The lad must go away.
ROCCO: (zu Leonoren.) Gehe! Entferne dich!	ROCQUO: (to Leonora). Go! withdraw.
LEONORE: (sehr bestürzt.) Ich? Und Ihr?	LEONORA: (in the greatest perplexity). Who? I and you?
ROCCO: Muss ich nicht dem Gefangenen die Fesseln abnehmen? (Leonore geht langsam nach dem Hintergrunde, nähert sich aber langsam wieder in der Dunkelheit Florestan, die Augen fortwährend auf Pizarro gerichtet.)	ROCQUO: Must I not take the irons from the prisoner? Go, go! (Leonora withdraws to the background, and approaches gradually again in the shade towards Florestan, her eyes directed constantly to the person in the disguise.)
PIZARRO: (für sich, Rocco und Leonore betrachtend.) Ich muss mir noch heute sie beide vom Halse schaffen, damit Alles für immer verschwiegen bleibt.	PIZZARRO: (aside, casting a look at Rocquo and Leonora). Today I must shake off these two from me, that all may be ever remain in silence.

ROCCO: (zu Don Pizarro.) Soll ich seine Ketten abnehmen?

PIZARRO: Nein!
(Zieht einen Dolch.)
Er sterbe! doch soll er wissen.
Wer ihm sein stolzes Herz zerfleischt.
Der Rache Dunkel sei zerrissen.
Sieh hier, du hast mich nicht getäuscht!
Pizarro, den du stüzen wolltest.
Pizarro, den du fürchten solltest,
Steht nun als Rächer hier!

FLORESTAN: (ruhig.) Ein Mörder steht vor mir!

PIZARRO: Noch einmal ruf' ich dir.
Was du gethan, zurück.
Nur noch ein Augenblick, und dieser Dolch—
(Er will ihn durchbohren.)

LEONORE: (stürzt mit einem durchdringenden Schrei hervor und bedeckt Forestan mit ihrem Körper.) Zurück!

FLORESTAN: O Gott!

ROCCO: Was soll's?

LEONORE: Durchbohren musst du erst diese Brust!
Der Tod sei dir geschworen für deine Mörderlust!

DON PIZARRO: (sie wegstossend.) Wahnsinniger!

ROCCO: (zu Leonoren.) Halt ein! Halt doch ein!

PIZARRO: Wahnsinniger! Er soll bestrafet sein!

LEONORE: (sich vor Florestan stellend.) Tödt' erst sein Weib!

PIZARRO: Sein Weib!

ROCCO: Sein Weib?

FLORESTAN: Mein Weib?

LEONORE: (zu Florestan.) Ja, sieh' hier Leonoren!

FLORESTAN: Leonore!

LEONORE: (zu den Andern.) Ich bin sein Weib!
Geschworen hab' ich ihm Trost,
Verderben dir!

DON PIZARRO: (für sich.) Sein Weib!
Welch' unerhörter Muth!

FLORESTAN: (zu Leonoren.) Vor Freude starrt mein Blut!

ROCCO: Mir starrt vor Angst mein Blut!

LEONORE: Ich trotze siener Wuth.

PIZARRO: Haha! soll ich vor einem Weibe beben?
So opf're ich sie beide meinem Grimme!
Getheilt hast du mit ihm das Leben,
So theile nun den Tod mit ihm.
(Er will sich auf sie stürzen. Leonore zieht plötzlich eine Pistole aus dem Busen und hält sie Don Pizarro entgegen.)

ROCQUO: (to Pizzarro). Shall I take off his chains?

PIZZARRO: No! (Draws a dagger.)
He dies; but he shall first know who it is that pierces his proud heart. Let the darkness be torn away that veils revenge. Behold! you have not deceived yourself! (He throws off the mantle.) Pizzarro, whom you wished to overthrow!—Pizzarro, whom you should fear to look upon, stands now before you, his own avenger!

FLORESTAN: (collectedly). A murderer stands before me.

PIZZARRO: Yet, for once will I recall you to what you have done; yet one moment, and my dagger—(He tries to stab him.)

LEONORA: (springs forward with a piercing shriek, and covers Florestan with her body.) Hold!

FLORESTAN: Oh, God!

ROCQUO: What is all this?

LEONORA: You must first stab through this breast. Death is sworn to you for your blood-thirstiness!

PIZZARRO: (thrusting her away). Mad creature!

ROCQUO: (to Leonora). Desist, I say.

PIZZARRO: He shall be punished.

LEONORA: (Once more shielding her husband). Kill first his wife!

PIZZARRO: His wife!

ROCQUO: His wife!

FLORESTAN: Ha! my wife!

LEONORA: (to Florestan). Oh, yes, yes, see here your Leonora!

FLORESTAN: Leonora!

LEONORA: (to the others). I am his wife. I have sworn aid to him, destruction to you.

PIZZARRO: (to himself). His wife! What unheard of courage!

FLORESTAN: (to Leonora). My heart will burst with joy!

ROCQUO: My blood runs cold with terror!

LEONORA: I brave his rage!

PIZZARRO: Shall I tremble before a woman?
No! I will sacrifice them both to my rage. You have shared life with him,—now partake his doom in death.
(He is about to assail her, when Leonora suddenly draws a small pistol out of her bosom, and holds it before Pizzarro.)

LEONORE: Noch einen Laut und du bist todt.
(Trompetenfanfare draussen.)

PIZARRO: Ha, ha! der Minister! Hölle und Tod!

ROCCO: O, was ist das! gerechter Gott!
(Don Pizarro steht vernichtet da, ebenso Rocco. Lenore fällt Florestan um den Hals. Die Trompetenfanfare wird wiederholt.)

VIERTE SCENE

Jaquino, zwei Offiziere, Soldaten mit Fackeln erscheinen oben am Thore.

JAQUINO: (spricht waehrend der angezeigten Musikpause.) Vater Rocco, der Minister kommt eben an. Seine Wache ist schon vor dem Thor.

ROCCO: (für sich, in freudiger Ueberraschung.) Der Himmel sei gelobt! (Zu Jaquino laut.) Wir kommen, ja, wir kommen sogleich, und die Leute mit den Fackeln sollen herabkommen und dem Gouverneur hinauf leuchten.

PIZARRO: Verflucht sei diese böse Stunde! Die Hölle spottet meiner! Verzweiflung tritt zu meiner Rache.

ROCCO: Tödtlicher Aufschub! O welch' neue Betrübniss wartet jetzt meiner? Ich will nicht länger diesem Tyrannen gehorchen; der Augenblick der Rache ist gekommen, du sollst frei sein!

LEONORE UND FLORESTAN: Der Augenblick der Rache ist da, du sollst frei sein. Liebe im Vereine mit Muth werden mich doch befreien.
(Don Pizarro eilt hinweg, indem er Rocco ein Zeichen giebt, ihm zu folgen. Er benutzt den Augenblick, als Pizarro fortgegangen ist, und vereinigt die Hände der Ehegatten, weist gegen Himmel und folgt Don Pizarro.)

FÜNFTE SCENE

FLORESTAN: Theures Weib! Was hast du für mich gelitten!

LEONORE: Nichts, nichts, mein Florestan!
O namenlose Freude!
Mein Mann an meiner Brust
Nach unnennbaren Leiden
So übergrosse Lust!
Du wieder nun in meinen Armen,
O Dank dir, Gott, für diese Lust!

LEONORA: Another word, and you are dead!
(The trumpet is heard from the tower.)

PIZZARRO: Ha! the minister! Hell and death!

ROCQUO: Oh, what is that? Just heaven!
(Pizzarro stands confounded. Rocquo the same. Leonora hangs on Florestan's neck. The trumpet sounds louder.)

SCENE IV

(Jacquino, two officers, and soldiers, with torches, appear at the uppermost grated opening of the gates.)

JACQUINO: (speaks during the pause of the music). Father Rocquo, the minister arrives; his guard is already before the castle gate.

ROCQUO: (to himself, delighted and surprised).
Heaven be praised! (To Jacquino, calling aloud.) We are coming! yes, we are coming immediately; and the men with their torches shall come down and accompany the Governor up. (The soldiers come down as far as the door. The Officers and Jacquino go out again.)

PIZZARRO: Curse be this evil hour. Hell mocks me! Despair now leagues itself with my revenge!

ROCQUO: Dread suspense! Oh! what fresh affliction is now in store for me? I will no longer be controlled by this tyrant. The moment of vengeance has come; you shall be free!

LEONORA AND FLORESTAN: The moment of vengeance has come; you shall be free! Love, in league with courage, will still make me free.
(Pizzarro hastens away, giving Rocquo a sign to follow him. He avails himself of the moment when Pizzarro is going and unites the hands of the husband and wife, presses them to his bosom, points toward heaven, and follows him. The soldiers light Pizzarro off.)

SCENE V

FLORESTAN: Faithful wife! what have you suffered for me!

LEONORA: Nothing, nothing, my Florestan!
Oh, joy unknown! My husband again restored to my fond embrace!

FLORESTAN: O namenlose Freude,
An Leonoren's Brust,
Nach unnennbaren Leiden,
So übergrosse Lust;
O Gott, wie gross ist dein Erbarmen,
O Dank dir, Gott, für diese Lust.

LEONORE: O himmlisches Entzücken, Florestan!

SECHSTE SCENE

ROCCO: (eilig.) Gute Nachrichten, meine armen Freunde! Der Minister hat ein Verzeichniss aller Gefangenen. Ihr sollt Alle vor ihn gebracht werden. (Zu Florestan.) Ihr allein seid nicht erwähnt. Eure Gefangenschaft ist eine Willkür des Gouverneurs selbst. Kommt, folget mir.
(Alle ab.)

SIEBENTE SCENE

Saal im Schloss. Die Schlosswache marschirt herein, darauf Don Fernando mit Don Pizarro und Offizieren. Volk. Die Gefangenen kommen mit Jacquino und Marcelline herbei. Alle werfen sich auf die Kniee. Dann Rocco, Florestan und Leonore.

CHOR: (der Gefangenen und des Volkes.) Heil! Heil! Heil sei dem Tag.
Heil sei der Stunde.
Die lang' ersehnt, doch unvermeint,
Gerechtigkeit mit Huld im Bunde,
Vor unsers Grabes Thor erscheint.

DON FERNANDO: Des besten Königs Wink und Wille, Führt mich zu euch, ihr Armen, her,
Dass ich der Frevel Nacht ethülle,
Die all' umfangen, schwarz u. schwer,
Nicht länger kniet sklavisch nieder,
Tyrannenstrenge sei mir fern,
Es sucht der Bruder seine Brüder,
Und kann er helfen, hilft er gern.

ACHTE SCENE

(Florestan und Leonore vorführend.)

ROCCO: Wohlan, so helft den Armen.

PIZARRO: Was seh' ich ha!

ROCCO: Bewegt es dich?

PIZARRO: Fort, fort!

DON FERNANDO: Nein, rede!

FLORESTAN: Pressed to my Leonora's breast, after great sufferings! Oh, delight past utterance!

LEONORA: You again—now in my arms!

SCENE VI

ROCQUO: (springing in). Good news! My poor sufferers! The minister has a list of all the prisoners. You are all to be brought before him. (To Florestan.) You alone are not mentioned. Your detention here is an arbitrary action on the part of the governor himself. Come, follow me! follow me up.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE VII

(Hall in the Castle.)
(The castle guard march up; then the minister Don Fernando, accompanied by Pizzarro and Officers on one side. People assemble as spectators; and on the other side appear, accompanied by Jacquino and Marceline the state prisoners. They all throw themselves on their knees before Don Fernando. Afterwards Rocquo, with Florestan and Leonora, press through the people and through the guard.)

CHORUS: (of Prisoners and People). All hail the day! All hail the hour, long sought for yet unhoped! Justice, united with mercy, appears to us on the shrine of death.

DON FERNANDO: The command and wish of the best of kings brings me to you, poor wearied sufferers! that I unveil crimes and dreary sorrows, which surround you deep and full. No longer kneel down slavishly. (Prisoners rise.) I do not cherish the tyrant's power. I come a brother loving and help where help can be.

SCENE VIII

(Enter Rocquo, conducting Leonora and Florestan.)

ROCQUO: There, there,—Help here! help the poor captive.

PIZZARRO: What do I see. Ha!

ROCQUO: Does it move you?

PIZZARRO: Away! away!

DON FERNANDO: No,—speak.

ROCCO: Aus Erbarmen vereine dieses Paar.
(Florestan vorfuehrend).
Don Florestan.

DON FERNANDO: Der Todtgeglaubte, der Edle,
Der für Wahrheit stritt!

ROCCO: Und Qualen ohne Zahl erlitt.

DON FERNANDO: Mein Freund, der Todtgeglaubte.
Gefesselt, bleich steht er vor mir.

ROCCO UND LEONORE: Ja, Florestan, ihr seht ihn hier!

ROCCO: Und Leonore—(sie vorstellend.)

DON FERNANDO: (bewegt.) Leonore?

ROCCO: Der Frauen Zierde führ' ich vor;
Sie kam hierher—

PIZARRO: Zwei Worte sagen—

DON FERNANDO: (zu Don Pizarro.) Kein Wort. (Zu Rocco.) Sie kam?—

ROCCO: Dort an mein Thor,
Und trat als Knecht in meine Dienste
Und treue Dienste,
Dass ich zum Eidam sie erkor.

MARCELLINE: O weh mir! weh mir!
Was vernimmt mein Ohr!

ROCCO: Der Unmensch wollt' in dieser Stunde
Vollzieh'n an Florestan den Mord.

PIZARRO: Vollzieh'n mit ihm—

ROCCO: (auf sich und Leonoren deutend.) Mit uns im Bunde, Nur euer Kommen rief ihn fort.

CHOR: Bestrafet sei der Bösewicht,
Der Unschuld unterdrückt.
Gerechtigkeit hält zum Gericht
Der Rache Schwert gezückt.

DON FERNANDO: (zu Rocco.) Du schlossest auf des Edlen Grab, Jetzt nimm ihm seine Ketten ab,
Doch halt, euch edle Frau allein,
Euch ziemt es, ganz ihn zu befrei'n.

LEONORE: (nimmt die Schlüssel l,ässt in grösster Bewegung die Ketten ab; er sinkt in Leonorens Arme.) O Gott, welch' ein Augenblick!

FLORESTAN: O unaussprechlich süsses Glück!

DON FERNANDO: Gerecht, o Gott, gerecht ist dein Gericht.

ROCCO UND MARCELLINE: Du prüfest, du verlässt uns nicht.

ROCQUO: For mercy sake, have pity, and reunite this hapless pair. (Florestan advances). Don Florestan.

DON FERNANDO: He that was supposed dead? The hero, who fought for truth and right?

ROCQUO: And who has suffered torments unimaginable.

DON FERNANDO: My friend! supposed dead;—how is this, that chained, pallid, and exhausted, he stands before me?

ROCQUO AND LEONORA: Yes,—it is Florestan! you see him here.

ROCQUO: And Leonora (presenting her).

DON FERNANDO (still more affected). Leonora!

ROCQUO: I present the pride, the ornament of her sex. She came here—

PIZZARRO: Speak but two words—

DON FERNANDO: (to Pizzarro). Not a syllable! (To Rocquo.) She came?—

ROCQUO: There, at my gate;—she entered my service as a hireling boy, and served me so well and faithfully, that I chose her for a son-in-law.

MARCELINE: Oh, woe is me!—
What meets my ear!

ROCQUO: Within this very hour, the cruel man would do a deed of murder on Florestan.

PIZZARRO: Murder! on him?

ROCQUO: (pointing to himself and Leonora). Yes, my lord, he wanted us to join in his base design. Your arrival only drove him away.

CHORUS: Punishment be to the villian who oppressed the innocent! Justice hold for judgment the drawn sword of revenge.

DON FERNANDO: (to Rocquo). You lifted the grave that threatened this noble heart,—now take off his chains;—yet stay,—You noble woman! to you alone it becomes completely to set him free!

LEONORA: (takes the keys, loosens the chains from off Florestan, with great agitation. He sinks into Leonora's arms.)
Oh, what a moment!

FLORESTAN: Oh, inexpressible happiness!

DON FERNANDO: Just, O heaven, are your judgments!

ROCQUO AND MARCELINE: You tried—but you did not forsake us.

CHOR: Wer ein holdes Weib errungen, Stimm' in unsern Jubel ein, Nie wird es zu hoch besungen, Retterin des Gatten sein.	CHORUS: Whoever has obtained such a partner of his heart, let him join in our jubilee. Who can ever sufficiently praise the wife that frees her husband from his chains!
FLORESTAN: Deine Treu' erhielt mein Leben. Tugend schreckt den Bösewicht.	FLORESTAN: Your fidelity restores my life. Virtue is the sinner's dread.
LEONORE: Liebe führte mein Bestreben, Wahre Liebe fürchtet nicht.	LEONORA: Love guided my endeavors; true love knows no fear.
CHOR: Preist mit hoher Freude Gluth Leonorens edlen Muth.	CHORUS: Let us sing praises high to the noble strife of Leonora.
FLORESTAN: (vortretend und auf Leonoren deutend.) Wer ein solches Weib errungen, Stimm' in unsern Jubel ein! Nie wird es zu hoch besungen, Retterin des Gatten sein.	FLORESTAN: (advancing, and pointing to Leonora.) Whoever has obtained a wife, etc.
LEONORE: (umarmt ihn.) Liebend ist es mir gelungen, Dich aus Ketten zu befreien; Liebend sei es hoch gesungen, Florestan ist wieder mein!	LEONORA: (embracing him). Guided by love, my success is complete. Your chains are broken! high praise be to love; I embrace my Florestan again.
ROCCO UND CHOR: Wer ein solches Weib errungen, Stimm' in unsern Jubel ein! Nie wird es zu hoch besungen, Retterin des Gatten sein.	ROCQUO AND CHORUS: Whoever has a wife, etc.
ENDE.	THE END.

Norma (1831)

Music by Vincenzo Bellini ■ Libretto by Felice Romani

Bellini's two-act tragedia lirica, Alexandre Soumet's tragedy Norma, or L'Infanticide, set to a libretto by Felice Romani was first performed at the La Scala in Milan on December 26, 1831. In the sacred forest of the druids, in the center of which stands the oak tree of Irminsul, Oroveso and the Druids express their hatred of the Roman conquerors. Pollione, the Roman proconsul, has left Norma, the Druid high priestess who has borne him two sons, and is now in love with Adalgisa, another priestess. He has dreamt that Norma will seek her revenge. The Gauls perform their sacred rites. Norma proclaims that Irminsul has not yet decreed that the Gauls must go to war and that Rome will eventually destroy herself. She prays to the goddess of the moon (the exquisite Casta Diva) for peace. Adalgisa comes to the clearing to meet Pollione and he enjoins her to run away with him to Rome. Adalgisa confesses to Norma that she has a lover, and has broken her vow of chastity as a priestess. Norma forgives her until she discovers that Adalgisa's lover is Pollione. She pronounces a curse upon them both. Pollione departs just as temple gong is rounding up the Gauls. Norma, intending to kill her two children, cannot bring herself to do so. She asks Adalgisa to take them into her care. Adalgisa asks Pollione to return to Norma. Though the Gallic warriors are ready to go to battle, Oroveso advises them to be patient. But, Adalgisa is unable to change Pollione's mind and Norma, enraged, gathers her people and declares that it is Irminsul's wish that Rome be exterminated. The people cry out for a victim to be sacrificed; Pollione is captured in the temple, but Norma stops the rite just as the sacrifice is about to begin to be alone with him. She decides to sacrifice herself instead as she, too, has broken her vow of chastity as a priestess. She gives her children to Pollione and climbs onto the sacred pyre. Norma and Pollione reunite after death.

■ ATTO PRIMO	■ ACT I
Foresta sacra de' Druidi. In mezzo, la Quercia d' Irminsul; al piè della quale vedesi la pietra druidica, che serve d' altare. Colli in distanza sparsi di selve. E notte: lontani fuochi trapelano dai boschi.	Sacred forest of the Druids. In the centre, the Oak of Irminsul; at the foot of which is seen a druidical stone, serving as an altar. Hills in the distance, partially covered with trees. It is night: lights are seen among the trees at the back
(Al suono di marcia religiosa difilano le schiere de Galli; indi, la processione de' Druidi; per ultimo Oroveso, coi Maggiori Sacerdoti.)	(A religious march is heard. Enter the Gallic Army, followed by a procession of Druids; and, lastly, the Chief Priests, headed by Oroveso.)
OROVESO: Ite sul colle, o Druidi! Ite a spiar ne' Cieli; Quando il suo disco argenteo La nuova luna sveli, Ed il primier sorriso Del verginal suo viso, Tre volte annunzi il mistico Bronzo sacerdotal.	OROVESO: On to the hills, oh holy band of Druids! On, to your duty, watch the heavens; And when you see her silvery disk up there, The new moon (omen of success) unveils, At the first radiant smile that beams from Her virgin face, charming the sea and shore, Thrice the glad tidings, spreading all around, Announce upon the sacerdotal bronze.
DRUIDI: Il sacro vischio a mietere, Norma verrà?	DRUIDS: Will, then, The mighty Norma come to cut the sacred mistletoe?
OROVESO: Sì, Norma.	OROVESO: Yes, Norma will.
OROVESO E DRUIDI: (Coro)	OROVESO AND DRUIDS: (Chorus)
DRUIDI: Dell' aura tua profetica Terribil Dio l'informa; Sensi O Irminsul, le inspira, D'odio ai Romani e d'ira; Sensi che questa infrangano, Pace per noi mortal,	DRUIDS: Oh! with your prophetic power, Fire her heart, avenging fate; Dread Irminsul, it is now the hour, Inspire to Rome eternal hate; Let resolution be her dower, Of deadly peace to spurn the weight.
OROVESO: Sì, parlerà terribile, Da queste querce antiche: Sgombre farà le Gallie Dall'aqui le nemi che. E del suo scudo il suono, Parial fragor del tuono,	OROVESO: Yes, great God, speak in anger, Your ancient oaks reply from these; And free this land, wreak, your vengence Till the Roman eagles fly afar. Yes, let the sound of your dread shield, Like the roar of thunder heard,
OREVESO E CORO: Nella città dei Cesari, Tremendo eccheggerà!	OROVESO AND CHORUS: Through the Cesarian city pealed, Re-echo, Victory the word!
TUTTI: Luna, ti affretta a sorger! Norma all' altar verrà. (Si allontanano tutti e si sperdono nella foresta: di quando in quando si odono ancora le loro voci risuonare in lontananza) (Escono quindi da un lato Flavio e Pollione guardinghi e ravvolti nelle lor toghe)	ALL: Sweet moon, oh, hasten your propitious rise! Norma will come—she will bless our wishes. (The whole disperse, and disappear in the forest at the back: from time to time their voices are heard in the distance) (Flavio and Pollio enter cautiously, enveloped in their togas)
POLLIONE: Svanir le voci.—Dell' orrenda selva Libero è il varco.	POLLIO: All is hushed and still.— In this dread wood Our course is free.
FLAVIO: In questa selva è morte. Norma tel disse.	FLAVIO: We seek death in this forest So Norma warned us.
POLLIONE: Profferisti un nome Che il cor m'agghiaccia.	POLLIO: You've pronounced a name That chills my heart.

FLAVIO: O! che dì tu?—l' amante—
La madre de' tuoi figli!

POLLIONE: A me non puoi
Far tu rampogna, ch' io mertar son senta;
Ma nel mio core è spenta
La prima fiamma. E un Dio la spense—un Dio,
Nemico al mio riposo. A piè mi veggo
L' abisso aperto, e in lui m' avvento io stesso.

FLAVIO: Altra ameresti tu?

POLLIONE: Parla sommesso!
Un' altra!—sì, Adalgisa!
Tu la vedrai, fior d' innocenza e riso
Di candore e di amor! Ministra al tempio
Di questo Iddio di sangue, ella vi appare
Come raggio di stella in Ciel turbato.

FLAVIO: Misero amico! e amato
Sei tu del pari?

POLLIONE: Io n' ho fiducia.

FLAVIO: E l'ira
Non temi tu di Norma?

POLLIONE: Atroce, orrenda;—
Me la presenta il mio rimorso estremo.
Un sogno—

FLAVIO: Ah! narra.

POLLIONE: In rammentarlo io tremo!
Meco all' altar di Venere,
Era Adalgisa in Roma:
Cinta di bende candide,—
Sparsa di fior la chioma.
Udia d' Imene i cantici,
Vedea fumar gl' incensi;
Eran rapiti i sensi—
Di voluttade e amor.
Quando fra noi terribile,
Viene a locarsi un' ombra,
L' ampio mantel Druidico
Come un vapor l' ingombra
Cade su l' ara il folgore,
D' un vel si copre il giorno.
Muto si spande intorno—
Un sepolcrale orror.
Più l' adorata vergine
Io non mi trovo accanto
N' odo da lunge un gemito,
Misto de' figli al pianto,—
Ed una voce orribile,
Echeggia in fondo al tempio:
'Norma così fa scempio
Di amante traditor!'
(Squilla il sacro bronzo)

FLAVIO: Odi?—I suoi riti a compiere,
Norma dal tempio move.

FLAVIO: Heavens! what are you saying? Your loved one—
The mother of your children!

POLLIO: No reproach
Can fall from you that I've not deserved;
But in my hapless bosom burns no longer
My heart's first flame. A God so wills—a God,
Foe to my peace, has wrought this falsehood.
I see the abyss before me, nor would I shun it.

FLAVIO: What! dost you love someone else?

POLLIO: Hush! speak softly!
Another!—yes, the enchanting Adalgisa!
You shall see this flower of youth and beauty,
Innocence and love! A priestess in the temple
Of these Gauls' blood-stained God, she beams
Like a bright star that cheers the gloomy night.

FLAVIO: My ill-fated friend! and is your hapless love Returned?

POLLIO: I trust so.

FLAVIO: But the jealous wrath,
Do you not dread, of Norma?

POLLIO: Yes, overpowering;—
My deep remorse but too well pictures it.
A dream—

FLAVIO: Ah! speak.

POLLIO: Its memory shakes my soul!
With me kneeling to Venus,
In Rome, with Adalgisa;
White robes revealing, her truth—
Pure flowers her hair's sole treasure.
Hearing, the hymns of Hymen
We saw the incense burning;
Rapture endearing both hearts
Thus love with love returning.
When straight, while thus devoted,
Between us rose a shadow,
In Druid robes, that floated
Like mists over morning meadow.
A thunderbolt struck the altar
Day became overclouded.
I falter with fearful doubt—
Sepulchral awe enshrouded.
My bride, sweet maiden! vanished,
I heard, with senses failing,
A groan, all hope that banished,
Mixed with my children's wailing,—
A voice, my bliss that changes.
The temple's depths rolls over:
'Thus Norma well revenges
The treachery of her lover!'
(The sacred bronze is heard sounding)

FLAVIO: Do you hear that?—
The Norma you've forsaken comes to perform her rites.

VOCI: (lontano) Sorta è la luna, o Druidi!
Ite, profani, altrove.

FLAVIO: Vieni!—Fuggiam! sorprendere,
Scoprire alcun ti può.

POLLIONE: Traman conguire i barbari!
Ma io li preverrò.

POLLIONE: (Solo) Me protegge! me difende
Un poter maggior di loro:
E il pensier di lei che adoro,
E l'amor, è l'amor che m' infiammo!
Di quel Dio chea me con tende—
Quella vergine celeste!
Arderò le rie foreste,
L'empio altare, l'empio altare abbatterò!
L'empio altare abbatterò l'empio altare abbatterò!
(Partono rapidamente)
(Druidi dal fondo, Sacerdotesse, Guerrieri, Bardi, Eubagi, Sacrificatori. E in mezzo, a tutti, Oroveso)
(Coro)
Norma viene!
Le cinge la chioma
La verbena ai misteri sacrata;
In sua man come Luna falcata,
L'aurea falce diffonde splendor.
Ella viene! e la stella di Roma,
Sbigottita si copre d'un velo.
Irminsul corre i campi del Cielo,
Qual cometa, foriera d'orror;
Qual cometa, foriera d'orra, cometa, foriera d'orror! foriera, foriera d'orror, foriera, foriera d'orror.
(Norma in mezzo alle sue Ministre: ha sciolti i capegli—la fronte circondata, di una corona di verbena—ed armata la mano di una falce d' oro. Si colloca sulla pietra druidica, e volge gli occhi d' intorno come inspirata. Tutti fanno silenzio)

NORMA: Sediziose voci:
Voci di guerra avvi chi alzar si attenta?
Presso all' ara del Dio? v' ha chi presume
Dettar responsi alla vegente Norma?
E di Roma affrettar il fato arcano—
Ei non dipende da poter umano.

OROVESO: E fino a quando oppressi
Ne vorrai tu? Contaminate assai
Non fur le patrie selve e i templi aviti

VOICES: (heard in the distance)
The moon appears, oh Druids!
Hence, profane ones, from these scenes.

FLAVIO: They come!—Fly! or we may be surpris'd,
Discover'd; let us, then, away.

POLLIO: Barbarians! they conspire to entrap us,
But I will defeat their schemes.

POLLIO: (Solo) Love will shield, will protect; yes, a power,
Greater far than they boast, will defend:
The bright thought of my fair, in this hour,
With love's flame will protect, will befriend!
Of the God who'd turn rival—
Turn with me for the maiden divine!
I'll burn, the fell wood's unholy haunts and lay low in the dust, in the dust, his foul shrine!
(Exeunt, bastily)
(Enter, from the back, Druids, Priestesses, Soldiers, Bards, Sacrificers, etc. In the centre, at their head, Oroveso)
(Chorus)
See, Norma comes!
She wears on her calm brow
A wreath, of vervain formed, crowned with mystery;
In her right hand, like Luna, bears
A gold-wrought sickle, spreading splendor round
Lo! she comes, and declines,
Rome's bright star
Fades obscurely in darkness and night.
Irminsul now shines, in the vaulted sky
Horror! horror! a comet, to frighten the souls of men;
(Enter Norma, in the midst of attendant Priestesses: her hair streaming wildly over her shoulders—her forehead bound by a wreath of the mystic vervain—in her hand a golden sickle. She ascends with a solemn air the druidical stone, and glances around, as one inspired with prophetic power. All maintain a deep silence)

NORMA: I hear seditious shouts, and cries for war:
Why do they rise at the altar of our Deity!
Who at this altar dares presume to dictate
Dread fate's responses to all-seeing Norma?
Speeding Rome's untimely appointed doom—
Her fate does not depend upon human agency.

OROVESO: When will the burdens that oppress us end?
Devoured, contaminated, we have seen enough
Our country's sacred woods and

Dall' aquile latine. Omai di Brenno! Oziosa non può starsi la spada?	temples By Rome's fierce eagles. Sword of Brennus! Shalt you rest ingloriously and idly!
TUTTI: Si brandisca una volta!	ALL: It must again be drawn!
NORMA: E infranta cada! Infranta, sì! se alcun di voi snudarla Anzi tempo pretende: ancor non sono Della nostra vendetta i dì maturi— Delle Sicambre scuri Sono i pili Romani ancor più forti.	NORMA: Drawn to be broken! Yes, broken, should there any here presume To draw it forth ere fate's appointed hour: The day of retribution yet is distant— The dreaded battle-axe of the Sicambri has not Yet strength to turn the Roman javelins.
TUTTI: E che ti annunzia il Dio? Parla, quai sorti!	ALL: What does our Deity reveal of fate?—speak!
NORMA: Io nei volumi arcani Leggo del Cielo, in pagine di morte Delle superba Roma è scritto il nome: Ella un giorna morrà—ma non per voi! Morrà pei vizi suoi, Qual consunta morrà! L' ora aspettate— L' ora fatal che compia il gran decreto. Pace, v' intimo! e il sacro vischio io mieto. (Falchia il vischio, le Sacerdotesse lo raccolgono in canestri di vimini. Norma si avanza, e stende le braccia al cielo. La luna splende in tutta la sua luce. Tutti si prostrano)	NORMA: In the dread pages of the mystic volumes, In death-fraught characters inscribed, The name of proud imperial Rome I read, She'll one day fall—but 'twill not be by you! Through her own vices 'tis that she will perish, Consumed to dust! The hour, then, wait— The fated hour this great decree foretells. Peace, all! I go the sacred boughs to gather. (Norma cuts the sacred branches of the mistletoe, which the Priestesses receive and deposit in their consecrated baskets. She then advances, upraising her arms on high. At this moment the moon breaks forth in full effulgence. All kneel reverently)
NORMA: (Aria) Casta Diva, casta Diva, che inargenti Queste sacre queste sacre, queste sacre antiche piante, A noi volgi il bel sembiante; A noi volgi, a noi volgi il bel sembiante, il bel sembiante Senza nube e senza vel! Tempra tu de' cori ardenti! Tempra ancor lo zelo andace! Spargi in terra quella pace, Che regnar tu fai nel Ciel.	NORMA: (Air) Stainless Godess, stainless Godess, whose brilliance beaming, O'er these ancient, o'er these ancient trees, these ancient trees, is steaming, Oh, on us, with favor gleaming; Oh, on us, oh, on us with favor gleaming; Free from clouds propitious, propitious shine! Oh! calm thou hearts, too ardent burning, Oh! calm thou zeal, all prudence spurning! Then, peace on earth again returning, Speed on through heaven with ray divine.
TUTTI: A noi volgi il bel sembiante, Senza nube e senza vel!	ALL: Oh, on us, with favor gleaming, Free from clouds, propitious shine!
NORMA: Fine al rito; e il sacro bosco Sia disgombro dai profani; Quando, il Nume irato e fosco, Chiegga il sangue dei Romani, Dal Druidico delubro La mia voce tuonerà.	NORMA: The rites are finished; and the sacred wood Must now be cleared of all profane intruders; When He, the Deity of wrath and gloom, Shall decree the ensanguined fall of Rome, Then, from the Druids' consecrated altar, My summoning voice in thunder shall be heard.
TUTTI: Tuoni! e alcun del popol empio Non isfugga al giusto scempio! E primier da noi percosso Il Proconsole cadrà.	ALL: Let it be heard! and of the impious race Not one shall escape our vengeance! Beneath our retributive weapons Shall the Proconsul be the first to fall.
NORMA: Sì, cadrà, punirlo io posso. Ma punirlo il cor non sa.	NORMA: Yes, first to fall! I have power to punish him. But how, alas! my weak heart knows not.
NORMA: (Aria) Ah! bello a me ritorna, Del fido amor primiero; E contro il mondo intiero, Difesa a te sarò. Ah! bello a me ritorna, Del raggio tuo sereno; E vita nel tuo seno— E patria, e Cielo avrò, a Cielo avrò.	NORMA: (Air) Ah! dear one, as true returning, As when first burning with love; Norma, spurning, the whole world Will be your defender Ah! dear one, returning, to me With love serenely yearning; My breast shall find life's dawning— Heaven, country, all in you, all in you.
CORO: Sei lento, sì, sei lento, O giorno di vendetta; Ma irato il Dio t' affretta Che il Tebro condannò. (Norma parte; e tutte in ordine la seguono) (Entra Adalgisa)	CHORUS: Lingering and slow-paced, Oh day of vengeance, you approach But the angry God shall haste you, That the Tiber has condemned. (Exit Norma; the rest follow in procession) (Enter Analgisa)
ADALGISA: Sgombra è la sacra selva,— Compiuto il rito. Sospirar non vista Alfin poss' io, quì, dove a me s' offerse La prima volta quel fatal Romano Che mi rende rubella al tempio, al Dio. Fosse l' ultima almen!—Vano desio! Irresistibil forza Quì mi strascina: e di quel caro aspetto Il cor si pasce; e di sua cara voce L' aura che spira mi repete il suono. (Corre a prostrarsi, sulla pietra d' Irminsul) Deh! proteggimi, o Dio! perduta io sono.	ADALGISA: The sacred wood is free from all intruders, The rites performed. I here may sigh unseen, Within these shades that treacherous gave The first recontre with that fatal Roman, Who made me false alike to vows and God. Would that time were the last!— Vain desire! A force irresistible Impels me here: his seductive looks Entrance my heart; and The air I breathe loves to repeat the sound of his dear voice. (Prostrates herself at the altar of Irminsul) Protect me, oh God, or I am lost!
POLLIONE: Eccola! va! mi lascia— Ragion non odo. (Flavio parte)	POLLIO: It is she! leave me! vain's remonstrance now— I'm deaf to reason. (Exit Flavio)
ADALGISA: (veggendolo sbigottita) O! Pollione!	ADALGISA: (disturbed at the sight of Pollio) Pollio!
POLLIONE: Che veggo?—Piangevi tu?	POLLIO: What see I?—In tears, love?
ADALGISA: Pregava. Ah, t' allontana— Pregar mi lascia!	ADALGISA: I was praying. Leave me, leave me— Leave me to prayer!
POLLIONE: Un Dio tu preghi atroce, Crudele, avverso al tuo desire e al mio! O, mia diletta! il Dio Che invocar devi è Amor!	POLLIO: Prayer to a ruthless God, Who frowns on the desires of two fond hearts! Oh, my beloved, my beautiful! the God You should invoke, is Love!

ADALGISA: Amor! deh! taci!
Ch' io più non t' oda.
(Si allontana da lui)

POLLIONE: E vuoi fuggirmi? e dove
Fuggir vuoi tu ch' io non ti segua?

ADALGISA: Al tempio:
Ai sacri altari ch' io sposar giurai!

POLLIONE: Gli altari!—e il nostro amor?

ADALGISA: Io l' obbliai!

POLLIONE: Va, crudele—e al Dio spietato
Offri in dote il sangue mio—
Tutto, ah! tutto ei sia versato;
Ma lasciarti non poss' io.
Sol promessa al Dio tu fosti—
Ma il tuo cuore a me si diè.
Ah! non sai quel che mi costi;
Perch' io mai rinunzi a te.

ADALGISA: E tu pure, ah! tu non sai!
Quanto costi a me dolente!
All' altare che altraggiai,
Lieta andava ed innocente!
Il pensiero al Ciel s' ergea;
Il mio Dio vedeva in Ciel!
Or per me—spergiura e rea—
Cielo e Dio ricopre un vel.

POLLIONE: Ciel più puro, e Dei migliori,
T' offro in Roma, ov' io mi reco.

ADALGISA: (colpita) Parti forse!

POLLIONE: Ai nuovi albori.

ADALGISA: Parti!—ed io?

POLLIONE: Tu vieni meco.
De' tuoi riti, è amor più santo:
A lui cedi, ah! cedi a me!

ADALGISA: (più comosso) Ah! non dirlo!

POLLIONE: Il dirò tanto,
Che ascoltato io sia da te.

ADALGISA E POLLIONE: (Duetto)

POLLIONE: Vieni in Roma, ah! vieni, o cara:
Dov' è amor, dov' è amor, è gioja, è vita,
Inebbriam nostr' alme a gara,—
Del contento, del contento a cui ne invita.
Voce in cor parlar non senti,
Che promette eterno ben;

ADALGISA: Love! hush! no more!
I dare not stay to listen.
(Retreating)

POLLIO: Would you fly from me?
Where can you fly that I cannot follow?

ADALGISA: Our temple:
Those sacred altars I have sworn to espouse!

POLLIO: The altar!—and our love?

ADALGISA: I have forgotten it!

POLLIO: Go, cruel beauty—go to your fell Deity,
And offer up my blood in sacrifice—
To the last drop!—all, all—let it be shed;
For I cannot leave, whatever the cost.
You were but promised to your tyrant God—
Not so to me: your heart was given to me.
Ah! none can tell what I would suffer for you
No power shall force me to renounce your love.

ADALGISA: And who can say what I have staked for you
What grief your fatal love has cost me!
To the sacred altar I have outraged,
Cheerful and innocent of heart I came!
My every thought I gave to heaven alone!
And I in heaven with joy beheld my God!
But now I—lost, perjured, guilty thing,
Heaven and my Deity see no longer.

POLLIO: Heavens far purer, Gods more just,
To Rome invite you, where now I go.

ADALGISA: (amazed) Depart, you said?

POLLIO: Yes, at the dawn of day.

ADALGISA: Depart!—and I?

POLLIO: You must go with me.
Love's are holier far than your fell rites,
Yield to love! and, yielding, yield to me!

ADALGISA: (much agitated) Ah! do not urge like this!

POLLIO: Still shall I urge,
Until you, pitying, consent.

ADALGISA AND POLLIO: (Duet)

POLLIO: Come to Rome with me, my fairest:
Love, and joy, and life, my dearest,
All will there transport, delight us,—
Bliss, and sweet content, invite us.
A voice must be speaking in your heart,
Promising eternal bliss;

Ah! da fede ai dolci accenti,
Sposo tuo—sposo tuo mi stringi al sen!

ADALGISA: Ciel! così parlar l'ascolto,
Sempre, ovunque, al tempio istesso,
Con quegli occhi, con quel volto—
Fin sull'ara fin sull'ara il voggo impresso.
Ei trionfa del mio pianto,
Del mio duol vittoria ottien.
Ciel! mi togli al dolce in canto,
O l'error, o, l'error perdona almen.

POLLIONE: Adalgisa!

ADALGISA: Ah! mi risparmi
Tua pietà maggior cordoglio!

POLLIONE: Adalgisa! e vuoi lasciarmi?

ADALGISA: Nol poss' io!—Seguir ti voglio!

POLLIONE: Quì, domani, all' ora istessa,
Verrai tu?

ADALGISA: Ne fo promessa

POLLIONE: Giura!

ADALGISA: Giuro!

POLLIONE: O! mio contento!
Ti rammenta!

ADALGISA: Ah! mi rammento!
Al mio Dio sarò spergiura,
Ma fedele a te sarò!

POLLIONE: L' amor tuo mi rassicura,
E il tuo Dio sfidar saprò.
(Partono)

■ ATTO SECONDO

Abitazione di Norma. Norma e Clotilde, recano per mano due piccoli fanciulli

NORMA: Vanne! e li cela entrambi!—oltre l' usato
Io tremo d' abbracciarli.

CLOTILDE: E qual ti turba
Strano timor, che i figli tuoi rigetti?

NORMA: Non so;—diversi affetti
Strazian quest' alma: amo in un punto ed odio
I figli miei—soffro in vederli, e soffro
S' io non li veggo; non provato mai
Sento ud diletto ed un dolore insieme
D' esser lor madre.

CLOTILDE: E madre sei?

NORMA: Nol fossi!

CLOTILDE: Qual rio contrasto!

Such sweet accents still seeking there,
Be mine—yield heaven in your kiss!

ADALGISA: Heavens! the words I now hear sounding,
Are our temple's prayers confounding,
Those eyes, that face, are never from me—
Even at the altar they beam on me,
Heavens! the words I now hear sounding,
Do our temple's prayers confound.
Those eyes, that face, are never from me—
Save me from the spell by which I'm bound.

POLLIO: Adalgisa!

ADALGISA: Ah! spare me,
In pity, from a greater sorrow!

POLLIO: Adalgisa, can you leave me?

ADALGISA: No, I cannot!—I will follow you.

POLLIO: Here, then, tomorrow, at this hour,
Say, will you come?

ADALGISA: You have my promise.

POLLIO: But swear!

ADALGISA: I swear!

POLLIO: Oh! height of joy!
Remember!

ADALGISA: Ah! I shall remember!
I shall be perjured to my God,
But I shall be true to you!

POLLIO: I'm cheered by your, love urged onward.
Defying thus your Diety.
(Exeunt)

■ ACT II

Norma's dwelling. Enter Norma and Clotilde, leading by the hand two young children

NORMA: Away! conceal them!—an unusual terror
Thrills me as I embrace them.

CLOTILDE: What is it that moves you,
That you drive your children from you?

NORMA: I cannot tell;—contending feelings rend
My ill-used soul: at once I love and hate
My hapless children—seeing them, I suffer,
Yet in their absence suffering,
I prove alike a pleasure and a pain—
I feel that I'm their mother.

CLOTILDE: Their mother?

NORMA: Would I were not!

CLOTILDE: Heart-rending confict!

NORMA: Immaginar non puossi? O, mia Clotilde! richiamato al Tebro, È Pollione.	NORMA: Who can picture it? Oh, my Clotilde! recalled to the Tiber, Pollio departs.
CLOTILDE: E teco ei parte?	CLOTILDE: With you?
NORMA: Ei tace Il suo pensier. O! s' ei fuggir tentasse, E qui lasciarmi—se obbliar potesse Questi suoi figli!	NORMA: He has not said so He hides his thoughts. Oh! should he resolve To leave me here alone—should he forget His helpless children!
CLOTILDE: E il credi tu?	CLOTILDE: You cannot think he'd act so?
NORMA: Non l' oso! E troppo tormentoso— Troppo orrendo un tal dubbio. Alcun s'avanza: va—li cela. (Norma li abbraccia, Clotilde parte coi fanciulli)	NORMA: No, I dare not! Ah! too tormenting to my faithful heart— Too horrible, I feel this doubt. Some one advances: go—hide them. (Norma embraces, and Clotilde retires with the children)
NORMA: Adalgisa!	NORMA: Adalgisa!
ADALGISA: (da lontano) Alma, costanza!	ADALGISA: (in the distance) Soul, be firm!
NORMA: T' inoltra—o giovinetta— T' inoltra—e perchè tremi? Udii che grave a me Segreto palesar tu voglia.	NORMA: Approach—young virgin, fear not— Advance—why do you tremble? I've heard that some grave matter You would impart to me in secret.
ADALGISA: È ver!—Ma, deh! ti spoglia Della celeste austerità, che splende Negli occhi tuoi—dammi coraggio, ond' io Senz' alcun velo ti palesi il core. (Si prostra; Norma la solleva)	ADALGISA: It is true! But, ah! veil awhile That heavenly austerity that reigns Within your eyes—inspire, encourage me, That, unrestrained, I may unfold my heart. (Adalgisa kneels lowly; Norma raises her)
NORMA: Mi abbraccia—e parla: che t'affligge?	NORMA: Embrace me—speak: what afflicts you?
ADALGISA: (dopo un momento d' esitazione) Amore! Non t'irritar!—Lunga stagion pugnai Per soffocarlo—ogni mia forza ei vinse! Ogni rimorso—Ah! tu non sai pur dianzi Qual giuramento io fea!—fuggir dal tempio,— Tradir l' altare a cui son io legata,— Abbandonar la patria!	ADALGISA: (after a moment's hesitation) Love! Do not be angry!—Long I struggled To repress it—but in vain, for it conquered! All my remorse—Ah! you think little of The oath I've sworn!—to fly our temple,— Betray the altar to which I'm bound,— Forsake my country!
NORMA: Ahi, sventurata! Del tuo primier mattino, Già turbato è il sereno; e come e quando Nacque tal fiamma in te?	NORMA: Lost, unhappy one! Thus, so early in your life's young morning, Your calm is overcast; but when, and how, Was this fame born in you?
ADALGISA: Da un solo sguardo— Da un sol sospiro, nella sacra selva, A' piè dell' ara ov' io pregava il Dio. Tremai, sul labbro mio Si arrestò la preghiera; e tutta assorta In quel leggiadro aspetto, un altro Cielo Mirar credetti!—un altro Cielo in lui!	ADALGISA: It was with one look— A single sigh, within our sacred forest, As at the altar I implored our God. Trembling, alas! I felt upon my lips The prayer arrested—die; and, all absorbed, In his bright contenance another heaven! I saw.—Ah, how believe!—another heaven!
NORMA: O rimembranza! io fui Così rapita al sol mirarlo in volto.	NORMA: Sad reminiscence! It was thus that I Felt enraptured when I first beheld him.
ADALGISA: Ma non mi ascolti tu?	ADALGISA: But do not hear?
NORMA: Segui—t' ascolto.	NORMA: Go on—I listen to you.
ADALGISA: Sola, furtiva, al tempio Io l' aspettai sovente! Ed ogni dì più fervida Crebbe la fiamma ardente.	ADALGISA: Alone and secret, in our temple I met him oft—remorse and shame! Each day my passion grew more fervant Each day my bosom's flame increased.
NORMA: Io stessa, anch' io Arsi così—l' incanto suo fu il mio.	NORMA: It was thus, I in my pride Was charmed—sighed as she sighed.
ADALGISA: Vieni! ei dicea, concedi Ch' io mi ti prostri ai piedi, Lascia che l' aura spiri, De' dolci tuoi sospiri! Del tuo bel crin le anella Dammi poter baciar?	ADALGISA: Oh, come! he said, permission grant me Lowly to kneel before your virgin feet, Leaving the passing zephyrs to enchant me, As sweetly they repeat your honeyed sighs? And your celestial brow, best bliss! Grant me, oh ecstasy of joy! to kiss!
NORMA: O, cari accenti! Così li profferia— Così trovava del mio cor la via.	NORMA: Dear accents! remembered but too well! Such words he softly breathed to me— And found to my poor heart the way!
ADALGISA: Dolci qual arpa armonica, M' eran le sue parole; Negli occhi suoi sorridere Vedea più bello un sole. Io fui perduta e il sono. D' uopo ho del tuo perdono: Deh! tu mi reggi e guida,— Me rassicura, o sgrida,— Salvami da me stessa,— Salvami dal mio cor!	ADALGISA: Sweet as the notes of the harmonious harp, Flowed the measure of his love-draught words; His eyes aiding his conquest, brightly smiled, More beauteous than the noon-day sun. I became lost, breathing such ardent passion. Befriend me—grant your gracious pardon! Oh! in your virtue, be my help, my guide,— Kindly console me, or as kind reprove,— Stretch forth your hand, and save me,— Save me from my heart!
NORMA: Ah! tergi il pianto: Alma non trovi di pietade avara. Te ancor non lega eterno nodo all' ara.	NORMA: Ah! dry your tears! You find in mine a soul not proof to pity. You're not eternally bound to our altar.
NORMA E ADALGISA: (Duetto)	NORMA AND ADALGISA: (Duet)
NORMA: Ah! si, fa core! e abbracciami— Perdono e ti compiango; Dai voti tuoi ti libero, I tuoi legami io frango. Al caro oggetto unita— Vivrai felice ancor; Al caro oggetto unita, Vivrai felice ancor, vivrai ancor, vivrai felice ancor!	NORMA: Oh! cheer yourself, do not weep! come to my arms— I pardon you; I free your charms, from all your vows & sever The bonds that bind Love gently chaining, your dear one embrace In joy live, in joy live, ever: Love gently chaining, embrace your dear one Live in joy, live in joy ever, in joy, in joy, in joy live ever!

ADALGISA: Ripeti o Ciel, ripetimi!
Sì lusinghieri, accenti;
Per te, per te s'acquetano,
I lunghi miei tormenti,—
Tu rendi a me la vita,
Se non è colpa amor;
Tu rendi a me la vita,
Se non è colpa amor, non e,
Se non, non è colpa amor.

NORMA: Ma di'—l' amato giovane,
Quale fra noi si noma?

ADALGISA: Culla ei non ebbe in Gallia:
Roma gli è patria—

NORMA: Roma!
Ed è?—prosegui!

ADALGISA: Il mira!

NORMA: Ei! Pollione!

ADALGISA: Qual ira?

NORMA: Costui, costui dicesti?
Ben io compresi?

ADALGISA: Ah sì!

POLLIONE: (inoltandosi ad Adalgisa) Misera te!—che festi?

ADALGISA: Io!

NORMA: (a Pollione) Tremi tu—perchi?
(Alcuni momenti di silenzio: Pollione è confuso, Adalgisa tremante, e Norma fermente)
O non tremare! o perfido!
No, non tremar per lei:
Essa non è colpevole
Il malfattor tu sei!
Trema per te—fellone!
Pei figli tuoi, per me.

ADALGISA: Che ascolto?—Ah, Pollione!
Taci! t' arretri?—Ahimè!
(Si copre il volto colle mani: Norma l' afferra per un braccio, e la costringe a mirar Pollione, egli la segue)

NORMA: O! di qual sei tu vittima!
Crudo e funesto inganno!
Pria che costui conoscere,
T' era il morir men danno.
Fonte d' eterne lagrime,
L' empio a te pure aperse;
D' orribil vel coperse
L' aurora de' tuoi dì.

ADALGISA: Q! qual traspare orribile
Dal tuo parlar mistero!
Trema il mio cor di chiedere—

ADALGISA: Repeat, repeat, great heavens! yes,
Those accents sweet, and sorrow chase;
Through you, pure calm my hopes will bless,
My heart shall sever from woe,—
Live's early morning, restored through your grace,
If passion be guiltless, ever;
Life's early morning, restored through your grace,
If passion be guiltless, ever,
If passion be guiltless, ever.

NORMA: But tell me—this much-loved youth,
By what name, amongst us, is he called?

ADALGISA: He was not born here in Gaul:
Rome is his country—

NORMA: Rome!
His name?—speak!

ADALGISA: Behold him!

NORMA: He! Pollio!

ADALGISA: What means this rage?

NORMA: This man, you say?
Have I heard rightly?

ADALGISA: Ah, yes!

POLLIO: (approaching Adalgisa)
Oh, miserable!—what rashness!

ADALGISA: I!

NORMA: (to Pollio) You tremble—for whom?
(Some moments of silence: Pollio is confused, Adalgisa trembling, and Norma enraged)
Tremble not! perfidious one!
Tremble not with fear for her:
She's not foresworn and guilty,
The criminal, the guilty, is you!
Then tremble for yourself, betrayer!
For your hapless children, and me.

ADALGISA: What do I hear?—Ah, Pollio!
Silent! not vindicate yourself?—Alas!
(She covers her face with her hands. Norma seizes her by the arm, and compels her to look on Pollio, who anxiously observes her)

NORMA: Oh! you are the victim of what treachery!
Cruel, unhappy, infamous deception!
Rather than this man you ever had known,
To you death's self had been preferable
A bitter fountain of eternal tears,
This impious one causes to flow;
With horrid clouds he has overshadowed
The morning of your unsuspecting days.

ADALGISA: Oh! what treachery gleams forth
Too clearly in your dark mysterious words!

Trema d' udire il vero:
Tutta comprendo, o misera!
Tutta la mio sventura—
Essa non ha misura,
Se m' ingannò così.

POLLIONE: Norma, de' tuoi rimproveri
Segno, non farmi adesso.
Deh! a questa afflitta vergine,
Sia respirar concesso:
Copra a quell' alma ingenua—
Copra nostr' onte un velo.
Guidichi solo il Cielo
Qual più di noi fallì.

NORMA: Perfido!

POLLIONE: Or basti!
(Per allontanarsi)

NORMA: Fermati!
E a me sottrarti speri?

POLLIONE: Vieni!
(Afferra Adalgisa)

ADALGISA: Mi lascia!—scostati!
(Dividendosi da lui)
Tu sei di Norma sposo.

POLLIONE: Qual io mi fossi obblio:
L' amante tuo son io.
(Con tutto il fuoco)
E mio destino amarti,
Destin costei fuggir.

NORMA: Ebben! Lo compi—e parti.
(Reprimendo il furore)
(a Adalgisa)
Seguilo.

ADALGISA: Ah! pria morir!

NORMA: (prorompendo) Vanne, sì—mi lascia, indegno.
Figli obblia, promesse, onore.
Maledetto dal mio sdegno
Non godrai d'un empio amore:
Te sull' onde, te sui venti,
Seguiran mie furie ardenti;
Mia vendetta, e notte e giorno,
Ruggirà d' intorno a te.

POLLIONE: (disperatamente)
Fremi pur, e angoscia eterna.
Pùr m' imprechi il tuo furore.
Questo amor che mi governa,
È di te, di me maggiore
Dio non v' ha che mali inventi
De' miei mali più concenti.
Maledetto io fui quel giarno
Che il destin t' offerse a me.

My trembling heart no more dares ask—
Dares not, though yearning, hear the truth:
I comprehend all my misery,
All my misfortunes, my overwhelming woes—
They are destined never to end,
If thus he has deceived me.

POLLIO: Norma, of your well-merited reproaches
Make me not now the object.
Oh! pitying this afflicted virgin,
Her hapless sighs, so undeserved, respect:
Let us conceal from her ingenuous soul—
Let us conceal our shame beneath a veil.
To the justice only of offended heaven
Be left to say which of us has erred.

NORMA: Perfidious one!

POLLIO: Enough! enough!
(Turning to go)

NORMA: Hold! hold!
Thus do you hope to escape me?

POLLIO: Come!
(Seizing Adalgisa)

ADALGISA: Oh, leave me!—away!
(Getting free from Pollio)
Begone! you are the spouse of Norma.

POLLIO: What I have been I will forget:
I am your lover only, from now.
(With fire)
It is my destiny to love you
As it's my destiny to fly from her.

NORMA: Infatuated! accomplish your wish—go.
(Restraining her rage)
(To Adalgisa)
And you, too, follow.

ADALGISA: Ah! rather would I die!

NORMA: (in great rage) Yes, fly—leave me, unworthy one!
Forget your children, promises, honor.
The curse of my just vengeance on you,
Never shall you enjoy your impious love:
On the sounding wave, in the howling wind.
You will find my ardent fury following?
My vengeance, night and day unceasingly,
Blasting your peace, shall rage around you.

POLLIO: (with desperation) Still madly rave, and endless agonies
Upon me imprecate, in your wild fury.
The mighty love of which I own the empire,
Than you, over me possesses greater power.
No god in malice torments can invent,

	Than my own torments more excruciating, A curse fell upon that fatal day When destiny presented you to me.
ADALGISA: (supplichevole a Norma) Ah! non fia, non fia ch' io costi Al tuo cor sì rio dolore. Mari e monti sian frapposti Fra me sempre e il traditore. Soffocar saprò i lamenti— Divorar i miei tormenti, Morirò, perchè ritorno Faccia il crudo ai figli e a te.	ADALGISA: (supplicating Norma) Ah! no, it shall not be that thus I should lacerate your fond heart. May seats and mountains alike divide From me for ever this treacherous lover. I'll stifle all weak lamentations— Hide each torment I may feel, And die without reproach, if he But return to his children and to you.
C: (di dentro) Norma! all' ara! In suon feroce, D' Irminsul tuonè la voce!	CHORUS: (from within) Norma! hasten! With fearful sound Irminsul in thunder lifts his voice.
NORMA E ADALGISA: (a Pollione) Suon di morte!—a te s' intima: Fuggi! va! quì pronta ell' e.	NORMA AND ADALGISA: (to Pollio) The sound of death! a warning to you Fly! away! it comes prepared!
POLLIONE: Sì! la spezzo—sì; ma prima Mi cadrà, il tuo nume al piè! (Squillano i sacri bronzi del tempio. Norma è chiamata ai riti. Ella rispinge d' un braccio Pollione e gli accenna di uscire. Pollione si allontana furente)	POLLIO: Yes! I defy it—yes; but first I'll overthrow your Deity at your feet. (The sacred bronze is heard sounding from the temple. Norma is summoned to the rites. With one arm she repulses Pollio, and with the other imperatively points for him to retire, which he does in great anger)

ATTO TERZO

ACT III

Interno dell' abitazione di Norma. Da una parte un letto Romano, coperto di pelle d' orso. I figli di Norma sono addormentati.	Interior of Norma's dwelling. On one side, a Roman couch, covered with bearskins, on which the children of Norma are sleeping.
(Norma con una lampa e un pugnale alla mano. Siede e posa la lampa sopra una tavola. E pallida, contraffata.)	(Enter Norma, with a lamp and a dagger in her hand. She seats herself, placing the lamp on a table. She is pale and distracted.)
NORMA: Dormono entrambi! non vedran la mano Che li percuote;—non pentirti, o core, Viver non ponno; quì supplizio, e in Roma Obbrobrio avrian (peggior supplizio assai): Schiavi d'una matrigna!—Ah no! giammai! (Sorge) Muoiano!—sì. Non posso (Fa un passo, e si ferma) Avvicinarmi–un gel mi prende; E in fronte mi solleva il crin. I figli uccido! tenero figli— In questo sen concetti! Da questo sen nutriti—essi, pur dianzi Delizia mia!—essi, nel cui sorriso Il perdono del Ciel mirar credei— Io, io, li svenerò Di che son rei? Di Pollione son figli: Ecco il delitto. Essi per me son morti— Muoia per lui; E non sia pena che la sua somigli! Feriam! (S' incammina verso il letto, alza il pugnale—essa aa un grido inorridita, i Figli si svegliamo) Ah, no! son figli miei!—miei figli! (Li abbraccia, e piange) Clotilde!	NORMA: They sleep—they will not see the hand That strikes the blow; repent not, my heart, They must die; their fate in Rome would be Opprobrium (worse than their suffering here): Slaves to a stepmother!—Ah no! never! (She rises) Better they should die!—yes. I cannot (Advancing, then drawing back) Draw nearer—chill seizes me; On my brow my hair stands erect. Murder my children! my helpless children— My own dear offspring! (With tenderness) Nurtured at this breast—they who once Were my delight!—in whose fond smile I thought I saw The pardon of heaven— I, I, their murderer! What is their crime? They are the children of Pollio: That is their crime? They're dead to me— They die for him; May their sacrifice cause him remorse eternal! Now will I strike! (She advances towards the couch, and raises her dagger—then utters a fearful scream, which awakens the children) Ah, no! they are my children!—my children! (She embraces them, and weeps) Clotilde!
NORMA: Corri! vola! Adalgisa a me guida.	NORMA: Hasten! fly! Bring Adalgisa to me. She is near—
CLOTILDE: Ella quì presso— Solitaria si aggira, e prega e plora.	CLOTILDE: She wanders, lonely praying and in tears.
NORMA: Va; si emendi il mio fallo, e poi, si mora! (Clotilde parte)	NORMA: Go; I will atone my crime, then die! (Exit Clotilde)
ADALGISA: Me chiami, o Norma. Qual ti copre il volto Tristo pallor?	ADALGISA: You called me, Norma. What horrid pallor Overspreads your features?
NORMA: Pallor di morte! Io tutta L' onta mia ti rivelo. Un preghiera sola Odi, e l' adempi: se pietà pur merta Il presente mio duolo, e il duol futuro.	NORMA: That of death! Now all My shame will I reveal. One prayer only Hear, and my wish fulfil, if you can pity My present grief, my future woe.
ADALGISA: Tutto, tutto, io prometto.	ADALGISA: All, all, I promise you.
NORMA: Il giura!	NORMA: But swear!
ADALGISA: Il giuro!	ADALGISA: I swear!
NORMA: Odi:—Purgar quest' aura Contaminata dalla mia presenza, Ho risoluto. Nè trar, meco io posso; Questi infelici!—a te, gli affido!	NORMA: Hear me:—To purify and free the air, Too long contaminated by my presence, Is my resolve. Take them with me I cannot, What misery!—to thee, then, I confide them!
ADALGISA: O, Cielo! A me gli affidi?	ADALGISA: Oh, heaven! To me confide them?
NORMA: Nel Romano campo Guidali a lui—che nominar non oso.	NORMA: To the Roman camp Take them to him—I dare not utter his name.
ADALGISA: Oh! che mai chiedi?	ADALGISA: Oh! what do you ask of me?
NORMA: Sposo Ti sia men crudo, io gli perdono, e moro.	NORMA: A husband may he be To you less faithless; I forgive him, and die.
ADALGISA: Sposo!—Ah! non mai!	ADALGISA: A husband!—Ah never!
NORMA: Pei figli suoi l' imploro.	NORMA: I ask it for his children.
NORMA: (aria) Deh! con te, con te, li prendi, Li sostieni, li difendi! Non ti chiedo onori e fasci— A tuoi figli ei fian serbati: Prego sol che i miei non lasci, Schiavi abbietti, abbandonati— Bastia te che disprezzata, Che tradita io fui per te! Adalgisa, deh ti mova, tanto strazio del mio cor;	NORMA: (Air) Pray! beneath your care befriend them, And defend them from very ill! Not for honors I implore you— These your children's portions you store: I ask you'll not deceive them, Nor leave them to abject slavery For remember that despised, betrayed, Forsaken, I've been for you!

Adalgisa, deh ti mova, tanto strazio del mio cor.

ADALGISA: Norma! ah, Norma! ancora amata!
Madre ancor sarai per me—
Tienti i figli. Non fia mai
Ch' io mi tolga a queste arene.

NORMA: Tu giurasti.

ADALGISA: Sì, giurai;
Ma il tuo bene—il sol tuo bene—
Vado al campo, ed all' ingrato.
Tutti io reco i tuoi lamenti
La pietà che mi hai destato.
Parlerà sublimi accenti.
Spera,—spera: amor, natura
Ridestarsi in lui vedrai,—
Del suo cor son io secura—
Norma ancor vi regnerà!

NORMA: Ch' io lo preghi? ah! no—giammai!
Piu non t' odo—parti, va!

ADALGISA E NORMA: (Duetto)

ADALGISA: Mira, o Norma! ai tuoi ginocchi,
Questi cari tuoi pargoletti;
Ah! pietàde di lor, ti tocchi,
Se non hai, non hai, di te pietà.

NORMA: Ah! perchè, perchè, la mia costanza.
Vuoi scemar con molli affetti?
Più lusinghe, ah più speranza,
Presso amorte un cor non ha.

ADALGISA: Cedi, deh! cedi!

NORMA: Ah! lasciami!
Ei t' ama.

ADALGISA: E già sen pente.

NORMA: E tu?

ADALGISA: Lo amai, quest' anima
Sol l' amistade or sente.

NORMA: O giovinetta!—E vuoi?

ADALGISA: Renderti i dritti tuoi
O teco, al Cielo e agli uomini,
Giuro celarmi ognor.

NORMA: Hai vinto, hai vinto. Abbracciami—
Trovo un' amica ancor.

NORMA E ADALGISA: (Duetto)

NORMA: Sì, fino all' ore, all' ore estreme,
Campagna tua, compagna m'avrai;

Adalgisa, I implore you, grant the prayer of my poor heart;
Adalgisa, I implore you, grant the prayer of my poor heart.

ADALGISA: Norma! ah, Norma! still beloved!
A mother shall you be to me—
Still keep your children. Never shall it be
That I will quit these hallowed woods.

NORMA: But you have sworn.

ADALGISA: Yes, I have sworn;
To seek your hapiness—restore your peace—
I'll go to the camp of the ingrate
And reveal your sad lamentations.
The ardent pity you have kindled in me,
Shall speak to him in inspiration's accents
Hope all—yes, all: love and nature
Shall again be seen, awakened in him—
His heart I will secure once more to you—
Norma again, shall reign triumphant!

NORMA: What! I supplicate him? ah! no—never!
I can no longer listen—hence, away!

ADALGISA AND NORMA: (Duet)

ADALGISA: See, oh, Norma! lowly kneeling,
Endearing these your children sweet;
Have some pity for them, uncaring,
Though for yourself, yourself, you feel none.

NORMA: Ah! why thus, my courage shaking,
With these words so soft, so tender?
No more can hope render feeling,
Nor more inspire a dying heart like mine.

ADALGISA: Yield, oh yield to my entreaties!

NORMA: Leave me!
Does he not love you?

ADALGISA: He is now repentant.

NORMA: And you?

ADALGISA: With love my heart was fired,
But friendship now is all I feel.

NORMA: Young maiden!—what would'st though?

ADALGISA: Restore to you what is justly yours.
Or else with you from heaven and man,
I swear, concealed to live for ever.

NORMA: I am vanquished, conquered. Embrace me—
I find a friend is left me yet.

NORMA AND ADALGISA: (Duet)

NORMA: Calmly till closes life's last fleeting moment,
Truly I'll prove to you a companion.

ADALGISA: Per ricovrarci, per ricovrarci insieme—
Ampia e la terra è la terraassai.
Teco del fato all' onte,
Ferma opporrò la fronte,
Finchè il mio core a battere,
Io senta sul tuo cor;
Senta sul tuo cor, Io senta,
Io senta sul tuo cor,
Io senta sul tuo cor,
Teco del fato all' onte,
Ferma opperrò la fronte,
Finche mi batte il cor senta
Sul tuo cor, sul cor, Io senta,
Io senta sul tuo cor,
Io senta sul tuo cor,
Io senta sul tuo cor.
(Partono)

ADALGISA: Above us one roof shall give safety's enjoyment—
This world's wide enough to yield shelter against love.
Together opposing fate,
Rising, braving sorrow,
Reposing on your breast,
Calm my breast will borrow;
Calm my breast, calm my breast will borrow,
My breast will borrow, will borrow,
My breast will borrow,
My breast will borrow.
Together fate opposing,
Rising, braving sorrow,
On your breast reposing.
Calm my breast will borrow,
My breast will borrow, will borrow,
My breast, my breast will borrow,
My breast will borrow.
(Exeunt)

■ ATTO QUARTO

SCENA I

Luogo solitario presso il bosco dei Druidi, cinto da burroni e da caverne. In fondo un lago, attraversato da un ponte di pietra

(GUERRIERI E GALLI)

CORO 1: Non parti?

CORO 2: Finora è al campo—
Tutto il dice: i feri carmi,
Il fragore, il suon del' armi,
Delle insegne il ventilar.

TUTTI: Attendiam: un breve inciampo
Non ci turbi,—non ci arresti.
E in silenzio il cor si appresti
La grand' opra a consumar.

OROVESO: Guerrieri! a voi venirne
Credea foriero d' avvenir migliore:
Il generoso ardore,
L' ira che in sen vi bolle,
Io credea secondar—ma il Dio nol volle.

CORO: Come? E le nostre selve
L' abborrito Proconsole non lascia?—
Non riede al Tebro?

OROVESO: Ma più temuto, e fero
Abatino condottiero, Pollione succeed; e di novelle
Clossenti legioni,
Forza il campo che ne tien prigioni.

■ ACT IV

SCENE I

A solitary spot near the Druids' wood, surrounded by rocky coverns. In the distance is a lake, over which is a stone bridge

(Enter Warriors and Gauls)

1ST CHORUS: Has he departed?

2ND CHORUS: He's still in the camp—
All things bespeak it: the fierce warlike song,
The clang of arms, that ceaseless sound;
Their standards still wave triumphant

ALL: Let us be patient: a slight impediment
Must not disturb us,—nor stop our progress.
In silence let us our hearts prepare
The glorious work to consummate.

OROVESO: Gallant warriors! I had hoped
To be the messenger of better prospects:
The patriotic zeal, the generous ardor,
The noble rage which burn in your bosoms,
I hoped to second—the God wills differently.

CHORUS: How is it that
This abhorred Proconsul does not leave our consecrated woods?—
Returns not to the Tiber?

OROVESO: A more fierce
And cruel Roman commander,
To Pollio succeeds; and myriads of new
Overpowering legions, eager to destroy,
Reinforce the camp to keep us in subjection.

CORO: Corri! ma il sa?—Di pace
Adalgisa igliera ancor?

OROVESO: Invan di Norma
La mente investigai.

CORO: E cha far pensi?

OROVESO: Al fato
Piegar la fronte;—separarci, e nullo
Lasciar sospetto del fallito intento.

CORO: E finger sempre?

OROVESO: Amara legge il sento!
Ah! del Tebro al giogo indegno
Fremo io pure–e all' armi anelo;—
Ma nemico è sempre il Cielo;—
Ma consiglio è il simular:
Divoriamo in cor lo sdegno,
Tal che Roma estinto il creda:
Dì verrà, che desto, ei rieda,
Più tremendo a divampar!

CORO: Sì, fingiam, se il finger giovi;
Ma il furore in sen si covi;—
Guai per Roma, allor che il segno
Dia dell' armi il sacro altar!
(Partono)

SCENA II

(Tempio d' Irminsul: Ara da un lato Norma, indi Clotilde)

NORMA: Ei tornerà—Sì! mia fidanza è posta
In Adalgisa: ei tornerà pentito—
Supplichevole, amante! O! a tal pensiero,
Sparisce il nuvol nero
Che mi premea la fronte! e il sol m' arride,
Come del primo amor nei dì felici.
(Esce Clotilde)
Clotilde!

CLOTILDE: O, Norma! uopo è d' ardir.

NORMA: Che dici?

CLOTILDE: Lassa!

NORMA: Favella!

CLOTILDE: Indarno
Parlò Adalgisa, e pianse.

CHORUS: Does Norma know this?—Does she peace
Still counsel us?

OROVESO: I in vain of Norma
Have sought the mind.

CHORUS: How will you act?

OROVESO: To fate.
Submissive bow;—separate all, and nothing
Leave to awake suspicion of intentions.

CHORUS: Dissembling ever?

OROVESO: I feel it a bitter law!
Ah! at the Tiber's yoke dishonorable
I rage alike—alike for arms I pant;—
But unfriendly to us still is heaven!—
My counsel, then, is, we dissimulate:
Let's stifle in our hearts our indignation,
That Rome may believe it extinguished:
The day will come, when it shall return,
More terribly to vanquish and destroy!

CHORUS: Yes, let us feign, if feigning help us;
But fury in our bosoms still we'll shroud;
Woe be to Rome, whenever the fatal signal,
To arms, sounds from our sacred altar!
(Exeunt)

SCENE II

(Temple of Irminsul: Altar on one side Enter Norma, afterwards Clotilde)

NORMA: He will return.—Ah, yes! my faith is firm
In Adalgisa: he'll return repentant—
A supplicating lover! At that thought,
How disappear the clouds that so darkly
Oppressed my brow! the bright sun smiles,
As in my first loved days of happiness.
(Enter Clotilde)
Clotilde!

CLOTILDE: Oh, Norma! summon courage.

NORMA: Speak?

CLOTILDE: Alas!

NORMA: Tell me all!

CLOTILDE: Vainly
Spoke Adalgisa's tears.

NORMA: Ed io fidarmi
Di lei dovea? di mano uscirmi, e bella
Del suo dolore, presentarsi all' empio?
Ella tramava!

CLOTILDE: Ella ritorna al tempio
Trista, dolente implora
Di profferir suoi voti.

NORMA: Ed egli?

CLOTILDE: Ed egli.
Rapirla guira anco all' altar del Nume!

NORMA: Troppo il fellon presume;
Lo previen, mia vendetta, e quì di sangue—
Sangue Romano—scorreran torrenti!
(Si appressa all' ara, e batte tre volte lo scudo d' Irminsul)

CORO: (di dentro) Squilla il bronzo del Dio!

CLOTILDE: Cielo! che tenti?
(Accorono, da varie parti, Oroveso, i Druidi, i Bardi, e le Ministre. A poco a poco il tempio si riempe d' armati. Norma si colloca sull' altare)

OROVESO: Norma, che fu? Percosso
Lo scudo d' Irminsul, quali alla terra
Decreti, intima?

NORMA: Guerra! strage! sterminio!

OROVESO: E a noi pur dianzi pace
S' imponea pel tuo labbro?

NORMA: Ed ira adesso—
Armi, furore, e morti!
Il cantico di guerra alzate, o forti—
Guerra, guerra! Le Galliche selve
Quante han quercie producon guerrier.
Qual sui greggi fameliche belve,
Sui Romani van essi a cader.
Sangue! sangue! le Galliche scuri
Fino al tronco bagnate ne son,
Sovra i flutti del Liguri impuri,
Ei gorgoglia, con funebre, suon.
Strage! strage! sterminio, vendetta!
Già comincia, si compie, si affretta.
Come biade da falci mietute,
Son di Roma le schiere cadute;
Tronchi i vanni, recisi gli artigli,
Abbattuta ecco l' aquila al suol!
A mirar il trionfo dei figli,
Viene il Dio sovra un raggio di sol.

NORMA: Should I have Trusted her? let her, so beauteous
In sorrow, seek that impious one?
She has betrayed me!

CLOTILDE: She has resought the temple,
Sorrow-stricken, earnestly imploring
To offer up her vows.

NORMA: And he?

CLOTILDE: And he swears
To force her even from the altar of her God!

NORMA: Foul traitor, he presumes too much;
Forstalled by my vengeance, seas of blood—
Of Roman blood—shall flow forth in torrents!
(She approaches the altar, and thrice strikes the shield of Irminsul)

CHORUS: (within) The sacred shield has sounded!

CLOTILDE: Heavens! What do you dare?
(Enter hastily, from various sides, Oroveso, Druids, Bards, and officiating Priesteses. By little and little the temple becomes filled with armed men. Norma takes her place on the altar)

OROVESO: Norma, why summon us? That dread sound,
The shield of Irminsul, what, to this earth
Decreeing, does it intimate?

NORMA: War! carnage! extermination!

OROVESO: And yet but lately was peace
Imposed by your own lips?

NORMA: Now I'd wake wrath—
Arms, fury, exterminating death!
Quick, let the song of war rise loudly—
War to the steel! The Gallic forests
Shall, numerous as their oaks, produce warriors.
As on our flocks rush famished beasts of prey,
So we the Romans will overpower, destroy.
Blood! blood! the Gallic battle-axes
Shall cut them off for ever,
And the dark waters of the foul Liguri,
Flowing over them, sound their dirge.
Slaughter! extermination! vengeance!
Commence, and hasten to complete.
Like ripened corn beneath the sickle
Shall the Roman forces fall;
Clipped the proud wings, and cut the talons,
Overthrown on the earth shall the eagle lie!

	To triumph in his children's triumph, Will come our God, radiant as the sun.
OROVESO: Nè compi il rito, o Norma? Nè la vittima accenni?	OROVESO: Do you not consummate the rite, oh Norma? Nor yet point out the victim?
NORMA: Ella fia pronta. Non mai l' altar tremendo Di vittime mancò.—Ma quel tumulto?	NORMA: The victim is ready. Never, did this dread altar Its victim lack.—But say, why this tumult?
CLOTILDE: Al nostro tempio insulto Fece un Romano: nella sacra chiostra Delle vergini alunne egli fu côlto.	CLOTILDE: Our temple has been insulted By a Roman: in the sacred cloister Of our novitiate virgins was he surprised.
TUTTI: Un Romano?	ALL: A Roman?
NORMA: Che ascolto? Se mai foss' egli?	NORMA: What do I hear? Should it be he?
TUTTI: A noi vien tratto!	ALL: To us he's dragged!
NORMA: E desso! (Pollione, fra Soldata e detti)	NORMA: It is! (Enter Pollio, conducted by Soldiers)
OROVESO: E Pollione!	OROVESO: Pollio!
NORMA: Son vendicata adesso!	NORMA: This moment avenges me!
OROVESO: Sacrilego nemico! e chi ti spinse A violar queste temute soglie?— A sfidar l' ira d' Irminsul?	OROVESO: Sacreligious foe! what demon urged you To violate our calm secluded shrine?— Defy the wrath of Irminsul?
POLLIONE: Ferisci! Ma non interrogarmi.	POLLIO: Strike! But do not question me.
NORMA: (svetandosi) Io ferir deggio! Scostatevi!	NORMA: (discovering herself) The blow be mine! Draw back!
POLLIONE: Chi veggio?— Norma!	POLLIO: Whom do I see?— Norma!
NORMA: Sì, Norma!	NORMA: Yes, Norma!
TUTTI: Il sacro ferro impugna! Vendica il tempio e il Dio.	ALL: The sacred weapon wield! Vindicate at once thy God and temple.
NORMA: (prende il pugnale dalle mani di Orovese) Sì, feriamo!— Ah! (Si arresta)	NORMA: (taking the sword from Oroveso's hand) Yes, let me strike!—Ah! (She hesitates)
TUTTI: Tu tremi!	ALL: Thou tremblest!
NORMA: Ah! non poss' io!	NORMA: Ah! I cannot!
OROVESO: Che fia! perche t' arresti?	OROVESO: What means this? what now keeps you?
NORMA: Poss 'io sentir pietà!	NORMA: Can I, then, feel pity
CORO: Ferisci!	CHORUS: Strike!
NORMA: Io deggio Interrogarlo, investigar qual sia— L' insidiata, o complice ministra— Che il profan persuase a fallo estremo. Ite per poco.	NORMA: I must Interrogate, find out who aided him— What deceitful priestess prompted This most profane one to a crime so dire. Withdraw awhile.
OROVESO E CORO: Che far pensa?	OROVESO AND CHORUS: What means all this?
POLLIONE: Io tremo! (Oroveso e il Coro si ritirano. Il tempio rimane sgombro)	POLLIO: I tremble! (Exeunt Oroveso and Chorus. The temple is cleared)
NORMA: In mia mano alfin tu sei; Niun potria spezzar tuoi nodi: Io lo posso!	NORMA: To my hands consigned at length No one is able now to break your bonds: I only can!
POLLIONE: Tu!—nol dei.	POLLIO: You! but you must not.
NORMA: Io lo voglio.	NORMA: I have the will.
POLLIONE: Come?	POLLIO: How?
NORMA: M' odi:— Pel tuo Dio, pe' figli tuoi, Giurar dei, che d' ora in poi, Adalgisa fuggirai, All' altar non la torrai: E la vita ti perdono, E non più ti rivedro. Giura!	NORMA: Hear me:— By your God, and by your helpless children, Swear, that from this hour, for ever You will fly from Adalgisa Nor from our altar bear her off: Then I will grant your forfeit life, And never see you more. Swear!
POLLIONE: No; sì vil non sono.	POLLIO: Never!—No; so vile I am not.
NORMA: Giura! giura!	NORMA: Swear! swear!
POLLIONE: Ah! pria morrò.	POLLIO: Ah! sooner will I die.
NORMA: Non sai tu, che il mio furore Passa il tuo?	NORMA: Do you not know the fury of my purpose Is greater far than yours?
POLLIONE: Ch' ei piombi attendo.	POLLIO: Let it descend.
NORMA: Non sai tu che al figli in core Questo ferro—	NORMA: And that in your children's hearts This dagger—
POLLIONE: Q, Dio! che intendo?	POLLIO: Oh Gods! what do I hear?
NORMA: Sì, sovr' essi alzai la punta— Vedi, vedi, a che son giunta! Non ferii; ma tosto—adesso, Consumar poss' io l' eccesso! Un' istante, e d' esser madre, Mi poss' io dimenticar.	NORMA: Yes, I've already raised its point over them— See, see, to what extreme you've driven me! I struck not then; but soon—instantly, I'll consummate my fearful, wild excess! A moment, and that I am a mother, I will wash out all memory of.
POLLIONE: Ah, crudele!—In sen del padre Il pugnal tu dei vibrar: A me il porgi.	POLLIO: Ah, cruel!—In the bosom of the father More justly should it be plunged: To me, then, deal it.
NORMA: A te!	NORMA: To you!
POLLIONE: Che spento Cada io solo.	POLLIO: That I Alone may perish.
NORMA: Solo! Tutti— I Romani—a cento a cento— Fian mietuti, fian distrutti; E Adalgisa—	NORMA: Alone! Nay, all— The Romans—hundreds upon hundreds— Shall fall, in one wide destruction; And Adalgisa—
POLLIONE: Ahimè!	POLLIO: Ah me, alas!
NORMA: Infedele A' suoi voti!	NORMA: The traitress To our altar's vows!
POLLIONE: Ebben, crudele!	POLLIO: Passionate cruelty!
NORMA: Adalgisa fia punita; Nelle fiamme perirà.	NORMA: Adalgisa shall suffer due punishment; Perish in torturing flames unpitied.
POLLIONE: Oh, ti prendi la mia vita! Ma di lei, pietà!	POLLIO: Oh, rather take my life! But upon her, on her have pity!
NORMA: Preghi alfine?—Indegno, è tardi: Nel suo cor ti vo' ferire! Già mi pasco ne' tuoi sguardi Del tuo duol, del sue morire!	NORMA: Base prayers at last?—It is too late: Through her's I'll strike your heart My pasturage shall be your guilty soul—

Posso alfine, e voglio farti Infelice al par di me!	Shall be your anguish, her righteous death! I can at last, and will, make you As wretched as myself!
POLLIONE: Ah! t' appaghi il mio terrore! Al tuo piè son io piangente: In me sfoga il tuo furore, Ma risparmia un' innocente! Basti, ah! basti a vendicarti Ch' io mi sveni innanzi a te. Dammi quel ferro.	POLLIO: Ah! Be content with my terror! At your feet see me weeping: On me expend the fury of your anger, But oh, spare the innocent! Enough, ah! enough in vindication That I fall lifelessly before you. Give me the dagger.
NORMA: Sorgi: Scostati.	NORMA: Arise! Begone.
POLLIONE: Il ferro! il ferro!	POLLIO: The dagger! the dagger!
NORMA: Olà! ministri, sacerdoti, accorrete! (Ritornano Oroveso, i Druidi, i Bardi, e i Guerrieri)	NORMA: Ho! ministers, priests, come here! (Re-enter Oroveso, Druids, Bards, and Warriors)
NORMA: Al' ira vostra Nuova vittima io svelo: una spergiura Sacerdotessa i sacri voti infranse, Tradì la patria, il Dio degli avi offese.	NORMA: To your righteous wrath I a new victim will reveal: a perjured Priestess, who her sacred vows has broken Betrayed her land, offended her father's God.
TUTTI: O, delitto! O, furor! ne sia palese.	ALL: Horrible crime! Oh, fury! make her known.
NORMA: Sì, preparate il rogo!	NORMA: Yes, prepare the pile!
POLLIONE: O! ancor, ti prego, Norma, pietà!	POLLIO: Again I pray you, Norma, have pity!
TUTTI: Ne svela il nome?	ALL: Her name?
NORMA: Io, rea, L' innocente accusar del fallo mio!	NORMA: I, the misdoer, The innocent accuse, and of my crime?
TUTTI: Parla, chi è dessa?	ALL: Speak, who is she?
POLLIONE: Ah, non lo dir!	POLLIO: Oh, do not say!
NORMA: Son io!	NORMA: It is I!
OROVESO: Tu, Norma?	OROVESO: You, Norma?
NORMA: Io, stessa! Il rogo ergete.	NORMA: I, myself! Make ready the pile.
TUTTI: D' orrore io gelo!	ALL: With horror we are chilled!
POLLIONE: Mi manca il cor!	POLLIO: My failing heart!
TUTTI: Tu delinquente!	ALL: You are an offender!
POLLIONE: Non le credete!	POLLIO: Oh, do not believe it!
NORMA: Norma non mente.	NORMA: Norma has never lied.
OROVESO: O! mio rossor!	OROVESO: Oh! what agony!
NORMA E POLLIONE: (Duetto)	NORMA AND POLLIO: (Duet)
NORMA: Qual cor tradisti, Qual cor perdesti, Quest' ora orrenda, Ti manifesti; Da me fuggire, Tentasti invano,— Crudel Romano, Tu sei con me. Un Nume, un fato Dite più forte, Ci vuole uniti In vita e in morte, Sul rogo istesso Che mi divora, Sotterra ancora, Sarò con te.	NORMA: The heart you slighted, The heart you blighted, Now lost, benighted, This dread hour shows you— It were to fly me, Neglect, defy me,— False Roman near me, I claim your love A God, whose power You've felt overtower, Rules this dark hour, Comes to oppose you, Decreeing this fate— That still out being, In life and death alike, We share the same.
POLLIONE: Ah! troppo tardi, T' ho conosciuta, Sublime donna.	POLLIO: Too late the plighted, In love united, The lost, the slighted,
NORMA: Qual cor, qual cor tradisti, Qual cor, Qual cor, Qual cor. Quest' ora orrenda. Io t' ho perduta— Col mio rimorso E amor rinato, Più disperato, Furente egli è. Moriamo insieme, Ah, sì, moria mo: L'estremo, accento Sarà ch' io t' amo;— Ma tu morendo, Non m' abborrire, Pria di morire, Perdona a me.	NORMA: The heart, the heart you slighted, The heart, The heart, The heart. Now lost, benighted. I find above me:— Remorse overtaking A heart that's breaking, New love awaking, I feel for you Together dying, Life's latest sighing Shall murmur, dying, I love, I love but you— Then when life's waning, Breathe no complaining, At my disdaining, But pardon me.
OROVESO E CORO: O, in te ritorna, ci rassicura! Canuto padre te ne scongiura: Dì che deliri, dì che tu menti, Che stolti accenti uscir da te. Il Dio severo che quì t' intende Se stassi muto, se il tuon sospende, Indizio è questo, indizio espresso Che tanto eccesso punir non de'.	OROVESO AND CHORUS: Oh, return to yourself, and reassure us! The gray hairs of a father supplicate you: Say it was delirium, and spoken falsely; That senseless words fell idly from you. The God severe, who heard you, Remaining silent, his thunder suspending, Indicates clearly, indicates expressly, That thus he proclaims pardon.
OROVESO: Norma! deh! Norma! scolpati! Taci! ne ascolta appena?	OROVESO: Norma! oh Norma! vindicate yourself! Silent! what does this protend?
NORMA: Cielo e i miei figli!	NORMA: Heaven and my children!
POLLIONE: (scuotendosi con un grido) Ahi! miseri!	POLLIO: (with great emotion) Alas! most miserable!
NORMA: (volgendosi a Pollione) I nostri figli!	NORMA: (turning to Pollion) Our hapless children!
POLLIONE: O pena!	POLLIO: Unutterable anguish!
CORO: Norma, sei rea?	CHORUS: Norma, are you guilty?
NORMA: (disperatamente) Sì, rea! Oltre ogni umana idea!	NORMA: (with desperation) Yes, guilty! Beyond all mortal thought!
OROVESO E CORO: Empia!	OROVESO AND CHORUS: Impious!
NORMA: Tu m' odi!	NORMA: Oh, hear me!
OROVESO: Scostati!	OROVESO: Away!
NORMA: Deh m' odi!	NORMA: Hear me a moment!
OROVESO: O, mio dolor!	OROVESO: Oh, endless sorrow!
NORMA: (piano ad Oroveso) Son madre!	NORMA: (in a low voice to Oroveso) I am a mother!
OROVESO: Madre!	OROVESO: A mother!
NORMA: Acquetati! Clotilde ha i figli miei: Tu li raccogli—e ai barbari L' invola insiem con lei.	NORMA: Soft, be calm! Clotilde has my children: Do you receive them—from barbarians Protect alike both them and her.
OROVESO: Giammai! giammai! Va—lasciami!	OROVESO: Never! never! Leave me—away!
NORMA: Ah, padre! un priego ancor! (S' inginoc)	NORMA: Ah, father! one prayer more! (Kneeling)

Act IV, Scene II

NORMA: (Aria) Deh! non volerli vittime
Del mio fatale errore—
Deh! non troncar sul fiore
Quell' innocente età.
Pensa che son tuo sangue—
Abbi di lor pietade!
Ah! padre! abbi di lor,
Di lor pietà, abbi di lor, di lor pietà
Abbi di lor, di lor pietà.

OROVESO: Oppresso è il core.

NORMA: Piangi, e perdona!

OROVESO: Ha vinto amore!

NORMA: Ah! tu perdoni—quel pianto il dice.

POLLIONE E NORMA: Io più non chiedo—Io son felice.
Contento il rogo, ascenderò.

OROVESO: Ah! consolarmene—mai non potrò.

NORMA: (Air) Oh! let them not be victims
Of this my fatal error—
Oh! wither not in blossom
Such fair and innocent flowers
Through them your blood is flowing—
Spare it, pity bestowing!
Ah! father! pity bestow, pity bestow, pity bestow, pity bestow,
Spare them, pity bestow.

OROVESO: I feel my heart, oppressed

NORMA: Weep, and pardon me!

OROVESO: You conquered, love!

NORMA: Ah! you pardon me—those tears bespeak it.

POLIO AND NORMA: I ask no more—I now am blessed!
Contented, we'll the fatal pile ascend.

OROVESO: What can console me—what give me rest?

CORO: Piange, prega, che mai spera?
Quì respinta è la preghiera.
Le si spogli il crin del serto:
Sia coperto, di squallor!
(I Druidi coprono d' un velo nero la Sacerdotessa)
Vanne al rogo! Ed il tuo scempio
Purghi l' ara, e lavi il tempio.
Maledetta all' ultim' ora!
Maledetta estinta ancor!

OROVESO: Va, infelice!

NORMA: (incamminandosi) Padre, addio!

POLLIONE: Il tuo rogo, o Norma! è il mio.

NORMA E POLLIONE: Là più puro, là più santo,
Incomincia eterno amor!

OROVESO: Sgorga alfin—prorompi, o pianto!
Sei permesso a un genitor.

CHORUS: Tears, prayers, what hope can she befriend?
Her prayers shall be rejected here.
Tear off the wreath her brow now wears,
And shroud it with the hue of death!
(The Druids throw a black veil over Norma)
Hence to the pile! May her last breath
Pacify our altar, and our temple.
Malediction after life have power!

OROVESO: Go, unhappy one!

NORMA: (going to the pile) Father, farewell!

POLLIO: Your funeral pyre, oh Norma! shall be mine.

NORMA AND POLLIO: There more pure, more blessed above,
Shall commence eternal love!

OROVESO: Gush out at last—break forth, oh tears!
Nature permits you to a suffering father.

La Sonnambula (1831)

The Somnambulist

Music by Vincenzo Bellini ■ Libretto by Felice Romani

La Sonnambula premiered at the Teatro Carcano in Milan on March 6, 1831. A melodrama in two acts, with a libretto by Felice Romani, it opens on the wedding celebration of Elvino, a wealthy Swiss landowner, and Amina, an orphan who was adopted by Teresa, the mill-owner's wife. Lisa the innkeeper is green with envy. She has always wanted to marry Elvino, and ignores Alessio, who is in love with her. Elvino gives Amina a wedding ring that used to belong to his mother. Their love duet is interrupted by the arrival of Count Rodolfo, the son of the dead lord of the village, who has been away for so many years that no one recognizes him. He showers Amina with attention, paying her countless compliments and making Elvino jealous. He pokes fun at the villagers recount of a ghostly woman who appears on foggy nights. Rodolfo is flirting with Lisa at the inn when Amina enters, sleepwalking. Lisa hides and Rodolfo leaves. The villagers come to pay their respects, only to find Amina asleep on Rodolfo's sofa. Only Teresa believes that her intentions are innocent and Elvino forsakes her inspite of the fact that he can't forget how much he loves her. Lisa and Elvino are about to wed when Teresa, brandishing Lisa's handkerchief, which was found in the Count's room, accuses her of faithlessness. Elvino, betrayed once again, forsakes this marriage as well. Amina appears, sleepwalking down from the edge of the roof, singing about her love for Elvino, and at last he realizes she is telling the truth. He places the wedding ring on her finger and awakens her, and the village celebrates.

■ ATTO I

SCENA I

Piazza d' un Villaggio. Da un lato, un' Osteria; dall' altro un molino, in fondo colline praticabili. Suoni pastorali e voci lontane che gridano 'Viva Amina,' sono gli Abitanti del villaggio che vengono a festeggiare gli spousali di lei.

CORO: Viva Amina, la, la, la, la!
Amina bella, la, la, la, la!
Viva, viva, viva!
(Entra Lisa.)

LISA: Tutto è gioja, tuto è festa, Sol per me non v' ha, non v' ha contento, E per colmo di tormento, Son costretta a simular. O beltade a me funesta, Che m'involi il mio tesoro, Mentre io soffro, mentre moro, Pur ti deggio accarezzar, Ah, pur ti deggio accarezzar.

CORO: Viva Amina! viva ancor!
(Entra Alessio e Paesani.)

ALES: Lisa, Lisa!

LISA: Oh, l'importuno!

ALES: Tu mi fuggi!

LISA: Fuggo ognuno!

ALES: Ah, non sempre, o bricconcella,
Fuggirai da me così:
Per te pure, o Lisa bella,
Giungerà di nozze il dì.
(I suoni si sono fatti piu vicini.—Villani e Villanelle, tutti vestiti da festa, con stromenti villereci e canestri di fiori.)

CORO: Viva Amina!

ALES: Viva! ancor!

LISA: (Aparte.) Anch' esso! oh, dispetto!

ALES: Qui schieratì—più d' appresso.

LISA: (Aparte.) Ah! la rabbia mi divora!

ALES: La canzonè preparata;

CORO: Intuonar di quì si può.

LISA: (Aparte.) Ogni speme è a me troncata; La rivale trionfò!

ALLESSIO AND CHORUS. In Elvezia non v 'h rosa Fresca è cara al par d' Amina, E' una stella mattutina, Tutta luce, tutta amor. Ma pudica ma ritrosa, Quanto è vaga, quanto è bella, E' innocente tortorella, E' l' emblema del candor.
Te felice e avventurato
Più d' un prence e d' un sovrano,
Bel garzon, che la sua mano
Sei pur giunto a meritar!

LISA: Ah! per me sì lieti canti
Destinati un dì credei;
Crudo amor, che sian per lei
Non ho cor di sopportar!

■ ACT I

SCENE I

A Village Green. On one side an inn, a Water-Mill in the background; Mountains in the distance. While the curtain is rising, Peasants are heard singing 'Viva Amina,' as they approach the marriage scene.

CHO: Long live Amina, la, la la, la!
Long life to sweet Amina!
Long live Amina!
(Enter Lisa.)

LISA: Sounds so joyful, revealing bliss, Pleasures over their senses stealing, Gives my heart but bitter feeling, Though I'm doomed to wear a smile, Every tribute they are bringing, All that beauty they are singing, Like an asp stinging my bosom, Yet I must appear delighted, Ah, yet I must appear delighted.

CHO: Long live Amina! beauteous bride!
(Enter Alessio and Peasants.)

ALES: Lisa, dearest!

LISA: Don't call me dearest!

ALES: Nay, do not shun me!

LISA: Hence, I say, sir!

ALES: Ah! not always, lovely Lisa,
Will you turn away pouting:
Time will come when you and I, love,
Shall have, too, a wedding-day.
(Sounds of joy are heard from without.—Villagers descend from the mountain, bringing baskets of flowers.)

CHO: Long live Amina! beauteous bride!

ALES: Long live the bride!

LISA: (Aside) And he, too, is shouting!

ALES: Here we'll meet her—here, too, greet her!

LISA: (Aside) Oh, how vexing! how perplexing!

ALES: Sing the song we've been preparing;

CHO: Let us join the bridal strain.

LISA: (Aside.) Nothing is left for me but despairing;
I am racked with jealous pain!

ALESSIO AND CHORUS: Though Helvetia's mountain bowers Give us fresh and lovely flowers, Yet there's none possess the powers That play around play beauty. Not the glowworm's evening warning, Not the star adorning the night, Nor the blush of early morning, Half your brightness can display.
The gallant youth has noblest form,
Heart which beats at love's own telling,
Thrice-welcome hope his bosom swelling
With the thoughts of her he loves!

LISA: Ah! those sounds I fondly cherished,
Hoping they might swell for me;
But, alas! all hope has perished,
And she's my envied rival!

ALES: (Avvicinandosi a Lisa.) Lisa mia, sì lieti canti Risonar potran per noi, Se pietosa alfin tu vuoi Dare ascolto al mio pregar! (Ricominciano gli evviva.)	ALES: (To Lisa.) Lisa, list! those wedding sounds, dear, Soon my love and me shall greet; Let me see one ray of hope, dear, That your heart for me may beat! (Continued shouting.)
CORO: Tal tesoro amor t' ha dato Di bellezza e di virtù, Che quant' oro il mondo chiude, Che niun re potria comprar. Viva! viva! (Entra Amina e Teresa.)	CHO: Richer he in love so tender Than the prince in diadem crowned; Happier far without such splendor, With devotion, faith, enthroned, Is Elvino!—Long live Elvino! (Enter Amina and Teresa.)
AMI: (Alle Donne.) Care compagne, e voi, (Agli Uomini.) Teneri amici, che alla gioja mia, Tanta parte prendete, oh, come Dolci scendon d' Amina al core I canti che v' inspira il vostro amore! A te, diletta, Tenera madre, chè a sì lieto giorno Me orfanella serbasti, a te favelli Questo, dal cor più che dal ciglio espresso Dolce pianto di gioja, E quest' amplesso!	AMI: (To the Females.) Dearest companions! (To the Men.) And you, too, good friends and neighbors, Who ever kindly sympathize with my feelings, Oh, how delightful to my heart must prove The voices raised to celebrate our love! And you, my mother, dearest and kindest, Who through childhood protected the orphan, Let the tears that are flowing from my eyes, Tell all the joy that's glowing in my bosom. Companions, accept my friendship! My mother, oh, how happy am I!
AMINA: Come per me sereno Oggi rinacque il dì! Come il terren fiori, come, fiori Più . . . . .bello, più bello, e ameno! Mai, mai di più lieto aspetto, Natura, natura, non, ... non . . . . brillò, non brillò; Amor, amor la colorò amor del . . . . .mio, del mio diletto, Amor, amor la colorò amor, amor del . . . . .mio diletto. (Amina abbraccia Teresa, e prendendole una mano, se l' avvicina al core.)	AMINA: Oh, love, for me your power brighter bids the day . . . . .to shine! And sweeter smells each flower, ...each flower In . . . . .Love's, Love's fairy bower! love can bid each anguish perish; All nature, all nature, all . . . . .nature owns his power divine; Then love, then love for ever, Then . . . . .love, then . . . . love, yes, let us cherish, Then love, then love for ever, love, ...ah! . . . . .let us cherish. (Amina embraces Teresa, and, taking her hand, places it on her heart.)
Sovra il sen la man mi posa, Palpitar balzar, balzar lo senti, E gli è il cor che i suoi contenti, Non ha forza a sostener! Ah, non ha forza, a sostener, ... a sostener! ah, ...no, ah, ...no, ah, ...no, ah, ...no, a . . . . .sostener! . . . . .Sovra il sen la man mi posa, Palpitar balzar, balzar lo senti, E gli è il cor che i suoi contenti, Non ha forza a sostener!	While this heart, its joy revealing, Beats, oh, beats with grateful, grateful feeling, Yet my lips, in vain appealing, Cannot speak my heart's . . delight! Ah, cannot, cannot speak . . . my heart's, my heart's . . . . .delight! ah, ...no, ah, ...no, ah, ...no, ah, ...no, my . . . . .heart's, my . . . . . heart's delight! . . . . . .While this heart its joy revealing, Beats, oh, beats with grateful, grateful feeling. Yet my lips, in . . . . .vain appealing, Cannot speak my heart's . . . . .delight!
CORO: Di tua sorte avventurosa, Teco esulta il cor materno: Non potea favor superno Riserbarlo a ugual piacer!	CHO: Though her cheek's with rapture glowing, From her eye the tears are flowing; To her mother's bosom growing, At the summons to depart.
ALES: Io più di tutti, o Amina, Teco mi allegro. Io preparai la festa, Io feci le canzoni; io radunai De' vicini villaggi i suonatori.	ALES: Yes, it is all my doing, dear Amina: Music and singing, I prepared it all; I wrote the songs, invited all the guests, Who hither come, obedient to my call.
AMI: E grata a' tuoi favori, Buon Alessio, son io. Fra poco io spero ricambiarteli tutti, Allor che sposo tu di Lisa sarai, Se come è voce, essa a farti felice Ha il cor disposto.	AMI: I am grateful for your favors, Good Alessio, kind friend. I hope to see you requited for all, When you are married to Lisa, Who, I am sure, Will make you happy.
ALES: La senti, o Lisa!	ALES: There, listen, dear Lisa!
LISA: Non sarà sì tosto.	LISA: No, indeed I shall not.
ALES: Sei crudele!	ALES: Still cruel, love?
TER: E perchè mai?	TER: And why so, Lisa?
LISA: L' ignori? Schiva son io d' amore; mia libertà mi piace.	LISA: You know not? I have made up my mind to keep my liberty.
AMI: Ah! tu non sai quanta felicità Riposta sia in un tenero amor.	AMI: Ah! then you know not what happiness There is in loving and being loved.
LISA: Sovente amore ha soave, Principio e fine amaro.	LISA: Ay, love begins sweetly, But often ends bitterly.
TER: (Aparte.) Vedi l' ipocrisia!	TER: (Aside.) Oh, the young termagant!
CORO: Viene il Notaro! (Entra Notaro.)	CHO: Here comes the Notary! (Enter Notary.)
AMI: Il Notaro? ed Elvino non è presente ancor.	AMI: The Notary? and Elvino has not yet arrived.
NOT: Di pochi passi io lo precedo, o Amina; In capo al bosco io lo mirai da lungi.	NOT: He's just by; for I passed him, Amina, At the end of the wood
CORO: Eccolo! (Entra Elvino.)	CHO: Here he is! (Enter Elvino.)
AMI: Caro Elvino! alfin tu giungi!	AMI: Dear Elvino! at last you are here!
ELV: Perdona, o mia diletta, il breve indugio. In questa dì solenne Ad implorar ne andai sui nostri nodi, D' un angelo il favor Prostrato al marmo dell' estinta mia madre. 'Oh, benedici la mia sposa, le dissi! Ella possiede tutte le tue virtuti! Ella felice, renda il tuo figlio. Qual rendesti il padre! Io lo spero, ben mio, m' udì la madre!	ELV: Forgive me, oh, my beloved, my brief delay. On this eventful morning, I went to ask a blessing of her, my mother! There, kneeling at the shrine, I then implored her that you May you ever be virtuous, as she was. 'Oh, grant your blessing On my sweet flower, my loved one! She who inspires me with fondest love! Oh, make her as you were to my father! Watch and bless her, my sainted mother!'
AMI: Oh, fausto augurio!	AMI: Oh, blessed omen!
TUTTI: E vano esso non fia.	ALL: It shall prove good to you.
ELV: Siate voi tutti, o amici, Al contratto presenti, (Il Notaro si dispone a stendere il contratto.)	ELV: Come, friends, and witness the contract Which we now sign before you. (The Notary proceeds to draw up the contract.)
NOT: Elvino, che rechi alla tua sposa in dono?	NOT: Elvino, what do you give your bride as dowry?

ELV: I miei poderi—la mia casa, Il mio nome ogni bene Di cui son possessore.	ELV: All I am possessed of—lands and houses; And, beside these, the good name Which I ever hope to preserve me.
NOT: E Amina?	NOT: You, Amina?
AMI: Il cor soltanto!	AMI: Nothing but a fond heart!
ELV: Ah! tutto è il cor! (Mentre la Madre sottoscrive e con essa i testimoni, Elvino presenta l' anello ad Amina.)	ELV: It is that which I most prize! (While the Witnesses and Teresa are signing the contract, Elvino gives Amina a ring.)
ELVINO: Prendi: l' anel ti do . . . . no, Che un dì, che un dì recava all ara. L' alma beata è cara Che arride al nostro, al nostro amor, al nostro amor! Sacro ti sia, sacro ti sia tal done Come fu sacro alei, Sia de tuoi voti e miei, Fido custode, fido custode, custode ognor! Sposi or noi siamo!	ELVINO: Take now this ring,—it is, yours . . . . .. love, It will make you, at the altar, mine, ... love. May fortune ever shine, ... love, With smiles benignant, with smiles benignant on . . . . . our love! Sacred to you, sacred to you this token, Love's soft vows with it spoken, Like my mother's vows unbroken, Sacred sacred pledge, sacred pledge of mutual love! Now we are united!
AMI: Sposi—oh, tenera parola!	AMI: United—oh, joyful word!
ELV: Cara nel sen ti posi Questa gentil viola. (Le dà un mazzetto la baccia.)	ELV: Sweetest, take these flowers, As emblems of your virtue. (Gives her a bunch of violets.)
AMI: Puro innocente fiore!	AMI: Dear innocent flowers!
ELV: Ei mi rammenti a tè.	ELV: Let them remind you of me.
AMI: Ah! non ne ha d' uopo il core.	AMI: No need of them for that purpose.
ELV: Sì, mio tutto egli è!	ELV: Ah, I know, love, your heart is mine!
AMI, ELV: Dal dì chè i nostri cori, Avvicinava un Dio; Con te rimase il mio, Il tuo restò con me.	AMI, ELV: Nothing now can sever our hearts, Since Heaven has heard our prayer; In sweet reliance ever Each other's trust we share.
TUTTI: Scritti nel ciel già sono Come nel vostro cor!	ALL: Those vows even now are written on high, As surely as in your hearts!
AMI: Ah! vorrei trovar parola A spiegar com' io t' adoro! Ma la voce, o mio tesoro, Non risponde al mio pensier.	AMI: Oh, that I had words to tell you The love which burns in my bosom! But my tongue for ever spurns To confess the love I feel.
ELV: Tutto, ah! tutto in questo istante Parla a me del foco ond' ardi: Io lo leggo ne' tuoi sguardi, Nel tuo riso lusinghier! L' alma mia, nel tuo sembiante, Vede appien la tua scolpita, E a lei vola, è in lei rapita, Di dolcezza, e di piacer!	ELV: In your looks I read your heart, love: Glances from your eyes are straying, Smiles around your lips are playing— More than words these speak your heart! And upon your maiden cheek, love, Where the blush of true affection Greet me, spouse of your election, Let this kiss seal our plighting!
CORO: Ah! così negli occhi vostri Core a core ognor si mostri: Legga ognor qual legge adesso L' un nell' altro un sol pensier.	CHO: May the flowers that blossom so fairly Spring around their feet for ever: And may jealous feelings never Mar the joy, the love, they feel.
LISA: Il dispetto in sen represso, Più non valgo a trattener.	LISA: Scarcely can I wish her joy, Still all my envy I'll conceal.
ELV: Domani, appena, aggiorni, Ci recheremo al tempio, e il nostro imene Sarà compiuto da più santo rito. A genial convito tutti quanti io vi attendo E a lieta danza nel mio vicin podere. (Odesi suon di sferza, e calpestio di cavalli.) Qual rumore?	ELV: Tomorrow, at the rising of the sun, We'll away to the altar, Where our union will be made complete. Then a jovial dinner, and to a merry dance I hope to see you all, at my home. (Cracking of whips and trampling of horses heard.) What noise is that!
TUTTI: (Accorendo.) Cavalli!	ALL: (Running to see.) Horses!
AMI: Un forestiere! (Entra Rodolfo e due Postiglioni.)	AMI: A stranger, too! (Enter Rodolph and two Postilions.)
ROD: Come nojoso e lungo, Il cammin mi sembrò! (Avanzandosi.) Distanti ancora dal castello siam noi?	ROD: How tedious has the journey To this place seemed to me! (Advancing.) What distance, tell me, am I from the castle?
LISA: Tre miglia.—E giunti, Non vi sarete fuor che a notte oscura, Tanto alpestre è la via. Fino a domani quì posar vi consiglio.	LISA: Three miles, sir.—Believe me, You cannot reach it before nightfall: It grows dark, and the roads are uncertain. Till the morn I advise that you rest here.
ROD: E lo desio avvi albergo al villagio.	ROD: I wish to do so if some fitting place you have.
LISA: Eccovi il mio.	LISA: This inn is mine, sir.
ROD: Quello?	ROD: That one?

ROD: Ah! lo conosco.	ROD: Ah! I remember.
LISA: Voi, signor?	LISA: You, signor?
TUTTI: Costui chi fia?	ALL: Who can he be?
ROD: Il mulino!—il fonte!—il bosco! E vicin la fattoria!	ROD: There the mill stands!—the fountain!— The hills!—and close by them the streamlet!
TUTTI: Del villagio è conscio assai: Quando mai—costui vi fu?	ALL: He seems to know this place: When was he ever here?
RODOLPHO: Vi ravviso o luoghi ameni, In cui lieti, in cui sereni, Si, tranquillo, i dì passai, Della prima, della prima gioventù! Cari luoghi io vi trovai, Cari luoghi io vi trovai, Ma quei di non trova più. Vi ravviso o luoghi ameni, In cui lieti i dì passai, Della prima gioventù, Cari luoghi io vi trovai, Cari luoghi io vi trovai, Ma quel di non trova più, Cari luoghi io vi trovai, ma quei di non trova più, non trova più. Ma fra voi, se non mi inganno, Oggi ha luogo alcuna festa.	RODOLPHO: As I view these scenes so charming, With dear remembrance my heart is warming, Of days long vanished, of days long vanished—Oh, my breast, my breast is filled with pain, Finding objects that yet remain, While those days, while those days, While those days come not again. As I view . . . . .. these scenes so charming, With dear remembrance my heart is warming, Oh my breast is filled with pain, Finding objects that still remain, While those days come not again, While those days come not again, While those days, while those days, while those days come not again, come not again. But they they tell me that, in this village, Sports and feasting take place today.
TUTTI: Fauste nozze quì si fanno.	ALL: Yes, a wedding there's to be, sir.
ROD: E la sposa? (Accenando Lisa.) E quella?	ROD: Who's the bride, then? (Pointing to Lisa.) Is that she?
TUTTI: (Accennando Amina.) E questa.	ALL: (Pointing to Amina.) No, this, sir.

ROD: E gentil, leggiadra molto! (Additando Amina.) Ch' io ti miri?—Oh, il vago volto!	ROD: Gentle maid, she seems so graceful! (Approaching Amina.) May I see her?—Ah! that face so charming!
RODOLPHO: Tu non sai, con quei begli occhi, Come dolce il cor mi tocchi, quai richiami ai pensier miei, A dorabili, adorabili belta. Era dessa, ah quel tu sei Sul mattino, sul mattino dell' eta. Era dessa qual tu sei Sul mattino dell' età, Era dessa qual tu sei, Sul mattino dell' eta dell' eta.	RODOLPHO: Maid, those bright eyes, my heart impressing, Fill my breast with thoughts distressing, By recalling an earthly blessing, Long since dead and passed away, passed away. She was like you before death, oppressing, Sank her beauties, sank her beauties in decay. She was like you, before death Sank her beauties in decay, before death, before death, oppressing, Sank her beauties, sank her beauties in decay.
LISA: (Aparte.) Ella sola è vagheggiata!	LISA: (Aside.) All admire and caress her.
ELV: (Aparte.) Da quei detti è lusingata!	ELV: (Aside.) She seems pleased with his attention.
CORO: Son cotesi, son galanti, Gli abitanti di città.	CHO: How courteous, how polite, Are these gallant men from town.
ELV: (A Rodolfo.) Contezza del paese avete voi, signor? Testè mostraste di questi Luoghi ravvisar l' aspetto.	ELV: (To Rodolph.) You are not strange in these parts, sir, If I may judge by your manners?
ROD: Vi fui da giovinetto Col signor del castello.	ROD: The early part of my life Was passed with the lord of yon castle.
TER: Oh, il buon signor! È morto or son quattr' anni.	TER: Ah, he was very good! But he died four years since.
ROD: E ne ho dolore: Egli mi amò qual figlio.	ROD: And much I regret him: He loved me as his son.
TER: Ed un figlio egli avea; Ma dal castello sparve il giovane un dì, Nè più novella n' ebbe L' afflitto padre.	TER: He had one; But while still a child he disappeared, And no one has ever been able To learn any tidings of him.
ROD: A' suoi congiunti nuova io ne reco, e certa. Ei vive.	ROD: Those tidings I now bring to his relations: He is alive.
LISA: E quando alla terra natìa farà ritorno?	LISA: But when will he return?
CORO: Ciascun lo brama.	ALL: We are all most anxious to see him.
ROD: Lo vedrete un giorno. (Odesi il suono delle cornamusa che riducono gli armenti all' ovile.)	ROD: You will soon have that pleasure. (The sound of a shepherd's pipe is heard from without, in the distance.)
TER: Ma il sol tramonta: È d' uopo prepararsi partir.	TER: See, the sun is setting; And so, friends, let us hasten to go.
CORO: Partir?	CHO: Must we go?
TER: Sapete che l' ora si avvicina In cui si mostra il tremendo fantasma!	TER: You know that the hour is approaching When the dread phantom comes!
CORO: È vero, è vero!	ALL: Yes, truly!
ROD: Qual fantasma?	ROD: What dread phantom?
TUTTI: E un mistero—un oggetio d' orror!	ALL: Oh, a very frightful one it seems to be!
ROD: Follie!	ROD: What folly!
CORO: Che dite?—se sapeste, signor.	ALL: What say you?—you know not, good signor.
ROD: Narrate.	ROD: Then tell me.
CORO: Udite!	ALL: Listen!
CHORUS: A fosco cielo, A notte bruno, Al fioco raggio D' incerta luna, al cupo suono Di tuon lontano Da . . . . colle al pian un' ombra appar, un' ombra appar. In bianco volta Lensuol cadente, Col crin disciolto, Con occhi ardente, Qual densa nebbia Dal vento mossa, Avanza, ingrossa immensa par, immensa par.	CHORUS: When daylight's going, And nightwinds blowing, When sheeted lightning The heavens brightening, When deep-mouthed thunder Strikes us with wonder, On the distant hills a shade appears, a shade appears. While clouds through heaven By winds are driven, With hair loose streaming, And eyes bright beaming, In robes whose whiteness Shine forth in brightness, Oh, then it comes, oh, then it comes upon our fears.
ROD: Ve la dipinge: Ve la figura la vostra cieca credulità.	ALL: It is but some fancy: Perhaps the shadow of one of you.
CORO: Ah! non è fola—non è paura; Ciascun la vide: è verità. Dovunque inoltra a passo lento Silenzio regna che fa spavento; Non spira fiato, non move stelo; Quasi per gelo, il rio si sta. I cani stessi accovacciati, Abbassan gli occhi, non han latrati: Sol tratto tratto, da valle fonda, La strige immonda, urlando va. È verita!	CHORUS: No, it is no fancy— we've not been dreaming: All here have seen it, and shall again. Wherever it passes, deadly silence reigns; The sight so ghastly the vision pains, As slow it passes, like death alive. The watchdogs fear it, and, closely crouching, Their eyelids shut at its approaching. No sounds are heard then, But owlet only, from tower lonely, Its terror screams. It is true, it is true!
ROD: S' io qui restassi, o tosto, o tardi, Vorrei vederla, scoprir che fa.	ROD: Well, as I shall remain here a short time, I will endeavor to find out what it is.
CORO: Dal ricercarla il ciel vi guardi! Saria soverchia temerita.	CHORUS: Heaven guard him! oh, saints, defend him, And shield him from the phantom's power!
ROD: Basta cosi, ciascuno si attenga al suo parer: Verrà stagione che di sifatte larve Fia purgato il villaggio.	ROD: No, no, good folks, quiet your fears: A short time will serve To solve this mystery.
TER: Il ciel lo voglia! Questo, o signore, è universal desio.	TER: Heaven assist you! May you succeed.
ROD: (A Lisa.) Ma dal viaggio, Mio riposarmi vorrei, se mel concede La mia bella e cortese albergatrice.	ROD: (Turning to Lisa.) If my kind hostess here will allow me, I will now retire to rest.
TUTTI: Buon riposo, signor; notte felice!	ALL: Quiet slumbers be yours, sir; good night!
ROD: (Ad Amina.) Addio, gentil fanciulla: Fino a domani, addio. T' ami il tuo sposo come amarti io saprei.	ROD: (To Amina.) Adieu, gentle fair one: Till tomorrow, farewell. May he you love cherish you as I would.
ELV: Nessun mi vince in professarle amore.	ELV: None could love her more than I do.
ROD: Felice te se ne possiedi il core! (Parte con Lisa il Coro si disperde.)	ROD: To be beloved by her is happiness indeed! (Exeunt Rodolph, Lisa, and Villagers.)
AMI: Elvino! e me tu lasci Senza un tenero addio?	AMI: Elvino! and can you leave me Without one word at parting?
ELV: Dallo straniero ben tenero l' avesti.	ELV: The stranger bade you adieu most tenderly.

AMI: È ver: cortese, grazio ei parlò.
Da quel sembiante
Ottimo cor traspare.

ELV: È cor d' amante!

AMI: Parli tu il vero, o scherzi?
Qual sorge dubbio in te?

ELV: T' infingi invano.
Ei ti stringea la mano,
Ei ti facea carezze?

AMI: Ebben?

ELV: Discare non ti eran esse,
È ad ogni sua parola
S' incontravano i tuoi negli occhi suoi.
Gioja ne avevi.

AMI: Ingrato! e dir mel puoi?
Occhi non ho, nè core; fuor che per te.
Non ti giurai mia fede?
Non ho l' anello tuo?

ELV: Sì.

AMI: Non t' adoro? Il mio ben non sei tu.

ELV: Si—ma—

AMI: Prosegui: saresti tu geloso!

ELV: Ah si, lo sono.

AMI: Di chi?

ELV: Di tutti.

AMI: Ingiusto cor!

ELV: Perdono!
Son geloso del zefiro amante,
Che ti scherza col crine col velo,
Fin del sol che ti mira dal cielo,
Fin del rivo che specchio ti fà.

AMI: Son, mio bene, del zefiro amante,
Perchè ad esso il tuo nome confido;
Amo il sol, perchè teco il divido,
Amo il rio, perchè l' onda ti dà.

ELV: Ah! perdona all' amore il sospetto!

AMI: Ah! per sempre sgombrarlo dei tu.

ELV: Si, per sempre.

AMI: Il prometti?

ELV: Il prometto.

A 2: Mai più dubbi—timori mai più!
Ah, mio bene!
Ah, costante nel tuo, nel mio seno,
Sia la fede che amore avvalora,
E sembiante a mattino sereno,
Per noi sempre la vita sarà.
Mio bene, addio!

ELV: A me pensa!

AMI: E tu ancora?

A 2: Pur nel sonno il mio cor ti verdrà.

AMI: He did: his looks bespoke a generous heart;
His bearing graceful,
And, for a stranger courteous.

ELV: Quite like a lover!

AMI: Ah, do you mean this? you're jesting?
Whence these dreadful doubts?

ELV: You'll not deceive me.
Did he not press your fingers,
And say how he could love you?

AMI: What then?

ELV: Your eyes, too, spoke you delighted,
While listening to his praises
No more joy can I hope for:
All now is gloomy.

AMI: Ungrateful! how can you doubt me?
Life, soul, and all I plighted;
What shall I say to prove I love you?
Remember the ring you gave!

ELV: Yes.

AMI: Not adore you? too well you know I love you.

ELV: Yes—but—

AMI: But what?—The fact is you are jealous!

ELV: I own it.

AMI: Of whom?

ELV: Of all men.

AMI: Oh, unwise one!

ELV: Ah, forgive!
Yes, I envy the zephyr that fans you,
And woos your luxuriant hair;
The sun which falls on you from heaven,
The streamlet that mirrors my fair.

AMI: And I love the fresh breeze as it sighs,
When I call on the name dear to me;
And the river that playfully flows,
Like the heart that is beating for you.

ELV: Oh! forgive me, never heeding my suspicions.

AMI: Think no more then that I could be false.

ELV: I'll not doubt you.

AMI: You promise?

ELV: I promise.

BOTH: No more doubting! no more fears!
Ah, beloved one!
While our souls by fond love are united,
Nor by demons of jealousy frighted,
And our heart's dearest wish is requited,
Oh, how blessed and how grateful we'll be.
My love, adieu!

ELV: Oh, think ever of me!

AMI: And you'll think of me?

BOTH: In bright visions your form will appear!

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO.

ATTO II

SCENA I

Stanza nell' Osteria; di fronte una grande finestra; da un lato porta d' ingresso, dall' altro un gabinetto; avvi un letto e un tavolino.

Entra Rodolfo, indi Lisa.

ROD: Davver, non mi dispiace
D' essermi qui fermato;
Il luogo è ameno,
L' aria eccellente,
Gli uomini cortesi, amabili
Le done oltre ogni cosa.
Quella giovine sposa è assai leggiadra—
E quella cara ostessa?
E un po' ritrosa, ma mi piace anch' essa.
Eccola; avanti mia bella albergatrice.

LISA: Ad informarmi veniva io stessa se
L' appartamento va a genio, al signor Conte.

ROD: Al signor Conte! Diamin! on conoscinto!

LISA: Perdonate, ma il sindaco lo accerta,
E a farvi festa tutto il villaggio aduna.
Io ringrazio fortuna che a me prima di tutti
Ha conceduto il favor di offerir il mio rispetto.

ROD: Nelle, belle mi piace un altro affetto.
E tui sei bella, o Lisa, bella davvero—

LISA: Oh! il signor Conte scherza.

ROD: No, non ischerzo.
Questi furbi occhietti, questo bocchin ridente,
Quanti, cori ha sorpresi e ammaliati?

LISA: Non conosco finora innamorati.

ROD: Tu menti, o briconcella. Io ne conosco.

LISA: (Avvicinandosi.) Ed è!

ROD: Se quel foss' io che diresti, o carina?

LISA: Io—che direi?

ROD: Si; che diresti tu?

LISA: Nol crederei. In me non è beltà
Degna di tanto—un merito ho soltanto:
Quello di un cor sincero.

ROD: E questo è molto.
(Odesi strepito dalla finestra.)
Ma qual romore ascolto?

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II

SCENE I

A Bed-Room; at the back a window with folding-doors; on one side the entrance-door; the other a bed and a small table.

Enter Rodolph, followed by Lisa.

ROD: I am not sorry to be obliged
To remain here awhile
The village is pretty,
The air is excellent,
The females amiable,
The inhabitants courteous.
The bride elect beautiful,
Mine hostess charming—rather too shy,
But still I admire her,—and here she comes.
Well, my pretty hostess!

LISA: I have just come to see
If your apartment is to your lordship's mind?

ROD: Your lordship! Then I am recognized?

LISA: Pardon me, sir;
But, as all the village is assembling
On account of your lordship's visit,
I came first, to offer my respects.

ROD: My lovely Lisa, I am charmed
With your kind attention: it needs no apology.

LISA: Oh! my lord, you flatter me.

ROD: Nay, I am sincere.
Those eyes, those lips, that tender heart,
Must often have called forth love's emotion.

LISA: I am not conscious of any such power.

ROD: I know one who has been smitten by them.

LISA: (Anxiously.) Tell me, who is he?

ROD: No other than myself, my dear!

LISA: No—not yourself?

ROD: Yes, I protest to you—

LISA: I am not vain enough to believe it.
All I can boast is Sincerity of heart.

ROD: That is sufficient.
(A noise is heard outside the window.)
What sounds are those?

LISA: Mal venga all' importuno!	LISA: How unfortunate!
ROD: Donde provien? (Si spalanca la finestra.)	ROD: What can this be? (The window is opened.)
LISA: (Fugge nel gabinetto.) Che non mi vegga alcuno. (Nella fretta perde il fazzoletto; Rodolfo lo raccoglie, e lo getta sul letto.) (Comparisce Amina; è coperta di una semplice veste bianca; e si vede alla finestra l' estremità della scala per cui è salita.—Ella dorme è sonnambula; e s'avanza lentamente in mezzo alla stanza.)	LISA: (Running into the cabinet.) I must not be seen. (In her haste she drops her shawl, which Rodolph picks up, and places on the bed.) (Amina appears at the window, in a white night-dress, with a lighted candle in her hand.—She enters cautiously, and slowly walks into the center of the room.)
ROD: Che veggio? Saria questo il notturno fantasma? Ah!—non m' inganno— Quest è la villanella che dianzi Agli occhi miei parve sì bella.	ROD: Can it be? This must be the much-dreaded phantom! To my eyesight it bears a great resemblance To the fair one whom I just greeted As bride last evening.
AMI: Elvino!—Elvino!	AMI: Elvino! Elvino!
ROD: Dorme.	ROD: Sleeping!
AMI: Non rispondi!	AMI: What! no answer!
ROD: È sonnambula.	ROD: In her sleep she walks
AMI: Geloso saresti ancor Dello straniero?—Ah! parla!— Sei tu geloso ancor?	AMI: How! jealous again of the stranger Who kindly greets us!—Speak to me: Say you're not jealous.
ROD: Degg' io destarla?	ROD: Shall I disturb her?
AMI: Ingrato! a me t' appressa— Amo te solo, il sai.	AMI: Unkind one—you know, dearest, That I love none but you!
ROD: Destisi!	ROD: Awake!
AMI: Prendi—la man ti stendo— Un bacio imprimi in essa, pegno di pace.	AMI: Take then the hand I offer; Impress on it a fond kiss, my peace requires it.
ROD: Ah! non si desti— Alcuno a turbarmi non venga. In tal momento. (Va a chiudere la finestra.)	ROD: Ah! still she's sleeping— Just now I would not have her wakened,— I'll not disturb her. (He closes the window.)
LISA: (Affacciandosi dal gabinetto.) Amina! O traditrice!	LISA: (Slipping out of the cabinet.) Amina! Oh, false traitress!
ROD: Oh, Ciel!—che tento? (Per correre ad Amina breve silenzio.—Amina sogna il momento della cerimonia.)	ROD: Oh, Heavens! (A pause.—Amina dreams of the marriage ceremony.)
AMI: Oh! come lieto è il popolo Che al tempio ne fa scorat.	AMI: How happy are all the people Who stand round the altar!
ROD: In sogno ancor quell' anima È nel suo bene assorta.	ROD: She dreams, then! again she thinks And speaks of him, her well-beloved.
AMI: Ardon le sacre tede.	AMI: How bright are the sacred torches!
ROD: Essa all' altar si crede.	ROD: She thinks she's at the altar.
AMI: O madre mia, m' aita; Non mi sostiene il piè!	AMI: Oh, mother, dear, support me.— My strength, alas, fails me!
ROD: No, non sarai tradita, Alma gentil, da me. (Amina alza la destra come se fosse all' altare.)	ROD: No, no, beauteous flower, I will not do you harm. (Amina lifts up her hands, as in supplication.)
AMI: Cielo, al mio sposo io giuro Eterna fede e amore!	AMI: Father, for him I vow to live, To him I vow eternal faith and love.
ROD: Giglio innocente e puro, Conserva il tuo candore.	ROD: I would not dim such brightness, Such artless candor.
AMI: Elvino!—Alfin sei mio.	AMI: Elvino, now you are mine, love.
ROD: Fuggasi!	ROD: I must go!
AMI: Elvino! gia tua son io. Abbracciami— Oh! contento che non si può spiegar?	AMI: Elvino, I now am yours, love—embrace me!— Now I'm happy!
ROD: Ah, se più resto, io sento la mia virtù mancar. (Va per uscire dalla porta.—Ode romore di gente parte per la finestra donde è venuta Amina e la chiude.—Ella sempre dormendo, si corica sul letto.) (Contadini d' ambo i sessi, sindaci e Alessio.)	ROD: If I stay longer, my resolution will fail me. (Goes to the door.—A noise of People is heard; Rodolph goes out at the window at which Amina entered.—Amina lies down and sleeps on the Count's bed.) (Enter Villagers, headed by Alessio.)
CORO: (Sotto voce.) Osservate; l'uscio è aperto. Senza strepito inaltriamo. Tutto tace! ei dorme certo. Lo destiamo, o nol destiamo? Perchè no? ci vuol coraggio: Presentarsi, o uscir di quà. Dell' ossequio del villaggio Mal contento ei non sarà. Avanziam—v' è! v' è! mirate, A dormir colà si è messo. Appressiamoci, ah fermate; Non è desso, non è desso. Al vestito, alla figura, è una donna, Sì è bizzara l' avventura. Come entrò? che mai fà qui? (Entra Teresa, Elvino, e Lisa.)	CHO: (Whispering.) With respect, then, softly enter, He is sleeping—shall we in? Forward, neighbors; come, let's venture,— Should he wake there'll be no sin. And why not? there's sure no sin in Rousing him on such pretence, And the duty of his tenants Cannot give his grace offense! Proceed, then—see, he's reposing,— On his bed he still is dosing.— Now approach: ah, what fear you? See, he is not here reposing—no! By that garment, by that small figure, It is a woman, it is a woman,—yes! It is a strange adventure, surely;— How she came here who can guess? (Enter Teresa, Elvino, and Lisa.)
ELV: (Da lontano.) È menzogna.	ELV: (In a loud voice, outside the door.) It is a falsehood!
CORO: Alcun s' appressa.	CHO: Some one approaches.
LISA: (Additando Amina.) Mira, e credi agli occhi tuoi.	LISA: (Pointing to Amina.) Look, and let your eyes assure you.
ELV: Cielo!—Amina!	ELV: Heavens! Amina!
TER: Amina! dessa! (Amina si sveglia al romore.)	TER: Amina! It is she. (Amina awakes at the noise.)
AMI: Dove son? chi siete voi? Ah! mio bene!	AMI: Who are these? What means this clamor? Ah, Elvino!
ELV: Traditrice!	ELV: Go, heartless traitress!
AMI: Io!	AMI: Traitress?
ELV: Ti scosta.	ELV: Approach not!
AMI: Oh! me infelice! che mai feci?	AMI: Oh, most unhappy! whom have I injured?
ELV: E ancor lo chiede?	ELV: Ah! dare you to ask me?
CORO: Dove sei tu ben lo vedi.	CHO: How she came here, she must be conscious.
AMI: Qui!—perche?—chi mi v' ha spinta?	AMI: Who? Oh, speak! why come you here?
ELV: Il tuo core ingannator.	ELV: Well you play the shameless part.
AMI: Madre! oh, madre! (Corre nelle braccia di sua made.)	AMI: Mother! oh, mother! (Amina throws herself into her mother's arms.)

CORO: Ah, sei convinta.

ELV: Va spergiura!

AMI: O, me infelice! Che feci io mai?
O mio dolor! d' un pensiero,
D' un accento rea non son, nè il fui giammai,
Ah! se fede in me non hai,
Mal rispondi a tanto amor.

ELV: Voglia il ciel che il duol
Ch' io sento tu provar non debba mai,
Ah! ti dica s' io t' amai
Questo pianto del mio cor.

CORO: Il tuo nero tradimento è palese,
E chiaro assai.

TER: Deh! l' udite un sol momento;
Il rigore eccede omai.

ALES, CORO: In qual cor fidar più mai,
Se quel cor fu mentitor!
(In questo frattempo Teresa ha raccolto sul letto il fazzoletto di Lisa, e lo ha posto al collo di Amina.)

ELV: Non più nozze; al nuovo amante,
Sconoscente, io t' abbandono.

TUTTI: Non più nozze.

AMI: Oh! crudo istante! deh! m' udite—
Io rea non sono.

ELV: Togli a me la tua presenza,
La tua voce orror mi fà.

AMI: Nume amico all' innocenza.
Svela tu la verità.

ELV, AMI: Non è questa, ingrato core,
Non è questa la mercede
Ch' io sperai per tanto amore,
Che aspettai per tanta fede,
Ah! m' hai tolto in un momento,
Ogni speme di contento.
Ah! penosa rimembranza
Sol di te mi resterà.

LISA, ALES, CORO: Non più nozze, non più imene;
Sprezzo, infamia a lei conviene.
Di noi tutti all' odio eterno,
Al rossor la rea vivrà.

TER: Ah! se alcun non ti sostiene,
Se favor nessun t' ottiene
Sventurate, il sen materno,
Chiuso a te non resterà.
(Partono.)

CHO: Ah, she's convicted!

ELV: Go, I despise you!

AMI: Oh, most unhappy! what have I done?
Oh, my poor heart!
Of no thought, or word, or feeling,
Anything but love and truth revealing, am I guilty;
Never deserving such return for so much love.

ELV: May you never know the feeling
That my anguished soul's revealing!
Tears now stealing down my cheeks,
Tell you how this heart can love.

CHO: Yes, it is plain she has betrayed you;
All must doubt her faith and truth.

TER: Oh, believe not she is faithless,
But think in her you'll find the truth.

CHO, ALES: All here feel that you are faithless, Where, oh, where shall we find truth?
(During the previous, Teresa has picked up from the bed Lisa shawl, and placed it round Amina's neck.)

ELV: No marriage now;—
I discard you for ever!—Seek your new lover!

ALL: No nuptial feast!

AMI: Do not spurn me! hear me—
I am innocent!

ELV: Away! the voice which once
Was music to my soul, thrills me with horror!

AMI: Oh! if there be truth in heaven,
Let my innocence appear!

ELV, AMI: Can it be that thus you slight
All the love this heart ever bore you?
Can it be that thus you blight
The heart which now is bared before you!
A long adieu to hopes once cherished,—
Oh, would this form might be at rest!
Hours all bright, alas, have perished,—
Dead the love which made me blessed.

LISA, ALES, CHO: Bridal trains no more shall meet her,
Shame and infamy shall greet her;
Nothing can wipe away the stain,
So long as she shall live,

TER: Though all other tongues should blame you,
Though they should abuse and shame you,
Still your mother's arm shall shield you,
Still her voice shall comfort give.
(Exeunt.)

SCENA II

Ombrosa Valletta, fra il Villaggio e il Castello.

CHORUS: Qui la selva è più folta ed ombrosa, Qui posiamo, vicini al ruscello; Lunga ancora, scoscesa, sassosa, E' la via che conduce al castella: Sempre tempo per giungere avremo, Pria che sorga dal letto il signore. Riflettiam, riflettiam, quando, quando giunti saremo, Che direm per toccare il suo cor. Eccelenza!—direm con corraggio—
'Signor Conte—la povera Amina
Era dianzi l' onor del villaggio,
Il desio d' ogni villa vicina—
In un tratto, è trovata dormente
Nella stanza che voi ricettò—
Difendetela, s' ella è innocente,
Aiutatela s' ella fallò!'
A tai detti, a siffatti argomenti,
Ei si mostra commosso, convinto;
Noi preghiamo, insistiam riverenti,
Ei ci affida, ei promette, abbiam vinto,
Consolati al villaggio torniamo;
In due passi, in due salti siam quà.
Alla prova!—Da bravi! partiamo—
La meschina protetta sarà.
(Entra Amina e Teresa.)

AMI: Reggimi, o buona madre;
A mio sostengo sola rimanti tu.

TER: Fa core. Il Conte dalle lagrime
Tue sarà commosso. Andiamo.

AMI: Ah! no—non posso; Il cor mi manca e il piè.
Vedi, siam noi presso il poder d' Elvino.
Oh! quante volte sedemmo insiem di questi
Faggi all' ombra, al mormorar del rio!
L' aura che spira de' giuramenti
Nostra ancor risuona—
Gli obliò crudele! ei m' abbandona!

TER: Esser non puote, il credi ch' ei più non t' ami, Afflitto è forse anch' esso, afflitto al par di te,
Miralo; ei viene solitario e pensoso.

AMI: (A Teresa.) A lui mi ascondi—rimaner non oso.
(Entra Elvino.)

SCENE II

A shady Valley, between the Castle and the Village.

CHORUS: Here we'll rest in these sweet shady bowers, Where the streamlet is bordered by flowers; Yes, we'll rest in this wood, since we're weary, For the way to the castle is dreary; And we've time, before the sun with its beaming Wakes his lordship this morning from dreaming. Let us think, let us think in what words, what words to address him, Which way will be best to impress him.
Without giving him offense:
'Please your lordship to grant us a hearing,
Of facts we will state without fearing.
Poor Amina, whom once we loved so,
And to whom we looked up as our guide,—
From the hour when in your room
We found her, sweet peace has fled.
Joys, which ever should surround her,
Are gone, and woe's her bridal bed!'
Then, should he smile, and listen to our cause.
And pity take on poor Amina's grief,
And promise he'll do all he can
To clear her of this cruel ban,
We'll straight return, nor idly tarry,
But take us back, some hope to carry,
That the Count may soon reveal
A balm, which every heart will heal.
(Enter Amina, and Teresa.)

AMI: Speak for me—support me, dear mother,
You only are left me now.

TER: Take courage—the Count will listen to you;
Let us hasten to him.

AMI: Yet stay: I cannot, my heart beats so—
And see there is Elvino's dwelling
How often have we sat together by yon stream,
Sheltered by the friendly linden-trees!
The breeze, too, must still be laden
With our lately-plighted vows.
He has forgotten them!—he forsakes me!

TER: Impossible!—Surely, he still loves you!—
He, too, must, I think, be deeply afflicted;—
But see, he comes, the picture of woe.

AMI: (Clinging to her Mother.)
Hide me: I dare not see him.
(Enter Elvino.)

ELV: Tutto è sciolto.—Oh, dì funesto!
Piu per mè non v' ha conforto.
Il mio cor per sempre è morto
Alla gioja ed all' amor.

AMI: Vedi, o madre—afflitto e mesto—
Forse, ah! forse ei? m' ama ancor.
(Amina s' avvicina.—Egli si cuote, la vede, e amaramente le dice.)

ELV: Pasci il guardo, e appaga l' alma
Dell' eccesso de' miei mali;
Il più triste de mortali sono cruda!
E il son per tè.

AMI: M' odi, Elvino ti calma—
Colpa alcuna in me non è.
(Voci lontane, 'Viva il Conte.')

ELV: (Per uscire.) Il Conte!

AMI, TER: Ah! resta.

ELV: No: si fugga.
(Entrano Paesani.)

CORO: Buone nuove! dice il Conte ch' ella è onesta,
Ch' è innocente; e a noi gia move.

ELV: Egli! oh! rabbia.

TUTTI: Ah! placa l' ira.

ELV: (Le toglie l' anello.)
L' ira mia più fren non ha.

AMI: (Li abbandona fra le braccia di Teresa.) Il mio anello! oh, madre!

TER, CORO: (Ad Elvino.) Mira! A tal colpo morirà.

ELV: (Si appresso ad Amina.) Ah! perchè non posso odiarti, Infedel, com' io vorrei, Ah! del tutto ancor non sei Cancellata, cancellata dal mio cor. Possa un altro, ah! possa amarti, Qual t' amò quest' infelice, Altro voto, o traditrice, No, ah, non temer, non temer dal mio dolor. Altro voto non temer, non temer dal mio dolor, Altro voto, ah! non temer, non temer dal mio dolor. Ah, per me non v' ha conforto. No, Il mio cor per sempre è morto. Alla gioja ed all' amor; Ah! per me, non v' ha conforto. Ah! perchè non posso odiarti, Infedel, con io vorrei, Ah! del tuto ancor non sei Concellata, cancellata dal mio cor! Possa un altro ah! possa amarti, Qual t' amo quest' infelice, Altro voto, o traditrice, No, ah, non temer, non temer dal mio dolor; Altro votro non temer, non temer dal mio dolor; Altro voto ah! non temer, non temer dal mio dolor. Ah! perchè non posso odiarti, Infedel, com' io vorrei, Ah! del tutto ancor non sei, Cancellata dal mio cor. Ah! perchè non posso odiarti, Infedel, com' io vorrei, Infedel com' io vorrei. Cancellata dal mio cor, Si dal mio cor, Si dal mio cor, Si dal mio cor, Si, dal mio cor, Si dal mio cor.

ELV: All is lost now: yes, for me,
Love's star is dimmed for ever;
And this heart, so broken, never
More one ray of hope shall see.

AMI: Mother, behold! he seems very sad:
May it be he still loves me? (Amina approaches.—Elvino starts from her in horror, speaking reproachfully.)

ELV: See, false girl, these looks of sadness,
This face, which once bright with gladness;
And this brain, now racked with madness!
Sad reward for loving you!

AMI: Hear me, Elvino—
Hear me swear it— (Voices without shouting, 'The Count, the Count,')

ELV: (About to go.) The Count!

AMI, TER: Oh! stay.

ELV: I'll away.
(Enter Peasants.)

CHO: Good news! The Count will prove That Amina is virtuous—see, he comes!

ELV: He, too! oh, madness!

ALL: (Surrounding Elvino.) No; stay your anger.

ELV: (Goes to Amina, and snatches the ring from her finger.) My rage I can no more repress.

AMI: (Throwing herself into Teresa's arms.) My ring, too!—oh, mother!

TER, CHO: (To Elvino.) Mercy! That last act will kill her.

ELV: (Slowly approaching Amina.) Still so gently stealing over me, Memory will bring back the feeling, Spite of all my grief, revealing That I love you, that I dearly love you still. Though some other swain may charm me, Ah! no other ever can warm me, Yet never fear, I will not harm you, I, false one, love you, I dearly love you still. Ah! never fear, I will not harm you, never fear, I will not harm you, Yes, false one, yes, I love you, I dearly love you still. All is lost to me for ever. All, Ah! Love's sun is set for ever. All is lost is lost for me; All is lost, all, all is lost, is lost for me. Still stealing so gently over me, Memory will bring back the feeling, Spite of all my grief, revealing That I love you, that I dearly love you still! Though some other swain may charm you, Ah! no other ever can warm me; Yet never fear, I will not harm you, No, false one, no, no, I fondly love you still; Ah! never fear I will not harm you, never fear I will not harm you, No, false one, no, I love you, I love you, false one, still. Still so gently stealing over me, Memory will bring back the feeling, Spite of all my grief, revealing That I love you, love you still. Still so gently over me stealing, Memory will bring back the feeling, Spite of all my grief, revealing That I love you, love you still, I love you still, I love you still, I love you still, I love you still, I love you still.

TER, CORO: Ah! crudel, pria di lasciarla. Vedi il Conte, al Conte parla.
Ei di rendere è capace a te pace—
A lei l' onor.
(Elvino parte disperato, Teresa tragge seco Amina da un' altro parte.)

FINE DELL' ATTO SECONDO.

TER, CHO: Oh, cruel! do not leave her: See the Count; and speak with him;
He will give peace to you,
And honor to our beloved Amina.
(Elvino rushes hurriedly away.—Teresa gently draws Amina apart from the rest.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

LISA: E fia pur vero, Elvino,
Che alfin dell' amor tuo degna mi credi?

ELV: Si, Lisa. Si rinnovi il bel nodo di pria—
L' averlo sciolto perdona a un cor
Sedotto da mentita virtù.

LISA: Perdono tutto. Ora che a me
Ritorni più non penso al passato;
Altro non veggo che il ridente
Avvenir che alfin mi aspetta.

ELV: Vieni; tu, mia diletta, mia compagna sarai.
La sacra pompa già nel tempio
Si appresta, non si ritardi.

TUTTI: Andiam.

■ ACT III

SCENE I

The Village Green. Teresa's Mill in the distance, the wheel of which is turning round.

Enter Lisa and Alessio.

VOICES WITHOUT: Lisa is chosen bride!

BOTH: Who?

VOICES WITHOUT: Lisa! Lisa!
(Enter Villagers.)

CHO: We come now to hail you
Elvino's fond bride,—
As once Amina was,
You'll now be his pride.
(Enter Elvino.)

LISA: And is it true, Elvino, that at length
You deem me worthy your great love?

ELV: Yes, dear Lisa; I would renew our former ties.
Which I blush to think were broken for one
Who has proved herself unworthy of my love.

LISA: Well, I forgive you,
And will think only of the happiness
Which I feel is now
In store for me.

ELV: Come, then, dear one—even now
They are preparing to unite us:
Let us to the temple.

ALL: We come, we come!
(Enter Rodolph.)

ROD: Elvino, stay.

LISA: (Aside.) The Count!

ALES: He's just arrived in time.

ROD: Where are you going?

ELV: (Haughtily.) To yon temple.

ROD: Odimi prima. Degna d' amor. Di sima è Amina ancor: io della sua virtude, Come de preggi suoi mallevador esserti voglio.	ROD: No, but hear,—she's aggrieved;— Indeed you wrong her, You're deceived.
ELV: Nella stanza a voi serbata Non la vidi addormentata?	ELV: Did I not see that form extended On your couch? All, all is ended.
ROD: La vedesti. Amina ell' era— Ma svegliata non ventrò.	ROD: True, it was your own, your fair one, But she entered in her sleep.
TUTTI: Come dunque? in qual maniera?	ALL: How so? which way could she?
ROD: Tutti udite.	ROD: A moment listen.
CORO: Udiamo un pò.	CHO: Yes, let us hear.
ROD: V' han certuni che dormendo Vanno intorno come desti. Favelando—rispondendo, Come vengono richiesti. E chiamati son sonnambuli Dall' andar e dal dormir.	ROD: There are some, who, amidst sleeping, Still a watch are always keeping: Slumbering, still are often talking, And even in their sleep keep walking. Somnambulist,—yes, such is she, So light of heart—so spirit-free.
TUTTI: E fia vero? E fia possibile?	ALL: Do you hear?—We all feel he speaks truly.
ROD: Un par mio non può mentir.	ROD: Why? oh, why should I mislead?
ELV: No, non fia: di tai pretesti La cagione appien si vede.	ELV: Think not to deceive me, Though crushed, heartbroken.
ROD: Sciagurato! e tu potresti Dubitar della mia fede?	ROD: Since you still doubt, The misery lie on your own head.
ELV: (Senza badare a Rodolfo.) Vieni, o Lisa.	ELV: (Not noticing Rodolph.) Come, Lisa.
LISA: Andiam.	LISA: Yes, let us go.

LISA: A sposarci e la sposa—è Lisa!	LISA: To be married, and I am the bride.
ELV: E Lisa.	ELV: Ay, Lisa!
LISA: E lo merto: io non fui colta sola mai, Di notte, in volta, ne trovata io fui rinchiusa Nella stanza di un signor.	LISA: And why not, pray? People never found me Wandering at night in the chamber of a lord, Much less sleep there.
TER: Menzognera! a questa accusa Più non freno il mio furor! Questo vel fu rinvenuto Nella stanza del signore.	TER: Since you speak thus, I need no longer conceal anything. Know you anything of this shawl. Which I found in my lord's chamber?
TUTTI: Di chi è mai? chi l' ha perduto?	ALL: Whose can it be? who has lost one?
TER: (Accenando Lisa.) Ve lo dica il suo rossore.	TER: (Pointing to Lisa.) Let her answer you.
TUTTI: Lisa! (Elvino lascia la mano di Lisa, mortificato.)	ALL: Lisa! (Elvino, as if electrified, lets fall the hand of Lisa.)
TER: Lisa. Il Signor Conte Mi smentisca se lo può.	TER: I appeal to his lordship, Whether I have spoken truly.
LISA: (Aparte.) Io non oso alzar la fronte!	LISA: (Aside.) I dare not raise my eyes
TUTTI: (Aparte.) Che pensar, che dir non so.	ALL: What are we to believe now?
ELV: Signor?—che creder deggio? Anch' ella mi tradi.	ELV: My lord, what am I to believe, Since she, too, is false.
ROD: Quel ch' io ne pensi manifestar non vo. Sol ti ripeto, sol ti sostengo, Che innocente è Amina, Che la stessa virtu offendi in essa!	ROD: I would rather not say anything of Lisa— I will ever assert Amina is innocent, That, in doubting her, you doubt The existence of the attribute. Virtue!
ELV: Chi fia che il provi?	ELV: But who shall prove it?
ROD: Chi mira—ella stessa! (Vedesi Amina uscire da una finestra del mulino; ella paseggia, dormendo, sull' orlo del tetto; sotto di lei la ruota del mulino, che gira velocemente, minnaccia di frangerla se pone il piede in fallo.—Tutti si volgono a lei spaventati.—Elvino è trattenuto da Rodolfo.)	ROD: Herself—behold! (Amina appears coming out of one of the upper windows of the mill, with a lighted candle in her hand—the wheel is in motion, threatening to crush her, should she make a false step; all gaze in terror and astonishment; Elvino is held back by Rodolph.)
TUTTI: (Con un grido.) Ah!	ALL: (With a shriek.) Ah!
ROD: Silenzio; un sol passo, un sol grido l' uccide.	ROD: Silence! a step, a sound, may cause her death!
TER: Oh, figlia!	TER: Oh, my child!
ELV: Oh, Amina!	ELV: Oh, Amina!
CORO: Scende—bontá divina, Guida l' errante piê. (Amina giunge presso alla ruota, camminando sopra una trave mezzo fracida che piega sotto di lei.)	CHO: Merciful providence, she descends—Oh, guide her feet. (As Amina is just over the wheel, the plank, which is partly decayed, cracks under her weight—she lets fall the candle.)
TUTTI: È salva!	ALL: She's safe!
TER: Oh, figlia!	TER: Oh, my daughter!
ELV: Oh, Amina! (Amina si avanza in mezzo al teatro.)	ELV: Oh, Amina! (Amina descends, and walks slowly to the center)
AMI: Oh! se una volta sola riverderlo io potessi, Anzi che all' ara altra sposa ei guidasse!	AMI: Ah! if I might see him, Before he is wedded to another!
ROD: (Ad Elvino.) Odi?	ROD: (To Elvino.) Listen.
TER: A te pensa, parla di te.	TER: She speaks of you.
AMI: Vanna speranza! Io sento suonar La sacra squilla al tempio già move— Io l' ho perduto—e pur—rea non son io.	AMI: Vain hope! alas I hear the bridal bells— They go towards the temple— He is lost to me for ever—yet I am innocent.
TUTTI: Tenero cor!	ALL: What faithful love!
AMI: (Inginocchiandosi.) Gran Dio, non mirar Il mio pianto; io gliel perdono quanto infelice Io sono felice ei sia. Questa d' oppresso core E l' ultima preghiera.	AMI: (Kneeling.) Kind heaven! these tears Are in sorrow, not in anger;— I forgive him;—and as my woe is deep, May his happiness be perfect, Is the last prayer of this breaking heart.
TUTTI: Oh, detti! oh, amore!	ALL: What truth! what affection!

AMI: (Si guarda la mano come cercando l' anello d' Elvino.) L' anello mio—l' anello—ei me l' ha tolto— Ma non può rapirmi l' immagin sua. Sculta ella è qui—nel petto. Nè tè, d' eterno affetto. (Si toglie dal seno i fiori ricevuti da Elvino.) Tenero pegno, o fior—nè te perdei. Ti bacio ancor—ma— Imaridito, sei.—Ah! Non credea mirarti si presto estinto, o fiore, Passasti al par d' amore, Che un giorno sol durò. (Piange sui fiori.) Potria novel vigore il pianto mio donarti; Ma ravvivar l' amore il pianto mio non può.	AMI: (Feeling her hand as seeking the ring Elvino had given at the bethrothing.) My ring—ah, he took it from me, But be cannot take back His own dear image!— I have it here! Nor you, poor faded flowers! (She takes the flowers, all dropping to pieces, from her bosom.) Still I may kiss you, Sad emblems of the love Of her whose happiness fled More swiftly than your bloom! (Weeps over the flowers) My tears may, perchance, revive you; But nothing can bring back his love
ELV: Io più non reggo.	ELV: Let me embrace her.
AMI: E si egli a me tornasse! Oh, torna, Elvino.	AMI: Should he ever love me again! Oh, return to me, Elvino!
ROD: (Ad Elvino.) Seconda il suo pensier.	ROD: (To Elvino.) Let her wish be fulfilled.
AMI: A me t' appressi? oh, gioja! L' anello mio mi rechi?	AMI: Ah! do you approach? Oh, joy! Will you give me back my ring?
ROD: (Ad Elvino.) A lei lo rendi. (Elvino le rimette l' anello.)	ROD: (To Elvino.) Restore it—quickly! (Elvino replaces the ring on her finger.)
AMI: Ancor son tua; tu sempre mio tutt' or. M' abbraccia, tenera madre— Io son felice appieno.	AMI: Again I'm yours, love: Embrace me, dear mother— Your poor child is now completely happy!
ROD: De' suoi diletti in seno Elle si svegli. (Teresa l' abbraccia, Elvino si prostra a' suoi piedi e la sostiene.)	ROD: In the midst of this pleasant reverie Let her awake. (Teresa embraces her, while Elvino kneels and supports her.)
CORO: (Ad alta voce.) Viva, Amina!	CHO: (With loud voices.) Long live Amina!
AMI: (Svegliandosi.) Oh, cielo! dove son io? Che veggo! ah! per pieta, Non mi svegliate voi! (Si copre gli occhi colle mani.)	AMI: (Waking.) Oh, mercy! where am I? Sweet dream? oh, for pity's sake, Do not recall me to myself. (She covers her face with her hands.)
TER: No: tu non dormi.	TER: No,—you're not sleeping?
ELV: Il tuo amante— Il tuo sposo è a te vicino. (Amina alla voce di Elvino si scopre gli occhi lo guarda, indi si getta fra le sue braccia.)	ELV: I am your lover— They are your husband's arms that enfold you (At the sound of Elvino's voice, Amina uncovers her eyes, and, with a shriek of joy, throws herself into his extended arms.)
AMI: Oh, gioja! oh, gioja! Io ti ritrovo Elvino!	AMI: Oh, transport!—Oh, happiness!— To be again my Elvino's!
CHO: Innocente, è a me più cara, Bella più dal soffrire Vieni al tempio, e a piè dell' ara Incominci il tuo gioir.	CHO: Receive the love of all who know you, Made more dear to us by your suffering; May he, too, at the altar show you, That love like his can never fade.
AMINA: Ah! non giunge uman pensiero, Al contento ond' io son pienà: A' miei sensi io credo appena; Tu mi affida o mio tesor. Ah! mi abbraccia, e sempre insieme, Sempre uniti in una speme, Della terra in cui viviamo, Ci formiamo un ciel d' amor. Della terra in cui viviamo, Ci formiamo un ciel d' amor, d' amor, d' amor, d' amor. Ah! mio ben! Ah! Oh, gioja! oh, gioja! Oh, quel gioja! Ah, ci formiamo un ciel, Ah! ci formiamo un ciel d' amor, Oh, gioja, oh, gioja, un ciel d' amore.	AMINA: Do not mingle one human feeling With these blisses over each stealing. While these tributes to me revealing Elvino faithful to his love. Ah! embrace me, while thus forgiving, Each a pardon thus receiving; On the earth while we are living, We will form . . . . . a heaven of love. On the earth . . . . . while we are living, We will form . . . . . a heaven of love, form . . . . . form . . . . . a heaven of love. Ah! my love! Ah! What rapture! what rapture! Oh, what rapture! Ah, we will form on earth, a heaven of love.
CORO: Innocente è a noi più cara, &c.	CHO: Receive the love of all who know you.

I Puritani (1835)

The Puritans

MUSIC BY VINCENZO BELLINI ■ LIBRETTO BY COUNT CARLO PEPOLI

This three-act melodramma serio, originally titled I Puritani di Scozia (The Puritans of Scotland) and set to a libretto by Count Carlo Pepoli, was first performed at the Théâtre-Italien in Paris on January 25, 1835. The setting: a Puritan fortress in Plymouth during the English Civil War between Cromwell's supporters and the Royalists in the seventeenth century. Elvira, daughter of the commander Lord Gualtiero Valton, is betrothed to the Royalist Lord Arturo Talbo. Sir Riccardo Forth, who loves her too, confesses his unhappiness. Sir Giorgio Valton, Elvira's uncle, tells Elvira that nothing must stop her marriage. Among the wedding gifts, is a billowing white wedding veil. Gualtiero cannot attend the wedding as he has to accompany a mysterious woman to London - she may in fact be a spy for the Stuarts. He gives Arturo a safe-conduct pass and entrusts Elvira to him. Arturo discovers the woman is Enrichetta di Francia, the late king's widow and helps her escape, disguising her in Elvira's billowing wedding veil. Riccardo stops them as they are leaving, but when he realizes that the woman behind the veil is not Elvira, he allows them to depart. Elvira goes mad when she discovers Arturo's supposed treachery. Giorgio realizes that Riccardo, too, has assisted in the escape and Riccardo persuades him not to sentence Arturo to death. Meanwhile, Elvira is slowly driven to madness, and laments the loss of Arturo. Later, Arturo returns during a storm in order to see Elvira, who is singing a love song to herself that he taught her. He steps under her window to join in with her singing, just as a group of angry Puritans passes by. When they embrace, Arturo realizes that she is insane. But, he will not leave her, even though he knows that the Puritans will kill him when they catch him. He is about to be executed when a general pardon is granted to all Cavalier prisoners as a result of Cromwell's victory. Elvira regains her sanity, and the lovers are reunited.

2: I am ready.

ALL: The morn is appearing.

1: The trumpet—

2: Is sounding—

ALL: Announcing the day.
(Bruno and Chorus of Soldiers.)
Yes; when the trumpet sounds,
The warrier quickly rouses;
His dreaded arms prepares,
And sallies forth to victory.
Quick as the flash of swords,
If rage enflames his heart,
The camp of the proud Stuarts
Will be reduced to ashes.
(A prelude of sacred music heard.)

BRUNO: O, warriors of Cromwell,
Let us our minds and hearts
To morning hymns devote,
In praise of our Creator.
(The soldiers kneel.)
(Chorus of Puritans. The bell sounds for prayer.)
The moon, the sun, the stars,
The darkness and the light,
Give glory to the Eternal,
According to their language.
The earth and all the firmament
Pay homage to the Lord;
To Him loud praise and honor
Let every nation give.

1ST SOLD: Did you hear?

2ND SOLD: I heard.

ALL: It is over.

BRU: To him who made the day
The hymn of the pure heart
Is wafted on the winds.

SCENE II.

Chorus of Villagers.

1ST: To mirth!

2ND: To mirth!

ALL: To mirth!

BRU: A day of joy is near;
Let every heart be merry!
Sing of some pure love.

CHO: The youth who sees Elvira,
The beautiful young maiden,
Calls her his shining star;
Calls her his queen of love.
Her smile, her lovely face,
Is of celestial beauty,
A rose upon its stem,
An angel from the sky.
A faithful cavalier.
Beside her shedding tears,
The boast can proudly make
To have her heart enflamed.

Elvira allor sospira,
Gli chiede eterna fede:
Ed oggi dà mercede
A un sì fidato ardor.

1: A festa!—

2: A festa!—

INSIEME: A festa!—
Almo gioir s' appresta:
A tutti rida il cor,
Se a nozze invita Amor. (Tutti partono; il solo Bruno)

SCENA III.

Riccardo e Bruno.

RIC: Or dove fuggo io mai?—dove mai celo
Gli orrendi affanni miei? Come quei canti
Rispondono al mio cor funèrei pianti?—
O Elvira, O Elvira! o mio sospir soave,
Per sempre io ti perdei!
Senza speme ed amor—in questa vita,
Or che rimane a me?—

BRU: La Patria e il Cielo!

RIC: Qual voce?—che dicesti?—E vero!—è vero!

BUR: Apri il tuo core intero
All' amistà, n' avrai conforto.

RIC: E vano;
Ma pur t' appagherò—Sai che d' Elvira
Il genitor m' acconsentia la mano.
Quando il campo volai.
Ieri alla tarda sera—
Quì giunto con mia schiera,
Pien d' amorosa idea—
Vo al padre—

BRU: Ed ei dicea?

RIC: "Sospira Elvira a Talbo Cavaliero,
"E sovra il cor non v' ha paterno impero.

BRU: Ti calma, O amico—

RIC: Il duol, che al cor mi piomba.
Sol calma avrè nel sonno della tomba—
Ah per sempre io ti perdei,
Fior d' amore, o mio speranza:
Ah la vita che m' avanza
Sarà vita di dolor—
Sarà esempio di terror!
Quando errai per anni ed anni
Al poter della ventura,
Io sfidal sciagura e affanni
Nella speme del tuo amor—
Oh qual sogno ingannator!

BRU: T' appellan le schiere
A lor condottier.

RIC: Di gloria il sentiere
M' è chiuso al pensier!

BRU: A patria e ad onore
Non arde il tuo cor?—

RIC: Io ardo—e il mio ardore
E amore, è furor!

Elvira then did sigh,
Demanded his true faith,
And on, this day she gives
The price of his pure love.

1ST: To mirth!

2ND: To mirth!

ALL: To mirth!
A day of joy is near;
Let every heart be gay
When Love to Hymen leads.
(Exeunt all, except Bruno.)

SCENE III.

Enter Richard.

RICH: To where shall I now fly?
Where can I hide my horrible affliction?
How these songs resound in my heart, like funeral dirges?
O Elvira, Elvira! my sweetest hope!
for ever I have lost thee!
Deprived of hope and love what remains to me in this life now?

BRU: Heaven and your country.

RICH: What voice? What did you say? It is true—it is true!

BRU: Open your heart to friendship, and you will find relief.

RICH: It is in vain; but still I will comply with your request.
You know that Elvira's father has granted me her hand. I then hastened to the camp
Arriving here late last night, with my troops, my heart burning with love, I went to him.

BRU: And did he say?

RICH: "Elvira is sighing for the Knight Talbot, and her father has no empire over her heart."

BRU: Calm yourself, my friend.

RICH: The grief that weighs upon my heart can only rest in the sleep of death.
Ah! for ever I have lost you,
Lovely flower, my dearest hope!
Ah! my future days of life
Will for me be days of sorrow,
And alone by terror marked.
When I strayed from year to year,
Borne along on wings of fate,
Grief and fortune I defied,
Hoping solely in your love.
Oh, delusion! oh, my dreams!

BRU: The army calls for you to become their leader.

RICH: The path of glory is barred before my steps.

BRU: Is your heart not enflamed at the name of country and honor?

RICH: I burn; but my flame is of love and fury.

BRU: Deh poni in oblio
L' età, che fioriva
Nei sogni d' amor.

RIC: Mi è in mente ognor viva,
Mi accresce il desio,
M' addoppia il dolor!
Bel sogno beato
D' amore e contento,
O cangia il mio fato,
O cangia il mio cor.
O come è contento
Nei dì del dolore
La dolce memoria
D' un tenero amor.
(Exeunt.)

SCENA IV.

Stanza di Elvira.

Elvira e Sir Giorgio.

ELV: O amato Zio, O mio secondo Padre!

GIO: Perchè mesta cosi? m' abbraccia, Elvira!

ELV: Deh chiamami tua figlia!

GIO: O figlia—oh nome,
Che la vecchiezza mia consola e alletta,
Per dolce tempo ch' io ti veglio accanto,
E pel soave pianto,
Che in questo giorno d' allegrezza pieno,
Piove dal ciglio ad innondarmi il seno—
O figlia mia diletta,
Oggi, sposa sarai!

ELV: Sposa? No:—mai!
Sai come arde in petto mio
Beila fiamma onnipossente,
Sai ch' è puro il mio desìo,
Che innocente è questo cor.
Se tramante—all' ara innante
Strascinata—un dì sarò—
Forsennato—in quell' istante
Di dolore io morirò!

GIO: Scaccia ormai pensier si nero.

ELV: Morir sì—Sposa no mai!

GIO: Che dirai, se il Cavaliero
Quì vedrai—se tuo sarà?

ELV: Ciel!—ripeti, chi verrà?

GIO: Egli stesso—

ELV: Egli—chi?—

GIO: Arturo

ELV: E fia vero?

GIO: Oh figlia—il giuro?

ELV: Desso?—Arturo?

GIO: Arturo.

ELV: Oh gioja!

a 2: Non è sogno—oh Arturo/oh Elvira,—oh amor?

BRU: Ah! bury in oblivion that time which bloomed in dreams of love.

RICH: It always returns to my mind, it increases my desires, it augments my sorrows.
O, happy dream
Of love and peace!
Change your fate,
Or change my heart.
O, what a torment,
In days of woe,
Is the remembrance
Of vanished love.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.

Elvira's Apartment.

Enter Elvira and Sir George.

ELV: O, dearest uncle! my second father!

SIR G: Why so sad! Embrace me, Elvira.

ELV: Ah! call me daughter.

SIR G: Oh, daughter oh! name which consoles and charms my old age! By that sweet time since I have watched over your life, and by these sweet tears that on this day of rejoicings flow from these eyes upon my bosom—Oh, dear daughter, today you shall be a bride.

ELV: Bride!—no, never!
You well know how in my breast
An all-powerful flame is burning;
You well know how pure my mind
And how candid is this heart.
If all-trembling to the altar
They shall ever drag my steps,
Quite distracted, in that moment
I shall die, oppressed with grief.

SIR G: Ah! dispel such gloomy thoughts.

ELV: I shall die—but never marry!

SIR G: Should the Knight you shall see here
Prove your own, what would you say?

ELV: Say again who now is coming?

SIR G: Himself.

ELV: He?—who?

SIR G: It is Arthur.

ELV: Is this true?

SIR G: My child, I swear it.

ELV: Himself—Arthur?

SIR G: Yes.

ELV: Oh, joy!

BOTH: It is no dream—Arthur/my child, oh love.

GIO: Piangi, O figlia, sul mio sene, Piangi, ah piangi di contento. Ti cancelli ogni tormento Questa lagrima d' Amor. E tu mira, O Dio pietoso, L' innocenza in uman veio; Benedici tu dal cielo. Questo giglio di candor!	SIR G: Weep, oh daughter, on my bosom; Shed, ah! shed warm tears of joy; Be all torments washed away By these tokens of affection. And you see, merciful Heaven, Candor pure in human form From on high your blessing send On this lily, as white as snow.
ELV: Quest' alma al duolo avvezza, Si vinta è da! gioir, Che ormai non può capir Sì gran dolcezza!— Chi mosse a' miei desir, Il Genitor?—	ELV: This soul, to grief accustomed, Is so overcome by joy, That scarcely can it sustain This unexpected bliss! Who has foreseen my wishes? Was it my father?
GIO: Ascolta. Sorgea la notte folta, Tacea le terra e il ciel; Parea natura avvolta D' un fosco e mesto vel. L' ora propizia a' miseri, Il tuo pregar, tue lagrime, M' avvalorar sì l anima— Ch'io corsi al genitor.	SIR G: Listen! The night was growing dark; Were silent heaven and earth, All nature seemed enwrapped, As in a gloomy veil; The hour to sadness favorable, Your prayers and your tears, Strengthened so much my soul, That to your father I ran.
ELV: Oh mio consolator!	ELV: O, my consoler dear!
GIO: Incominciai—"Germano," Nè più potei parlar; Allor bagnai sua mano D' un muto lagrimar; Poi ripigliai, tra, gemiti: "L' angelica lua Elvira Al prode Artur sospira: Se ad altre nozze andrà— La misera—morrà."	SIR G: I thus began:—"My brother—" Nor could I further speak. And having bathed his hand In silence with my tears, I then resumed with sobs: "Your angel-like Elvira For valiant Arthur sighs; Should she another marry, The unfortunate girl will die."
ELV: O spirto di pietà, Sceso dal ciel per me! E il Padre?— (Con ansies)	ELV: Oh! my angel kind, Descended to earth for me! My father then— (With anxiety.)
GIO: Ognor tacea.	SIR G: Kept silent.
ELV: Poscia?	ELV: And then—
GIO: Sclamò:—"Riccardo Chiese e ottenea mia fè: Ei la mia figlia avrà!"	SIR G: Exclaimed, "Richard Has asked, obtained my promise, And he shall have my daughter."
ELV: Ciel! Sol a udirti io palpito! E tu?—	ELV: Alas! You make me tremble. And you?—
GIO: "La figlia misera," Io ripetea, "morrà!" "Ah viva," Ei mi dice, E stringemi al cor, "Sia Elvira felice, Sia lieta d' amor."	SIR G: "Your child unhappy," I repeated, "will die." "Ah! let her live," said he, And pressed me to his heart; "Ah! may she be happy, May she be blessed in love!"
ELV: Odi—O ciel, qual suon si desta?	ELV: Heavens! listen; what sound is that?
GIO: Ascoltiam: ti rassicura—	SIR G: Let us hear: assure yourself.
ELV: Vien lo suon dalla foresta—	ELV: From the forest comes the sound.
GIO: E il segnal di gente d' arme, Che dal vallo nelle mura Chiede forse penetrar.	SIR G: It is the sound of men at arms, Who, from out the palisade, Ask for entrance to the fortress. Here the brave and noble Count
ARMIGERI: Viene il prode e nobil Conte, Artur Talbo Cavalier! (Fuori della fortezza)	SOLDIERS OUTSIDE: Arthur Talbot is advancing.
GIO: Non tel dissi?	SIR G: Did I not say so?
ELV: Ah padre mio! (Abbracciando Vio.)	ELV: My father! (Embracing him.)

GIO: Pago alfin è li tuo desio.	SIR G: Now your wishes are fulfilled.
CORO: Lord Arturo varchi il ponte, Fate campo al prò guerrier!	CHO: Let Lord Arthur cross the bridge: Clear the way for the great warrior.
GIO: A quel suono, al nome amato, Al tuo core or presta fede; Questo giorno venturato, D' ogni gioia è bel forier!	SIR G: On that sound, on that dear name, In your heart now place thy faith, This day will, by fortune blessed, Be forerunner of your joy.
ELV: A quel nome, al mio contento, Al mio core io credo appena; Tanta gioia, oh Dio, pavento, Non ho lena—a sostener!	ELV: In that name, in my content, In my heart I scarce put faith. So much joy! Alas! I fear I have not strength to bear it.
CORO: Ad Arturo de' Cavalieri, Bel campione in giostra e amor, Le donzelle ed i guerrieri Fanno festa e fanno onor!	CHO: To Lord Arthur, of all knights The most brave in love and battle, Sing, maidens and warriors, Songs of praise, and homage pay.

WALTON: (After whispering something to Bruno, who bows and retires.) You understood me well: whoever attempts to quit these walls without my leave, is doomed to death. My dearest children, to the sacred altar you may go without me. In virtue of this writing (to Art. giving him a paper), you will have free admittance to the temple. (to Sir George) Accompany them. Noble lady (to Henrietta, who enters, conducted by Bruno,) you are called before the High Parliament. I shall be your escort.

HEN: (Alas! what do I hear?) what do they seek from me?

WAL: My duty is (hesitating, then approaching his daughter and looking at the nuptial gifts) to obey and be silent. I must submit.

ART: (Aside to Sir G.) Is she a friend to the Stuarts?

SIR G: She has been for many months a prisoner, and was thought by every one a friend to the Stuarts, and their messenger in disquise. (To Art. aside.)

ART: (Heavens! what do I hear? Her fate is decided. She is lost. Oh, unfortunate woman!)
(Aside, but looking with pity on Hen.)

HEN: (What compassion in that face!)

WAL: Let all hasten to the temple; and you my dearest, go and adorn yourself with your nuptial dress. You go with her (to the ladies); and (to Bruno) have my horses ready outside the walls. Shortly I shall be back. Our departure we must hasten, (to Hen.) As I do now, may Heaven unite and bless this pair beloved.

ART: Sì fremo—io fremo

Che ti attende al sacro altar!

ART: Non parlar di lei che adoro;
Di valor non mi spogliar!

ENR: Sventurato prigionera,
Il mi fato io seguirò:

ART: Sarai salva, o sventurata,
O la morte incontrerò—
E la vergin mia adorata
Nel morire invochero!—

SCENA VIII.

Elvira, Giorgio, Arturo, e Enrichetta.

SCENE VII.

Henrietta and Arthur.

HEN: Sorrow and compassion are painted on his face, and clearly show the feelings of his heart. Cavalier!

ART: If any advice you want, or any assistance, put your trust in me.

HEN: If a great danger were pending over my head—

ART: Speak—what do you fear?

HEN: A few moments—I shall be put to death!
(Art. shudders.) Ah! you shudder!

ART: Yes, I shudder, I tremble for yourself, for me, for my father, who, faithful to the Stuarts, for them lost his life! But who are you? Whoever you may be, I will save you.

HEN: It is too late.
Henry's daughter, wife of Charles—
Like their fate will be my own.

ART: Oh, my Queen—
(He kneels.)

HEN: Death I expect.

ART: Speak not thus, for pity's sake!
(Rising.)
Behind these walls, from all concealed,
By sure ways I shall lead you;
You from here shall go!

HEN: To the axe!
No more hope is left for me.

ART: No, my Queen; there still is hope:
I'll save you, or both shall perish.

HEN: Arthur, change your kind intention;
Think what danger you will meet;
Think of your dear Elvira,
Who now waits for you at the altar.

ART: Name not her who I adore!
Do not deprive my heart of valor.

HEN: In misfortune and captivity,
To my fate I will submit.
On my life the sun is setting;
On your own it rises now.

ART: Luckless Queen, you shall be saved,
Or my death I will encounter;
With the name of her I love
On my lips, I shall expire.

SCENE VIII.

Enter Elvira and Sir George.

Elvira ha il capo coronato di rose: ha un bellissimo monile di perle al collo. Entra in iscena avendo nelle mani il magnifico relo bianco regalatole da Arturo.

ELV: Son vergin vezzosa—in vesta di sposa.
Son bianca ed umil—qual giglio d'April
Ho chiome odorose—cui cinser tue rose;
Ho il seno gentil—del bel tuo montil.

ENR, ART E GIO: Se miro il suo candor
Mi par la luna, allor
Che tra la nubi appar
La notte a consolar.
Se ascolto il suo cantar
Un' angelo mi par,
Che intuoni al primo albor
Inni al superno amor.

ELV: Dama, s' è ver che m' ami—

ENR: Dimmi, o gentil: che brami?

ELV: Qual mattutina stella,
Bella vogl' io brillar;
Del crin le molli annella
Mia giova ad aggraziar.

ENR: Elvira, mia diletta,
Son presta al tuo pregar.

ART E GIO: Fanciulla e semplicetta,
Ognor desia scherzar;
Scusare a te s' aspetta
Suo troppo vezzeggiar.
(Ad Enr. quasi scusando la preghiera di Elv.)

ELV: A illegiadrir mia prova
Deh, non aver a vil;
Ill velo in foggia nova
Sui capo tuo gentil.

ENR: Il vezzo tuo m'aletta,
Mi è caro a sacondar.

ELV: O bella, ti celo
Le anella del crin,
Com' io nel bel velo
Mi voglio celar.
Ascosa, O vezzosa,
Nel velo divin,
Or sembri la sposa,
Che vassi all' altar.

ENR: Ascosa in bianca vel,
Or pos o, O Dio, celar
L' affanno, il palpitar,
L' angoscia del mio cor!
(Deh tu, pietoso ciel,
Raccogli con favor
La prece di dolor
Ch' osia a te levar!)

ART: (Oh come da quel vel,
Che la nosconde il crin,
Veggio un splendor divin
Di speme a balenar!
Deh tu, pietoso ciel,
M' avviva il tuo favor,
Mi fa da un reo furor
La vittima salvar!)

Elvira with a wreath of roses on her head, wearing a pearl necklace. She holds in her hand the veil that Arthur presented her with.

ELV: I am a fair maiden adorned as a bride;
I am humble and candid as lilies in April;
My hair is quite fragrant with rose's perfume;
My bosom is graced with necklace of pearls.

HEN, ART AND SIR GEORGE: When I behold her candor,
She appears to me the moon,
That pierces through the clouds,
To gladden the sad night.
And when I heart her voice,
She seems to me an angel,
That raises, at the dawn,
Hymns to the eternal Love.

ELV: Lady, if you love me truly—

HEN: Speak, dear; what do you wish?

ELV: I wish to shine as brightly
As the morning star,
With elegance and taste.

HEN: Oh, my beloved Elvira!
I am ready at your desire.

ART AND SIR G: A simple girl, and innocent,
She always likes to play.
Indulgent you must be
To her excessive liveliness.
(To Hen. as if excusing Elvira's childish request.)

ELV: My trial to adorn your hair,
Alas! do not despise;
I will in a new way
This veil place on your head.

HEN: Your sport affords me joy:
I am pleased to second it.

ELV: My dear, your fine ringlets
I hide in this veil,
As I would in it
Be hidden myself,
O charming lady!
In this lovely veil,
You seem to be the bride
That goes to the altar.

HEN: Now, covered with this veil,
Heavens! I can conceal
The cares upon my face,
The anguish in my heart.
(And most gracious Heaven,
Propitiously receive
The prayers which, in my grief
I dared to raise to you.)

ART: (Oh! how, from that white veil
In which her face is hidden,
I see a ray of hope
Shine forth, that glads my heart.
Ah! most gracious Heaven,
Your favors grant to me,
That I may save this victim
From an unjust oppression.)

GIO: (Elvira col cuo vel,
Un zeffiretto appar,
Un iride sul mar,
Un Silfo, in grembo ai fior.)
(Guardandola con paterna compiacenza)
T' arrida, O cara il Ciel
Col roseo suo favor,
Tal ch' io ti veggio ognor
Tra vezza a giubilar!

VAL E COR: Elvira—mia/deh Elvira,
Il dì l' ore avanza!

ELV: Se il Padre s' adira—
Io volo a mia stanza!
Ma poscia, o fedel,
Tu posami il vel.
(Con vezzo semplice.)

ART, GIO E ENR: Si il Padre s' adira—
Ah rieda a tua stanza!
Sarà il tuo fedel,
Che t' orni del vel!
(Elv. parte colle Damigelle e con Gio.

SCENA IX.

Enrichetta ed Arturo.

Arturo guarda con grande sospetto all' intorno nuovamente, e trae dalla cintura il foglio ovuto da Valton.

ENR: Sulla verginea testa
D' una felice un bianco vel s' addice—
A me noa già—

ART: T' arresta
(Correndo a lei e trattenendola)
E' chiaro don del ciel! così ravvolta,
Deluderia la vigilante scolta—
Tu mia sposa parria—
(Con risoluzione.)
Vieni.

ENR: Che dici mai!
Tu corri a tua ruina, a orribil sorte!

ART: Vieni—Ah vieni—T' involo a certa morte.

SCENA X.

Riccardo e detti, con spada ignuda.

RIC: Ferma. Invan rapir pretendi
Ogni ben ch' io aveva in terra;
Qui ti sfido a mortal guerra—
Trema, ah trema del mio acciar!

ART: Sprezzo, O audace, il tuo furore:
La mortal disfida accetto:
Questo fero nel tuo petto
Sino all' elsa io vuò piantar.
(Per battersi: Enr. si frappone: il velo si scompone, e il suo volti si scuopre.

SIR G: Elvira, with her veil,
Appears a gentle zephyr,
A rainbow over the waters,
A sylph among the flowers.
(May Heaven look on you,
My dear, with rosy smiles!
That I may see you ever
In pleasure and in mirth.)

WAL AND CHO: Come dearest Elvira;
The day is advancing.

ELV: If my father is angry,
I run to my room;
But then dearest,
I put on your veil.
(With naïvete.)

ART, SIR G AND HEN: If your father is angry,
Return to your room;
Your lover will then
Put the veil on you.
(Elv., Sir G. and Ladies, exeunt.)

SCENE IX.

Henrietta and Arthur.

Arthur, looking around with caution, draws from his belt the paper received from Walton.

HEN: The head of a happy maiden is well suited to a white veil (Aside, and about to take off the veil), but not mine.

ART: Desist! (Running to prevent her.) By the will of Heaven this veil is put on you. Wrapped up in it, you will deceive the vigilance of the sentry. You will be thought my bride. (With resolution.) Come.

HEN: What do you say? You will run to your destruction—to a dreadful fate!

ART: Come, come; I will save you from certain death.

SCENE X.

Enter Richard with drawn sword.

RICH: Stop. In vain you attempted to steal
The only treasure I had on earth.
Here I challenge you to death!
Tremble—ah! tremble at my sword!

ART: I despise, bold man, your fury!
I accept your mortal challenge;
Up to the hilt within your chest
I will plunge this very sword.
(When they are on the point of fighting, Hen. interposes; her veil becomes disordered.)

ENR: Pace pace—ah v'arrestate,
Per ma sangue non versate.

ART: Ah che fai!—

RICH: La Prigioniera?
(Con stupore.)

ENR: Desso io son.

ART: Tua voce altera.
(a Ric.)
Or col ferro sosterrai—
Vien—

RIC: Con lei, tu illeso andrai.
(Freddamente.)

ART: E fia ver?—

ENR: Qual favella?

RIC: Più non vieto a voi l' andar.

ART: (Se il destino a te m' invola,
O mia Elvira, O amor mio santo,
Un sospiro a te sen vola,
E ti dice in suon di pianto;
Ti consola!—Io lungi e in guai
T' amerò com io t'amai!)

RIC: (Parti, O stolto. e prova intanto
Quel dolor che a me serbavi
Tu vivrai deserto e in pianto
Giorni oscuri, eterni e gravi—
Patria e Amor tu perderai—
Fia tua vita un mar di guai!)

ENR: (Sogno—o avrò conforto al pianto
Avrò tregna a di si gravi?
Sogno, o andrommi al figlio accanto
Tra gli amplessi suoi suovi?
Tanto ben, se, oh Dio, sognia—
Non mi far destar giammai!)
(Coro dentro le scene.)
Genti a festa! Al tempio andiamo!

ART ED ENR: Gente appressa?—
Oh ciel fogiamo!

RIC: Si fuggite—il vuole un Dio!

ART: Pria che siam oltre le mura.
(Per partire poi si testa.)
Parlerai?—

RIC: No t' assecura—

ART: Tu lo giura.

RIC: I giuro!

TUTTI: Addio—
(Art. e Enr. partone.)

SCENA XI.

Riccardo, poi Valton, Bruno, Elvira, con Damigelle in pompa di nozze.

RIC: (Quasi segue coll' occhio i passi dei fuggiaschi.) E gia al ponte—Passa il forte—
E alle porte—Gia n' andiò!—

CORO: Al tempio, al tempio a festa!
(Escendo.)

ELV: Dov' è Artur?

RIC: Dianzi fu qui—

ELV: Ove sei, O Artur?—

HEN: Peace! ah! peace! put down your arms;
Do not risk your lives for me.

ART: Ah! what have you done?

RICH: The prisoner!
(With amazement.)

HEN: Truly she.

ART: Your lofty language.
Come, maintain now with your sword.

RICH: (Coldly.) You shall go with her in safety.

ART: Is it true?

HEN: (What words are these?)

RICH: I no longer stop your going.

ART: If my fate takes me from you,
Dear Elvira, my sweet love,
A deep sigh from here I send,
To tell you, in plaintive tone,
Be consoled. I afar, in grief,
Shall love thee as I do now.

RICH: (Go, madman, and now feel
The same grief reserved for me;
You shall live alone in tears,
Days obscure, and sad, and long;
You shall lose both love and country,
Endless grief your life shall be.)

HEN: Do I dream? or shall I have
To my woes at last a truce?
Do I dream? Or shall I still Enfold my dear son in my arms
If I dream of so much bliss—
Heaven, never break my rest.
(Chorus behind the scenes.)
Friends rejoice! Come to the temple.

ART & HEN: People are coming—let us fly.

RICH: Yes, do fly. So heaven commands.

ART: (On the point of going, turns back to Rich.)
Will you speak before we have Passed the walls?

RICH: No, no; be certain.

ART: Swear it now.

RICH: I swear.

ALL: Farewell.
(Art. and Hen. exeunt.)

SCENE XI.

Richard, then Walton, Sir George, Bruno, Elvira, with Damsels dressed for the marriage.

RICH: (Looking from the balcony after the fugitives.) He is at the bridge—he has passed the fort,
Has reached the gates—he is gone.

CHO: Friends, rejoice!—come to the temple.

ELV: Where is Arthur?

RICH: He was here just now.

ELV: Where are you, dear Arthur?

RIC: Parti!—

ELV, RIC, GIO: Già fuor della mura—
Laggiù alla pianura.

CORO 1: La tua prigioniera.
La rea messaggiera
Col vil cavaliero?
(a Val.)

2: Ciascun su un destriero—
Spronando—volando—

TUTTI: Mirate cola!—
(Quadro generalo. Elv. getta un grido.)

VAL: Soldati accorrete—cio bronzi tuonate,
All' arme appellate—correte—volate,
Pel crin transcinate i due traditor.
(La campana del forte suona a stormo: il cannone spara a lenti intervalli.

TUTTI: All' arme!—

VAL: T' affretta.
(a Bru.)

TUTTI DI DENTRO: All' arme!—

VAL E TUTTI: Vendetta!
(Val. snuda la spada, e parte.)

RIC: Oh, come si pasce—d' affini e d' ambasce
L' ardor di vendetta—che m' ange e m'alletta:
Oh come nel seno—si masce il veleno
Di sdegno e d'amor—di speme e dolor!

ELV: La dama d' Arturo—è bianco velata—
La guarda e sospira—Sua sposa la chiama:
Elvira è la dama!—Non sono più Elvira?

GIO E CORO: Elvira! che dici?—

ELV: Io Elvira? Ah no—No—No!—

UOMI: La misera è pallida—

DON: E immobile e squallida—

UOMI· Le luce non gira—

DON: Sorride e sospira—

UOMI: Demente si fa—

TUTTI: O cieli, pietà.
(Elv. nel suo delirio crede vedere Art. e dice questi versi con la più grande mestizia e delirante passione.

ELV: Arturo, ah già ritorni?
Dunque sei fido ancor!
Ah vieni al Tempio, fedel Arturo—
Eterna fede, mia ben, ti giuro!
Come oggi è puro sempre avrò il core
Vivrò d'Amore, morrò d'Amor!

DON: Si crede all' ara—

UOMI: Giura ed Arturo—

DON: Ella sì tenera—

RICH: He is gone.

ELV, RICH, SIR. G: Already beyond the walls—far away over the plain.

1ST CHO: Your lady prisoner—the guilty emissary,
With the worthless knight?

2ND CHO: Let us go to the horses
And spur and fly.

ALL: Look there!
(General Tableau. Elv. utters a shriek.)

WAL: Come, soldiers, hasten; fire off the cannons;
Call now to arms—run quickly, fly!
And drag both the traitors quickly here.
(The alarm bell of the citadel sounds. The cannon is fired at intervals.

ALL: To arms!

WAL: Hasten.
(To Bruno.)

ALL: (Within.) To arms!

WAL AND CHORUS: Revenge!
(Wall. draws his sword and goes out.)

RICH: Oh!
The fire of vengeance, that grieves and delights,
How it is fed on torments and woes.
Oh! how in my breast the feelings are mixed
Of love and disdain, of hope and despair.

ELV: The lover of Arthur has on a white veil;
He views her and sighs, he calls her his bride.'
Elvira is the lady! Am I not Elvira?

SIR G AND CHORUS: Elvira, what did you say?

ELV: I Elvira? Ah! no, no.

MEN: The sad one is pale.

WOMEN: She does not move.

MEN: Her eyes have no life.

WOMEN: She smiles and she sighs.

MEN: She loses all reason.

ALL: Oh, heavens, have pity!
(Elv. in her delirium thinks she sees Art. and sings the following lines with profound sorrow and frantic passion.)

ELV: Dear Arthur, you have returned?
You are still true to me!
Come to the temple, my faithful Arthur,
I swear fidelity to you forever
My heart, as now, will ever be pure:
On love I'll live, on love I'll die.

WOMEN: She thinks she is at church.

MEN: She swears to Arthur faith.

WOMEN: She is so loving.

UOMI: Ei sì spergiuro—

DON: Ella sì candida—

UOMI: Ei traditor—

INSI: Misera vergine, morrà d'amor!

RIC E CORO: Oh come ho l' anima trista e dolente,
Udendo i gemiti dell' innocente;
Oh come perfido fu il traditore.
Che in tanti spasimi lasciò quel cor!

GIO: Dio di elemenza, t'offro mia vita,
Se all' innocenza giovi d'aita:
Deh, sii clemente a un puro core!
Deh, sii possente sul traditor!

RIC: Più la miro, e più doglia profonda,
E più l' alma s' accende in amore!—
Ma più innaspra ed avvampa il furore
Contro chi tanto ben m' involò!

GIO: La mia prece pietosa e profonda
Che a te vien sui sospir del dolore;
Tu clemente consola, O Signore,
Per la vergin cui l'empio immolò!
(Elv. quasi tornando a vedere Art. che fugge.)

ELV: Ti veggo—già fuggi—O ingrato, abbandoni
Chi tanto t'amò! Arturo—Oh Dio!—No!—

CORO: Ahi dura sciagura, ahi lutto e dolor!
Sì bella, sì pura del ciel creatura
Nel dì del diletto schernita tradita
Andrà maladetto il vil traditor.

ELV: Qua! febbre vorace m'uccide—mi sface—
Quai fiamma, qual' ira mi avvampa e martira!
Fantasmi perversi fuggite dispersi!—
O in tanto furur sbranatemi il cor.

PURI E POI TUTTI: Maledizione!
Non casa, non spiaggia raccolga i fuggenti!
Io odio del cielo, in odio a'viventi,
Battuti dai venti, da orrende tempeste,
Le odiate lor teste non possan posar!
Erranti, piangenti in orrida guerra
Cor cielo, la terra il mar, gli elementi—
Ognor maladetti in vita ed in morte,
Sia eterna lor sorte eterno il penar!

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO.

MEN: He is so false.

WOMEN: She is so candid.

MEN: He such a traitor.

ALL: Unhappy maiden!
She will die of love.

RICH & CHO: Oh! how your mind is filled with sorrow!
Hearing the sighs of this poor heart.
Oh! how perfidious was the traitor
That brought on her so much affliction!

SIR G: O God of Mercy, my life I offer.
If to the innocent you will give aid.
Ah! be propitious to a heart so pure,
And show thy power against the traitor.

RICH: The more I see her, the more I grieve,
And greater love for her I feel;
But more my fury becomes enflamed
Against him who stole this treasure from me.

SIR G: My pious prayer, deep and sincere,
Which comes to you on wings of grief,
Receive it kindly, O, Lord of bounty,
For this poor maiden, that traitor's victim.
(Elv. as if she saw Art. again escaping)

ELV: I see you—you flew. Ungrateful! You left.
Your lover so true. Oh, Arthur! heavens! No.

CHO: Oh, bitter misfortune! Oh, mourning and grief!
So handsome, so pure, beloved of Heaven.
Deceived on the morning that promised her joy,
A curse shall pursue this vilest of traitors.

ELV: What fever, devouring, now seizes my brain!
What flame and what rage my heart is consuming!
O, phantoms perverse! go, fly, an disperse,
Or madly my heart come tear from my bosom.

PURI & CHORUS: Malediction!
Let nor house nor shore the flyers receive!
By Heaven abandoned, disliked by men,
The sport of the winds, oppressed by the storms,
May their heads never find place of repose.
Bewailing, and wandering in horrible contest
With heaven and earth, the sea and the elements,
For ever detested in life and death.
May their fate and their woes be eternal!

End of the First Act.

ATTO II.

SCENA I.

Gran Sala con porte laterali.

Castellani è Castellane, Puritani, e Bruno.

TUTTI: Piangon le ciglia—Si spezza il cor—
L'inferma figlia—morrà d'amor

1: Il duol l'invase?

2: La vidi errante
Tra folte piante—

3: Or per sue case
Gridando va—"Pietà—Pietà!"

TUTTI: Piangon le ciglia—Si spezza il cor—
L'inferma figlia—morrà d'amor!

SCENA II.

Giorgio dagli appartamenti d' Elvira: poi Riccardo con foglio.

DON: Qual novella?

GIO: Or prende posa.

TUTTI: Miserella!

DON: E ognor dolente?

GIO: Mesta e lieta—

DON: E senza tregua?

GIO: Splende il senno—or si dilegua
All misera innocente.

TUTTI: Come mai?

GIO: Dir lo poss' io?
Se nel duol che m'ange il seno,
Ogui voce trema e muor!

CORO: Deh favella—

GIO: Mi lasciate.

CORO: Ten preghiamo—

GIO: Ah nò—cessate!

BRU E CORO: Deh ti muova quell' ambascia
Che ci aggrava al tuo dolor!

GIO: Siate paghi—v' appressate!
Cinta di rose e col bel crin disciolto
Talor la cara vergine s'aggira:
E chiede all' aura e ai fior cou mesto volta:
"Ove andò Elvira."
Bianco-vestita, e qual se all' arra innante,
Adempie al rito, e va cantando: il giuro.
Poi grida, per amor tutta tremante—
"Ah vieni, Arturo."

CORO: Ahi, figlia misera delira amor!
Quarto fu barbaro il sedduttor!

ACT II.

SCENE I.

A large Room with side doors.

Villagers, Puritans, and Bruno.

ALL: All eyes are weeping—all hearts are breaking.
The afflicted girl of love will die.

1: Grief has seized her.

2: I saw her wandering
Amongst the groves.

3: Sometimes, at home,
She is heard to exclaim, "Ah! pity! pity!"

ALL: All eyes are weeping—all hearts are breaking.
The afflicted girl of love will die.

SCENE II.

Enter Sir George from the apartments of Elvira, then Richard, with a paper.

WOMEN: What fresh news?

SIR G: She is now reposing.

ALL: Ah! poor girl!

WOMEN: Is she still weeping?

SIR G: Sad and joyful.

WOMEN: Takes she rest?

SIR G: Now she shows wisdom and now
The poor girl appears insane.

ALL: How is this?

SIR G: Can I tell it?
When oppressed by so much grief,
All my words die on my lips.

CHO: Pray do speak.

SIR G: Ah! let me rest.

CHO: We bespeech.

SIR G: Ah! do desist.

BRU, CHO: Be you moved by this affliction
That your grief has raised in us.

SIR G: I will grant your wish. Approach.
With roses crowned, and with her hair disheveled,
The maiden dear now wandering is seen,
Demanding of the air and of the flowers, "Where is Elvira?"
Now enrobed, in white, and as before the altar.
The rites performing, she repeats the oath,
Then, trembling, cries, in ecstasy of love,
"Ah! come, dear Arthur."

CHO: Ah! unhappy girl! deranged by love.
Cruel indeed was her betrayer.

GIO: Geme talor, qual tortore amorosa,
Or cade vinta da mortal sudore:
Or l' odi al suon dell' arpa lamentosa
Cantar d' amore!
Or scorge Arturo nell' altrui sembiante—
Poi del suo inganno accorta e di sua sorte,
Geme, piange, s' affanna e ognor più ammante,
Invoca morte.

CORO: Ahi, figlia misera morrà d' amor!—
Scenda una folgore sul traditor!
(Alle ultime parole entra Ric. con un foglio.)

RIC: Di sua folgore il ciel non sarà lento!
"A scure infame è Artùr Talbot dannato
"Dall' Anglican sovrano Parlamento."

CORO: E giusto fato!

RIC: Quaggiù, nel mal che questa valle serra,
A' buoni e a'tristi è memorando esempio.

CORO: Se la destra di Dio tremenda afferra
Il crin dell' empio!
(Ric. scorre coll' occhio il foglio che tiene aperto. Segue a proclamare li decreti del Parlamento.)

RIC: Di Valton l'innocenza a voi proclama
Il Parlamento, e a' primi onor lo chiama—

CORO: Qual doglia, Valton, se vedran tua ciglia
Insana ancor la tua diletta figlia!—

RIC: Ed essa? infuria ognor?—

GIO: Sol quando un suon marzial misera sente
Più ricorda il fuggir del caro amente
E allor fassi furente.

RIC: E non v' ha speme
Alcuna?

GIO: Medic' arte n' assecura
Che una subita gioja, o gran sciagura
Potria sanar la mente sua smarrita.

CORO: Qual mai t' attenda, O Artur, pena infinita!

RIC: In me duce premier, parla Cromvello.
Il vil, ch'e ognor in fuga,
E di sangue civil macchiò Inghilterra,
Cercate or voi. E se sua rea fortuna,
O malizia lo tragga a questa terra,
Non abbia grazia, è pietade alcuna.
(Il Coro parte.)

SIR G: At times she sighs like a loving dove;
At times she sinks oppressed by her great woes;
And then she is heard at her lamenting harp,
Singing of love.
At times she takes another face for Arthur's;
Then her mistake perceiving, and her fate,
She sighs and weeps, and, loving more than ever,
She invokes death.

CHO: Unhappy girl! love will kill her.
May thunder fall upon the traitor!
(At the last words, Richard enters with a paper.)

RICH: The thunder is not far from striking Arthur,
"He stands condemned to die a traitor's death
His sentence is decreed by Parliament."

CHO: It is but just.

RICH: Amongst the woes that this sad world contains,
It is a warning for the good and bad.

CHO: When God's right hand avenging falls upon the wicked man.
(Rich. glances over the paper, and proceeds to proclaim the decree of Parliament.)

RICH: Likewise the Parliament proclaims the innocence of Walton, and gives him back his honors.

CHO: What grief for Walton, if he's condemned to see his darling daughter Still out of mind!

RICH: Is she still mad?

SIR G: If martial sounds the unhappy girl but hears
They suddenly recall her lover's flight,
And frantic she becomes.

RICH: Is there no hope?

SIR G: The art of healing still declares, assures,
That an event of sudden joy or woe
Alone could cure again her mind distracted.

CHO: What endless pain now, Arthur, waits for you!

RICH: I, Colonel of Cromwell, in his name this to you make known. The traitor, still a fugitive, and who has stained the English ground with civil blood, must be searched for by you. And should he, either by his adverse fortune or his bad designs, be brought back to this land, let him not find grace nor pity.
(Exit Chorus.)

SCENE III.

Elvira e detti.

ELV: O rendetemi la speme
(Dentro la Scena.)
O lasciatemi morir.

GIO: Essa qui vien—la senti?
O come è grave il suon de' suoi lamenti!
(Esce Elv. scapigliata e in veste bianca.)

ELV: Quì la voce sua soave
Mi chiamava—e poi sparì
Quì giurava esser fedele,
Poi crudele—ei mi fuggì!
Ah, mai più qui assorti insieme
Nella gioia dei sospir?—
Ah rendetemi la speme
Oh lasciatemi morir!

GIO, RIC: (Qanto amore è mai raccolto
In quel volto e in quel dolor!)

ELV: Chi sei tu?—
(Dopo una pausa a Gio.)

GIO: Non mi ravvisi?

ELV: Padre mio?—mi chiamai al Tempio?
Non è sogno—oh Arturo—oh amor!
A tu sorridi—asciughi il pianto!
A Imen mi guidi—al ballo, al canto!
Ognun s'appresta a nozze, a festa,
E meco in danza esulterà.
Tu pur meco danzerai?
(Si volta, e vede Ric., lo prende per la mano.)
Vieni a nozze!

GIO E RIC: (Oh Dio!)

ELV: Egli piange.
Egli piange! ei forse amò!
(a Gio. in disparte e sotto voce—poi torna a fissare Ric.: poi gli afferra la mano e tornando ad atteggiarsi dolorosamente.)

RIC E GIO: (Chi frenar il pianto può!)

ELV: M'odi e dimmi, amasti mai!
(a Ric.)

RIC: Gli occhi affisa in sul mio volto,
Ben mi guarde e lo vedrai—

ELV: Ah se piangi—Ancor tu sai
Che un cor fido nell' amor,
Sempre vive di dolor!
(Si abbandona al pianto. Gio. l'abbraccia.)

GIO: Deh! ti acqueta, O mia diletta,
Tregua al duol dal tempo aspetta.

ELV: Mai!

RIC E GIO: Clemente il Cie! ti fia.

ELV: Mai!—

SCENE III.

Elvira within.

ELV: Either restore hope to me,
Or let me die in pity.

SIR G: (Here she comes—did you hear her?
O, how grievous is the voice of her laments!)
(Enter Elv. with looks and actions indicating loss of reason.)

ELV: Here his voice, so soft and sweet,
Called on me—then died away;
Here he swore he would be faithful:
Then, cruel man, he fled from me.
Never more shall we together
Feel the rapture of our love!
Either hope restore to me,
Or in pity let me die.

SIR G, RICH: How much love is there expressed
In her face and through her grief!

ELV: Who are you?
(To Sir G.)

SIR G: Do you not know me?

ELV: Father called me to church?
It is no dream. Arthur! oh, love!
Ah! You smile!—Dry your tears.
We go to the altar, to dance and sing;
Each one prepares for nuptial feasts,
And, full of joy, will dance with me.
You too shall join the dance with me.
(Perceiving Rich., and taking him by the hand.)
Come to the wedding.

SIR G & RICH: Oh heavens?

ELV: He is weeping.
Yes; he weeps: perhaps he loved
(Aside to Sir G., then, regarding Rich., grasps his hand, and abandons herself again to grief.)

RICH & SIR G: (Who can now refrain from tears!)

ELV: (To Rich.) Hear me; say, have you once loved?

RICH: (To Elv.) Cast your eyes upon this face.
And you soon will know the truth.

ELV: If you have wept, you must know
That a loving, faithful heart
Is for ever fed with grief. (Elv. abandons herself to grief. Sir G. embraces her.)

SIR G: Calm yourself my dearest love;
Time will dispel all your pangs.

ELV: Never!

RICH & SIR G: Heaven will pity you.

ELV: Never!

RIC E GIO: L'ingrato ormai oblia.	RICH & SIR G: Ah! forget the traitor.
ELV: Ah! mai più ti rivedrò!	ELV: Never more shall I see you.
RIC E GIO: (Si fa mia la sua ferita. Mi dispera e squarcia il cor.)	RICH, SIR G: All her woes become my own; She rends my heart to pieces.
ELV: O toglietemi la vita, O rendetemi il mio amor!	ELV: Either take my life away, Or restore my love to me.
RIC E GIO: Tornò il riso in sul suo aspetto, Qual pensiero a lei brillò?	RICH, SIR G: Now her face appears serene. What sweet thought revives her mind?
ELV: Non temer del padre mio! Co' miei pianti il placherò— Ogni affanno andrà in oblio, Tanto amor consolerò!	ELV: Have no fear of my dear father; By these he will be appeased; All our woes will be forgotten; So much love shall have reward.
GIO: (Essa in pene è abbandonata Sogna il gaudio che perdè!—)	SIR G: (By her sorrows she is bewildered, And she dreams of lost content.)
RIC: (Qual bell' alma innamorata Un rival rapiva a me!)	RICH: (What a sweet and loving creature Was a rival from me taking!)
ELV: Vien, diletto, è in ciel la luna: Tutto tace intorno intorno: Fin che spunti in ciel il giorno, Vien, ti posa sul mio cor! Deh t' affretta, O Arturo mio, Riedi, O caro, alla tua Elvira; Esssa piange, e ti sospira. Riedi, O caro, al primo amor—	ELV: Come, my dear, the moon is shining; All is mute and calm around; The day shall rise in heaven, Come, repose, upon my heart. Alas! hasten, my dear Arthur; Quick return to your Elvira; She now weeps and sighs for you; Quick return to your first love.
RIC E GIO: Possa un dì, bella infelice, Mercè aver di tanto affetto: Possa un giorno nel diletto Obbliare il suo dolor!	SIR G, RICH: May, one day, unhappy beauty, Your great love meet its reward. May, one day, in sweet delights Your misfortunes be forgotten.
GIO: Ricovrarti ormai t'addice.	SIR G: Now it is better that you retire.
BRU: Stende notte il cupo orror—	BRU: Night overspreads her mantle dark.

SCENA IV.

SCENE IV.

Giorgio osserva all' intorno; poi afferra pel braccio Riccardo, come uno che parlando mostra sapere un suo grave segreto.	Sir George looks around, then takes hold of Richard's arm with the air of one knowing a great secret.
GIO: Il rival salvar tu devi, Il rival salvar tu poi.	SIR G: You must save your rival. You can save your rival.
RIC: Io nol posso—	RICH: I cannot.
GIO: Tu non vuoi?	SIR G: You will not.
RIC: No!	RICH: No.
GIO: Tu il salva!	SIR G: Save him.
RIC: Ei perirà—	RICH: He shall die.
GIO: Tu quell' ora ben rimembri Che fuggì la prigioniera?	SIR G: Do you remember the hour When the prisoner escaped?
RIC: Sì—	RICH: Yes.
GIO: D' Arturo fu colpa interna?	SIR G: Was it Arthur's fault?
RIC: Tua favella ormai— (Quasi sdegnandosi.)	RICH: At last this speech— (Becoming indignant.)
GIO: E vera!	SIR G: Is true.
RIC: Parla aperto!— (Come sopra.)	RICH: Speak freely.
GIO: Ho detto assai! (Come sopra.)	SIR G: I've said enough.
RIC: Fu voler del Parlamento Se ha colui la pena estrema, Dei ribelli l' ardimento In Artur si domera. Io non l' odio, io nol pavento, Ma l' indegno perirà—	RICH: It was the will of Parliament That sentenced him to die. The boldness of the rebels Will be repressed in Arthur. I hate him not, nor fear him; But die the traitor must.
GIO: Un geloso e reo tormento Or t' invade e acceca—Ah trema! Il rimorso e lo spavento La tua vita strazierà— Se il rival per te fia spento Un' altr' alma il seguirà!	SIR G: A jealous, guilty torment Invades your soul—But tremble! Remorse and constant fright Will make your life most wretched. If your rival is doomed at your hands, Another death shall follow.
RIC: Chi?	RICH: Whose?
GIO: Due vittime farai, E dovunque tu n' adrai L' ombra lor ti seguirà! Se tra il bujo un fantasma vedrai Bianco lieve—che geme e sospira Sarà Elvira, che mesta s' aggira, E ti grida: io son morta per te. Quando il cielo è in tempesta più scuro S' odi un' ombra affannosa che freme Sarà Artur che t' incalza, ti preme, Ti minaccia de' morti il furor!	SIR G: You would make fall two victims, And wherever you should go, Their shades will pursue you. If a phantom by night you should see, Pale and light, that is moaning and sighing, It's Elvira, who wanders in sorrow, And cries to you—"You were the cause of my death." When the storm in the sky is raging, If you hear a shadow complaining, It will be Arthur that follows your steps, And each moment is threatening your death.
RIC: Se d' Elvira il fantasma dolente M' apparisce e m' incalzi e s' ardiri, Le mie preci, i singulti, i sospiri Mi sapranno ottenere mercè. Se l' odiato fantasma d' Arturo Sanguinoso surgesse d' Averno, Ripiombarlo agli abissi in eterno Lo farebbe il mio immenso furor!	RICH: If the shade of the weeping Elvira Comes to me in complaints and in anger, My warm prayers, my sobs and my sighs Will obtain my pardon from her soul. If the detested phantom of Arthur Should arise from the regions of woe, My fury would for ever hurl Him again to the realms of the wicked.
GIO: Il duol che sì mi accora Vinca la tua bell' anima—	SIR G: The grief that I now feel May move your noble soul.
RIC: Han vinto le tue lacrime— Mira—ho bagnato il ciglio.	RICH: Your tears have conquered me; Behold, I also weep.
a 2: Chi ben la Patria adora Onoro la pietà.	BOTH: Who truly loves his country, Knows how to feel compassion.
RIC: Se inerme ed in periglio— Salvo ei per te sarà.	RICH: If helpless and in danger, I will save him for you.
GIO: Sì; il salva!—	SIR G: Yes, save him.
RIC: E dall' esiglio Contro la Patria libera Se armato ei qui verrà?—	RICH: Should he come Against his country's freedom From his exile in arms?
GIO: Mia man non è ancor gelida, Con te il combatterà.	SIR G: My arm is not yet withered; We both will fight against him.
RIC: Forse dell' alba al sorgere (Con mistero.) L' oste ci assalirà— S' ei vi sarà!—	RICH: Perhaps at break of day The foe will attack. If he be there?
GIO: Morrà! Sia voce di terror Patria, vittoria, onor!	SIR G: He dies. The cry of terror be— Victory, country, and honor!

a 2: Suoni la tromba, e intrepido
Io pugnerò da forte,
Bello è affrontar la morte
Gridando libertà.
Amor di Patria impavido
Mieta i sanguigni allori
Poi terga i bei sudoni
E i pianti la pietà.

RIC: All' alba!

GIO: All' alba!

a 2: All' alba!
Alba che sorgi a un popolo
Che a libertà s' affidi,
Giuliva a lui sorridi
Nunzia d' eterno Sol.
Alba, che sorgi ai perfidi
Tiranni della terra
Sii nunzia a lor di guerra,
Alba d' eterno duol.

GIO: Il patto è gia fermato,
Se Artur è inerme o vinto?—

RIC: Avra pieta e conforto—

GIO: Se vien ascoso e armato?—

RIC: Ei sara avvinto e morto!–

Fine Dell' Atto Secondo.

ATTO III.

SCENA I.

Loggia in un giardino e boschetto vicino alla casa di Elvira. La casa internamente vedesi da varie lampade illuminata.

Arturo, e poi Elvira.

ART: Son salvo, alfin son salvo. I miei nemici
Falliro il colpo, e mi smarrir di traccia.
Oh patria—oh amore, onnipossenti nomi!
Quanti' io vi sento e adoro! ad ogni passo
Mi balza il cor nel seno e benedico
Ogni tronco, ogni fronda ed ogni sasso—
Oh com' e' dolce a un esule infelice
Dopo il misero errar di riva in riva,
Toccar alfin la terra sua nativa:
Vedere ed abbracciar colei che in core
Gli fu scolpita per la man d' amore!
(S' intravvede fra i vetri del palazzo Elvira, vestita di bianco. Essa, non vista da Arturo, trapazza sola e cantando.)

ELV: A una fonte afflitto e solo
S' assiedeva un trovador;
E a sfogar l' immenso duolo,
Sciolse un cantico d' amor—

ART: La mia canzon d' amore? ah Elvira, al Elvira, Ove t' aggiri tu? Nessun risponde!
A te cos' io contava
Di queste selve tra la dense fronde,
E tu allor facevi eco al cantar mio!—
Deh! si ascoltasti l' amoroso canto—
Odi un esulo afflito, odi il mio pianto.
A una fonte afflito e solo
S' assiedeva un trovador,
Toccò l' arpa, e suonò duolo;
Sciolse un canto e fu dolor!
Corre a valle, corre a monte
L' esiliato pellegrin;
Ma il dolor gli è sempre a fronte,
Gli è compagno nel cammin.
Brama il Sole, allorch' è sera:
Brama sera, allorch' è Sol:
Gli par verno primavera:
Ogni riso gli par duol.
(Sentesi un sordo battere di tamburo entro la scene.)
Qual suon?—gente s' appressa.

CORO 1: Agli spaldi—
(Sommessamente entro la scene.)

2: Alle torri sara.

TUTTI: Si cherchera—non sfuggira.

ART: Ove m' ascondo?
Ah! l'orde di Cromvello
Sono ancor di me in traccia.
(Art. si ritira.)
—Ad altro lato
Vanno i furenti, perchè mai non oso
Porre il piè dentro le adorate soglie?—
Dire a Elvira il mio duol, la fede mia?—
Ah no—perder potrei
Me stesso e lei—Tentiani di nuovo il canto!
A me forse verra, se al cuor le suona,
Quasi a richiamo de' bei dì felici
Quando uniti dicemmo: io t' amo, io t' amo
Cerca il sonno a notte scura
L' esiliato pellegrin:
Sogna e il desta la sciagura
Della patria—e il suo destin!
Sempre eguali ha i luoghi e l' ore
L'infelice trovador—
L'esiliato allorchè muore,
Ha sol posa al suo dolor!

SCENA II.

Elvira ed Arturo in dis parte. Elvira esce con un andare smarrito, poi si ferma quasi in atto di stare in ascolto.

ELV: Finì—Me lassa!—Oh come dolce all' alma
Mi scendea quella voce!—O Dio finì!
Mi parve—Ahi rimembranze, ahi vani sogni!
Ah mio Arturo; ove sei!

ART: A piedi tuoi!
Elvira, ah mi perdona!
(Inginochiandosi.)

BOTH: Let trumpets sound, and bravely
And fearless I shall fight.
It is fine to meet our death,
For ever crying "Liberty!"
Intrepid love of country
Let reap the blood-stained laurel;
Then let us be rewarded
By softest hand of pity.

RICH: At dawn.

SIR G: At dawn.

BOTH: At dawn.
O, day! that on a nation,
Which trusts in freedom, rises
Propitious on us shine;
Bring us eternal glory.
To all perfidious tyrants
That live upon this earth,
Be messenger of war,
And of eternal grief.

SIR G: The agreement is concluded.
If Arthur is defenseless—

RICH: He'll find support and pardon.

SIR G: If he returns in arms—

RICH: He shall be doomed to die.

End of the Second Act.

ACT III.

SCENE I.

A garden and a grove near Elvira's house. Elvira's house is lighted up.

ART: I am saved; at last I am saved. My foes have missed their aim and lost my trace. O, my dear country! O, my beloved! mighty names! How much I feel your power, and how I adore you both! At every step my heart beats stronger: every tree, every leaf, every stone, I bless. Oh! how sweet it is for an unhappy exile, after sadly wandering from shore to shore, to reach once more his native land!—to see and embrace her whom love so strongly has on his heart imprinted! (Elvira, dressed in white, and unperceived by Arthur, is seen passing by the windows of her house.)

ELV: At a fountain, sad and lonely,
A troubadour once was sitting,
And, to solace his deep grief,
Raised on high a song of love.

ART: My own love-song! Oh, Elvira! where are you? No one replies. Thus to you I sung amidst the branches of this shady grove, and then you made the echo to my song. Alas! if once my song of love you heard, hear now a sad exile, hear now my woes.
At a fountain, sad and lonely,
A troubadour was sitting;
Strains of grief came from his harp,
Songs of woe came from his lips.
Through the vales, over the mountains
The banished pilgrim goes in haste!
Grief is always by his side,
Sad companion of his journey.
When it is day he longs for night;
When it is night he longs for day.
He mistakes the spring for winter;
Every smile to him seems sorrow.
(A distant sound of drums is heard.)
What sound is that? Some one approaches.

1ST CHO: (Within.) Near the ramparts—

2ND CHO: Near the tower he must be.

ALL: We will search—he shall not escape.

ART: Where can I hide? Ah! the troops of Cromwell are still in pursuit of me! (Arthur withdraws.) My fierce pursuers go that way. Why dare I not set foot within this palace, where my love is, and declare to Elvira my constancy and my sorrows? Ah! no—it might cause my ruin, and her's too. Let me try the song once more. Perhaps she will come to me, should it reach her heart. It may recall those days of bliss when we said to each other, "I love you, I love you."
When the night is wrapped in gloom,
The banished pilgrim seeks sleep;
Dreams, and starts at the misfortune
Of his country and of his fate.
Every place and hour is equal
For the unhappy troubadour
Only when the exile is dead,
Can his sufferings find repose.

SCENE II.

Elvira is seen through the windows approaching, and Arthur, hearing a slight noise, withdraws. She enters with faltering steps, and as if listening.

ELV: It has ceased! Unhappy me? Oh! how sweetly that voice has touched my heart! Heavens! it has ceased! It seemed—Oh, sweet memory! Oh, vain dreams! Oh, my dear Arthur! where are you?

ART: At your feet. (Kneeling.) Elvira, pardon me!

ELV: Arturo? è desso (Gettandosi nelle sue braccia.) Sei pur tu—Or non m'inganni?	ELV: Arthur! (Falling into his arms.) Is it you? Do you deceive me now?
ART: Ingannarti? Ah no giammia.	ART: Deceive you! Ah, never!
ELV: Io vacillo—temo affanni.	ELV: I tremble. I fear new sorrows.
ART: Non temer—spariro i guai, Ove a noi sorride amor!	ART: Do not fear; the woes are fled, When on us again Love smiles.
a 2: Nel mirarti un solo instante, Io sospiro e mi consolo D'ogni pianto, d' ogni duolo.	BOTH: In beholding you for one moment, My heart sighs and feels relief From all troubles, from all tears,
ART: Che provai lontan da te.	ART: That I shed afar from you.
ELV: Ch' ei provò lontan da me! Quanto tempo! Lo rammenti!	ELV: That he shed afar from me. Is it long? Do you remember?
ART: Fur tre mesi!	ART: It is three months.
ELV: Ah no—tre socoli (Con entusiasmo.) Fur tre secoli d'orror! Ti chiamava ad ogni instante: Riedi, o Arturo—e mi consola, E rompeva ogni palola Coi signulti del dolor!	ELV: Ah? no—three ages (With enthusiasm.) Of deep sighs, of great horror. I repeated at each moment, "Come, dear Arthur—give me comfort;" And each word remained unfinished, Interrupted by my sobs.
ART: Deh perdona! Ella era misera Prigioniera—abbandonata; In periglio.	ART: Alas! pardon—she was wretched, And a prisoner forsaken, In great danger.
ELV: E l' hai tu amata?	ELV: (With eagerness.) Have you loved her?
ART: Io?—Colei?	ART: I?—her?
ELV: Non è tua sposa?	ELV: Is she not your wife?
ART: Chi dir l' oso?	ART: Who said so?
ELV: Io il chiedo, O Arturo!	ELV: I ask it, Arthur!
ART: Mi credevi si spergiuro? Da quel dì ch' io ti mirai Avvampai d' un solo ardore, Per te fido insin che muore Il mio core avvamperà La mia vita io ti sacrai Nella la gioia e nel dolore E la morte per amore Cara e santa a me sarà.	ART: Could you think me so forsworn? From the day I saw you first, For your love I only burnt! To you faithful until death Will my heart forever burn. I devoted my life to you. In my joy and in my grief, And my death for your dear love Will be sweet and holy to me.
ELV: Oh parole d' amore—lieta son io! Ei non l'amava adunque; oh Arturo mio! Da quel dì che a te giurai, Solo appresi aver il core; E a te fido infin che muore Questo cor palpitera. La mia vita io ti sacrai Nella gioia e nel dolore— E la morte per amore Cara e santa a me sarà.	ELV: O, words of love! I am now happy again. He then has loved her not! O, my dear Arthur! From the day I swore to you Only, I learnt I had no heart: To you faithful until death My heart will forever beat. I devoted my life for you Whether it be said or joyful: And to die for your dear love Will be sweet and holy to me.
ART: Tua crudel dubbiezza amara Deponesti, e paga or sei?	ART: Are your bitter doubts removed? Is your heart at last content?
ELV: Dì—se a te non era cara, A chè mai seguir colei?	ELV: If to you she was not dear, Say why you followed her
ART: Or t'infingi, o ignori ch' ella Presso a morte.	ART: Do you feign, or did you not know That she was doomed to die?
ELV: Chi favella!	ELV: Who? speak?
ART: La Regina.	ART: Who? the Queen.
ELV: La Regina?	ELV: What! the Queen?
ART: Un indugio—e la meschina Su d' un palco a morte orribile.	ART: But one moment, and the unfortunate On the scaffold would have perished.
ELV: E fia ver? qual lume rapido Or balena al mio pensier!— Dunque m' ami?	ELV: Is this true? What sudden light Comes to illumine all my thoughts? Still you love me?
ART: E puoi temer?	ART: Can you fear?
ELV: Dunque vuoi?—	ELV: Then you wish—
ART: Star teco ognor Tra gli amplessi dell' amor. Vieni fra le mie braccia Amor, delizia e vita, Non mi sarai rapita Or che ti stringo al cor. Ansante, ognor tremante Si chiamo—e ognor ti bramo— Vien; mi ripeti: io t' amo T' amo d' immenso amor.	ART: To remain Ever faithful to your love. Unto my arms returns My love, delight, and life; No more shall we be parted, Since now we meet again. All breathless, ever trembling, I call and wish for thee; Come, say you are my love; I love you past all bounds.
ELV: Caro, non ho parola Ch' esprima il mio contento: L' alma elevar mi sento In estasi d' amor. Ansante—ognor tremante Ti chiamo e te sol bramo E mille volte, io t' amo, A te ripete il cor. (Odesi ancora il suono del tamburo.)	ELV: My dear, I have no words That can express my joy; I feel my soul transported With ecstasies of love. All breathless, ever trembling, I call and wish for you? And you I love, my heart repeats A thousand times. (A drum is heard again.)
ART: Ancor quel suon funesto, i meie nemici!	ART: Again this dreaded sound! My enemies!
ELV: Si, quel suon funesto: Io conosco vuel suonma—tu non sai Che più nol tempo ormai!—nella mia stanza Squarciai il vel di che s' ornò sua testa— Calpestai le sue pompe—ed all' aura— Con me tu ancora— Verrai a festa e danza.	ELV: That fatal sound! (She begins to seem again distracted.) I know that sound; but you know that I no longer fear it. In my room, I tore the veil with which, one day, her head was adorned—I trampled upon her finery—and at the dawn—with me again you shall come to sport and dance.
ART: Oh Dio, che dici! (Art. la guarda con stupore.)	ART: Heavens? what do you say? (Looking at her with fright.)
ELV: Così come tu guardi, Mi guardan essi, e intender mai son sanno Il parlar—il mio riso—il duol, l' affanno!	ELV: As you look at me, so do they, and can never understand my words, my laughter, and my grief.
ART: Oh ti scuoti—tu vaneggi! (Sentensi da parti opposte dentro il boschetto le voci di varii drappelli d' Armigeri.	ART: Return to your senses. You are raving. (Voices of Soldiers are heard within.)
1: Alto là!	1: Who goes there?
2: Fedel drappello—	2: A faithful band.

2: Anglia Cromvello!	2: England and Cromwell.

ART: Vien.	ART: Come.

ELV: T' arresti il mio dolor!

ART: Taci!

ELV: O genti—Ei vuol fuggir!

ART: Taci!

ELV: Aiuto—per pieta!

ART: Ah!

SCENA III.

Riccardo, Giorgio, Bruno, Armigeri, con facelle, Castellani, e Castellane.

GIO: E qui Arturo?

RIC: Arturo!

TUTTI: Arturo!

RIC: Cavalier, ti colse ilanume
Punitor de' tradimenti.

ARMI: Pera ucciso fra tormenti
Chi tradiva patria e onor!

GIO, DONNE: Oh' infelice! Un destin rio
A tal spiaggia or ti guidò!

RIC, ARMI: Talbo Artur, la Patria e Dio
Te alla morte condannò!

ELV: Morte!

ARMI: A morte!

LE DONNE: Ahi qual terror!

ARMI: Dio raggiunge i traditor!

ELV: Che ascoltai?—

DONNE: (Si tramutò!—)
Si fè smorta—ed avvampò!

GIO, RIC: Se avra il senno?—avra più lacrime
Nel mirar chi per lei muor!

ELV: Qual mia funerea
Voce funesta
Mi scuote e desta
Dal mio martir!
Io fui sì barbara—
Lo trassi a morte!—
M' avra consorte
Nel suo morir!

RIC: Quel suon funereo
Ch' apre una tomba,
Cupo rimbomba,
M' infonde orror
Lor sorte orribile
Spense gia l' ira
Mi affanna e inspira
Pieta e dolor.

ARMI: Quel suon funereo,
Ch' apre una tomba,
Cupo rimbomba,
Infonde orror.
E Dio terribile
In sua vendetta,
Gli empii ei saetta
Sterminator!—

ELV: Remain—behold my grief.

ART: Silence.

ELV: Friends, he wants to fly.

ART: Silence.

ELV: Help, for pity's sake.

ART: Ah!

SCENE III.

Enter Richard, Sir George, Bruno, Soldiers with torches, and Villagers.

SIR G: Where is Arthur?

RICH: Arthur!

ALL: Arthur!

RICH: Cavalier, the sword of Justice will fall
On your traitorous head.

SOLDIERS: Yes; the traitor to his country
Must end his life in torments.

SIR G, WOM: Wretched man! a fatal doom
To this place have your steps have led.

RICH, SOLD: Arthur Talbot, men and God
Have decreed that you shall die.

ELV: To die!

SOLDIERS: Die!

WOMEN: Ah! what terror!

SOLDIERS: God the traitor always reaches.

ELV: What do I hear?

WOMEN: What sudden change! (Looking at Elv.)
She seemed dead—now she is all fire.

SIR G, RICH: If her reason she recovers,
She will shed for him more tears.

ELV: What is this mournful
Voice of horror,
That wakes my mind
From all its woes?
So cruel I was, to cause
His death
But I will share
The grave with him.

RICH: That fatal sound,
Proclaiming death has filled
My heart with dreadful awe
Their cruel destiny subdues
My rage
Inspires my soul
With softest pity.

SOLDIERS: That fatal sound,
Proclaiming death has filled,
Our hearts
With dreadful awe
Heaven is terrible
In its revenge;
It strikes the impious, destroys
Their works.

ART: Credeasi misera
Da me tradita!
Traea sua vita
In tal martir!
Or sfido i fulmini
Disprezzo il fato—
Se a lei d' allato
Potrò morir!

GIO: Quel suon funereo
Feral rimbomba
Nel sen mi piomba
M' agghiaccia il cor?
Sol posso, ahi, misero,
Tremar e fremere:
Non ha più lacrime
Il mio dolor!

DONNE: Quel suon funereo
Feral rimbomba,
Al cor ci piomba,
Gelar ci fa!
Pur fra le lagrime
Speme ci affida,
Che Dio ci arrida
Di sua pieta!

ARMI E BRUNO: Dio comanda a' figli suoi
Che giustizia alfin si renda—

RIC, GIO E DONNE: Sol ferocia or parla in voi?
La pietade—Idio v' apprenda.

ART: Deh ritorna a sensi tuoi—

ELV: Qual mi cade orribil benda?—

ART: O mia Elvira!—

ELV: E vivi ancora!

ART: Teco io sono—

ELV: Ah il tuo perdono!—
Per me a morte, O Arturo mio—

ART: Di tua sorte il reo sou io—

ELV E ART: Un amplesso!

BRU E UOMINI: Avvampo e fremo!

GIO, RIC E DONNE: Io gelo e tremo!

ART E ELV: Un addio!

TUTTI: : L' estremo!

ARMI: Cada alfin—l' ultrice spada
Sovra il capo al traditor—

ART: Arrestate—Vi scostate!
Paventate il mio furor:
Ella è tremante,
Ella è spirante,
Anime perfide
Sorde a pieta!
Un solo istante
L' ire affrenate,
Poi vi saziate,
Di crudelta!
(Coro. di Puritani.)

1: A vendetta sui ribaldi!

ART: Elvira thought
She was betrayed:
She passed her life
In tears and woes.
I brave the thunder,
I challenge the fate
If by her side
I now can die.

SIR G: That fatal sound,
Proclaiming death,
Falls on my breast
And makes me freeze.
Alas I can
Just fear and tremble;
In vain I try
To shed a tear.

CHO. OF WOMEN: That fatal sound,
Proclaiming death,
Falls on my heart,
And makes it freeze.
But, amidst our tears,
Still shines the hope,
That God with mercy
Will look on them.

SOLD, BRU: God commands that on the traitor the sword of Justice
Should fall.

RICH, SIR G, WOM: Fierceness only speaks in you.
To have pity, learn of God.

ART: Ah! resume your force of reason.

ELV: What a dreadful vail has fallen!

ART: O, my Elvira!

ELV: You still lives?

ART: Yes, for you.

ELV: Alas! your pardon.
Of your death I am the cause.

ART: And I caused all your misfortunes.

ELV AND ART: One embrace.

BRUNO AND MEN: I burn and rage!

SIR G, RICH AND WOMEN: I freeze, I tremble!

ART AND ELV: One farewell.

ALL: It is the last!

SOLDIERS: Let at last the sword of justice
Strike the traitor!

ART: Do not move.
Stand aside, or fear my rage.
She is all trembling,
She is expiring,
Inhuman beings,
Devoid of pity!
For a single moment
Restrain your anger,
Then gratify
Your cruel wish.

1ST SOLDIER: Now vengeance on the traitors!

2: A vendetta!
(All' improvviso tutti si fermano perche odesi èn suono di Corno da caccia: varii Armigeri Puritani escono ad esplorare, e tornano guidando un mesaggiero.)

TUTTI: Suon d' Araldi!
E un messag'gio?

DONNE: Un divin raggio!
Esploriam.

TUTTI: Che mai sara?

GIO: Esultate, ah si esultate.
Gia i Stuardi or vinto sono,
I captivi han gia perdono,
L' Anglia terra ha liberta!

RIC E PURI: A Cromvello—Onore e gloria!
La vittoria—il giudera!

ELV, ART: Dall' angoscia al gaudio estremo
Par quest' alma al Ciel rapita:
Ben so dir che sia la vita
Or che tuo/tua l'amor mi fa.

2ND SOLDIER: Yes; vengeance!
(A sound of trumpets is heard. Some soldiers go out and return with a messenger, who gives a letter to Sir G. who reads it with Rich.)

ALL: Sound of heralds!
Is it a message?

WOMEN: Some new hope!
Let us see.

ALL: What can it be?

SIR G: Rejoice, all! yes; all, rejoice!
Now the Stuarts are quite defeated;
All the captives have been pardoned;
Freedom now in England reigns.

RICH, SOLD: Fame and victory to Cromwell?
Glory will his banners follow.

ELV, ART: From deep woes to joys supreme.
Seems this soul to heaven conveyed.
Now the worth of life I know,
Since now love has made me yours.

CORO: Siate liete alme amorose,
Qual d'amor foste dolenti:
Lunghi dì per voi ridenti
Quest' istante segnera.

ELV E ART: Ah! sento, O mio bell' angelo,
Che poca è intera l' anima,
Per esultar nel giubilo
Che amor ci donera.
Benediro le lacrime
L' ansia, i sospir i gemiti,
Vanneggerò nel palpito
D' un' ebbra volutta—

CORO: Amor pietoso e tenero
Coronera di giubilo
L'ansia, i sospiri, i palpiti
Di tanta fedelta.

FINE.

CHORUS: May your love be now as merry
As it has before been wretched!
Long your days and quite serene,
May this moment for you sign.

ELV, ART: I feel, my charming angel,
That powerless is my heart
To exult in the great joy
Which love prepares for us.
I now shall bless my tears,
My sighs, my woes, my fears;
I shall be enraptured
In ecstasies of pleasure!

CHORUS: Love, favorable and tender,
Will crown, with great rejoicing
The throbbings and the sighs
Of these two faithful hearts.

THE END.

Les Pêcheurs de Perles (1863)

The Pearl Fishers

MUSIC BY GEORGES BIZET ■ LIBRETTO BY EUGÈNE CORMON (PIERRE ETIENNE PIESTRE) & MICHEL CARRÉ

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by Eugène Cormon (Pierre Etienne Piestre) and Michel Carré, premiered at the Théâtre-Lyrique in Paris on September 30, 1863. On a beach in Ceylon (now Sri Lanka), Zurga is elected king of the fishermen. He greets his friend, Nadir, whom he has not seen since they both renounced their love for the same woman; they vow eternal friendship. The old villagers escort a priestess to the clifftop while the fishermen are out diving. The heavily veiled priestess, having taken a vow of chastity, is Leïla, the woman who Zurga and Nadir renounced so long ago. She tells Nourabad, the High Priest, about the time she saved the life of a stranger and shows him the necklace she was given in reward. Thinking she is alone, she removes her veil. Nadir overhears her singing. Recognizing her, he declares his love rekindled. She returns his feelings; Nourabad enters and finds them together. Zurga angrily sentences them both to die. A raging storm breaks out, signifying the fury of the gods. Leïla begs Zurga to spare Nadir's life. She gives Zurga her necklace, and asks him to take it to to her mother. Zurga recognizes it as the one he gave to the girl who saved his life when he was a little boy, and decides to help Nadir and Leïla in repayment. He sets the village on fire, which distracts the fishermen, and the lovers flee. Finally, Zurga dies on the pyre for Leïla.

■ ACTE I

Une plage aride et sauvage de l'île de Ceylan.—A droite et à gauche quelques huttes en bambous et en nattes.—Au fond, sur un rocher qui domine la mer, les ruines d'une ancienne pagode indoue.—Au loin, la mer.

SCÈNE I

Au lever du riedau, les pêcheurs de l'île, couvrent le rivage.

CHOEUR: Sur la grève en feu
Où dort le flot bleu,
Nous dressons nos tentes!
Dansez jusqu'au soir,
Filles à l'oeil noir,
Aux tresses flottantes!
Chassez par vos chants
Les esprits méchants!
(Danses.)
Voilà notre domaine!
C'est ici que le sort
Tous les ans nous remène,
Prêts à braver la mort!
Sous la vague profonde,
Plongeurs audacieux
A nous la perle blonde
Cechée à tous les yeux!

Sur la grève en feu
Où dort le flot bleu.
(Danses.)

ZURGA: Amis, interrompez vos danses et vos jeux!
Il est temps de choisir un chef qui nous commande,
Qui nous protège et nous défende,
Un chef aimé de tous, vigilant, courageux!

LE CHOEUR: Celui que nous voulons pour maître
Et que nous choisissons pour roi . . . .

ZURGA: Quel est-il donc?—
Parlez!—
Faites-le-moi connaître!

LE CHOEUR: Ami Zurga c'est toi.

ZURGA: Qui?—
Moi!

LE CHOEUR: Oui, oui, sois notre chef! nous acceptons ta loi.

ZURGA: Vous me jurez obéissance?

LE CHOEUR: Nous te jurons obéissance!
A toi seul la toute-puissance!
Sois notre chef et notre roi!

ZURGA: (leur serrant la main.)
Eh bien, c'est dit! . . . c'est dit! je serai votre roi!
(Nadir paraît au fond et descend parmi les rochers.)

LE CHOEUR: Mais qui vient là?

ZURGA: (courant au-devant de Nadir.) Nadir! ami de ma jeunesse?
Est-ce bien toi que je revois?

LE CHOEUR: C'est Nadir, le coureur des bois!

NADIR: Nadir, votre ami d'autrefois!
Parmi vous, compagnons, que mon bon temps renaisse!

COUPLETS: Des savanes et des forêts
Où les trappeurs tendent leurs rêts
J'ai sondé l'ombre et le mystère!

SCENE I

At rise of curtain the fishermen of the island cover the shore.

CHORUS: On the fiery shore
Where the blue wave sleeps,
We dress our tents
And dance until night.
Girls of gloomy eyes,
With floating tresses,
Scatter
All evil spirits by your songs.
(Dances.)
CHORUS OF FISHERMEN: Here is our domain,
Here it is that fate,
Every year recalls us
Ready to brave death.
Under deepest wave,
Audacious divers,
For us the white pearl
Hidden from all eyes.

On the fiery shore,
Where
The blue wave sleeps, etc.

ZURGA: Friends, interrupt your dances and games!
It is time to choose a chief who will command us,
Who will protect and defend us
A chief beloved of all, vigilant, courageous . . .

CHORUS: He whom we wish for master
And whom we choose for King . . .

ZURGA: Who then is he?
Speak!
Let me know him!

CHORUS: Friend Zurga, it is you.

ZURGA: Who?—
Me!

CHORUS: Yes, yes, be our chief, we accept your law.

ZURGA: You swear to obey me?

CHORUS: We swear obedience to you,
To you alone all power,
Be our chief and our king!

ZURGA: (shaking hands.) Well then it is settled—I'll be your king!
(Nadir appears and descends to the rocks.)

CHORUS: But who comes here?

ZURGA: (running toward Nadir.)
Nadir, friend of my youth!
Is it you I see again?

CHORUS: It is Nadir, runner of the woods.

NADIR: Nadir, your friend of other days
Among you, companions, let the good time return.

SONG: In savannas and forests
Where the trappers set their traps
I've sounded shadow and mystery!
I've followed dagger in teeth,

Ce que j'ai fait hier, vous le feriez demain! Compagnons, donnons-nous la main!	NADIR: In the jungles and on the hills Haunted by wolves and demons, On that deserted shore, Far from towns and noise, I lived alone the day, the night, During the course of a year! ZURGA: Prends donc part à nos jeux! Ami, bois avec moi, danse et chante avec eux! Avant que la pêche commence, Saluons le soleil, l'air et la mer immense!	ZURGA: Take then part in our games. Friend, drink with me, dance and sing with them, Before the fishing begins Bow to the sun, to the air, to the immense ocean.

NADIR: Zurga!	NADIR: Zurga!
ZURGA: C'est toi!—toi qu'enfin je revois!— Après tant de longs jours, après de si longs mois, Où nous avons vécu séparés l'un de l'autre, Brahma nous réunit!—quelle joie est la nôtre! . . . Mais parle . . . es-tu resté fidèle à ton serment? Est-ce un ami que Dieu m'envoie, ou bien un traître? . . .	ZURGA: It is you! At last I see you again. After so many long days, after such long months, Where we have lived apart from one another, Brahma reunites us—what joy is ours. But speak, have you remained true to your oath?
NADIR: Le mal était profond . . . j'ai su m'en rendre maître!	NADIR: The hurt was deep . . . I have mastered it.
ZURGA: Eh bein, le verre en main, fêtons ce doux moment! Comme toi, je suis calme et comme toi j'oublie Un jour de fièvre et de folie! . . .	ZURGA: Well then, glass in hand, let's toast this sweet moment Like you I am calm and like you I forget A day of fever and folly! . . .
NADIR: Non, non, tu mens!—Le calme est venu pour toi,—mais L'oubli ne viendra jamais!	NADIR: No, no, you lie. The calm has come for you, But Forgetfulness will never come . . . .
ZURGA: Que dis-tu?	ZURGA: What are you saying?
NADIR: Quand tous deux nous toucherons à l'âge Où les rêves des jour passés De notre âme sont effacés, Tu te rappelleras notre dernier voyage; Notre dernière halte aux portes de Candi	NADIR: When both of us shall reach the age Where the dreams of days gone by Are wiped away from our souls You will remember our last voyage; Our final halt before the gates of Candy . . . .
ZURGA: C'était le soir;—dans l'air par la brise attiédi, Les bramines, au front inondé de lumière, Appelaient lentament la foule à la prière!	ZURGA: It was night;—in air warmed by the breeze The brahmins, their faces suffused with light, Slowly called the faithful to prayer . . . .
NADIR: (se levant.) Au fond du temple saint paré de fleurs et d'or, Une femme apparaît!—Je crois la voir encor.	NADIR: (rising.) In the depth of the sacred temple paved with flowers and gold, A woman appeared, I think to see her yet.
ZURGA: Un femme apparaît!—Je crois la voir encor!	ZURGA: A woman appears, I think I see her yet
NADIR: La foule prosternée La regarde étonnée, Et murmure tout bas: Voyez, c'est la déesse Qui dans l'ombre se dresse, Et vers nous tend les bras!	NADIR: The prostrate crowd Looks at her, astonished, And murmurs, lowly Look, it is the goddess That arises in the gloom, And stretches toward us her arms!
ZURGA: (se levant.) Oui, c'est elle! c'est elle! Plus charmante et plus belle Qui descend parmi nous! Son voile se soulève! . . . O vision! ô rêve! La foule est à genoux!	ZURGA: (rising.) Yes, it is she, it is she! More charming and beautiful Who descends among us. Her veil is raised . . . Oh vision, oh dream! The crowd is kneeling.

NADIR: Mais à travers la foule elle s'ouvre un passage!	NADIR: But amid the crowd she opens a passage!
ZURGA: Son long voile déjà nous cache son visage!	ZURGA: Her long veil now hides her face.
NADIR: Elle fuit!	NADIR: She flees!
ZURGA: Mon regard, hélas! la suit en vain!	ZURGA: My eyes, alas, follow her in vain.
NADIR: Et dans mon âme soudain Quelle étrange ardeur s'allume!	NADIR: And suddenly in my soul What a strange ardor gleams!
ZURGA: Quel feu nouveau me consume!	ZURGA: What new fire consumes me!
NADIR: Ta main repousse ma main!	NADIR: Your hand rejects my hand . . .
ZURGA: Ta main repousse ma main!	ZURGA: Your hand rejects my hand . . .
NADIR: De nos coeurs l'amour s'empare, Et nous change en ennemis!	NADIR: Love takes possession of our hearts, And changes us to enemies.
ZURGA: Non!—que rien ne nous sépare, Jurons de rester amis!	ZURGA: No—nothing must part us, Let's swear to stay friends.
ENSEMBLE: Amitié sainte, unis nos âmes fraternelles! Chassons sans retour Ce fatal amour! Et la main dans la main, en compagnons fidèles, Jusques à la mort, Ayons même sort! Oui, soyons amis jusques à la mort!	TOGETHER: Sacred friendship, unite our fraternal souls Drive away forever This fatal love And hand in hand, as faithful companions, We'll join our fates until our death Yes, we'll be friends unto death.

ZURGA: Depuis ce jour, fidéle à ma parole,
J'ai laissé fuir loin d'elle et les jours et les mois!

NADIR: Pour me guérir de cette ivresse folle
J'ai fui parmi les loups et les oiseaux des bois!

ZURGA: Comme le mien, que ton coeur se console,
Soyons frères, soyons amis comme autrefois!

REPRISE DE L'ENSEMBLE: Amitiè sainte, unis nos âmes fraternelles! etc.

LES PECHEURS: O maître, une pirogue aborde prés d'ici.

ZURGA: C'est bien!—je l'attendais!—
O dieu Brahma, merci!

NADIR: Qui donc attendais-tu dans ce désert sauvage?

ZURGA: Une fille inconnue et belle autant que sage,
Que les plus vieux de nous, soumis au vieil usage,
Loin d'ici, chaque année, ont soin d'aller chercher.
Un long voile à nos yeux dérobe son visage;
Et nul ne doit la voir, nul ne doit l'approcher! . . .
Mais pendant nos travaux, debout sur ce rocher,
Elle prie;—et son chant qui plane sur nos têtes,
Ecarte les esprits méchants et les tempêtes! . . .

LE CHOEUR: La voici! la voici!
Elle vient!—On l'amène ici!
(Leïla, le front couvert d'une voile, paraît au fond, suivie par quatre fakirs et par Nourabad.—)

LE CHOEUR DES FEMMES: (entourant Leïla et lui offraut des fleurs.) Sois la bienvenue, Amie inconnue,
Recois nos présents!
Chante et que l'orage
Apaise sa rage,
A tes doux accents!
Que la troupe immonde
Des esprits de l'onde,
Des prés et des bois,
S'envole à ta voix!
Sois la bienvenue, Etc.
Protége-nous! Veille sur nous!

ZURGA: (s'avançant vers Leïla.) Seule au milieu de nous, vierge pure et sans tache, Promets-tu de garder le voile qui te cache?
De rester jusqu'au bout fidéle à ton serment;
De prier nuit et jour au bord du gouffre sombre,
D'écarter par tes chants les noirs esprits de l'ombre,
De vivre sans ami, sans époux, sans amant!

ZURGA: Since that day, true to my word,
I've let fly, far from her, the days and the months

NADIR: To cure me of this foolish bliss
I fled to the wolves and the birds of the wood.

ZURGA: Like mine, let your heart be consoled
Let's be brothers and friends as before.

TOGETHER: (as before). Sacred friendship, unite our fraternal souls.

THE FISHERMEN: (entering.) Oh master, a boat lands near by.

ZURGA: It is well, I awaited it.
Oh Brahma, I thank you.

NADIR: Who did you await in this wild desert?

ZURGA: An unknown girl, beautiful as she is good
That the oldest of us faithful to custom,
Far from here, each year, are careful to go find.
From our eyes, a long veil hides her face;
And none must see her, none must approach her . . .
But during our work, standing on this rock,
She prays,—and her song that wafts over our heads,
Scatters the evil spirits and the tempests . . .

CHORUS:
She's here, she's here,
She comes . . . Bring her to us.
(Leila, her head covered by a veil, appears at the rear, followed by four fakirs (priests) and by Nourabad.)

CHORUS OF WOMEN: (Offering Leila flowers.) Be welcome
Unknown friend
Receive our gifts
Sing that the storm
Shall cease to rage,
At your soft accents
That the noisome troop
Of the spirits of the sea
Of the fields and the woods
Fly away at the sound
Be welcome, etc.
Protect us, watch over us.

ZURGA: (advancing on Leila.) Alone in our midst, virgin pure without stain,
Do you promise to keep the veil that hides you?
To remain to the end faithful to your oath;
To pray night and day on the brink of the sombre gulf,
To allay by your songs the black spirits of the dark,
To live without friend, without husband or lover?

NOURABAD ET LE CHOEUR: Parle!—Tiendras-tu ton serment?

LEILA: Oui, Brahma reçoit mon serment!

ZURGA: Si tu restes fidèle,
Et soumise à ma loi,
Nous garderons pour toi,
La perle la plus belle!
Et l'humble fille alors sera digne d'un roi!
(Avec menace) Mais si tu nous trahis! . . . si ton âme succombe
Aux pièges maudits de l'amour,
Que la fureur des cieux sur ta tête retombe!
C'en est fait! . . . c'est ton dernier jour!

LE CHOEUR: C'en est fait! c'est ton dernier jour!

ZURGA: Malheur à toi! . . .
Brahma demande une victime!
La mort t'attend! . . . la mort doit expier ton crime!

LE CHOEUR: La mort t'attend! . . . la mort!

LEILA: Dieu? . . . qu'entends'-je? . . . la mort!

NADIR: (s'avançant.) Hélas! funeste sort!

LEILA: (à part, reconnaissant Nadir.) Ah! c'est lui!

ZURGA: (saisissant la main de Leïla.) Qu'as-tu donc? . . . ta main frissonne et tremble!
D'un noir pressentiment ton coeur est agité . . .
Eh bien! . . . fuis ce rivage où le sort nous rassemble,
Renonce à nous servir, reprends ta liberteé! . . .
Il en est temps encor . . .

LE CHOEUR:
Parle! . . . réponds!

LEILA: (les yeux tournés vers Nadir.) Je reste! . . . Que mon sort glorieux ou funeste S'accomplisse! . . . ma vie est à vous, mes amis!
(A la voix de Leïla, Nadir fait un mouvement pour s'élancer vers elle, mais il s'arrête.)

ZURGA: C'est bien! . . . A tous les yeux tu resteras voilée,
Tu chanteras pour nous sous la nuit étoilée,
Tu l'as juré! . . . tu l'as promis!

NOURABAD ET LE CHOEUR: Tu l'as juré! . . . tu l'as

LEILA: Je l'ai juré!.. je l'ai promis!

LE CHOEUR: Brahma, divin Brahma, que ton bras nous protège,
Des esprits de la nuit qu'il écarte le piège!
O Dieu Brahma, nous sommes tous
A tes genoux!
(Sur un ordre de Zurga, Leïa gravit le sentier qui conduit aux ruines du temple, suivie par Nour-

NOURABAD AND CHORUS: Speak! Will you keep your oath?

LEILA: Yes, Brahma receive my oath!

ZURGA: If you remain faithful,
And submissive to my law,
We'll keep for you,
The most beautiful pearl.
And the humble girl will be worthy of a King.
(Threatening.)
But if you betray . . . if your soul succumbs
To the cursed traps of love,
May the fury of heaven fall on your head.
It is done . . . it is your final day!

CHORUS: It is done. It is your final day!

ZURGA: Misfortune to you! Brahma asks a victim
Death awaits you . . . death must expiate your crime!

CHORUS: Death awaits you! . . . death!

LEILA: God? what do I hear? Death!

NADIR: (rising and advancing.) Alas! unhappy fate!

LEILA: (aside, recognizing him.) Ah! it is he.

ZURGA: (seizing Leila's hand.) What ails you . . . your hand shivers and trembles
With a dark presentiment your heart is torn . . .
Well then. . . . fly from this shore where fate unites us
Renounce to serve us, take back your liberty . . .
There is yet time . . .

CHORUS: Speak . . . answer!

LEILA: (her eyes on Nadir.) I remain . . . That my fate, glorious or deadly
Be accomplished . . . My life is yours, friends,
(At hearing Leila's voice Nadir is about to start forward but restrains himself.)

ZURGA: It is well . . . To all eyes remain veiled You'll sing for us in the starry night
You have sworn . . . You have promised it.

NOURABAD AND CHORUS: You have sworn . . . you have sworn it.

LEILA: I have sworn . . . I have promised it.

CHORUS: Brahma . . . divine Brahma, let your arm protect us,
From the spirits of night remove the guile
Oh Brahma, we are all
At your knees.
(On direction of Zurga, Leila climbs the path that leads to the ruins of the temple, followed by abad et les fakirs; ils disparaissent avec Leïla dans les profondeurs du temple; les femmes et les enfants se dispersent de différents côtes; les hommes desendent sur le rivage. Zurga se rapproche de Nadir, lui tend la main et s'éloigne.—Le jour baisse peu à peu.)

NADIR: (seul.) A cette voix quel trouble agitait tout mon être?
Quel fol espoir? . . . comment ai-je cru reconnaître? . . .
Hélas! devant mes yeux déjà, pauvre insensé,
La même vision tant de fois a passé! . . .
Non! non! c'est la remords, la fièvre, le délire!
Zurga doit tout savoir,
J'aurais dû tout lui dire!
Parjure à mon serment, j'ai voulu la revoir!
J'ai découvert sa trace,
Et j'ai suivi ses pas!
Et caché dans la nuit et soupirant tout bas,
J'écoutais ses doux chantes emportés dans l'espace!

Je crois entendre encore,
Caché sous les palmiers,
Sa voie tendre et sonore
Comme un chant de ramiers!
O nuit enchanteresse!
O souvenir charmant!
Doux rêve! folle ivresse!
Divin ravissement!
Aux clartés des étoiles,
Je crois encor la voir,
Entr'ouvir ses longs voiles
Aux vents tièdes du soir!
O nuit enchanteresse!
O souvenir charmant!
Doux rêve! folle ivresse!
Divin ravissement!
(Il s'étend sur une natte et s'endort.)

LE CHOEUR DES PECHEURS: (dans la coulisse) Le ciel est bleu! . . . la mer est immobile et claire! . . .
(Leïla, amenée par Nourabad et les fakirs, paraît sur le rocher qui domine la mer.)

NOURABAD: Toi, rest là, debout sur ce roc solitaire! . . .
(Les fakirs s'accroupissent aux pieds de Leïla, et allument un bûcher.)
Aux lueurs du brasier en feu,
Aux vapeurs de l'encens qui monte jusqu'à Dieu,
Chante . . . nous t'écoutons!

NADIR: (a demi endormi). Adieu, doux rêve! . . . adieu!

LE CHOEUR DES PECHEURS: (dans la Coulisse.) Le ciel est bleu! . . . la mer est immobile et claire!

LEILA: (debout sur le rocher.) O Dieu Brahma!
O maître souverain du monde!

Nourabad and the priests. They disappear with Leila inside the temple, the women and children disperse in various directions, the men descend to the shore. Zurga approaches Nadir, takes his hand and goes away. The day declines.)

NADIR: (alone.) At that voice, what emotion moved all my being?
Vain hope . . . how did I think to recognize?
Alas before my poor foolish eyes
The same vision has so often passed . . .
No, no, it is remorse, fever, madness!
Zurga must know all
I should have told him everything
False to my oath, I desired to see her again,
I discovered her trace
And I followed her steps
Hidden in the night and softly sighing
I heard her soft song floating in space.

I think I still hear
Hidden amid the palms,
Her tender sonorous voice
Like a song of doves
Oh enchanting night!
Oh charming souvenir!
Sweet dream, sweet bliss,
Divine ravishment!
By the light of stars,
I think I still see her,
Open her long veils
To the soft breeze of night
Oh enchanting night
Oh charming souvenir
Sweet dream, sweet bliss
Divine ravishment!
(He stretches himself on a mat and sleeps.)

CHORUS OF FISHERMEN: (outside.) The sky is blue . . . the sea is clear and still . . .
LEILA: (led by Nourabad and the priests appears on the rock that dominates the sea.)

NOURABAD: You, stay here, on this solitary rock . . .
(The priests gathering at Leila's feet light a fire.)
By the light of this brazier afire,
And the vapor of the incense that mounts to God,
Sing . . . we listen to you!

NADIR: (half asleep.) Adieu, sweet dream, adieu!

CHORUS OF FISHERMEN: (outside.) The sky is blue . . . the sea is still and clear.

LEILA: (standing on rock.) Oh great Brahma
Oh sovereign master of the world.

LE CHOEUR: (dans la Coulisse.)
O dieu Brahma!

LEILA: Blanche Siva!
Reine à la chevelure blonde!

LE CHOEUR: Blanche Siva!

LEILA: Esprits de l'air, esprits de l'onde,
Des rochers, des prés et des bois,
Écoutez ma voix!

NADIR: (se reveillant.)
Ciel! . . . encor cette voix!

LEILA: Dans le ciel sans voiles,
Parsemé d'étoiles,
Au sein de l'azur
Transparent et pur,
Comme dans un rêve,
Penché sur la grêve,
Mon regard vous suit
A travers la nuit!
Ma voix vous implore,
Mon coeur vous adore,
Et mon chant léger,
Ainsi qu'un oiseau semble voltiger!

LES SORCIÈRES ET LE CHOEUR: (dans la coulisse.) Chante, chante encore!
Que te voix sonore,
Que ton chant léger,
Loin de nous, ce soir, chasse tout danger!

NADIR: (à part.) O voix que j'adore,
Je l'entends encore,
Rêve mensonger! . . . .
Prestige trompeur, charme passager!
(Nadir se glisse au pied du rocher.—Leïla se penche vers lui et écarte son voile un instant.)
Dieu! c'est elle! O
Leïla! . . . Leïla!
Ne redoute plus rien! . . . me voici! . . . je suis là!
Prêt à donner mes jours, mon sang pour te défendre!

LEILA: (à part.) Il m'écoute! . . . il est là!

LE CHOEUR: Chante, chante encore!
Que ta voix sonore,
Que ton chant léger,
Loin de nous, ce soir, chasse tout danger!

NADIR: Chante, chante encore!
O toi que j'adore,
Ne crains nul danger!
Je suis là, je viens pour te protéger!

LEILA: Pour toi que j'adore,
Oui je chante encore!
Et mon chant léger,
Ainsi qu'un oiseau semble voltiger!

FIN DE LA ACTE PREMIERE.

CHORUS: (outside.) Oh great Brahma!

LEILA: White Siva
Queen, of the blonde tresses.

CHORUS: White Siva.

LEILA: Spirits of air, spirits of the wave
Of the rocks, the fields and the woods
Listen to my voice.

NADIR: (awaking.) Heaven—again this voice!

LEILA: In the cloudless sky
Sown with stars,
In the heart of the azure
Transparent and pure
Like in a dream
Bending over the shale
My looks follow you
Throughout the night
My voice implores you
My heart adores you
And my light song
Like a bird seems to plane.

SORCERESSES AND CHORUS: (outside.) Sing, sing, again
That your sonorous voice,
That your gentle song
Far from us, this night, speed all danger.

NADIR: (aside.) Oh voice I adore,
I hear it again,
Deceptive dream!
Mistaken thought, furtive charm
(Nadir slips to the foot of the rock—Leila bends toward him and lifts her veil for a moment.)
God it is she! Oh Leila . . . Leila!
Fear nothing more. Here I am, here
Ready to give my life, my blood to defend you!

LEILA: (aside.) He hears me . . . he is there.

CHORUS: Sing, sing again!
That your sonorous voice,
That your gentle song,
Far from us, this night, speed all danger!

NADIR: Sing, sing again!
Oh I adore you,
Fear no danger
I am here, come to protect you.

LEILA: For I adore you,
Yes I sing again!
And my soft song,
Just like a bird seems to plane.

END OF FIRST ACT.

ACTE II

Les ruines d'un temple indien.—Au fond, une terrasse élevée de quelques marches et dominant la mer. Le ciel est étoilé; les rayons de lune éclairent vivement la terrassé. Leila, Nourabad, les fakirs au fond.

CHOEUR: (dans la coulisse.)
L'ombre descend des cieux;
La nuit ouvre ses voiles,
Et les blanches étoiles
Se baignent dans l'azur des flots silencieux! . . .

NOURABAD: (s'avançant vers Leïla.) Les barques ont gagné la grève;
Pour cette nuit, Leïla, notre tâche s'achève.
Ici tu peux dormir.

LEILA: Allez-vous donc, hélas!
Me laisser seule?

NOURABAD: Oui; mais ne tremble pas,
Sois sans crainte.—
Par là des rocs inaccessibles
Défendus par les flots grondants;
De ce côte, le camp; et là, gardiens terribles,
Le fusil sur l'épaule et le poignard aux dents,
Les Fakirs veilleront!

LEILA: Que Brahma me protège

NOURABAD: Si ton coeur reste pur, si tu tiens ton serment,
Dors en paix sous ma garde et ne crains aucun piège!

LEILA: En face de la mort, j'ai su rester fidèle,
Au serment qu'une fois j'avais fait . . .

NOURABAD: Toi! comment?

LEILA: J'étais encore enfant . . . un soir . . . je me rappelle . . .
Un homme, un fugitif, implorant mon secours,
Vint chercher un refuge en notre humble chaumière;
Et je promis, le coeur ému par sa prière,
De le cacher à tous, de protéger ses jours.
Bientôt une horde farouche
Accourt, la menace à la bouche . . .
On m'entoure! . . . un poignard sur mon front est levé . . .
Je me tais.—La nuit vient . . . il fuit . . . il est sauvé!
Mais avant de gagner la savane lointaine:
"O courageuse enfant, dit-il, prends cette chaîne
Et garde-la toujours, en souvenir de moi!
Moi, je me souviendrai!"—J'avais sauvé sa vie,
Et tenu ma promesse! . . .

ACT II

The ruins of an Indian temple—At rear a terrace higher by a few steps dominating the sea. A starry night and the rays of the moon light up the terrace. Leila, Nourabad and the priests are at the rear.

CHORUS: (outside.) Shadows descend from the heavens,
The night opens its drapery
And the white stars
Bathe in the azure of the silent wave . . .

NOURABAD: (advancing to Leila.) The boats have gained the strand;
For this night, Leila, our task is done
Here you may sleep.

LEILA: Will you then, alas, leave me alone?

NOURABAD: Yes, but do not tremble,
Be without fear.
That way inaccessible rocks
Defended by the grumbling waves,
On that side, the camp; and there, terrible guardians,
The gun on shoulder, the dagger between their teeth,
the fakirs watch.

LEILA: May Brahma protect me.

NOURABAD: If your heart remains pure, if your oath is kept,
Sleep in peace in my care and fear no trap.

LEILA: In the face of death I remained true
To an oath I once made . . .

NOURABAD: You! How?

LEILA: I was yet a child . . . one night . . . I remember . . .
A man, a fugitive, imploring my help,
Came seeking a refuge in our humble hut;
And I promised, my heart touched by his prayer,
To hide him from all, to protect his life.
Soon a bloodthirsty band
Rush in, threats in their mouths . . .
They surround me, a knife on my forehead is raised . . .
I am silent.—Night comes, he escapes, he is saved!
But before gaining the distant savanna;
"Courageous child", said he, "take this chain
And keep it always, in memory of me.
I shall remember" I had saved his life,
And kept my promise! . . .

NOURABAD: A nos lois asservie,
Comme en ce jour, si tu gardes ta foi,
La richesse, la gloire et le bonheur pour toi;
Sinon la mort, le malheur ou la honte!
De tous nos maux Zurga peut te demander compte!
Songes-y! . . . songe à Dieu!
Du repos voici
l'heure . . . adieu!
(Il sort avec les fakirs.)

LE REPRISE DU CHOEUR: (dans la coulisse) L'ombre descend des cieux,
La nuit ouvre ses voiles,
Et les blanches étoiles
Se baignent dans l'azur des flots silencieux.

LEILA: (seule.) Me voilà seule dans la nuit,
Seule en ce lieu désert où règne le silence! (Regardent autour d'elle avec crainte)
Je frissone..j'ai peur! . . . et le sommeil me fuit! . . .
(Regardent du côté de la terrasse.)
Mais il est là! . . . mon coeur devine sa présence! . . .
Comme autrefois dans la nuit sombre,
Caché sous le feuillage épais,
Il veille près de moi dans l'ombre,
Je puis dormir, rêver en
paix! . . .
C'est lui! mes yeux l'ont reconnu!
C'est lui! . . . mon âme est rassurée!
O bonheur! . . . joie inespérée!
Pour me revoir il est venu! . . .
Comme autrefois dans la nuit sombre. etc.
(Le son d'une guzla se fait entendre dans la coulisse.)
Mais qu'entends-je?
O chant méladieux! . . . Doux rêve! . . . trouble étrange!
C'est lui! c'est encor lui.
Qui vient calmer ma crainte et charmer mon ennui!

NADIR: (dans la coulisse.) De mon amie,
Fleur endormie
Au fond du lac silencieux,
J'ai vu dans l'onde
Claire et profonde
Étinceler le front joyeux
Et les doux yeux! . . .

LEILA: (se levant.) Tout dort autour de nous et la nuit est profonde,
Seule j'entends son chant joyeux!

NADIR: Ma bien-aimée,
Est enfermée
Dans un palais d'or et d'azure;
Je l'entends rire,
Et je vois luire
Sous le cristal du gouffre obscur
Son regard pur!

NOURABAD: To our laws subjected,
As in this day, if you keep faith,
Wealth, glory and happiness for you;
If not death, misfortune and shame!
For all our ills Zurga can demand account from you
Think on it . . . think on God!
It is the hour of repose . . . adieu . . .
(He goes out with priests)

REPEAT OF CHORUS: (outside.)
The shadow falls from heaven
Night opens her wings,
And the white stars
Bathe in the azure of the silent wave.

LEILA: (outside.) Here alone in the night,
Alone in this desert spot where silence reigns.
(Looking about her with fear.)
I shiver . . . I fear . . . and sleep flies away . . .
(Looking toward the terrace.)
But he is there . . . my heart divines his presence . . .
As in days gone by, in the dark night,
Hidden under the heavy leafage
He watches over me in the shade
I may sleep, dream in peace . . .
It is he, mine eyes do know him,
It is he, my soul is assured.
Oh happiness . . . joy unexpected
To see me he has come
As before in the dark night, etc.
(The sound of a guzla is heard.)
What do I hear
Melodious song, sweet dream . . . . . . strange feeling
It is he, it is yet he
Who comes to calm my fear and charm my solitude.

NADIR: (outside.) Of my love,
Sleeping flower
In depth of the silent lake,
I saw in the rill
Clear and profound
Sparkle the joyous face
And the gentle eyes' . . .

LEILA: (rising.) All sleeps about us and the night is dark,
Alone I hear his joyous song!

NADIR: My well beloved
Is shut up
In a palace of azure and gold;
I hear her laugh,
And I see shine
Under the cristal of the gulf obscure
Her pure regard.

LEILA: Dieu! sa voix se rapproche! . . . un doux charme m'attire! Son regard brille au fond du temps obscur! . . . (Nadir paraît sur la terrasse.—Il s'avance avec précaution et descent parmi les ruines.)	LEILA: God! his voice comes near—a soft charm attracts me, His look shines, in the obscure depths . . .
NADIR: Leïla!	NADIR: Leila!
LEILA: Qui m'appelle?	LEILA: Who calls me?
NADIR: Leïla!	NADIR: Leila!
LEILA: Dieu puissant! . . . le voilà!	LEILA: Great Heaven . . . he's here.
NADIR: Près d'elle me voilà! (Il s'élance vers Leïla.)	NADIR: Here I am by her side. (He rushes toward Leila)
LEILA: Par cet étroit sentier qui borde un sombre abîme, Comment es-tu venu?	LEILA: By this narrow path that skirts a dark abyss How have you come here?
NADIR: Un dieu guidait mes pas, un tendre espoir m'anime, Rien ne m'a retenu!	NADIR: A god my steps did guide, a gentle hope did spring. Nothing could retain me!
LEILA: Que viens-tu faire ici! . . . Fuis! la mort te menace! La mort est sur tes pas!	LEILA: What you've come here to do! Fly from threatening death Death is on your track.
NADIR: Apaise ton effroi . . . Pardonne! Fais-moi grâce! Ne me repousse pas!	NADIR: Quiet your fears . . . . forgive, have mercy Do not repulse me.
LEILA: J'ai juré! j'ai promis! . . . Je ne dois pas t'entendre! Je ne dois pas te voir!	LEILA: I've sworn, I've promised. I must not listen, I must not see you.
NADIR: Le jour est loin encor! . . . Nul ne peut nous surprendre! Souris à mon espoir!	NADIR: The day is far away. None can surprise us Smile on my hopes.
LEILA: Non, non, séparons-nous! . . . il en est temps encore!	LEILA: No, no. let's part . . . . there yet is time.
NADIR: Ah! pourquoi repousser un ami qui t'implore? Ton coeur n'a pas compris le mien! Au sein de la nuit parfumée, Quand j'écoutais, l'âme charmée, Les accents de ta voix aimée, Ton coeur n'a pas compris le mien!	NADIR: Ah why repulse a friend who implores you? Your heart comprehends not mine In the bosom of the perfumed night, When I listened, my soul all charmed, The accents of your loved voice, Your heart understands not mine.
LEILA: Ainsi que toi me souvien! Au sein de la nuit parfumée, Mon âme alors libre, et charmée, A l'amour n'était pas fermée! Ainsi que toi je me souvien!	LEILA: Just like you, I remember. In the bosom of the perfumed night My soul then free, I was charmed, And was not closed to love, Just like you, I remember..
NADIR: J'avais juré d'éviter ta présence, Et de me taire, hélas! à tout jamais; Mais de l'amour, ô fatale puissance! . . . Pouvais-je fuir les beaux yeux que j'aimais?	NADIR: I had sworn to avoid your presence, To be silent, alas, evermore; But of love, of fatal power! Could I flee from the eyes I loved?
LEILA: Malgré la nuit, malgré ton long silence Mon coeur joyeux avait lu dans ton coeur! Je t'attendais, j'espérais ta presence! Ta douce voix m'apportait le bonheur!	LEILA: Despite the night, despite your long silence, My joyous heart had read in your heart, I awaited you, hoped for your presence, Your gentle voice brought me bliss!
NADIR: Est-il vrai? . . . que dis-tu? . . . Doux aveux! . . . ô bonheur!	NADIR: Is it true? . . . what did you say? Sweet avowal, oh bliss.
ENSEMBLE.:	TOGETHER:
NADIR: Ton coeur avait compris le mien! Au sein de la nuit parfumée, etc.	NADIR: Your heart had understood mine In the bosom of the perfumed night.
LEILA: Ainsi que toi je me souvien! Au sein de la nuit, etc. (Se dégageant de ses bras.) Mais le temps fuit et l'heure passe! Songe à la mort qui nous menace! Par pitié, songe à mon serment!	LEILA: Just like you I remember In the bosom, etc. (Wresting herself from his arms.) But time flies and the hour passes, Think of the death that threatens, In pity, think of my oath!
NADIR: Si tu m'aimes comme je t'aime Que nous importe la mort même? Que nous importe un vain serment?	NADIR: If you love me as I love you, What even matters death, And what is a vain oath?
LEILA: (se jetant dans ses bras.) Ah! comme toi, l'âme ravie, Je suis prête à donner ma vie Pour cette heure d'enchantement!	LEILA: (throwing herself in his arms) Ah! like you, my ravished soul, I am ready to give my life, For this enchanting hour!
NADIR: Viens donc! . . . Viens, enivrée, heureuse, Mourir dans l'étreinte amoureuse De ton époux, de ton amant!	NADIR: Come then, come blissfully happy, Die in a loving embrace Of your husband, of your lover.
LEILA: O radieux enchantement!	LEILA: Oh radiant enchantment!
NADIR: O douce extase! â doux moment! (On entend au loin les premier grondements de l'orage.)	NADIR: Oh sweet ecstacy, oh sweet moment! (The first rumblings of a storm are heard.)
LEILA: (avec crainte.) Chut! . . . écoute! . . . l'orage gronde!	LEILA: (with fear.) Sh . . . listen . . . the storm grumbles
NADIR: Non, non! . . . (Écoutant.) Non, c'est le bruit de l'onde, C'est plainte du flot mouvant Que soulève le vent!	NADIR: No, no . . . (Listening.) No, it is the sound of the tide, It is the plaint of the moving wave Raised by the wind.
LEILA: L'éclair ouvre la nue Et déchire les cieux!	LEILA: The lightning breaks the cloud And tears the heavens!
NADIR: Non! c'est l'astre des nuits qui rayonne à tes yeux Et sourit à ta bienvenue!	NADIR: No, it is the moon whose rays shine in the eyes And smiles a welcome.
LEILA: (s'abandonnant de nouveau à l'etreinte amoureuse de Nadir.) Ah! je te crois! ma vie est dans tes yeux! Ta voix remplit mon coeur d'une joie inconnue!	LEILA: (abandoning herself to Nadir) Ah! I believe my life is in your eyes Your voice fills my heart with an unknown joy.
ENSEMBLE: Que la foudre éclate et groude, Que le ciel s'ouvre à nos yeux, Nous bravons la terre et l'onde Et Brahma maître des cieux! Doux baiser, brûlant délire! Amour pur, sublime ardeur! Un pouvoir divin m'attire Dans tes bras et sur ton coeur! (Le bruit de l'orage se rapproche; Nourabad paraît au fond.)	TOGETHER: Let the thunder crack and rumble Let the heavens open too, We brave both earth and ocean And Brahma king of heaven, Sweet kiss, hot delirium, Pure love, sublime ardor, A power divine attracts me In my arms and on my heart! (The storm increases.—Nourabad appears at rear.)
NOURABAD: Un homme dans ces lieux! . . . trahison! trahison! (Il disparaît dans l'ombre.)	NOURABAD: A man in this place . . . treason! treason! (He disappears in the gloom.)
LEILA: (à Nadir.) Ah! revenez à la raison! Fuyez ces lieux! . . . partez! partez vite! . . . je tremble!	LEILA: (to Nadir.) Ah! return to reason Fly from this place . . . go, go quickly . . . I tremble.
NADIR: Que l'amour chaque soir dans l'ombre nous rassemble!	NADIR: May love bring us here each night in the dark.

LEILA: Oui . . . oui! demain je t'attendrai! . . .

NADIR: Oui, demain je te reverrai! (Ils se séparent.—Coup de feu dans la coulisse. Leïla pousse un cri et tombe à genoux.)

NOURABAD ET LES FAKIRS:
Malheur sur lui! malheur sur nous!
Accourez! . . . venez tous!
(Ils traversent le fond du théâtre à la poursuite de Nadir.)

LE CHOEUR: Quelle voix nous appelle?
Quelle sombre nouvelle,
Quel présage de mort nous attend en ces lieux?
(L'orage éclate dans toute sa furie.)
O nuit d'épouvante,
la mer écumante
Soulève en grondant ses flots furieux! (Nourabad reparaît suivi de fakirs armés de torches.)

NOURABAD: Dans l'asile sacré, dans ces lieux redoutables,
Un homme, un étranger profitant de la nuit. A pas furtifs s'est introduit.

LE CHOEUR: Que dit-il! (montrant Nadir qu'on amène au fond.)

NOURABAD: Le voici! voici les deux coupables.

LE CHOEUR: Nadir! . . . ô trahison! . . . ô forfait odieux,
Qui déchaîne sur nous la colère des cieux!
(Avec rage, les poignards levés sur Nadir et Leïla.)
Ni pitiè, ni grâce,
Pour tous deux la mort!
Malgré sa menace
Qu'ils aient même sort!
Esprits des ténèbres
Prêts à nous punir,
Vos gouffres runèbres
Pour eux vont s'ouvrir! . . .
Ni pitié ni grâce.

LEILA: O sombre menace!
O funeste sort!
Tout mon sang se glace;
Pour nous c'est la mort!

NADIR: Leur demander grâce,
Non! plutôt la mort!
Leur folle menace,
Rend mon bras plus fort!
(On va pour las frapper: Nadir se jette devant Leïla pour la défendre au péril de sa vie.)

ZURGA: Arrêtez! . . . c'est à moi d'ordonner de leur sort!

LE CHOEUR: La mort pour eux! . . . la mort! la mort!

ZURGA: Voux m'avez donné la puissance,
Vous me devez obéissance.
(Les pêcheurs s'arrêtent indécis.)

LEILA: Yes . . . yes tomorrow I'll see you.

NADIR: Yes . . . yes tomorrow I'll see you
(They separate.—Shot heard.—Leila cries out and falls on her knees.)

NOURABAD AND THE FAKIRS:
Misfortune for him, for all of us
Come, come quickly.
(They cross at rear in pursuit of Nadir.)

CHORUS: What voice calls us?
What sombre news,
What presage of death awaits us here
(The storm bursts.)
Oh night of awe
the stormy sea
Rises grumbling in its furious flood!

NOURABAD: (reappears followed by fakirs.) In the sacred asylum, in these dreaded vaults
A man, a stranger, profiting of the night,
Came here with furtive steps
Came here with furtive steps

CHORUS: What says he?

NOURABAD: (showing Nadir whom they bring.) This is he! Here are both the guilty ones.

CHORUS: Nadir! . . . oh treason . . . oh crime most odious,
That unchains on us the anger of heaven!
(Daggers lifted over Nadir and Leila)
No pity, no grace,
For both of them death!
Despite his threats
They deserve the same fate.
Spirits of darkness
Ready to punish,
Your funeral abysses
For both shall open . . .
No pity or grace, etc.

LEILA: Oh sombre threat
Oh terrible fate
All my blood freezes;
For us it is death!

NADIR: Ask them for mercy,
No, sooner death!
Their insolent threat,
Makes me defy them!

ZURGA: (entering.) Stop . . . it is for me to decide their fate.

CHORUS: Death for them . . . death, death!

ZURGA: You have given me the power,
You owe me obedience.
(The fishermen stop undecided.)

NADIR: (à part.) O généreux ami!

LEILA: (à part.) O noble défenseur!

LE CHOEUR: (avec soumission, s'adressant à Zurga.) Qu'il partent donc! . . . nous faisons grâce au traître.
Zurga le veut . . . Zurga commande en maître!

ZURGIA: (bas, à Leïla et à Nadir.) Partez!

NOURABAD: (arrachant le voile de Leïla.) Avant de fuir au moins fais-toi connaître!

ZURGIA: (reconnaissant Leïla.) Dieu! qu'ai-je vu? c'était elle ô fureur!
Vengez-vous! vengez-moi! . . . malheur sur eux! . . . malheur!

LE CHOEUR: Ni pitié, ni grâce,
Pour tous deux la mort!
Ni pitié ni grâce!
Pour tous deux la mort!
Etc.

LEILA: O sombre menace;
Pour nous, c'est la mort!
Etc.

NADIR: Leur demander grâce,
Non, plutôt la mort!
Etc.
(L'orage éclate avec fracas.)

TOUS LES PECHEURS: (tombant à genoux.) Brahma, divin Brahma!
Que ton bras nous protège!
Nous jurons de punir leur amour sacrilège!
O dieu Brahma, nous sommes tous
A tes genoux!
(Sur un geste de Zurga, Nadir est entraîné par les pêcheurs et les fakirs emmèment Leïla.)

FIN DE LA ACTE DEUXIEME.

■ ACTE III

(Une tente indienne fermée par une draperie.)

ZURGA: (seul.) L'orage s'est calmé.—
Déjà les vents se taisent,
Comme eux les colères s'apaisent!
Moi seul j'appelle en vain le calme et le sommeil.
La fiévre me dévore, et mon âme oppressée
N'a plus qu'une pensée;
Nadir doit expirer au lever du soleil!
Nadir! . . . ami de mon jeune âge,
Lorsqu'à la mort je t'ai livré,
Par quelle aveugle et folle rage
Mon coeur était-il déchiré!
(Se levant et avec désespoir.)
Non! non! c'est impossible!
J'ai fait un songe horrible!
Non! tu n'as pas trahi tes serments

NADIR: (aside.) Oh, generous friend!

LEILA: (aside.) Oh noble defender.

CHORUS: (submissively to Zurga.) Then let them go, we grant grace to treason.
Zurga wills it . . . Zurga is master!

ZURGA: (low to Leila and Nadir.) Go!

NOURABAD: (tearing the veil from Leila.) Before your flight at least we shall know you.

ZURGA: (recognizing Leila.) God what have I seen, it is she, oh fury
Revenge yourselves, revenge me, unfortunates
No pity, no grace,
For both of them death!

CHORUS: No pity, no grace
For both of them death!

LEILA: Oh sombre menace
For us, it is death, etc.

NADIR: To ask for mercy
Death sooner, far.
(The storm breaks with fury.)

ALL THE FISHERMEN: (falling on their knees.) Brahma, divine Brahma, your arm protect us
We swear to punish their sacrilegeous love
Oh great Brahma, we are all at your knees!
(On a gesture of Zurga's Nadir is dragged away by the fishermen.—the priests take Leila.)

END OF SECOND ACT.

■ ACT III

An Indian tent shut in by a drapery.

ZURGA: (alone.) The storm has calmed.
The winds are silent
Like them is anger modified
Alone I vainly call for calm and sleep
Fever devours me, and my soul oppressed
Has but one thought:
Nadir must die at sunrise!
Nadir . . . friend of my youth,
When I deliver you to death
By what blind and crazed rage Is my heart torn!
(Rising with despair.)
No it is impossible!
I've had a horrid dream.
No, you did not betray your oath and faith
And the culprit, alas, the culprit is et ta foi

Et le coupable, hélas! le coupable, c'est moi!
Nadir! . . . ami de mon jeune âge,
Et toi, radieuse beauté,
Pardonnez à l'aveugle rage
Aux transports d'un coeur irrité!
Leïla . . . cher Nadir! . . . Ah! je maudis ma rage,
J'ai honte de ma cruanté!
(Il retombe accablé; Leïla paraît à l'entrée de la tente.)

ZURGA: Dieu! . . . qu'ai-je vu? Leïla!

LEILA: J'ai voulu te parler . . . à toi seul! . . . me voilà!

ZURGA: (Aux pêcheurs.) C'est bien! Sortez!
(Les pêcheurs se retirent et laissent retomber la draperie qui ferme l'entrée de la tente.)

ZURGA: (à part.) Qu'elle est belle!
Plus belle encore au moment de mourir!—

LEILA: (à part.) Ah! je frémis . . . je chancelle!
Hélas! comment attendrir
Cette âme sombre et cruelle!

ZURGA: Approche et calme ton effroi!

LEILA: (se jetant à ses pieds.) Je viens demander grâce!
Par le ciel par tes mains que j'embrasse,
Epargne un innocent et ne frappe que moi!

ZURGA: Innocent! . . . lui! . . . Nadir! . . . ah! comment? . . . parle vite!
Dans l'asile sacré ne l'attendais-tu pas?

LEILA: Vers moi le hasard seul avait guidé ses pas.

ZURGA: Dois-je te croire?

LEILA: Ah! que je sois maudite
Si je te trompe et si je mens!

ZURGA: (à part.) Ainsi donc ses serments
Et notre amitié sainte,
Il n'avait rien trahi! . . .

LEILA: Pour moi je suis sans crainte,
Mais je tremble pour lui!
Sois sensible à ma plainte,
Et deviens notre appui!
Par ma voix qui supplie
Ah! laisse-toi fléchir!
Accorde-moi sa vie
Pour m'aider à mourir!

ZURGA: (à part.) Pour l'aider à mourir!

LEILA: Il me donna son âme
Il eut tout mon amour;
Ardente et triste flamme
Voici ton dernier jour!
Par ma voie qui supplie.

me
Nadir, friend of my youth
And you, oh radiant beauty,
Forgive a blind rage
The transports of an irritated heart!
Leila..dear Nadir . . . I curse my rage
I'm ashamed of my cruelty.
(He falls exhausted.—Leila appears at entrance of tent.)

ZURGA: God! What have I seen? Leila.

LEILA: I wished to speak with you . . . you alone . . . I'm here.

ZURGA: (to fishermen) It is well, go.
(The fishermen retire.)

ZURGA: How beautiful she is!
And more so at the hour of death.

LEILA: (aside.) I tremble . . . I stagger,
Alas how mollify
This sombre, cruel soul?

ZURGA: Approach and calm your fears,

LEILA: (throwing herself at his feet.)
I come to ask mercy!
By heaven, by your hands I embrace,
Spare an innocent and strike only me.

ZURGA: Innocent . . . he, Nadir . . . but how? quickly speak
In the sacred asylum did you not await him?

LEILA: Toward me chance alone had guided his steps.

ZURGA: Should I believe?

LEILA: Ah! may I be cursed
If I deceive you and if I lie.

ZURGA: (aside) Ah then his oaths,
And our sacred friendship,
He thus betrayed nothing . . .

LEILA: For myself I fear not,
But I tremble for him!
Be sensible of my plaint,
And become our support.
By my voice that implores,
Ah, let yourself soften
Give me his life
To aid me to die.

ZURGA: (aside.) To aid her to die.

LEILA: He gave me his soul
He had all my love;
Sad and ardent flame
Here is your last day
By my voice that implores, etc.

ZURGA: (à Leïla.) Pour t'aider â mourir!

LEILA: Sans doute! ici n'est-tu pas maître?

ZURGA: Nadir! . . . ah j'aurais pu lui pardonner peut-être! . . .
Et le sauver! . . . car nous étions amis!
Mais tu l'aimes!

LEILA: (effrayée.) Gran Dieu!

ZURGA: Tu l'aimes!

LEILA: Je frémis!

ZURGA: Tu l'aimes! ce mot seul a réveillé ma haine.
En croyant le sauver tu le perds à jamais!

LEILA: Par grâce, par pitié!

ZURGA: Plus de prière vaine!
Je suis jaloux!

LEILA: Jaloux!

ZURGA: Comme lui je t'aimais!
(Avec fureur.)
Tu demandais sa vie,
Mais de ma jalousie,
Ranimant la furie,
Tu le perds pour toujours!
Que l'arrêt s'accomplisse,
Et qu'un même supplice
Me venge et réunisse
Vos coupables amours!

LEILA: De mon amour, Nadir, on t'ose faire un crime!

ZURGA: Son crime est d'être aimé quand je ne le suis pas!

LEILA: Ah! du moins dans son sang ne plonge pas tes bras
Et que de ta fureur, seule, je sois victime

ZURGA: Tu l'aimes! . . .

LEILA: (suppliante.) Par pitie'!

ZURGA: Tu l'aimes!

LEILA: Par leciel!

ZURGA: Il doit mourir!

LEILA: Eh bien, venge-toi donc, cruel!

LEILA: Va, prends aussi ma vie;
Mais, ta rage assouvie,
Le remords, l'infamie
Te poursuivront toujours!
Que l'arrêt s'accomplisse,
Et qu'un même supplice
Dans les cieux réunisse
A jamais nos amours.

ZURGA: Tu demandais sa vie,
Mais de ma jalousie,
Ranimant la furie,
Tu le pers pour toujur!
Qu l'arrêt s'accomplisse,
Et qu'un même supplice
Me venge et réunisse
Vos coupables amours!

NOURABAD: (reparaissant au fond, suivi de quelques pêcheurs. Cris de joie dans l'éloignement.)
Entends au loin ce bruit de fête!
L'heure est venue!

LEILA: Et la victime est prête!

ZURGA: To aid her to die

LEILA: No doubt, are you not master here?

ZURGA: Nadir . . . ah perhaps I might have pardoned him,
And saved him..for we were friends!
But you love him!

LEILA: (in fear.) Great God!

ZURGA: You love him!

LEILA: I tremble!

ZURGA: You love him! at this word has my hate revived.
In thinking to save him you have lost him forever.

LEILA: Mercy, pity.

ZURGA: Vain prayers no longer—
I am jealous.

LEILA: Jealous!

ZURGA: Like him, I love you.
(with fury.)
You asked for his life,
But
Reviving the fury of my jealousy,
You must lose him forever!
Let the law take its course,
May a single torture
Avenge me and unite
Your culpable loves

LEILA: Of my love Nadir they dare to make a crime.

ZURGA: His crime is to be loved while I am not.

LEILA: Ah! at least do not plunge your hands in his blood
And that of your fury, alone I be victim.

ZURGA: You love him?

LEILA: (supplicating.) Have pity!

ZURGA: You love him?

LEILA: By Heaven!

ZURGA: He must die.

LEILA: Well then avenge yourself, cruel one.

LEILA: Come, also take my life;
But, your rage satisfied,
Remorse and infamy
Shall always follow you.
Let the law take its course,
And the same torture,
In Heaven unite
Forever our loves.

ZURGA: You did ask for his life.
But
Reviving the fury of my jealousy,
You'll lose him forever.
Let the law take its course,
And that the same torture
In Heaven unite
Your culpable loves.

NOURABAD: (reappearing at rear followed by fishermen.—Cries of joy in distance.) Listen to this joyful noise
The hour has come.

LEILA: And the victim is ready.

ZURGA: Partez!

LEILA: Le ciel s'ouvre pour moi!
(A un jeune pêcheur.)
Ami, prends ce collier, et quand je serai morte,
Qu'à ma mère on le porte
En souvenir de moi!
(On entraîne Leïla.—Zurga s'approche vivement du pêcheur, lui arrache le collier des mains, le regarde et sort précipitamment.)

ZURGA: Go!

LEILA: Heaven opens for me
(To a young fisherman.)
Friend take this necklace and when I am dead
Carry it to my mother
In remembrance of me
(They drag Leila away.—Zurga quickly goes near fisherman, tears the necklace from him, looks at it and goes out quickly.)

DEUXIEME TABLEAU

(Un site sauvage. Au milieu de la scène un bûcher. Des feux, allumés çà et là.)

CHOEUR ET DANSE: Dès que le soleil,
Dans l'azur vermeil,
Versera sa flamme
Nos bras frapperont
Et se plongeront
Dans leur sang infâme!
Ardente liqueur,
Verse en notre coeur
Une sainte extase;
Qu'un sombre transport,
Présage de mort,
Soudain nous embrase,
Dès que le soleil, etc.
(Leila et Nadir paraissent précédés de grands prêtres conduits per Nourabad.)
(Marche funèbre.)

NOURABAD: Sombres divinités,
Zurga les livre à nos bras irrités!

CHOEUR: Zurga les livre à nos bras irrités!
(Une lueur rouge, qui éclaire tout à coup le fond du théâtre.)

CHOEUR: Le jour enfin perce la nue,
Le soleil lui, l'heure est venue!
(Au moment où Nadir et Leïla vont gravir la première marche du bûcher, Zurga paraît une hache à la main.)

ZURGA: Non, ce n'est pas le jour, regardez, c'est le feu!
Le feu du ciel tombé sur nous des mains de Dieu!
Le flamme envahit et dévore
Votre camp! Courez tous! il en est temps encore,
Pour arracher vos enfants au trépas.
Courez, courez, que Dieu guide vos pas!
(Les Indiens sortent en désorde, Nourabad reste seul avec Zurga, Nadir et Leïla.—Puis il se cache pour entendre ce que va dire Zurga.)

ZURGA: (à Nadir et à Leila.) Mes mains ont allumé le terrible incendie.
Qui menace leurs jours et vous sauve la vie,
Car je brise vos fers.—Leïla, souviens-toi.
Tu m'as sauvé jadis, soyez sauvés par moi.
(Il brise leurs chaines.—Nourabad, court prévenir les Indiens.)

SCENE II

A wild place.—In the center a pyre.—Fires lighted here and there.

CHORUS AND DANCE: As soon as the sun
In reddened azure
Shall drip its flame
Our arms shall strike
And shall plunge
In their infamous blood
Ardent liquor
Pour in our heart
A holy ecstacy
May sombre transports
Presage of death
Suddenly seize us
As soon as the sun, etc.
(Enter Leila and Nadir preceded by high priest led by Nourabad.—Funeral march.)

NOURABAD: Sombre divinities
Zurga delivers them to our angry arms.

CHORUS: Zurga delivers them to our angry arms.
(A red light illuminates the distance.)

CHORUS: The dawn pierces the clouds
The sun shines, the hour has come.
(At the moment that Leila starts to step on the pyre Zurga appears torch in hand.)

ZURGA: No it is not day, look, it is fire!
The fire of Heaven fallen on us from God's hands!
The flame invades and destroys!
Your camp, run all, there is yet time,
To save your children from death.
Run, run, may God guide your steps.
(The Indians run out in disorder.—Nourabad remains with Zurga, Nadir and Leila.—Then he hides to hear what Zurga will say.)

ZURGA: (to Nadir and Leila.) My hands started the terrible flame.
That threatens their days but saves your lives,
For I break your irons—Leila, remember,
You saved me once, be both saved by me.
(He breaks their chains.—Nourabad runs to warn the Indians.)

LEILA ET NADIR: O lumière sainte,
O divine étreinte,
Mon âme est sans crainte,
Car il nous arrache enfin au trépas!
Zurga nous délivre
Et nous fait revivre,
Oui, je veux te suivre;
Rien ne me saurait ravir à tes bras.

ZURGA: O lumière sainte,
O divine étreinte,
Je m'en vais sans plainte,
Les sauvant tous deux, courir au trépas.
Ma main les délivre.
Nadir peut la suivre,
Je ne dois plus vivre,
Puisqu'un sort fatal l'arrache à mes bras.

NADIR: (dans l'extase amoureuse.) Dans l'espace immense
Brille un jour plus pur,
Notre âme s'élance
Au sein de l'azur.

LEILA: Un palais splendide
S'entr'ouvre à nos yeux,
Notre essor rapide.
Nous emporte aux cieux!

ZURGA: (à part.)
O.Dieux! comme ils s'aiment! ô Dieux!

LEILA ET NADIR: L'ombre nous couvre encor, le jour ne paraît pas!

ZURGA: L'ombre les couvre encor, mais le jour naît la-bas!

LEILA ET NADIR: Partons!
L'amour soutient notre coeur!

ZURGA: O Dieux! comme ils s'aiment! ô Dieux!

(On entend quelques mesures du premier choeur.)

ZURGA: Ce sont eux, les voici! Fuyez par ce passage!
(A Nadir.)
Emporte ton trésor loin de ce bord sauvage!

NADIR ET LEILA: Et toi, Zurga?

ZURGA: Dieu seul sait l'avenir.

NADIR ET LEILA: Ah! nous te reverrons pour t'aimer, te bénir!
(Nadir et Leïla se sauvent. Nourabad et les Indiens paraissent.)

NOURABAD: (désignant Zurga.) C'est lui, le traître! Il a sauvé leur vie!
Ses mains ont allumé le terrible incendie
Qui menace vos jours! Décidez de son sort.
Il faut une victime.

LEILA AND NADIR: Oh, holy light,
Divine embrace,
My soul is without fear,
For he saves us, at last from death
Zurga delivers us
And makes us live again,
Yes, I will follow you
Nothing could tear me from your arms.

ZURGA: Oh, holy light,
Divine embrace,
I go without complaint,
Saving them both, rushing to death.
My hand delivers them,
Nadir may follow her,
I must not live,
As a fatal will must tear her from my arms.

NADIR: In space immense
Shines a purer day,
Our souls now fly
In the midst of the azure.

LEILA: A splendid palace
Opens to our eyes,
Our rapid flight,
Takes us to the skies!

ZURGA: (aside.) Oh gods how they love, oh gods!

LEILA AND NADIR: Shadow yet covers us, day does not appear.

ZURGA: Shadow yet covers them, but day will soon appear.

LEILA AND NADIR: Let us go.
Love sustains our heart.

ZURGA: Gods, how they love oh gods!

(A bit of first chorus is heard.)

ZURGA: It is them, they come. Escape by this passage.
(To Nadir.)
Take your treasure far from this savage coast.

NADIR AND LEILA: And you, Zurga?

ZURGA: God alone knows the future.

NADIR AND LEILA: Ah we shall meet again to love and bless you!
(Nadir and Leila run out.—Nourabad and the Indians appears.)

NOURABAD: (pointing to Zurga.) It is he the traitor he saved their lives
His hands started the terrible flames
That threaten your days. Decide on his fate.
We need a victim.

CHOEUR: A mort! à mort! à mort!
(Les Indiens se jettet sur Zurga et le forcent à monter sur le bûcher.)

CHOEUR: Pour le sacrifice
Tout est prêt!
Que la sombre forêt
De nos airs retentisse
Ah! Brahma!

ZURGA: Que sur moi seul leur rage enfin soit assouvie,
Adieu, ma Leïla, je te donne ma vie!
(Le bûcher commence à brûler. Zurga disparait dans les flammes.)

CHORUS: Death! death! death!
(The Indians throw themselves on Zurga and force him to mount the pyre.)

CHORUS: For the sacrifice
All is ready
Let the forest sombre.
Resound with our airs.
Oh Brahma!

ZURGA: On me may their rage at last be satisfied,
Farewell, my Leila, I give you my life!
(The pyre begins to burn.—Zurga disappears in the flames.)

CHOEUR: C'est l'arrêt de Dieu
Qui condamne au feu
Le traître et l'infâme!
C'est un juste sort!
Qu'il trouve la mort.
(On aperçoit la forêt embrasée.)
Dans l'horrible flamme!
Déjà le soleil,
Dans l'azur vermeil,
Montre et nous éclaire.
Naguère outragés,
Les Dieux sont vengés.
Restons en prière!
(Ils se prosternent à terre, puis se redressent les bras levés au ciel.)
Ah! Brahma!

FIN.

CHORUS: It is God's decision that condemns to flame
The infamous traitor!
It is a just fate
That he meets death.
(A burning forest is revealed at rear)
In the horrible flame
Already the sun,
In reddened azure
Shows and lights us.
Justly outraged
The gods are avenged,
Let us pray.
(They prostrate themselves, then rise)
Ah Brahma!

END.

Carmen (1875)

MUSIC BY GEORGES BIZET ■ LIBRETTO BY HENRI MEILHAC AND LUDOVIC HALÉVY

This four-act drama lyrique, is set to a libretto by Henri Meilhac and Ludovic Halévy (based on Prosper Mérimée's novel). Carmen premiered at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on March 3, 1875. In a town square in Seville, with a cigarette factory on one side and solders' barracks directly opposite, the soldiers wait for the cigarette girls to come out from work. Micaela, a young girl from the country, is looking for one of the soldiers, Don José, but doesn't find him, so she departs. Don José arrives, and the cigarette girls return to work at noon. Carmen, a stunning gypsy, is among them. She has her eye on Don José and tosses him a flower, while singing the famous Habanera. Micaela brings him tidings of his mother, and he promises to marry her in accordance with his mother's wishes. A quarrel breaks out at the factory; Carmen wounds one of her friends and is arrested. Don José is to be her guard, and she attempts to seduce him with the hypnotic and sexy Seguedille aria. Her scheme to win freedom is successful, and he frees her before they reach the prison. While Carmen is dancing with two of her friends at the inn of Lillas Pastia, Escamillo, a bullfighter, enters and tries to seduce Carmen, but she ignores him in expectation of Don José's arrival. He arrives and they spend a brief passionate moment together before Don José must return to his barracks; Carmen asks him to run away with her to the mountains. Captain Zunigo enters and orders Don José to return at once. Don José refuses and has no choice but to leave his regiment and join Carmen. Hiding in the mountains with the smugglers, Don José regrets breaking his promise. Carmen, already tired of him, moons over Escamillo. She foresees death in the tarot cards. Escamillo arrives. He and Don José argue; Carmen separates them. Don José leaves with Micaela, who has come to the hideout to plead with Don José to visit his dying mother, but threatens Carmen that she has not seen the last of him. Carmen is on his way to the bullfight with Escamillo, when she is warned of Don José's presence nearby. He begs her to come back to him, but she rejects him, throwing his ring at his feet. Don José, blinded by jealousy and pain, stabs Carmen to death. The opera ends with Don José being led off to prison.

■ ACTE I	■ ACT I
Prelude	Prelude
	(A square in Seville. On the right, the door of a tobacco factory. At the back, facing the audience, a bridge from one side of the stage to the other, reached from the stage by a winding staircase beyond the factory door. The bridge is open underneath. In front, a guard-house; in front of that, three steps leading to a covered passage. As the curtain rises, a file of soldiers (dragoons of Almanza) are grouped before the guard-house, smoking and looking at the passers-by in the square coming and going from all parts. The scene is full of animation)
LES SOLDATS: Sur la place chacun passe, chacun vient, chacun va; drôles de gens que ces gens-là!	SOLDIERS: On the square everyone comes by, everyone comes and goes; funny sort of people these!
MORALÈS: A la porte du corps de garde, pour tuer le temps, on fume, on jase, l'on regarde passer les passants.	MORALÈS: At the guard-house door, to kill time, we smoke gossip, and watch the passers-by.
LES SOLDATS AND MORALÈS: Sur la place, etc.	SOLDIERS AND MORALÈS: On the square, etc. (Micaëla enters)
MORALÈS: Regardez donc cette petite qui semble vouloir nous parler. Voyez, elle tourne, elle hésite.	MORALÈS: Now look at this little lass who seems to want to speak to us. Look, she's turning round, she's hesitating.
LES SOLDATS: A son secours il faut aller!	SOLDIERS: We must go and help her!
MORALÈS: (à Micaëla) Que cherchez-vous, la belle?	MORALÈS: (to Micaëla) Whom are you looking for, pretty one?
MICAËLA: Moi, je cherche un brigadier.	MICAËLA: I'm looking for a corporal.
MORALÈS: Je suis là, voilà!	MORALÈS: Here I am, look!
MICAËLA: Mon brigadier à moi s'appelle Don José . . . le connaissez-vous?	MICAËLA: My corporal is called Don José . . . do you know him?
MORALÈS: Don José! Nous le connaissons tous.	MORALÈS: Don José? We all know him.
MICAËLA: Vraiment! Est-il avec vous, je vous prie?	MICAËLA: Really! Is he with you, please?
MORALÈS: Il n'est pas brigadier dans notre compagnie.	MORALÈS: He isn't a corporal in our company.
MICAËLA: (désolée) Alors, il n'est pas là?	MICAËLA: (disappointed) Then he isn't here?

MORALÈS: Mais en attendant qu'il vienne, voulez-vous, la belle enfant, voulez-vous prendre la peine d'entrer chez nous un instant?	MORALÈS: But while you wait for him to come will you, my pretty child, take the trouble to step inside with us for a moment?
MICAËLA: Chez vous?	MICAËLA: Inside with you?
LES SOLDATS ET MORALÈS: Chez nous.	SOLDIERS AND MORALÈS: Inside with us.
MICAËLA: Chez vous?	MICAËLA: Inside with you?
LES SOLDATS ET MORALÈS: Chez nous!	SOLDIERS AND MORALÈS: Inside with us!
MICAËLA: Non pas, non pas. Grand merci, messieurs les soldats.	MICAËLA: No, no. Many thanks, soldiers.
MORALÈS: Entrez sans crainte, mignonne. je vous promets qu'on aura, pour votre chère personne, tous les égards qu'il faudra.	MORALÈS: Don't be afraid to come in, my dear, I promise you we shall treat your dear self with every due respect.
MICAËLA: Je n'en doute pas; cependant je reviendrai, c'est plus prudent. Je reviendrai quand la garde montante remplacera la guarde descendanta.	MICAËLA: I don't doubt it; all the same I'll come back, that's wiser. I'll be back when the new guard comes to relieve the old guard.
LES SOLDATS ET MORALÈS: Il faut rester car la garde montante, va remplacer la garde descendante.	SOLDIERS AND MORALÈS: You must stay, because the new guard is on its way to relieve the old guard.
MORALÈS: Vous resterez!	MORALÈS: You'll stay!
MICAËLA: Non pas! non pas!	MICAËLA: Indeed I'll not!
LES SOLDATS ET MORALÈS: Vous resterez!	SOLDIERS AND MORALÈS: (surrounding Micaëla) You'll stay!
MICAËLA: Non pas! non pas! non! non! non! Au revoir, messieurs les soldats!	MICAËLA: Indeed I'll not! No, no, no! Goodbye, soldiers! (She escapes and runs off.)
MORALÈS: L'oiseau s'envole. on s'en console. Reprenons notre passe-temps et regardons passer les gens.	MORALÈS: The bird has flown; we'll console ourselves. Let's resume our pastime and watch the folks go by.
LES SOLDATS: Sur la place chacun passe, etc.	SOLDIERS: On the square everyone comes by, etc.
MORALÈS: Drôles de gens! Drôles de gens! Drôles de gens!	MORALÈS: Funny sort of people! (The movement of the passers-by which had stopped during the foregoing scene has now resumed with a certain animation. Among the people coming and going is an old gentleman with a young lady on his arm. . . . The old gentleman would like to continue his walk, but the young lady is doing all she can to detain him on the square. She seems anxious, uneasy. She looks to right and left, She is expecting someone, and this someone does not come. This pantomine must fit in very exactly with the following verse:)
MORALÈS: Attention! chut! attention! Taisons-nous! Voici venir un vieil époux, Oeil soupçonneux, mine jalouse, Il tient au bras sa jeune épouse; L'amant sans doute n'est pas loin; Il va sortir de quelque coin. (avec les soldats) L'amant sans doute n'est pas loin; Il va sortir de quelque coin. Ah! ah! ah! ah! Le voilà.	MORALÈS: Stand by! Let's pipe down! Look, here comes an old husband with a suspicious eye and a jealous look, he's holding on to his young wife by the arm; no doubt the lover's not far off; he'll pop out of some corner. (With the soldiers) No doubt the lover's not far off; he'll pop out of some corner. (At this moment a young man comes quickly on to the square) Ha! ha! ha! ha! There he is.
MORALÈS: Ah! le voilà! oui, le voilà! etc. (avec les soldats) Voyons comment ce tournera.	MORALÈS: Ah, there he is! Yes, there he is! etc. (With the soldiers) Let's see how this'll turn out. (The second verse follows and must be faithfully adapted to the scene mimed by the three characters. The young man approaches the old gentleman and the young lady, bows, and exchanges a few words in a low voice, etc.)
MORALÈS: Vous trouver ici, quel bonheur! Je sius bien votre serviteur! Il salue, il parle avec grâce. Le vieux mari fait la grimace; Mais d'un air très encourageant La dame accueille le galant.	MORALÈS: (imitating the young man's eager greeting) What luck, finding you here! (assuming the old husband's sour-tempered look) Your servant! (putting on the young man's manner again) He bows, he turns on the charm. (then the old husband's expression) The old husband pulls a face; (imitating the lady's simpering smiles) but the lady is greeting the lover in a very encouraging manner. (At this moment the young man draws from his pocket a note which he shows to the lady. The husband, the wife and the young blade all three slowly take a little stroll on the square, the young man endeavouring to slip his love-letter to the lady)
MORALÈS: Ils font ensemble quelques pas; Notre amoureux, levant le bras, Fait voir au mari quelque chose, Et le mari, toujours morose, Regarde en l'air . . . Le tour est fait, Car la dame a pris le billet! Et voilà! et voilà! ah! ah! On voit comment ça tournera! (avec les soldats) On voit comment ça tournera! Ah! ah! ah! ah! On voit comment ça tournera! etc.	MORALÈS: They walk a few steps together; our lovebird, raising his arm, draws the husband's attention to something, (The young man, with one hand, points out something in the sky to the old gentleman, and with the other passes his note to the lady) and the husband, still morose, looks up into the air . . . The trick has worked, for the lady has taken the note. And that's that! that's that! Ha! Ha! We see how that'll turn out! (With the soldiers) We see how that'll turn out! Ha! ha! ha! ha! We see how that'll turn out! etc.
	(A military march of bugles and fifes is heard in the distance. The relief guard is arriving. The old gentleman and the young man exchange a cordial handshake, and the young man bows respectfully to the lady. An officer comes out of the guard-house. Soldiers take their muskets and form up in front of the guard-house. The passers-by gather in a group to watch the parade. The military march comes nearer and nearer. At last the relief guard emerges)

CHOEUR DES GAMINS: Avec la garde montante,
Nous arrivons, nous voilà.
Sonne, tompette éclatante!
Taratata, taratata!
Nous marchons la tête haute
Comme de petits soldats,
Marquant sans faire de faute,
Une, deux, marquant le pas.
Les épaules en arrière
Et la poitrine en dehors,
Les bras de cette manière
Tombant tout le long du corps.
Avec la garde montante, etc.

MORALÈS: (à Don José) Il y a une jolie fille qui est venue to demander. Elle a dit qu'elle reviendrait. . .

JOSÉ: Une jolie fille?

MORALÈS: Oui, et gentiment habillée, une jupe bleue, des nattes tombant sur les épaules. . . .

JOSÉ: C'est Micaëla. Ce ne peut être que Micaëla.

MORALÈS: Elle n'a pas dit son nom.

REPRISE DU CHOEUR DES GAMINS: Et la garde descendante
Rentre chez elle et s'en va.
Sonne, trompette éclatante,
Taratata, taratata!
Nous marchons la tête haute
Comme de petits soldats, etc.

ZUNIGA: Dites-moi, brigadier? Qu'est-ce que c'est que ce grand bâtiment?

JOSÉ: C'est la manufacture de tabacs. . .

ZUNIGA: Ce sont des femmes qui travaillent là?

JOSÉ: Oui, mon lieutenant. Elles n'y sont pas maintenant: tout à l'heure, après leur diner, elles vont revenir. Il y aura du monde pour les voir passer.

ZUNIGA: Il y en a de jeunes?

JOSÉ: Mais oui, mon lieutenant.

ZUNIGA: Et de jolies?

JOSÉ: (en riant) Je le suppose . . . je n'ai les ai jamais beaucoup regardées . . .

and crosses the bridge. First, two bugles and two fifes. Then a band of street urchins. Behind the children, Lieutenant Zuniga and Corporal Don José, then the troopers)

CHORUS OF STREET BOYS: Right beside the relief guard, here we come, here we are!
Blow out, loud trumpet!
Taratata, taratata!
We march with head erect
like little soldiers, keeping time with no mistakes—
one two,—keeping step.
Shoulders back
and chest well out, arms this way
straight down beside the body.
Right beside the relief guard, etc.
(The relief guard halts facing the guard going off duty. The officers salute with their swords and begin to talk in low voices. The sentries are changed)

MORALÈS: (to Don José) There's a pretty girl been asking for you. She said she'd come back. . . .

JOSÉ: A pretty girl?

MORALÈS: Yes, and nicely dressed, a blue skirt, plaits down over her shoulders. . . .

JOSÉ: It's Micaëla. It can only be Micaëla.

MORALÈS: She didn't give her name.

CHORUS OF STREET BOYS: (reprise) And the old guard goes off home to barracks.
Blow out, loud trumpet!
Taratata, taratata!
We march with head erect like little soldiers, etc.
(Soldiers, urchins and idlers go off at the back; the sound of chorus, fifes and bugles grows fainter. The commander of the new guard, during this time, inspects his men silently. When the chorus of street boys can no longer be heard, the soldiers are dismissed and enter the guard-house. Don José and Zuniga remain)

ZUNIGA: Tell me, corporal, what's that great building?

JOSÉ: It's the tobacco factory . . .

ZUNIGA: It's women who work there? . . .

JOSÉ: Yes, sir. They're not there now: presently, after their dinner, they'll come back. Everyone'll be here to see them go by.

ZUNIGA: There are young ones?

JOSÉ: Why yes, sir.

ZUNIGA: And pretty ones?

JOSÉ: (laughing) I suppose so . . . I've never taken much notice of them . . .

ZUNIGA: Allons donc! . . .

JOSÉ: . . . ces Andalouses me font peur, toujours à railler . . .
jamais un mot de raison . . .

ZUNIGA: Et puis nous avons un faible pour les jupes bleues et pour les nattes tombant sur les épaules . . .

ZUNIGA: (riant) Ah! mon lieutenant a entendu ce que disait Moralès?

ZUNIGA: Oui . . .

JOSÉ: Je ne le nierai pas . . . la jupe bleu, les nattes, c'est le costume de la Navarre . . . ça me rappelle le pays . . .

ZUNIGA: Vous êtes Navarrais?

JOSÉ: Et vieux chrétien. Malheureusement, j'aimais trop jouer à la paume . . . Un jour, un gars me chercha querelle; j'eus encore l'avantage, mais cela m'obligea de quitter le pays. je me fis soldat! Ma mère me suivit et vint s'établir à dix lieues de Séville . . . avec la petite Micaëla . . .

ZUNIGA: Et quel âge a-t-elle, la petite Micaëla?

JOSÉ: Dix-sept ans.

ZUNIGA: Il fallait dire cela tout de suite . . . Je comprends maintenant pourquoi vous ne pouvez pas me dire si les ouvrières sont jolies ou laides.

JOSÉ: Voici la cloche qui sonne, mon lieutenant, vous allez pouvoir juger pour vous-même. . . .
Quant à moi, je
vais faire une chaîne pour attacher mon épinglette.

JEUNES GENS: La cloche a sonné;
nous, des ouvrières
nous venons ici guetter le retour;
et nous vous suivrons, brunes cigarières,
en vous murmurant des propos d'amour!

LES SOLDATS: Voyez-les! Regards impudents, mines coquettes,
fumant toutes du bout des dents
la cigarette.

LES CIGARIÈRES: Dans l'air, nous suivons des yeux
la fumée, la fumée,
qui vers les cieux
monte, monte parfumée.
Cela monte gentiment

ZUNIGA: Get away with you! . . .

JOSÉ: . . . These Andalusian girls frighten me . . . always making fun of you . . . never a word of sense . . .

ZUNIGA: And then we've got a weakness for blue skirts and for pigtails down over the shoulders . . .

JOSÉ: (laughing) Ah, sir, so you heard what Moralès said?

ZUNIGA: Yes . . .

JOSÉ: I won't deny it . . . blue skirt, pigtails, it's the dress of Navarra . . . that reminds me of home . . .

ZUNIGA: You're from Navarra?

JOSÉ: And from an old Christian family. Unfortunately I was too fond of playing paume . . . one day a lad picked a quarrel with me; I came off best again, but this forced me to leave the country. I went for a soldier! My mother followed me and came to settle ten leagues from Seville . . . with the little Micaëla.

ZUNIGA: And how old is the little Micaëla?

JOSÉ: Seventeen.

ZUNIGA: You should have said that at once. . . . Now I understand why you can't tell me whether the factory-girls are pretty or ugly.
(The factory bell is heard)

JOSÉ: There's the bell ringing, sir, you'll be able to judge for yourself. . . . As for me, I'm going to make a chain for fixing my priming-pin.

(The square fills up with young men who have come to intercept the cigarette girls. The soldiers come out of the guard-house. Don José sits down on a seat, and remains quite indifferent to all the comings and goings, working on a little chain for his priming-pin)

YOUNG MEN: The bell has rung:
we've come here to catch the factory girls on their way back;
and we'll follow you, dark-haired cigarette girls,
murmuring words of love to you!
(At this point the girls appear, smoking cigarettes)

SOLDIERS: Look at them! Impudent glances, saucy airs,
all of them puffing away
at a cigarette.

CIGARETTE GIRLS: We gaze after the smoke
as it rises in the air,
sweet-smelling,
towards the skies.
Gracefully it mounts

à la tête, à la tête, toute doucement
cela vous met l'âme en fête!
Le doux parler des amants,
c'est fumée!
Leurs transports et leurs serments,
c'est fumée!
Dans l'air, nous suivons des yeux la fumée, etc.

LES SOLDATS: Mais nous ne voyons pas la Carmencita!

LES CIGARIÈRES ET LES JEUNES GENS: La voilà!
La voilà
Voilà la Carmencita!

LES JEUNES GENS: Carmen! sur tes pas, nous nous pressons tous!
Carmen! sois gentille, au moins réponds-nous et dis-nous quel jour tu nous aimeras!

CARMEN: (regardent Don José)
Quand je vous aimerai?
Ma foi, je ne sais pas.
Peut-être jamais, peut-être demain;
mais pas aujourd'hui, c'est certain.

CARMEN: L'amour est un oiseau rebelle que nul ne peut apprivoiser, et c'est bien en vain qu'on l'appelle,
s'il lui convient de refuser.
Rien n'y fait, menace ou prière, l'un parle bien, l'autre se tait;
et c'est l'autre que je préfère:
il n'a rien dit, mais il me plaît.
L'amour! etc.

CHOEUR: L'amour est un oiseau rebelle, etc.

CARMEN: L'amour est enfant de bohème,
il n'a jamais connu de loi;
Si tu ne m'aimes pas, je t'aime;
si je t'aime, prends garde à toi! etc.

CHOEUR: Prends garde à toi! etc.
L'amour est enfant de bohème, etc.

CARMEN: L'oiseau que tu croyais surprendre battit de l'aile et s'envola—l'amour est loin, tu peux l'attendre;
tu ne l'attends plus, il est là!
Tout autour de toi vite, vite, il vient, s'en va, puis il revient—tu crois le tenir, il t'évite, tu crois l'éviter, il te tient.
L'amour! etc.

to your head,
so gently
it exhilarates you!
Lovers' soft talk—
it's smoke!
Their raptures and promises—smoke!
We gaze after the smoke
as it rises, etc.

SOLDIERS: But we don't see La Carmencita!
(Carmen enters)

CIGARETTE GIRLS AND YOUNG MEN: There she is!
There she is!
There's La Carmencita!
(She has a bunch of cassia flowers at her bodice, and a cassia flower in the corner of her mouth. The young men come in with Carmen. They follow her, surround her, talk to her. She flirts with them in an offhand fashion. Don José looks up. He glances at Carmen and then quietly resumes his work)

YOUNG MEN: Carmen, we all throng after you!
Carmen, be kind, answer us at least,
and tell us when you're going to love us!

CARMEN: (with a glance at Don José) When I'm going to love you?
My word, I don't know.
Perhaps never, perhaps tomorrow;
but not today, that's certain.

CARMEN: Love is a rebellious bird that no one can tame.
and it's quite useless to call him
if it suits him to refuse.
Nothing moves him, neither threat nor plea,
one man speaks freely, the other keeps mum;
and it's the other one I prefer:
he's said nothing, but I like him.
Love! etc.

CHORUS: Love is a rebellious bird, etc.

CARMEN: Love is a gypsy child,
he has never heard of law.
If you don't love me, I love you;
if I love you, look out for yourself! etc.

CHORUS: Look out for yourself! etc.
Love is a gypsy child, etc.

CARMEN: The bird you thought to catch unawares beat its wings and away it flew—love's far away, and you can wait for it;
you wait for it no longer—and there it is.
All around you, quickly, quickly, it comes, it goes, then it returns—
you think you can hold it, it evades you.
you think to evade it, it holds you fast.
Love! etc.

CHOEUR: Tout autour de toi, etc.

CARMEN: L'amour est enfant de bohème,
il n'a jamais connu de loi;
Si tu ne m'aimes pas, je t'aime;
si je t'aime, prends garde à toi!
Si tu ne m'aimes pas, je t'aime, etc.

CHOEUR: Prends garde à toi! etc.
L'amour est enfant de bohème, etc.

LES JEUNES GENS: Carmen! sur tes pas, nous nous pressons tous!
Carmen! sois gentille, au moins réponds-nous!

CARMEN: Qu'est-ce que tu fais là? . . .

JOSÉ: Je fais une chaine pour attacher mon épinglette.

CARMEN: Ton épinglette, vraiment! ton épinglette . . . épinglier de mon âme . . .

LES CIGARIERÈS: L'amour est enfant de bohème, etc.

JOSÉ: Qu'est-ce cela veut dire, ces façons-là? . . . Quelle effronterie!
Avec quelle adresses elle me l'a lancée, cette fleur . . .
S'il y a des sorcières, cette fille-là en est une.

MICAËLA: Monsieur le brigadier?

JOSÉ: Qu'est-ce que c'est? . . . Micaëla! . . . Tu viens de là-bas? . . .

MICAËLA: C'est votre mère qui m'envoie . . .

JOSÉ: Parle-moi de ma mère!

MICAËLA: J'apporte de sa part, fidèle messagère, cette lettre . . .

JOSÉ: Une lettre! etc.

MICAËLA: Et puis un peu d'argent pour ajouter à votre traitement.
Et puis . . .

JOSÉ: Et puis?

CHORUS: All around you, etc.

CARMEN: Love is a gypsy child,
he has never heard of law.
If you don't love me, I love you;
if I love you, look out for yourself!
If you don't love me, I love you, etc.

CHORUS: Look out for yourself! etc.
Love is a gypsy child, etc.

YOUNG MEN: Carmen, we all throng after you!
Carmen, be kind, answer us at least!
(A pause. The young men surround Carmen, who looks at them one by one. Then she breaks through the circle and goes straight to Don José, who is still busied with his little chain.)

CARMEN: What are you up to there? . . .

JOSÉ: I'm making a chain to fix my priming-pin.

CARMEN: Your priming-pin, really! your priming-pin. . . .
Pin-maker of my heart . . .
(Carmen throws the cassia flower at Don José. He jumps up. The flower has fallen at his feet. Outburst of general laughter)

CIGARETTE GIRLS: (surrounding Don José) Love is a gypsy child, etc.
(The factory bell rings again. Carmen and the other cigarette girls run into the factory. Exeunt young men, etc. The soldiers go into the guard-house, followed by the Lieutenant, who had been chatting to two or three of the girls. Don José is left alone).

JOSÉ: What's all that mean?—all those carryings-on? . . .
What shamelessness!
(He looks at the cassia flower on the ground at his feet. He picks it up)
How cleverly she threw it at me, this flower . . .
(He smells the flower)
If there are witches, that girl is one.
(Enter Micaëla)

MICAËLA: Corporal?

JOSÉ: (hurriedly concealing the cassia flower) What's this? . . . Micaëla! . . . You've come from back there? . . .

MICAËLA: It's your mother who sends me . . .

JOSÉ: Tell me about my mother!

MICAËLA: A faithful messenger, I bring from her this letter . . .

JOSÉ: A letter! etc.

MICAËLA: And then a little money to add to your pay.
And then . . .

JOSÉ: And then?

MICAËLA: Et puis . . . vraiment je n'ose, et puis encore une autre chose qui vaut mieux que l'argent et qui pour un bon fils aura sans doute plus de prix.

JOSÉ: Cette autre chose, quelle est-elle?
Parle donc.

MICAËLA: Oui, je parlerai;
ce que l'on m'a donné
je vous le donnerai.
Votre mère avec moi sortait de la chapelle,
et c'est alors qu'en m'embrassant:
"Tu vas", m'a-t-elle dit, "t'en aller à la ville;
la route n'est pas longue, une fois à Séville,
tu chercheras mon fils, mon José, mon enfant.
Et tu lui diras que sa mère songe nuit et jour à l'absent, qu'elle regrette et qu'elle espère,
qu'elle pardonne et qu'elle attend.
Tout cela, n'est-ce pas, mignonne,
de ma part tu le lui diras;
et ce baiser que je te donne
de ma part tu le lui rendras."

JOSÉ: (très ému) Un baiser de ma mère!

MICAËLA: Un baiser pour son fils!
José, je vous le rends,
comme je l'ai promis.

JOSÉ: Ma mère, je la vois!
Oui, je revois mon village!
O souvenirs d'autrefois,
doux souvenirs du pays!
Doux souvenirs du pays!
O souvenirs chéris!
Vous remplissez mon coeur
de force et de courage!
O souvenirs chéris!
Ma mère, je la vois,
je revois mon village!

MICAËLA: Sa mère, il la revoit!
Il revoit sa village!
O souvenirs d'autrefois!
Souvenirs du pays!
Vous remplissez son coeur
de force et de courage!
O souvenirs chéris!
Sa mère, il la revoit,
il revoit son village!

JOSÉ: Qui sait de quel démon
j'allais être la proie!
Même de loin, ma mère me défend,
Et ce baiser qu'elle m'envoie
écarte le péril et sauve son enfant!

MICAËLA: Quel démon? quel péril?
Je ne comprends pas bien.
Que veut dire cela?

MICAËLA: And then . . . really, I dare not,
and then yet another thing worth more than money and which a good son will surely value higher.

JOSÉ: This other thing, what is it?
Tell me, then.

MICAËLA: Yes, I'll tell you;
what was given to me
I'll give to you.
Your mother and I were coming out of the chapel,
and then, as she kissed me,
"You will go to town," she said.
"it's not far; once in Seville
you'll seek out my son, my José, my boy.
And you'll tell him that his mother thinks night and day of her absent one,
that she grieves and hopes,
that she forgives and waits.
All that, little one,
you'll tell him from me, won't you;
and this kiss that I'm giving you you'll give him from me.

JOSÉ: (very moved) A kiss from my mother!

MICAËLA: A kiss for her son!
José, I give it to you
as I promised.
(Micaëla raises herself on tiptoe and gives Don José a frank, motherly kiss. José, very moved, lets her. He gazes into her eyes. There is a moment of silence.)

JOSÉ: I see my mother!
Yes, I see my village again!
O memories of bygone days,
sweet memories of home!
Sweet memories of home!
O precious memories!
You put back strength
and courage into my heart!
O precious memories!
I see my mother,
I see my village again!

MICAËLA: He sees his mother again!
He sees his village again!
O memories of bygone days!
Memories of home!
You put back strength
and courage into his heart!
O precious memories!
He sees his mother again,
he sees his village again!

JOSÉ: (his eyes fixed on the factory) Who knows into what demon's clutches
I was about to fall!
Even from afar my mother protects me and this kiss she sent me
wards off the peril and saves her son!

MICAËLA: What demon? What peril?
I don't quite understand.
What do you mean by that?

JOSÉ: Rien! Rien!
Parlons de toi, la messagère.
Tu vas retourner au pays?

MICAËLA: Oui, ce soir même:
demain je verrai votre mère.

JOSÉ: Tu la verras!
Et vien, tu lui diras:
que son fils l'aime et la vénère et qu'il se repent aujourd'hui; il veut que là-bas sa mère
soit contente de lui!
Tout cela, n'est-ce pas, mignonne,
de ma part, tu le lui diras,
et ce baiser que je te donne,
de ma part tu le lui rendras.

MICAËLA: Oui, je vous le promets, de la part de son fils
José je le rendrai comme je l'ai promis.

JOSÉ: Ma mère, je la vois! etc.

MICAËLA: Sa mère, il la revoit, etc.

JOSÉ: Attends un peu maintenant. . .
. . Je vais lire sa lettre . . .

MICAËLA: Je viens de me rappeler que votre mère m'a chargée de quelques petits achats . . .

JOSÉ: Attends un peu . . .

MICAËLA: Non, non . . . je reviendrai, j'aime mieux cela . . . je reviendrai, je reviendrai . . .

JOSÉ: "Il n'y en a pas qui t'aime davantage . . . et si tu voulais. . . ."
Oui, ma mère, oui, j'épouserai Micaëla.
Quant à cette bohémienne, avec ses fleurs qui ensorcellent . . .

ZUNIGA: Eh bien! eh bien! qu'est-ce qui arrive? . . .

PREMIER GROUPE DE FEMMES:
Au secours! Au secours!
N'entendez-vous pas?

DEUXIÈME GROUPE DE FEMMES: Au secours! Au secours!
Messieurs les soldats!

PREMIER GROUPE DE FEMMES:
C'est la Carmencita!

DEUXIÈME GROUPE DE FEMMES: Non, non, ce n'est pas elle!
Pas du tout!

PREMIER GROUPE DE FEMMES:
C'est elle! Si fait, si fait, c'est elle!
Elle a porté les premiers coups!

DEUXIÈME GROUPE DE FEMMES: Ne les écoutez pas!

TOUTES LES FEMMES: Ecoutez-nous, monsieur!
Ecoutez-nous! etc.

JOSÉ: Nothing! Nothing!
Let's talk about you, the messenger.
You're going back home?

MICAËLA: Yes, this very evening:
tomorrow I shall see your mother.

JOSÉ: You'll be seeing her!
Well then, you'll tell her—that her son loves and reveres her and that today he is repentant;
he wants his mother back there to be pleased with him!
All this, my sweet,
you'll tell her from me, won't you,
and this kiss that I give you you'll give her from me.
(He kisses her)

MICAËLA: Yes, I promise you;
from her son
José I shall give it as I have promised.

JOSÉ: I see my mother! etc.

MICAËLA: He sees his mother again! etc.

JOSÉ: Wait a bit now. . . . I'm going to read her letter . . .

MICAËLA: I've just remembered that your mother asked me to make a few small purchases for her . . .

JOSÉ: Wait a little while . . .

MICAËLA: No, no . . . I'll come back, I'd rather do that . . . I'll come back, I'll come back . . .
(She goes out)

JOSÉ: (reading) "There's not one of them who loves you more . . . and if you wanted to . . ." Yes, mother yes, I'll marry Micaëla.
As for that gypsy with her flowers that bewitch . . .
(Just as he is about to tear the flower from his tunic, an uproar begins in the factory. Zuniga comes on stage, followed by soldiers)

ZUNIGA: Well now, well, what's happening? . . .

FIRST GROUP OF GIRLS: Help!
Help!
Can't you hear?

SECOND GROUP OF GIRLS: Help!
Help!
You soldiers!

FIRST GROUP OF GIRLS: It's Carmencita!

SECOND GROUP OF GIRLS: No, no, it's not her!
Not a bit of it!

FIRST GROUP OF GIRLS: It's her!
It is, it is! It's her!
She started the fighting!

SECOND GROUP OF GIRLS: Don't listen to them!

ALL THE GIRLS: (surrounding Zuniga) Listen to us, sir!
Listen to us! etc.

DEUXIÈME GROUPE DE FEMMES: La Manuelita disait, et répétait à voix haute qu'elle achèterait sans faute un âne que lui plaisait.

PREMIER GROUPE DE FEMMES: Alors la Carmencita, railleuse à son ordinaire,
dit: "Un âne, pourquoi faire?
Un balai te suffira."

DEUXIÈME GROUPE DE FEMMES: Manuelita riposta et dit à sa camarade:
"Pour certaine promenade,
mon âne te servira!—"

PREMIER GROUPE DE FEMMES: "—Et ce jour-là tu pourras à bon droit faire la fière deux laquais suivront derrière,
t'émouchant à tour de bras!"

TOUTES LES FEMMES: Là-dessus, toutes les deux se sont prises àux cheveux!

ZUNIGA: Au diable tout ce bavardage!
Prenez, Josè, deux hommes avec vous et voyez là-dedans qui cause ce tapage.

PREMIER GROUPE DE FEMMES: C'est la Carmencita! etc.

DEUXIÈME GROUPE DE FEMMES: Non, non, ce n'est pas elle! etc.

ZUNIGA: Holà!
Eloignez-moi toutes ces femmes-là!

TOUTES LES FEMMES: Monsieur! ne les ècoutez pas! etc.

ZUNIGA: Voyons, brigadier . . . Maintenant que nous avons un peu de silence . . . qu'est-ce que vous avez trouvé là-dedans?

JOSÉ: J'ai trouvé trois cents femmes, hurlant, gesticulant. Il y en avait une qui avait sur la figure un X qu'on venait de lui marquer en deux coups de couteau . . . en face de la blessée . . .

ZUNIGA: Eh bien?

JOSÉ: J'ai vu mademoiselle . . .

ZUNIGA: Mademoiselle Carmencita?

JOSÉ: Oui, mon lieutenant.

SECOND GROUP OF GIRLS: (pulling the officer to their side) Manuelita said, and kept saying at the top of her voice, that she'd make sure she bought a donkey that pleased her.

FIRST GROUP OF GIRLS: Then Carmencita, in her usual mocking way,
said: "A donkey? What for?
A broom will do for you."

SECOND GROUP OF GIRLS: Manuelita retorted, and said to her friend:
"For a certain ride
my donkey will be useful to you!—"

FIRST GROUP OF GIRLS: "—And on that day you'll be able to play the lady in your own right;
two lackeys will follow behind keeping flies off as best they can!"

ALL THE GIRLS: Thereupon they both started to pull each other's hair out!

ZUNIGA: To the devil with all this chatter!
José, take two men in with you and see who's causing all this commotion.
(Don José takes two men with him. The soldiers go into the factory. All this while the girls are pushing and arguing among themselves)

FIRST GROUP OF GIRLS: It's Carmencita! etc.

SECOND GROUP OF GIRLS: No, no! It's not her! etc.

ZUNIGA: Stop!
Rid me of all these women!

ALL THE GIRLS: Sir, don't listen to them! etc.
(The soldiers keep the girls back. Carmen appears at the factory door, led by Don José and followed by two dragoons)
(The factory-girls go out in a disorderly rush)

ZUNIGA: Let's see, corporal . . . now that we've got a moment's silence . . . what did you find inside there?

JOSÉ: I found three hundred women, yelling and waving their arms about. There was one who had an X on her face that someone had just carved on her with two knife-slashes. . . . Facing the wounded girl . . .
(On a glance from Carmen he stops)

ZUNIGA: Well?

JOSÉ: I saw the señorita . . .

ZUNIGA: The señorita Carmencita?

JOSÉ: Yes, sir.

ZUNIGA: Et que'est-ce qu'elle disait, mademoiselle Carmencita?

JOSÉ: Elle ne disait rien, elle serrait les dents et roulait des yeux comme un caméleon.

JOSÉ: J'ai prié mademoiselle de me suivre.

ZUNIGA: (à Carmen) Eh bien! . . . vous avez entendu? . . . Avez-vous quelque chose à répondre? . . . parlez, j'attends . . .

CARMEN: Tra la la la, etc.
Coupe-moi, brûle-moi, je ne te dirai rien.
Tra la la la, etc.
Je brave tout, le feu, le fer et le ciel même.

ZUNIGA: Ce ne sont pas des chansons que je te demande, c'est une réponse.

CARMEN: Tra la la la, etc.
Mon secret je le garde et je la garde bien!
Tra la la la, etc.
J'en aime un autre et meurs en disant que je l'aime.

ZUNIGA: Ah! ah! nous le prenons sur ce ton-là . . . (à José) Ce qui est sûr, n'est-ce pas, c'est qu'il y eu des coups de couteau, et que c-est elle qui les a donnés . . .

ZUNIGA: Eh! vous avez la main leste décidément. (Aux soldats) Trouvez-moi une corde.

JOSÉ: Voilà, mon lieutenant.

ZUNIGA: Prenez et attachez-moi ces deux jolies mains.
C'est dommage vraiment, car elle est gentilla . . . si gentille que vous soyez, vous n'en irez pas moins faire un tour à la prison. Vous pourrez y chanter vos chansons de Bohémienne. Le porte-clefs vous dira ce qu'il en pense.

ZUNIGA: And what was she saying, the señorita Carmencita?

JOSÉ: She wasn't saying anything, she was gritting her teeth and rolling her eyes like a chameleon.
(The lieutenant looks at Carmen; she, after a glance at Don José and a slight shrug of her shoulders, has become impassive again)

JOSÉ: I asked the señorita to come with me . . .
(Carmen turns sharply and looks at José once more)

ZUNIGA: (to Carmen) Well . . . you heard? Have you anything to answer? . . . Speak, I'm waiting . . .
(Instead of replying, Carmen starts to sing)

CARMEN: Tra la la la, etc.
Cut me, burn me, I shall tell you nothing.
Tra, la la la, etc.
I defy everything—fire, the sword and heaven itself.

ZUNIGA: It's not songs! I'm asking you for, it's a reply.

CARMEN: Tra la la la, etc.
I'm keeping my secret and keeping it close!
Tra la la la, etc.
I love another and I die in saying that I love him.

ZUNIGA: Aha! So that's the attitude we're taking . . . (to José)
What's certain, isn't it, is that there had been a knife attack and that it's she who made it . . .
(At this moment five or six women on the right succeed in breaking the line of sentries and rush on to the stage shouting: Yes, yes, it's her! One of these women finds herself close by Carmen, who raises her hand and attempts to throw herself upon the woman. Don José stops Carmen. The soldiers haul the woman off and this time force them back completely off the stage. A few sentinels remain in sight, guarding the approaches to the square)

ZUNIGA: Eh! decidedly you have a ready hand. (to the soldiers)
Find me a cord.
(There is a moment of silence during which Carmen begins humming again in the most impertinent fashion as she watches the officer)

JOSÉ: Here it is, sir.

ZUNIGA: Take this and tie those two pretty hands together for me.
(Without offering the least resistance, Carmen smilingly holds out her two hands to Don José) It's a shame, really, for she's pretty . . . But pretty as you may be, you're nonetheless going to take a stroll to the prison. You can sing your gypsy

Je vais écrire l'ordre. (à Don José)
C'est vous qui la conduirez . . .

CARMEN: Où me conduirez-vous?

JOSÉ: A la prison, ma pauvre enfant . . .

CARMEN: Hélas! que deviendrai-je? Seigneur officier, ayez pitié de moi . . . Vous ètes si gentil, Laisse-moi m'échapper, je te donnerai un morceau de la bar lachi, une petite pierre qui te fera aimer de tours les femmes.

JOSÉ: Nous ne sommes pas ici pour dire des balivernes . . .
Il faut aller à la prison. C'est la consigne, et il n'y a pas de remède.

CARMEN: Camarade, mon ami, ne ferez-vous rien pour une payse?

JOSÉ: Vous ètes Navarraise, vous?

CARMEN: Sans doute.

JOSÉ: Allons donc . . . il n'y a pas un mot de vrai . . . vos yeux seuls, votre bouche, votre teint . . . Tout vous dit Bohémienne . . .

CARMEN: Bohémienne, tu crois?

JOSÉ: J'en suis sûr.

CARMEN: Au fait, je suis bien bonne de me donner la peine de mentir . . . Oui, je suis Bohemienne, mais tu n'en feras pas moins ce que je te demande . . . Tu le feras parce que tu m'aimes . . .

JOSÉ: Moi!

CARMEN: Eh! Oui, tu m'aimes.
Cette fleur que tu as gardée—oh! tu peux la jeter maintenant . . . cela n'y fera rien. La charme a opéré . . .

JOSÉ: (avec colère) Ne me parle plus, tu entends, je te défends de me parler.

CARMEN: C'est très bien, siegneur officier, c'est très bien. Vous me défendez de parler, je ne parlerai plus . . .

CARMEN: Près des remparts de Séville, chez mon ami Lillas Pastia, j'irai danser le séguedille,
et boire du manzanilla.
J'irai chez mon ami Lillas Pastia!
Oui, mais toute seule on s'ennuie, et las vrais plasirs sont à deux.
Donc, pour me tenir compagnie.
j'emmènerai mon amoureux!
Mon amoureux . . . il est au diable:

songs there. The turnkey'll tell you what he thinks of them.
(Carmen's hands are bound and she is made to sit down on a stool in front of the guard-house. She remains motionless, her eyes cast down)
I'm going to write out the order. (to Don José) It's you who will take her . . .
(He goes out)

CARMEN: Where are you taking me?

JOSÉ: To the jail, my poor child . . .

CARMEN: Alas, what will become of me? Noble officer, take pity on me . . . You are so nice. Let me escape and I'll give you a piece of the bar lachi, a little stone which will make you loved by all women.

JOSÉ: (moving away) We're not here to talk twaddle . . .
We must go to the jail.
Those are my instructions, and there's no help for it.

CARMEN: Comrade of my heart, won't you do anything for a fellow-countrywoman?

JOSÉ: You're from Navarra, you?

CARMEN: Certainly.

JOSÉ: Come off it! . . . There's not a word of truth in it . . . your eyes alone, your mouth, your coloring . . . everything proclaims you a gypsy . . .

CARMEN: A gypsy, you think?

JOSÉ: I'm sure of it.

CARMEN: In fact, I am very simple to go to the trouble of lying . . . Yes, I'm a gypsy, but you'll do what I want nonetheless . . . You'll do it because you love me . . .

JOSÉ: I!

CARMEN: Ah, yes, you love me. That flower you kept—oh, you can throw it away now . . . that makes no difference. The charm has worked . . .

JOSÉ: (angrily) Don't talk to me any more, d'you hear, I forbid you to talk to me.

CARMEN: That's all right, officer sir, that's all right. You forbid me to talk, I'll not talk any more . . .
(She looks at Don José who backs away)

CARMEN: By the ramparts of Seville, at my friend Lillas Pastia's place,
I'm going to dance the seguidilla and drink manzanilla.
I'm going to my friend Lillas Pastia's!
Yes, but all alone one gets bored,
and real pleasures are for two.
So, to keep me company,
I shall take my lover!

je l'ai mis à la porte hier.
Mon pauvre coeur trés consolable,
mon coeur est libre comme l'air.
J'ai des galants à la douzaine, mais ils ne sont pas à mon gré.
Voici la fin de la semaine,
qui veut m'aimer? je l'aimerai.
Qui veut mon âme? elle est à prendre!
Vous arrivez au bon moment!
Je n'ai guère le temps d'attendre,
car avec mon nouvel amant . . .
Près des remparts de Séville, etc.

JOSÉ: Tais-toi! je t'avais dit de ne pas me parler!

CARMEN: Je ne te parle pas,
je chante pour moi-même;
et je pense . . . il n'est pas défendu de penser!
Je pense à certain officier,
qui m'aime, et qu'à mon tour,
oui, à mon tour je pourrais bien aimer!

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: Mon officier n'est pas un capitaine, pas même un lieutenant,
il n'est que brigadier;
mais c'est assez pour une bohémienne,
et je daigne m'en contenter!

JOSÉ: Carmen, je suis comme un homme ivre, si je cède, si je me livre.
ta promesse, tu la tiendras,
ah! si je t'aime, Carmen, tu m'aimeras?

CARMEN: Oui . . .
Nous danserons la séguedille en buvant du manzanilla.

JOSÉ: Chez Lillas Pastia . . .
Tu le promets!
Carmen . . .
Tu le promets!

CARMEN: Ah! Près des remparts de Séville, etc.

ZUNIGA: (à José) Voici l'ordre; partez.
Et faites bonne garde.

CARMEN: (bas à José) En chemin je te pousserai, je te pousserai aussi fort que je le pourrais . . .
Laissez-toi renverser . . .
le reste me regarde.

CARMEN: L'amour est enfant de bohème,
il n'a jamais connu de loi.
Si tu ne m'aimes pas, je t'aime;
si je t'aime, prends garde à toi!

My lover . . . he's gone to the devil:
I showed him the door yesterday.
My poor heart, so consolable—
my heart is as free as air.
I have suitors by the dozen,
but they are not to my liking.
Here we are at week end;
Who wants to love me! I'll love him.
Who wants my heart? It's for the taking!
You've come at the right moment!
I have hardly time to wait,
for with my new lover . . .
By the ramparts of Seville, etc.

JOSÉ: Stop! I told you not to talk to me!

CARMEN: I'm not talking to you,
I'm singing to myself;
and I'm thinking . . . it's not forbidden to think!
I'm thinking about a certain officer who loves me,
and whom in my turn I might really love!

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: My officer's not a captain,
not even a lieutenant,
he's only a corporal;
but that's enough for a gypsy girl and I'll deign to content myself with him!

JOSÉ: (untying Carmen's hands) Carmen, I'm like a drunken man, if I yield, if I give in.
you'll keep your promise?
Ah! if I love you, Carmen, you'll love me?

CARMEN: Yes . . .
We'll dance the seguidilla
while we drink manzanilla.

JOSÉ: at Lillas Pastia's . . .
You promise!
Carmen . . .
You promise!

CARMEN: Ah! By the ramparts of Seville, etc.
(Her hands behind her, Carmen goes and re-seats herself on her stool)
(Zuniga returns)

ZUNIGA: (to José) Here's the order; off you go now.
And keep a good lookout.

CARMEN: (aside to José) On the way I shall push you,
I shall push you as hard as I can . . .
Let yourself fall over . . .
The rest is up to me.
(Carmen places herself between the two dragoons, with José at her side. The girls and others return onstage, kept back by the soldiers. Carmen crosses the stage, moving towards the bridge)

CARMEN: Love is a gypsy child,
he has never heard of law.
If you don't love me, I love you;
if I love you, look out for yourself!
(Arriving at the foot of the bridge, Carmen pushes José, who falls. In

Entr'acte

ACTE II

CARMEN: Les tringles des sistres tintaient avec un éclat métallique, et sur cette étrange musique
les zingarellas se levaient.
Tambours de basque allaient leur train, et les guitares forcenées
grinçaient sous des mains obstinées, même chanson, même refrain.
Tralalala . . .
Les anneaux de cuivre et d'argent reluisaient sur les peaux bistrées;
d'orange et de rouge zébrées
les étoffes flottaient au vent.
La danse au chant se mariait.
d'abord indécise et timide,
plus vive ensuite et plus rapide,
cella montait, montait, montait!
Tralalalala . . .
Les bohémiens à tour de bras de leurs instruments faisaient rage, et cet éblouissant tapage,
ensorcelait les zingaras!
Sous le rythme de la chanson, ardentes, folles, enfiévrées,
elles se laissaient, enivrées,
emporter par le tourbillon!
Tralalalala . . .

ZUNIGA: Vous avez quelque chose à nous dire, maître Lillas Pastia?

the confusion Carmen takes to her heels. At the middle of the bridge she stops for a moment, sends her cord flying over the parapet of the bridge, and escapes, while the cigarette girls, with great shouts of laughter, surround Zuniga)

Entr'acte

ACT II

(The tavern of Lillas Pastia. Carmen, Mercédès, Frasquita, Lieutenant Zuniga, Moralès and another lieutenant are there. A meal has just been finished and the table is in disorder. The officers and gypsy girls are smoking. Two gypsies are strumming guitars in a corner of the room; in the middle, two gypsy girls are singing. Carmen, seated, is watching them dance. An officer is talking to her quietly, but she pays him no attention whatsoever. Suddenly she gets up and begins to sing)

CARMEN: The sistrums' rods were jingling with a metallic clatter, and at this strange music
the zingarellas leapt to their feet.
Tambourines were keeping time and the frenzied guitars ground away under persistent hands, the same song, the same refrain.
Tralalalala . . .
(During the refrain the gypsy girls dance, and Mercédès and Frasquita join Carmen in singing: Tralalala)
Copper and silver rings glittered on dusky skins;
orange- and red-striped dresses floated in the wind.
Dance and song became one—at first timid and hesitant, then livelier and faster
it grew and grew and grew!
Tralalalala . . .
The gypsy boys stormed away on their instruments with all their might,
and this deafening uproar
bewitched the zingaras!
Beneath the rhythm of the song, passionate, wild, fired with excitement,
they let themselves be carried away,
intoxicated, by the whirlwind!
Tralalalala . . .
(At the conclusion of the dance Carmen sinks breathless on to a bench. Lillas Pastia begins to circulate among the officers: he looks worried)

ZUNIGA: You've something to tell us, Master Lillas Pastia?

PASTIA: Mon Dieu, messieurs . . .

MORALÈS: Parle, voyons . . .

PASTIA: Il commence à se faire tard . . . et je suis, plus que personne, obligé d'observer les règlements.

MORALÈS: Cela veut dire que tu nous mets à la porte! . . .

PASTIA: Oh! non, messieurs les officers, oh! non non . . . je vous fais seulement observer que mon auberge devrait être fermée depuis dix minutes . . .

ZUNIGA: Dieu sait ce qu'il s'y passe dans ton auberge, une fois qu'elle est fermée . . .

PASTIA: Oh! mon lieutenant . . .

ZUNIGA: Enfin, nous avons encore, avant l'appel, le temps d'aller passer une heure au théâtre . . . vous y viendrez avec nous, n'est-ce pas, les belles?

FRASQUITA: Non, messieurs les officiers, non, nous restons ici, nous.

ZUNIGA: Comment, vous ne viendrez pas . . .

MERCÉDÈS: C'est impossible.

MORALÈS: Mercédès!

MERCÉDÈS: Je regrette . . .

MORALÈS: Frasquita! . . .

FRASQUITA: Je suis désolée . . .

ZUNIGA: Mais toi, Carmen, je suis bien sûr que tu ne refuseras pas . . .

CARMEN: C'est ce qui vous trompe, mon lieutenant . . . je refuse.

ZUNIGA: Tu m'en veux?

CARMEN: Pourquoi vous en voudrais-je?

ZUNIGA: Parce qu'il y a un mois, j'ai eu la cruauté de t'envoyer à la prison . . .

CARMEN: A la prison . . . je ne me souviens pas d'être allée à la prison . . .

ZUNIGA: Je sais pardieu bien que tu n'y es pas allée . . . le brigadier qui était chargé de te conduire ayant jugé à propos de te laisser échapper . . . et de se faire dégrader et emprisonner pour cela . . .

CARMEN: Dégrader et emprisonner?

ZUNIGA: Il a passé un mois en prison . . .

CARMEN: Mais il en est sorti?

ZUNIGA: Depuis hier seulement!

PASTIA: My God, gentlemen . . .

MORALÈS: Speak, come now . . .

PASTIA: It's beginning to get late and I, more than anyone, am obliged to observe the regulations.

MORALÈS: That means that you're showing us the door!

PASTIA: Oh no. Officers, oh no! . . . I only remind you that my inn should have been closed ten minutes ago . . .

ZUNIGA: God knows what goes on in your inn after closing time . . .

PASTIA: Oh, sir! . . .

ZUNIGA: Anyway, we still have time before roll-call to pass an hour at the theatre . . .
You'll come there with us, eh, girls?
(Pastia signs to the gypsy girls to refuse)

FRASQUITA: No, officers, no, we're staying here, we are.

ZUNIGA: What, you're not coming?—

MERCÉDÈS: It's impossible.

MORALÈS: Mercédès!

MERCÉDÈS: Sorry . . .

MORALÈS: Frasquita!

FRASQUITA: Ever so sorry . . .

ZUNIGA: But you, Carmen, I'm quite sure you won't refuse . . .

CARMEN: That's where you're wrong. Lieutenant, I do refuse.
(While the lieutenant is speaking to Carmen, two other lieutenants try to persuade Frasquita and Mercédès)

ZUNIGA: You've got a grudge against me?

CARMEN: Why should I have?

ZUNIGA: Because, a month ago, I was cruel enough to send you to prison . . .

CARMEN: (as though she did not remember) To prison? . . . I don't recall having gone to prison . . .

ZUNIGA: I know jolly well that you didn't go there . . . the corporal who had the job of taking you having opportunely decided to let you escape . . . and to get himself demoted and imprisoned for that . . .

CARMEN: (serious) Demoted and imprisoned?

ZUNIGA: He's spent a month in prison . . .

CARMEN: But he's out now?

ZUNIGA: Only since yesterday!

CARMEN: Tour est bien, puisqu'il en est sorti, tout est bien.

ZUNIGA: A la bonne heure, tu te consoles vite . . .

CARMEN: Si vous m'en croyez, vous ferez comme moi, vous voulez nous emmener, nous ne voulons pas vous suivre . . . vous vous consolerez . . .

MORALÈS: Il faudra bien.

CHOEUR: Vivat! vivat le toréro!
Vivat! vivat Escamillo! etc.

ZUNIGA: Qu'est-ce que c'est que ça?

MERCÉDÈS: Une promenade aux flambeaux . . .

FRASQUITA: C'est Escamillo . . . un torero qui s'est fait remarquer aux dernières courses de Grenade.

MERCÉDÈS: Pardieu, il faut le faire venir . . . nous boirons en son honneur!

ZUNIGA: C'est cela, je vais l'inviter.
Monsieur le toréro . . . voulez-vous faire l'amitié de monter ici? Vous y trouverez des gens qui aiment fort tous ceux qui, comme vous, ont de l'adresse et du courage . . .

CHOEUR: Vivat! vivat le toréro!
Vivat! vivat Escamillo! etc.

ZUNIGA: Nous vous remercions d'avoir accepté notre invitation; nous n'avons pas voulu vous laisser passer sans boire avec vous au grand art de la tauromachie.

ESCAMILLO: Messieurs les officiers, je vous remercie.

ESCAMILLO: Votre toast, je peux vous le rendre, señors, car avec les soldats,
oui, les toréros peuvent s'entendre,
pour plaisirs ils ont les combats!
Le cirque est plein, c'est jour de fête,
le cirque est plein du haut en bas.
Les spectateurs perdant la tête,
les spectateurs s'interpellent à grand fracas!
Apostrophes, cris et tapage poussés jusques à la fureur!
Car c'est la fête du courage!
c'est la fête des gens de coeur!
Allons! en garde! ah!
Toréador, en garde!
Et songe bien, oui, songe en combattant,
qu'un oeil noir te regarde et que l'amour t'attend!
Toréador, l'amour t'attend!

CARMEN: Everything's all right then, since he is out, everything's all right.

ZUNIGA: Well well, you console yourself quickly . . .

CARMEN: If you take my advice you'll do like me: you want to take us out, we don't want to come with you . . . you will console yourselves . . .

MORALÈS: We'll have to.
(The scene is interrupted by a chorus sung in the wings)

CHORUS: Hurrah! Hurrah for the torero!
Hurrah! Hurrah for Escamillo! etc.
(The dialogue continues during the singing of the above Chorus)

ZUNIGA: What's all that?

MERCÉDÈS: A torchlight procession . . .

FRASQUITA: It's Escamillo . . . a bullfighter who distinguished himself at the last Granada meetings.

MORALÈS: By jove, we must get him up here . . . we'll drink in his honor!

ZUNIGA: That's it, I'll invite him.
(He goes over to the window)
Señor torero, will you do us the kindness to step up here? You'll find chaps who are very fond of all those, like yourself, who have skill and courage . . .

CHORUS: Hurrah! Hurrah for the torero!
Hurrah! Hurrah for Escamillo! etc.
(Enters Escamillo)

ZUNIGA: We thank you for having accepted our invitation; we didn't want to let you go by without drinking with you to the great art of tauromachy.

ESCAMILLO: Gentlemen, I thank you.

ESCAMILLO: I can return your toast.
gentlemen, for soldiers—
yes—and bullfighters understand each other;
fighting is their game!
The ring is packed, it's a holiday,
the ring is full from top to bottom.
The spectators, losing their wits,
yell at each other at the tops of their voices!
Exclamations, cries and uproar carried to the pitch of fury!
For this is the fiesta of courage,
this is the fiesta of the stouthearted!
Let's go! On guard! Ah!
Toreador, on guard!
And remember, yes, remember as you fight that two dark eyes are watching you, that love awaits you!
Toreador, love awaits you!

TOUT LE MONDE: Toréador, en garde! etc.

ESCAMILLO: Tout d'un coup, on fait silence, on fait silence, ah! que se passe-t-il?
Plus de cris, c'est l'instant!
Le taureau s'élance
en bondissant hors du toril!
Il s'élance! Il entre, il frappe!
Un cheval roule, entraînant un picador!
"Ah! bravo Toro!" hurle la foule;
le taureau va, il vient,
il vient et frappe encore!
En secouant ses banderilles,
plein de fureur, il court!
Le cirque est plein de sang!
On se sauve, on franchit les grilles.
C'est ton tour maintenant!
Allons! en garde! ah!
Toréador, en garde! etc.

TOUT LE MONDE: Toréador, en garde! etc.
. . . . l'amour t'attend!

FRASQUITA: L'Amour!

ESCAMILLO: L'Amour!

MERCÉDÈS: L'Amour!

ESCAMILLO: L'Amour!

CARMEN: L'Amour!

TOUT LE MONDE: Toréador, Toréador! L'Amour! t'attend!

PASTIA: Messieurs les officiers, je vous en prie.

ZUNIGA: C'est bien, c'est bien, nous partons.

ESCAMILLO: Dis-moi ton nom, et la première fois que je frapperai le taureau, ce sera ton nom que je prononcerai.

CARMEN: Je m'appelle la Carmencita.

ESCAMILLO: La Carmencita?

CARMEN: Carmen, la Carmencita, comme tu voudras.

ESCAMILLO: Eh bien! Carmen ou la Carmencita, si je m'avisais de t'aimer et d'être aimé de toi, qu'est-ce tu me répondrais?

CARMEN: Je répondrais que tu peux m'aimer tout à ton aise mais que quant à être aimé de moi pour le moment, il n'y faut pas songer!

ESCAMILLO: J'attendrai alors et me contenterai d'espérer . . .

CARMEN: Il n'est pas défendu d'attendre et il est toujours agréable d'espérer.

ZUNIGA: Ecoute-moi, Carmen, puisque tu ne veux pas venir avec nous, c'est moi que dans une heure reviendrai ici . . .

CHORUS: Toreador, on guard! etc.
(Carmen refills Escamillo's glass)

ESCAMILLO: Suddenly everyone falls silent;
ah—what's happening?
No more shouts, this is the moment!
The bull comes bounding
out of the toril!
He charges, comes in, strikes!
A horse rolls over, dragging down a picador!
"Ah! Bravo bull!" roars the crowd;
the bull turns, comes back,
comes back and strikes again!
Shaking his banderillas,
maddened with rage, he runs about!
The ring is covered with blood!
Men jump clear, leap the barriers.
It's your turn now!
Let's go! On guard! Ah!
Toreador, on guard! etc.

CHORUS: Toreador, on guard! etc.
. . . . love awaits you!

FRASQUITA: Love!

ESCAMILLO: Love!

MERCÉDÈS: Love!

ESCAMILLO: Love!

CARMEN: Love!

ALL: Toreador, Toreador, love awaits you!
(They drink and exchange handshakes with the toreador)

PASTIA: Officers, sirs, I beg you.

ZUNIGA: All right, all right, we're going.
(The officers start to get ready to leave.—Escamillo finds himself beside Carmen)

ESCAMILLO: Tell me your name, and the first time I kill a bull it will be your name that I utter.

CARMEN: I'm called Carmencita.

ESCAMILLO: Carmencita?

CARMEN: Carmen, Carmencita, as you like.

ESCAMILLO: Well then! Carmen or Carmencita, if I took it into my head to love you and be loved by you, what would you answer?

CARMEN: I should answer that you can love me just as you please, but as for being loved by me just at present, you mustn't think of it!

ESCAMILLO: Then I'll wait, and content myself with hoping . . .

CARMEN: It's not forbidden to wait, and it's always pleasant to hope.

ZUNIGA: (quietly, to Carmen) Listen to me, Carmen. Since you won't come with us, it's I who'll come back here in an hour . . .

CARMEN: Je ne vous conseille pas de revenir . . .	CARMEN: I don't advise you to come back . . .
ZUNIGA: Je reviendrai tout de même. Nous partons avec vous, torero, et nous nous joindrons au cortège qui vous accompagne.	ZUNIGA: (quietly to Carmen) I'll come back all the same. (Out loud) We'll leave with you, torero, and tack ourselves on to the procession that accompanies you. (Everybody goes out except Carmen, Frasquita, Mercédès and Lillas Pasita)
FRASQUITA: (à Pastia) Pourquoi étais-tu si pressé de les faire partir?	FRASQUITA: (to Pastia) Why were you so eager to send them away?
PASTIA: Le Dancaire et le Remendado viennent d'arriver . . .	PASTIA: Dancaire and Remendado have just arrived . . .
PASTIA: Les voici . . .	PASTIA: (opening a door and gesturing as he calls out) Here they are . . . (Enter El Dancaïro and El Remendado. Pastia closes the doors, puts up the shutters, etc., etc.)
FRASQUITA: Eh bien, les nouvelles?	FRASQUITA: Well, the news?
LE DANCAÏRE: Pas trop mauvaises, les nouvelles; nous arrivons de Gibraltar.	EL DANCAÏRO: Not too bad, the news. We've just come from Gibraltar.
LE REMENDADO: Jolie ville, Gibraltar! . . . on y voit des Anglais, beaucoup d'Anglais, de jolis hommes les Anglais, un peu froids, mais distingués.	EL REMENDADO: Nice town, Gibraltar! . . . you see the English there, lots of English, nice chaps the English, a trifle cold, but gentlemanly.
LE DANCAÏRE: Remendado! . . .	EL DANCAÏRO: Remendado! . . .
LE REMENDADO: Patron.	EL REMENDADO: Boss.
LE DANCAÏRE: Taisez-vous. Nous avons arrangé l'embarquement de marchandises anglaises. Nous irons le attendre près de la côte, nous en cacherons une partie dans la montagne et nous ferons passer la reste. Tous nos camarades ont été prévenus . . . mais c'est de vous trois surtout que nous avons besoin . . . vous allez partir avec nous.	EL DANCAÏRO: Shut up. We arranged to take on board some English goods. We're going to wait for it near the coast. We'll hide some of the stuff up the mountain and run the rest. All our comrades have been warned . . . but it's you three we need principally . . . you'll leave with us.
CARMEN: (riant) Pourquoi faire? pour vous aider à porter des ballots?	CARMEN: (laughing) What for? To help you carry the bales?
LE REMENDADO: Oh! non . . . faire porter des ballots à des dames . . . ça ne serait pas distingué.	EL REMENDADO: Oh no!—make the ladies carry the bales . . . that wouldn't be at all the thing.
LE DANCAÏRE: (menaçant) Remendado?	EL DANCAÏRO: (threateningly) Remendado?
LE REMENDADO: Oui, patron.	EL REMENDADO: Yes, boss.
LE DANCAÏRE: Nous ne vous ferons pas porter de ballots, mais nous avons besoin de vous pour autre chose.	EL DANCAÏRO: We're not going to make you carry any bales, but we do need you for something else.
LE DANCAÏRE: Nous avons en tête une affaire.	EL DANCAÏRO: We have a scheme in mind.
MERCÉDÈS ET FRASQUITA: Est-elle bonne, dites-nous?	MERCÉDÈS AND FRASQUITA: Tell us, is it good?
LE DANCAÏRE ET LE REMENDADO: Elle est admirable, ma chère; mais nous avons besoin de vous.	EL DANCAÏRO AND EL REMENDADO: It's admirable, my dear; but we require your services.
TOUS LE CINQ: De nous? etc. De vous! etc.	QUINTET: Ours? etc. Yours! etc.
LES DEUX HOMMES: Car nous l'avouons humblement, et fort respectueusement: quand il s'agit de tromperie, de duperie, de volerie, il est toujours bon, sur ma foi, d'avoir les femmes avec soi, Et sans elles, mes toutes belles, on ne fait jamais rien de bien!	THE TWO MEN: For we humbly and most respectfully acknowledge: when it's a question of trickery, of deception, of thieving, it's always good, I swear, to have women around. And without them. my lovelies, no one ever does any good!
LES TROIS FEMMES: Quoi! sans nous jamais rien de bien?	THE THREE GIRLS: What? Without us no one does any good?
LES DEUX HOMMES: N'êtes-vous pas de cet avis?	THE TWO MEN: Isn't that your opinion?
LES TROIS FEMMES: Si fait, je suis de cet avis. Si fait, vraiment je suis.	GIRLS: Indeed, that's my opinion. Yes indeed, really it is.
TOUS LES CINQ: Quand il s'agit de tromperie, etc.	QUINTET: When it's a question of trickery, etc.
LE DANCAÏRE: C'est dit alors; vous partirez?	EL DANCAÏRO: It's settled then; you'll go?
FRASQUITA ET MERCÉDÈS: Quand vous voudrez.	FRASQUITA AND MERCÉDÈS: Whenever you like.
LE DANCAÏRE: Mais tout de suite.	EL DANCAÏRO: Why, straight away.
CARMEN: Ah! permettez! S'il vous plait de partir, partez, mais je ne suis pas du voyage. Je ne pars pas, je ne pars pas!	CARMEN: Ah! just a moment! If you want to go, go; but I'm not in on this trip. I won't go! I won't go!
LES DEUX HOMMES: Carmen, mon amour, tu viendras—	THE MEN: Carmen, my love, you will come—
CARMEN: Je ne pars pas; je ne pars pas!	CARMEN: I won't go! I won't go!
LES DEUX HOMMES: Et tu n'auras pas le courage de nous laisser dans l'embarras.	THE MEN: And you won't have the heart to leave us in the lurch.
FRASQUITA ET MERCÉDÈS: Ah! ma Carmen, tu viendras.	FRASQUITA AND MERCÉDÈS: Ah! my Carmen, you will come.
CARMEN: Je ne pars pas, etc.	CARMEN: I won't go! etc.
LE DANCAÏRE: Mais, au moins la raison. Carmen, tu la diras.	EL DANCAÏRO: But the reason, Carmen, at least you'll tell us the reason.
TOUS LES QUATRE: La raison, la raison!	QUARTET: The reason, the reason!
CARMEN: Je la dirai certainement.	CARMEN: Certainly I'll give it.
TOUS LES QUATRE: Voyons! Voyons!	QUARTET: Let's have it! Let's have it!
CARMEN: La raison, c'est qu'en ce moment . . .	CARMEN: The reason is that at this moment . . .
TOUS LES QUATRE: Eh bien? Eh bien?	QUARTET: Well? Well?
CARMEN: Je suis amoureuse!	CARMEN: I'm in love!
LES DEUX HOMMES: (stupéfaits) Qu'a-t-elle dit?	THE MEN: (astonished) What did she say?
LES DEUX FEMMES: Elle dit qu'elle est amoureuse!	THE GIRLS: She says she's in love!
TOUS LES QUATRE: Amoureuse!	QUARTET: In love!
CARMEN: Oui, amoureuse!	CARMEN: Yes, in love!
LE DANCAÏRE: Voyons, Carmen, sois sérieuse!	EL DANCAÏRO: See here, Carmen, be serious!
CARMEN: Amoureuse à perdre l'esprit!	CARMEN: Head over heels in love!
LES DEUS HOMMES: La chose, certes, nous étonne, mais ce n'est pas le premier jour où vous aurez su, ma mignonne, faire marcher de front le devoir et l'amour.	THE MEN: This is certainly astonishing, but it's not the first time, my pet, that you've been able to combine love and duty.

CARMEN: Mes amis, je serais fort aise de partir avec vous ce soir; mais cette fois ne vous déplaise, il faudra que l'amour passe avant le devoir.	CARMEN: My friends, I'd be most happy to go with you this evening; but this time—don't be annoyed— love must come before duty.
LE DANCAÏRE: Ce n'est pas là ton dernier mot?	EL DANCAÏRO: That's not your final word?
CARMEN: Absolument!	CARMEN: Absolutely!
LE REMENDADO: Il faut que tu te laisses attendrir.	EL REMENDADO: You must relent.
TOUS LES QUATRE: Il faut venir, Carmen, il faut venir! Pour notre affaire, c'est nécessaire, car entre nous . . .	QUARTET: You must come, Carmen, you must come! It's necessary for our scheme, for between ourselves . . .
CARMEN: Quant à cela, je l'admets avec vous . . .	CARMEN: As to that, I admit with you that . . .
REPRISE GÉNÉRALE: Quand il s'agit de tromperie, etc.	QUINTET: (reprise) When it's a question of trickery, etc.
LE DANCAÏRE: En voilà assez; je t'ai dit qu'il fallait venir, et tu viendras . . . je suis le chef.	EL DANCAÏRO: Enough of that; I told you you must come, and you will come . . . I am the leader.
CARMEN: Comment dis-tu ca?	CARMEN: What's that you say?
LE DANCAÏRE: Je te dis que je suis le chef.	EL DANCAÏRO: I tell you I'm the leader.
CARMEN: Et tu crois que je t'obéirai?	CARMEN: And you think I'll obey you?
LE DANCAÏRE: (furieux) Carmen! . . .	EL DANCAÏRO: (furious) Carmen! . . .
LE REMENDADO: Je vous en prie . . . des personnes si distinguées.	EL REMENDADO: (throwing himself between Dancaïro and Carmen) I beg you . . . such genteel persons.
LE DANCAÏRE: Amoureuse . . . ce n'est pas une raison, cela.	EL DANCAÏRO: In love . . . that's not a reason.
CARMEN: Partez sans moi . . . j'irai vous rejoindre demain, mais pour ce soir je reste.	CARMEN: Leave without me. I'll come and join you tomorrow, but for this evening I'm staying.
FRASQUITA: Je ne t'ai jamais vue comme cela; qui attends-tu donc?	FRASQUITA: I've never seen you like this. Who are you expecting?
CARMEN: Un pauvre diable du soldat qui m'a rendu service . . .	CARMEN: A poor devil of a soldier who did me a service . . .
MERCÉDÈS: Ce soldat qui était en prison?	MERCÉDÈS: That soldier who was in prison?
CARMEN: Oui.	CARMEN: Yes.
LE DANCAÏRE: Je parierais qu'il ne viendra pas.	EL DANCAÏRO: I'd bet you he won't come.
CARMEN: Ne parie pas, tu perdrais . . .	CARMEN: Don't bet, you would lose . . . (José's voice is heard in the distance)
JOSÉ: Halte là! Qui va là? Dragon d'Alcala! Où t'en vas-tu par là, Dragon d'Alcala?— Moi, je m'en vais faire mordre la poussière à mon adversaire.— S'il en est ainsi, passez, mon ami. Affaire d'honneur, affaire de coeur; pour nous tout est là Dragons d'Alcala!	JOSÉ: (in the far distance) Halt! Who goes there? Dragoon of Alcala! Where are you going there, Dragoon of Alcala?— Me, I'm going to make my rival bite the dust.— If that's the case, pass, my friend. An affair of honor, an affair of the heart— that explains everything for us Dragoons of Alcala! (There is no break in the music. Carmen, Dancaïro, Remendado, Mercédès and Frasquita watch the arrival of José through the half-open shutters)
MERCÉDÈS: C'est un dragon, ma foi.	MERCÉDÈS: Faith, it's a dragoon.
FRASQUITA: Un beau dragon.	FRASQUITA: A handsome dragoon.
LE DANCAÏRE: (a Carmen) Eh bien, Carmen, puisque tu ne veux venir que demain, sais-tu au moins ce que tu devrais faire?	EL DANCAÏRO: (to Carmen) Well, Carmen, since you won't come until tomorrow, d'you know at least what you ought to do?
CARMEN: Qu'est-ce que je devrais faire?	CARMEN: What is it I ought to do?
LE DANCAÏRE: Tu devrais décider ton dragon à venir avec toi et à se joindre à nous.	EL DANCAÏRO: You ought to persuade your dragoon to come with you and join us.
CARMEN: Ah! . . . si cela se pouvait! . . . Mais il n'y faut pas penser . . . ce sont des bêtises . . . il est trop niais.	CARMEN: Ah, if that were possible! . . . But you mustn't think of it . . . it's nonsense . . . he's too simple.
LE DANCAÏRE: Pourquoi l'aimes-tu puisque tu en conviens toi-même?	EL DANCAÏRO: Why do you love him, since you yourself admit it?
CARMEN: Parce qu'il est joli garçon donc et qu'il me plaît.	CARMEN: Because he's a nice boy and he pleases me.
LE REMENDADO: (avec fatuité) Le patron ne comprend pas ça, lui . . . qu'il suffise d'être joli garçon pour plaire aux femmes . . .	EL REMENDADO: (fatuously) The boss, he doesn't understand that . . . that it's enough to be a nice boy in order to please the women . . .
LE DANCAÏRE: Attends un peu, attends un peu . . .	EL DANCAÏRO: Wait a moment, you, wait a moment . . . (Remendado makes his escape and goes out. Dancaïro pursues him and goes out in his turn, dragging along Mercédès and Frasquita who are trying to calm him down)
JOSÉ: Halte là! Qui va là? Dragon d'Alcala! Où t'en vas-tu par là, Dragon d'Alcala?— Exact et fidèle, je vais où m'appelle l'amour de ma belle!— S'il en est ainsi, passez, mon ami. Affaire d'honneur, affaire de coeur; pour nous tout est là Dragons d'Alcala!	JOSÉ: (the sound of his voice growing closer) Halt! Who goes there? Dragoon of Alcala! Where are you going there, Dragoon of Alcala?— Punctual and faithful, I go where the love of my fair lady calls me!— If that's the case, pass, friend. An affair of the heart, an affair of the heart, that explains everything for us Dragoons of Alcala! (Don José enters)
CARMEN: Enfin . . . te voilà . . . C'est bien heureux!	CARMEN: At last . . . so there you are . . . This is a fine thing!
JOSÉ: Il y a deux heures seulement que je suis sorti de prison.	JOSÉ: It's only two hours since I came out of prison.
CARMEN: Qui t'empêchait de sortir plus tôt? Je t'avais envoyé une lime et une pièce d'or.	CARMEN: What prevented you from getting out sooner? I had sent you a file and a gold coin.
JOSÉ: Que veux-tu? j'ai encore mon honneur de soldat, et déserter me semblerait un grand crime . . . Oh! je ne t'en suis pas moins reconnaissant. La lime me servira pour affiler ma lance et je	JOSÉ: What d'you expect? I still have my soldier's honour, and to desert would seem to me to be a great crime . . . Oh, I'm none the less grateful to you. The file will be useful to me for sharpening my l'ai gardé comme souvenir de toi. Quant à l'argent . . .	lance and I've kept it as a memento of you. (holding out the gold coin to her) As for the money . . .

CARMEN: Tiens, il l'a gardé! Holà! . . . Lillas Pastia, holà!	CARMEN: Hullo, he's kept it! (shouting and hammering) Hi there! . . . Lillas Pastia, hi! (enter Pastia)
CARMEN: Apporte-nous du Manzanilla . . . apporte-nous de tout ce que tu as, de tout, de tout . . .	CARMEN: (tossing him the coin) Bring us some Manzanilla . . . bring us everything you have, everything, the lot . . .
PASTIA: Tour de suite, mademoiselle Carmencita.	PASTIA: At once, señorita Camencita. (He goes out)
CARMEN: (à don José) Tu regrettes de t'être fait mettre en prison pour mes beaux yeux?	CARMEN: (to Don José) You regret having been put in prison for the sake of my lovely eyes?
JOSÉ: Non. On m'a mis en prison, on m'a ôté mon grade, mais ça m'est égal.	JOSÉ: No. They put me in prison, they stripped me of my rank, but it's all one to me.
CARMEN: Parce que tu m'aimes?	CARMEN: Because you love me?
JOSÉ: Oui, parce que je t'aime, parce que je t'adore.	JOSÉ: Yes, because I love you, because I adore you.
CARMEN: Ton lieutenant était ici tout à l'heure, avec d'autres officiers, ils nous ont fait danser.	CARMEN: Your lieutenant was here just now with some other officers. They made us dance.
JOSÉ: Tu as dansé?	JOSÉ: You danced?
CARMEN: Oui; et ton lieutenant s'est permis de me dire qu'il m'adorait . . .	CARMEN: Yes; and your lieutenant allowed himself to tell me that he adored me . . .
JOSÉ: Carmen!	JOSÉ: Carmen!
CARMEN: Qu'est-ce que tu as? . . . Est-ce que tu serais jaloux, par hasard?	CARMEN: What's the matter with you? . . . Would you be jealous, by any chance?
JOSÉ: Mais certainement, je suis jaloux . . .	JOSÉ: Why, certainly I'm jealous . . .
CARMEN: Eh bien, si tu le veux, je danserai pour toi maintenant, pour toi seul.	CARMEN: Well then, if you want me to, I'll dance for you now, for you alone.
JOSÉ: Ah! que je t'aime, Carmen, que je t'aime!	JOSÉ: Ah, how I love you, Carmen, how I love you!
CARMEN: Je l'espère bien.	CARMEN: So I should hope.
CARMEN: Je vais danser en votre honneur, et vous verrez, seigneur, comment je sais moi-même accompagner ma danse! Mettez-vous là, Don José, je commence!	CARMEN: I am going to dance in your honor, and you will see, my lord, how I am able to accompany my dance! Sit down there, Don José, I'll begin! (She makes José sit down in a corner, and starts to dance, humming and accompanying herself with her castanets. José is entranced. Bugles are heard in the distance sounding Retreat. José cocks an ear. He comes over to Carmen and compels her to stop)
JOSÉ: Attendez, Carmen, rien qu'un moment, arrête!	JOSÉ: Wait, Carmen, only for a moment, stop!
CARMEN: Et pour quoi, s'il te plaît?	CARMEN: And why, if you please?
JOSÉ: Il me semble, là-bas . . . oui, ce sont nos clairons qui sonnent la retraite! Ne les entends-tu pas?	JOSÉ: I think, over there . . . yes, those are our bugles sounding Retreat! Can't you hear them?
CARMEN: Bravo! Bravo! J'avais beau faire; il est mélancholique de danser sans orchestre. Et vive la musique qui nous tombe du ciel!	CARMEN: Bravo! Bravo! I was trying in vain; it's dismal dancing without an orchestra. And long live music that drops on us out of the skies! (She resumes her song. The bugles sound nearer, pass beneath the windows of the inn, then fade in the distance. José makes a new effort to tear himself from his contemplation of Carmen. He seizes her arm and compels her to stop once more)
JOSÉ: Tu ne m'as pas compris, Carmen, c'est la retraite; il faut que moi, je rentre au quartier pour l'appel.	JOSÉ: You didn't understand me, Carmen, it's Retreat; I've got to get back to quarters for roll-call.
CARMEN: Au quartier! pour l'appel! Ah! j'étais vraiment trop bête! Je me mettais en quatre et je faisais des frais, oui, je faisais des frais pour amuser monsieur! Je chantais! Je dansais! Je crois, Dieu me pardonne, qu'un peu plus, je l'aimais! Taratata! C'est le clarion qui sonne! Taratata! Il part! il est parti! Va-t'en donc, canari! Tiens; prends ton shako, ton sabre, ta giberne; et va-t'en, mon garçon, va-t'en! Retourne à ta caserne!	CARMEN: To quarters! For roll-call! Ah! Really I was too stupid! I went out of my way and took the trouble, yes, I took the trouble to entertain the gentleman! I sang! I danced! I believe, God forgive me, I almost fell in love! Tartata! It's the bugle sounding! Tartata! He's off! He's gone! Go on then, canary!* (angrily throwing his cap at him) Here! take your shako, your sword, your bandolier; and clear off, my son, clear off! Clear off back to your barracks!
JOSÉ: C'est mal à toi, Carmen, de te moquer de moi! Je souffre de partir, car jamais, jamais femme, jamais femme avant toi, aussi profondément n'avait troublé mon âme!	JOSÉ: It's cruel of you, Carmen, to make fun of me! It pains me to go, for never, never has a woman, never before you has any woman so deeply stirred my heart!
CARMEN: "Taratata, mon Dieu! c'est la retraite! Taratata, je vais être en retard!" Il court, il perd la tête, et voila son amour!	CARMEN: "Taratata, my God! It's the Retreat! Taratata, I'm going to be late!" He loses his wits, he rushes off, and that's his love!
JOSÉ: Ainsi, tu ne crois pas à mon amour?	JOSÉ: So you don't believe in my love?
CARMEN: Mais non!	CARMEN: Of course not!
JOSÉ: Eh bien! tu m'entendras!	JOSÉ: Very well! You shall listen to me!
CARMEN: Je ne veux rien entendre!	CARMEN: I won't listen to anything!
JOSÉ: Tu m'entendras!	JOSÉ: You shall hear me!
CARMEN: Tu vas te faire attendre!	CARMEN: You're going to be late!
JOSÉ: Tu m'entendras! Carmen!	JOSÉ: You shall hear me! Carmen!
CARMEN: Non! non! non! non!	CARMEN: No! No! No! No!
JOSÉ: Oui, tu m'entendras! Je le veux! Carmen, tu m'entendras! La fleur que tu m'avais jetée, dans ma prison m'était restée. Flétrie et sèche, cette fleur gardait toujours sa douce odeur; et pendant des heures entières,	JOSÉ: Yes, you shall hear me! I insist! Carmen, you shall hear me! (He reaches inside his tunic and takes out the cassia flower Carmen threw him in Act One) The flower that you threw to me stayed with me in my prison.

sur mes yeux, fermant mes paupières, de cette odeur je m'enivrais et dans la nuit je te voyais!
Je me prenais à te maudire,
à te détester, à me dire;
Pourquoi faut-il que le destin
l'ait mise là sur mon chemin?
Puis je m'accusais de blasphème,
et je ne sentais en moi-même,
je ne sentais qu'un seul désir,
un seul désir, un seul espoir:
te revoir, ô Carmen, oui, te revoir!
Car tu n'avais eu qu'à paraître,
qu'à jeter un regard sur moi, pour t'emparer de tout mon être,
ô ma Carmen!
et j'étais une chose à toi!
Carmen, je t'aime!

CARMEN: Non, tu ne m'aimes pas!

JOSÉ: Que dis-tu?

CARMEN: Non, tu ne m'aimes pas!
non! Car si tu m'aimais, là-bas, là-bas,
tu me suivrais.

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: Oui!—
Là-bas, là-bas, dans la montagne,

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: là-bas, là-bas, tu me suivrais.
Sur ton cheval tu me prendrais,
et comme un brave à travers la campagne,
en croupe, tu m'emporterais!
Là-bas, là-bas, dans la montagne!

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: Là-bas, là-bas, tu me suivrais,
Si tu m'aimais!
Tu n'y dépendrais de personne;
point d'officier à qui tu doives obéir et point de retraite qui sonne pour dire à l'amoureux
qu'il est temps de partir!
Le ciel ouvert, la vie errante, pour pays l'univers;
et pour loi ta volonté,
et surtout la chose enivrante:
la liberté! la liberté!

JOSÉ: Mon Dieu!

CARMEN: Là-bas, là-bas, dans la montagne,

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: là-bas, là-bas, si tu m'aimais,

JOSÉ: Tais-toi!

Withered and dried up, that flower always kept its sweet perfume;
and for hours at a time,
with my eyes closed,
I became drunk with its smell
and in the night I used to see you!
I took to cursing you,
detesting you, asking myself
why did destiny
have to throw her across my path?
Then I accused myself of blasphemy,
and felt within myself,
I felt but one desire,
one desire, one hope:
to see you again, Carmen, to see you again!
For you had only to appear,
only to throw a glance my way,
to take possession of my whole being,
O my Carmen,
and I was your chattel!
Carmen, I love you!

CARMEN: No, you don't love me!

JOSÉ: What are you saying?

CARMEN: No, you don't love me,
no! For if you did,
you'd follow me
over there.

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: Yes!—
Away over there into the mountains,

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: away over there you'd follow me.
You'd take me up behind you on your horse and like a daredevil you'd carry me off across the country!
Away over there into the mountains!

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: Away over there you'd follow me,
if you loved me!
There you'd not be dependent on anyone;
there'd be no officer you had to obey,
and no Retreat sounding to tell a lover
that it is time to go!
The open sky, the wandering life,
the whole wide world your domain;
for law your own free will,
and above all, that intoxicating thing:
Freedom! Freedom!

JOSÉ: Oh God!

CARMEN: Away over there into the mountains,

JOSÉ: Carmen!

CARMEN: away over there, if you loved me,

JOSÉ: Stop it!

CARMEN: là-bas, là-bas tu me suivrais!
Sur ton cheval tu me prendrais . . .

JOSÉ: Ah! Carmen! hélas! tais-toi!
tais-toi! mon Dieu!

CARMEN: et comme un brave, à travers la campagne,
oui, tu m'emporterais, si tu m'aimais.

JOSÉ: Hélas! hélas!

CARMEN: Oui, n'est-ce pas, là-bas, là-bas tu me suivrais!
tu m'aimes et tu me suivrais!
Là-bas, là-bas emporte-moi!

JOSÉ: Pitié! Carmen! pitié!
O mon Dieu, hélas!
Ah! tais-toi! tais-toi!
Non! Je n veux plus t'écouter!
Quitter mon drapeau . . . déserter . . .
c'est la honte, c'est l'infamie!
Je n'en veux pas!

CARMEN: Eh bien, pars!

JOSÉ: Carmen, je t'en prie!

CARMEN: Non! je ne t'aime plus!

JOSÉ: Ecoute!

CARMEN: Va! je te hais!
Adieu! mais adieu pour jamais!

JOSÉ: Eh bien, soit . . . adieu, adieu pour jamais!

CARMEN: Va-t'en!

JOSÉ: Carmen! adieu! adieu pour jamais!

CARMEN: Adieu!

ZUNIGA: (au dehors) Holà Carmen! Holà! Holà!

JOSÉ: Qui frappe? qui vient là?

CARMEN: Tais-toi! Tais-toi!

ZUNIGA: J'ouvre moi-même et j'entre.
Ah! fi, ah! fi, la belle!
Le choix n'est pas heureux; c'est se mésallier de prendre le soldat quand on a l'officier.
Allons! Décampe!

JOSÉ: Non!

ZUNIGA: Si fait, tu partiras!

JOSÉ: Je ne partirai pas!

ZUNIGA: Drôle!

JOSÉ: Tonnerre! il va pleuvoir des coups!

JOSÉ: Au diable le jaloux!
(appelant) A moi! à moi!

CARMEN: away over there you'd follow me!
You'd take me up on your horse . . .

JOSÉ: Ah, Carmen! alas! stop! stop!
Oh God!

CARMEN: and like a daredevil you'd carry me off
across the country, if you loved me.

JOSÉ: Alas! alas!

CARMEN: Yes, isn't it so,
you will follow me there,
you love me and you'll follow me!
Take me away over there!

JOSÉ: Pity, Carmen! Have pity!
Oh, God, alas!
Ah, stop, stop!
No! I won't listen to you!
To abandon my colors . . . to desert . . .
that's shameful, that's dastardly!
I'll have none of it!

CARMEN: All right then, go!

JOSÉ: Carmen, I implore you!

CARMEN: No, I don't love you any more!

JOSÉ: Listen!

CARMEN: Go! I hate you!
Goodbye! And goodbye for ever!

JOSÉ: All right, so be it . . . goodbye for ever!

CARMEN: Get out!

JOSÉ: Carmen! Goodbye, goodbye for ever!

CARMEN: Goodbye!
(Don José hurries towards the door; just as he reaches it, somebody knocks)

ZUNIGA: (outside) Hallo there, Carmen! Hallo! Hallo!

JOSÉ: Who's that knocking?
Who's there?

CARMEN: Keep quiet!

ZUNIGA: (forcing the door) I'm opening up myself, and coming in.
(sees Don José—to Carmen)
Ah! fi, fi! My lovely lady!
This isn't a happy choice; it's demeaning to take the soldier when you've got the officer.
(to Don José)
Off with you, get moving!

JOSÉ: No!

ZUNIGA: You certainly will go!

JOSÉ: I shall not go!

ZUNIGA: (striking him) Scoundrel!

JOSÉ: (drawing his sword) By thunder! It's going to rain blows!

CARMEN: (throwing herself between them) Devil take the jealous!
(calling) Help! Help!
(Gypsies appear from all sides.

	Carmen points to Zuniga. El Dancaïro and El Remendado hurl themselves upon him and disarm him)
CARMEN: Bel officier! Bel officier, l'amour vous joue en ce moment un assez vilain tour. Vous arrivez fort mal, hélas! et nous sommes forcés, ne voulant être dénoncés, de vous garder au moins . . . pendant une heure.	CARMEN: My fine officer! My fine officer, love at the moment is playing you a rather dirty trick. Your arrival is most untimely; and alas, we are compelled, not wishing to be betrayed, to detain you . . . for at least an hour.
LE DANCAÏRE ET LE REMENDADO: Mon cher monsieur, nous allons, s'il vous plaît, quitter cette demeure; vous viendrez avec nous?	EL DANCAÏRO AND EL REMENDADO: My dear sir, if you please, we are going to leave this establishment; you'll come with us?
CARMEN: C'est une promenade.	CARMEN: Just for a stroll.
LE DANCAÏRE ET LE REMENDADO: Consentez-vous?	EL DANCAÏRO AND EL REMENDADO: Do you consent?
TOUS LES BOHÉMIENS: Réspondez, camarade.	ALL THE GYPSIES: Answer, comrade.
ZUNIGA: Certainement, d'autant plus que votre argument est un de ceux auxquels on ne résiste guère, mais gare à vous! Gare à vous plus tard!	ZUNIGA: Certainly. the more so since your argument is one of those that can hardly be resisted; but take care! Look out for yourselves later!
LE DANCAÏRE: La guerre, c'est la guerre! En attendant, mon officier, passez devant sans vous faire prier!	EL DANCAÏRO: War is war! Meantime, my good sir, carry on without further argument!
LE REMENDADO ET LES BOHÉMIENS: Passez devant sans vous faire prier!	EL REMENDADO AND THE GYPSIES: Carry on without further argument! (The officer is led out by four gypsies armed with pistols)
CARMEN: Es-tu des nôtres maintenant?	CARMEN: (to Don José) Are you one of us now?
JOSÉ: Il le faut bien.	JOSÉ: I have no alternative.
CARMEN: Ah! le mot n'est pas galant, mais qu'importe, va, tu t'y feras quand tu verras comme c'est beau, la vie errante; pour pays, l'univers, et pour loi ta volonté, et surtout, la chose, enivrante: la liberté! la liberté!	CARMEN: Ah! that's not gallantly put, but no matter, go, you'll take to it there when you see how fine is the wandering life; the whole world your domain, your own free will for law, and above all that intoxicating thing: Freedom! Freedom!
TOUS: (à Don José) Suis-nous à travers la campagne, viens avec nous dans la montagne, suis-nous et tu t'y feras quand tu verras, là-bas, comme c'est beau, la vie errante; pour pays, l'univers, et pour loi, ta volonté! Et surtout, la chose envirante: la liberté! la liberté! Le ciel ouvert, la vie errante, pour pays tout l'univers; pour loi ta volunté, et surtout la chose enivrante: la liberté! la liberté!	ALL: (to Don José) Take to the country with us. come with us into the mountains, come with us and you'll take to it there when you see, away over there, how fine is the wandering life; the whole world your domain, your own free will for law! And above all that intoxicating thing: Freedom! Freedom! The open sky, the wandering life, the whole wide world your domain; your own free will for law, and above all that intoxicating thing: Freedom! Freedom!

■ Entr'acte	■ Entr'acte
■ ACTE III	■ ACT III
	(The curtain rises on a wild and rocky scene; the night is dark and the solitude complete. During the musical prelude a smuggler appears at the top of the rocks, then another, then two, more, and finally twenty here and there, climbing and scrambling over the rocks. Some of them are carrying heavy bales on their shoulders)
CHOEUR: Ecoute, écoute, compagnon, écoute, la fortune est là-bas, là-bas, mais prends garde pendant la route, prends garde de faire un faux pas!	CHORUS: Listen, friend, listen. fortune lies over there, but take care along the way, and watch your step!
LE DANCAÏRE, LE REMENDADO, JOSÉ, CARMEN, MERCÉDÈS ET FRASQUITA: Notre métier est bon, mais pour le faire il faut avoir une âme forte! Et le péril est en haut, il est en bas, il est partout, qu'importe! Nous allons devant nous sans souci du torrent, sans souci de l'orage, sans souci du soldat qui là-bas nous attend, et nous guette au passage— sans souci nous allons en avant!	EL DANCAÏRO, EL REMENDADO, JOSÉ, CARMEN, MERCÉDÈS AND FRASQUITA: Our calling is a good one, but to follow it you must have a stout heart! There's danger up above, and down below, it's everywhere—what of it! We go forward without worrying about the torrent, without worrying about the storm, without worrying about the soldier who's wanting for us over there, and keeping a sharp lookout for us— we go forward without worrying!
TOUS: Ecoute, compagnon, écoute, etc.	ALL: Listen, friend, listen, etc.
LE DANCAÏRE: Halte! nous allons nous arrêter ici . . . ceux qui ont sommeil pourront dormir pendant une demi-heure.	EL DANCAÏRO: Halt! We're going to stop here . . . those who feel sleepy can doss down for half an hour.
LE REMENDADO: Ah!	EL REMENDADO: (stretching himself out voluptuously) Ah!
LE DANCAÏRE: Je vais, moi, voir s'il y a moyen de faire entrer les marchandises dans la ville . . . une brèche s'est faite dans le mur d'enceinte et nous pourrions passer parlà. Remendado!	EL DANCAÏRO: Me, I'm going to see if there's some way of getting the stuff into the town . . . a gap has been made in the outer wall and we could get through that way. (calling out) Remendado!
LE REMENDADO: Hé?	EL REMENDADO: (waking up) Eh?
LE DANCAÏRE: Debout, tu vas venir avec moi.	EL DANCAÏRO: Get up, you're coming with me.
LE REMENDADO: Mais, patron . . .	EL REMENDADO: But, boss . . .
LE DANCAÏRE: Qu'est-ce que c'est?	EL DANCAÏRO: What's that?
LE REMENDADO: Voilà, patron, voilà!	EL REMENDADO: (getting up) Here we are, boss, here!
LE DANCAÏRE: Allons, passe devant.	EL DANCAÏRO: Right, go on ahead.

LE REMENDADO: Et moi qui rêvais que j'allais pouvoir dormir . . . C'était un rêve, hélas! c'était un rêve!

JOSÉ: Voyons, Carmen . . . si je t'ai parlé trop durement, je t'en demande pardon, faisons la paix.

CARMEN: Non.

JOSÉ: Tu es le diable, Carmen?

CARMEN: Oui, qu'est-ce que tu regardes là, à quoi penses-tu?

JOSÉ: Je me dis que là-bas il y a une bonne vieille femme qui croit que je suis encore un honnete homme . . .

CARMEN: Une bonne vieille femme?

JOSÉ: Oui; ma mère.

CARMEN: Ta mère. Eh bien, tu ne ferais pas mal d'aller la retrouver.

JOSÉ: Carmen, si tu me parles encore de nous séparer . . .

CARMEN: Tu me tuerais, peut-être?
A la bonne heure . . . J'ai vu dans les cartes que nous devions finir ensemble.

JOSÉ: Tu es le diable, Carmen?

CARMEN: Mais oui, je te l'ai déja dit . . .

FRASQUITA ET MERCÉDÈS:
Mêlons! Coupons!
Bien, c'est cela!
Trois cartes ici . . .
Quatre là!
Et maintenant, parlez, mes belles,
de l'avenir, donnez-nous des nouvelles;
dites-nous qui nous trahira,
dites-nous qui nous aimera! Parlez, parlez!

FRASQUITA: Moi, je vois un jeune amoureux, qui m'aime on ne peut davantage.

MERCÉDÈS: Le mien est très riche et très vieux, mais il parle de mariage.

EL REMENDADO: And I thought I was going to be able to sleep . . . It was a dream, alas, it was a dream!
(He goes out, followed by Dancairo)
(During this scene between Carmen and José, a few gypsy men light a fire, by which Mercédès and Frasquita come and sit down; the others roll themselves up in their cloaks, lie down and go to sleep)

JOSÉ: Look, Carmen . . . if I spoke to you too harshly, I ask your forgiveness. Let's make up.

CARMEN: No.

JOSÉ: You're worried, Carmen?

CARMEN: Yes, what's that you're looking at there, what are you thinking of?

JOSÉ: I'm telling myself that down there is a good old woman who believes me still to be an honest man . . .

CARMEN: A good old woman?

JOSÉ: Yes, my mother.

CARMEN: Your mother. Well then, you'd do no harm by going to find her.

JOSÉ: Carmen, if you talk to me any more about us separating . . .

CARMEN: You would kill me, perhaps?
(José does not answer)
Well and good . . . I've seen in the cards that we are to finish together.

JOSÉ: You're worried, Carmen?

CARMEN: Why yes, I've already told you so. . .

(She turns her back on José and goes and sits down by Mercédès and Frasquita.—After a moment of indecision, José moves off in his turn and goes and stretches himself out upon the rocks.—During the final exchanges in the foregoing scene, Mercédès and Frasquita have been spreading out playing cards in front of them)

FRASQUITA AND MERCÉDÈS:
Shuffle! Cut!
Good, that's that!
Three cards here . . .
four there!
And now speak, my lovelies,
give us news of the future;
tell us who's going to betray us,
tell us who's going to love us!
Speak! Speak!

FRASQUITA: Me, I see a young suitor,
no one could love me more.

MERCÉDÈS: Mine is very rich and very old,
but he talks of marriage.

FRASQUITA: Je me campe sur son cheval, et dans la montagne il m'entraîne.

MERCÉDÈS: Dans un château presque royal,
le mien m'installe en souveraine!

FRASQUITA: De l'amour à n'en plus finir, tous les jours, nouvelles folies!

MERCÉDÈS: De l'or tant que j'en puis tenir, des diamants, des pierreries!

FRASQUITA: Le mien devient un chef fameux, cent hommes marchent à sa suite!

MERCÉDÈS: Le mien en croirai-je mes yeux?
Oui . . . il meurt!
Ah! je suis veuve et j'hérite!

REPRISE DE L'ENSEMBLE: Parlez encor, parlez, mes belles, etc.

MERCÉDÈS: Fortune!

FRASQUITA: Amour!

CARMEN: Voyons, que j'essaie à mon tour.
Carreau, pique . . . la mort!
J'ai bien lu . . . moi d'abord.
Ensuite lui . . . pour tous les deux la mort!
En vain pour éviter les réponses amères,
en vain tu mêleras;
cela ne sert à rien, les cartes
sont sincères et ne mentiront pas!
Dans le livre d'en haut si ta page est heureuse,
mêle et coupe sans peur,
la carte sous tes doigts se tournera joyeuse,
t'annonçant le bonheur.
Mais si tu dois mourir,
si le mot redoutable
est écrit par le sort, recommence vingt fois, la carte impitoyable
répétera: la mort!
Encor! encor! Toujours la mort!

FRASQUITA ET MERCÉDÈS: Parlez encor, parlez mes belles, etc.

CARMEN: Encore! de désespoir!
Toujours la mort!

CARMEN: Eh bien?

LE DANCAÏRE: Eh bien, j'avais raison de ne pas me fier de Lillas Pastia.
Nous avons aperçu trois douaniers qui gardaient la brèche.

CARMEN: (en riant) N'ayez pas peur, Dancaïre, nous vous en répondrons de vos trois douaniers . . .

JOSÉ: (furieux) Carmen!

FRASQUITA: I settle myself firmly on his horse and he carries me off into the mountains.

MERCÉDÈS: In an almost royal castle mine installs me in queenly state!

FRASQUITA: Never-ending love,
every day new raptures!

MERCÉDÈS: As much gold as I can take, diamonds, precious stones!

FRASQUITA: Mine becomes a famous leader,
a hundred men march in his train!

MERCÉDÈS: Mine . . . can I believe my eyes?
Yes . . . he dies!
Ah! I'm a widow and I inherit!

TOGETHER: (reprise) Speak again, speak, my lovelies, etc.
(They begin to consult the cards again)

MERCÉDÈS: Fortune!

FRASQUITA: Love!

CARMEN: Let's see—let me have a try.
(She starts to turn up the cards)
Diamond, spade . . . Death!
I read it clearly . . . me first.
Then him . . . for both of us, Death!
(In a low voice, while continuing to shuffle the cards:)
In vain to avoid bitter replies,
in vain will you shuffle;
that achieves nothing, the cards are truthful and will not lie!
If your page in the book up above is a happy one shuffle and cut without fear,
the card under your fingers will turn up nicely,
foretelling good luck.
But if you are to die,
if the terrible word
has been written by Destiny, begin twenty times—the pitiless card will repeat: Death!
(turning up the cards)
Again! Always Death!

FRASQUITA AND MERCÉDÈS: Speak again, my lovelies, speak! etc.

CARMEN: Again! Despair!
Always Death!
(El Dancaïro and El Remendado return.)

CARMEN: Well? . . .

EL DANCAÏRO: Well, I was right not to trust Lillas Pastia. We spotted three customs men guarding the gap.

CARMEN: (laughing) Have no fear, Dancairo, we'll take care of your three customs men for you . . .

JOSÉ: (furious) Carmen!

LE DANCAÏRE: Ah! tu vas nous laisser tranquilles avec ta jalousie. Tu vas te placer là, sur cette hauteur. Dans le cas où tu apercevrais quelqu'un, passes ta colère sur l'indiscret. En route alors . . . Mais vous me répondrez vraiment de ces trois douaniers?	EL DANCAÏRO: Ah, you will give us a rest from your jealousy. You will post yourself there on that height. If you should happen to stop anyone, take your anger out on such an ill-advised person. On our way, then . . . (to the women) But you really will answer to me for these three customs men?
CARMEN: N'ayez pas peur, Dancaïre.	CARMEN: Have no fear, Dancairo.
CARMEN, MERCÉDÈS ET FRASQUITA: Quant au douanier, c'est notre affaire, tout comme un autre il aime à plaire, il aime à faire le galant; ah! laissez-nous/les passer en avant!	CARMEN, MERCÉDÈS AND FRASQUITA: As for the customs man, he's our affair; just like the next man he loves to please, he loves to play the gallant; ah! leave us to go on ahead!
TOUTES LES FEMMES: Quant au douanier, c'est notre affaire, etc.	ALL THE GIRLS: As for the customs man, he's our affair, etc.
TOUS: Il aime à plaire!	EVERYONE: He loves to please!
MERCÉDÈS: Le douanier sera clément!	MERCÉDÈS: The customs man will be easy on us!
TOUS: Il est galant!	ALL: He is gallant!
CARMEN: Le douanier sera charmant!	CARMEN: The customs man will be charming!
TOUS: Il aime à plaire!	ALL: He loves to please!
MERCÉDÈS: Le douanier sera galant!	MERCÉDÈS: The customs man will be gallant!
FRASQUITA: Oui, le douanier sera même entreprenant!	FRASQUITA: Yes, the customs man will even be forward!
TOUS: Oui, le douanier c'est notre/leur affaire, tout comme un autre il aime à plaire, il aime à faire le galant, laissez-nous/les passer en avant!	ALL: Yes, the customs man is our/their affair; just like the next man he loves to please, he loves to play the gallant; let us/them go on ahead!
CARMEN, MERCÉDÈS ET FRASQUITA: Il ne s'agit plus de bataille, non, il s'agit tout simplement de se laisser prendre la taille et d'écouter un compliment. S'il faut aller jusqu'au sourire, que voulez-vous, on sourira!	CARMEN, MERCÉDÈS AND FRASQUITA: It's no longer a question of battle; no, it's simply a question of letting ourselves be taken by the waist and listening to a compliment. If it's necessary to go as far as a smile, what of it?—we'll smile!
TOUTES LES FEMMES: Et d'avance, je puis le dire, la contrebande passera! En avant! marchons! allons!	ALL THE WOMEN: And here and now I can say the stuff will get through! Forward! On our way! Let's go!
TOUT LE MONDE: Oui, le douanier c'est notre/leur affaire, etc.	ALL: Yes, the customs man is our/their affair, etc. (Everyone leaves. José brings up the rear, examining the priming of his carbine; just before he disappears, a man is seen moving behind a rock. It is Micaëla's guide) (The guide advances cautiously, then signals to Micaëla that the coast is clear)
LE GUIDE: Nous y sommes.	THE GUIDE: We're there.
MICAËLA: C'est ici.	MICAËLA: (entering) This is the place.
LE GUIDE: Oui, vilain endroit, n'est-ce pas, et pas rassurant du tout?	THE GUIDE: Yes, nasty spot, isn't it, and not at all reassuring?
MICAËLA: Je ne vois personne.	MICAËLA: I don't see anybody.
LE GUIDE: Ils reviendront bientôt. Ils n'ont pas emporté toutes leurs marchandises . . . prenez garde . . . l'un de leurs doit être en sentinelle et si l'on nous apercevrait . . .	THE GUIDE: They'll come back soon, for they haven't taken away all their goods . . . take care . . . one of their men must be on sentry-go, and if we were seen . . .
MICAËLA: Je l'espère bien qu'on m'apercevra . . . puisque je suis venue ici justement pour parler à un de ces contrebandiers . . .	MICAËLA: I sincerely hope someone will see me . . . since that's just what I've come here for, to speak to one of these smugglers . . .
LE GUIDE: Eh bien, vous pouvez vous vanter d'avoir du courage . . . venir ainsi affronter ces Bohémiens . . .	THE GUIDE: Well now, you can boast of having courage, to come here like this to face these gypsies . . .
MICAËLA: Je n'aurais pas peur, je vous assure.	MICAËLA: I shouldn't be afraid, I assure you.
LE GUIDE: Bien vrai?	THE GUIDE: Truly?
MICAËLA: Bien vrai.	MICAËLA: Truly.
LE GUIDE: (naïvement) Alors je vous demanderai la permission de m'en aller. Si ça ne vous fait rien, j'irai vous attendre à l'auberge au bas de la montagne. Vous restez décidément?	THE GUIDE: (naively) Then I'll ask you permission to take myself off. If it's all the same to you I'll go and wait for you in the inn at the foot of the mountain. You're determined to stay?
MICAËLA: Oui, je reste!	MICAËLA: Yes, I'm staying!
LE GUIDE: Que tous saints du paradis vous soient en aide alors, mais c'est une drôle idée que vous avez là . . .	THE GUIDE: May all the saints in paradise come to your aid then, but it's a funny idea you've got there . . .
MICAËLA: Mon guide avait raison . . . l'endroit n'est pas bien rassurant.	MICAËLA: (looking around her) My guide was right . . . It's not a very reassuring spot.
MICAËLA: Je dis, que rien ne m'épouvante, je dis, hélas! que je réponds de moi; mais j'ai beau faire la vaillante, au fond du coeur, je meurs d'effroi! Seule en ce lieu sauvage, toute seule j'ai peur, mais j'ai tort d'avoir peur; vous me donnerez du courage, vous me protégerez, Seigneur. Je vais voir de près cette femme dont les artifices maudits ont fini par faire un infâme de celui que j'aimais jadis; elle est dangereuse, elle est belle, mais je ne veux pas avoir, peur, je parlerai haut devant elle. Ah! Seigneur, vous me protégerez! Ah! je dis, que rien ne m'épouvante, etc. . . . protégez-moi, O Seigneur, Protégez-moi, Seigneur! Mais . . . je ne me trompe pas . . . sur ce rocher, c'est don José. José! José Mais que fait-il? . . . Il arme sa carabine, il ajuste . . . il fait feu. Ah! mon Dieu, j'ai trop présumé de mon courage . . .	MICAËLA: I say that nothing frightens me, I say, alas, that I have only myself to depend on; but I have tried in vain to be brave, at heart I'm dying of fright! Alone in this wild place, all alone, I'm afraid, but I do wrong to be afraid; you will give me courage, you will protect me, Lord. I shall get a close look at this woman whose evil wiles have finished by making a criminal of the man I once loved: she is dangerous, she is beautiful, but I won't be afraid, I shall speak out in front of her. Ah! Lord, you will protect me! Ah! I say that nothing will frighten me, etc. . . . protect me, O Lord, protect me, Lord! But . . . I'm not mistaken . . . on that rock—It's Don José. (calling out) José! José! (terrified) But what is he doing? . . . He's cocking his carbine . . . he's aiming . . . he fires. (A shot is heard) Ah, my God, I overestimated my courage . . .

ESCAMILLO: Quelques lignes plus bas, et ce n'est pas moi qui aurais le plaisir de combattre les taureaux que je suis en train de conduire . . .

JOSÉ: Qui êtes-vous? Répondez.

ESCAMILLO: Eh là . . . doucement!

ESCAMILLO: Je suis Escamillo,
Torrero de Grenade!

JOSÉ: Escamillo!

ESCAMILLO: C'est moi!

JOSÉ: Je connais votre nom, soyez le bienvenu; mais vraiment, camarade,
vous pouviez y rester.

ESCAMILLO: Je ne vous dis pas non,
mais je suis amoureux, mon cher, à la folie,
et celui-là serait un pauvre compagnon,
qui, pour voir ses amours, ne risquerait sa vie!

JOSÉ: Celle que vous aimez est ici?

ESCAMILLO: Justement.
C'est une zingara, mon cher.

JOSÉ: Elle s'appelle?

ESCAMILLO: Carmen.

JOSÉ: Carmen!

ESCAMILLO: Carmen! oui, mon cher.
Elle avait pour amant
un soldat qui a déserté pour elle.
Ils s'adoralent, mais c'est fini, je crois.
Les amours de Carmen ne durent pas six mois.

JOSÉ: Vous l'aimez cependant!

ESCAMILLO: Je l'aime!
Oui, mon cher, je l'aime à la folie!

JOSÉ: Mais pour nous enlever nos filles de bohème, savez-vous bien qu'il faut payer?

ESCAMILLO: Soit! on paiera.

JOSÉ: Et que le prix se paie à coups de navaja!

ESCAMILLO: A coups de navaja!

JOSÉ: Comprenez-vous?

ESCAMILLO: Le discours est très net.
Ce déserteur, ce beau soldat qu'elle aime, ou du moins qu'elle aimait—
c'est donc vous?

JOSÉ: Oui, c'est moi-même!

(She disappears behind the rocks. At the same moment Escamillo comes in, holding his hat in his hand)

ESCAMILLO: (looking at his hat) A little lower . . . and it isn't I who would have the pleasure of fighting the bulls I'm about to drive . . . (Enter José)

JOSÉ: (carrying his cloak) Who are you? Answer.

ESCAMILLO: (very calm) Eh eh . . . gently!

ESCAMILLO: I'm Escamillo, the Granada matador!

JOSÉ: Escamillo!

ESCAMILLO: That's me!

JOSÉ: (returning his knife to its sheath) I know your name, you're welcome; but truly, comrade,
that could have been the end of you.

ESCAMILLO: I'm not denying it,
but, my friend, I am madly in love,
and he would be a wretched fellow who wouldn't risk his life to see his ladylove!

JOSÉ: The girl you love is here?

ESCAMILLO: Exactly.
She's a gypsy girl, my friend.

JOSÉ: Her name?

ESCAMILLO: Carmen.

JOSÉ: Carmen!

ESCAMILLO: Carmen! yes, my friend.
She had as a lover
a soldier who once deserted on her account.
They adored each other, but it's over, I think.
Carmen's affairs don't last six months.

JOSÉ: Yet you love her!

ESCAMILLO: I love her!
Yes, my friend, I love her to distraction!

JOSÉ: But to take our gypsy girls away from us
you know that you have to pay?

ESCAMILLO: All right! I'll pay.

JOSÉ: And that the price is paid with the knife!

ESCAMILLO: With the knife!

JOSÉ: You understand?

ESCAMILLO: You put it very clearly.
This deserter, this fine soldier she loves, or rather, used to love—
is you, then?

JOSÉ: Yes, myself!

ESCAMILLO: J'en suis ravi, mon cher, et le tour est complet!

JOSÉ: Enfin ma colère
trouve à qui parler!
Le sang, je l'espère,
va bientôt couler, etc.

ESCAMILLO: Quelle maladresse,
j'en rirais vraiment!
Chercher la maitresse
et trouver l'amant! etc.

ENSEMBLE: Mettez-vous en garde, et veillez sur vous!
Tant pis pour qui tarde
à parer les coups!
En garde! allons! veillez sur vous!

ESCAMILLO: Je la connais, ta garde navarraise.
Et je te previens en ami,
Qu'elle ne vaut rien . . .
A ton aise.
Je t'aurai du moins averti.

JOSÉ: Tu m'épargnes, maudit.

ESCAMILLO: A ce jeu de couteau
Je suis trop fort pour toi.

JOSÉ: Voyons cela.

ESCAMILLO: Tout beau,
Ta vie est à moi, mais en somme
J'ai pour métier de frapper le taureau,
Non de trouer le coeur de l'homme.

JOSÉ: Frappe ou bien meurs . . .
Ceci n'est pas un jeu.

ESCAMILLO: Soit, mais au moins respire un peu.

JOSÉ: Enfin ma colère
Trouve à qui parler etc.

ESCAMILLO: Quelle maladresse,
J'en rirais vraiment! etc.

CARMEN: Holà, holà! José!

ESCAMILLO: Vrai, j'ai l'âme ravie que ce soit vous, Carmen, que me sauviez la vie!
Quant à toi, beau soldat,
je prendrai ma revanche,
et nous jouerons la belle,

ESCAMILLO: I'm delighted, my friend, and the wheel's come full circle!
(Both draw their knives and wrap their left arm in their cloaks)

JOSÉ: At last my rage
has found an outlet!
Blood, I hope,
will soon flow, etc.

ESCAMILLO: What a predicament,
I could laugh at it, really!
To look for the mistress and find the lover! etc.

TOGETHER: Put up your guard, and look out for yourself!
So much the worse for the one who's slow at parrying!
On guard! come on! look out for yourself!
(They take up positions on guard at some distance from each other)

ESCAMILLO: I know it, your Navarrais-style guard, and I warn you, in a friendly way,
that it's no good . . .
(Without answering, Don José advances upon the matador)
As you like.
At least I'll have warned you.
(Fight,—Incidental music. The matador, very calm, attempts only to defend himself)

JOSÉ: You're not trying, you devil.

ESCAMILLO: At this knife-play
I'm too good for you.

JOSÉ: Let's see.
(A swift and very lively hand-to-hand engagement. José finds himself at the mercy of the matador, who does not strike)

ESCAMILLO: Steady,
your life belongs to me, but in short
my job is to kill bulls,
not to bore holes in men's hearts.

JOSÉ: Strike, or die . . . This isn't a game.

ESCAMILLO: (disengaging himself) All right, but at least get your breath.
(Reprise of ensemble)

JOSÉ: At last my rage
has found an outlet, etc.

ESCAMILLO: What a predicament,
I could laugh at it, really! etc.
(They fight. The matador slips and falls. Enter Carmen and El Dancaïro; she rushes forward and stays José hand. The matador gets to his feet; El Remendado, Mercédès, Frasquita and the smugglers have meanwhile come upon the scene)

CARMEN: Stop, stop, José!

ESCAMILLO: Really, I'm overjoyed that it should be you, Carmen, who saved my life!
(to Don José)
As for you, my fine soldier, le jour où tu voudras reprendre le combat!

LE DANCAÏRE: C'est bon, c'est bon, plus de querelle!
Nous, nous allons partir.
Et toi, l'ami, bonsoir!

ESCAMILLO: Souffrez au moins qu'avant de vous dire au revoir, je vous invite tous aux courses de Séville.
Je compte pour ma part y briller de mon mieux et qui m'aime y viendra!
L'ami, tiens-roi tranquille, j'ai tout dit et je n'ai plus ici qu'à faire mes adieux!

JOSÉ: (à Carmen) Prends garde à toi, Carmen, je suis las de souffrir!

LE DANCAÏRE: En route, en route, il faut partir!

TOUS: En route, en route, il faut partir!

LE REMENDADO: Halte!
quelqu'un est là cherche à se cacher.

CARMEN: Une femme!

LE DANCAÏRE: Pardieu, la surprise est heureuse!

JOSÉ: Micaëla!

MICAËLA: Don José!

JOSÉ: Malheureuse!
Que viens-tu faire ici?

MICAËLA: Moi, je viens te chercher,
Là-bas est la chaumière,
où sans cesse priant
une mère, ta mère,
pleure, hélas sur son enfant.
Elle pleure et t'appelle, elle pleure et te tend les bras;
tu prendras pitié d'elle,
José, ah! José, tu me suivras!

CARMEN: Va-t'en! Va-t'en! tu feras, bien, notre métier ne te vaut rien!

JOSÉ: Tu me dis de la suivre?

CARMEN: Oui, tu devrais partir!

JOSÉ: Tu me dis de la suivre pour que toi, tu puisses courir après ton nouvel amant!
Non! non vraiment!
Dût-il m'en coûter la vie,
non, Carmen, je ne partirai pas, et la chaine qui nous lie

I'll take my revenge, and we'll play for two out of three whenever you wish to renew the fight!

EL DANCAÏRO: Enough, enough, no more quarrelling!
We must get going.
(to Escamillo)
And you, my friend, good night!

ESCAMILLO: Allow me at least, before I say goodbye, to invite you all to the bullfights at Seville.
I expect to be at my most brilliant there,
and who loves me will come!
(to José, who makes a threatening gesture)
Friend, keep calm,
I've had my say, and I've nothing more to do here but make my farewells!
(Leisurely exit of Escamillo, Don José tries to attack him but is held back by El Dancaïro and El Remendado)

JOSÉ: (to Carmen) Take care, Carmen, I'm weary of suffering!
(Carmen answers him with a slight shrug of her shoulders and walks off)

EL DANCAÏRO: Let's get going! We must be off!

ALL: Let's get going! We must be off!

EL REMENDADO: Stop! there's someone there trying to hide!
(He brings in Micaëla)

CARMEN: A woman!

EL DANCAÏRO: Lord, a pleasant surprise!

JOSÉ: Micaela!

MICAËLA: Don José!

JOSÉ: Poor girl!
What are you doing here?

MICAËLA: I've come looking for you.
Down there is the cottage where, praying unceasingly, a mother, your mother,
weeps, alas, for her son.
She weeps and calls you,
she weeps and holds out her arms to you;
you will take pity on her,
José, ah José, you will come with me!

CARMEN: Go on! Go on! You'll do well to go;
our business means nothing to you!

JOSÉ: You're telling me to go with her?

CARMEN: Yes, you ought to go!

JOSÉ: You're telling me to go with her so that you can run after your new lover!
No! Not likely!
Though it should cost me my life,
no, Carmen, I shall not go away,

nous liera jusqu'au trépas!
Dût-il m'en coûter la vie, etc.

MICAËLA: Ecoute-moi, je t'en prie, ta mère te tend les bras,
cette chaine qui te lie,
José, tu la briseras!

FRASQUITA, MERCÉDÈS, LE REMENDADO, LE DANCAÏRE, CHOEUR: Il t'en coûtera la vie, José, si tu ne pars pas, et la chaine qui vous lie
se rompra par ton trépas.

JOSÉ: (à Micaëla) Laisse-moi!

MICAËLA: Hélas, José!

JOSÉ: Car je suis condamné!

FRASQUITA, MERCÉDÈS, LE REMENDADO, LE DANCAÏRE, CHOEUR: José! Prends garde!

JOSÉ: (à Carmen) Ah! je te tiens, fille damnée, je te tiens, et je te forcerai bien à subir la destinée
qui rive ton sort au mien!
Dût-il m'en coûter la vie,
non, non, non, je ne partirai pas!

CHOEUR: Ah! prends garde, Don José!

MICAËLA: Une parole encor, ce sera la dernière.
Hélas! José, ta mère se meurt, et ta mère ne voudrait pas mourir sans t'avoir pardonné.

JOSÉ: Ma mère! elle se meurt?

MICAËLA: Oui, Don José.

JOSÉ: Partons, ah, partons!
(à Carmen) Sois contente, je pars, mais nous nous reverrons!

ESCAMILLO: (au loin) Toréador, en garde! etc.

■ ACTE IV

and the bond which unites us shall unite us till death!
Though it should cost my me life, etc.

MICAËLA: Listen to me, I implore you,
Your mother holds out her arms to you,
that bond which unites you,
José, you will break it!

FRASQUITA, MERCÉDÈS, EL REMENDADO, EL DANCAÏRO, CHORUS: It will cost you your life,
José, if you don't go.
and the bond which unites you will be broken by your death.

JOSÉ: (to Micaëla) Leave me!

MICAËLA: Alas, José!

JOSÉ: For I am doomed!

FRASQUITA, MERCÉDÈS, EL REMENDADO, EL DANCAÏRO, CHORUS: José! take care!

JOSÉ: (to Carmen) Ah! I've got you, accursed girl,
I've got you, and I shall compel you to bow to the destiny
that links your fate with mine!
Though it should cost me my life,
no, no, no, I shall not go!

CHORUS: Ah! Take care, take care, Don José!

MICAËLA: One word more, this will be the last.
Alas! José, your mother is dying, and she doesn't want to die without having forgiven you.

JOSÉ: My mother! she's dying?

MICAËLA: Yes, Don José.

JOSÉ: Let's go, ah, let's go!
(to Carmen)
Be satisfied! I'm going, but we shall meet again!
(He hurries off with Micaëla)

ESCAMILLO: (in the distance) Toreador, on guard! etc.
(José stops at the back, on the rocks. He hesitates, but, after a moment, goes on his way with Micaëla. Carmen rushes in the direction of the voice. The gypsies take up their bales and prepare to leave)

Voyez! voyez! à deux cuartos! etc.

ZUNIGA: Qu'avez-vous donc fait de la Carmencita?

FRASQUITA: Escamillo est ici, la Carmencita ne doit pas être loin.

ZUNIGA: Ah! c'est Escamillo, maintenant?

FRASQUITA: Et son ancien amoureux José, qu'est-il devenu?

MERCÉDÈS: Il est libre.

ZUNIGA: Pour le moment.

FRASQUITA: Je ne serais pas tranquille à la place de Carmen, je ne serais pas tranquille du tout.

CHOEUR: Les voice! voici la quidrille!
La quadrille des toréros!
Sur les lances le soleil brille!
En l'air toques et sombreros!
Les voici! voici la quadrille,
la qadrille des toréros!
Voici, débouchant sur la place,
voici d'abord, marchant au pass,
l'alguazil à vilaine face!
A bas! á bas! á bas!
Et puis saluons au passage,
saluons les hardis chulos!
Bravo! viva! gloire au courage!
Voici les hardis chulos!

Voyez! voyez! voyez! voyez!
Quel regards, et de quel éclat étincelle la broderie
de leur costume de combat!
Voici les banderilleros!
Un autre quadrille s'avance!
Voyez les picadors!
Comme ils sont beaux!
Comme ils vont du fer de leur lance,
harceler le flanc des taureaux!

ZUNIGA: Here you! some fans!

A GYPSY: (running forward) Want some opera glasses too?

CHORUS: (reprise) Two cuartos! Two cuartos!
Look! Look! Two cuartos! etc.

ZUNIGA: But what have you done with Carmencita?

FRASQUITA: Escamillo is here, Carmencita can't be far off.

ZUNIGA: Ah! It's Escamillo now?

FRASQUITA: And her former lover Don José, what's become of him?

MERCÉDÈS: He's at large.

ZUNIGA: For the moment.

FRASQUITA: I shouldn't feel easy in Carmen's place. I shouldn't feel easy at all.
(From outside loud shouts are heard, trumpet calls, etc. etc. The Cuadrilla is arriving).

CHORUS: Here they come! Here's the caudrilla!
The toreadors' cuadrilla!
The sun flashes on their lances!
Up in the air with your caps and hats!
Here they are! Here's the cuadrilla,
the toreadors' cuadrilla!
Here, coming into the square
first of all, marching on foot, is the constable with his ugly mug!
Down with him! Down with him!
And now as they go by let's cheer the bold chulos!
Bravo! Hurrah! Glory to courage!
Here come the bold chulos!
Look at the banderilleros!
See what a swaggering air!
See them! See them!
What looks, and how brilliantly the ornaments glitter on their fighting dress!
Here are the banderilleros!
Another cuadrilla's coming!
Look at the picadors!
How handsome they are!
How they'll torment the bull's flanks

L'Espada! Escamillo!
C'est l'Espada, la fine lame, celui qui vient terminer tout, qui paraît à la fin du drame et qui frappe le dernier coup!
Vive Escamillo! ah bravo!
Les voici! voici la quadrille! etc.

ESCAMILLO: (à Carmen). Si tu m'aimes, Carmen, tu pourras, tout à l'heure, être fière de moi.

CARMEN: Ah! je t'aime, escamillo, je t'aime, et que je meure si j'ai jamais aimé quelqu'un autant que toi!

TOUS LES DEUX: Ah! je t'aime!
Oui, je t'aime!

LES ALGUAZILS: Place, place!
place au seigneur Alcade!

FRASQUITA: Carmen, un bon conseil, ne reste pas ici!

CARMEN: Et pourquoi, s'il te plaît?

MERCÉDÈS: Il est là!

CARMEN: Qui donc?

MERCÉDÈS: Lui, Don José!
Dans la foule il se cache; regarde.

CARMEN: Oui, je le vois.

FRASQUITA: Prends garde!

CARMEN: Je ne suis pas femme à trembler devant lui.
Je l'attends, et je vais lui parler.

MERCÉDÈS: Carmen, crois-moi, prends garde!

CARMEN: Je ne crains rien!

FRASQUITA: Prends garde!

CARMEN: C'est toi!

JOSÉ: C'est moi!

CARMEN: L'on m'avait avertie que tu n'étais pas loin, que tu devais venir; l'on m'avait même dit de craindre pour ma vie mais je suis brave et n'ai pas voulu fuir.

with the tips of their lances!
(At last Escamillo appears, accompanied by a radiant and magnificently dressed Carmen)
The Matador! Escamillo!
It's the Matador, the skilled swordsman,
he who comes to finish things off,
who appears at the drama's end
and strikes the last blow!
Long live Escamillo! Ah bravo!
Here they are! Here's the cuadrilla! etc.

ESCAMILLO: (to Carmen). If you love me, carmen, soon you can be proud of me.

CARMEN: Ah! I love you, Escamillo, I love you, and may I die if I have ever loved anyone as much as you!

TOGETHER: Ah! I love you!
Yes, I love you!

ALGUAZILS: Make way! Make way for his worship the Mayor!
(During a little orchestral march the Mayor enters and crosses the stage, preceded and followed by an escort of constables. Meanwhile Frasquita and Mercédès draw near to Carmen)

FRASQUITA: Carmen, a word of advice, don't stay here!

CARMEN: And why, if you please?

MERCÉDÈS: He's there!

CARMEN: Who?

MERCÉDÈS: Him, Don José!
He's hding among the crowd; look.

CARMEN: Yes, I see him.

FRASQUITA: Take care!

CARMEN: I'm not a woman to tremble in front of him.
I'm expecting him, and I'll speak to him.

MERCÉDÈS: Carmen, believe me, take care!

CARMEN: I'm not afraid of anything!

FRASQUITA: Take care!
(The mayor's cortège has entered the arean. Behind him, the procession of the cuadrilla resumes its march and goes into the ring. The crowd follows . . . and in withdrawing has revealed Don José, leaving him and Carmen alone downstage.)

CARMEN: It's you!

JOSÉ: Yes, me!

CARMEN: I'd been warned that you were about, that you might come here;
I was even told to fear for my life,
but I'm no coward and had no intention of running away.

JOSÉ: Je ne menace pas, j'implore, je supplie; notre passé, Carmen, je l'oublie, Oui, nous allons tous deux commencer une autre vie, loin d'ici, sous d'autres cieux!	JOSÉ: I'm not threatinging, I'm imploring, beseeching; our past, Carmen—I forget it! Yes, together we are going to begin another life, far from here, under new skies!
CARMEN: Tu demandes l'impossible, Carmen jamais n'a menti; son âme reste inflexible. Entre elle et toi, tout est fini. Jamais je n'ai menti; entre nous, tout est fini.	CARMEN: You ask the impossible, Carmen has never lied; her mind is made up. Between her and you everything's finished. I have never lied; all's over between us.
JOSÉ: Carmen, il est temps encore, oui, il est temps encore. O ma Carmen, laisse-moi te sauver, toi que j'adore, et me sauver avec toi!	JOSÉ: Carmen, there is still time, yes, there is still time, O my Carmen, let me save you, you I adore, and save myself with you!
CARMEN: Non, je sais bien que c'est l'heure, je sais bien que tu me tueras; mais que je vive ou que je meure, non, non, je ne te céderai pas!	CARMEN: No, I'm well aware that the hour has come, I know that you are going to kill me; but whether I live or die, no, no, I shall not give in to you!
JOSÉ: Carmen, il est temps encore, ô ma Carmen, laisse-moi te sauver, toi que j'adore; ah! laisse-moi te sauver et me sauver avec toi! O ma Carmen, il est temps encore, etc.	JOSÉ: Carmen, there is still time, O my Carmen, let me save you, you whom I adore; ah! let me save you and save myself with you! O my Carmen, there is still time, etc.
CARMEN: Pourquoi t'occuper encore d'un coeur qui n'est plus à toi? Non, ce coeur n'est plus à toi! En vain tu dis: "Je t'adore", tu n'obtiendras rien, non, rien de moi, Ah! c'est en vain, tu n'obtiendras rien, rien de moi!	CARMEN: Why still concern yourself with a heart that's no longer yours? No, this heart no longer belongs to you! In vain you say "I adore you", you'll get nothing, no nothing, from me. Ah! it's useless, you'll get nothing, nothing, from me!
JOSÉ: Tu ne m'aimes donc plus? Tu ne m'aimes donc plus?	JOSÉ: Then you don't love me any more? (Carmen is silent.) Then you don't love me any more?
CARMEN: Non, je ne t'aime plus.	CARMEN: No, I don't love you any more.
JOSÉ: Mais moi, Carmen, je t'aime encore; Carmen, hélas! moi, je t'adore!	JOSÉ: But I, Carmen, I love you still; Carmen, alas! I adore you!
CARMEN: A quoi bon tout cela? que de mots superflus!	CARMEN: What's the good of this? What waste of words!
JOSÉ: Carmen, je t'aime, je t'adore! Eh bien, s'il le faut, pour te plaire, je resterai bandit, tout ce que tu voudras— tout, tu m'endtends? Tout! mais ne me quitte pas, ô ma Carmen, ah! souviens-toi, souviens-toi du passé! Nous nous aimions naguère! Ah! ne me quitte pas, Carmen, ah, ne me quitte pas!	JOSÉ: Carmen, I love you, I adore you! All right, if I must, to please you I'll stay a bandit, anything you like— anything, do you hear? Anything! but do not leave me, O my Carmen, ah! remember the past! We loved each other once! Ah! do not leave me, Carmen, ah, do not leave me!
CARMEN: Jamais Carmen ne cédera! Libre elle est née et libre elle mourra!	CARMEN: Carmen will never yield! Free she was born and free she will die!
CHOEUR ET FANFARES: (dans le cirque) Viva! Viva! la course est belle! Viva! sur le sable sanglant le taureau, le taureau s'élance! Voyez! voyez! voyez! Le taureau qu'on harcèle en bondissant s'élance, voyez! Frappé juste, en plein coeur, voyez! voyez! voyez! Victoire!	CHORUS AND FANFARES: (in the arena) Hurrah! hurrah! a grand fight! Hurrah! Across the bloodstained sand the bull charges! Look! Look! Look! The tormented bull comes bounding to the attack, look! Struck true, right to the heart, look! look! look! Victory! (During the chorus, Carmen and José remain silent . . . both are listening . . . Hearing shouts of "Victory!", a cry of delight escapes Carmen . . . José's eyes are fixed upon her . . . The chorus over, she takes a step towards the main entrance of the ring)
JOSÉ: Où vas-tu?	JOSÉ: (blocking her way) Where are you going?
CARMEN: Laisse-moi!	CARMEN: Leave me alone!
JOSÉ: Cet homme qu'on acclame, c'est ton nouvel amant!	JOSÉ: This man they're cheering, he's your new lover!
CARMEN: Laisse-moi! laisse-moi!	CARMEN: Leave me alone! Leave me alone!
JOSÉ: Sur mon âme, tu ne passeras pas, Carmen, c'est moi que tu suivras!	JOSÉ: By my soul, you won't get past, Carmen, you will come with me!
CARMEN: Laisse-moi, Don José, je ne te suivrai pas.	CARMEN: Let me go, Don José, I'm not going with you.
JOSÉ: Tu bas le retrouver. Dis . . . tu l'aimes donc?	JOSÉ: You're going to him. Tell me . . . you love him, then?
CARMEN: Je l'aime! Je l'aime, et devant la mort même, je répéterais que je l'aime!	CARMEN: I love him! I love him, and in the face of death itself I would go on saying I love him! (shouts and fanfares again from the arena)
CHOEUR: Viva! la course est belle! etc.	CHORUS: Hurrah! A grand fight! etc.
JOSÉ: Ainsi, le salut de mon âme, je l'aurai perdu pour que toi, pour que tu t'en ailles, infâme, entre ses bras, rire de moi! Non, par le sang, tu n'iras pas! Carmen, c'est moi que tu suivras!	JOSÉ: So I am to lose my heart's salvation so that you can run to him, infamous creature, to laugh at me in his arms! No, by my blood, you shall not go! Carmen, you're coming with me!
CARMEN: Non! non! jamais!	CARMEN: No! No! Never!
JOSÉ: Je suis las de te menacer!	JOSÉ: I'm tired of threatening you!
CARMEN: Eh bien! frappe-moi donc, ou laisse-moi passer!	CARMEN: All right, stab me then, or let me pass!
CHOEUR: Victoire!	CHORUS: Victory!
JOSÉ: Pour la dernière fois, démon, veux-tu me suivre?	JOSÉ: For the last time, you devil, will you come with me?
CARMEN: Non! non! Cette bague autrefois, tu me l'avais donnée, tiens!	CARMEN: No! No! This ring that you once gave me— here, take it! (She throws it away)
JOSÉ: Eh bien, damnée!	JOSÉ: (advancing on Carmen, knife in hand) All right, accursed woman! (Carmen draws back, José following, as fanfares sound again in the ring)

CHOEUR: Toréador, en garde! Et songe bien, oui, songe en combattant, qu'un oeil noir te regarde, et que l'amour t'attend!	CHORUS: Toreador, on guard! And remember, yes, remember as you fight that two dark eyes are watching you, and that love awaits you! (José has stabbed Carmen; she falls dead. The curtains are thrown open and the crowd comes out of the arena)
JOSÉ: Vous pouvez m'arrêter. C'est moi qui l'ai tuée! Ah! Carmen! ma Carmen adorée!	JOSÉ: You can arrest me. I was the one who killed her! (Escamillo appears on the arena steps. José throws himself upon Carmen's body) Ah! Carmen! My adored Carmen!
FIN	THE END

Mefistofele (1868)

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY ARRIGO BOITO

Arrigo Boito wrote the libretto to this four-act opera with both Prologue and Epilogue (based on Goethe's Faust), that premiered at the La Scala on March 5, 1868. Mefistofele makes a bet with God that he can win the soul of Faust. Faust and his student, Wagner, watch the Easter Sunday Elector's procession. As twilight descends, Faust notices a grey friar who is following him. Back in his study, Faust open up the Gospel but is frightened when the friar appears, takes off his robes, revealing his true identity: Mefistofele. He offers Faust one moment of perfect pleasure in exchange for his soul, Faust accepts. Now a young man again, Faust, who now calls himself Enrico, is in love with the beautiful Margherita. He urges her to drug her mother with a sleeping potion so that they may meet later that night. Mefistofele and Faust go to the Brocken to observe the witches' sabbath. Faust, however, is in despair; he has had a vision of Margherita imprisoned, in chains. Margherita is indeed in jail and totally insane. She sings about her wrongdoings, poisoning her mother and drowning her baby, Faust's child. Mefistofele agrees to rescue her, but she rejects any assistance from the devil, briefly regains her sanity, begs for God's mercy and dies. A heavenly choir sings of her soul's salvation. Faust suddenly finds himself on the banks of the River Peneios in Greece, wanting to see Elena; she alone can combine the elements of the Classical and the Romantic. She sings of the collapse of Troy and promises to love Faust. He, back in his study, is now old and tired; his death is imminent. He now sees the emptiness of Mefistofele's offer and prays to God to protect him from any further temptations. He dies in true repentance, and Mefistofele sinks into the ground in defeat.

PROLOGO IN CIELO	PROLOGUE IN HEAVEN
(Nebulosa. Lo squillo delle sette trombe.—I sette tuoni.—Le Falangi Celesti dietro la nebulosa, invisibili.—Chorus Mysticus. I Cherubini. Le Penitenti.—Poi Mefistofele solo nell'ombra.)	(Clouds. The sound of seven trumpets. Seven thunderbolts. The celestial phalanxes invisible behind clouds. Mystic Choir. Cherubim. Penitents. Then Mefistofele alone, in the shadow.)
FALANGE: Ave, Signor degli angeli e dei santi, E dei volanti cherubini d'ôr, Dall'eterna armonia dell'Universo Nel glauco spazio immerso Emana un verso di supremo amor; E s'erge a Te per l'aure azurre E cave in suon soave. Ave, Ave, Ave, Ave. (Comparisce Mefistofele.)	PHALANX: Ave, Lord of the angels and saints, And of the winged cherubim of gold. From the eternal harmony of the Universe, Floating in the emerald space, Rises a verse of supreme love: And comes to you through the azure air, In sounds suave. Ave, Ave, Ave,
MEFISTOFELE: (Coi pie' fermi sul lembo del suo mantello.) Ave Signor. Perdona se il mio gergo Si lascia un po' da tergo le superne Teodie del paradiso; Perdona se il mio viso non porta il raggio Che inghirlanda i crini degli alti cherubini; Perdona se dicendo io corro rischio Di buscar qualche fischio. Il Dio piccin . . . della piccina terra Ognor traligna ed erra, E, al par di grillo saltellante, A caso spinge fra gli astri il naso, Poi con tenace fatuità superba Fa il suo trillo nell'erba. Boriosa polve! tracotato atòmo! Fantasima dell'uomo! E tale il fa quell'ebbra Illusione ch'egli chiama: Ragion, ragion, Ah! Si, Maestro divino, in bujo fondo Crolla il padron del mondo, E non mi dà più il cuor, Tant'è fiaccato, di tentarlo al mal.	MEFISTOFELE: (With feet at the edge of the mantle). Ave, O Lord. Forgive me, if my language Gives little heed To the sublime songs of paradise; Forgive me, if my countenance bears not the beams Which circle the tresses Of the high cherubim. Forgive me if, speaking, I perchance Should hiss. The small God of the small earth, Like unto a grasshopper, Now lifts his head amongst the stars And then, with fatuous and enduring pride, Sounds his trill in the grass. Vain dust! proud atom! Fancy of mankind! Thus is he made by that mad illusion Which he calls Reason. Yes, divine Master, in gloomy depths, Trembles the lord of the world; So feeble he I scarce have heart To tempt him into sin.
CHORUS MYSTICUS: (interno) T'è noto Faust?	MYSTIC CHOIR: (within) Is Faust known to you?
MEFISTOFELE: Il più bizzarro pazzo Ch'io mi conosca, in curiosa forma Ei ti serve da senno. Inassopita bramosia di saper Il fa tapino ed anelante; Egli vorrebbe quasi trasumanar E nulla scienza al cupo Suo delirio è confine. Io mi sobbarco ad adescarlo Per modo ch'ei si trovi Nelle mie reti, vuoi tu farne scommessa?	MEFISTOFELE: The strangest madman I ever knew, in curious fashion He serves there. A thirst unquenchable for knowledge Makes him anxious and wretched; He would go beyond the reach of man; No science a boundary to his delirium. I undertake to lure him on, Until he falls within my net; Will you lay a wager on it?
CHORUS MYSTICUS: E sia.	MYSTIC CHOIR: So be it.
MEFISTOFELE: Sia! vecchio Padre, a un rude gioco T'avventurasti. Ei morderà nel dolce Pomo de' vizi e sovra il Re del ciel . . . Avrò vittoria!	MEFISTOFELE: So be it! Father, you have willed To play a dangerous game. He will bite In the apple of vice, and I shall be victorious over the King of Heaven.
FALANGI CELESTI: Sanctus! Sanctus! Sanctus!	CELESTIAL PHALANXES: Sanctus! Sanctus! Sanctus!
MEFISTOFELE: (Di tratto in tratto m'è piacevol cosa Vedere il Vecchio e dal guastarmi seco Molto mi guardo; è bello udir l'Eterno Col Diavolo parlar si umanamente.)	MEFISTOFELE: (Aside). Ever and anon I like it much To see the Heavenly Father; and right careful am I Not to offend; it is fine to hear the Eternal One Speak thus humanly with the devil.

I CHERUBINI: (Dietro la nebulosa). Siam nimbi volanti dai limbi,
Nei santi splendori vaganti,
Siam cori di bimbi, d'amori.

MEFISTOFELE: E' lo sciame legger degli angioletti;
Come dell'api n'ho ribrezzo e noia.
(Scompare.)

I CHERUBINI: (Coro interno di ragazzi). Un giorno nel fango mortale, Perdemmo il tripudio dell'ale,
L'aureola di luce e di fiori;
Ma sciolti dal lugubre bando,
Pregando, cantando, danzando,
Noi torniamo fra gli angioli ancor.
La danza in angelica spira gira,
Si gira, si gira, si gira.
Fratelli, teniamci per mano,
Fin l' ultimo cielo lontano
Noi sempre dobbiamo danzar;
Fratelli, le morbide penne
Non cessino il volo perenne
Che intorno al Santissimo Altar.

I CHERUBINI: Siam nimbi volanti dai limbi,
Nei santi splendori vaganti,
Siam cori di bimbi, d'amori.

LE PENITENTI: (dalla terra).
Salve Regina!
S'innalzi un'eco
Dal mondo cieco
Alla divina reggia del ciel.
Col nostro canto,
Col nostro pianto
Domiam l'intenso
Foco del senso,
Col nostro canto
Mite e fedel.
Odi la pia
Prece serena.

I CHERUBINI: Sugli astri, sui venti, sui mondi,
Sui limpidi azzurri profondi,
Sui raggi del sol . . .
La danza in angelica spira
Si gira, si gira, si gira.

FALANGI: Oriam, oriam per quei morienti oriam

PENITENTI: Odi la pia prece serena.
Ave Maria gratia plena.
Il pentimento lagrime spande.
Di queste blande turbe il lamento
Accolga il cielo.

FALANGI: Oriam per quelle di morienti ignavo
Anime schiave, si per quell'anime schiave preghiam.

I CHERUBINI: Sian, nimbi volanti dai limbi,
Nei santi splendori i vaganti.

TUTTI: Odi la pia, la pia prece serena.
Ave, Ave, Ave! Ah!
Signor degli angeli e dei santi
E delle sfere erranti,
E dei volanti cherubini d'òr.

CHERUBIM: (behind the clouds.)
We are showers fleeting from cloud land,
Wandering in heavenly splendors.
We are choirs of infants, of loves.

MEFISTOFELE: It is the light band of cherubs;
They tire and fret me, like bees.
(Vanishes)

CHERUBIM: (Chorus of boys in the background). One day, amid human corruption,
We lost our winged glory.
Our halos of flowers and light.
But released from that gloomiest exile,
Praying, singing, dancing,
We return midst the angels once more.
The dance, in an angelic spiral,
Goes on, goes on, goes on.
Brethren, clasp each other's hand.
Until the most distant heaven nears,
We must ever dance.
Celestial pinions
Must not stop in perennial flight,
Save at the Holiest Altar.

CHERUBIM: We are showers fleeting from cloudland,
Wandering in heavenly splendors.
We are choirs of infants, of loves.

PENITENTS: (From earth). Salve Regina!
An echo rises
From the blind world
To the divine kingdom of heaven.
With our song.
With our tears,
We dominate the intense
Fire of the sense,
With our song
Mild and faithful.
Hear the serene
And pious prayer.

CHERUBIM: Over stars, over winds, over worlds,
Over limpid azure depths,
Over the warm sunbeams . . .
The dance, in an angelical spiral,
Goes on, goes on, goes on.

PHALANXES: We pray for the enslaved souls.

PENITENTS: Hear the serene and pious prayer.
Ave Maria, gratia plena.
You can save from this earth.
From the flesh that weeps and strays
Cruel dust!

PHALANXES: Pray we for the enslaved souls.
Yes, for those enslaved souls we pray

CHERUBIM: We are showers fleeting from cloudland,
Wandering in heavenly splendors.

ALL PHALANXES: Hear the serene and pious prayer.
Ave, Lord of the Angels and saints,
Of the wandering spheres,
And of the winged cherubim of gold.

PENITENTI E FALANGI:
Dall'eterna armonia dell'Universo
Nel glauco spazio immerso
Emana un verso di supremo amor;
E s'erge a Te per l'aure azzurre
E cave in suon soave.
Ave, Ave!

CHERUBINI: Ave, Ave, Signor degli Angeli
E dei santi, Ave Signor.
S'erge a Te per l'aure azzurre
E cave in suon soave.

ATTO PRIMO

SCENA I

La Domenica di Pasqua.

(Francoforte sul Meno. Porta e bastioni.—Passeggiatori d'ogni sorta ch'escono dalla città a gruppi. Chiacchiere, risate, grida, mormorio di folla, andirivieni. A intervalli campane di festa. Poi Faust e Wagner.)

TRE STUDENTI, QUATTRO BORGHESI, DUE CACCIATORI:
Perchè di là?
Volgiamo verso il casin di caccia.
E noi verso il mulino.

OTTO FANCIULLE (Traversando le scene cantando). Del vago April
La traccia brilla e ride
D'intorno baldezza e leggiadria.
(La Fanciulle passano.)

STUDENTI, BORGHESI E CACCIATORI: Che fate voi, compari?
—Stiam colla compagnia.
Messeri, andiamo a Burgdorf
Costà son le più buffe mattie,
La miglior birra,
Le donne e le baruffe
Più dilettose.
—Pazzi! pazzi!
Vi prude ancor la schiena?
(Due banditori con una scritta in mano e a suon di tromba atirae la folla dei passeggiatori; sta con lui un araldo. Dalla parte opposta un cerretano seguito da Hanswurst. La passeggiata diventa sempre più vivace.)
(Un gruppo di balestrieri e popolani, avvieinandosi ad un rivenditore di birra.)

CORO: Qua il biccnier!
Vogliam ber!
E fare un brindisi . . .
Ai folli amor!
E alla beltà corriva!
Evviva!
Beviam, ridiamo, cantiamo.
(Un Frate grigio col cappuccio sul volto cammina tra la folla; alcuni lo inchinano, altri lo sfuggono.)

PENITENTS AND PHALANXES:
From the eternal harmony of the Universe,
Floating in the emerald space,
Rises a verse of supreme love;
And comes to you through the azure air
In sounds suave.
Ave, Ave!

CHERUBIM: Ave, Ave, Lord of the angels
And saints, Ave Lord
Comes to you through the azure air
In sounds suave.

ACT I

SCENE I

Easter Sunday.

(Frankfort-on-the-Main. Gate and bastions. People of every condition leaving the city in groups, · Conversations, laughter, cries and the hum of voices heard; festive chimes, at intervals. Later on, enter Faust and Wagner.)

THREE STUDENTS, FOUR BURGHERS, TWO HUNTERS: —Why in this direction?
—We turn toward the hunting-house.
—And we toward the mill.

EIGHT CHILDREN: (Cross the stage, singing). Follow we the trace of April.
—On its path
—Glisten merriment and beauty.
(Exeunt.)

STUDENTS, BURGHERS AND HUNTERS: What do you here, companions?
—We are with company.
—Friends, let us go to Burgdorf.
There pranks are best,
As well as beer,
And women and brawls, the most attractive.
Madman! do you still covet blows?
(Two public criers, with paper in hand and, with trumpet call, engage attention; with them is a herald. Then enters a charlatan. The scene becomes more and more animated.)
(A group of archers and workingmen approach a vendor of beer.)

CHORUS: A glass here.
We would drink!
And propose a toast—
To our loves!
And to credulous beauty!
Hurrah!
Let us drink, let us laugh, let us sing.
(A Gray Friar, with hood drawn over his head, passes through the crowd. Some bow to him, others avoid him.)

LA FOLLA: (Traendo verso un lato della scena) Guarda! quanti focosi destrier scalpitan là!
C'è il buffon, c'è il falconier . . .
Rendiam omaggio al prence!
Largo, largo al suo passaggio!
Che abbarbaglio di gualdane!
Gloria il principe!
Che frastuono di campane!
Vien la folla a onde a onde . . .
S'arrabatta, si confonde . . .
Guarda là! guarda là!
(Risata, frastuono, la cavalcata passa; Alla sua testa il Principe Elettore, Dame, Dignitari, Paggi, il Buffone, il Falconiere, ecc. Molti passeggiatori seguono curiosamente la cavalcata).
(Faust e Wagner discendono da un'altura.)

FAUST: Al soave raggiar di primavera
Si scoscendono i ghiacci
E già rinverda di speranza la valle;
Il vecchio inverno fugge al monte
E il sol rallegra e avviva forme e color;
Se per anco al piano non isbucciano i fior,
La somma luce fa pullulare in cambio
I bei borghesi azzimati da festa.
(Entra in scena rumorosamente una frotta di popolani e popolane.)

WAGNER: Movere a diporto con voi, Dottor,
È onorevole e saggio,
Pur da me solo,
Qui mi schiferei fra questa gente.
M'è di noia il vulgo.
(Faust e Wagner si ritirano nel fondo.)

POPOLANI: Juhè! Juhè! Juneisa!
Ah! Il bel giovanetto
Sen viene alla festa,
Coi nastri al farsetto,
Coi fior sulla testa.
E sotto ad un pioppo
Fanciulle e compar
Si danno a danzar
Un matto galoppo.
(Incominciano a dansare l'Obertas.)
Juhè! Junè! Juhè!
Tutti vanno alla rinfusa
Sulla musica confusa.
Alla rinfusa tutti van, danziamo,
La danza scalpita sul suol,
La danza rotonda sul suol.
Heisa hè! Juhè! Juheisa!
Ah! Eh! Sorridon le donne
Al bel torneamento,
Svolazzan le gonne
Portate dal vento.
Il bruno e la bionda
Son stretti in un vol,
E scalpita al suol
La danza rotonda,
E sotto ad un pioppo
Fanciulle e compare si danno a danzare

CROWD: (Drawing toward one side of the scene). See yonder! see yonder!
How many horses paw the ground.
There is the fool—there the falconer.
Do we homage to the Prince.
May way for him, make way!
What a dazzling array!
What a clangor of bells!
The crowd surges like the sea,
It ever moves, and mingles its waters.
Make way! make way!
(Laughter and din. The cavalcade passes by; at its head the Prince Elector, Ladies, Dignitaries, Pages, Buffoons, Falconers, etc. Many lookers-on follow the cavalcade curiously.)
(Faust and Wagner descend from an elevation).

FAUST: At the gentle beams of spring,
The ice melts, and the valley is green again
With hope; old winter flies to the mountain,
And the earth rejoices and renews its forms and colors;
If all flowers, as yet, are not in bloom,
The cheering light brings forth in swarms
The burghers, in holiday attire.
(A crowd of people fill the stage, noisily.)

WAGNER: To join you in your sports,
Is honorable and wise, doctor.
Were I alone, I'd be disgusted
Amid these people.
The vulgar offend me.
(Faust and Wagner retire to back)

CHORUS OF THE PEOPLE: Juhe! Juhe! Juheisa!
The handsome youth
Comes to the fête,
With ribbons in his jacket
And flowers on his head.
Now, beneath a poplar
Lads and lassies
Dance together
A wild gallop.
(They commence dancing the "Obertas".)
Juhe! Juhe! Juhe!
All rush pell mell,
To confusing music.
In conclusion, they all go, let us dance,
The dance beats on the soil,
The dance goes round on the soil,
The maidens smile
At the tourney fine,
Gowns fly about,
At bidding of the breeze.
Brunettes and blondes
Are whirled along,
And the mad round dance
Tramples the ground.
And beneath a poplar,
Lads and ladies dance together

Un matto galoppo.
(Le danse cessano.)
(Coro c danzatrici s'allontanano.—Il giorno si oscura lentamente.)

FAUST: (a Wagner) Sediam sovra quel sasso.
Osserva come fulgoreggian
A vespro le capanne,
Declina il giorno.

WAGNER: È l'ora degli spettri;
Essi sen vanno fra i vapor della sera
Ordendo reti sotto i piedi dell'uom.
Andiam; s'impregna l'orizzonte di nebbia.
A notte bruna torna dolce la casa.
A che sogguardi, nel crepuscolo assorto immobilmente?
(Ritorna il Frate Grigio e si dirige lento e spettrale alla volta di Faust.)

FAUST: Vedi quel frate grigio
In mezzo i campi vagolante laggiù?

WAGNER: Da lungo tratto, maestro, l'avvisai;
Nulla di strano appare in esso.

FAUST: Aguzza ben lo sguardo.
Per chi tieni quel frate?

WAGNER: È un questuante che va alla cerca.

FAUST: Lo contempla.
Ei move in tortuose spire
E s'avvicina lento alla nostra volta.
Oh! se non erro, or me di focco imprime al suol!

WAGNER: Ah! No! Fantasima quest'è,
Quest'è del tuo cervello,
Lo non iscargo che un frate grigio.

FAUST: Par vada filando de' lacci intorno a noi.

WAGNER: Timidamente va per la sua via;
Due sconosciuti noi siam per esso.
Ah! Fantasima quest'è del tuo cervello.

FAUST: La spira si stringe.
Ei n'è vicin . . . ah!

WAGNER: (Freddamente).
L'osserva; è un frate grigio,
Non è uno spettro;
Brontola orazioni rigirando un rosario.
Andiam, Maestro.
(Il Frate li segue. Faust e Wagner escono.)

CORO: (interno lontanissimo). Il bel giovinetto
Sen viene alla festa . . .
Il bruno e la bionda
Son stretti in un vol.

A wild gallop.
(The dance ceases. Chorus and dancers withdraw. Night comes on.)

FAUST: (To Wagner). Sit we on this rock.
As night approaches see how the dwellings
Gleam in the distance.
The day is almost spent.

WAGNER: It is the hour of specters;
Amid the vapors of evening,
They go forth, stretching their snares
Under the feet of man. Let us be off;
The horizon is filled with mist;
At night one's house is welcome.
At what do you gaze,
Thus motionless, in the twilight?
(The Gray Friar reappears, and slowly and specter-like approaches Faust.)

FAUST: Do you see yon Gray Friar,
Wandering in the fields?

WAGNER: I've long observed him, Master,
And nothing strange in him appears.

FAUST: Sharpen well your sight.
For what do you hold that Friar?

WAGNER: For one in quest of alms,
And now upon his rounds.

FAUST: He contemplates him.
He moves in tortuous ways,
And slowly comes toward this spot.
Oh! if I err not,
He fiery traces leaves beneath his feet.

WAGNER: A fancy, this,
Of your excited brain.
I only see a Gray Friar.

FAUST: It seems as though
He wove nets about us.

WAGNER: He quietly pursues his path;
We are two strangers to him.
Ah! A fancy, this, of your excited brain.

FAUST: The circle narrows.
He approaches—

WAGNER: (Coldly). Watch him well; he is a Gray Friar,
And not a specter; he mumbles orisons.
And counts his beads.
Let us go, Master.
(The Friar follows them. Exit Faust and Wagner.)

CHORUS: (in the distance). The handsome youth
Comes to the fête . . .
Brunettes and blondes
Are whirled along.

SCENA II

(Officina di Faust. Alcova. Notte.—Faust entrando. Il Frate Grigio lo segue e si nasconde entro l'alcova.)

FAUST: Dai campi, dai prati
Che innonda la notte,
Dai queti sentier ritorno
E di pace, di calma profonda
Son pieno, di sacro . . . mister.
Le torve passioni del core
S'assonnano in placido obblio.
Mi ferve soltanto l'amore dell'uomo!
L'amore di Dio!
Ah! . . . dai campi, dai prati ritorno
E verso l'Evangel mi sento attratto,
M'accingo a meditar.
(Apre un Vangelo posto su d'un alto leggio. Mentre s'accinge a meditare è scosso dall'urlo del Frate che esce dall'alcova.)
Olà! chi urla? il frate! che vegg'io? . . .
Divider la mia cella io t'acconsénto,
Frate, se tu non muggi . . .
E che? . . . mi guarda e non fa motto . . .
Che orribile fantasma
Transcinai dietro di me?
Furia, demonio o spettro, sarai mio!
Sulla tua razza è onnipotente
Il segno di Salomon.
(All'ultime parole di Faust il Frate si trasforma e appare Mefistofele in abito da cavaliere con un mantello nero sul braccio.)

MEFISTOFELE: Che baccano! Messer, mi comandate.

FAUST: Questo era dunque il nocciuol del frate?
Un cavalier! Mi fa rider la facezia.
Come ti chiami?

MEFISTOFELE: La domanda è inezia puerile
Per tal che gli argomenti sdegna
Del Verbo e crede solo agli Enti.

FAUST: In voi, messeri, il nome ha tal virtù
Che rivela l'Essenza.
Dimmi or su, chi sei tu dunque?

MEFISTOFELE: Una parte vivente di quella forza
Che perpetuamente pensa
Il Male e fa il Bene.

FAUST: E che dir vuole codesto gioco di strane parole?

MEFISTOFELE: Son lo Spirito che nega
Sempre tutto; l'astro, il fior.
Il mio ghigno e la mia bega
Turban gli ozi al Creator.
Voglio il Nulla e del Creato
La ruina universal.
È atmosfera mia vital,
Ciò che chiamasi peccato,

SCENE II

(Faust's laboratory. An alcove. Night.)
(Enter Faust. The Gray Friar follows him and conceals himself in alcove.)

FAUST: From fields and meadows, peace sleeping,
And quiet paths, I now return
With calmness filled,
And sacred mystery.
The haggard passions of the heart
Slumber in placid oblivion.
The love of man! the love of God!
Alone burn within me.
I long for the Good; toward the Evangels
I feel attracted. I'll open them, and meditate.
(Opens a Bible placed upon a high desk. As he begins to meditate, he is startled by a cry from the Friar, in the alcove.)
Who is there? who cries out? the Friar! what do I see?
I consent to have you share my cell, Friar,
If you do not cry like this—
What! He stares at me, and moves not!
What terrible phantom
Have I drawn here?
Fury, demon or specter, you'll be mine!
Over your race the sign of Solomon
Is all-potent.
(At Faust's last words, the Friar changes into Mefistoffele, attired as a cavalier, and carrying a black cloak on his arm.)

MEFISTOFELE: What a din! Sir, what are your commands?

FAUST: This then, was the kernel of the Friar!
A cavalier! The jest's a novel one!
Your name?

MEFISTOFELE: The question is absurd,
And childish for him who despises
The arguments of the Word, and believes but in Entities.

FAUST: In you, sir, your name has virtue such
That it reveals the Essence. Tell me, now,
What are you?

MEFISTOFELE: A living part of that force
Which forever wishes Evil and does Good.

FAUST: What means, I ask,
This strange play of words?

MEFISTOFELE: I am the spirit that denies
Ever, all things; the star, the flower.
My smile, and the thought of me,
Disturb the leisure of the Creator.
I long for nothing, and the ruin
Of all things created.
My vital atmosphere
Is what men call Sin.

Morte e Mal!
Rido e avvento questa sillaba:
"No."
Struggo, tento, ruggo, sibilo.
"No." Mordo, invischio, fishio!
(Fischia violentemente colle dita fra le labbra.)
Parte son d'una latèbra
Del gran tutto: Oscurità.
Son figliuol della Tenebra
Che Tenebra tornerà.
S'or la luce usurpa e afferra
Il mio scettro a ribellion,
Poco andrà la sua tenzon,
V'è sul Sole e sulla Terra:
Distruzion!
Rido e avvento questa sillaba:
"No."
Struggo e tento, ruggo e sibilo.

FAUST: Strano figlio del Caos.

MEFISTOFELE: E tu, se brami farti mio socio.
Di buon grado accetto fin da quest'ora
E tuo compar mi chiamo,
O, se ti piace,
Tuo schiavo, tuo servo.

FAUST: E quali patti in ricambio adempier deggio?

MEFISTOFELE: V'è tempo a ciò.

FAUST: No, i patti e parla chiaro.

MEFISTOFELE: Io qui mi lego ai tuoi servigi
E senza tregua accorro
Alle tue voglie; ma laggiù . . .
M'intendi? la vece muterà.

FAUST: Per l'altra vita non mi turba pensier
Se tu mi doni un'ora di riposo
In cui s'acqueti l'alma.
Se sveli al mio bujo pensier
Me stesso e il mondo.
Se avvien ch'io dica all'attimo fuggente;
Arrestati sei bello!
Allor ch'io muoia
E m'inghiotta l'averno.

MEFISTOFELE: Sta ben!

FAUST: Venga il contratto.

MEFISTOFELE: (Si danne la mano). Top, è già fatto.
Fin da stanotte
Nell'orgie ghiotte del mio messer
Da cameriere lo servirò.

FAUST: E quando s'incomincia?

MEFISTOFELE: Tosto.

FAUST: Or ben, presto, a noi, dove andiam?

MEFISTOFELE: Dove t'aggrada.

Death and Evil!
I laugh and launch out this syllable!
"No."
I destroy, I tempt, I roar, I hiss,
"No."
I bite, I seize, I hiss! I hiss! I hiss.
(Whistles violently through his fingers.)
I am part of a cavern
Of the great All: Darkness.
I am a son of Gloom
Which Gloom shall reign anew.
If now light usurps and clutches,
Rebellious, my sceptre,
The dispute will shortly end.
In the sun and on earth
Is Destruction!
I laugh and launch forth this syllable:
"No."
I destroy, I tempt, I roar, I hiss.

FAUST: Strange son of Chaos!

MEFISTOFELE: And you, if you desire
To become my companion, I accept you,
From this hour, and call myself your comrade,
Or, if you like, your servant and slave.

FAUST: To what conditions, in exchange, must I subscribe?

MEFISTOFELE: There is time for that.

FAUST: No!
The conditions, and speak plainly.

MEFISTOFELE: I bind myself, here, unto your service.
And will fulfill your wishes
Without restraint; but, below, do understand,
The parts shall be changed.

FAUST: No thought of another life
Now harasses me. If you bring me
On earth one hour of rest
In which my soul shall know calmness;
If you reveal myself and the world
Unto my dark thought;
If it chance that I say to the fleeting atom:
Stay! you're beautiful! then may I die!
Let Hell engulf me!

MEFISTOFELE: It is well.

FAUST: I tender you this contract. (They clasp hands.)

MEFISTOFELE: Done! I'll not forget it.
From to-night
In the wild orgies of my lord,
As a valet I shall wait upon him.

FAUST: And when do we begin?

MEFISTOFELE: At once.

FAUST: Good. And where Shall we go?

MEFISTOFELE: Wherever you will.

FAUST: Come s'esce di qua?
Dove i cavalli, le carrozze, i staffier?

MEFISTOFELE: Pur ch'io distenda questo mantel
Noi viaggeremo sull'aria . . .

ATTO SECONDO

SCENA I

Il Giardino.

(Un giardino di rustica apparenza. Faust sotto il nome di Enrico, Margherita, Mefistofele, Marta. Passeggiano due a due in lungo e in largo.)

MARGHERITA: (Con molta grazia e semplicità quasi puerile).
Cavaliero illustre e saggio.
Com mai vi può allettar la fanciulla
Del villaggio col suo rustico parlar?

FAUST: (Con amorevolessa e calore). Dalle labbra imporporate
Spandi accento sovruman.
(Baciandole la mano.)
Parla, parla . . .

MARGHERITA: Ah! non baciate
Questa ruvida mia man,
(Con risoluzione.)
No, no, cavalier.
(Passano.)

MEFISTOFELE: (a Marta). Sta ben al nubile correr giocondo,
In traccia d'ilari
Venture, il mondo.
Ma quando lugubre tempo verrà,
Vecchio nel vedova letto morrà.
Pur troppo! e trepido vedo quell'ora.

MARTA: Baie! pensateci; c'è tempo ancora.

MEFISTOFELE: Ah! sì! ahimè!
(Mefistofele e Marta escono.)
(Faust e Margherita ritornano in scena.)

FAUST: Mi perdona l'ardimento
Che dal labbro mi sfuggi
Quando il magico portento
Del tuo viso m'apparì.

MARGHERITA: Fui dolente, fui turbata,
Dubitai nel mio pensier
Che fanciulla scostumata
Mi credeste, cavalier.
Piansi molto, ma rimasemi nel co.
Sempre fiso il vostro volto.

MARTA E MEFISTOFELE: (ride).
Ah! Ah!

FAUST: Segui, segui, mio tesor.
(Margherita e Faust passano.)

FAUST: How leave this place?
Where are the steeds,
The coaches, the lackeys?

MEFISTOFELE: I need but spread this cloak; we'll travel
Through the air.

End of Act One

ACT II

SCENE I

The Garden.

(A garden of rustic appearance. Faust, under the name of Henry; Margherita, Mefistofele, Martha. They walk to and fro, two by two.)

MARGHERITA: (With much grace, and almost puerile simplicity) Illustrious and learned cavalier,
How can you enjoy
This country girl's company
And her rustic language?

FAUST: (Kindly and affectionately). A celestial voice comes
From those ruddy lips!
(Kissing her hand.)
Speak on, speak on.

MARGHERITA: Ah! do not kiss
This, my coarse hand.
(Resolutely.)
No, no cavalier.
(They go out.)

MEFISTOFELE: (to Martha). It is well enough
For a young man to go about
In search of adventure.
But the last sad time will come
When old and a widower he shall die.
Alas! I look forward
Trembling to that hour.

MARTHA: It is idle to think of it;
You have time enough yet.

MEFISTOFELE: Ah! Yes! Alas!
(Exit Mefistofele and Martha.)
(Faust and Margherita return on the scene.)

FAUST: Forgive the rash utterance
Of my lips when I first
Beheld the magic of your face.

MARGHERITA: I was confused and troubled;
I doubted my thought,
Afraid you might take me
For an abandoned girl.
How much I wept! How much I wept!
But your face remained
Ever imprinted in my heart.

MARTHA AND MEFISTOFELE: (laughing.) Ah! Ah!

FAUST: Speak on, speak on, my treasure.
(Margherita and Faust go out.)

MEFISTOFELE: Da un antichissimo detto s'impara
Che moglie saggia è cosa rara

MARTA: Davver?

MEFISTOFELE: Rara davver.

MARTA: Davver! Nè in trappola cadeste ancor?

MEFISTOFELE: Non so, credetelo, che sia l'amor.

MARTA: Nè mai d'un palpito,
Nè mai d'un sogno
V'arse bisogno fascinator?

MEFISTOFELE: Non so, credetelo,
Che sia l'amor.

MARTA: Ah, ah! ah, ah! . . .
(Passano.)

MARGHERITA: (Ritorna in scena con Faust.—Con molta semplicità). Dimmi se credi, Enrico nella religione.

FAUST: Non vò turbar le fedi delle coscienze buone.
D'altro parliam; darei perchè amo,
Fanciulla, sangue e vita.

MARGHERITA: (Con accento di rimprovero). Non basta. Creder bisogna,
E a nulla tu credi, Enrico.

FAUST: Ascolta, vezzoso angelo mio.
Chi oserebbe affermare tal detto:
Credo in Dio!
Le parole dei santi son beffe al ver ch'io chiedo,
E qual uomo oserebbe tanto da dir: non credo?
Colma il tuo cor d'un palpito
ineffabile e vero d'amor
E chiama poi quell'estasi: Natura!
Amor! Mistero!
Vita! Dio! non è che fumo e folla
In paragon del senso il nome e la parola.

MARGHERITA: Convien che vada, addio.
(Per allontanarsi.)

FAUST: Dimmi, in casa sei sola sovente?

MARGHERITA: (semplicemente.)
È piccioletta la nostra famigliola.
Io veglio all'orto, al desco ed allo staio,
Attendo ad ogni cura, filo sull'arcolaio.
(Sorridendo.)
E assai minuziosa la mamma.
Eppur, beate placidamente passo
Tutte le mie giornate.

FAUST: Di', non potrò giammai
dolce un'ora d'amore
Viver teco e confondere il mio cuor col tuo cuore?

MARGHERITA: Non dormo sola e in lieve sopor mia madre giace;
S'ella t'udisse,
(Con agitazione.)
Credo, ne morrei . . .

MEFISTOFELE: From a very ancient maxim
We learn that a good wife
Is a rare thing.

MARTHA: Indeed?

MEFISTOFELE: Rare indeed!

MARTHA: Indeed! and did you
Not fall into the trap yet?

MEFISTOFELE: I assure you,
I do not know what love is.

MARTHA: And did no sigh,
No dream,
Ever burn within your heart?

MEFISTOFELE: I assure you,
I know not what love is.

MARTHA: Ah! Ah! Ah! Ah!
(They go out.)

MARGHERITA: (Returning with Faust.—With simplicity). Tell me, Henry, if you believe in your religion.

FAUST: I do not wish to trouble the faith of pure consciences.
Speak we of something else. I would give my blood and life
For the maiden I love.

MARGHERITA: (reprovingly). It is not enough. You must believe,
And you believe nothing, Henry.

FAUST: Listen, my charming angel.
Who dares affirm the words: "I believe in God"?
The words of the saints mock the truth I seek.
Yet who dares say this much: "I do not believe"?
Fill your heart with ineffable and true bliss,
And then call this ecstacy; Nature!
Love! Mystery!
Life! God! It matters little. Smoke and Folly are name and word, Weighed against sense.

MARGHERITA: I must depart.
Farewell.
(Going.)

FAUST: Tell me—are often home
Alone?

MARGHERITA: (simply). Our family is very small.
I see to the garden, the grain, the table, and all else;
I spin with the spinning wheel.
(Smiling.)
My mother is very strict, and yet
I pass in peace most happy days.

FAUST: Shall I never live with you through an hour of love,
And press my heart against yours?

MARGHERITA: I do not sleep alone, and my mother slumbers lightly;
Should she hear you I think I should die!

FAUST: Datti pace.
(Porgendole un'ampollina.)
A te; di questo succo tre sole goccie ponno
Addormentare in placido, in letargico sonno.

MARGHERITA: Porgi . . . nè può venirne alcun male a mia madre?
(Marta e Mefistofele rientrano.)

FAUST: Nessuno, angio! soave dalle guancie leggiadre!

MARGHERITA: Dio clemente, nuova, ignara
Son del monda, dell'amore;
Sento un'aura areana e cara
Che mi penetra nel core.

FAUST: È l'anelito superno,
Il miracolo divino
Della vita! senza freno, senza fine!
È il miracolo d'amor, sì!

MEFISTOFELE: Non so, credetelo, che sia l'amore.
Moglie saggia è cosa rara davver.

MARTA: Ah! Davver? nè in trappola cadeste ancor?

FAUST E MARGHERITA: Ah! sento un'aura arcana e cara . . .
(Margherita si svincola dalle mani di Faust.)

MARGHERITA: Addio! fuggo, fuggo, lesta, lesta.

FAUST: (insegue Margherita). Resta, resta, Margherita.
Amor mio, vieni, dove corri?

MARTA: Corri, corri, lesto, lesto.

MEFISTOFELE: (insegue Marta). Marta! Marta! dove corri?
Tu sei còlta!

MARTA: Fuggo, fuggo, corri, corri.

MARGHERITA E FAUST: T'amo! T'amo!

MARTA E MEFISTOFELE: Ah! T'amo!
(Tutti si disperdono.)

SCENA II

La Notte del Sabba.

(Scena deserta e selvaggi nella vallea di Schirk, costeggiata dagli spaventosi culmini del Brocken (monte delle streghe). I sinistri profili di roccie staccano in nero sul cielo grigio, un'aurora rossiccia di luna illumina stranamente la scena. Una caverna da un lato. Il picco di Rosstrappe a sinistra. Il vento soffia nei burroni; poi la voce di Mefistofele che aizza Faust a salir la montagna.)

MEFISTOFELE: (Di dentro, assai lontano con voce lunga e sotterranea). Su cammina, cammina, cammina;
Bujo è il cielo, scoscesa è la china.

FAUST: Fear not.
(Gives her a vial.)
Three drops of this liquid
Will plunge one into a peaceful lethargy.

MARGHERITA: Give it to me. Can it not harm my mother?
(Martha and Mefistofele reenter.)

FAUST: No, sweet angel with fairest cheeks!

MARGHERITA: Merciful Father, ignorant though I am
Of the world and of love,
I feel a sweet and secret influence
Penetrating my heart.

FAUST: It is the supreme desire,
The divine miracle
Of life; immense, eternal,
Without restraint, without end.

MEFISTOFELE: I assure you, I do not know what love is.
A good wife is a rare thing.

MARTHA: Ah! Indeed! Did you not fall into the trap yet?

FAUST AND MARGHERITA: Ah! I feel a sweet and sacred influence . . .
(Margherita frees herself from Faust's embrace.)

MARGHERITA: Farewell! Fly, fly, quick, quick!

FAUST: (Running after Margherita). Stay, stay, Margherita.
Come, my love, where are you running?

MARTHA: Run, run, quick, quick!

MEFISTOFELE: (following Martha) Martha! Martha! where are you running?
You are caught!

MARTHA: Fly, fly, run, run!

MARGHERITA AND FAUST: I love you!

MARTHA AND MEFISTOFELE: Ah! I love you!
(All disappear.)

SCENE II

The Sabbath.

(The stage represents a wild and deserted spot in the valley of Schirk, bounded by the fearful heights of the Brocken. The sinister profiles of the rocks stand forth black against a black sky, and reddish moonbeams light up, weirdly, the scene. A cavern is on one side; on the left is the peak of Rosstrappe. The wind moans among the precipices. The voice of Mefistofele, helping Faust climb the mountain, is heard.)

MEFISTOFELE: (In the distance, in deep and sepulchral tones.) On, on, on,
Black are the heavens, weary the back,

Su cammina, cammina, cammina,
Che lontano s'erge il monte
Del vecchio Satan.
(Appariscono dei fuochi fatui, uno di questi si dirige alla volta di Faust e di Mefistofele.)

FAUST E MEFISTOFELE: Folletto, veloce, leggier,
Che splendi soletto per l'ermo sentier,
A noi t'avvicina,
Che buia è la china.
(Mefistofele e Faust appariscono sovra un'alta roccia isolati ed immobili.)

MEFISTOFELE: Ascolta! S'agita il bosco e gli alti pini antichi
Cozzan furenti colle giganti traccia.

CORO: Ah! Ah!

MEFISTOFELE: Ascolta, ascolta!
(con accento concitato e sussultante.)
Ad imo della valle un ululato
Di mille voci odo sonar . . .
S'accosta l'infernale congrega . . .
Oh! meraviglia!
(Con uno scoppio di gioia infernale.)
Già i nembi, il monte, le boscaglie, i cieli
Un furioso intuonar magico carme!

STREGHE: Rampiamo, rampiamo che il tempo ci gabba,
E il ballo perdiamo di Re Belzebù,
È notte fatale la notte del Sabba;
Il primo che sale ha un premio di più
Su! Su! Su! Su!

STREGONI: Su! Su! Su! Su!
È notte tremenda la notte del Sabba.
Su svelti, su forti che il tempo ci gabba,
Le nostri consorti son giunte lassù.
(Irrompono freneticamente sulla scena.)

CORO: Siam salvi in tutta l'eternità!
Saboè! Saboè! Saboè!

MEFISTOFELE: (Fendendo la folla). Largo, largo a Mefistofele,
Al vostro Re!
O razza putrida vuota di fè,
Che ognun m'adori
Ed umile si prostri al Re.

CORO: (Inginocchiato in circolo intorno a Mefistofele). Ci prostriamo a Mefistofele, al nostro Re, Ognuno atterrasi dinanzi a te.

MEFISTOFELE: (Su di un sasso in forma di trono). Popoli! e scettro e clamide
Non date al Re sovrano?
La formidabil mano vuota dovrà serrar?

Upward, on, on, on!
For far away, far away,
Rises the mountain of old Satan.
(Will-o'-the wisps appear, and one of them moves toward Faust and Mefistofele.)

FAUST AND MEFISTOFELE: Will-o'-the-wisp,
Swift and light,
That shines alone,
Over the lonely path,
Come near unto us.,
For the road is dark.
(Faust and Mefistofele are disclosed, standing still upon a high rock.)

MEFISTOFELE: Hark! hark!
The woods move, and the aged pines
Meet in furious combat
With their gigantic limbs.

CHORUS: Ah! Ah!

MEFISTOFELE: Hark! hark!
(With very excited and unsteady accents.)
In the valley below I hear the howling
Of a thousand voices. The infernal gathering Approaches. O marvel!
(With a crash of infernal joy.)
Clouds, mountains, woods,
Intone a wild, enchanted song.

WITCHES: Climb we, climb we, the world despises us,
And we lose the dance of King Beelzebub.
It is a fatal night: the night of the Sabbath;
Whoever arrives first, bears off a prize.
On, on, on, on!

SORCERERS: On! On! On! On!
It is a terrible night: the night of the Sabbath.
Be quick and bold, for time presses;
Our wives, already, have climbed the heights.
(All rush wildly upon the stage.)

CHORUS: We are saved, for all eternity!
Saboè! har Sabbah!

MEFISTOFELE: (Pushing through the crowd). Make way for Mefistofele,
Make way for your king!
You putrid race, devoid of faith,
Let all worship
And humbly bow to me.

CHORUS: (Kneeling in a circle around Mefistofele). Make way for Mefistofele,
For our King,
Let all fall prostrate
In your presence.

MEFISTOFELE: (On a rock in the shape of a throne). You people! my sceptre and robe of state
Do you not give to your sovereign?
Must I close my formidable hand
Upon emptiness?

CORO: (Porgendo una clamide a Mefistofele). Ecco la clamide, non t'adirar,
Or 'ubbidiscono ciel, terra e mar.

MEFISTOFELE: Ho soglio, ho scettro e despota
Son del mio regno fiero.
Ma voglio il mondo intero
Nel pugno mio serrar.

CORO: (Correndo intorno ad una caldaia che sta in fondo alla scena). Sotto la pentola corri a soffiar,
Entro la pentola corri a mischiar,
Sopra la pentola corri a danzar!
(Porgendo a Mefistofele un globo di vetro.)
Eccoti, o principe, il mondo inter.

MEFISTOFELE: (Col globo di vetro in mano). Ecco il mondo,
Vuoto e tondo,
S'alza, scende,
Balza e splende,
Fa carole
Intorno al sole,
Trema, rugge,
Dà e distrugge
Ora sterile, or fecondo
Ecco il mondo.
Sul suo grosso
Antico dosso
V'e una schiatta
E sozza e matta,
Fiera, vile,
Ria, sottile,
Che ad ogn'ora
Si divora
Dalla cima sino al fondo
Del reo mondo.
Fola vana
È a lei Satana,
Riso e scherno
È a lei l'Inferno,
Scherno e riso
Il Paradiso.
Oh per Dio! Che or rido anch'io
Nel pensar ciò
Che le ascondo . . .
Ah! ah! ah! ah!
Ecco il mondo!
(Getta con impeto il globo di vetro che si frange.)

CORO: Riddiamo! Riddiamo!
Che il mondo è caduto!
Che il mondo è perduto!
Sui morti frantumi del globo fatal . . .
S'accenda, s'intrecci la ridda infernal

FAUST: Stupor! stupor! Là nel lontano,
Nel nebuloso ciel una fanciulla
Pallida, mesta, la scerni?
Il piede lento conduce
E di catene avvinto!
Ahi! pietosa vision . . . mi rassomiglia
Quella dolce figura a Margherita.

MEFISTOFELE: Torci il guardo, torci il guardo!
Quello è spettro seduttor,
E fantasma maliardo,

CHORUS: (Giving Mefistofele a robe and sceptre). Behold the robe; be not wroth.
Now heaven and earth obey you.

MEFISTOFELE: I have a throne and sceptre, and am ruler
Of my great realm;
But I would hold the world
With my grasp.

CHORUS: (They run around a caldron at back of stage). Blow over the caldron!
Mix in the caldron!
Dance around the caldron!
(Giving Mefistofele a glass globe.)
This, O prince, the universe.

MEFISTOFELE: (With the globe in his hand). Here is the world,
Empty and round.
It rises, falls,
Dances, glitters,
Whirls about
Under the sun,
Trembles, roars,
Creates, destroys,
Now barren, now fecund—
Secli is the world.
Upon its huge
And rounded back
Dwells an unclean
And mad race,
Wicked, subtle,
Proud, vile,
Which forever
Devours itself,
From the depths to the heights
Of the guilty world.
Wild vanity,
Satan's you are
Laughter and scorn
Belong to hell,
Scorn and laughter
For paradise!
By Heaven, it makes me merry,
To think over
What is hidden here!
Behold the world.
(Hurls down the globe, and shatters it.)

CHORUS: About! about! the world has fallen!
The world is lost!
Over the dead fragments of the universe
Rises and circles the infernal round.

FAUST: Wonderful! wonderful! yonder,
In the misty skies, a pale and sad child
Do you not see? She slowly moves,
And is bound in irons
Sweet vision! The gentle face
Resembles that of Margherita.

MEFISTOFELE: Turn away, turn away!
It is a misleading spectre,
A sorcerer's phantom,

Che a chi il fissa ammorba il cor.
Torci il guarda, anima illusa,
Dalla testa di Medusa!

FAUST: Quell'occhio da celeste spalancato cadavericamente!
E il bianco sen che tanti
Ebbe da me baci d'amor!
Si . . . è Margherita, l'angelo mio!

MEFISTOFELE: Torci il guardo! nella fata
Sogna ognun colci che amò.

FAUST: Ah! strano vezzo il collo le circonda
D'una riga sanguigna.

MEFISTOFELE: Ha la testa ditaccata,
Perseo fu che la tagliò.

CORO: Ah! Su! riddiamo, che il tempo cì gabba,
Sui vecchi rottami del globo fatal;
È notte tremneda la notte del Sabba,
Rimbombi sul monte la ridda infernal.
Sabba, Sabba, Saboè!

Fine Dell'Atto Secondo.

ATTO TERZO

SCENA I

Morte di Margherita.

(Carcere. Margherita stesa a terra su di un giaciglio di paglia, canticchiando e vaneggiando. Notte. Una lampada accesa inchiodata al muro. Un cancello nel fondo.)

MARGHERITA: L'altra notte in fondo al mare
Il mio bimbo hanno gittato,
Or per farmi delirare
Dicon ch'io l'abbia affogato.
L'aura è fredda, il carcer fosco,
E la mesta anima mia
Come il passero del bosco
Vola via. Ah! pietà di me!
In funerco sopore
È mia madre addormentata,
E per colmo dell'orrore
Dicon ch'io l'abbia attoscata.

FAUST: (Fuori del cancello). Salvala!

MEFISTOFELE: (Fuori del cancello). E chi la spinse nell'abbisso?
Io? o tu? Ciò che posso farò.
Ecco le chiavi.
Dormono i carcerieri,
I puledri fatati son pronti per la fuga . . .
(Mefistofele apre il cancello e parte. Faust entra in carcere.)

MARGHERITA: Dio di pietà! Son essi, eccoli, aita!
Dura cosa è il morir . . .

FAUST: Pace . . . pace . . . Io son un che ti salva.

That sickens the heart.
Turn away, misguided mortal,
From the head of Medusa.

FAUST: Those celestial eyes are open, corpse-like!
It is the white bosom
I have covered often with kisses loving.
It is Margherita, yes, my angel!

MEFISTOFELE: Turn away! It is a dream
Such as lovers harbor.

FAUST: See the strange collar about her neck;
A bloody thread.

MEFISTOFELE: Her head has been cut off,
It was Perseus did it.

CHORUS: Ah! Let us laugh, that time is tricking us,
On the old rocks of the globe fatal,
It is a tremendous night, the night of Sabba
It shall resound on the mountain, the infernal dance
Sabba, Sabba, Saboè.

End of Act Two.

ACT III

SCENE I

Margherita's Death.

(A prison. Margherita lying on the ground on a bed of straw, singing and raving. Night. A lighted lamp is fastened to the wall. A grating at back.)

MARGHERITA: The other night they threw
My child into the sea,
Now to make me mad,
They say I drowned it.
The air is cold, the prison dark,
And my sad soul,
Like the sparrow of the wood,
Flies away.
In heavy slumber
My mother is sleeping,
And horror of horrors!
They say I poisoned her.

FAUST: (behind the grating). Save her!

MEFISTOFELE: (Behind the grating). And who pushed her into the abyss?
I or you? We shall have to escape, oh, yes,
Here are the keys. The jailor sleeps,
The witches' horses ready are
For flight.
(Mefistofele opens grating, and exits. Faust enters the prison).

MARGHERITA: God of pity!
It is they! they are here! help!
It is hard to die!

Faust: Hush! hush!
I am here to save you.

MARGHERITA: Un nom . . . tu sei
. . . di carità . . .
L'abbi per me . . .

FAUST: Silenzio.
(Con effusione).
Margherita.

MARCHERITA: Cielo! ah! parla ancora, ah! parla!
Ah! tu mi salvi! ah! m'hai salvata!
(Vaneggiando.)
Ecco la strada è questa
Dov'io ti vidi per la prima volta . . .
Ecco il giardin di Marta . . .

FAUST: (Con ansia dolorosa). Ah! vieni, ah! vieni . . .

MARGHERITA: Resta ancor, resta ancor . . .

FAUST: T'affretta o a prezzo
Tremendo pagherem l'indugio.

MARGHERITA: (Con affettuosa angoscia). E non mi baci?
Ah! le tue labbra son gelo . . .
(Tragicamente.)
Che festi dell'amor tuo?

FAUST: Cessa.

MARGHERITA: Tu mi togli pietoso alle catene?
E ignori chi tu salvi, o pietoso?
Ho avvelenata . . . la mia povera madre . . .
Ed ho affogato . . . il fantolino mio . . .
(Affannosamente.)
Qua . . . la tua mano . . . vien . . .
Vo' narrarti . . . il tetro ordin di tombe . . .
Che doman scaverai . . . la . . .
Fra le zolle più verdeggianti . . .
Steaderai mia madre
Nel più bel sito del cimiter . . .
Discosto . . . ma pur vicino . . .
Scaverai la mia . . . la mia povera fossa . . .
E il mio bambino poserà sul mio sen

FAUST: Deh! ti scongiuro, fuggiamo.

MARGHERITA: No. Sta l'inferno a quella porta . . .
Ah! perchè fuggi? perchè non t'arresti?
Non ti posso seguir . . .
E poi . . . la vita per me è dolor;
Che fa sulla terra?
Mendicare il mio pane a frusto a frusto
Dovrò colla coscienza paurosa
De' miei delitti.

FAUST: Rivolgi a me lo sguardo! ah! . . .
Odi la voce dell'amor che prega!
Vieni . . . fuggiam.

MARGHERITA: Si fuggiamo . . . già sogno
Un incantato asil di pace,
Dove soavemente uniti ognor vivrem.
(Faust e Margherita avvinti, guardandosi negli occhi e mormorando languidamente insieme.)

MARGHERITA: A man!—you are—
Have mercy on me!

FAUST: Silence!
(Effusively.)
Margherita.

MARGHERITA: Heaven, speak again, ah, speak!
You saved me!
(Raving.)
You have saved me! Behold the street.
Where first I saw you
Behold the garden of Martha!

FAUST: (with painful anxiety). Ah! come, come!

MARGHERITA: Stay! stay!—

FAUST: Hasten, or the delay
A fearful price will cost us.

MARGHERITA: You do not kiss me? Your lips are ice—
(Tragically.)
What have you done with your love?

FAUST: Ah! hush, hush!

MARGHERITA: You release me from my chains,
And flee not in horror? You know not
Whom you save merciful one!
My poor mother I have poisoned, and drowned
My little child!
(With anxiety.)
Give me your hand—come,
I will tell you how I'd have
The graves laid out you'll dig tomorrow.
Beneath greenest turf, where the cemetery
Is most beautiful, my mother lay.
Away from her, but near, I'll have
My own poor grave,
My infant sleeping on my breast.

FAUST: I beseech you, let us fly!

MARGHERITA: No. Hell stands at yonder door.
Ah! Wherefore fly? why not stay?
I cannot follow you; moreover
Life is woe to me;
What shall I do on earth?
Shall I beg my bread, morsel by morsel?
With conscience trembling
At thought of my sins?

FAUST: Look at me!
Hear the voice of love entreating!
Come: let us fly.

MARGHERITA: Ah! yes, let us fly! I dream already
Of an enchanted asylum of peace
Where, sweetly united, we shall ever live.

MARGHERITA E FAUST: Lontano, lontano, lontano
Sui flutti d'un ampio oceàno
Fra i roridi effluvi del mar,
Fra l'alghe, fra i fiori, fra le palme,
Il porto dell'intime calme.
L'azzurra isoletta m'appar.
M'appare sul cielo sereno
Ricinta d'un arcobaleno
Specchiante il sorriso del sol.
La fuga dei liberi amanti
Speranti, migranti, raggianti
Dirige a quell'isola il volo.

MEFISTOFELE: (Comparendo dal fondo). Sorge il dì!

MARGHERITA: Ah! Satana rugge!

FAUST: (disperatamente). Ah! deh! t'affretta, il tempo fugge!

MARGHERITA: (a Faust.) Ah! no, non lasciarmi in abbandono!

MEFISTOFELE: Squilla già da quelle porte
La fanfara della morte.

MARGHERITA: (Staccandosi da Faust). Ahimè! gran Dio, tu allontana la mia tentazion!
Mi strazian le membra con dur ritorte.
O Dio, tu m'ainta mi guidano a morte,
O ciel! ah! già sul mio capo la scure brillò.

FAUST: Serena, fanciulla, lo spirto sconvolto,
Ch'io vegga tranquillo quel pallido volto
Pon freno alla foga de' vani sospiri,
C'è d'uopo fuggir, ah! si!

MEFISTOFELE: (accanto a Faust). Cessate, cessate le vane parole,
Dal ciel d'oriente già levasi il sole,
De' neri puledri già s'ode il nitrire,
C'è d'uopo fuggir, fuggiam.

FAUST: Ah! non fossi mai nato!

MEFISTOFELE: Ebben?

MARGHERITA: Chi s'erge? chi s'erge dalla terra?
E' il mostro! Misericordia!
In questo santo asilo
Che vuole il maledetto?
Ah! lo discaccia, è forse me ch'ei vuol!

FAUST: Ah! vieni e vivi,
Deh! vivi, Margherita.

MEFISTOFELE: Mi segui, o entrambi v'abbandono alla mannaia.
(Luce d'alba. Mefistofele va ad esplorare nel fondo, sul cancello. Margherita affranta, agonizzando nelle braccia di Faust.)

FAUST AND MARGHERITA: (In each other's arms, looking into each other's eyes and languidly murmuring:) Far, far away,
On the billows of a vast ocean,
Amidst the sounding waves,
Amidst sea-weeds, flowers and palms
The harbor of placid calmness,
The blue islet appears.
It appears in the serene heaven,
Crowned with a rainbow,
Mirroring the smile of the sun.
The flight of the lovers free,
Journeying, hoping, beaming,
Turns toward this islet its step.

MEFISTOFELE: (appears at back). Day is breaking.

MARGHERITA: Satan calls!

FAUST: (in despair). Come hasten, time has wings.

MARGHERITA: (to Faust). Forsake me not!

MEFISTOFELE: From yonder gates, death's trumpet tones
Peal forth already

MARGHERITA: (Tears herself from Faust). O Heaven, avert the temptation!
They break my limbs with harshest bonds.
O God, help me, they lead me to death!
O Heaven! the axe glitters over my head.

FAUST: Fairest child, your mind wanders.
Let your pale cheek calmness recover.
Curb the fury of vain desires.
We must fly! we must fly!

MEFISTOFELE: (aside). A truce to idle words,
The sun is risen in the eastern sky.
I hear the neighing of our coal-black steeds.

FAUST: Would that I had never been born!

MEFISTOFELE: Well?

MARGHERITA: Who rises before me?
Who rises from the earth? It is the monster!
Mercy! in this holy asylum,
What seeks the accursed one? Turn him forth!
Am I perhaps the one he claims?

FAUST: Ah! come and live!
Come and live, Margherita!

MEFISTOFELE: You follow me, or both of you
I'll abandon to the headsman.
(Light of dawn. Mefistofele goes exploring far down at the gate. Margherita, worn, fatigued, agonizing in the arms of Faust.)

MARGHERITA: Spunta . . . l'aurora pallida . . .
L'ultimo di già viene . . .
Esser doveva . . . il fulgido giorno . . .
Del nostro imene . . .
Tutto è finito in vita!

FAUST: O strazio crudel!

MARGHERITA: Taci . . . ad ognun s'asconda che amasti Margherita
E ch'io ti diedi il cor.
Ah! a questa moribonda
Perdonerai! Signor . . . perdonerai! Signor.
Padre santo . . . mi salva . . .
E voi celesti proteggete
Questa che a voi si volge . . .
(Cade.)
Enrico . . . mi fai ribrezzo!

MEFISTOFELE: È giudicata.

FAUST: O strazio!

CORO (interno). È salva!

MEFISTOFELE: A me, Faust.
(Faust e Mefistofele scompaiono Nel fondo il carnefice circondalo da sgherri. Cala il sipario.)

Fine Dell'Atto Terzo.

ATTO QUARTO

SCENA I

La Notte del Sabba Classico.

(Le sponde del fiume Penèjos, nel fondo di Tempe, il monte Pindo. Acque limpide, cespugli fioriti, lauri, oleandri, ninfee. La luna immobile allo Zenit spande sulla scena una luce incantevole. Un tempio dorico a sinistra, a destra zolle verdeggianti sparse di fiori. Elena, Pantalis, Sirene).

ELENA: La luna immobile
Innonda l'etere
D'un raggio pallido.

PANTALIS: Calido balsamo
Stilla n le ramora
Dai cespi roridi.

ELENA: Doridi e silfidi,
Cigni e nereidi
Vagan sull'alighe.
L'aura è serena,
La luna è piena,
Canta, o sirena,
La serenata!

PANTALIS: Canta, canta, o sirena, canta.

FAUST: (di dentro). Elèna, Elèna, Elèna!

ELENA: Viandante languido
T'appressa al margine
Del flutto flebile.

MARGHERITA: Pallid dawn appears;
The last day is come;
It was to have been the bright day
Of our marriage!

FAUST: O woe!

MARGHERITA: Hush! conceal from all
That you did love, Margherita
And that I gave you my heart.
Unto the dying one
Heaven will grant forgiveness.
Heavenly Father, save me, and you,
Celestial angels of pardon,
Protect beneath your divine wings
The sinner who turns to you—Henry! Henry!
(Falls.)
You make me shudder!

MEFISTOFELE: She is judged!

FAUST: O woe!

VOICES ON HIGH: She is saved!

MEFISTOFELE: Faust, you are mine!
(Faust and Mefistofele disappear. At back, the headsman and guards are disclosed. The curtain falls.)

End of Act Three

ACT IV

SCENE I

The Night of the Classical Sabbath.

(The bank of the river Peneus, at the bottom of the valley of Tempe, and the mountain Pindo. Limpid waters, thick bushes, flowers, and foliage. The moon, motionless at the zenith, casts an enchanted light upon the scene. At left, a temple.)

ELENA: The motionless moon
Bathes the ether
In pallid rays.

PANTALIS: A warm balsam
Drops from the branches
Of dewy bushes

ELENA: Driads and sylphs,
Swans and nereids,
Wander on wings.
The air is serene—the moon full—
The wave enchanted!
Sing, O sirens—the serenade!

PANTALIS: Sing, o sirens, sing.

FAUST: (in slumber). Elena! Elena! Elena!

ELENA: Languid traveler,
Approach the bank
Of the purling waters.

PANTALIS: Debile cantico t'invita,
E'florida la via di mammole.

ELENA: Cantan le tenere sirene
Amabili Grazie del mar.
L'aura è serena,
La luna è piena,
Canta, sirena, la serenata!

FAUST: (Sempre dietro la scena). Elèna, Elèna, Elèna!

MEFISTOFELE: (Entra in scena con Faust). Ecco la notte del classico Sabba.
Gran ventura per te che cerchi la vita
Nel regno delle favole tu sei,
Saggio consiglio è di spiar ciascun
Nostra fortuna per opposto sentier.

FAUST: Delibo l'aura del suo vago idioma cantatrice!
Son sul suolo di Grecia!
Ogni mia fibra è posseduta dall'amor.
(Faust esce.)

MEFISTOFELE: Al Bròcken, fra la streghe del Nord
Ben io sapevo farmi obbedir,
Ma qui fra stranie larve
Più me stesso non trovo.
Atri vapori dell'irto Harz,
Aeri catrami e resine!
O prediletti alle mie nari!
Un'orma di voi non futo
In quest'attica terra,
Ma qual s'inoltra volante o danzante
Gajetto sciame femminil? Vediamo.
(Entrano le Coretidi. Danza in cerchi (Chorèa). Mefistofele annoiato e confuso esce.)
(Entra Elena seguita dal Coro.)

CORETIDI: Ah! Trionfi ad Elena, carmini, corone,
Danze patetiche, ludi di cetera.
Circonfusa di sol il magico viso,
Tu irradi l'anime, riverberi il cielo

ELENA: (Assorta in una fatal visione) Notte cupa, truce, senza fine funèbre
Orrida notte d'Idillio! implacato rimorso!
Nugoli d'arsa polvere al vento surgono e fanno
Più cieca la tenèbra.

CORETIDI: Pace!

ELENA: Di cozzantisi scudi e di carri stroscianti
E di catapulte sonanti l'etere è scossa!
Si muta il suol in volutàbro di sangue!

CORETIDI: Numi! Numi!

PANTALIS: Softest song invites;
The path is flowered
With fair violets.

ELENA: Sing the soft sirens.
Amiable graces of the sea.
The air is serene.
The moon is full.
Sing, sirens, the serenade!

FAUST: (Still behind the scenes). Elena! Elena!

MEFISTOFELE: (Enters with Faust). This is the night of the classical Sabbath.
A great event for you, that seekest life
In the realm of fairydom. You are now
In the domain of fable, indeed!
It were wise counsel for each of us
To seek fortune in opposite directions.

FAUST: I drink the air, rich with its beauteous language.
I tread the soil of Greece; my every fiber
Is possessed with love.
(Exit.)

MEFISTOFELE: On the Brocken,
Midst the witches of the North,
I knew right well
How to make myself obeyed.
Here, amongst stranger shapes.
I am no more the same.
Dark vapors of the rugged Hartz,
Acrid gums an resins sweet to my nostrils!
No breath of you is blown
Over this Attic ground.
But lo! what mirthful female cohort
Flies or dances here: Let us see—
(Enter the Corytides. A dance follows. Exit Mefistofele, wearied and confused.)
(Enter Elena followed by Chorus.)

CORYTIDES: Triumphs for Elena, songs, crowns,
Dances pathetic, sounds of the zither,
Your magic brow is crowned with sunbeams;
You lighten the soul and reflect heaven.

ELENA: (Absorbed in a fatal vision). Dark and terrible night, funereal, unending!
Horrible night of Ilion! implacable remorse!
Clouds of burned dust rise on the winds,
And make darkness the darker.

CORYTIDES: Peace!

ELENA: The heavens are filled with din
Of shock of shields, of rushing chariots,
Of sounding catapults! the ground is changed
Into a pool of blood.

CORYTIDES: The gods! the gods!

ELENA: I numi terribili già ruggono,
L'ire inferocendo della pugna;
L'ispide torri ergonsi tragiche,
Negra, fra la caligin densa.

CORETIDI: Elena!

ELENA: L'incendio già lambre le case,
Veggonsi l'ombre degli Achèi projette,—bui profili giganti—
Vagolar le pareti in mezzo ai roghi.
Ahimè! Alto silenzio regna
Poscia dove fu Troja.
(Entra Faust splendidamente vestito coll'abito dei Cavalieri del XV secolo; è seguito da Mefistofele, Nereo, Pantalis, da piccoli Fauni e da Sirene.)

CORETIDI: Chi vien? O strana, o mirabile vista!
Un eroe tutto splendidi s'inoltra!
Sul suo viso mestissimo si legge:
Amor!

CORO: Volgiti Regina! Regina volgiti e guarda.

FAUST: (Inchinato davanti ad Elena). Forma ideal purissima
Della belleza eterna!
Un uom ti si prosterna
Innamorato al suolo.
Vo'gi vêr me la cruna
Di tua pupilla bruna,
Vaga come la luna,
Ardente come il sole.

ELENA: Dal tuo respiro pendo e me chiamo beata
Ch'unica fra tutte le troadi e le argive ninfe
Spargo i voluttuosi fascini su cotanto amante!

FAUST: La tranquilla immagine
Della fanciulla blanda
Ch'amai là fra le nebbie
D'una perduta landa
Già disvani, conquiso
M'ha un più sublime sguardo,
Un più fulgurato viso
E tremo ed ardo!
Conquiso m'ha più subime amor!

MEFISTOFELE: O stupore! Prodigio! Quivi l'amor li aduna!
Stupor! stupor! guarda!
Ah qui li aduna l'amor!
(Alle Coretidi.)
Zitti lassù!

PANTALIS: Ah! quivi l'amor li aduna!
Guarda! coppia del ciel!

NERÈO: Prodigio, o prodigio!
Stupor! Celeste coppia!
Qui li aduna l'amor!
Si, quivi l'amor li aduna!

CORETIDI: Quivi l'amor li aduna!
O stupor! celeste coppia!
Sembran Endimione e Luna!
La dea delira l'alito
Dell'eroe rapito!
Lo contempla! quasi lo bacia, o stupor!
(Mefistofele, Pantalis, Nerèo e il Coro s'allontanano.)

ELENA: O incantesimo! Parla! qual magico soffio
Cotanto bèa la tua dolce loquela d'amore?
Il suon tu inserti al suon quasi alito d'eco
D'estasi piena.
Dimmi, come farò a parlar l'idioma soave?

FAUST: Frugo nel cor e ti rispondo: Ave!

ELENA: E mi rispondi: Ave.

FAUST: Così tu pur come augello a richiamo
Frughi nel core e mi rispondi: T'amo!

ELENA: T'amo! T'amo!

ELENA E FAUST: Amore! mistero celeste, profondo!
Già il tempo dilegua, cancellasi il mondo!
Già l'ore dai tetri mortali contate
Ramingan serene per plaghe beate!

ELENA: Per plaghe beate ramingan serene!

FAUST: Amore!

ELENA: E brividi ignoti mi cercan le vene.

ELENA E FAUST: E un'aura di cantici esala il mio core.
Guardandoci in viso cantiamo l'amore!
Cantiam d'amore! Ah! l'amore delirio! l'amore sorriso!
Ah! amore, visione, l'amore, canzone,
Sia sempre nel tardo futuro sommerso
Sia l'estremo . . . suo verso! amor! mister! amor!

CORETIDI: Poesia libera t'alza pe' cieli!
Voli di folgore! impeti d'aquila!
Spinganti all'ultime reggie del sol poesia!
Alle reggie del sol, sì, spinganti a a vol!

ELENA: (mormorato). Giace in Arcadia una placida valle . . .

FAUST: (mormorato). Ivi insiem vivrem.

ELENA: E avrem per nido le grotte delle ninfe . . .
E per guanciale . . .

FAUST: Le tue morbidi chiome . . .

ELENA: E i fior del prato . . .
(Si perdono mormorando fra i cespugli)

Fine Dell'Atto Quarto.

ELENA: The terrible gods cry out,
Their wrath increasing;
The castellated towers rise,
Black and tragical, in the thick darkness.

CORYTIDES: Elena!

ELENA: Flames lick the dwellings.
I see the shadows
Of the Achæans—sombre, gigantic profiles—
Creeping along the walls by the light of the pyres.
Alas!
Then deep silence reigns
Where Troy once stood.
(Enter Faust, richly attired as a cavalier of the fifteenth century; Mefistofele, Nereo, Pantalis. Small Fauns and Sirens follow him.)

CORYTIDES: Who comes? O strange, O wondrous sight!
A splendid hero is revealed.
Upon his sad brow we read the word "Love."

CHORUS: Turn, O queen! Queen, turn and behold.

FAUST (bowing to Elena). Ideal and purest form
Of eternal beauty! A man, enamored of you,
Is prostrate before you.
Turn toward me
Your brown eyes,
Lovely as moonbeams,
Burning as the sun.

ELENA: I hang upon your breath and am happy!
For, alone among the nymphs of the Troad,
I fascinations scatter on such a lover!

FAUST: The gentle image
Of the sweet child
I worshipped, amid the gloom
Of a lost land
Has vanished; I am conquered
By a sublimer gaze,
By a brighter face.
I worship, and tremble and burn.

MEFISTOFELE: Oh! Marvel, oh, prodigy, here love unites them,
(To Corytides.)
Be silent there!

PANTALIS: Ah. Here love unites them
Look, a heavenly couplet.

NEREO: Prodigy, oh prodigy!
Marvel! celestial couple!
Here love unites them!

CORYTIDES: Here, love unites them,
Oh, wonder, celestial couple!
They seem, Endymion, and Luna
The Goddess sighs for the breath
Of the enraptured hero.
She contemplates him, almost kisses him, oh, wondrous sight.
(Mefistofele, Pantalis, Nereo and the Chorus move away.)

ELENA: O enchantment! speak! what magic breath
Has thus informed your language of love?
You link sound to sound, as though they were echoes,
Replete with ecstasy
Tell me, how shall I speak the language soft?

FAUST: I seek in my heart, and answer you by loving.

ELENA: And answer me by loving.

FAUST: And you, like to a bird with answering plant—
I seek in my heart and answer you: I love you!

ELENA: I love you! I love you!

TOGETHER: Love, mysterious, heavenly, profound!
Already time flies and the world vanishes!
Already the hours counted by poor mortals
Flow peacefully on, in a happy region.

ELENA: Flow peacefully on, in a happy region.

FAUST: Love!

ELENA: And unknown feelings course through my veins.

TOGETHER: My heart exhales a heaven of song.
Sing we of love, looking into each other's eyes!
Of love, a delirium! Of love, a smile!
Of love, a poem! of love, a song!
Unto the distant future be delayed
Its final song, its final verse!

CORYTIDES: Poetry free, soar to the heavens!
Lightning flight! rush of eagles!
Reaching to the farthest confines of the sun.
To the kingdom of the sun, yes, they fly!

ELENA: (murmuring). In Arcadia lies a quiet vale—.

FAUST: (murmuring). There we live together.

ELENA: And we shall have a nest
The grottos of the nymph, and for pillow . . .

FAUST: Their soft tresses—

ELENA: And the flowers of the field—
(They disappear amid the bushes.)

End of Act Four.

EPILOGO

La Morte di Faust.

(Laboratorio di Faust come nell'atto primo ma qua e là diroccato dal tempo. Voci magiche sparse nell'aria. Faust, seduto sul seggiolone e conturbato medita. Mefistofele gli sta dietro come un incubo. Notte. Una lampada arde languidamente; scena quasi oscura. Il Vangelo aperto, come nel primo atto, sul leggio.)

MEFISTOFELE: (Sottovoce con un accento sinistro fissando Faust). (Cammina, cammina, superbo pensier.)

FAUST: (Alzandosi, come assorto in una estatica visione). O rimembranza!

MEFISTOFELE: (La morte è vicina, cammina, cammina, Superbo pensiero.)

FAUST: Corsi attraverso il mondo e i suoi miraggi!
Ghermii pel crine il desiderio alato!

MEFISTOFELE: (O canti! o memorie d'incanti e di glorie, Guidate a ruina quell'animo altier.)
Hai bramato, gioito e poi bramato novellamente
Nè ancor dicesti all'attimo fuggente:
(Ironico.)
Arrestati sei bello!

FAUST: Ogni mortal mister gustai,
Il Real, l'Ideale, l'Amore della vergine,
L'Amore della Dea . . . Si.
Ma il Real fu dolore
E l'Ideal fu sogno . . .
Giunto sul passo estremeo
Della più estrema età,
In un sogno supreme
Si bea l'anima già:
Re d'un placido mondo,
D'una landa infinita
Un popolo fecondo . . .
Voglio donar la vita.

MEFISTOFELE: (Spiar voglio il suo cor.)

FAUST: Sotto una savia legge
Vo' che surgano a mille
A mille e genti e gregge
E case e campi e ville.

MEFISTOFELE: (Ah! all'erta, tentator.)

FAUST: Ah! Voglio che questo sogno
Sia la santa poesia
E l'ultimo bisogno
Dell'esistenza mia!
Ecco . . . la nuova turba al guardo mio si svela!

EPILOGUE

Death of Faust.

(The scene represents Faust's laboratory, as in the first act, but touched here and there by the finger of time. Magic voices fill the air. Faust is seated in an armchair, meditating. Mefistofele stands behind him, like an incubus. Night. The scene is dark, only one lamp burning sluggishly. A Bible is open, as in act the first, on the desk.)

MEFISTOFELE: (In an undertone, darkly looking at Faust). Keep on, keep on, Proud thought.

FAUST: (Rising, as if overcome by an ecstatic vision). O memory!

MEFISTOFELE: Death is close at hand.
Keep on, keep on, proud thought!

FAUST: I have hurried through the world and its visions,
Have seized winged desire by the tresses!

MEFISTOFELE: (aside). O songs!
O memories
Of enchantments and glories;
Guide unto ruin this vain soul.
You have desired, have enjoyed, and then desired anew,
Nor have yet said unto the fleeting atom:
(Ironically.)
Stay, you are beautiful.

FAUST: I have sounded
Each mortal mystery, Reality, the Ideal;
Have had the Love of the Virgin, and the Love
Of the Goddess.—Yes, but Reality was grief,
And the Ideal a dream.
Having reached the uttermost confine
Of extreme age,
My soul steeps itself
In a supreme dream.
King of a peaceful realm,
Of an infinite land,
Unto a fecund people
I'd fain give life.

MEFISTOFELE: (aside). I want to spy on her heart.

FAUST: Under wisest laws
I wish that, by thousands,
Nations and herds and cities,
And houses and fields arise.

MEFISTOFELE: (aside). Be watchful, tempter!

FAUST: I'd have this dream
The sacred poesy
And the last need
Of my existence.
The throngs
Are revealed already to my eye.

MEFISTOFELE: (Ah! qual baglior conturba Il muto tenebror?)

FAUST: Ecco . . . il colle s'inurba e il popolo s'inciela.

MEFISTOFELE: Il Bene già gli si rivela!

FAUST: S'ode un cantico in ciel.

MEFISTOFELE: (All'erta! tentator!)

FAUST: Già mi bèo nell'augusto
Raggio di tanta aurora!
Già nell'idea pregusto
L'alta ineffabil ora!

MEFISTOFELE: (All'erta! È la battaglia incerta Fra Satana e il ciel.)
(A Faust dispiegando il mantello come nell'atto primo.)
Vien! io distendo questo mantel
E voleremo sull'aria!
Faust! Faust! Faust!

FAUST: Cielo!

FALANGI CELESTI: Ah! Ave Signor degli angeli,
Dei santi, delle sfere . . .

MEFISTOFELE: (Esorcizzando verso l'alcova dove appariscono le Sirene in mezzo ad una luce calda). Odi il canto d'amor!
Che un di beò il tuo cor!
Vieni a inebbriar le vene
Sul sen delle sirene!
Vieni!

CHERUBINI: (voci sole). Delle sfere, dei volanti
E dei volanti cherubini d'or!
Ave Signor!

FAUST: (estaticamente). Arrestati sei bello!

MEFISTOFELE: (Avventandosi verso Faust.) Torci il guardo, torci il guardo!

FAUST: (Con un gesto possente va ad afferrare il Vangelo). Baluardo m'è il Vangelo!
(Cadendo ginocchioni ed appoggiandosi sulla Bibbia prega mormorando; apparisce la visione celestiale).
Dio clemente m'allontana
Dal demonio mio beffardo,
Non indurmi in tentazione!

FALANGI; Dall'eterna armonia emana un verso,
Un verso di supremo amor.

FAUST: (Rapito nell'estasi della visione). Vola il cantico ardente
Del celestial drappello

MEFISTOFELE: (Sempre più agitato). Già strilla l'angelico stuolo, Ghermiamo quell'anima al volo.
Già l'opra del male distrugge
Iddio col suo stolto perdon!

MEFISTOFELE: (aside). Ah! what light illumes
The dark heavens!

FAUST: Now . . . The hill is darkening, and the people ascend to Heaven.

MEFISTOFELE: Ah! Good is disclosed to him!

FAUST: A song is sounding from Heaven.

MEFISTOFELE: (aside). Be watchful, tempter!

FAUST: I drink the august beams
Of such a dawn, already.
In this idea I enjoy
An ineffable hour!

MEFISTOFELE: (aside) Be watchful, tempter!
The struggle is still uncertain
Between Avernus and Heaven.
(To Faust, opening his cloak as in act the first.) See, I need but ope my mantle,
And we travel through the air!
Faust! Faust! Faust!

FAUST: Heaven!

CELESTIAL PHALANXES: Ave,
Lord of the angels and saints,
Of the wandering spheres.

MEFISTOFELE: (Exorcising toward the alcove, where Sirens appear, bathed in a warm light.)
Hark to the song of love!
Come and intoxicate yourself
On the bosom of the sirens!

CHERUBIM: Of the wandering spheres
And of the winged cherubim of gold.

FAUST: (in ecstasy). Halt, you are beautiful.

MEFISTOFELE: (points to Faust). You draw his gaze.

FAUST: (With a powerful gesture, seizing the Bible). Dear Heaven!
Evangels, be my shield!
(Kneels, still grasping the Bible.)
Our Fathers save me
From the scornful demon;
Lead me not into temptation!

CELESTIAL PHALANXES: From the eternal harmony
Rises a verse of supreme love,

FAUST: (His ecstasy increasing, wrapped in the vision). The city I dreamt of Opens its gates at last.

MEFISTOFELE: (More and more agitated). The angelic cohort sings already!
Pluck this soul at once!
The Eternal now destroys
The work of evil! My prey escapes!

FAUST: Sacro attimo fuggente
Arrestati sei bello!
A me l'eternità!
(Muore.)

CHERUBINI: (Scende una pioggia di rose sulla salma di Faust). Spargiamo un profluvio di rose,
Un nembo di foglie odorose,
Un efluvio di fior.
(Mefistofele sotto i raggi e sotto la pioggia di rose dibattendosi e irridendo e sprofondandosi nella terra a poco a poco.)

MEFISTOFELE: Diluvian le rose
Sull'arsa mia testa,
Le membra ho corrose
Da raggi e dai fior.

CHERUBINI: Oriamo, la povera salma s'invola,
Redenta quell'alma nel mistico amor.

FAUST: Holy fleeting atom;
Stay, you are beautiful!
Eternity be mine!
(Falls dead.)

CHERUBIM: (A shower of roses falls upon Faust's body). We rain a shower of roses,
We pour a deluge of flowers.

MEFISTOFELE: (Writhing furiously, under the shower of roses and the beams of light). Roses are showered
On my burning head.
My limbs are scarred
By the beams and the flowers.

CHERUBIM: Listen, that poor body is ascending,
The soul redeemed in mystic love.

FALANGI: E s'erge a te, per l'aurore in suon soave.

MEFISTOFELE: M'assale la mischia
Di mille angioletti,
Trionfan gli eletti
Ma il reprobo fischia!

CHERUBINI: Spargiamo un diluvio di rose sul mostro,
Le gelide e irose sue membra contorca furente
In mezzo alla pioggia rovente
Che spargono i cherubi d'oro.
Siam nimbi volanti dai limbi,
Nei santi splendori vaganti,
Siam cori, siam nimbi volanti dai limbi,
Siam cori di bimbi, d'amori.

FALANGI CELESTI: Ave . . . Ave!

Fine Dell'Opera.

PHALANXES: And come to you through the dawn in sounds suave.

MEFISTOFELE: The dispute of a thousand angels
Now besets me;
The chosen few sing,
But the reproved one hisses.

CHERUBIM: Rain we a deluge of roses on the monster,
Till his icy and angry lips
He move in wildest fury,
Under the scorching rain
Of the golden cherubim.
We are showers fleeting from cloudland,
Wandering in heavenly splendors,
We are choirs of infants, of loves.

CELESTIAL PHALANXES: Ave . . . Ave!

The End.

Prince Igor (1890)

MUSIC BY ALEXANDRE PORFYREVICH BORODIN ■ LIBRETTO BY VLADIMIR VASILEVICH STASOV & THE COMPOSER

NOTE: THIS OPERA WAS COMPLETED AFTER THE COMPOSER'S DEATH BY NIKOLAI ANDREEVICH RIMSKY-KORSAKOV & ALEXANDRE KONSTANTINOVICH GLAZOUNOV & ANATOL KONSTANTINOVICH LYADOV

Alexander Borodin wrote both the libretto and the music to this four act opera with prologue, after Vladimir Stasov's play which is based on The Song of Igor, an anonymous poem from the ninth century. Completed by Rimsky-Korsakov and Glazounov, it premiered after Borodin's death, at the Maryinsky Theatre in St. Petersburg on November 4, 1890. The year is 1185; Khan Kontchak's Polovtsians are marching against Putivl. Igor Sviatoslavich, the Prince of Seversk, decides to attack them. In spite of an unexpected solar eclipse, which presages bad tidings Igor departs with Vladimir, his son by his first wife. Skula and Eroshka, two good-for-nothings, run away to join Prince Vladimir Galitsky, who is the brother of Igor's current wife, Yaroslavna, and is himself a ne'er-do-well who lives only for pleasure. Galitsky brags that, if he were in power, no one would be bereft of wine or women. Yaroslavna awaits news of Igor and Vladimir. One of her girls has been seized by Galitsky. Yaroslavna intercedes, and Galitsky gives his word that he will release the girl and reform his behavior. Igor's army is defeated and both he and his son are held captive. At the camp, Vladimir falls in love with the daughter of Khan Kontchak. Ouvlar, a Polovtsian soldier and Christian convert, offers to help Igor escape, but Igor will not hear of it. Kontchak admires this and offers to release him in exchange for peace, but Igor insists that he will immediately wage war against the Tartars if he is freed. The enemy conquers Putivl, and during the festivities celebrating the conquest, the Polovtsians finally collapse into an exhausted sleep and Igor escapes. Vladimir, torn between his father and Kontchakovna, follows Igor. The Khan prevents the guards from killing Vladimir and offers him his daughter's hand in marriage. At the city walls of Putivl, Yaroslavna, overcome with joy, sees her husband approaching with Ovlour. Eroshka and Skula, who are afraid that they will be punished for their desertion, climb the bell tower and ring the bells for Igor's return, which the people celebrate. Igor pardons the deserters, and everyone is confident that victory will be theirs soon.

By the Danube river, maidens fair
Sing your fame and glory,
Their voices ring from sea to great Kiev.
Glory, glory! To our famous Princes;
To their brave warriors too!

PRINCE IGOR: We go to conquer Russia's foes!

THE PEOPLE: God give you victory of our enemies!

PRINCE IGOR: We war against the Khan of the Polovtsy!

THE PEOPLE: Victory to Russia, let our foemen bleed! Hoy!

THE BOYARDS: Disperse our foes, as once before at Oltava,
May you, victorious, administer justice,
God, in his mercy will protect us.
And let the Khan of the Polovtsy
Be routed utterly, with all his hosts!

PRINCE IGOR: We go, with hope in God, for faith,
And for our country.

THE PEOPLE: God be with you!
May He lead you to the battle,
Upholding Russia against the foe!

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Io vo con la lancia le steppe sonanti sfidar!
Radiante di gloria, la morte
Trovar sapro, o tornar vincitor
Di nuova conquista!

CORO: Per la fede lottiam!
Dio con noi sarà!
Mite il ciel con noi sarà!
Ritornerai, o Igor fulgente di splendor. Gloria! Gloria!

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Guerrieri andiam: che l'ora e già!
(Il cielo s'adombra. L'ecclissi del sole comincia. Tutti guardano sorpresi in alto).

IL PRINCIPE VLADIMIR GALITSKY: Ma qual prodigio!
L'oscurità dissolve il dì!

CORO: Vè, signor, cosa appare nel ciel!

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Lunare
falce di mite luce, appare il Sol!

CORO: Esser potrà presagio fatal!
A mezzo di fulgor di stelle!
(La scena si oscura completamente).
E lenta stende la notte il vel!
La notte scende
Devi ormai ogni sogno lasciar!
Attendi ancor: Giova indugiar!
(A poco a poco il giorno comincia a rischiararsi).

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Il ciel coprì
l'oscuro nembo.
Che vale? Stolto è il timor.
Per me, ben più de la minaccia
cupa, È forte l'Ideal!
Lottiam per una causa santa.
Dobbiam gloriosi ritornar;
Andiam, coraggio: che l'amor di
patria, S vincere o morir!
Presto in sella! Laggiù verso
Il mar drizziam com'aguila il volo!
(Si fa luce completa sul teatro).

IL POPOLO: Gloria! Gloria! Gloria!
(Il Principe Igor va in fondo per fare la rivista delle sue truppe. I principi e i bojardi l'accompagnano).

SKULA: Amico: in guerra andar,
Non è poi gran piacer!

EROSCHKA: Io, davver . . . Ho gran timor . . .

SKULA: Mutiam padrona:
Il destin proviam.

EROSCHKA: Sì, da Galizky, senza
scrupoli,
Si vivrà beati!

PRINCE IGOR: I long to break a lance in Russia's cause
Upon the distant steppes of the Polovtsy;
There I will fall with honor, slain by them,
Or else return a victor crowned with glory!

THE PEOPLE: You shall return a victor, Prince,
Bringing new glory home!
Glory, glory! All hail!

PRINCE IGOR: Princes, the hour has come.
(It begins to grow dark. The sun is eclipsed. All gaze at the sky in wonder).

PRINCE V. GALITSKY: What does this portend?
See, in the heavens the sun is darkened.

THE PEOPLE: It is God's sign in heaven, Prince!

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: And like the crescent moon
The bright sun hangs,
A sickle, in the sky.

THE PEOPLE: O, it is an evil
portent, noble Prince.
The stars are twinkling in the midday heavens!
The earth is wrapped in awful darkness.
(The stage grows quite dark).
Night closes in. O wait a while!
Before you march. Do not go yet.
O tarry Prince, tarry a while!
(Gradually daylight returns).

PRINCE IGOR: What God's sign in the heavens forbodes —
Or good, or ill, we soon shall know.
But since none can elude his fate
What have we then to fear?
We go forth in a righteous cause,
To fight for God, for faith, and home.
Could we turn back and never strike a blow
To check the advancing foe?
My brothers, quick your fiery coursers mount
And gallop to the far blue sea?
(The sun shines out bright and clear).

THE PEOPLE: Glory, glory!
(Prince Igor goes off to review his troops, accompanied by the Princes and Boyards).

SKOULA: You, friends, may go,
But we stay where we are.

EROSHKA: I'm with you! I'm not fond of war.

SKOULA: Shall we try our fortune elsewhere?

EROSHKA: Yes, let's take service with the Prince Galitsky.
There we'll be happy.

SKULA: Bene! Là si gode!
Siberia! È meglio andare!
(Si liberano delle loro armature e si salvano furtivamente).

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Salutiam le spose; confortiamole,
E poi corriam laggiù sui campi di battaglia.

JAROSLAVNA: (correndo verso Igor). O dolce amico mio: Così mi vuoi lasciar?
Deh! non partir . . .
L'azzurro non ha più splendor;
Presagio è questo di dolor!
Rimani ancor vicino a me:
Che avverso fato in ciel si manifesta.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: O candida mia
sposa, lascia il pianto:
Non velare l'occhio tuo sereno tanto; Confida in me!

JAROSLAVNO: In te confido
sempre,
Ma il cor d'angoscia freme;
E temo! Ah! L'orror m'assale!
Io so che tu non puoi restar. Ah!
destin crudel!
Così non mai piega la fede in me!
Ah! straziato ho il cor.
L'angoscia vince! Ho timor!
Mi sembra avverso il ciel! Oimè!

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Perchè languisci tu così?
È sacro il mio dovere!
Non posso rinunciar.
Sii forte, sposa mia:
Opponi il senno al tuo dolor.
Confida in me!
Un folle languor t'invade,
Ma pur tu sai che ascolto ancor, Ah!
Per te darò a la voce de l'amor
Addio, mio solo ben! . . .

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Andiam! Andiam! Dobbiam partir!
Che l'onor lo vuole!

IL PRINCIPE VLADIMIR GALITSKY: È ver: partir dovrà,
Per il nostro onor!

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Il ciel saprà vegliar.
Tu pregherai per noi!
(A Galitzky).
Io la confido a te, mio buon fratello:
Serbar dovrai la sua serentià
Fa' che 'l timore più non l'abbatta
In te speranza ripongo.
Su lei sorveglia, buon fratello.

SKULA: Gladly! There is mead, and ale,
And food in plenty.
(They throw down their arms and sneak away).

PRINCE IGOR: Now comrades, let us take a fond farewell
Of wives and sweethearts.
One last kiss,
And then, to horse!
(Enter Yaroslavna, who embraces Igor).

YAROSLAVNA: O, husband, my beloved, stay with me!
Do not go forth to battle, for the time
Is not propitious. O believe me
love!
Stay with me, hear my prayer.
The signs and omens tell of sorrow,
They threaten grief and to you and us.

PRINCE IGOR: O, wife beloved, do not weep, dry your eyes.
Your tears and prayers are vain.
I cannot stay,
Believe me, duty calls.

YAROSLAVNA: I must believe my heart that bids me fear.
O love, what anguish and alarm I feel!
I tremble . . . my courage fails.
Alas I knew how you would answer
me.
I know too well
Your words are right and true;
But ah, my heart speaks louder still
Of grief and woe to come!
Farewell!

PRINCE IGOR: Ah, fear not; do not weep, my wife.
How often have we been parted in the past
And you have never known such fears before.
Honor demands that I should take the field
Against the foes of Russia.
I must go.
Believe me, duty calls.
Farewell, dear love.

PRINCE VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH:
Prince, you are right. We must depart,
Duty and honor call us; we must go.

PRINCE V. GALITSKY: Prince, you are right. There is no turning back.
Yes, duty and honor call us, you must go.

PRINCE IGOR: God keep you safe from harm.
Pray for us, dear one.
(To Galitsky).
To you, as to a brother, I trust her.
Guard her from danger and from grief,
Lighten for her the sorrow of my absence,
Speak kindly to her.
And now farewell
My friend and brother.

IL PRINCIPE VLADIMIR GALITSKY: Sia pur: la mia riconoscenza,
Igor ritroverai per sempre.
Mio padre allor che m'esiliò,
Lontan tu sai, del suo dominio,
Io qui, presso te, trovai
Difesa contro il suo livor.
Ed or che perdono,
Tornato in libertà,
Mi è dato alfin goder
Di tutti i suoi tesori . . .
E grazia debbo a te.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: E ben, fratello:
Or tu mi puoi ricompensar!
(Jaroslavna esce con le principesse e le mogli dei bojardi).
(Il Principe Igor si avvicina ad un vecchio).

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Andiam, che l'ora è già!
O santo Padre: prega il ciel:
I miei guerrieri, benedici tu!
Sorrida il cielo ai nostri eroi!

IL POPOLO: Benedici tu gran Padre, gli eroi!
Guida, Padre, alla guerra gli eroi:
L'irradia tu!
O rasserena tu i vincitor!
I figli tuoi, Signor, proteggi E li guida, o ciel!
Ai figli tuoi, Signor, fa cor:
Le spade già brillar nel Sol!
Protegga il ciel i suoi guerrier!
(Il vecchio benedice l'esercito).
I tuoi campioni, o Parde, han aite le space davanti nel Sol!
I tuoi campioni per te vittoria s'avviano:
Son alte spade davanti nel Sol!
(Igor e i principi montano su i lora corsieri e vanno davanti all'esercito).

I BOJARDI: L'inno si sciolga di gloria!

IL POPOLO: Al fulgente Sol, gloria! gloria!
Grande Igor, Signor nostro, vittoria!
Gloria, gloria, Russia a te gloria e onor!
O cara patria, o santa Russia, terra di splendor:
A te sia gloria, gloria ognor!
Al superbo campion, al forte Vsewolod,
A la prole d'Igor, al giovin Vladimir;
Tutti a voi guerrier, gloria! Austeri vincitor!
Guerra, guerra, guerra, gloria, gloria!
Gloria, Santa Russia a te! Gloria!

PRINCE V. GALITSKY: All is well!
I am prepared to serve you faithfully,
For much I am beholden to you, Prince.
When in his wrath my father banished me,
And all my brethren did forsake me too,
You took up my cause,
And like a brother gave me a friendly welcome;
You pleaded forgiveness for me,
Till my father yielded
And took me home once more.
All this I owe you.

PRINCE IGOR: No more, no more, friend.
I rejoice to know
I helped you in the hour of need.
(Exit Yaroslavna with the princesses and the wives of the Boyards).

PRINCE IGOR: (approaching the Elder). It is time that we were on our way,
Revered and honorable father,
Before we go.
To meet our foemen, give your benediction.
O bless the Princes and our warriors all! (The Elder blesses the army).

THE PEOPLE: God in the battle shield our warriors brave
And lead them on to victory.
Scatter the cruel heathen horde.
Protect your sons, o Lord,
and guide them, oh heaven!
Give courage to your sons, oh Lord,
Their swords glisten in the sun!
May heaven protect its warriors!
(Igor and the Princes mount their war-horses and ride at the head of the troops).

THE BOYARDS: (semi-chorus).
Hail to the Princes,
Hail to their followers!

THE PEOPLE: To our bright stars be glory,
Glory in highest heaven!
To our brave Princes be glory,
Glory to all Russians!
To the highest and the lowest,
Alike be glory given. Hail, all hail!
Glory to all the Princes of our land
Hail to dauntless Vsievolod,
Hail to Sviatoslavich,
Hail to the Falcon Prince,
The young Vladimir,
To all the fearless fighters, hail!
Glory to our Princes,
Glory to our Boyards,
Glory to our warriors bold,
Glory, glory!

CALA IL SIPARIO

■ ATTO I

SCENA I

Il cortile della casa del Principe Vladimir Galitsky.

CORO DEL POPOLO: Ah! Salve, principe Galitsky; a Te,
O nostro buon signor: Salve!
Gloria, gloria!

SKOULA: Giochiam!
Qual fragor di flutti erompe!
L'onda par che qui s'avventi,
Infrangendo la riviera,
E diffonda il suo terror.

CORO DEL POPOLO: Quei signori son gaudenti,
Che fanfara di conquista:
Ah, ah! Che allegrezza!
Ah, ah! Che frastuono! . . .
Tutta notte fan baldoria.
Che frastuon!
Canti e delizie son la loro vita:
La folle giovinezza affogan nel piacer!

EROCHKA: Tutta in pianto al fanciulla,
A' suoi pie' plorando cadde.
(Imitando la voce d'una donna).
O signore! Deh, lascia andare! . . .

EROCHKA E SKOULA: Ah, verdi qual dolor! Per pietà!
Quale angoscia, oimè!
O non farmi soffrir.

CORO: Ah, ah! che allegrezza!
Ah, ah! che frastuono!
Tutta notte' fan baldoria.
Che frastuon!
Canti e delizie son la loro vita:
La folle giovinezza,
Affogan nel piacer!

CORO: Contento sei, signor?

IL PRINCIPE VLADIMIR GALITSKY: Non più soffrir: Io vo' tutto goder.
Igor s'affanna nel bollor de le conquiste,
Mentr'io passar la vita cerco dolcemente.
Che bel piacer, cosi lottar! . . .
Se di Poutivle principe foss'io! . . .
O come si godrebbe! Si . . .
Se domani mi toccasse ottener
L'onor sognato d'esser lor signor,
Ben saprei regnar!
Lieto il giorno in gran simposio,
Sbrigherei le mie faccende:
Sempre a me d'accanto,
Consigliere il vino.
I castighi e le sentenze
Detterei di mia ragione,
Per far rispettar
La mia volontà!
Viva, viva l'allegria!
E ben più farei la notte:

CURTAIN

■ ACT I

SCENE I

The courtyard of Prince Vladimir Galitsky's house

CHORUS OF THE PEOPLE: Glory, glory, to Prince Vladimir. Hurrah!

SKOULA: Let's sport! But why this noise?
Has the stream broken its banks and overflowed the land?

THE PEOPLE: See, how some wild young spark has carried off.
With his boon friends, a girl or two.
Hoy, hoy!
Youth will sport and play,
Lads must have their way!
All night in song they've praised
Their noble Prince.
Long live Galitsky
Who keeps open house!

EROSHKA: Then the pretty lass came weeping,
To the Prince's footstool creeping.
(Imitates a girl's voice).
"Prince, my Prince, let me go from here."

CHORUS: Hoy, hoy!
Youth will sport and play,
Lads must have their way!
All night in song they praised their noble prince,
Long live Galitsky,
Who keeps open house!

CHORUS: (approaching Galitsky). Prince, are you satisfied?

PRINCE GALITSKY: I hate a dreary life. I could not live
Like Igor, ever amid war's alarms.
I crave for pleasure, princely luxury,
A merry time on earth!
Ah, were I chosen Prince of Poutivle,
What glad times for you all!
How then?
Were the throne on me conferred,
My rule to Igor's rule preferred,
Quickly you would see
How joyous life can be;
Daily in my hall
I'd hold high festival,
My judgments would be light,
I'd feast you every night,
For high and low
The wine should flow.
With a heigh-ho,
Laugh, laugh and quaff!
And night would bring new pleasures,

Presso me vorrei raccolti
Freschi fiori di fanciulle,
Per cantar e per danzar!
De le più belle e gentili,
Vorrei far per me catene.
Punirei chi m'impedisse.
Di onorar cosi l'amor, l'amor!
Per tal vita di delizie,
Ci vorrebbe gran ricchezza;
Ma la fonte avrei
Dal regal tesor.
E così ben dolcemente
Governando in tal guisa, certo
Potrei dir di saper goder!
O verdremo ben regnando,
Chi di voi potrà lagnarsi.
Chi mi capirà! Ben mi loderà!!
Viva, viva l'allegria!

CORO: Ah! Sempre arrida a voi la sorte!

UNA PARTE DEL CORO: Ma la principessa?

IL PRINCIPE VLADIMIR GALITSKY: Che stolta! . . . E ancor qui che prega.
Una santa ell'è; in un convento chiudasi!
Ognun di noi avrà così perdon per lei!
Ed or, si rida e canti.
Un premio a chi più beve.
Su, ridete, poichè v'offro di vin un baril!
(Si dirige verso la sua casa).

CORO: Ah! Sempre il ciel vi sia benigno!
(Un gruppo di fanciulle entra correndo. Vladimir Galitsky si ferma)

CORO DI DONZELLE: Ah! che viltà! Ah! qual dolor!
I fidi tuoi, Signor, non han riguardo alcun!
Di noi la più gentile offeser ne l'onor
Ah! salvala, salvala nostro Signor!
Sì, per pietà!

IL PRINCIPE VLADIMIR GALITSKY: Basta, basta perchè piangete?
Vostra sorella non soffre alcun mal,
Poichè mi degno ammirar sue grazie.
Stolte: non è un grandissimo onor,
Se a' miei diletti la voglio serbar?
Pensiero alcuno non la disturba:
Deve sol amar, cantar!
Via, cessate! Vano è il pianto!
La fanciulla mia sarà!

CORO DI DONZELLE: Ah! qual viltà! Ah! giusto ciel!
Ascolta noi, Signor.
Non ci straziare il cor,
Pietà, buon Signor.
Non farci soffrir!

IL PRINCIPE VLADIMIR GALITSKY: A che insistete? Per me la tengo!
No, non ho colpa di sua gran beltà.
Non voglio più pianto: uscite di qua!
Guai a voi tutte se l'ira mi assal!

When my fairest maidens came;
They should sing in lively measures
Of their Prince's power and fame,
And the freshest, rosiest maiden,
Lovely in her youthful pride,
With my favors I would laden,
Keep her longest by my side.
But to lead a life of pleasure
I should need a princely treasure.
Well, since Igor's purse I hold
I could dip there for the gold.
If his wealth I freely scatter
In wine and revelry, what matter?
State and power are nothing to me
If they do not bring luxury.
So, heigh-ho,
Come laugh and quaff!

CHORUS: Ho! To Galitsky long life and glory!

SEMI-CHORUS: Yes, but the Princess?

PRINCE GALITSKY: My sister?
She's a meek, religiour woman.
Let her retire to a convent.
There to pray for pardon
For my sinful soul; but you friends
Come to my house and taste
My finest mead; and for the people
I will order forth a vat
Of generous wine!
(He goes towards the house)

CHORUS: To Prince Galitsky, glory!
(A group of maidens comes running in, Prince Galitsky remains standing there)

THE MAIDENS: O, the miscreants,
The wicked wretches!
Some of your household, Prince,
Have done us wrong and
Carried one of us away by force!
Have pity, give her back to us.

PRINCE GALITSKY: Foolish women, cease your wailing,
Your companion's safe with me,
Nothing lacking, nothing ailing,
She is happy as a bride.
And if I shall choose to keep her,
Who shall dare
Touch her there?
You will never see her again.

THE MAIDENS: O unhappy, Heaven befriend her!
Prince, have pity, show mercy
To her mother and her father!
Hear our prayers and let her go!

PRINCE GALITSKY: Why do you wait?
The maiden with me stays.
Now get you away from here.
Your cries and tears will raise
A fury in me.
Then you'll know

Via di qua!
(Le fanciulle scappano). (Il Principe esce).

EROCHKA: (motteggiatore). Già! sempre accade così,
Quando mamma si vuol lasciar!
Bene vista!

SKOULA: (motteggiatore). Già! sempre accade così, Quando si è belle!
Arrossirà la piccina inver!

SKOULA: Ah! se la signora saprà come'è la cosa
Starem freschi noi davver!
Oh, si . . .

CORO DEL POPOLO: O principessa;
Troppo sei stanca! No i siam possenti!
I fidi suoi lontani son.
Omai dispersi in guerra.
Non v'ha di che temer!
Andiamo!

SKOULA: E ben: se poi la dama non È per noi propensa,
Perchè dobbiam servirla?

EROCHKA: Non giova a nulla.

SKOULA: È vero; val più servire Vladimir!
Certo! fa doni d'amor, d'ebrezza,
Essa il conto merita.
(Alcuni servitori portano avanti un barile di vino facendolo rotolare davanti a loro).

SKOULA: (Con rudezza e gravità comica). Chi cercasse un buon signore, Venga qua: volentieri noi la grazia gli farem.
La sua gente e già con lui,
Per cantar, per ballare a tondo
E con noi trincare!
Per cantar, beviam!

CORO: Per cantar, beviam!
Questa gente non sa che gavazzar!

EROCHKA E SKOULA: Ma col vizio la miseria cominciò!
E talmente in questa plaga
S'inasprì, che ognuno di sostanza
Non ha già più nè manco un solo rublo
Per restare in piedi,
O signor: Sii gentil:
Noi brindiamo a te, Signor.
Un sorso del tuo vino . . .
Dei bevitor la folla
Giuliva qui verrà da te,
A renderti omaggio ancor!
Così per la tua bontà,
Alfin sarai signore,
Se ci darai la libertà
La morte sfiderem per te. Sì!!

CORO: Sol bevendo, la morte saprem sfidar.

That I am to be feared in anger.
Go!
(The maidens make their escape. Exit Galitsky).

EROSHKA: (mockingly). Yes, that's the way!
Goodbye father, goodby mother!
Off with you, run home quick!

SKOULA: (mockingly). A fine feast her's will be.
That is always one's lot
When one is handsome!

SKOULA: Hush! Listen friend.
What if the Princess finds out we are here and orders us away?

THE PEOPLE: Who heeds the Princess?
Who would take her part?
Her followers are few compared to us;
And all her guards are marching to the war.
What have then to fear, good folk?
Come on.

SKOULA: Well said!
We know the Princess, she is mean,
And careful of her wine.
Why should we serve her?

EROSHKA: For certain, friend, we will not serve her.

SKOULA: With Prince Galitsky it is a different tale!
He loves us like a father. See there!
Wine comes in plenty!
(The Prince's servants roll in a barrel of wine).

SKOULA: (Clownishly, but with comic gravity). You who seek a generous master, come here,
Take service with the noble Prince Galitsky.
He assembles, all his followers
Bids them eat and drink their fill,
Wine and mead he spares not,
Brim your cups and toss it down.

CHORUS: Wine and mead he spares not,
Brim your cups and toss it down.

SKOULA AND EROSHKA: Loudly groan the Prince's followers;
We have lapped up every drop;
Now they're howling, loudly howling;
We have drunk your health so often
That the barrel has run dry.
Not a thimbleful remaining,
Prince, we've swallowed every drop.
Prince, our benefactor,
Treat us once again!
Let the strong wine flow for us like a flood!
Let the heady mead be broached vat on vat!
And the generous vintage run red and bright!
Let us drink one more barrel to your health!

CHORUS: In drinking we shall laugh at death!

SKOULA: Con parole sagge il liberal Signor nostro principe,
Risponde: Non più voi dovrete ne l'ombra sospirar:
Ne più l'angoscia crudele patir.
Le mie botti son colme ancora
Per chi m'ama e mi vuole allietar:
Goda ognun!

CORO: De le botti l'ambrosia ci ferve in cor!

EROCHKA: Ognor voi faticate
La vita è tanto dura!
Dal nascere del giorno
Al fiume, al bosco andate:
Davver, così, del bove,
Ben più s'affanna l'uomo.
Ma io che il ver conosco
Or v'offro un buon rimedio:
Canti, balli, e donne
Per ritemprar chi lavora!
Tal linguaggio avrà il nostro grande Signor!

CORO: Canti, balli e donne in fiore:
O qual piacer! Non abbia sognato
Mai tal voluttà.
S'ei fosse pur signor del principato!?
È ver! Si può donargli il nostro trono!
Sia pur così.
Igor è scomparso.
Che più indugiar?
Coraggio . . . Non dobbiam temer.
Gli s'offra la corona.
Minaccia non vediam.

EROCHKA E SKOULA: La truppa è via,
I principi alla guerra,
Bisogna agir!
Ben posson ritornar!
Se forti sono ancor.
Se morti son, n'avrò piacer.

EROCHKA, SKOULA E CORO: Andiam! Non più tardiam;
In piazza ci rechiamo,
Che in discussion la folla è convocata.
Igor detronizziam!
Il regno a Vladimiro.
Or noi la forza abbiam!
Al fato Igor disfatto ha soggiaciuto.
In massa andiam che suona la campana.
Il trono a Vladimiro:
Signore lo vogliam.
Sin che duri l'allegria,
Non avremo trepidanza.
Là, là! Se la vita . . . Là, là!
Presto fugge, dolce è l'ansia
Che si avvolge nel piacer!
Non più tardiam, in piazza ci rechiamo,
Che in discussion la folla è convocata.
Non vogliam saper d'Igor.
Galitsky, gloria a te!
Sin che duri l'allegrezza,
Non avremo trepidanza!
Che la gioia sia completa.
Sempre noi godrem!
Gloria! Salve! Principe Galitsky a te!
Nostro buon signor, salve! Gloria!
Ah!
(Tutti escono, Skoula e Erochka, già ubriachi restano soli al loro posto).

EROCHKA E SKOULA: (Vacillanti). Oh! qual dolore!
O quale angoscia!
Non farmi soffrir!
Io muoio di timor!
(Escono appoggiati l'uno all'altro e ridendo).

SCENA II

Una camera sul terem di Jaroslavna. Jaroslavna sola.

JAROSLAVNA: Da lungo tempo Igor,
Mio dolce amor,
Lontano sei da me,
Con Vladimir e il fratel tuo,
Per la guerra fatal:
Ma nulla seppi ancor,
E già dispero!
Io conto tristemente i dì,
E vo' celando il pianto!
Soccorso imploro su dal ciel!
O fai che tra le braccia
Mi ritorni il solo ben che attendo,
Poi che mai non ascolti il mio dolor: piango!
Invano oimè, trascorre l'ora!
E mi s'agghiaccia il cor
Al soffio del destin.
Or più non va, mio desiato Igor,
Amor spirando come un tempo!
Fioriva il cuore ov'eri tu . . .
Ed ora muto e di squallor; Oimè!
Che sol mi dà conforto
Il rievocar di te, mio dolce Igor!
Per te, te sol, mio ben, respiro ancor;
E ancor per te, mio santo amor
Il pianto a ciel s'invola!
Funesto sogno mi recò la cupa notte:
Sfinito Igor la man tendea,
E il nome mio parea chiamar!
Smarrito il cor mi palpitò ne l'ombra . . .
Ma la pia vision si dileguò.
Invan chiamai, oimè!
Ancor m'agghiaccia. Tremo tutta . . .
Su l'albeggiar, al mio dolor m'abbandonai,
Dimmi: ribacerai la sposa tua?
Io soffro a te lontan!
Senza te a vita manca! . . . .
(Ella si copre il viso con le mani e resta assorta nei suoi pensieri).
(Entra la nutrice).

LA NUTRICE: Un gruppo di fanciulle, o signora,
A te piangendo viene e chiede di parlar.
Ti piace dare ascolto?

SKOULA: Then our gracious Prince will speak and say:
Do not weep and wail, my servants true,
Surely I'll take pity on your lot,
For your lives are hard, and joyless too,
Working all day.

CHORUS: The mead goes to the heart.

EROSHKA: You're at work
From early morn till evening
From midday till the sun goes down,
From twilight to the break of day,
And oh, such heavy work you do,
You labor like the ox or horse,
Your toil it seems is never done,
Now sing and laugh and play
And drink my health today —
That's what our Prince will say!

CHORUS: Songs and dances and women.
What pleasure!
We never dreamt of such joy!
Yes, he's the man we want to rule Poutivle!
What say you?
Shall we set him on the throne?
The army is not here,
And Igor's far away —
Then what have we to fear?
Why hesitate?
We all want him to reign;
And there are plenty of us
To work our will.
Then what have we to fear?

SKOULA AND EROS: The army is not here,
The Princes, too, have gone,
No one can hinder us.
Rebellion will break out.
The army by this time exists no more
And every Prince in battle has been slain.

SKOULA, EROSHKA AND CHORUS: It is true! Come then!
The army is not here,
And none can stop us.
Come on! Come on!
Now gather in the market-place;
Quick, let the Vêche be assembled there!
Let Igor be dethroned.
Vladimir, hail!
What have we now to fear?
Now make merry, drink and revel
Send misgivings to the devil!
Hoy, hoy! Let all be jolly.
Sing the praise of Galitsky,
Drink his health until we see Dawn appear!
Glory to Vladimir!
Glory Prince Galitsky!
Welcome, Welcome! Hoy!
Send misgivings to the devil!
Hoy, hoy! Let's be jolly.
Sing the praise of Galitsky,
Our good lord, hail,
Glory, hoy!
(The crowd move off. Only Skoula and Eroshka, who are already rather tipsy, remain. They sit on the barrel and continue to drink).

SKOULA AND EROSHKA: Oh, I want my mommy,
Oh, I want my daddy;
Do not vex a poor maid so,
Let me go back to mommy . . .
(Exeunt, propping each other up).

SCENE II

(A room in the Terem. Yaroslavna is sitting lost in thought.)

YAROSLAVNA: How long a time has passed since my dear lord, my husband Igor, with his son Vladimir, and our brother Vsievolod, led forth his army against the Polovtsy. I know not what to think? So long it sems since I received a message from the Prince. I would that some news of Igor might reach me, even by chance. O, my heart bodes but of sorrow! It aches, and burns with questioning; and whispers always of some coming trouble.
Where have you fled, happier days before Igor rode forth to the fight?
Alone, from dawn to eve I gaze
Across the distant, empty plain.
I spend the sleepless night weeping,
And long for you to come again.
I yearn for news of you: I wait
Long hours at the casement here.
Send me a message, O my mate,
Send me one word, O husband dear,
Some tidings of thy doubtful fate!
So long, so long the nights and days.
Such visions haunt my hours of rest;
I see you every night, in dreams
You came to me, and it seems
You called me and to your breast
You held me closely once again . . .
And then I woke to sharper pain,
And tears more bitter than before
Fell on my pillow like a rain . . .
Alone, alone, for ever more!
Will you not come to me, my love?
Do I not wait for you? Where are you, husband of mine?
(She hides her face in her hands and is lost in thought).

OLD NURSE (entering). Here are some maidens, Princess, asking your protection.
Are they to enter?
Will you see them, Princess?

JAROSLAVNA: Oh sì: Le attendo; vengan pur.
(La nutrice esce; poi rientra con le fanciulle. Le fanciulle si inchinano davanti alla principessa).

CORO: Noi veniam ploranti,
Mite principessa,
Invocando soccorso,
Rendi a noi giustizia,
Ci concedi grazia,
E proteggi il nostro onor!
Questa notte ne la loggia,
S'introdusse un cavalier:
La più gentil di noi rapì, Senza pietà.
Noi piangemmo invano,
E pregammo tanto
Ma quel tristo seduttor
Non si commosse.
Gli chiedemmo la sorella:
Ei fremendo di lussuria,
Brutalmente noi cacciò. O qual dolor! . . . .
Vedi il nostro pianto,
Sii clemente e mite:
Imploriamo il tuo buon cuore!
Non abbandonare l'innocente figlia,
Che sol tu la puoi salvar!
Tu lo vedi quanto strazio!
Oh proteggi il mite fior!
Ah! toglli ta al disonor; Abbi pietà!

JAROSLAVNA: Chi dunque l'ha rapita?!
Ebben parlate pur.
Fidate in me.

LE FANCIULLE: (esitando). Il nome dite, orsù! Io?
Perchè tacere ancor? Parla?
Non esitiamo più.

JAROSLAVNA: Dite: Chi dunque fu?

LE FANCIULLE: Non oso. Abbiam timor!
Su via, parliam; perchè tacer? Parliamo alfin.
Principessa, la voce trema nel dire
Il nome di chi ci offese.
È un gran signore, fiero, superbo,
Temuto e forte: È Vladimiro!
Già da gran tempo ferve l'orrore
De' suoi delitti; mentre s'invoca
d'Igor l'amore,
E si rimpiange la sua bontà. Sì, è ver!
Poi che in guerra Igor fu tratto,
Si vide presto la nostra terra priva di leggi,
Grave di angoscie e mai l'asilo non fu più sacro.
Come uragano, la sua ferocia semina morte!
Ei ci tormenta, ei ci dissolve
Con le sue genti, senza pietà! Sì, è ver!
Senza tregua, ebri di strage,
Recan lo strazio nei casolari.
È un'infinita tortura,
Per noi meschine, che ci divora!
E soffocato freme lo sdegno;
Langue ogni cuore di trepidanza:
Tutto è rovina, tutto è dolore,
Da quando lunge, nel tristo esilio,

YAROSLAVNA: Surely!
Now call them; let them come.
(The Nurse goes out and returns accompanied by the girls who salute Yaroslavna respectfully).

THE MAIDENS: We come to you, Princess,
We come as to a mother,
To ask that right be done.
Grant us your sheltering care,
Protect us from dishonor.
Last night a wicked man
Entered our home by stealth,
By force he carried off
One of our dear companions,
A maiden all defenseless.
With tears and supplications
We hastened to his master,
And prayed him to release
Our gentle, stainless sister
And punish him who wronged her.
Alas, he would not hear us.
With cruel mocking laughter
He drove us from his presence,
And threatened us with vengeance
O, be just, be gracious,
Hear our prayers, kind Lady,
Save us from dishonor,
Punish her betrayer,
Set our sister free!

YAROSLAVNA: And who was the offender?
Who carried off the maiden?
Tell me his name?

THE MAIDENS: (to each other in confusion). Ah, who shall speak?
You there!
We, girls? We should not dare!
What, make us tell? Unfair!

YAROSLAVNA: Why are you frightened?
Speak the truth.

THE MAIDENS: We are afraid . . . We dare not . . .
But we must take courage, and tell all.
Princess, be our friend, be not wrath with us
If we speak the truth. He who did us wrong.
Is a mighty Prince. Yes Prince Vladimir!
Many times before he has done us wrong.
Many a burden laid on Poutivle's folk.
When Prince Igor left for the distant field,
Then our lot grew worse, darker things befell
Town and country-side; now Galitsky's men
Helpless folk oppress, work their wicked will Whenever they please. Never for a day
Are our lives our own.
Princess, hear our plaint!
Wild and wine-inflamed, careless of all good,
Mocking every prayer, wrecking hearts and homes,

Languisce Igor!
Ci salva Tu dal disonor!
Di tanto duol pietà.
(Entra Vladimiro Galitsky. Le fanciulle danno in un grido di spavento).
Ah! Ah! Eccolo!
Eccolo! Ci protegga il cielo!

VLADIMIRO GALITSKY: (Minacciando le fanciulle). Ola, che vedo: via di qua!
(Queste scappano. La nutrice esce ad un segno di Jaroslavna).

JAROSLAVNA: Ei giunge.
Ebben, perchè fratello . . .
Sei tu, tu che tenti
Così l'onor di queste beltà?!
L'indegno gesto, sei dunque folle tu?
Rispondi alfin e sii sincero.
Come fu? Oh, parla:
Dimmi il nome.
Perchè l'hai tu rapita?

VLADIMIRO GALITSKY: Ma cosa importa a te!
Perchè te ne infaccendi?
Trovai quel che mi andò,
E quel che presi tengo
La preda è poca cosa . . .
E non mi basterà.
Il tuo dire m'allieta:
Davver mi fa buon pro!
Or via, sorella, dammi fede:
Mi ricevi degnamente.
Con la coppa, principessa,
Vanno accolti i pari miei,
E schiumeggiar ben dovrà vecchio vino!
O davver poca fidenza poni in me.
Con un villano pensi trattare tu?
Fors'io disturbo qui?

JAROSLAVNA: Ah! S'arrossa già per te il volto di vergogna!
Ah! bada, Vladimir: ch'il posso ancor punir!
Se dalla guerra Igor ritornerà,
Giuro al ciel, l'accuserò di questo insulto vil!
E bada: temi ch'ei ti possa castigar.

VLADIMIRO GALITSKY: E cosa importa a me se Igor ritornerà
O rimarrà laggiù senza tregua in guerra ancor?
Padrone mio non è:
Siam pari di potenza:
E qui potrò governar, si mi parrà.
A un cenno sol borghesi e schiavi
Lieti sono al mio servizio.
Questa folla lamentosa.

They have spoiled and slain, ruined and undone
Many a helpless maid, laid waste many fields.
Since Prince Igor went, there is none to hold.
Wickedness in check, and defend the poor.
Send him away, dear Princess, we implore!
(Enter Prince V. Galitsky).
(They perceive the Prince and are terrified).
O Prince, our little father! What have we done!
God help us all!

PRINCE GALITSKY: (threatening the girls). Now get! Begone, I say!
(They run away. The nurse goes out at a sign from Yaroslavna).

YAROSLAVNA: Vladimir! With a band of wild young men, its said that you forced your way at night into a humble dwelling. and bore away a maiden, against her will; that you keep her even now a prisoner in the Terem. Can this be true? Tell me? Who is she? I demand that you answer!

PRINCE GALITSKY: What if I have? Lord's sake
It is no concern of yours!
For what I want I take,
And hold to what is mine.
How should I know her name?
But are you glad to see me, sister?
Your welcome is not warm, my dear.
Must I remind you, when guests enter.
We offer them the cup of cheer,
And set them in the place of honors
And bring for them our oldest wine—
These are our customs, sister mine.
But in truth I came at an unlucky moment.
Thou did hold counsel with some stinking beggars.
Bah! I have disturbed your charity?

YAROSLAVNA: When will it end!
Your shameless way of life
Becomes intolerable. I am still Princess,
And when my husband, Igor, comes again,
I'll tell him all that you have made me suffer;
And you shall answer then for your misdeeds.
And face a day of reckoning—when he comes.

PRINCE GALITSKY: Let Igor come, or stay,
It matters not to me.
Do I not reign today,
As much a Prince as he?
Am I not ruler here?
What then have I to fear?
I only need to raise my voice,
And I might dwell in your palace.
I'm the master, by the people's

Mi si prostra quanto voglia!
E diman potrei sicuro comandar su tutti!
Me dunque onori più decorosa accolta.

JAROSLAVNA: Ed osi minacciar?!

VLADIMIRO GALITSKY: No! me ne guardi Iddio!
Ho detto per celiar.
Così, ne l'ira, io vo'
Li sguardi tuoi mirare.
Sovente nel furor,
Si accende la beltà.
Al fulgor di tua fierezza già,
La fiamma delle pupille è superba voluttà!
Amica mia, ma puoi così
Nel tuo languor restare
Soletta in vedovanza?
E via! non un sospir,
Non, un'occhiata mai?
Mi sembri troppo austera.
Confida pure in me:
Non hai passione alcuna!
Ma come puoi restar fedele?
(In tono allegro e motteggiante).
Di te si riderà! Chi crederà?

JAROSLAVNA: Dell'insolenza il colmo è questo.
Signora son per tutti voi.
Sfidarmi vuoi?
Ebben: silenzio!
Condotto a nostro padre sarai.
Trema! Esci! Esci!
Di qua fuggir t'impongo
La pia fanciulla avrà la libertà,
Non più, non più, va' via di qua!

VLADIMIRO GALITSKY: Ebben taci: Sia pur!
Che a te sia resa la gran beltà.
Ne cerco un'altra più vezzosa! Addio!
(Esce)

JAROSLAVNA: Io tremo ancor, e so frenarmi appena!
O dolce Igor, ritorna a mio conforto.
Ridai la luce a me, l'antica fede.
Lottare ogonor . . . La forza m'abbandona!
(Entrano i bojardi del consiglio che s'inchinano davanti alla principessa).

JAROSLAVNA: Buon dì, bojardi miei fedeli.
Su voi poss'io contar,
E tutta a voi m'affiderò.
Ho prove già del vostro senno.
Sereni nel dolore, sereni nel piacer,
Bojardi foste ognor!
Ma dite omai, di grazia,
Che vi conduce a me?
M'assal pungente angoscia.
Parlate, orsù, che già il cor mio nel dubbio freme.

choice,
Poutivle's folk do wish me well,
I may be Prince today and rule over you.
Remember this—and do not anger me.

YAROSLAVNA: You dare to threaten me?

PRINCE GALITSKY: Enough, enough, I do but sport,
But you do take my jokes amiss.
I love to see you furious.
Do you know, O sister of mine,
How well such rage becomes you!
those flashing eyes, those flaming cheeks!
You are still young and fair; afar
Your husband tarries on the field.
If is dreary work to live alone.
I wonder, sister, are you stern,
Cold and censorious to all
As to your erring brother? Say,
Have you in truth no secret lover?
(Mockingly).
I scarce can credit it. It is past belief!

YAROSLAVNA: (in anger). Do you forget that I am still Princess,
That Igor's power is vested in me still?
Take heed, I have the right to send you away.
Well guarded, to our father in Galicia.
His hand is firm; his judgments are severe.
Release the girl at once—and go from me.
Flee from my presence!

PRINCE GALITSKY: Oho! Is this your wish?
Well, let her go!
I'll choose another more amenable.
How then?
(Exit Prince Galitsky).

YAROSLAVNA (alone). I tremble . . . I am unhinged and nervous . . .
Ah, would that Igor might return today . . .
I breathe more freely at the thought of it!
But I am tired. I have not strength to fight.
(Enter the Boyards of the Council who salute Yaroslavna).

YAROSLAVNA: Good morrow,
Boyards, I rejoice to see you
My trusty counsellors, who will uphold
The Prince's power. You are faithful friends
In times of gladness, and in sorrow too.
Welcome, thrice welcome, to my presence
But say, what brings you here? Why
This unexpected visit? Ah, my heart

Oimè, mi par morir d'angor!

I BOJARDI: Fa' cuor, principessa:
ti occorre fermezza.
Su noi l'uragan s'addensa.

JAROSLAVNA: Il mugghio è vicin de l'ira divina.
Funesto presagio!

I BOJARDI: Coraggio!

JAROSLAVNA: Che mai dite?!
Qual presagio?!

I BOJARDI: Le schiere selvagge s'abbatton su noi.
S'appressan spargendo terro!

JAROSLAVNA: Io fremo!

I BOJARDI: Sono qua! . . .
Terribil dì, Gzak già l'orda fatal
S'avanza spargendo terror!

JAROSLAVNA: La mala sorte non è sazia mai?

I BOJARDI: Sono qua!
L'odiato invasor già tenta assalir
Col fuoco la nostra città!

JAROSLAVNA: A me, o guerrier!
E il nobile Igor?
O dite: Ei vive? Ov'è?

I BOJARDI: Un cupo destin s'abbatte su noi:
Castigo fatal del ciel.

JAROSLAVNA: O ciel! La truppa non è più!
Il nemico vincitor?! E dunque ver?

I BOJARDI: I figli d'Igor l'antica virtù,
Smarrita han dunque così?

JAROSLAVNA: Ah!

I BOJARDI: È il destin!
sorpresa, distrutta, l'armata d'Igor;
E il figlio con lui prigionier!
qual destin! . . .

JAROSLAVNA: Disfatto omai è dunque Igor?
No, no: Io sogno! Menzogna!
No . . . No! . . .
(Cade senza accorgersene). (La rialzano).
Terribil prova! Supremo orror! qual destino!
(Ella s'inchina davanti ai bojardi. Dietro il teatro rimbombano i tocchi della campana d'allarme. I bojardi ascoltano attentamente).

I BOJARDI: Che! L'allarme! Ma sì . . . laggiù! Campane!
Campane d'allarme son!
Sinistro suon!
Fatale annuncio di dolor!
(Dietro il teatro le donne alzano gridi di disperazione).

Is filled with dark forebodings of ill news!
I pray you tell me what has happened.

THE BOYARDS: Take courage,
Princess, for we are
The bearers of ill-tidings.

YAROSLAVNA: What has befallen us? Speak, Sirs!

THE BOYARDS: Courage.

YAROSLAVNA: What evil omen?

THE BOYARDS: The hostile forces of the Khan
Have crossed the Russian frontier.
They are at our gates.

YAROSLAVNA: O Heaven!

THE BOYARDS: The threatening hordes
Advance on Poutivle
Led by the Khan Gzak.

YAROSLAVNA: Will our ill fortune never end?

THE BOYARDS: The ruthless Khan.
Terror on terror.
Sorrow on sorrow,
God sends upon Poutivle.

YAROSLAVNA: Where are our troops?
Where is our Prince?
O, Boyards, tell me, where is Igor now?

THE BOYARDS: A dreadful fate has befallen us.
A punishment from heaven.

YAROSLAVNA: O heaven, the army is no more!
The enemy victorious. It is true?

THE BOYARDS: Has the former valor deserted the sons of Igor?

YAROSLAVNA: Ah!

THE BOYARDS: Our Prince was wounded sore,
And with his brother,
And his son Vladimir,
Is in captivity.

YAROSLAVNA: Ah! Wounded and a captive, my dear Lord?
Nay, nay, it cannot be . . .
Say 'tis not true!
(She falls fainting. She is revived).
Then it is true . . .
The Prince is prisoner . . .
And wounded . . .
(She salutes the Boyards, bowing low. The tocsin is heard ringing. The Boyards listen attentively).

THE BOYARDS: The tocsin! Hark!
In truth the tocsin sounds!
Boyards, the tocsin rings a wild alarm!
Princess, it portends some dreadful thing!
(Behind the stage the women shout is despair).

CORO DI DONNE: Oimè! Oimè!
Oimè! Oimè!
Ora fatal, soccorso alcun!?
Funesto dì!
Ah! è un castigo del ciel!
Ah! tristo dì! Ah! Ah!
Pietà di noi, pietà o ciel!
Per noi dal ciel non polo dal disonor!
(Si vedono dalle finestre barlumi d'incendio).

JAROSLAVNA: Che intendo?
Pietà, Signor!
Noi siamo allor perduti già?
Signor, pietà! Sii giusto!
Oimè: non odi?
O madre santa, ci proteggi tu!
Ancor non sai placar,
O cielo, il tuo furor!?
Ah, qual dolor!
Ne l'ira sua, il ciel non ode!
O signor: di pietà!
Risparmia un pov'e pietà!
Oh! Signor!

I BOJARDI: E Gerak che vien: si abbatte già.
Ma v'è! In fiamme è già il sobborgo!
Avanzan già. La fortezza pur s'accende!
La città fiammeggia!
Ah presto, di qua!
Andiam, coraggio!
Corriamo tutti su! bastione!
All'armi, o guerrieri.
Ma accanto a lei dovrà restar qualcun!
Difender la dobbiam! Gran Padre.
(I bojardi tiran fuori le spade).
Deh, proteggi il nostro onor!
Di Dio la man su noi si posi
E ci salvi dal destin!
Per noi dal ciel non v'è pietà!
Oh! Signor!

CALA IL SIPARLO

■ ATTO II

Sera nel Campo dei Polovtsy.

CORO DI FANCIULLE: O fior languente, pallido fiore,
Omai reclini sul funereo suolo.
Ah! morta è già la tua corolla;
Non um bacio da la brezza,
Ah! Ma se a notte la rugiada
Scenderà soave ancor,
Il tuo cuore, o dolce rosa,
A' suoi baci s'aprirà:
E l'effluvio de la vita
Ti darà novello ardor!
O fior languente, a te sorella
E l'alma come te ne la tristezza
Chiede il cor la sua carezza.
Ah! Ma la notte azzurra è mite,
Messaggera di dolci amor.
Ti dirà che al novo sole
Il tuo damo tornerà.
Nei roseti canta
Maggio e ripete l'eco

CHORUS OF WOMEN: (off the stage). Woe, woe! The foe is close at hand,
What will become of us?
Have mercy, Lord!
The cruel heathen foe is here!
(Through the window the red glare of a fire is seen).

YAROSLAVNA: Ah, can this be?
Have mercy, God in Heaven!
The cruel heathen swarm around our gates . . .
What will become of us?
Have mercy, Lord!
O blessed Virgin, help us in our need!
This is God's chastisement for all our sin!

THE BOYARDS: Fire! The outer city is in flames!
The women shriek and scream, the people flee!
The Polovtsy have laid the country waste,
And now they're pillaging the outskirts,
Burning our suburbs.
See the leaping flames!
Quick, Boyards, to defend the city walls!
But let a portion of us tarry here
To guard the Princess to the very end.
(Some of the Boyards draw their swords and assume an attitude of defense. The rest go out).
This is God's chastisement for all our sin!
What God ordains must be;
From this can no man flee!

CURTAIN

■ ACT II

Evening in the Camp of the Polovtsy.

CHORUS OF MAIDENS: The prairie flower pale annd sweet,
Fades in th parching midday heat,
And earthward droops its weary head,
While all its leaves hang withered.
But when the scorching sun has set
And evening dews are glistening wet
Upon the hot and thirsty plain,
The flower lifts its face again,
And pours forth to the silent night
A dreamful fragrance of delight.
And we are the drooping flower
Poor maidens, heart-whole, fancy-free
Who languish here in weariness
Until we know love's sweet caress.
But when the ruthless sun has set
And all the plain with dew is wet,

"Amor!"
De la notte ai freschi baci,
L'alma, come fior,
Dolcemente s'aprirà!
Al par di te,
Il cor langue!
Ma la notte spira amor
L'eco ridirà la gioia d'ogni cuor!

KONTCHAKOVNA:
Non si canti omai
Nè si giochi più, muore il dì,
E su noi scende il vel della sera.
O diffendi il mister
Del tuo stellato ammanto
O notte virginal!
Già l'incanto dei sogni aleggia.

CORO DI FANCIULLE: Sogna pur, mite fior.
Dolce notte d'amor!

KONTCHADOVNA: O dolce amor, per l'almo ciel t'invoca
De' miei sospir la più gentil canzone.
Per te sol, dolce amor, mi vo far bella!
Vieni a me: m'odi tu!
Ah, rispondi alfin!
Di voluttà soave incanto!
M'elevo a te..
Io vo', senza fin,
Di te sognar;
Con te vanir
L'immensità del cielo.
Tu raccogli il sospir
Dei cuor sognanti,
O notte l'azzurro
Tuo mistero.
O sognar cosi,
O vanir,
(Entra la pattuglia "Polovtsinese" che fa il giro del campo. Kontchakovna e le fanciulle escono. Verso la fine del coro la scena resta vuota. Code la notte. Non si vede altro che Ovlour di guardia in fondo alla scena).

COR DEI SOLDATI: (della pattuglia Polovtsinese). A la sommità del colle il sol vani;
E l'azzurrità s'effonde sideral!
Or veleggia in ciel la bianca luna.
E le stelle intorno fan diaderna,
Lieti noi vegliam, pronti per marciar. Si vegliam.
(La pattuglia si allontana dictro la scena).
Oh, notte, dura eternal!

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Fugge fra brividi il Sol,
E s'addormenta la selva
L'ombra con blanda promessa,
Desta i lamenti del l'eco:
Eco d'ebbrezza, soffio di vita,
Che ci carezza l'alma sopita!
Ah! notte d'amor, la tua pace
Mi'lenisce l'aspro dolor,
E mi solleva.
Stella di bontà: brilli tu sola?!
Vedi: il tuo raggio mi scende nel cor.
Ah! vien! Ah! vien!

When night with stars is luminous,
Our lover's thoughts shall turn to us,
And like the yearning, sun-parched flower,
Our thirsty hearts shall have their hour.

KONCHAKOVNA: Now the day light dies,
Cease your songs and dances, it is enough.
Overhead the quiet night
Spreads her wings.
Gentle night, come soon,
Enfold me in your shades,
Wrap your mists around me
Like a robe.

MAIDENS: Dream, gentle flower,
Sweet night of love!

KONCHAKOVNA: Bring the hour of meeting,
Bring my love.
Will you come, my dearest friend?
Surely your heart must tell you
How slowly move the moments
While I wait.
Where are you, my beloved, Answer me!
I wait for you, my love.
The hour has come at last,
The hour of meeting,
Of tender greeting.
(The Polovtsy patrol enter and inspect the camp. The stage is empty for a few minutes. Night draws on. Ovlour is on guard.)

SOLDIERS: (of the Polovtsy patrol). The stars are shining bright like lamps.
The moon sails like a white vessel;
It is she patrols the heavens clear,
While we do sentry-go down here,
And far away beyond the west,
All night the lazy sun can rest.
(Enter Prince V. Igorievich).

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Slowly the sunset fires die out
Behind the distant forests dark;
The western glow is fading now;
Night spreads her veil upon the earth
In mystic shadows
Dim and blue
The silent Steppe is lost.
Warm, gentle night of the south,
Waking sweet visions of bliss,
Stirring my pulses to passion,
Leading my feet to my love!
Do you await me, beloved?

Ah rispondi al mio sospir,
O pura luce, dissipa l'ombra mortal:
Rispondi; col tuo fulgor
Abbatti il dubbio, crudel Sei tu.
Lungamente t'lio atteso.
Sempre vo' l'amor tuo!
M'intendi tu?
Brilla ognor, bell'astro,
Ne! mio ciel.
O pia stella amica!
Lasciati mirar!
Discendi a me dal trono azzurro.
La terra freme già
Al palpitar del ciel!
Ah! vien! Ah! vien!
O mio ben, discendi alfin.
Deh, così non lasciar
Che il dubbio mi sia nel cor!
Ecco, a te m'affido:
Mi lascio abbagliar.
Estiva notte de' tuoi veli
Così m'avvolgi nel mister.
E tutto un palpitar di stelle:
Riversa il ciel sopir d'amor:
La terra pia li accoglierà
Tutto e amor!
Deh vien!

KONTCHAKOVNA: Ecco: discendo, ti ascolto;
Intendo il tuo grido.
Il cuore si schiude qual bacio
D'Aprile, ai baci del Sol.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: M'ami tu?

KONTCHADOVNA: Viorò per te.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: O dimmi il ver . . .

KONTCHAKOVNA Per sempre fedel.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Ripeti ancor! . . .

KONTCHADOVNA: Perchè vuoi dubitar?
Si: io t'adoro!
Quale ardor tu non puoi capir,
Mi dia l'amor di cui vibrai
Per te dal di che ti vidi.
Per volere fatal,
Così pur la legge mia,
Per te, sdegnai.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Ebben, sarò lo sposo tuo.

KONTCHAKOVNA: Soave a me tu parli inver!

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Divino ardor: il labbro cor.
Labbro divin, o sorridimi ancor!

KONTCHAKOVNA: Tuo già l'incanto riversa.
Mio sposo tu! M'esalto all'incanto d'amor!

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Oh!
Mite notte di languor!

KONTCHAKOVNA: Credo in te, mio solo amor!
Più che nel ciel!

Yea, my heart whispers, you're waiting for me.
Dearest, where are you?
Answer!
Will you soon come to me, sweet?
Answer the cry of your lover!
Think how I suffer and yearn,
How my heart is consumed as by fire
While I wait for your coming, O love.
Why do you tarry, my darling?
Ah rise up and come to me here.
Have no fear, for the soldiers are sleeping;
All the world is enfolded in dreams.
Dearest, where are you?
Answer!
Answer the cry of your lover!
Come, veiled in the warm dusky shadows,
While the forest and lake slumber;
When only the stars in the heavens
Look down on our rapture of love.
(Konchakovna emerges from her tent).

KONCHAKOVNA: O, is it you, Vladimir,
O, is it you, my love?
You whom my heart adores,
My lover, long desired,
I wait and pine for you!

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Do you love me?

KONCHAKOVNA: Ever faithful.

VLADIMIR: Repeat it!

KONCHAKOVNA: Do I love you, dear?
O you, my bliss!
Yes, I love you with the passion
And the strength that young hearts know.
Ah, beloved mine, I love you,
Love you with my heart and soul,
And without you, my Vladimir, The world would be dark and cold.

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Well, I'll be your husband.

KONCHAKOVNA: You speak to me sweetly!

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: O, say again those words of love;
Beloved, speak those words once more!

KONCHAKOVNA: When shall I be yours for ever?
When shall you call me wife, dear heart?
My love, my joy, O husband mine!

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Oh! gentle night of languor!

KONCHAKOVNA: I believe in you, my only love,
More than in heaven!

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Mia già sei tu:
T'avvince omai
D'amor la legge a me.
Ripeti ancora.

KONTCHAKOVNA: Quale ardor non puoi mai saper
Mi dia l'amor di cui vibrai
Per te, dal di che t'ho veduto.
Ud destino fatal mi colpì.
Sino a morte sarà dolcemente a te,
Il cor mio fedel!!

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Sii tu mia sposa.
Io vo' per te languir d'amor.
La legge tua non gioverà.
Mostra legge e amor
Sul tuo sen languir!
Sul tuo cor sognar e poi morir!!
Tu sei l'eterno palpito!

INSIEME: Sei l'amor!

KONTCHAKOVNA: E ben tuo padre . . . ancor non ascoltò la tua preghiera.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Oh no!
Ne oso a lui parlar.
Al libero amore nessun comanda.

KONTCHAKOVNA: E ver. Ma Igor se vero sembra.
Il padre mio ben so che assentirà.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Qui siam spiati. Odi stormir.

KONTCHAKOVNA: Resta.
Sommesso parla.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: No, mio padre verrà: ci può scoprir.

KONTCHADOVNA: Ti prego: rimani ancor! . . .

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Addio!

KONTCHADOVNA: Vuoi lasciarmi già!?

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Addio!
(Escono, ognuno dalla parte opposta).
(fermandosi davanti a la scena).

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Oimè! Nel cor mi graverà l'angoscia ognor!
In preda al mio destin crudel, io veglio;
E dei lontani di nutrisco il sogno, O luminosi di!
Mi sembra ancor che il ciel minacci:
Ma pur lontano in gran miraggio
Glorioso veggo l'avvenir.
Stellati di risplenderanno
Pur nel ciel di mia felicità.
Non più ne l'ombra brancolar,
Vinto, qui mi vedrò.
Vo sfidarla la morte.
Che più dovrò soffrir?
Perduto ho già gloria, onor e patria.
Disfatto Igor.
Io, nel disonor!
Tutto mi negò il ciel:
Omai non chiedo che morir
Se Iddio mi desse ancor la forza,
Liberator sarei del patrio suol.
Brillare ancor vedrei rossigno

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: You are already mine:
May love unite me with you.
Speak those words again.

KONCHAKOVNA: Yes, I love you with the passion
And the strength that young hearts know.
Ah, beloved, I love you —
Love you with my heart and soul.

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Love me, sweet, with all your being,
Heart and soul and body too!
When shall I call you mine for ever?
When shall I call you wife, dear heart?
My bride, my love, my heart's desire!

TOGETHER: You are love.

KONCHAKOVNA: What does your father say?
Will he give consent?

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Alas no!
While we both are captives here,
He will not hear me speak of love and marriage.

KONCHAKOVNA: The Khan, my father, is less stern.
He'd gladly see my wed with you.

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Go away; someone approaches.

KONCHAKOVNA: We're safe. I hear no sound.

VLADIMIR IGORIEICH: Footsteps . . . My father comes!

KONCHAKOVNA: Stay, love, be not afraid.

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Farewell!

KONCHAKOVNA: Ah! Would you leave me!

VLADIMIR IGORIEVICH: Farewell!
(They go off right and left).

PRINCE IGOR: (stopping in the foreground).
No sleep, no rest, for my afflicted soul!
Night brings no boon of sweet forgetfulness.
The past comes back, I live it through again,
In dark nocturnal silence, all alone.
God's warning — the eclipse — comes back to me.
And I hear all the sounds of revelry,
When in my halls my warriors feasted high,
And gloried in my victories of old.
Ah, what an end to all my hopes is this!
Defeated, wounded, and a captive too!
I stand disgraced before my native land.
A captive, you a slave — O wretched lot!
O, give me back my freedom, God

Un ciel di gloria al novo Sol!
O mia sposa sventurata,
Sempre a te va il mio pensiero.
Tu la sorte che insidiava,
Mi svelasti un dì.
Dalla vetta del castello
Scruta il guardo tuo lo spazio;
E sol tu del mio sgomento
Sentirai l'orror.
Potrò trovar conforto a tal disfatta?
Or chi potrà fidar nel mio valor?
Oh! maledizion!
Hanno in mano la mia vita, Igor
E qui nell'abbiezion!
O santa libertà perduta,
Mi lascia tu salvar la patria mia,
O da guerrier per lei morir.
E che? Nel cor non rugge più l'antico ardor?!
In preda al mio, destin crudel, io veglio,
E dei trascorsi di nutrisco il sogno.
O luminosi dì, per me non raggian più.
Io soffro! Qual crudel cupo tormento!
O grazia! Qual dolor!
(Ovlour s'avvicina al Principe Igor. Il crepuscolo dell'aurora comincia. Verso la fine della scena si fa chiaro giorno).

OVLOUR: Signor perdona l'arditezza: Un mio pensier ti fo palese.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Che vuoi tu?

OVLOUR: Quel fiammeggiar ne lo spazio profondo,
Di glorioso avvenir predice nuovi dì.
Benigna alfin pe 'l nostro ciel l'aurora brilla.
Spezzare io vo' le tue catene.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Tu?

OVLOUR: Un buon destrier ne l'ombra attende:
Ei volerà come baleno.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Io? Che?! Taci.
Fuggir è indegno.
Non posso. No, No!
Non voglio. Lasciami restar.

OVLOUR: Eppure tu non giurasti mai
Su l'onor tuo non desti fede.

IL PRINCIPLE IGOR: Non fuggirò.
Pe 'l tuo servizio grazie.
Giammai potrò fuggir.
(Ovlour si ritira triste e pensoso).
(Entra Kontchak).

above,
And let me wipe my shame out on the field!
If I were free, it would not be too late to save
My name and honor, and my country too!
You, alone, my dove, my dearest,
Will not blame grieving husband,
And your tender heart will tell
All my bitterness and sorrow;
I shall win your sweet forgiveness.
Seated at the Terem casement
With strained eyes the wide Steppe searching,
Love, you wait night and morning,
Weeping for your truant husband.
How shall I live thus, counting useless days,
In close captivity, and know my foes
Are harrying Russia.
Gracious God.
Grant me my freedom! It is not too late
To wipe out my dishonor on the field,
And save my name, and fame, and Russia too!
Night brings no hopeful dream of liberty,
Only the past returns, I live it through
In the nocturnal silence, all alone,
O my helpless state weighs heavily,
Upon my aching conscience night and day.
(The first flush of down appears in the sky. Enter Ovlour).

OVLOUR: Pardon me, Prince, but may I speak with you?
I long have wished to say a word . . .

PRINCE IGOR: How now? Who are you?

OVLOUR: Prince, behold: the eastern sky glows pink
The dawn-light chases darkness from the earth;
And day will dawn for you and Russia too . . .
I know a way . . . a way to set you free?

PRINCE IGOR: You?

OVLOUR: I'll saddle you the swiftest horse we have.
Mount him, and leave the camp in secrecy.

PRINCE IGOR: What? I, Prince Igor, I, to break my word, And win my liberty by secret flight?
I do this thing? . . .
Sir, you are mad, No!

OVLOUR: You have not bound yourself, Prince, by an oath.
Nor kissed the Cross before this Pagan Khan.

PRINCE IGOR: Leave me.
I thank you for your loyalty.
Flight is impossible.
(Ovlour goes out sad and pensive. Enter Konchak).

KONTCHAK: Salute Igor!
E sempre il ciel ti guidi:
Ti dispensi felicità.
Ma trasognato sei?
Di: dei falconi il vol,
Va male ne le tue lanciate?
I miei ti do.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Ah no, i miei son pur di nobil razza.
Ma v'è un falcon che langue prigioniero.

KONTCHAK: Da pari tuo ciascun ti rende ommaggio:
Non sei tu l'ospite gradito?
Su, coraggio.
A la Kaiala fu provato
De' prodi tuoi il valor:
La causa tua fu vinta;
Igor, lo volle il ciel.
Ma presso me, tu sei signore,
Ne ti manca mai rispetto.
Co' guerrier, col figlio
Accanto ti lasciai;
E puoi star con lor da pari tuo.
Catene non ti danno gravezza.
Certo. Igor per me è il gran guerrier che adoro.
Prigioniero non sei. No, davver.
Credi, amico: devi veder tu stesso
Quanta stima ho di te,
Del tuo nobile cor.
La morte godi a sfidar, Si!
Ti vidi io stesso lottar. Si;
E vorrò fare con te,
Come si ospita un re.
Apri tutto il tuo cor,
E il pensiero con me.
Che puoi desiderare?
Dillo ch'io t'amo.
Ho per te languide fiere vergini;
Schiave bellissime:
Stelle fulgide d'oltre mare.
Non devi esser timido
Se a' tuoi pie' le vedrai.
E più t'offro, de l'harem beltà rare,
Dal lungo crine,
Dal mesto fatal guardar,
Ove cede a l'amor,
Naufragando il cor!
Scegli pur: e certo dovrai faticar!
Scegli, dunque: languor mite o selvaggio
T'aggrada in amor! Eh! O miei schiavi, presto qua,
Con ardor ferverà la danza.
Si canti, orsù!
Lasciar dobbiam le tristi cure. (Entrano gli schiavi "Polovcesi," uomini e donne: alcuni portano seco tamburelli, ed altri hanno diversi strumenti musicali, poi vengono le persone di seguito del Kontchak).
(Danza delle fanciulle a movimenti ondulanti).

CORO: Va' su l'ale de la brezza,
Canzone, va' su l'ale del pensiero,
E bacia tu la mia diletta terra:
Ti segue l'alitar de l'alma mia.
L'aria è tutta ebbrezze;

KONCHAK: Good morrow, Prince!
Why is my guest so sad,
So lost in gloomy thoughts?
Do you lack snares, or arrows,
Have your falcons grown too tame
To swoop upon the quarry?
Take mine — I grudge them not!

PRINCE IGOR: My peregrines are swift and sure;
It is the prisoned falcon frets and pines.

KONCHAK: No prisoner you are most noble Prince,
But my most honored guest, I trust.
Is it not so?
Sore wounded at the Kayala,
And have your armies taken or cut down.
I only keep you as a hostage here.
Not as my captive, but my guest,
Respected as my very self.
All that I have is at your service, Prince.
Your son, your followers, remain with you,
And as a Chief you'll dwell in our midst.
Yes even as myself.
Confess, this is no harsh captivity!
How then? Ah no! My Prince, my friend, you are not my prisoner in this camp, but my guest, most dear to me. Hark then, believe me, I have always cherished respect for your great courage in the field. I have honored — yes, have loved — Igor for this. Therefore do not regard me as a foe, but rather as a hospitable host. Then tell me, Prince, what ails you? What do you lack? Would you like my fleetest steed? — It is yours.
Should you desire, most noble Prince, I'll give you a companion fair; A slave — a girl of rare beauty,
Sent as a present, not long since,
From lands beyond the Caspian Sea.
She shall be yours. Oh, I have many lovely slaves.
With fragrant dusky hair that waves
Low on smooth brows, above dark eyes
So bright with passion that no veil
Conceals the light that flashes there . . .
What, silent, Prince? Can nothing avail
To rouse you from your despair?
Ho! Bring the slaves here!
Let them dance and sing.
Perchance it will distract you, and drive forth
These gloomy thoughts.
(Enter the Khan's slaves, male and female, some carry tambourines and other musical instruments. They are followed by the Khan's retinue).
(Dance of the Polovtsy girls with swaying movements).

CHORUS: On the wings of the wind borne away,
Fly homeward, song of our Motherland,
To the land where we sang in free-

L'eco pur sospira, par che vaghi il monte,
Quasi nube a mezzo mar.
Già del Sole la carezza inonda
Or le vette de' miei colli,
E lieto da le mie foreste vaghe.
Un canto celestial risponde al mio.
Come sospir, la canzon va trasvolando.
Reca, o rosignolo, la pia canzone:
Ti segue l'alitar de l'alma mia
Lieve ai margini del mar.
(Danza degli uomini. Selvaggia).

CORO: (Danza generale). Viva viva fiero spirto, Ah!
Gloria, gloria, sommo duce! Ah! Ah!
(Danza dei prigionieri "polovcesi").
Le genti, lì prigionieri,
Sciolgon canti di dolor, mesti sospir.
Viva, viva fiero spirto!

KHAN KONTCHAK: (a Igor). Quelle fanciulle ognor soavi cantano.
Son qua per te: non le vuoi?
Basta un cenno sol.
Scegli orsù: vuoi la bionda recata dal mar,
O la bruna che sembra un folletto infernal?
(Danza generale).

CORO: Egli uguaglia i suoi avi
In gloria, in valor.
Gloria a te gran guerrier,
Gloria a te.
(Danza di fanciulle a movimenti ondulanti)

CORO: Va' su l'ale de la brezza,
Canzone, va' su l'ale del pensiero,
E bacia tu la mia diletta terra:
Ti segue l'alitar de l'alma mia.
La foresta dice al mare che si lagna l'usignuol.
L'aria è tutta ebrezza,
E su da l'onda sale un canto;
Par che vaghi il monte quasi nube a mezzo mar.
Che ripete il suo languor.
(Danza lenta di fanciulle e danza rapida di ragazzi).
Or l'allegro rosignolo,
S'è desto più sciogliendo le sue note,
Feconda gioire la vallata mia,
Le vite ferve ognor di sacro umore,
Come sospir.
E da l'onda sale un canto,
Che ripete "spera ancor!"
Tutto è un eterno april!
La canzon va trasvolando,
Lieve ai margini del mar.

CORO: Egli uguaglia i suoi avi in gloria, nel valor.
(Danza di ragazzi).
Gloria a te, fean guerrier!
(Danza generale).

dom
Before the days of captivity.
There beneath the ardent sky
Blows a languid, warm-breathed breeze;
There the cloud-capped mountains dream,
Listening to the murmuring sea;
And the emerald slopes are glowing
In the sunshine's golden rays,
There the roses in the valleys
Hang in heavy, fragrant clusters;
There among the young green branches
Nightingales pour forth their lays.
Fly, my song, upon the zephyrs,
Back to home and liberty.
(Dance of the men. Wild dance).

CHORUS: (All dance). Long live, proud spirit, Ah!
Glory, glory to our chief.
(Dance of the Polovets prisoners).
The people, the prisoners,
Sing songs of sorrow, sad sighs.
Long live proud spirit!

KONCHAK: (to Igor). Do you see these captives from beyond the sea —
The distant Caspian? Do you see these fair maids?
O, tell me, friend, which one pleases you best;
One word, and she is — yours.
(All dance — Boys dance).

CHORUS: (Men dance). Glorious, famous as his fathers, Terrible our Khan Konchak.
Praise our Khan,
Great Khan Konchak!
(Dance of the girls in swaying movements).

CHORUS: On the wings of the wind borne away,
Fly homeward, song of our Motherland
To the land where we sang in freedom
Before the days of captivity,
There beneath the ardent sky
Blows a languid, warm breathed breeze;
There the cloud-capped mountains dream,
Listening to the murmuring sea.
(Slow dance of girls and quick dance of boys).
O, joyous nightingale,
May your sweet song resound
Over the valleys, like sighs,
And from the wave rises a song
Which says "hope again."
All is eternal spring!
The song goes flying
Out to the sea!

CHORUS: Glorious, famous as his fathers.
(Dance of boys).
Glory to you, bold warrior!
(All dance).

Con i canti e con le danze,
A l'eroe fate onor.
Sia la danza folle, folle;
E l'ebrezza voli; giova rallietare
Il guerrier vincitor.
Ti rallieta, o signor,
E sia gloria a te!

CALA IL SIPARIO

ATTO III

Trombette sul palcoscenico dietro il sipario.
Alzato il sipario si vede una parte del campo "polovtsiese." I "polovscesi" arrivano da diverse parti, e guardano verso la porta in fondo, aspettando l'arrivo dell'esercito del Gzak: l'esercito compare in fondo alla scena. S'avanzano alcuni guerrieri che portano trombe e chiarine e tamburi; altri conducono i prigionieri russi e portano un ricco bottino. I "polovtsiesi" salutano i guerrieri che entrano, facendo gesti selvaggi. Verso la fine della marcia entra a cavallo sulla scena il Khan Gzak, accompagnato dai soldati e della sua guardia. Kontchak gli va incontro per salutarlo. Il Principe Igor, Vladimiro Igorevitcii e i prigionieri russi si fermano da parte, osservando tutto ciò che avviene.

CORO: I trionfatori cinti son di gloria
E di lor virtù van superbi a gara!
Fiero il vittorioso muove in gran trionfo,
Segue il cupo stuol dei prigionieri.
A te sia gloria!
Viva Gzak, viva Gzak!
Gloria ai suoi soldati ebri di vittoria.
Gzak, viva Gzak,
Gloria all'invincibil,
Gloria a suoi guerrieri!
Già la squilla avverte il suo passar quel felice dì!
Gloria a voi possenti!
Ardon borghi in vostro onor
E consente lieto il ciel!
Gloria, gloria!
E di Russia il sacro suol
Un ossario immenso!
Gloria, gloria, gloria!
Al gran Kans si faccia onore!
Gloria al suo possente
Duce Gzak trionfatore!
Invincibil Gloria a Kontchak!
Viva il gran' Gsak!
Di sangue intriso geme l'almo suol.
Oimè! Si leva tetro palpitar
Dai campi spogli d'ogni fior.
La morte invitta sta sfidando,
Muta di furor!
Gloria, gloria!

KONTCHAK: La clava ancor possente
Ha vinto questi schiavi.
La sorte ci è propizia.

With songs and with dances,
Pay honor to the hero.
With dances regale him.
Cheer our victorious warrior.
May glory be with you, oh prince!

CURTAIN

ACT III

The Polovtsy. Trumpets behind the scene. At the rising of the curtain is seen one part of the "Polovets" camp. The Polovtsy arrive from different directions, awaiting the arrival of the army of Khan Gzak. The latter begins to appear by degrees at the back of the stage. Some of the soldiers are bearing trumpets, horns and tambourines. Others escort Russian captives and are laden with rich spoils. The Polovtsy welcome Gzak's warriors with savage gestures. At the end of the march Khan Gzak enters on horseback, with a detachment of his followers. Khan-Konchak goes forward to meet him. Prince Igor, his son Vladimir, and the Russian prisoners stand by, watching and listening to all that is taking place.

CHORUS: Our warriors come back
Triumphant and victorious.
Hail, to you, fierce and glorious,
Hail, warriors of Khan Gzak!
Hail to our Chieftain and his braves
Who went forth to victory;
He is fierce and terrible who Brings us home a host of slaves, who Brings a splendid booty back.
Hail, warriors of Khan Gzak,
The trumpets sound for victory,
The drums resound today,
For many a town and hamlet burned,
For many a field laid waste,
And strewn with Russian bones.
They bring hosts of fair captives,
Glory to our Khans,
To our ruthless, fearless Khans!
Hail to Gzak the Terrible,
Like a panther fierce he roves
Across the wide, wide Steppes;
Like a whirlwind, sweeps before him
All his foes;
Men and horses, rank on rank,
Fall before his furious onslaught,
Till the plains are whitened
With the bones of Russian foemen!
Hail! Hail!

KONCHAK: Lo, the splendid victory is yours
You have overcome our foe,
And laid his army low,

La Russia invan ancor s'illude,
Il valor s'impone sempre più.
La nostra forza raddoppia.
Or le città conquise abbiam
Ricche provincie a noi piegar.
La nostra fede rivela
L'antica gloria ancor.
Il mondo intier ci temerà:
Ne più su noi alcun potrà.

CORO: Gloria a Gzak,
Evviva Kontchak!

KONTCHAK: Squillate, o trombe!
(Trombe).
È ben: or qui, per iniziar la festa,
Dividiamo il bottino.
Che, tra piaceri e feste,
Celebrar dovremo la conquista.
La gloria consacriam.
Dal sonno sian svegliate
Omai le fragranti mie beltà;
E diman con riflession,
Concreteremo il pian di guerra.
Attenti ognor i prigionier,
Dobbiam vegliar con sommo ardor.
Andiam!
(Esce).

CORO DEI KHANS: Al gran consiglio orsù vòlgiam:
Che giova omai sapere il ver!
Inerti star conviene ancor,
O l'inimico perseguir?
Chi guiderà l'armata nostra?
O verso Kiew o su Poltava repiegar,
Su chi mai possiam fidar?
O verso Kiew dobbiam marciar,
O su Poltava ripiegar?
(I "Polovcesi" escono. I prigionieri russi entrano nelle loro tende. Si vedono sulla scena i guerrieri "Polovtsienesi" che sono in sentinelle all'entrata delle tende. Dietro le scene squillano le trombe).

CORO DI GUARDIE: Il vittorioso è pari al sol!
Ed a la luna egli è simil!
Ai fochi fulgidi del ciel
Di valor sempre brilla
Sua gloria in ogni cuor scintilla.
Ah! Devesi cantar e sempre ber.
In omaggio del Signor.
Si! A chi tenta di sfuggirle
Nostre freccie giungono.
Son veloci i nostri alfier,
E sanno dal periglio deviar.
Andiam: il canto d'onor,
Leviamo nel Sol pei nostri vincitor.
Si! Noi saremo forti ognor così
Vigilando i prigionier.
(Le guardie incominciano la danza).
(Uno dei ballerini cade. Un altro cade. Il terzo cade).
(A la fine della scena si oscura il palcoscenico. Le guardie si addormentano. Ovlour si avvicina furtivamente e con precauzione alla tenda di Igor).

The land belongs to you and me!
The rumor of our great renown
Spreads day by day;
The whole world is our own,
None bars our way!

CHORUS: Hail to Khan Gzak!
Hail to Konchak!

KONCHAK: Sound the trumpets!
(Trumpets).
Come now! We will divide the captives and share the spoils between us. Come! Hey!
From now til night you all may feast and sing, and divide the spoils, to celebrate the victory.
The fairest of the captives, lead them to my tent, at once. Tomorrow morn, a council will be held to settle our next move against the foe. Watch the prisoners well. Now come!
(Exit).

CHORUS OF KHANS: Let us go to hold a council.
Shall we stay here awhile and rest,
Or fall tomorrow on the foe?
Shall we push further towards the west?
Whom will our Chieftains take or leave?
Shall we sack Kiev or Poltava?
Konchak awaits us, let us go.
To follow his advice is best.
Either stay here our men to rest,
Or fall tomorrow on the foe,
And march our horde still further west.
(The Polovtsy go out. The Russians enter their tents. Warriors mount guard over the captives. Sounds of trumpets behind the scenes).

THE GUARDS: Like the sun is Khan Konchak,
Like the moon is Khan Gzak,
Like the stars are all our Khans.
Their glory shines so brightly,
Like the light of heaven at noonday.
To the glory of our chieftans
Let us now drink deep.
Drink makes us blithe and merry,
But we'll watch our captives closely.
Woe to him who tries to flee!
For our arrows fly true and far,
And our horses gallop swiftly,
On the plain we'd soon overtake him.
Now make a song of praise and glory,
In honor of our Khans' great deeds!
(The guards drink and begin to dance. One of the dancers falls. Another falls, a third falls. As the dance comes to an end twilight draws on. The guards fall into a drunken slumber. Ovlour approaches Prince Igor's tent furtively and with precaution).

OVLOUR: Sei a tempo ancor, se vuoi partir.
Le guardie non han più un'ombra di ragion.
Al fiume, nell'oscuro, e già il destrier,
T'attenderò: La notte è cupa.
(A voce bassa).
Udito il mio segnal t'affretta!
Col figlio tuo, sicuro, verso me;
Scavalcando i giunchi correrai.
Pel tuo cammino, senza tregua,
T'involerai sul tuo destriero:
Al par di falco, fenderai lo spazio.
La strada io t'accenno.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: (nella tenda).
Orsù: t'affretta omai.
Lo vuole il ciel.
(Ovlour esce).
(Kontchakovna entra correndo e si ferma davanti alla tenda di Vladimiro. Ella è grandemente agitata).

KONTCHAKOVNA: Ascolta! . . . L'amor tuo si dissolve?
Mi vuoi fuggir?
Il tuo segreto io so.
Tu fuggi con tuo padre:
Nè mai ti rivedrò.
Ebben: Coraggio avrai di dar
Tal strazio a un cuore,
Che vive sol per te?!
Non sai che senza
Te mai più la vita
Avrà sorriso alcun?
Rispondi a me.
A te sia incatenato il mio destino
Con te conducimi.
Io sfiderò con te la morte senza orror.
La libertà 1 l'onor, là vita t'offrirò.
Mi vuoi con te siccome schiava?
Sii mio re, mio re.
Sii tu Dio.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Addio, mio dolce amor;
Di partir m'è forza
Perchè mi vuoi tener?
L'onor mi chiama lontan di qua;
Ma il cor rimane a te:
Fedele a te
Ed ora, addio.
S'accende già di gloria il ciel.
Addio! Addio!
(Il Principe Igor esce dalla sua tenda).

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Che intendo?!
Vladimiro indugia?!
L'onor ti chiama già
Che mai t'avvince?
Sei dunque tu lo schiavo di costor?
Vuoi tu tradire i tuoi?

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Ah no! . . . Addio!

OVLOUR: Prince, make ready soon for your flight. The people all are drunk; the guard is fast asleep. The horses are saddled, and I will wait for you and Prince Vladimir across the river.
(Softly).
When all is still I'll whistle, and when you hear me, hasten to the river. Like the swift, stealthy ermine run through the tall reeds, swim across like a duck, and then without delay, spring on your eager horses like leopards, and like falcons cleave the air, hidden by shades of night.

PRINCE IGOR: (from within the tent). Go, get the horses, we will be ready.
(Exit Ovlour. Konchakovna rushes in, wildly agitated, and stands outside Prince Vladimir's tent).

KONCHAKOVNA: Vladimir!
Can it be true that you would flee
And leave me here alone?
O I entreat you love!
Your plans are known to me.
You think by midnight to be free,
You, and your father too,
To see your Russian home again
Before the day breaks anew.
But, ah, can it be true
That I have loved you thus in vain?
Beloved, sweetheart, say,
You could not deceive me;
You will not ride away
And leave me broken-hearted?
O take me with you, dear,
For you, I'll brave all risks
Without a qualm of fear.
I give you all—my liberty,
My love, my honor are for you
I will not ask to be your bride,
But take me as your slave,
And I'll be happy, at your side.

VLADIMIR: Farewell, farewell, beloved!
The time has come to part,
For fate and duty tear me from here
O breaking heart,
Eyes blinded with salt tears,
O cruel fears!
How can I speak that word:
Farewell, my love, farewell.
O Princess, hold me not.
Farewell for ever more,
Farewell!
(Prince Igor appears at his tent-door).

PRINCE IGOR: Vladimir, son!
What does this mean?
Princess, what have you done?
A captive, son, have you thrown in your lot
With the Polovtsy, and forgot your land?

VLADIMIR: Ah no!—Farewell!

KONTCHAKOVNA: O tu crudel, il cor ti manca.
Io: grande, amata e fiera,
Regina di beltà or qua,
Per te straziata
Son tua prigioniera.
Ove la mia virtù?!
O resta me vicin.
Crudel! Ascolta la preghiera!

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: O quale lotta in me!
Supremo angor!
Mi strazia il cor questa sua voce.
Il suo dolor sconvolge la ragion.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Su via, partiam.
Lo vuole il ciel.
Fa cor!
Con me dovrai partir.
L'onor lo vuol: fuggiam.
La patria nostra ci chiamò.

KONTCHAKOVNA: Oime! No sai com'io t'adoro?

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Amore vince nel mio cor!
O qual dolor!

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Ci abbatte il disonor.
Non odi?
Laggiù, ne l'ombra . . .
E già il segnal!
Non più indugiar.
Orsù: Con tutto ardor.
Dover di patria che chiamò.
Su, via, ritorna in te.
Non indugiar!
Ritorna in te.
Orsù: fuggiam.

KONTCHAKOVNA: Rimani ancor, se vuoi or fuggiamo insiem.

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Soffro oimè troppo sacro è l'amor.
(Il Principe Igor vent entraner Vladimir).

KONTCHAKOVNA: Io sfiderò per te la morte senza orror!
La libertà, l'onor, la vita t'offrirò!
Qual grazia val per farmi amar
Sempre da te?

VLADIMIR IGOREVITCH: Deh! lasciami un po' calmar il pianto suo;
Il suo dolor!
Soave pianto virginal!

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Su, via, no più . . .
Deh vien! Fuggiam!

KONTCHAKOVNA: Ebben . . . or lancerò l'allarme!

KONCHAKOVNA: O, do not leave me!
This is my earnest prayer to you!
You know: I am a daughter of the steppes,
Child of the desert and of liberty!
My father is the greatest of the Khans;
In all the world there's none so proud as he;
And I am of his race, yet bend the knee;
And I entreat you at your feet,
Do not leave me!

VLADIMIR: I have not strength to part from you;
My soul's consumed with love of you,
And my heart burns like a furnace,
And in my mind an agony.

PRINCE IGOR: O tear yourself away,
My son, and come with me!
'Tis duty leads the way,
Our land has need of you.
Would you see Russia fall?

KONCHAKOVNA: Do you not know how I adore you?

VLADIMIR: Love conquers my heart!
What sorrow!

PRINCE IGOR: Do you hear? The signal for our flight!
Ovlour awaits us, we've no time to waste.
Leave him, Princess! Vladimir, do the right.
Come, follow me, our lives depend on haste.
A moment longer and we are undone.
Conquer thy passion, do your duty, son.

KONCHAKOVNA: Remain, and if you will, we'll flee together!

VLADIMIR: Alas I suffer, for love is too sacred!
(Prince Igor tries to drag Vladimir away).

KONCHAKOVNA: Beloved, stay with me!
Or let me share your fate!
I do not fear whatever betides.
Will you forget your mate
And drive her from your side?

VLADIMIR: O father, let me dry her tears!
One long last kiss, one tender word,
To soothe her grief and calm her fears!

PRINCE IGOR: Enough, enough, son! Come . . .
Farewell!

KONCHAKOVNA: Well then, I'll give the alarm.

IL PRINCIPE IGOR: (scappando). Addio!
(Ella batte più volte sulla lama di ferro sospesa. I "Polovcesi" accorrono da diverse parti).

KONNTCHAKOVNA: All'armi Igor fuggi
Da Ovlour traditi siam,.
Che il figlio suo rimanga qua.

UNA PARTE DEL CORO: ("I Polovcesi"). Le vostre freccie, a presto sella.
Seguiam le traccie del fiero Igor!
Presto, presto, presto!
La guerra si raccenda ancor,
E il giovin Vladimir morir dovrà.
Morte a lui! Morte a lui!

KONTCHAKOVNA: O no, pietà v'implora!
Pietà per Vladimir!
Io vo' morir per lui.
La vita mia prendete.
Su me ricada tutta l'ira vostra,
Ma lui non fate, oimè, morir!
Per lui sia grazia,
Ei m'appartien.

I POLOVCESI: Morte, Russia, morta à tuoi signor!
(Accorrono i "Polovcesi").

PRIMO GRUPPO: Schiumeggia irrompe il chiaro Don!
(Accorrono i "Polovcesi").

SECONDO GRUPPO: E l'onda invita rugge ancor!

PRIMO GRUPPO: Ove il nemico seguirem?
I duci già deciso avran.

SECONDO GRUPPO: La volontà sia respettata:
Ecco e qua. Kontchak!
(Entrano Kontchak e i khans).

IL KHAN KONTCHAK: Che avviene? Che vuol dir?
Piangi tu? E perchè mai?

CORO DI POLOVCESI: Gia lunge e il fier Igor!
Fu Ovlour che ci tradì.
A gran galoppo omai,
Ne l'ombra l'inseguiam!

IL KHAN KONTCHAK: Grazia a Vladimiro,
Così mio voler!

CORO DEI KHANS: È pronto ognun ad obbedir;
Ma periglioso è l'inseguir.
Igor su noi può ripiombar.
L'orgoglio suo punir dobbiam.
E forse il figlio
Suo per qual cammino sfuggirà,
Ma prima deve soggiacer
Ai nostri colpi di staffil.
Su va Kontchak decidi tu;
Col nuovo sol vedrai cader

PRINCE IGOR: (hurries away).
Farewell!
(Konchakovna strikes an alarm gong several times. The Polovtsy come running in from every side).

KONCHAKOVNA: Prince Igor has escaped,
Ovlour has betrayed us.
Let his son remain here!

THE POLOVTSY: To horse, to horse without delay,
Let fly a rain of arrows sharp!
Pursue them over the steppe.
Haste like the wind:
Bind young Vladimir to the nearest tree
And pierce his heart with arrows.

KONCHAKOVNA: Ah, no! You must not touch him,
I will not let him go!
The young Prince must be saved.
But slay me if you will,
Let the first arrow pierce my heart,
For I will gladly die with him,
But never give him up to you!

THE POLOVTSY: Death to all the Russian captives!
Show no mercy!
(Groups of Polovtsy come rushing in)

FIRST GROUP: The river Don is rising fast!
(Polovtsy come rushing in).

SECOND GROUP: The flood is rising every moment,
We cannot follow them across the river!

FIRST GROUP: We will follow the leaders.

SECOND GROUP: Call all the Khans in council
That we may hear what they advise.
See, here comes Khan Konchak!
(Enter Konchak and other Khans).

KONCHAK: What means this noise?
Daughter, why are you here?

POLOVTSY: Prince Igor has escaped,
Ovlour has played the traitor,
He saddled two swift steeds,
And has ridden away with the Prince.

KONCHAK: Do not harm the Prince.
These are my orders!

THE KHANS: Konchak, listen to our words, hear what we think.
In all affairs of warfare we have followed counsels and commands without a protest.
But now that the old falcon has flown home,
This young bird soon will follow. It were wise,
While still we have him, to make sure of him—

Dei prigionier l'odiato stuol.
Nessun di lor potrà sfuggir
Al nostro acciar sterminator!

IL KHAN KONTCHAK: No! Meglio assai così il falco tener
In pegno d'una pia fanciulla . . .
Ei forse può giovar. (A Vladimir).
Vien! Sii tu di mia famiglia,
Ti vo' donar la figlia mia
Ne' vostri sguardi amor scintilla,
E ride il cor.
(Ai Khans).
Or noi partiam.
Vittoria avrem.

I KHANS: A l'armi, orsù! Vittoria avrem. (Trombe sulla scena).

CORO DI POLOVCESI: Andiam! Andiam!
Andiam e de la Russa vincerem l'orgoglio.
Andiam!
Gloria a te, Signor!
(Trombe).

CALA IL SIPARIO

■ ATTO IV

S'alza il sipario e si vedono davanti i muri e la pubblica piazza della città di Poutivl. Comincia a spuntare il giorno. Jaroslavna è sola sulla terrazza alta sul muro.

JAROSLAVNA: Udirà lo sposo diletto il sospir
Che aleggia sul mar?
Del Danubio alle glauche, rive,
Come usignol il cor poserà:
Pel sonante sacro flutto,
Navigherà l'amore;
E così ne l'onda pura,
Guariran le sue ferite.
Vento di terror,
Perchè travolgi senza tregua?
Ai gagliardi eroi d' Igor,
Le frecce ancor sospingi!
Non sei sazio, vento fatale,
Di scagliar così.
Il tuo soffio che diffonde morte?
Tu il mar scuoti, e in tenebror
Gli muti il sorriso.
Senza tregua,
T'abbatti ognor sul mostranato petto!
Il pianto mio d'amor
Che al fiorir del sol
Dell'onda vapor l'azzurrita.
Almo sol, fattor di vita,
Tu che effondi e forza e amore,
Divo sol, perenne fiamma:
Muta a te mi prostro,

Send one sharp arrow quivering through his heart.
Believe us, it is good counsel that we give.
You know that we in warfare have followed
Your wise advice without demur or protest.
Now do not scorn our opinion: slay this swarm
Of Russian vermin before they all escape.

KONCHAK: No! If the old falcon has flown back to his nest,
We'll chain the young one here.
Give him a mate.
(To Prince Vladimir).
Vladimir, here behold your chosen wife!
You are no foe, but dear as any son.
(To the Khans.)
Tomorrow morning, burnish all your weapons, We'll march on Russia once again!

THE KHANS: To Russia! To fight our foes again!
(Trumpets).

THE POLOVTSY: To Russia we will march,
To fight the foe!
Glory to Khan Konchak!

CURTAIN

■ ACT IV

(The city walls and public Square in Poutivle. Daybreak. Yaroslavna is seen standing alone on the terrace of the wall).

YAROSLAVNA: Ah, still I grieve; ah, still my tears flow on,
I send my sorrow forth at dawn upon the breeze,
To him who tarries by the distant seas.
O, could I, like the cuckoo, fly along the banks
Of the blue Don,
Or dip my sleeve in Kayala's cool flood
And wash the blood from his wounded body!
O, breeze, O boisterous breeze,
Why do you blow across the plains?
Do you bear the cruel arrows
Against the Prince's warriors?
O, breeze, O boisterous breeze,
Driving the clouds before you,
Rocking the ships upon the waves,
Why do you blow so long
Across the plains and scatter
My joys like autumn leaves?
Flow on Dneiper, broad and blue,
Beloved, famous river, flow!
Bring my dear one home to me,
Then I'll weep no more at dawn.
Or send my sorrow forth upon the Obliati, ne l'ignavia,

Essi impolorano la morte;
E i tuoi raggi fanno strazio
Fra tanto squallor?!
(Un gruppo di villici passa cantando. Jaroslavna siede assorta nei suoi pensieri).

CORO DI VILLICI: (Dietro le scene; poi si avvicina a poco a poco). Qual fragor selvaggio di rea tempesta Sembra di lontan minacciar?!
Passa Gzak il gran guerrier!
Sembra di lontan l'uragano?
È il grande guerrier, il gran guerrier, Il vincitor!
(Compariscono sul palcoscenico).
Nero corvo fendi l'orizzonte
Morte stride ogni
Ella vien!
No; no: è Gzak che vuol guerra ancor
E un lupo scarno che brama sangue
E va seguendo il corvo al vol?
(Morendo in lontananza).
No, è Gzak, il vincitor,
Che vuol guerra ancor!

JAROSLAVNA: (contemplando i dintorni devastati). Segni ovunque di terror!
Tutto è squallido, tutto qui supplica!
Non più messi biondeggiar vedrem laggiù.
La giovinezza più non canterà l'amore.
Non più.
(Guardando fisso in lontananza).
Di lontan due cavalier veder mi pare
Par che un d'essi sia guerrier polacco.
Di novella strage hanno sete ancor?
Il crudel flagello chi potrà mai frenar?
Al fin Poutivl s'arrenderà
Ma l'altro nobile, di nostro sangue par.
Sì, sì: un Russo egli è di certo.
Da gran signor è l'armatura;
Auster egli ha l'atteggiamento,
Un principe soccorso offrirmi vuole?
Mi reca libertà?! . . . Sogno ancor?!
Che penso? . . . Che oso? . . .
Il sogno m'esalta . . .
Qual miraggio! Ah!
Illusa io son! Qual follia! . . .
Invan io spero . . . No!
(Con strascico di voce).
È lui! Sì: riconosco il buon Igor
È l'eroe diletto, che ritorna.

breeze
To him who tarries by the distant seas.
O sun, resplendent sun,
Shining brightly in the heavens,
Warming all things, all caressing,
Making all the world rejoice!
Why upon the burning steppe,
Where no cooling waters flow,
Did you torture them with thirst;
Exhaust them with your ruthless glow?
Tell me sun?
(A crowd of village folk appears singing. Yaroslavna is absorbed in thought).

CHORUS: (Behind the scenes; then gradually approaches). It was not the furious tempest-wind that brought this great calamity;
It was Khan Gzak who wrought all the evil.
It was not a croaking raven, grim and black,
Foretold that this should be;
Our homes were burnt and ravaged by Khan Gzak,
It was not a hungry wolf, so fierce and grey,
That scattered all our flocks;
It was Khan Gzak who bore our herds away.
(They pass out).

YAROSLAVNA: (Gazing over the lands laid waste). How ruinous and sad the land appears! The hamlets burned, the fields are bare and black, the crops down-trodden—wasted by the foe! It has been long since songs of gladness echoed over the land!
(She gazes over the distant plains).
Whom do I see in the distance?..
Two horsemen approaching, and one is dressed like the Polovtsy . . .
Surely the foe will not return again so soon. God preserve us! What will now become of us! Poutivle will be taken from us too! . . . The other rider is attired like a Russian, and does not seem to be a common soldier; his bearing, his fine steed, his whole appearance bespeak high birth and power. It is some Russian Prince who visits us. Who can it be? Where does he come from? I do not know . . . I cannot guess . . . It is strange . . . mysterious . . .
Ah! Impossible! . . . Am I dreaming, or under a spell? . . . No!
(with emotion). Those are Prince Igor's features . . . the dear familiar face and figure! It is the Prince! My love comes back to me!
(Prince Igor rides in, accompanied by Ovlour. He dismounts and rushes to Yaroslavna. Ovlour leads away the horses).

Vive ancor! Odo la sua voce. (Il Principe Igor compare sulla scena, a covallo; è accompagnato da Ovlour. Il principe scende dal cavallo e corre verso Jaroslavna. Ovlour s'allontana con i cavalli).
JAROSLAVNA: Ah! Sei tu ch'io recingo! Ah, risalgo a la vita Piango, fremo! qual prodigio!	YAROSLAVNA: It is he, my homing mate, my love! My long-desired husband, my life, my all!
IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Il dolor già dilegua. Ah! sei tu ch'io recingo! Sul mio cor posa ancor: Ch'io t'adori.	PRINCE IGOR: Greeting, my joy, my love! Greeting, light of mine eyes! Once more we are together, my wife, my own!
JAROSLAVNA: Ah! Sogno di dolcezza!	YAROSLAVNA: Can it be true? O say it is not a dream!
IL PRINCIPE IGOR: A te grazie, o ciel.	PRINCE IGOR: I give thanks to heaven!
JAROSLAVNA: Sognar credei: Sia lode al ciel. Son io, son io, che vivo ancor! L'aspetto tuo non mi tradì Igor, Sei tu che stringo al sen. Io temo sempre di sognar, Poi che m'accadde ancor. Ma no, sei tu; non è illusion: Il tuo cor sento vibrar col mio.	YAROSLAVNA: Can it be true! It is no misleading gleam O witchcraft my poor heart deceiving. You have come back . . . It is sweet beyond believing! How often in sleep I saw you by my side, But now I am awake . . . O swear to me, my senses have not lied, Or, love, my heart will break!
IL PRINCIPE IGOR: È ver, non è illusion la tua. Son io, che sempre a te pensai, Che sempre udii la voce tua errar Pel mare di dolor.	PRINCE IGOR: It is no dream, beloved You hold my hand, and I grasp yours. Once more into your eyes I gaze, And hear your voice as in past days.
JAROSLAVNA: A te vicin non temo più. Alfin tu sei, mio santo amor: E il cor mi esulta di dolcezza. Dal ciel sei sceso ancor.	YAROSLAVNA: My love, my husband, you have come Back to your people and your home; With your return my sorrows cease, You bring happiness and peace.
IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Dolce sposa, sacrata sei; In eterno t'amerò Raggi a noi verserà Dal ciel l'amor.	PRINCE IGOR: My wife, my darling, I have come Back to my people and my home; The captive's shame, the wounds, the pain, Vanish at sight of you again.
JAROSLAVNA: Come i dì passai fremendo! E credeva udirne l'etra palpitar L'arcana voce che mi dava fede ancor. Lungamente il cuore mio s'è nutrito Di speranza; ben fiammeggia Or più santa la mia fede e l'offro a te. E a te così fedel resterò. E vinto hai tu?	YAROSLAVNA: Once more I see your dear face, Once more I hear your voice, my Prince, With your return my sorrows cease, You bring happiness and peace. Did you conquer?
IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Amata sposa io ben tornai glorioso E fier di tua virtù. Omai lontan non più languirò, Mio dolce amor.	PRINCE IGOR: No more waiting; no alarms; Once more I hold you in my arms! Beloved wife, friend of my choice, Seeing you, heart and soul rejoice!
JAROSLAVNA: Il ciel si placherà di minacciar così. Sol nostro amato suol, Benigno un nuovo Sol di gloria raggerà: Più bella fiorirà la santa libertà.	YAROSLAVNA: Husband, by troth long plighted, Friend and husband, heaven-united, Long my heart has ached for you A new sun will shine for us And liberty will be more sweet.
IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Fuggito dal campo son, E dal furor nemico io vo, D'assalto cercar di liberar La patria nostra e te. In nome del nostro onor, O prodi guerrier a me; Che forse ancor saremo vincitor.	PRINCE IGOR: Secretly I made my escape, When I learnt that Gzak had been here. I fled to save my land from ruin, And send a rallying cry from end to end Of suffering Russia. I came to raise Another army, and to rouse the Princes, That we may drive our foemen back once more.
JAROSLAVNA: Qual suprema gioia sento Ne l'udir la tua parola! O conforto sovrumano, Di sperar tu vinca ancor. A al fonte della vita, Come un dì si nutre il core, A la fonte della vita, Torna azzurro il nostro ciel.	YAROSLAVNA: You did escape at dusk, Despite the heathen Khan, You did break from your captivity? But you were wounded sore, Say, do you suffer now? My love, my homing mate, O let me comfort you!
IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Dolce sposa, io t'amerò, Sin che torni a noi l'april. Non più timor vincino a me, Ne tristi sogni di dolor.	PRINCE IGOR: Beloved wife, friend of my choice, Seeing you, heart and soul rejoice! Gone the hours of evil dreams, Gone the sad and anxious thoughts.
JAROSLAVNA E IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Passati sono i foschi dì, Il tuo destin placato s'è. Or ne l'azzurro brillerà Un nuovo sol di redenzion, Io sul tuo petto sognerò La santa libertà.	PRINCE IGOR AND YAROSLAVNA: Forgotten all the hours of pain, Forgotten all the weary days, For now joy floods our lives again, As when the heavy storm clouds lift And through a bright and widening rift The sun pours down his hopeful rays.
IL PRINCIPE IGOR: Ancor gli eroi mi ascolteran Con sacro ardor, combatterem. Guerrieri a me! Sterminio sia del fier invasor.	PRINCE IGOR: I'll a rallying cry abroad, And raise another valiant host, I will not let the heathen boast. This time I'll crush the Tartar horde!
JAROSLAVNA: Il ciel d'amor splenderà. (Il Principe Igor e Jaroslavna si diriggono lentamente verso la cittadella. Durante la canzone seguente dei giocatori e dei ‘‘Goudok’’ il principe e la principessa stanno davanti alla porta della cittadella, intenti alla loro conversazione. Poi scompariscono dietro la porta). (Entrano Erochak e Skoula, tutti e due quasi ubbriachi. Essi cantano e suonano).	YAROSLAVNA: Heaven of love will shine. (Prince Igor and Yaroslavna walk slowly towards the Citadel. While the goudok players sing the following song, they stand by the gateway, absorbed in talk, and then disappear within). (Enter Eroshka and Skoula, both rather tipsy).
EROCHKA: Or fiammeggia il sole; Tutto a noi sorride! Certo chi godrà, sempre vincerà! Non abbiam pene, non abbiam noie! Igor non potrà certo ritornar, Sempre i vincitor l'anno in schiavitù. Senza libertà presto ei morirà Ei lasciò, stolto, nel voler guerra, Tutto il suo tesor e le genti sue.	EROSHKA: Now the sun is shining, Everything is smiling, A new Prince has come! Igor is far away, He must stay in prison, Since all his warriors fell, We need not weep for him The Khan will treat him well; But keep all your pity For those who in the fight Were butchered by the foe.

Il fiume schiumeggiando, l'ha con se tolto:
E chi piomba giù non può risalir.
E il denar vola, senza far chiasso:
Chi non fingerà non saprà regnar.
A la Kajala il signor si spinse;
Ma con tal dolor, ci lasciò l'onor.
Tutta Russia afferma ch'egli ha mal oprato.
Igor ne l'inganno si trovò sospinto:
Ora ognum piange e non più spera.
La fatal illusion in Igor vanì!
Si leverà dai borghi dai villaggi,
Dalle rive del Danubio la condanna eterna.
S'ei tornasse ancora via di qua si caccerà.
Sia gloria al gran Signor
Che ci lasciò schiacciar!
Quel prodigioso Igor, quel sovrumano Igor.

SKOULA: Che guerrier prode!
Che campion raro!
Ma veh! chi è là?!
Io sogno!
(S'interrompono stupiti, vedendo da lontano Il Principe e Jaroslavna, che entrano nella cittadella).

EROCHKA: Chi? Lui?!

SKOULA: Egli torna?! Che mai vuol dir?

EROCHKA: Ah! fatalità! Ebbri siam noi!
Il principe qua!
Ed or che avverrà?
Facciam eco agli evviva!
Ahi! Ahi!
Davvero non c'è da ridere!
Bel caso!
Noi saremo impiccati!

SKOULA: (facendo l'atto di'suonare). Presto, suona . . .

EROCHKA: Per qual ragion suonar tu vuoi?

SKOULA: Presto, suona!
Fate festa al possente gran signore.
Tutti qui! correran così,
Vedrai, d'allarme al suon.
(Entrambi afferrano le funi delle campane e si danno a suonore l'allarme).

EROCHKA E SKOULA: Helà, al suon davver ognun verrà!
Di qua, di là, di su, di giù, vicin,
Lontan, venite or via così: correte qua!

SKOULA: Helà! Presto tutto qua!
Ognun di voi godrà, grazia al ciel!
(Il popolo accorre in folla da diverse parti).

CORO: O qual fragor! Dite su.
Chi ne minaccia? Ah!
Che vuol dire ciò.
(con enfasi).
Via, accorrete per di qua!
Indegni, basta, non è tempo di celiar.
Certo: trincato avete voi,
Già sin d'or molto vin!
Zitti, quanto, già bevuto han molto vino
Di buon mattin!
Via dia qua, maledetti briccon.
È ben meglio che andiate a dormire!
A la tana presto, birbe via di qua!
(con enfasi).
Quale prodigio!
Quanto strepito!

SKOULA: No, no! Questa ebbrezza, certo
Non ha per causa il vino!
Noi salutiamo qui sua grazia.

CORO: Ma che? S'annuncia il principe?
Che il ciel maledica!

EROCHKA: È il nostro Igor che inoltrasi.
Sì. Egli è qua: grazia al ciel.

SKOULA: Or la gioia è immensa!

CORO: No, vile; tu mentisci ancor.

SKOULA: Guardate laggiù: chi s'inoltra.
Volgesi! E il possent Igor.
Miratelo ei sale al Kremlin:
Egli ha per mano la sua diletta.
Parla con gli anziani suoi Bojardi.
Ah!

EROCHKA: Viva!

CORO: È pur lui sì!
(Suonano nuovamente).
Presto: suonate or tutte le nostre campane:
Che qui dovrà la folla si raduni.
È il nostro eroe: rinascente sol!
Ei riscende a noi dal ciel!
(La folla aumenta sempre più. Alcuni si avvicinano a Ovlour e lo caricano di domande).
Suonate le nostre campane,
Che questo è glorioso dì!
Ah! Viva Igor! Gran Signor!
(Suonano di nuovo).

EROCHKA: Vittoria, vittoria, vittoria!
Fiero ci ridona il suo sorriso,
Ed irradia il nostro cor!
(Entrano i bojardi e i villici).

BOJARDI E VECCHI: Placa alfin la tetra sorte,
Dio, che vedi il nostro stato:
Il buon Igor è tornato,
E ci irradia il nuovo sol!

IL POPOLO: Oda il cielo i nostri voti
E ridoni la speranza,
Molto abbiam per te sofferto,
Santa libertà!

It was Igor who in spite
Of warnings in the sky
Would still go warning.
And on the sandy plain
Where never waters flow
There perished our great host;
The army Igor lost
We shall never see again.
With pots of Russian gold,
This Prince so wise and bold
Built bridges at great cost
That never have been crossed;
For at the Kayala,
That mighty floods did swell,
The troops were left to drown,
And with his men went down
Prince Igor's fame as well.
Therefore all the land,
From Danube to the distant sea,
The Russian people all deride
The Prince who caused their misery.

SKOULA: A better Prince has come!
Igor is far away,
But who goes there? I dream.
(They suddenly break off in terror, having caught sight of the Prince and Princess as they enter the Citadel).

EROSHKA: Look! Look yonder!

SKOULA: The Prince!

EROSHKA: Oh, mercy on us!
It is all over for us now!
What's to be done?
Oh, oh, our heads will be chopped off!
We shall be executed, friend!
Drawn and quartered!

SKOULA: (making him a sign to pull). Ring the bell! Ring!

EROSHKA: Ring! What for?

SKOULA: Why, to save our lives, our skins, our necks!
To fill our bellies, too, with food and wine.
Ring, rouse the people, sound the alarm!
(They both seize the bell ropes and pull vigorously).

SKOULA and EROSHKA: Come here, good folk! Hurry, Hurry.
Run quick to hear the joyous tidings!
Assemble all you orthodox,
We have good news for you!
(Enter the people from every side).

SKOULA: Come, quickly, you shall all have joy!

CHORUS: What a noise! What's the matter?
Is the town on fire?
What's it all about?
Answer . . . quick!
(with emphasis).
It is those drunken players!
No one but those rascals! Come down,
You guzzling swine, cease to plague us . . .
Wait, hear what they have to say!
No, turn them out . . . Send them packing!
Come down! Be off! Get you gone!
What mystery. What noise!

SKOULA: No, no, I am not drunk with wine. We are welcoming the Prince.

CHORUS: What! Your Galitsky, the traitor?
Let him be accursed of Heaven!

EROSHKA: Nay! We speak not of perfidious Galitsky,
But of our lawful Prince—Igor.

SKOULA: Igor, son of Svietoslav!

CHORUS: You both are raving mad!
Nonsense!

SKOULA: You don't believe us?
Then look there,
By the Citadel. Do you see him now?
He passed a moment since, with the Princess.
He is going to the Kremlin.
See! That's his helmet! There's his horse!
And there's the Polovets who brought him home. Look!

EROSHKA: Long live the Prince!

THE CROWD: Prince, Prince, our Prince! Aye, ring the bells!
(Ringing of bells).
Run quick and ask the Polovets
If in truth the Prince is here!
(The people crowd in in great numbers. A few go up to Ovlour and question him).
He has returned! It is true, the Prince, our father, has come home! . . .
Rejoice, give thanks!
(Enter the Boyards and Elders).

THE PEOPLE: Suddenly he has returned from captivity,
Igor has come to save us!

THE BOYARDS and ELDERS:
Now thanks be to God in Heaven,
To whom we have not prayed in vain,
Who turned our sorrow into joy
And brought our good Prince home again.

THE PEOPLE: Our Prince, from out of captivity
Has come back to his folk again;
Our Prince, our father, long waited,
Takes up his happy reign.

EROCHKA E SKOULA: Andar dobbiam in folla,
Per evocarlo ancora.
Apparirà di certo a l'alto de la torre.
Tutti in folla andiam plaudenti!
Andiam! Andiam!

IL POPOLO: Andiam! Andiam! ancor cantiam, cantiam
Il saluto andiamo a dare
E plaudisci o sacra terra,
Che giulivi in nobil ritmo,
Cantiam viva Igor!

BOJARDI E VECCHI: Ah! E da noi che deve udire
De la gioia il primo urrà!?
Tutti incontro noi moviamo:
Passa il principe di qua.
(I vecchi e i bojardi si diriggono verso la cittadella).

IL POPOLO: Ben dicesti, lo si attenda,
Pure qua.
I costumi de' nostri avi rispettiam.
(La folla si accrece a poco a poco. Entrano le donne con vesti eleganti. Alcuni escono dalle loro case portando del pane e del sale).
Si preparin per la festa molli
Al vento veli d'or.
Adorniam le nostre teste!
Inni sciolga il novo sol!
Si preparin per la festa molli
Ai venti veli d'or.

SKOULA and EROSHKA: Haste, good folk, to meet him,
Haste to the Citadel,
Waste no time, go forth to greet him,
And wish Prince Igor well.

THE PEOPLE: Let all the people go to meet him,
To welcome our Prince home today;
Waste no time, but run to greet him.
Hail Prince Igor! Come away.

THE ELDERS and BOYARDS: Stay!
Let us go first, it is our right,
To give the Prince his due welcome,
Wait here, good people, within sight,
Until Prince Igor sends for you.
(The Elders and the Boyards go towards the citadel).

THE PEOPLE: The Elders are quite right, good friends,
We are not dressed to meet the Prince.
We shall have time before he sends
To deck us in our Sunday best.
(The crowd gradually grows in numbers. Enter women in holiday dress. Many people come out of their houses bearing the bread and salt—symbols of welcome).
Let us all look bright and gay,
Poutivle keeps a holiday,
Songs of welcome we must raise,

Adorniam le nostre teste!
Inni sciolga il novo sol!
Andiam tutti: precediam il buon Igor,
E gli s'offra il sacro pan e l'idromel.

EROCHKA: Ah! Viva, o Prence!
Viva il grande Igor!

SKOULA: Brindiam a te, signore nostro.
Lieti qui si beva ognora,
E di gloria sempre a te sorrida il cielo.

IL POPOLO: Placa alfin la tetra sorte,
Dio che vedi il nostro stato:
Il buon prence è tornato
E ci darà un novo sol!
Il saluto gli rechiamo
Che nessuno più paventi:
Igor sempre vittorioso,
Ci proteggerà
Già la speranza arride
Igor vola a la vittoria:
Il suo braccio sa la gloria!
Viva il grande signor nostro Igor!
(Il principe esce dal "Kremlin" con la principessa. Essi compariscono sulla pubblica piazza accompagnati da bojardi e da vecchi. Il principe saluta il popolo che lo receve con grida e applausi di gioia). Ei fiammeggia al nuovo sol!
Sia gloria a te, Igor!
A te! A te, Igor!

FINE

Make a song to praise our Prince.
The folk must offer bread and salt,
On a salver chased and fine;
We must proffer mead in plenty
And the best of wine.

EROSHKA: Hurrah for the Prince!
Hurrah for the great Igor!

SKOULA: Drink the Prince's health,
May he have long life and wealth.
The Prince has come!

THE PEOPLE: Let all the people greet the Prince,
Escaped from his captivity.
He is our little father kind,
He is our long-desired Prince.
Let all the people meet him,
Let all the people greet him,
Our noble Prince, our honored guest, Loyal people, bring your best!
Happier days begin for us,
Russia's future's glorious,
Now Prince Igor reigns once more!
(The Prince and Princess appear from the Citadel and move on towards the public Square, accompanied by the Elders and Boyards. The prince salutes the people who receive him with shouts of joy).
Long live our little father, long live our noble Prince!

La Wally (1892)

MUSIC BY ALFREDO CATALANI ■ LIBRETTO BY LUIGI ILLICA

This four-act opera, set to a libretto by Luigi Illica (based on Wilhelmine von Hillern's novel, Die Geyer-Wally), premiered at La Scala in Milan on January 20, 1892. Stromminger is celebrating his sixtieth birthday in the square of Hochstoff, a Tyrolese village. Among those gathered to honor him is Gellner, who is in love with Stromminger's daughter Wally. Wally's friend Walter, a minstrel, plays and sings. Giuseppe Hagenbach, son of an old rival of Stromminger's, arrives from Sölden and boasts of his hunting skills. Stromminger picks an argument with him, but Wally steps in. She falls in love with Hagenbach (who is promised to Afra); when her father discovers this he commands her to marry Gellner. Protesting, she departs for Sölden where the people are celebrating a local holiday. Wally appears haughty and cold; Hagenbach wagers that he will kiss her during the dance. Knowing nothing of this, she agrees to dance with him and lets him kiss her; when she learns that she has been the subject of his bet, she vows revenge. She decides to marry Gellner on condition that he murder Hagenbach. Up in the mountains, Gellner pushes Hagenbach over the edge of a cliff. Wally calls for help. She climbs down into the ravine and rescues the injured Hagenbach. Wally relinquishes him to Afra, and disappears into the mountains. Walter follows, pleading with her to return to the valley, but she refuses. Hagenbach realizes that he is in love with Wally and goes to find her. As they embrace and sing of their future life together a snowstorm begins to swirl around them. Suddenly an avalanche thunders down the mountain, burying Giuseppe. Wally throws herself over the precipice.

■ ATTO PRIMO

Il Paesaggio: L'HOCHSTOFF.—Largo piazzale ingombro da tavole.—A sinistra la casa dello Stromminger; a destra l'alpestre paesaggio sparso di case e di pini.—Nel fondo le altre case dell'Hochstoff in mezzo alle quali serpeggiando passa la strada; poi, più alto, un ponte che unisce due rupi gigantesche dominanti l'abisso profondo dove scorre l'Ache.—A capo del ponte un grande Crocifisso dinanzi al quale pende una lampada.—Un sentiero tortuoso, per curve ora dolci, ora aspre, tracciato fra i massi che lo frastagliano, sale alto, ora scomparendo, ora apparendo improvvisamente, e si smarrisce fra le ardite ineguaglianze del paesaggio.—Nell'ultimo fondo le altissime vette del Murzoll e del Similaun coperte di neve.

Lo STROMMINGER festeggia il suo settantesimo anno; beve in mezzo ad Alpigiani, Cacciatori, Pastori e Contadini suoi ospiti.—Tavole imbandite, sparse pel piazzale.—Nel fondo un bersaglio; Vincenzo Gellner lo abbatte in onore dello Stromminger con un ardito colpo di carabina.—Nel fondo del piazzale danzano allegramente Fanciulle e Cacciatori.—Gruppi di Contadine stanno loro intorno.—Lo Stromminger, all'alzarsi della tela, è seduto; egli è allegro e un po' alticcio.

■ ACT I

THE SCENE: HOCHSTOFF.—A large square covered with tables. To the left STROMMINGER'S house; to the right, the Alpine scene with houses and pine trees here and there. In the background, the other houses of Hochstoff, between which the street winds in and out; then, higher up, a bridge which connects two gigantic cliffs overlooking a deep abyss where flows the Ach. At the end of the bridge, a large crucifix, before which hangs a lamp. A winding path, laid out between the rocks which cut it, rises now by gentle and now by abrupt curves, and is lost among the hazardous uneven parts of the landscape. In the furthest background, the very high summits of Mts. Murzoll and Similaun, covered with snow.

STROMMINGER is celebrating his 60th year; he is drinking amid the mountaineers, hunters, shepherds and peasants—his guests. Set tables are standing here and there on the square. In the rear, a target; VINCENZO GELLNER shot it off in honor of STROMMINGER, by a bold shot from his carbine. In the rear of the square, girls and hunters are dancing gaily. Groups of peasant women are standing around them. STROMMINGER, at the rising of the curtain, is seated; he is jolly and slightly tipsy.

STROMMINGER: (all'ardito colpo di Vincenzo Gellner, si leva dalla sua poltrona e corre a lui abbracciandolo.) Bravo, mio Gellner! . . .

ALCUNI: (sentenziando.) Bel colpo davvero! . . .

STROMMINGER: (ironico.) Ho inteso dir che a Sölden v'abbia un tale
Che si vanta il più destro cacciatore
E sdegna alter . . .
(indica sorridendo il bersaglio atterrato da Gellner.)
que' facili bersagli! . . .

GELLNER: (cupo.) Sì
l'Hagenbach! . . .

STROMMINGER: (ridendo più fortemente.) Lui proprio! . . . Or mi ricordo
Ch'io ne conobbi il padre . . . un orgoglioso . . .
(ma volendo Gellner abbuiarsi in volto, tronca il suo discorso.)
Al diavol l'Hagenbach e quei di Sölden! . . .
(trascina Gèllner a bere e beve primo.)
A te, mio Gellner! . . .

ALCUNI: (attorniandoli e bevendo.) Bevi! . . .

ALTRI: Evviva Gellner! . . .
(Un giovanetto entra dalla destra. È WALTER, suonatore di cetra, cantore di fole e di leggende.)

STROMMINGER: (vendendolo.)
Che cerchi, piccol Walter? . . .

STROMMINGER: (At the bold shot of VINCENZO GELLNER, STROMMINGER rises from his easy chair, runs up and embraces him.) Bravo, my Gellner! . . .

SOME: (judging.) Fine shot indeed!

STROMMINGER: (ironically.) I heard it said that at Sölden there is one who boasts of being the most skilful hunter and haughtily disdains . . .
(points smilingly at the target shot off by GELLNER.)
these easy targets! . . .

GELLNER: (thoughtfully.)
Yes . . . Hagenbach!

STROMMINGER: (laughing louder.) Precisely he! Now I recollect that I knew his father—a very haughty man . . .
(but seeing GELLNER'S face grow gloomy, cuts short his conversation.)
To the devil with Hagenbach and the people of Sölden!
(drags GELLNER to drink and drinks first.)
Your health, Gellner!

SOME: (surrounding them and drinking.) Drink!

OTHERS: Long live Gellner!
(A young boy enters from the right. It is WALTER, a zither-player and singer of tales and legends.)

STROMMINGER: (catching sight of him.) What are you looking for, little Walter?

WALTER: (avanzandosi.) La tua Wally.

STROMMINGER: (crollando le spalle.) E chi può dirti ov'essa si nasconda? . . .
Se giù alla valle . . . oppur pe' gli alti greppi . . .
Sovra il ramo d'un pino o in una tana? . . .
Che brami tu da lei?

WALTER: Cantiamo insieme.

STROMMINGER: È un bel mestiere per seccar la gente! . . .
(alcuni ridono)

WALTER: (piccato.) Eppur, se udiste, una canzon conosco . . .
Una canzon sì bella . . .

LE DONNE: (a Walter, pressandolo da vicino.) Walter, cantala! . . .

WALTER: (continuando.)
. . . dell'Edelweiss è la canzone! . . .
È un jodler mesto, soave, blando . . . come un bacio.

LE DONNE: Canta!

LE FANCIULLE: (pregando.) Canta!

STROMMINGER: Pettegole, tacete!
(a Walter.)
Ebben, udiam codesta maraviglia!
(tutti circondano Walter; chi siede, chi si appoggia alle tavole; alcuni a gruppi; altri in disparte soli; Stromminger seduto nella sua poltrona; Gellner a cavalcioni di una panca.—Walter leva la cetra e canta:)

WALTER: Un dì, verso il Murzoll, una fanciulla, per un erto sentiero, moveva il piè leggiero; lenta ascendeva la montagna brulla!
Giù susurrava il vento; parea un lontano pianto tornava allegro canto e finiva in lamento! . . .
Co' raggi intanto l'avvolgeva il sole! . . . ed ella ognor salia la solitaria via Stavano intorno a lei le nubi sole! . . .
E poichè giunta fu su l'alto monte presso alla neve bianca la pellegrina stanca
Sciolse le trecce e chinò il bianco fronte.
E disse: O figlia candida di Dio risplender t'ho veduta giù, da la valle muta, non l'aspro m'atterrì lungo pendio,
a te qui son venuta, —esser siccome te bella desio!
Ed ecco intorno a lei livide e strane figlie apparire, larve sovrumane! . . .
Candide gocce la baciaro in fronte . . .
e la valanga scosse il vecchio monte! . . .
No, non piangete sulla triste sorte della sua morte . . .
Là, della neve ascosa nel candor

WALTER: (approching.) Your Wally.

STROMMINGER: (shrugging his shoulders.) And who can tell where she is hiding?
Whether down in the valley, or over the high precipices . . .
On the branch of a pine tree, or in a cave?
Why are you so eager to find her?

WALTER: We sing together.

STROMMINGER: That is a fine way of boring people!
(Some laugh.)

WALTER: (piqued.) But yet, if you only heard it . . . I know a song,
Such a beautiful song!

THE WOMEN: (to WALTER, crowding in on him.) Walter, sing it!

WALTER: (continuing.) The song is about the Edelweiss! It is a yodler, sad, gentle, mild—as a kiss.

WOMEN: Sing it.

GIRLS: (entreating.) Sing!

STROMMINGER: Be quiet, silly creatures!
(to WALTER.)
Well then, let us hear that wonder!
(All surround WALTER, who sits down, leans on a table; some in groups, others singly, apart, STROMMINGER seated in his easy chair. GELLNER astride a bench. WALTER lifts up the zither and sings.)

WALTER: One day, towards Mount Murzoll, a young girl tripped so lightly
Over a steep path.
She slowly climbed the ragged mountain!
The wind was murmuring,
It seemed a distant lamentation,
Turned into a joyful strain
And ended in weeping!
Meanwhile the sun enveloped her in its rays!
And she kept on climbing
Up the lonely road.
The clouds alone
Stood all around her!
And when she reached the mountain top,
Near the white snow,
The weary pilgrim
Opened her braids
And bowed down her snow-white forehead,
And said: O white daughter of God,
I saw you shining below,
From the silent valley.
The long, steep precipice
Frightened me not.
I came here to you.
I want to be as beautiful as you.
And behold, all around her
Appear strange and pale-faced maidens, vive mutata la fanciulla in fior! . . .

GELLNER: (con voce soffocata.) (Nuova questa canzon non torna a me! . . .
Ah, un'altra volta il cor per lei battè!)

STROMMINGER: Non c'è che dire! . . . È veramente bella!

TUTTI: Bella è davver!

WALTER: (a Stromminger.) Ebben . . .
(ride)
È di Wally!

STROMMINGER: Toh! Di mia figlia
(sorpreso)
Un canto così mesto?!
Giammai l'avvrei creduta! . . .

WALTER: Eppure è suo!

GELLNER: (Non m'ingannai! . . . Era il suo canto! . . . Ohimè, Freddo è il tuo cuore come neve, o Wally!)
(Dal fondo, oltre il piccolo ponte, echeggiano suoni di corni da caccia e si leva ontano un canto di cacciatori. Ed eccoli apparire pel sentiero, varcare il ponte e avviarsi avvicinandosi alla strada dell'Hochstoff. Alla testa procede un giovane ardito. Come un trofeo costui porta, avvoltolata intorno alla canna della carabina, una pelle di orso ancora gocciante sangue. È GIUSEPPE HAGENBACH di Sölden.)

I CACCIATORI: (ne l'alto.) Su cacciator, ritorna!—Cade il sol all'orizonte;—
Le nubi l'aquila fendo col vol e riede al monte;—
Di roseo si colora
l'alpe d'intorno;—
Echeggi il corno!
(squillano i corni.)

LE DONNE: (allegre.) Odi i corni echeggiar!

UOMINI: Son cacciatori che tornano!

STROMMINGER: (colla voce rauca dell'avvinazzato, sempre seduto.) Ben vengano! . . .

DONNE: Di Sölden
Sono di certo! . . . Allegro è il loro canto!
(i Cacciatori appaiono a capo del ponte.)

UOMINI: Eccoli là! . . . Vengono qua! . . .

DONNE: Già il ponte varcano! . . .

Superhuman phantoms!
White drops kissed her forehead . . .
And the avalanche shook the old mountain!
No, do not lament
The sad fate of her death.
There, hidden in the white snows
Lives the young girl
Transformed into a flower!

GELLNER: (in a choked voice.) (I don't care for this new song at all!
Ah, again my heart beats for her!)

STROMMINGER: There's no denying it, the song is really beautiful!

ALL: Beautiful, indeed!

WALTER: (to Stromminger.)
Well . . .
(laughs.)
It is composed by Wally!

STROMMINGER: Nonsense! By my daughter
(surprised.)
So sad a song?
I would never have believed it.

WALTER: And yet it is hers!

GELLNER: (I did not deceive myself! It was her song! Your heart is cold as snow, Wally!)
(From the rear, beyond the small bridge, hunting horns resound, and from a distance is heard a hunter's song. And they are seen approaching the street of Hochstoff. At the head, walks a bold youth. He carries, as a trophy, wound around the stick of his carbine, a bear's hide, still dripping blood. It is GIUSEPPE HAGENBACH, of Sölden.)

THE HUNTERS: (from above.)
Hunter return! The sun is setting in the horizon,
The eagle, in his flight
Cuts through the clouds,
And returns to the mountain;—
The Alps around grow rosy,
Let the horn resound!
(The horns resound.)

THE WOMEN: (Joyfully.) Listen to the resounding horns!

MEN: They are the returning hunters!

STROMMINGER: (in a voice hoarse with drink, still seated.)
Well, let them come!

WOMEN: They are surely from Sölden. Their song is joyous!
(The hunters appear at the end of the bridge.)

MEN: They are coming here!

WOMEN: They already cross the bridge!

TUTTI: (riconoscendoli.) È l'Hagenbach! . . .

STROMMINGER: (si lascia sfuggire un gesto di disprezzo, ma, volto, il capo e vedendo i Cacciatori venirsene all' Hochstoff, brontola con voce chioccia.) Colmi i bicchieri! . . .

I CACCIATORI: (varcano il ponte e si avvicinano all'Hochstoff.) Ritorna, o cacciator!—il camoscio abbandona già la vallata
e torna al covo;—il corno suona all'impazzata;
e il tramonto colora
l'Alpè rosea d'intorno;
Echeggi il corno! . . .
(entrano all'Hochstoff dando fiato nei loro corni, quasi trionfalmente.)

STROMMINGER: (levandosi con sforzo e andando loro incontro.) Salute, cacciatori! . . .

CACCIATORI: E a voi salute! . . .

STROMMINGER: E fu buona la caccia? . . .

CACCIATORI: Buona assai . . .

HAGENBACH: Guardate qua! (mostra allo Stromminger la pelle sanguinolente dell'orso.)

STROMMINGER: (da conoscitore.) Chi fece si bel colpo?

CACCIATORI: (ridendo.)
Chi? . . . E lo chiedete? . . . L'Hagenbach soltanto può tai colpi menar! . . .

HAGENBACH: (mostrando la pelle.) Un solo! . . . Al cuore! . . .
(Stromminger guarda muto e immusonito il segno del colpo, mentre intorno a lui un mormorio di ammirazione erompe da tutti.)

TUTTI: (all'Hagenbach.) Degli uccisori d'orsi il premio hai vinto! . . .

ALTRI: Son circa venti bei fiorini d'oro! . . .

HAGENBACH: (a questi sorridendo sprezzante, canticchiando un brano di vecchia canzone.)
Non è l'oro, no, che tenta
ai perigli il cacciator . . .
È la gloria che cimenta
gli ardimenti alti del cor! . . .
(Egli siede a cavalcioni di una tavola volgendo in parte le spalle senza accorgersene allo Stromminger; e narra.)
Su per l'erto sentier lentamente salìa . . .
e me tentava nella lunga vià della caccia il pensier! . . .
Quand'ecco un urlo fendere l'aër nevoso e, ritto, a me dinante ecco apparir codesto orso gigante!

ALL: (recognizing them.) It is Hagenbach!

STROMMINGER: (Makes a gesture of contempt, but, turning his head and seeing the hunters come toward Hochstoff, he mutters in a hoarse voice.) Fill the glasses!

THE HUNTERS: (cross the bridge and approach Hochstoff.) Return, o hunter! The chamois
Is already leaving the valley
And goes to its den . . .
The horn madly resounds;
And the sunset colors the Alps
With a rosy hue;
Let the horn resound!
(They enter Hochstoff, blowing their horns triumphantly.)

STROMMINGER: (getting up with difficulty and going towards them.) Greetings to you, hunters!

HUNTERS: And greetings to you too!

STROMMINGER: Well, was the hunt good?

HUNTERS: Good indeed!

HAGENBACH: Look here! (He shows STROMMINGER the bloody hide of the bear.)

STROMMINGER: (like a connoisseur.) Who shot so well?

HUNTERS: (laughing.) Who? You ask it? Who but Hagenbach could shoot so well?

HAGENBACH: (showing the hide.) One single shot! Straight to the heart!
(STROMMINGER looks silently and sullenly at the mark made by the shot, while around him break murmurs of admiration from all.)

ALL: (to Hagenbach.) You won the prize of bear-killers.

SOME: It is about twenty-five gold florins!

HAGENBACH: (smiling disdainfully at them, and humming a snatch of an old song.) No it is not the gold which tempts
The hunter to all dangers,
glory puts
His boldness and his daring to test.
(He sits astride a table, turning his back on STROMMINGER, without noticing what he is doing, and goes on.)
Slowly I climbed up the steep path
And on the long way,
The thought of the hunt was tempting me!
When hear! A howl
Burst through the snow-filled air,
And straight in front of me
Behold, appears this enormous bear!

ALCUNI: E allor? . . .

DONNE: Spavento!

ALTRI: (interrompendolo.) Sul sentier? . . .

TUTTI: E allora?

HAGENBACH: Mi arresto! . . . Guato! . . .
L'abisso ho a manca . . .
ed a destra un fossato
e la montagna bianca! . . .
Dunque forza è lottare per la vita chè già l'orso s'avanza! . . .
e me rafforza e incita
la suprema speranza! . . .
Snudo il coltello . . .
m'avvinghio all'irto vello! . . .
Così
(descrive col gesto e colle parole.)
In un laccio
d'un lungo abbraccio! . . .
Colle zanne ei m'afferra
ed avido le affonda . . .
e già-il sangue m'inonda
e già quasi m'atterra . . .

DONNE: (impaurite, rabbrividendo.) O supremo momento! . . .

UOMINI: (imponendo silenzio alle donne.) E allor? . . .

TUTTI: E allora? . . .

HAGENBACH: (rivolgendo le parole alla pelle sanguinosa.) O bruno re, perchè alla selva oscura rivolgi il guardo quasi a un mesto addio? . . .
Perchè in un lungo ed ultimo desìo la tua pupilla si scolora e oscura? . . .
(con immenso orgoglio, trionfante.)
Va per le valli un urlo di dolor! . . .
Rantola l'orso e ne' l'abisso muor! . . .
(come prima.)
Non è l'oro, no, che tenta
ai perigli il cacciator . . .
È la gloria che cimenta
gli ardimenti alti del cor! . . .

TUTTI: Evviva l'Hagenbach!
(agitano i cappelli.)

STROMMINGER: (provocatore.) Ma si direbbe che gli orsi son creati sol per voi!!

HAGENBACH: (volgendosi.) Che dir volete? . . .

STROMMINGER: Che v'è un uom che s'ebbe molte di queste glorie e . . . men iattanza!

HAGENBACH: (calmo.) E chi è costui? . . .
(un profondo silenzio si fa intorno ai due.)

STROMMINGER: (picchiando colla mano sul suo petto.) Stromminger!
(l'Hagenbach sorride, sorriso che finisce coll' esasperare completamente lo Stromminger che urla.)
Sebben vecchio

SOME: And then?

WOMEN: O horrors!

OTHERS: (interrupting him.) On the path?

ALL: And then?

HAGENBACH: I stop! I watch!
The abyss to the left,
To the right, a torrent
And the white mountain!
I must, therefore, struggle for life,
For the bear is already advancing!
And supreme hope
Strengthens and goads me on!
I unsheath my knife.
I clutch the thick hair!
Thus
(describes with gesture and words.)
In the tangle of a long embrace!
He grasps me with his clutches
And eagerly sinks them into me
And already blood is covering me,
And he almost drags me down . . .

WOMEN: (frightened, shuddering.) O, supreme moment!

MEN: (silencing the women.) And then?

ALL: And then?

HAGENBACH: (addressing his words to the bloody hide.) You brown bear king, why do you turn your gaze To the dark woods as for a sad farewell?
Why does your eye grow colorless and dark
In one long and last desire?
(with great pride, triumphantly.)
Let a howl of pain
Resound through the valleys!
Let the bear die in the abyss,
With death's rattle in his throat!
No, it is not the gold which tempts
The hunter to all dangers,
glory puts
His boldness and his daring to test!

ALL: Long live Hagenbach!
(They wave their hands.)

STROMMINGER: (You inciter.)
Really one would think
That bears are made only for you!

HAGENBACH: (turning around.) What do you mean?

STROMMINGER: That there is a man who had many such glories and boasted less about them!

HAGENBACH: (calmly.) And who is he?
(A deep silence grows around them.)

STROMMINGER: (striking his breast with his hand.)
Stromminger!
(HAGENBACH shows a smile, which ends in completely exasperating STROMMINGER, who shouts:) alla lotta ed alla caccia polsi e braccia ho forti ancor.

A voi dica la mia faccia l'ardimento che ho nel cor! . . .
(l'Hagenbach ride più forte; i Cacciatori lo imitano.—Lo Stromminger gli si avvicina e picchiandogli colla mano sulla spalla.)
Ho un consiglio da darti . . .

HAGENBACH: E qual? . . .

STROMMINGER: Non ridere!
Potrei farti arrossir! . . . Se avesser labbra le spalle di tuo padre potrian dirti di Stromminger qualcosa . . .

HAGENBACH: (impallidendo.)
Ah! Voi mentite!

STROMMINGER: (fuori di sè gli si avventa contro urlando.) Che Dio mi danni! Niuno ha osato ancora dirmi così! . . .

HAGENBACH: (afferra lo Stromminger e lo caccia violentemente sotto di sè a terra urlando alla sua volta.)
Sarò io il primo! . . .
(quelli dell'Hochstoff con Gellner accorrono in difesa dello Stromminger: i Cacciatori di Sölden si frappongono in soccorso dell'Hagenbach gridando minacciosi.)

CACCIATORI: Guai
a chi lo tocca! . . . Guia!

LE DONNE: (impaurite.) Ciel!
Che avverà? . . .
(Ad un tratto una strana creatura irrompe violentemente in mezzo a quella folla, urtando gli uni, ricacciando gli altri. È una bizzarra fanciulla, bizzarramente vestita; ha i lunghi capelli disordinati e sciolti e intrecciati di edelweiss; le braccia forti, completamente ignude; gli occhi larghi e profondi pieni di fuoco: è la WALLY! Vedere suo padre a terra presso all'Hagenbach, afferrare costui alle spalle e cacciarlo con forza lontano così da farlo barcollare, è un colpo solo.)

WALLY: Chi osò levar sul padre mio la mano? . . .

HAGENBACH: (furioso si volge; ma vedutosi di fronte una fanciulla, resta sorpreso dapprima, poi, quasi vergognoso balbetta.)
Primo ei m'offese!
(La Wally ha riconosciuto l'Hagenbach! Una profonda sensazione di dolcezza passa nei suoi sguardi; impallidisce e rimane immobile, muta, sorpresa, gli occhi suoi fissi nel volto di lui.)

Though old
For struggle and for hunt,
I still have arms and pulses strong.
My face shows you
The boldness in my heart!
(HAGENBACH laughs still louder, the hunters imitate him. STROMMINGER approaches him, and strikes him on the shoulder.)
I have advice to give you . . .

HAGENBACH: What?

STROMMINGER: Not to laugh!
For I could make you blush!
If they could speak,
Your father's lips
Could tell you something about Stromminger!

HAGENBACH: (growing pale.)
Ah! You lie!

STROMMINGER: (beside himself, rushes upon him shouting.) May I be damned! No one yet dared to speak to me thus!

HAGENBACH: (grasps STROMMINGER and with violence throws him down under him, shouting into his face.)
I will be first!
(The people of Hochstoff with GELLNER run up in defense of STROMMINGER. The hunters of Sölden put themselves between the combatants in defense of HAGENBACH, shouting threateningly.)

HUNTERS: Woe!
Woe to him who touches him!
Woe!

WOMEN: (frightened.) Heavens!
What will happen?
(Suddenly a strange creature breaks violently into the midst of the crowd, pushing some, driving back others. A queer girl, oddly dressed, with long hair in disorder, and open, and entwined in it, edelweiss; strong arms, perfectly bare; large eyes, deep and full of fire; she is WALLY. She sees her father on the ground near HAGENBACH, grasps the latter by the shoulder with such force that he reels—and all this with one blow.)

WALLY: Who dared to raise his hand on my father?

HAGENBACH: (enraged, turns around; but seeing a girl before him, is first surprised, then stammers abashed:)
He offended me first!
(WALLY recognizes HAGENBACH; a deep tenderness shines forth in her eyes; she grows pale and remains immovable, surprised, her eyes fixed on his face.)

STROMMINGER: (che si è intanto rialzato, furioso dice all'Hagenbach.) Va via, accatta brighe!
(e ai Cacciatori di Sölden.)
Non c'è più vin per voi! . . .

HAGENBACH: (guardando bieco la Wally.) Strana creatura!

CACCIATORI: (all'Hagenbach.)
Vientene via!

STROMMINGER:
(all'Hagenbach.) Tu? . . . Non temer! . . . T'aspetta ben più d'un orso! . . .

HAGENBACH: (allontanandosi trascinato via dai suoi.) Maledetto vecchio che m'hai costretto a un atto così vile! . . .

WALLY: (con un gesto ferma l'Hagenbach che si volge sorpreso.—La voce della Wally non è più minacciosa, ma trema così che si direbbe un singhiozzo.)
Non dir così! . . . Sei giovane . . .
La balda giovinezza
più a perdonar che all'odio
e al maledire è avvezza . . .

STROMMINGER: Che nenia è questa? . . . Taci, Wally! . . .
(la spinge verso case.)

CACCIATORI: (trascinano via l'Hagenbach.) Andiamo! . . .

UOMINI: È fuor di sè lo Stromminger! . . .

DONNE: Torniamo!
Torniam! È sera!
(e Uomini e Donne se ne vanno, chi da una parte, chi dell'altra.)
(La Wally immobile sulla porta di casa ha veduto allontanarsi l'Hagenbach seguendolo cogli occhi,—scomparso, è rapidamente entrata in casa. —Gellner solo è rimasto presso allo Stromminger.)

STROMMINGER: (come se rispondesse ad uno sguardo di Gellner.)
L'Hagenbach? . . . L'abborro!

GELLNER: (strisciandogli vicino.) Che val l'odio del padre allor che i figli . . .

STROMMINGER: (lo guarda, poi ripete.) I figli? . . .

GELLNER: (sorride ironico.) Non vedeste? . . .

STROMMINGER: Non comprendo!

GELLNER: Che vostra figlia è innamorata pazza dell'Hagenbach! . . .

STROMMINGER: (scosso, livido.)
Tu scherzi? . . .

GELLNER: O non l'udiste? Nella sua voce dianzi v'eran lacrime!

STROMMINGER: È ver! . . . Che così fosse or mi ricordo!

STROMMINGER: (who rose in the meantime, ragingly says to Hagenbach.) Get out, you quarrelsome man!
(to the hunters of Sölden.)
There is no more wine for you!

HAGENBACH: (looks askance at WALLY.) Strange creature!

HUNTERS: (to Hagenbach.)
Come away from here!

STROMMINGER: (to Hagenbach.) You? You needn't be afraid!
Something much worse than a bear awaits you!

HAGENBACH: (going away, dragged by his men.) Accursed old man, who forced me to do such a vile thing!

WALLY: (with a firm gesture, stops HAGENBACH who turns around surprised. Her voice is no longer threatening, it trembles as if she were sobbing:) Don't say that! Young you are . . .
Daring youth is inclined
To pardon rather
Than to hate and curse.

STROMMINGER: What idle talk is this?
Quiet, Wally!

HUNTERS: (dragging HAGENBACH away.) Come on!

MEN: Stromminger is beside himself!

WOMEN: Let us go home, let us go home!
It's evening!
(The men and women go away, some in one direction, some in another.—WALLY, immovable on the doorstep, watches HAGENBACH going away, following him with her eyes. Once out of sight, she quickly enters the house. GELLNER alone remains near STROMMINGER.)

STROMMINGER: (as if answering a look from GELLNER.) Hagenbach? I hate him!

GELLNER: (coming close up to him.) What good if the father hates when the children . . .

STROMMINGER: (looks at him then repeats) The children?

GELLNER: (smiles ironically.)
Didn't you see?

STROMMINGER: I don't understand!

GELLNER: That your daughter is madly in love with Hagenbach!

STROMMINGER: (shocked, pale.)
Are you joking?

GELLNER: Didn't you hear her?
There were tears in her voice when she spoke!

STROMMINGER: It is true! Now I recall that so it was.

GELLNER: (con impeto.) Il sol pensier che vostra figlia sposa esser possa di lui me'è tal martirio che maggiore non v'ha . . .

STROMMINGER: Tu mi fai ridere.
Mia figlia? . . . Sposa a lui? . . . Prima ch'ei l'abbia! . . .
(poscia a un tratto interrompendosi, colpito da nuova e subita idea, si avvicina a Gellner, le fissa in viso e gli dice.)
Vedo! . . . Comprendo! . . . L'ami! . . .
(e prima che Gellner abbia potuto dire una parola, il vecchio Stromminger grida verso la sua casa, chiamando.)
Wally! . . .
(Wally appare sulla porta.)
Wally! . . .
Vincenzo Gellner t'ama! . . . Sei sua sposa! . . .
E dentro il mese si faran le nozze.
(e lentamente si allontana lasciandoli soli.)

WALLY: (calma a Gellner.) Sei tu che domandata hai la mia mano?

GELLNER: (cogli occhi a terra.) Ei mi lesse nel cuore il mio desìo . . .

WALLY: (avvicinandoglisi.) Gellner ti prego . . .

GELLNER: (immobile.) Parla! . . .

WALLY: Tu sei buono
e un amico ti credo . . .

GELLNER: Ebben? . . .

WALLY: Rinunzia
a me!

GELLNER: Perchè?

WALLY: (risoluta.) Non t'amo!

GELLNER: (con slancio.) Ebben? . . . Che importa? . . . T'amo ben io! . . . E sei dentro al mio cuore così che tutto tuo è il mio pensiero! . . .
(quasi piangendo.)
Mi avvolge come un'onda affannosa l'amore, o Wally! . . . È mor! . . .
A me freme d'intorno
una ebbrezza profonda! . . .
A questa voce ardente che ci chiama l'anima tua deh, schiudi, o Wally, ed ama! . . .
Ah, una lunga carezza . . .
un'ebbrezza infinita . . .
eterna giovinezza
sarà la nostra vita!

WALLY: (lo guardo negli occhi, fredda, altera, spiccando le parole.) Non t'amerò giammai, . . . giammai, m'intendi? . . .

GELLNER: (violently.) The thought alone that your daughter
May become his bride
Is the greatest torture for me.

STROMMINGER: You make me laugh.
My daughter? His bride? Before he gets her . . .
(suddenly, struck by a new idea, he approches GELLNER, stares into his eyes, and says:)
I see it all! I understand! You love her!
(Before GELLNER is able to say another word, old STROMMINGER cries in the direction of his house, calling.)
Wally!
(WALLY appears at the door.)
Wally,
Vincenzo Gellner loves you! Be his bride!
And the wedding will take place in a month.
(He slowly walks away, leaving them alone.)

WALLY: (calmly to GELLNER.) Was it you who asked for my hand?

GELLNER: (looking on the ground.) He read my desire in my heart . . .

WALLY: (approaching him.) Gellner . . . I beg you . . .

GELLNER: (immovable.) Speak!

WALLY: You are good
And a friend to me, I believe . . .

GELLNER: Well?

WALLY: Give me up!

GELLNER: Why?

WALLY: (resolutely.) I don't love you!

GELLNER: (impetuously.) Well then? What does it matter? I love you! And you are engraved in my heart
That my only thought is of you!
(almost weeping.)
Love envelopes me
With sadness, like a wave!
O Wally—it is love!
A deep intoxication comes over me!
Open your heart, O Wally,
To this soul which fervidly calls you, and love!
Ah, a long caress,
Everlasting rapture,
Eternal youth
Will be our life!

WALLY: (looks him in the eyes, cold, haughty, sharply pronouncing her words:) I will never love you; never, do you understand?

GELLNER: (stendendo le braccia a lei con voce piena di singhiozzi.) Ascolta, Wally . . . ascolta . . . ancor ti prego . . .

WALLY: Non t'amerò giammai! . . .

GELLNER: Ebben . . . ti voglio! Devi esser mia! . . .

WALLY: (con accento selvaggio.) Giammai! Giammai! . . . Son libera come la luce . . . e il vento . . .
Le tue minaccie, o Gellner,
non mi fanno spavento! . . .
Come la rupe d'Oetz è fermo il mio voler! . . .

STROMMINGER: (rientra dal fondo e si avanza tranquillamente.) Ebbene, o mie colombe? . . .

WALLY: (risoluta.) Udite, o padre! Non l'amo e non lo voglio!

STROMMINGER: Non lo vuoi? . . .

WALLY: Nol voglio!

STROMMINGER: Wally, bada!

WALLY: Non lo voglio!
Sgozzarmi sull'altar più facil cosa
a voi sarebbe! . . . Immutabil son io!
No! Non m'avrà giammai!

STROMMINGER: Wally! . . .

WALLY: Giammai!
(passa fra questi tre personaggi un momento di silenzio, lungo profondo. Il vecchio Stromminger questa volta sa frenarsi. Rivolto alla figlia, le dice)

STROMMINGER: Vedi? . . . Già cade il dì! Pria che rintocchi l'Avemaria ti accingi ad obbedir . . .
oppur . . . tu te ne andrai! . . . La casa mia si chiuderà per te! . . .
(a Gellner.)
Gellner, vien via! . . .
(entrano in casa.—Suona l'Avemaria.)

WALLY: (rimane un po' pensierosa, poi si scuote, si guarda intorno.) Ebbene? . . . Andrò! . . . Andrò sola e lontana come va l'eco della pia campana . . .
là, fra la neve bianca;! . . .
là fra le nubi d'or;! . . .
laddove appar la terra
come una ricordanza! . . .
ove anche la speranza
è un rimpianto o un dolor! . . .
O de la madre mia casa gioconda,
la Wally se ne va lontana assai,
e forse a te più non farà ritorno, nè più la rivedrai! . . .
Ma fermo è il piè! . . . Già la campana pia suona . . . Partiam . . . che

GELLNER: (extending his arms to her and in a sobbing voice.) Listen, Wally, listen — I beg you again.—

WALLY: I will never love you!

GELLNER: Well . . . but I want you!
You must be mine!

WALLY: (widly.) Never! Never! I am free,
Free as light and wind . . .
All your threats, O Gellner,
Do not frighten me!
My will is as firm
As the rock of Oetz!

STROMMINGER: (reenters from the rear, and comes nearer, calmly.) Well, my doves?

WALLY: (resolutely) Listen, father!
I don't love him, and I don't want him!

STROMMINGER: You don't want him?

WALLY: No, I don't.

STROMMINGER: Take care, Wally!

WALLY: No, I don't want him!
It would be much easier
To kill me at the altar.
My will is unchangeable!
No, he will never have me!

STROMMINGER: Wally!

WALLY: Never!
(A moment of silence, long and deep, between them. Old STROMMINGER knows how to control himself this time. He turns to his daughter and says:)

STROMMINGER: Do you see?
Night is coming on!
Before the Ave Maria tolls
Make up your mind to obey!
Or else . . . you must go away!
My house will be closed to you!
(to Gellner.)
Gellner, come away!
(They enter the house—the Ave Maria tolls.)

WALLY: (remains at first a little serious, then she starts up and looks around.) Well then? I will go!
I'll go alone and far
As the echo from the church-bell . . .
There, amid the white snow,
There, amid the clouds of gold,
There where earth appears
As but a recollection . . .
There where even hope
Is a sorrow and a regret!
O, Wally's going far away
From her mother's joyous home,
Maybe she'll never come back to you,
You'll never see her again!
But firm is my step!

lunga è la mia via! . . .
(Dal fondo intanto scendono, avviandosi alla chiesuola dell'Hochstoff, Pastori e Contadini, Vecchi e Vecchie. Con loro e WALTER.—Nell'attraversare il piazzale costoro si imbattono nella WALLY.)

DONNE: (sorprese.) Ad ora così tarda e così sola,
Wally, ove vai? . . .

WALLY: Mio padre m'ha cacciata!

TUTTI: Tuo padre ti ha cacciata?! . . .

WALLY: Vuol ch'io sposi
Vincenzo Gellner.

UOMINI: Dove te ne andrai? . . .

WALLY: (fieramente, colla fronte alta, e colla mano ferma, additando.) Lassù! . . . Su l'erte vette andrò lontana, ome va l'eco della pia campana.

DONNE: Resta con noi stanotte . . .

UOMINI: Partirai col sol domattina . . .

WALLY: Io vuò partire col sole domattina . . .
ne l'ardente agonia
rimpianta dalle squille
di questa Avemmaria . . .
Ho fretta d'arrivar laddove stende
la libertà ver me le braccia! . . . Addio! . . .

WALTER: Sola non partirai! . . . No! . . . Tuo compagno sarò! . . . Farem la strada insieme! . . .

WALLY: (commossa.) Insieme
Farem la strada! . . . E canteremo! . . . Addio!

FINE DEL ATTO PRIMO.

ATTO SECONDO

Il Paesaggio: LA PIAZZA DI SÖLDEN.—Nel fondo la Chiesa alla quale si accede per un'ampia gradinata.— Da una parte all'altra traversalmente, corrono strisce di tela colorata che ricoprono la piazza in parte (la parte riservata alle danze pubbliche.)—L'osteria dell'Aquila è a destra.—Le finestre, la porta, le tavole, le panche, tutto vi è coperto ed ornato di rami frondosi e di fiori.—Anche dalle finestre e dai ballatoi pendono drappi a colori, fronde, ghirlande.—E tutto un paese vestito da festa!—È il Corpus Domini.

La piazza è gremita di gente; chi va e chi viene; chi si dà al discorrere; chi saluta e passa; chi ride; chi si trattiene a crocchi.—Tutti i variopinti e pittoreschi costumi del Tirolo vivono e si muovono nella piccola piazza.

Ecco là, il PEDONE DI SCHNALS già seduto davanti ad una enorme tazza bi birra, in mezzo a un crocchio di giovanotti, che beve, ride, discute e qualche volta alla bell'AFRA tutta in faccende (la padrona dell'osteria dell'Aquila) mormora parole che eccitano la facile allegria dei suoi ascoltatori!—Là, in disparte, c'è anche GELLNER, anch'egli vestito a festa, ma triste, sinistro, taciturno. Come egli è cambiato in un anno! (poichè è passato già l'anno dalla sera che, all'Hochstoff, fu respinto dalla Wally e costei dal padre messsa alla porta.)

ALCUNE FANCIULLE: (attraversano la piazza c susurrano fra loro.) Entro alla folla che intorno si aggira, ne' dì di festa, è bello il passeggiar . . .
(le loro parole si perdono.)

ALTRE FANCIULLE: (si succedono gaiamente ridendo.) La v'è un garzon che per me sospira! . . .
(alcune additandolo.)
Là ve n'è un altro che mi stà a guardar! . . .
(al passare delle fanciulle avanti alla tavola dove siede, beve, sogghigna e fuma il pedone di Schnals.)

GIOVANNOTTI: (che gli stanno intorno, osservano.) Ah, inver s'io mi dovessi ora ammogliar, di queste mogli, affè!, non ne vorrei
Son volubili troppo nell'amar . . .
e una fraschetta in casa non torrei!

ALCUNE VECCHIE: (attraversano la piazza e si avviano alla Chiesa, sogguardano brontolando le belle ragazze.) Già le campane suonano—
—e le preghiere echeggiano . . .
Esse Dio non ascoltano—
—ma ridono e cinguettano . . .
e a nulla . . . a nulla pensano—

The church-bell tolls
Let's start, for long is my way!
(Meanwhile from the rear, going towards the little church of Hochstoff, descend Shepherds, peasants, old men and women. With them is WALTER. In crossing the square, they meet WALLY.)

WOMEN: (surprised.) At so late an hour and alone,
Wally, where are you going?

WALLY: My father drove me out.

ALL: Your father drove you out?

WALLY: He wants me
To marry Vincenzo Gellner.

MEN: Where will you go?

WALLY: (proudly, haughtily pointing with firm hand.) Up there! I will go as far up the steep rocks,
As the echo from the church-bell.

WOMEN: Stay with us tonight.

MEN: You will leave in the early morning.

WALLY: I want to go
With the setting sun,
In the fervid agony,
Bewailed by the bells
Of this Ave Maria.
I hasten to reach the place
Where liberty extends
Her hand to me. Farewell!

WALTER: You will not go alone!
No!
I'll be your companion!
Together we'll depart!

WALLY: (moved.) Together we'll depart!
And we'll sing! Farewell!
(The bells keep tolling the Ave Maria. It is night. WALLY and WALTER go away by the path. Shepherds and peasants kneel to pray on the square. WALLY and WALTER disappear behind the houses of Hochstoff. Their voices are heard singing the song of the Edelweiss, then get lost gradually in the silence of the night. On the bridge, the lamp over the crucifix is burning and throws a flickering rosy light around it.)

END OF FIRST ACT.

ACT II

THE SCENE: The square of Sölden. In the background a church, to which leads a wide stairway. From one side to the other, crosswise, run strips of colored cloth which partly cover the square. (The part reserved for public dances.) The Eagle Inn is at the right. The windows, doors, tables, benches, everything is covered and decorated with leafy branches and with flowers. From the windows and the galleries hang colored banners, leaves, garlands. The whole town is in holiday array. It is the Corpus Domini.

The square is crowded with people; a continual coming and going; they talk, they greet, and pass; they laugh, they stand chatting. All the many-colored and picturesque costumes of Tyrol move around the little square.

There is the SOLDIER of SCHNALS already seated before an enormous jug of beer, in the midst of a group of men who are drinking, laughing and occasionally busily whispering to the beautiful AFRA (the innkeeper of the Eagle) words which excite the jollity of the listeners. There, aside, is GELLNER; he also is in holiday attire, but sad, gloomy, silent. How he has changed in one year! (For a year has already gone by since that evening at Hochstoff when he was refused by WALLY and she was driven out of the house by her father.)

SOME GIRLS: (cross the square and whisper to one another.) How fine it is to walk,
In the midst of the crowd
Which surges about
On a holiday!
(Their words are lost in the crowd.)

OTHER GIRLS: (Come up laughing gaily.) There is a youth who sighs for me!
(Others pointing at him.)
There is another who stands gazing at me.
(In passing the table where sits, drinks, grins and smokes the SOLDIER of SCHNALS.)

YOUNG MEN: (who stand around and watch.) Ah, really, if I had to get married, Never one of those would I take, fie!
Too fickle are they in their love . . .
No frivolous woman for me!

SOME OLD WOMEN: (cross the square, approach the church and muttering, look askance at the pretty girls.) The bells are already ringing, and the prayers resound.
They don't heed God, but laugh and chatter,
They think of nothing at all, but of pleasure, frivolous girls,
And of clothes and deceivers who —che al sol piacer, le frivole . . .

ed alle vesti e ai bindoli—
—che intorno a lor svolazzano!

ALCUNI BORGHESI: (sorridendo malignamente.) O nonne venerate—perchè con tanta furia alla chiese ne andate? . . .
Tanti anni son passati—che le colpe e i peccati di vostra gioventù perfin lo istesso Iddio—già non ricorda più! . . .

LE FANCIULLE: (frettolose si avviano alla Chiesa.) Ecco suona la squilla mattutina!
È il dì di festa;
e i bei garzoni veston gai corsetti
e portano berretti—piumati sulla testa!

IL PEDONE DI SCHNALS: (rivolgendosi ai vicini.) Or, per la via, me ne ho incontrate assai brigate allegre e giovinette belle! . . .

GIOVINOTTI: (che l'attorniano si levano da sedere.) Giorne è per noi di festa e d'allegria, ed è nostro piacere, in compagnia, ber del buon vin, . . . le belle corteggiar . . .
cantar . . . danzar . . . e amar! . . .

IL PEDONE: (a un tratto si leva, guarda per la piazza e addita Walter che tutto in fronzoli se ne viene occhieggiando, curioso e un po' spavaldo, le donne) Vedetelo venire il piccol Walter Tutto vestito a festa.

VECCHIE E FANCIULLE: (scontrandosi con Walter mentre si avviano alla Chiesa.) Oh! . . . Il bel corsetto . . . !

I GIOVANOTTI: (beffardi.) Il piccol seduttore! . . .

IL PEDONE: (ironico a Walter.) O che già fate l'occhietto moribondo a maritate? . . .

WALTER: (stizzito, al Pedone.) Ognun fa quel che più gli piace! . . . A voi il ber? . . . E a me le belle donne e amar! . . .

IL PEDONE: Or or la tua padrona io m'ho incontrata che a Sölden se ne vien . . .

WALTER: (Punto.) Non ho padrone! . . .

IL PEDONE: (sogghignando.) Eh, via! . . . Colei, vuò dir, che così ricche vesti ti diè! . . .

WALTER: (furente.) La Wally è sol mia amica! . . .
(e si allontana.)
Intanto HAGENBACH si è seduto ad una tavola avanti all'osteria dell'Aquila. AFRA accorre sorridente, felice . . . Tutti si fanno intorno all'Hagenbach; chi gli stringe la mano, chi lo saluta, chi beve con lui.

flutter about them!

SOME CITIZENS: (smiling malignantly.) O you old women, why do you go
So zealously to church?
So many years have passed,
That the sins and faults of your youth
Have been forgotten even by God himself!

THE GIRLS: (hurriedly approach the church.) Hear, the morning bell is ringing!
It is a holiday;
Handsome youths put on their corsets,
And wear feathered caps!

THE SOLDIERS OF SCHNALS: (turning to those near him.)
Along the road, I met so many Beautiful, jolly girls!

YOUNG MEN: (who surround him, get up.) It is a day for mirth and laughter,
And oh, how fine it is to drink
Good wine in company,
To woo the pretty girls,
To sing, dance and to love!

THE SOLDIER: (gets up suddenly, looks across the square, and points to WALTER, who, covered with trinkets, goes around curiously and rather boldly eyeing the women around him.) Looks, here comes little Walter
In holiday attire!

OLD WOMEN AND GIRLS: (meeting WALTER on their way to church.) Oh! What a beautiful corset!

YOUNG MEN: (mocking.) The little seducer!

SOLIDER: (ironically, to WALTER.) Are you making eyes at married women already?

WALTER: (irritated, to the soldier.) Everyone does as he likes!
You like beer?
And I like beautiful women and love!

SOLDIER: I just met your mistress coming to Sölden.

WALTER: (hurt.) I have no mistress!

SOLDIER: (grinning.) Ah, come now! I mean the one
Who gave you such rich clothes.

WALTER: (furiously.) Wally is only my friend!
(He goes away.)
(Meanwhile HAGENBACH sits down at the table in front of the Eagle. AFRA runs up to him, smiling, happy. All surround HAGENBACH; some shake hands with him, others greet him, still others drink with him.)

GIOVINOTTI: (continuando il discorso col Pedone. —Hagenbach parla con Afra.) E avrem la Wally?

IL PEDONE: Si; ora che il davolo ha via portato seco il vecchio Stromminger essa corre le feste e si diverte!

GELLNER: (lanciando un'occhiata sinistra all'Hagenbach.) (La sciagurata! . . . qui ne vien per lui! . . .)
(gli sfugge un gesto di minaccia, poi a un tratto si leva e si perde nella folla.)

IL PEDONE: (continua, aizzando i Giovanotti.) Avanti, giovanotti! . . . È un bel partito? . . .
La mano della Wally è una cuccagna!

HAGENBACH: (con disprezzo.) No! . . . Una moglie così non la vorrei! . . .
Colei non per l'amor . . . per l'odio è fatta! . . .

ALCUNI GIOVANOTTI: (scimiottegiando Hagenbach.) No! Una moglie così non la vorrei! . . .

IL PEDONE: (malizioso, rimbeccandoli.) L'udii dire e ridir che nessun uomo un bacio sapria torle . . .

GIOVANOTTI:
L'orgogliosa! . . .

HAGENBACH: (con fatuità.) Vuò rivederla e . . . vuò con lei danzar! . . .
(intanto le Vecchie e le Fanciulle sono entrate in Chiesa. Gli Uomini, tornati a sedersi alle tavole dell'osteria bevono e giuocano.)

AFRA: (facendosi vicina all'Hagenbach con voce carezzevole.) No! . . . Coll'amore tu non dèi scherzar . . .
Invan resiste a un suo volere il curo! . . .
Il pianto a ogni pupilla sa strappar . . .
No, tu non dèi scherzare coll'amor!

HAGENBACH: (crollando sprezzante le spalle.) Ah! Ridere mi fate! . . . Io tremar? . . .
È troppo fermo entro il mio petto il cuor!
Colle orgogliose piacemi scherzar ma il cuore ho chiuso a le malie d'amor!

WALTER: (che è ritornato, udendo parlare della Wally, esclama in atto di sfida.) Nessun sparà la Wally far piegar nè al labbro un bacio sol torle d'amor!

YOUNG MEN: (continuing their talk with the soldier —HAGENBACH speaks to AFRA.) And shall we have Wally?

SOLDIER: Yes, now that the devil
Has taken old Stromminger with him,
She revels and enjoys herself.

GELLNER: (casting a suspicious look at HAGENBACH.) The wicked one! She is coming here for him!
(A gesture of threat escapes him, then he suddenly gets up and is lost in the crowd.)

SOLDIER: (continues, spurring the youths on.) Come now, is it a good bargain?
Wally's hand is eternal bliss!

HAGENBACH: (with disgust.) No!
I would not want such a woman!
She is not made for love—she's made for hatred!

SOME YOUNG MEN: (imitating HAGENBACH.) No! I would not want such a woman!

SOLDIER: (maliciously, pushing them away.) I heard it said again and again
That no man can wrest a kiss from her!

YOUNG MEN: Proud woman!

HAGENBACH: (fatuitously.) I would like to see her again,
To dance with her!
(Meanwhile the old women and girls enter the church. The men, seating themselves again at the tables, drink and play.)

AFRA: (coming close to HAGENBACH, caressingly.) No, you must not jest with love . . .
In vain you resist its commands!
It can draw tears from any eyes,
No, you must not jest with love!

HAGENBACH: (shrugging his shoulders disdainfully.) Ah, you make me laugh! I tremble?
My heart is too firm in my breast!
I like to jest with haughty women,
But my heart is closed
To the wiles of love!

WALTER: (who has returned, hearing WALLY's name mentioned, exclaims, as if challenging.) No one will be able to make Wally yield!
Nor to wrest from her a kiss of love!

Essa ha vaghezza solo di celiar, ma a le malìe d'amor chiuso ha il suo cuor!

IL PEDONE: (facendo della filosofia:) Ai giovanotti place lo scherzar! . . .
Badate, ohimè!, che assai scaltro è l'amor! . . .
Se alle donne la testa fa girar, l'uomo che inebria impazza di furor!
(Frattanto, dalle tavole ove ferve il giuoco, scoppiano lunghe e tumultuose risate, troncate bruscamente dalla esclamazione di:)

WALTER: Eccola qua!
(infatti è la Wally! A questo grido di sorpresa ne segue un altro di ammirazione.)

I GIOVANOTTI: (mormorano.) La bella creatura! . . .

AFRA: (all'Hagenbach che studiatamente non si volge a guardare.) E che arie da regina! . . . E che bel vezzo di perle intorno al collo!

WALTER: (muovendole incontro.) Alfin, sei giunta!
(La WALLY è superbamente bella e superbamente vestita di una ricca veste di velluto, ed ha uno splendido vezzo di perle al collo. Alcune amiche l'accompagnano.)

WALLY: (a Walter.) Sei tu, mio Walter?

ALCUNI GIOVANOTTI: (alla Wally.) Benvenuta, Wally, se per danzar tu vieni . . .

WALLY: (interrompendoli.)
Perchè no?
(ad un suo cenno, Afra si toglie dallo Hagenbach e rientra portando una tazza alla Wally poi ritorna presso a Guiseppe.—La Wally la segue coll'occhio, si avvede della presenza dell'Hagenbach e depone senza bere la tazza.)

ALCUNI GIOVANOTTI: (corteggiando la Wally.)
Dì! . . . Danzerai con me?

ALTRI: Poi con me pure?

WALLY: Io danzerò con chi vorrà il capriccio . . .
pel piacer di danzar!

IL PEDONE: (intervenendo.)
Anche la danza del bacio?

WALLY: (provocante.) So che le fanciulle vostre nascondono la voglia che han di baci ne l'uso di tal danza! . . . Io, no! . . .
E poi . . .

IL PEDONE: E poi? . . .

WALLY: Non facil cosa saria forse strapparmi un solo bacio! . . .

IL PEDONE: (insistente.) E se ciò fosse? . . .

She only likes to jest,
But her heart is closed
To the wiles of love!

SOLIDER: (philosophizing.)
Youths like to jest
Alas, take care!
For love is very cunning!
If he makes women's heads reel,
The man who intoxicates them
Goes mad!
(In the meanwhile, from the tables where the game is going on, loud and tumultuous laughter bursts forth, suddenly broken by shouts of:)

WALTER: Here she is!
(Indeed it is WALLY! This cry of surprise is followed by another of admiration.)

YOUNG MEN: (whispering.) What a beautiful creature!

AFRA: (To HAGENBACH, who purposely avoids turning around to look.) And what queenly ways!
And what a necklace of pearls
Around her throat!

WALTER: (going toward her.)
You came at last!
(WALLY is wonderfully beautiful and magnificently dressed in a rich, velvet gown, and a fine pearl necklace around her throat. Some friends accompany her.)

WALLY: (to Walter.) You are here, my Walter?

SOME YOUNG MEN: (to Wally.)
Welcome, Wally,
If you come to dance . . .

WALLY: (interrupting.) Why not?
(At a sign from him, AFRA tears herself away from HAGENBACH, and reenters, carrying a jug to WALLY; then comes back near GIUSEPPE. WALLY follows her with her eyes, notices HAGENBACH'S presence, and puts the cup down without drinking.)

SOME YOUNG MEN: (courting Wally.) Say, will you dance with me?

OTHERS: Then with me, rather?

WALLY: I will dance with whoever will take it into his head,
Just for the sake of dancing!

SOLDIER: (interrupting.) Even the kiss-dance?

WALLY: (exciting them.) I know that your girls
Conceal their desire for kisses,
According to the custom of this dance . . .
Not I! and then . . .

SOLDIER: And then?

WALLY: Yet it would not be an easy matter
To wrest a single kiss from me!

SOLDIER: (insisting.) And if this were so?

WALLY: Finor non m'han baciata che i rai del sole, il vento, la rugiada imperlata,
le stelle in firmamento;
m'ebbi il bacio del fiore; . . .
m'ebbi il bacio del prato; . . .
della neve il candore
il bacio suo m'ha dato;
mi dier baci coll'ali
gli augelli del Signor . . .
Solo baci immortali
la Wally ebbe finor . . .
(e la fanciulla accesa nel volto e negli occhi, rimane come assorta; poi, a un tratto, la sua fronte candida si abbuia. Il suo sguardo corre ad Afra e a Giuseppe! Parlano . . . non si curano di lei. Un lampo vibra nella sua pupilla, ed è quasi in atto di sfida che ai Giovanotti lancia queste parole così piene di disprezo.) così prezioso don qual uomo mai potria rubarsi?

IL PEDONE: E se alcun lo potesse?

WALLY: Quell'uom? . . . Sarebbe mio!
(prende il braccio di Walter e si allontana.)
(Passando vicino all'Hagenbach, lo guarda prima con civetteria, poi con uno squardo profondo così che egli ne è scosso.)

IL PEDONE: Su giovanotti! Coraggio dunque! il bacio de la Wally val la cuccagna!
(dalle porte aperte della Chiesa si ode la lenta armonia dell'organo.)

ALCUNI: (avviandosi.) È l'ora della Messa!

ALTRI: (avviandosi.) In chiesa andiam.

ALTRI: Andiam . . . poscia a la danza ci rivedremo!
(entrano in chiesa.)
(Afra e l'Hagenbach si salutano.—Afra rientra nell'osteria.)

HAGENBACH: (incamminandosi alla chiesa.)
Ancora quel suo sguardo! . . .
(entra in Chiesa.—Walter e la Wally che si è attardata colle sue amiche per acconciarsi il velo, stanno pure per entrarvi, quando da una viuzza di destra sbuca fuori Gellner il quale impedisce loro il passo. Wally si ferma, fa segno a Walter di voler rimaner sola, e freddamente rivolgendosi a Gellner)

WALLY: Sei tu?! . . .

GELLNER: Son io . . .

WALLY: Da che son la padrona tu sol, dei miei, non sei venuto a me. . .

GELLNER: Io non l'osai.

WALLY: Till now, no one has kissed me
But the sun's rays and the wind,
The pearly dew,
The stars in heaven;
I had the flower's kiss;
I had the meadow's kiss;
The whiteness of the snow,
Gave me its kiss;
The birds of the Lord
Kissed me with their wings,
Only immortal kisses
Had Wally, until now!
(She stands as if absorbed in thought; then suddenly her snow-white face clouds. Her glance runs to AFRA, then to GIUSEPPE! They speak. They pay no attention to her. A flash gleams in her eyes, and it is almost with disdain that she hurls these words, full of disgust, at the young men.)
What man could ever deprive himself of so precious a gift?

SOLDIER: And if someone could?

WALLY: That man . . . he would be mine!
(She takes WALTER by the arm and goes away. Passing near HAGENBACH, she first looks at him coquettishly, then with so piercing a glance that he is disturbed by it.)

SOLDIER: Come, boys!
Have courage! Wally's kiss
Is as good as eternal bliss!
(From the open churchdoor is heard slow organ music.)

SOME: (approaching.) It is time for Mass!

OTHERS: (approaching.) Let us enter the church!

OTHERS: Come on, we may see each other again at the dance!
(They enter the church.)
(AFRA and HAGENBACH bid each other goodbye. AFRA enters the inn.)

HAGENBACH: (walking to the church.) Again that look of hers!
(He enters the church. WALTER and WALLY, who stopped awhile with her friends to fix her veil, are ready to enter, when GELLNER comes out from an alley on the right, and hinders their passage. WALLY stops, motions to WALTER that she wants to remain alone, and turns coldly to GELLNER.)

WALLY: Is it you?

GELLNER: It's I.

WALLY: Since I am my own mistress
You alone of all my friends, did not come to me.

GELLNER: I did not dare.

WALLY: Non t'ho dimenticato!
Un dì tu fosti sordo a' preghi miei
ed a' miei pianti . . . Io fui per te cacciata . . .
Orben, oggi io te caccio!
Però . . . ingrata
esser non vuò . . .
(gli stende una borsa di denaro.)
Prendi! . . . È danaro! . . . E vanne!

GELLNER: Nulla voglio da te . . .
(con un gesto allontana la borsa che la Wally gli porge, e poi risoluto)
Io t'amo ancora
e più di prima ti amo! . . .
Deh! . . . mi guarda
come io per te mi struggo in desiderii.

WALLY: (torturandolo femminilmente.) Cantava un dì mia nonna
questa canzone strana:
"Fatto è il mondo così:
"Non v'ha più fiera voluttà in amore
"che odiare l'uomo che vi ha dato il cuore.
"Piangi, garzone? . . . E tu bel Cavaliero,
"perchè sì triste e cupo è il tuo pensiero? . . .
"Nerina si rifiuta a la tua brama? . . .
"Ti deride, se soffri, la tua Dama? . . .
"Fatto il mondo è così:
"Amore al riso sempre il pianto unì!
(ride, provocandolo.)

GELLNER: (cogli occhi pieni di lacrime e colla voce piena di preghiere.) Non ridere! . . .

WALLY: Oggi sono allegra assai! . . .

GELLNER: No .. non lo dir! . . .
(fissandola in viso.)

WALLY: (tornando seria e turbata.) Che ne sai tu? . . .

GELLNER: Rispondi . . . perchè, così selvaggia un dì ti adorni
ora di perle e per fiere corri! . . .
Dietro all' amor tu corri . . .

WALLY: (interrompendolo impetuosa) Non è vero!

GELLNER: (implacabile, investendola.) Menti!! . . . Il tuo cor per me non ha secreti . . .
(le si avvicina, ed abbassando la voce sussurra)
Sai tu perchè ti ottenni da tuo padre? . . .
Perchè gli dissi che Giuseppe amavi! . . .

WALLY: (con impeto selvaggio e feroce, come una imprecazione.) Ed è per me un'ebbrezza il tormentarti! . . .

WALLY: I did not forget you!
One day you were deaf to my prayers
And to my tears. I was driven away by you.
Well and good, today I drive you away!
However, I don't want to be ungrateful . . .
(stretches out a purse with money to him)
Take it, it's money . . . and go!

GELLNER: I want nothing from you . . .
(pushes away the purse Wally offers him, and then, resolutely)
I still love you,
And love you more than ever!
See how I waste away in longing for you!

WALLY: (torturing him in a womanly fashion) My grandmother once sang to me
This strange melody:
"Thus goes it in this world:
There is no fiercer pleasure in love
Than to hate the man
Who gave you his heart.
Do you weep, my lad?
And you, fine Cavalier,
Why so sad and deep your thoughts?
Does Nerina refuse your passion,
When you suffer,
Does she mock at you?
Thus goes it in this world.
Love always unites
Laughter with tears!"
(laughs, irritating him.)

GELLNER: (with tearful eyes, and entreating voice.) Don't laugh!

WALLY: I am very gay today.

GELLNER: No—don't say that!
(staring into her face.)

WALLY: (growing serious and disturbed.) What do you know about it?

GELLNER: Answer me . . .
Why, formerly you were so wild,
Now you adorn yourself with pearls
And run to all the fairs!
You are running after love!

WALLY: (impetuously, interrupting him.) It is not true!

GELLNER: (implacable, striking her.) You lie! Your heart has no secrets for me . . .
(approaches her, and lowering his voice, whispers.)
Do you know why you broke away from your father?
Because I told him that you loved Giuseppe!

WALLY: (savagely and fiercely, with an imprecation.) And it is a delight for me to torture you!

GELLNER: Mi fai pietà . . .
(la sua voce è grave eppur dolce.)
Se tu, Wally, sapessi dimenticare! . . . Ah . . . vivere felici! . . .
(interrompe il discorso, e con immenso slancio:)
Schiavo dei tuoi begli occhi ai piedi ti starei
e, pregando a ginocchi,
come si prega Iddio, ti adorerei! . . .
(si inginocchia baciandole la veste, poscia, con immenso trasporto.)
. . . e una lunga carezza . . .
una ebbrezza infinita . . .
eterna giovinezza
sarà la nostra vita! . . .

WALLY: (cupa.) Suvvia . . . Ti leva! . . . A che pregar? . . . Non t'amo.
(dopo un momento di silenzio e di riflessione.)
È ver! . . . Giuseppe . . . io l'amo.

GELLNER: (levandosi con impeto; fuori di sè.) Maledetta!
Ma non l'avrai chè già vicino è il giorno
de le sue nozze! . . .
(ride quasi in uno spasimo di ferocia)

WALLY: (crollando le spalle.) Ah, no! Gellner, tu menti . . .
Per torturarmi menti . . .

GELLNER: Alla bella Afra chiedilo dunque.
(Wally, colpita, impallidisce, le forze a un tratto le mancano e si appoggia barcollando ad una tavola.)

GELLNER: Ed or? . . . Perchè non ridi? . . .

WALLY: (angosciata ripensando.) Eran poc'anzi là! . . . Stretti a colloquio sorridean fra loro, e le lor teste si toccavan così che (Vergin santa!)
si saria detto che scambiasser baci! . . .
(un singhiozzo le strozza la voce.)

GELLNER: Cantava un dì mia nonna
questa canzone strana . . .
"Fatto è il mondo così . . .
"Nerina si rifiuta a la tua brama?
"Ti deride, se soffri, la tua Dama?
"Fatto il mondo è così:
"Amore al riso sempre il pianto unì!

WALLY: (minacciando.) Ma ancor sua moglie Afra non è . . .
Ed io l'amo!
L'amo! . . . e nessun può legger nel destino.
(È fuori di sè: acciecata, pazza, batte sulla tavola dove sta ancora la tazza che Afra le aveva portata.—Afra accorre.—La Wally è

GELLNER: Have pity on me!
(His voice is serious, yet gentle.)
Wally, if you were able to forget—
Ah—we would live happily!
(interrupts the conversation, and with great force.)
Slave of your beautiful eyes,
I shall be at your feet
And, praying on my knees,
As one prays to God,
I will worship you!
(kneels down, kissing her garments. Then, with ecstasy.)
. . . and a long embrace . . .
An infinite rapture,
Eternal youth will be our life!

WALLY: (thoughtfully.) Up, up! get up! Why to pray?
I don't love you!
(after a moment's silence and reflection.)
It is true! . . . I love Giuseppe!

GELLNER: (getting up, beside himself.) Accursed woman!
But you won't have him,
For his wedding day is very soon!
(laughs as in a spasm of madness.)

WALLY: (shrugging her shoulders.) Ah, no! Gellner, you lie . . .
You lie to torture me!

GELLNER: Then ask pretty Afra.
(Wally, struck, grows pale, her strength fails her suddenly, and she leans, tottering, on a table.)

GELLNER: And now? . . . Why don't you laugh?

WALLY: (in anguish, thinking.) They were here a short while ago,
Talking and smiling, one near the other,
And their heads touched so closely
(Holy Virgin)
As if they exchanged kisses!
(a sob chokes her voice.)

GELLNER: My grandmother once sang to me,
This strange melody:
"Thus goes it in this world:
Does Nerina refuse your passion?
When you suffer
Does she mock you?
Thus goes it in this world:
Love always unites
Laughter with tears!"

WALLY: (threatening.) But Afra is not yet his wife . . .
And I love him, I love him!
And no one can read into fate.
(She is beside herself; blinded, mad, she strikes the table where stands the jug AFRA brought her. AFRA runs up, WALLY is so upset that she does not notice the people così agitata che non si avvede che già dalla Chiesa esce la gente e che la piazza ritorna piena di voci e di moto.)

AFRA: Che brami Wally?

WALLY: (afferrando la tazza la getta violentemente contro terra così da imbrattarle la veste e grida.)
Invero che tal broda solo i tuoi ganzi posson trangugiare!

AFRA: Ahimè! (prorompe in lagrime)

TUTTI: (frapponendosi.) Che avvenne, Wally? . . . Parla! . . .

WALLY: (tornata calma e sorridente.) Nulla! . . .
(ad Afra.)
Ed ora perchè piangi? . . . Non temere! . . .
(ai Giovanotti che si sono intromessi fra lei ed Afra.)
Come si asciughin gli occhi a le fantesche io so! . . .
(e avvicinandosi ad Afra con finta dolcezza, leva dalla borsa una moneta e la lascia cadere ai suoi piedi, dicendole)
Toh! . . . Ridi! . . .
(Uno si avanza lentamente, si avvicina ad Afra, si abbassa e raccoglie la moneta d'oro. È Hagenbach.)

HAGENBACH: (gettando la moneta ad alcuni Suonatori girovaghi) È la ricca padrona de l'Hochstoff che vi paga . . . Orsù! . . .
un landler de' più gai! . . .

TUTTI: Evviva
l'Hagenbach! . . .

WALLY: (Povera me! . . . Vincenzo ha detto il vero!)
(ma, calma, altiera, sorridente in viso, essa si avvicina a un crocchio dove sta Walter.)

HAGENBACH: (ad Afra consolandola.) Non piangere, Afra . . . Ti vendicherò!

ALCUNI GIOVANOTTI: (all'Hagenbach.) Vieni a danzare!

HAGENBACH: Sì! . . . Danziam . . . Ma prima facciamo una scommessa . . .

GIOVINOTTI: Qual? . . . Sentiamo!

HAGENBACH: Dieci fiorini d'oro che alla Wally un bacio strapperò! . . .

I GIOVANOTTI: (ridendo.) Scommessa strana!

HAGENBACH: Ebben?

GIOVANOTTI: Sia pur! . . . Teniamo!
La piazza, in un batter d'occhi, si è mutata quasi in una immensa sala da ballo. Le tavole riunite servono da palco pei suonatori. Sulle coming out from the church and that the square is again echoing with voices and motion.)

AFRA: What do you wish, Wally?

WALLY: (grasping the jug, hurls it violently on the ground, so that she soils her clothes and cries.)
Really, only your lovers could swallow down such stuff!

AFRA: Ah!
(bursts into tears.)

ALL: (coming in between them.)
What happened, Wally? Speak!!

WALLY: (turns around calm and smiling.) Nothing!
(to AFRA.)
And now, why are you crying? . . . Don't fear!
(to the young men who come between her and AFRA.)
I know how they dry servants' tears!
(and coming up to AFRA, with feigned tenderness, she takes a coin from her purse and lets it fall at her feet, saying.)
Come now! Laugh!
(One comes up slowly, approaches AFRA, bends down and picks up the gold coin. It is HAGENBACH.)

HAGENBACH: (throwing the coin to some roving musicians.) It is the rich mistress
Of Hochstoff who pays you.
Come on! Come on! Play
One of the gayest "landlers."

ALL: Long live Hagenbach!

WALLY: (Poor me! Vincenzo said the truth!)
(but calm, haughty, smiling, she approaches a group among which is WALTER.)

HAGENBACH: (consoling AFRA.) Don't cry, Afra. I will console you!

SOME YOUNG MEN: (to Hagenbach.) Come to dance.

HAGENBACH: Yes, let's dance, but first let us make a bet . . .

YOUNG MEN: What bet? Let us hear!

HAGENBACH: Ten gold florins that I'll Snatch a kiss from Wally!

YOUNG MEN: (laughing.) A strange bet!

HAGENBACH: Well?

YOUNG MEN: All right then! We take it up.
(In the twinkling of an eye, the square is changed into a large ballroom. The tables, put together, serve as a platform for the mu- panche, disposte a collana, seggono i vecchi, le vecchie e i borghesi. Le fanciulle prendono il braccio del Giovanotto che le invita . . . L'Hagenbach, levatosi il cappello, ne toglie la penna d'aquila e ve la rimette, ma al rovescio, il che significa nei costumi di Sölden che qualunque giuramento, qualunque promessa, qualunque parola, se la penna è al rovescio non ha valore. Nessuno se n'è accorto, eccettuato Gellner che, confuso nella folla, presso al palco dei suonatori, non ha mai staccato lo sguardo dall'Hagenbach.

GELLNER: (vedendo infatti l'Hagenbach attraversare la piazza alla volta della Wally, si avvicina a lei rapidamente, sussurrandole all'orecchio) Bada Wally!

HAGENBACH: (avvicinandosi grazioso alla Wally.) Danzar con te da tempo desiavo . . .

WALLY: (lusingata.) Se il vero dici! . . .

HAGENBACH: (come se giurasse.) È il ver! . . .

WALLY: (guardandolo dubbiosa.) Pure . . . i tuoi occhi mi guardano con foschi e strani sguardi! . . .
(altro gesto di giuramento da parte dell'Hagenbach.)
(La Wally soggiunge con tristezza)
L'ingannarmi crudel saria . . .

HAGENBACH: (trascina dolcemente con sè la Wally) Danziamo! . . .
(comincia il landler. Anche il Pedone e Walter danzano.—Al momento di lanciarsi, l'Hagenbach si ferma; la Wally sorpresa lo guarda.)

HAGENBACH: M'odi, Wally! . . .

WALLY: Che brami ancora?

HAGENBACH: Bramo
con te danzare le danza del Bacio! . . .

WALLY: Quale capriccio! . . .

HAGENBACH: Agil tu sei e forte . . .
Bramo con te lottare . . . ed esser vinto.

WALLY: Quale capriccio! . . . Qui! . . .

HAGENBACH: Hai tu paura?
(sorridendo la trascina con sè danzando.)

I CANTI DEL LANDLER: Già il canto fervido—vola per l'aere; come di rondine—leggiero ha il vol,
e i trilli modula—
dell'usignol . . .
Agili, rapide—le corde fremono . . . cercano il cuor;
i fiori olezzano—fremon ne l'aure sicians. On the benches, arranged in a circle, sit the old men, the old women, and citizens. Each girl takes the arm of the young man who invites her. HAGENBACH, taking off his hat, takes out of it an eagle feather and puts in on again, but on the wrong side, which means, according to the customs of Sölden that some oath, some promise, some word, if the feather is on the wrong side, is of no account. No one notices it except GELLNER, who, lost in the crowd near the musicians' platform, has not taken his gaze off HAGENBACH.)

GELLNER: (Seeing HAGENBACH cross the square towards WALLY, approaches her quickly, whispering in her ear.) Take care, Wally!

HAGENBACH: (Gracefully coming up to WALLY.) I have long been wanting to dance with you.

WALLY: (flattered.) If you speak the truth! . . .

HAGENBACH: (as if swearing.) It is the truth!

WALLY: (looking dubiously at him.) Yet you look at me with such a dark and strange gaze!
(another gesture of swearing on the part of HAGENBACH.)
(WALLY adds sadly.)
It would be cruel to deceive me . . .

HAGENBACH: (drags WALLY gently along with him)
Let us dance!
(The ländler begins. The soldier and WALTER dance too. When it is time to turn, Hagenbach stops; Wally looks at him surprised.)

HAGENBACH: You hate me, Wally!

WALLY: What else do you want?

HAGENBACH: I am eager to dance
The dance of the kiss with you!

WALLY: What a whim!

HAGENBACH: You are quick and strong . . .
I am anxious to wrestle with you and be conquered.

WALLY: What a whim!
Here!

HAGENBACH: Are you afraid?
(smiling, he drags her along with him.)

THE SONGS OF THE LANDLER:
Already the fervid song is flying through the air,
Light as the swallows is its flight,
And the melodious trills of the nightingale.
Nimble, quick, the cords vibrate . . . they seek the heart;
The flowers are fra-

inni d'amor.
(La lotta del bacio ferve ancora accanita nel fondo. Ad un bacio colto, risa, applausi.—Risate lunghe accolgono la vittoria di Walter.—Ogni bacio dato è una coppia di danzatori che scema. Ormai pochissime continuano. Ma l'attenzione del Pedone e dei Giovanotti che hanno udita la scommessa è per l'Hagenbach e la Wally, attenzione stuzzicata dai due pel loro contegno. Si direbbe che danzino senza accorgersene e spesso cessano di danzare per parlarsi, quasichè l'armonia che li conduce non sia già quella degli istrumenti, ma quella che esce dalle loro labbra.)

HAGENBACH: (ad un tratto eccitato da alcune della Wally, cessa di danzare e turbato le dice)
No! . . . Parla! . . . Parla!
. . . Vuò saper! . . . Dicevi?

WALLY: (continuando il discorso quasi suo malgrado.)
. . . posar sovra il tuo petto . . . scordare il mondo e Dio . . .
sempre al tuo cor vicina . . . questo era il sogno mio,
e la torva miseria de la mia breve vita eternar de' tuoi baci coll'ebbrezza infinita . . .

HAGENBACH: (sorpreso, commosso.) Or chi detto m'avria che nel tuo cuor, fanciulla, vi fosse un paradiso? . . . Io vi ho creduto il nulla!

WALLY: (contiunando.)
. . . poi . . . m'hanno detto un giorno che odiata ero da te . . .

HAGENBACH: (turbato, con calore, interrompendola)
No . . . Non t'ho odiata mai . . . Lo giuro . . . Credi a me! . . .
(e stringendola a sè ritorna al landler)

GIOVANOTTI: (mormorano.)
Arte è malvagia, il bacioadescar colla parola,
Vincere al dolce gioco deve la danza sola!

VECCHIE: (intervengono, sentenziando.) No, non è ver! Diritto di ognuno è la favella!
E l'arma più cortese che fa la lotta bella . . .

HAGENBACH: (ad un tratto si arresta nuovamente; questa volta egli cerca di sciogliersi dalle braccia della Wally; è pallidissimo.)
No! . . . Non vuò più danzar! . . .

WALLY: (trattenendolo e continuando a parlargli, scherzosa, eccitandolo.) Al mio labbro di rosa
Non giunge il labbro timido di bocca paurosa . . .

grant . . . hymns of love
Tremble in the air.
(The wrestle of the kiss still glows furiously in the background. At one loud kiss, laughter, applause. Loud bursts of laughter welcome WALTER's victory. Now but few go on. But the attention of the soldier and the young men who heard the bet, is attracted to HAGENBACH and WALLY. One would say that they dance without noticing it and often stop dancing to speak to each other, so that the music which leads them is not that of the instruments, but that which comes from their lips.)

HAGENBACH: (suddenly excited by some of Wally's words, stops dancing, and perplexed, says to her). No! Speak! Speak! I want to know! Did you say!—

WALLY: (continuing her talk almost in spite of herself.) To lean against your breast,
Forget the world and God,
Almost near your heart,
And the severe wretchedness
Of my short life,
To eternize with infinite rapture
Of your kisses . . .

HAGENBACH: (surprised, moved.) Who could have told me, girl,
That there's paradise in your heart?
I thought there was nothing in it.

WALLY: Then . . . they once told me
That you hated me . . .

HAGENBACH: (confused, passionately, interrupting her). No! I never hated you, I swear!
Believe me!
(and pressing her to him, returns to the ländler.)

YOUNG MEN: (whispering). Art is wicked; to allure
The kiss with a word,
To win in a sweet game,—
Only dancing must do that!

OLD WOMEN: (coming in, judging). No, it is not true!
Everyone has the right to speak!
It is the most courteous arm
Which wrestles gracefully.

HAGENBACH: (stops again, suddenly; this time he tries to free himself from Wally's arm. He is ghastly pale). No! I can't dance any more!

WALLY: (stopping him and keeping on speaking, jesting and urging him on). The timid lip of a shy mouth Touches not my rosy lip!

HAGENBACH: (ancora più turbato e tremante.) Cessiam! . . . Da te son vinto!

WALLY: Perchè allor, m'hai sfidata e la gloria hai bramato d'avermi tu baciata?
(il lander si è fatto affannoso; nel fondo della scena si danza ancora.)

HAGENBACH: (con impeto, stringendosi alla Wally)
Perchè? . . . Perchè dimandi? . . .
Perchè Wally sei bella . . .
Perchè hai profondi sguardi . . . soave la favella . . .
Ne' candidi tuoi denti v'è una malia ascosa . . .
V'è la vita e l'amor nel tuo labbro di rosa! . . .
Ah, Wally, in nodo ferreo l'anima tutta allaccia questa tua treccia morbida, che a te stretto m'abbraccia! . . .
(a questo punto il Pedone si stacca dal gruppo dei Giovanotti, che si interessano alla lotta fra l'Hagenbach e la Wally, e portandosi nel fondo stuzzica anche la curiosità delle donne narrando loro la scommessa. A poco a poco tutti si avvicinano ai due amanti circondandoli)

WALLY: No! . . . Taci! . . . Taci!
. . . Udirti più non voglio . . . Tu menti! . . .

HAGENBACH: (arrestandesi bruscamente, colle lagrime agli occhi.) Lo giuro! . . .

WALLY: Non giurare! . . .

HAGENBACH: Lo giuro! . . . È il ver! . . . Senti . . .

WALLY: (livida in viso.) Ad un'altra fanciulla il tuo amore hai giurato . . .
E giuri? . . . Tutto io so! . . . Sei già il suo fidanzato.

HAGENBACH: Ah, tu, da un'ora, Wally, con tormenti d'inferno mi torturi! . . . m'uccidi! . . . di me ti prendi scherno!

WALLY: (cogli occhi pieni di pianto.) Scherno di te? . . . Non vedi che t'amo e in te rapita tutta ne' tuoi accenti vivo una nuova vita . . .

HAGENBACH: (affascinato, tremante.)
Ma . . . allor . . . perchè mi nieghi d'un bacio tuo l'ebbrezza?
(l'abbraccia con violenza.)

WALLY: (con un lamento.)
Ohimè! . . . Tu mi fai male! . . .

HAGENBACH: (sussurrando con violenza.) Del tuo bacio m'inebria! . . .
così! . . . così . . . ti voglio! . . . Mia Wally! . . . Sempre! . . .

HAGENBACH: (still more perplexed and trembling). Let us stop! I am conquered by you!

WALLY: Why then do you defy me,
And long for the glory
Of having kissed me?
(The ländler becomes tedious; they are still dancing in the background).

HAGENBACH: (impetuously, pressing close to Wally) Why?
Why, you ask?
Why are you so beautiful, Wally,
Why such deep looks,
Such gentle accents . . .
In your white teeth
Is hidden wickedness . . .
There is life and love
In your rosy lips!
Ah, Wally, the whole soul
Binds
Your dark hair in an iron knot
Which I tightly clasp to my breast!
(At this moment, the soldier gets away from the group of young men who interest themselves in the wrestle between HAGENBACH and WALLY, and going to the rear, spurs on the curiosity of the women, telling them about the bet. Little by little, all draw near the two lovers, surrounding them.)

WALLY: No! Be quiet! Be quiet! I don't want to hear you! You lie!

HAGENBACH: (stopping abruptly, with tears in his eyes.) I swear it!

WALLY: Don't swear!

HAGENBACH: I swear it! It is true! Hear . . .

WALLY: (pale). You swore your love
To another girl . . .
And you swear? I know all!
You are already betrothed.

HAGENBACH: Ah, Wally, it's a whole hour
That you torture me
With tortures of hell!
You kill me! You laugh at me!

WALLY: (with tearful eyes).
Laugh at you? Don't you see
That I love you, and all wrapped up
In your words, I live a new life?

HAGENBACH: (fascinated, trembling). But, then—why deny me
The rapture of one of your kisses?
(He embraces her violently.)

WALLY: (lamenting). Alas! You hurt me!

HAGENBACH: (whispering, violently) Intoxicate me with your kisses!
So, so! I want you! My Wally!
Forever!

WALLY: (con un sospiro si abbandona a lui.) Prendimi!
(l'Hagenbach la bacia sulla bocca.—Un urlo confuso di applausi, di grida beffarde, di risa scoppiano come un uragano intorno.)

TUTTI: La Wally fù baciata! . . . Ed Afra è vendicata! . . .
(i Giovanotti circondano l'Hagenbach, che li guarda come trasognato, ricordando la scommessa.)

WALLY: (scossa a quelle risa, guarda l'Hagenbach, non comprendendo.) Che dicono costoro? . . . E perchè ridono? . . .
(i Giovanotti trascinano verso l'osteria dell'Aquila l'Hagenbach.)

GELLNER: (accorre con Walter presso alla Wally.) Disgraziata! Perchè non m'hai creduto? . . .

WALLY: (ancora dubitando.) Ah! . . . Fu crudel vendetta? . . . Ei m'ingannò? . . .

GIOVANOTTI: A bere!

IL PEDONE: A bere! . . .

GIOVANOTTI: (ad Afra.) Afra, il miglior tuo vino! . . .
(La Wally, gli occhi vitrei, livida, senza lacrime, guarda avanti a sè . . . Gellner e Walter la circondano; ma ella non vede che uno . . . Un uomo che le volge le spalle . . . Quasi speza ancora! . . . Ed ecco invece le Vecchie, le Fanciulle, tutte le Donne di Sölden che la attorniano, beffarde, sogghignando.)

LE DONNE DI SÖLDEN: Se un marito torrai, tu pure a lui Wally
Un bacio porterai che Iddio non benedì! . . .

GELLNER: (allontanandole; alla Wally.) Sù! . . . Vieni! . . . Andiam! . . .
(additandogli l'Hagenbach che cerca di stordirsi bevendo.)
Guardalo là! . . . Lo vedi?

WALLY: (with a sigh, gives herself up to him.) Take me!
(HAGENBACH kisses her on the mouth. A confused shout of applause, of ridicule, bursts of laughter like a hurricane, all around.)

ALL: Wally was kissed! And Afra is avenged!
(The young men surround HAGENBACH, who looks at them as in a dream, recollecting the bet.)

WALLY: (shocked by this laughter, looks at HAGENBACH, without understanding.)
What are they saying? And why do they laugh?
(The young men drag HAGENBACH toward the Eagle.)

GELLNER: You unfortunate girl, why didn't you believe me?

WALLY: (still doubting). Ah! Was it a cruel revenge? Did he deceive me?

YOUNG MEN: To drink!

SOLDIER: To drink!

YOUNG MEN: (to Afra). Afra, your best wine!
(WALLY, with glassy eyes, tearless, looks in front of her. GELLNER and WALTER surround her; but she only sees one,—a man who turns his back to her. She still has some hope. And now the old women, girls, all the women of the Sölden surround her, jeering, grinning.)

THE WOMEN OF SÖLDEN: If a husband you will take,
You will give him a kiss
Which God did not bless!

GELLNER: (going away; to WALLY). Up! Come! Let us go!
(Pointing to Hagenbach, who tries to stun himself by drinking.)
Look there! Do you see him?

IL PEDONE: (toccando la sua colla tazza dell'Hagenbach.) Non v'è maggior piacer d'un ben colmo bicchier.
Ah sì! credete a me,
altro non v'è!
(vuota la tazza, gridando.)
Io bevo all'Hagenbach . . .

GIOVANOTTI: Evviva l'Hagenbach!

WALLY: (cogli occhi fissi su l'Hagenbach afferra pel braccio Gellner e gli dice) Mi vuoi tu ancora? . . .

GELLNER: Sì!

WALLY: (sempre cogli occhi all'Hagenbach e con voce ferma.) Lo voglio morto!

FINE DELL'ATTO SECONDO.

■ ATTO TERZO

Il Paesaggio: L'HOCHSTOFF.—La scena è divisa. A destra la casa dello Stromminger (ora della Wally); sul davanti l'interno della camera da letto della Wally.—Dall'altra parte una via dell'Hochstoff fiancheggiata a sinistra da case. Dalla via si entra nella camera della Wally da una piccola porta. Due finestre stanno ai lati di questa porta.—Nell'estremo orizzonte, come nel primo atto, ma da un diverso punto di vista, il Murzoll, il Similaun. Il ponte rimane assai più vicino agli spettatori, e il sentiero che vi conduce non è che una continuazione della via dell'Hochstoff.—Cade la sera . . . Davanti al Crocifisso la lampada è accesa.

THE SOLDIER: (clinking glasses with HAGENBACH.) There is no greater joy
Than an overflowing glass.
Ah yes! Believe me,
There is no greater joy!
(empties his jug, shouting.)
I drink to the health of Hagenbach . . .

YOUNG MEN: Long live Hagenbach!

WALLY: (with her eyes fixed on HAGENBACH, gives her arm to GELLNER, and says to him). Do you still want me?

GELLNER: Yes!

WALLY: (with her eyes still on HAGENBACH, and in a firm voice.) I want him dead.

END OF SECOND ACT.

■ ACT III

SCENE: Hochstoff.—The stage is divided. To the right, Stromminger's house (now Wally's); in the foreground, the interior of Wally's bedroom. On the other side a road in Hochstoff with houses on the left side. From the road, one enters Wally's room by a small door. Two windows at the sides of this door. In the extreme horizon, as in Act I, but from a different point of view, Mts. Murzoll and Similaun. The bridge is very near the spectators, and the path which leads to it, is but a continuation of the Hochstoff road. Evening is coming on. The lamp in front of the crucifix is burning.

Nella camera della Wally.	IN WALLY'S ROOM.	Nella Strada.	ON THE STREET.
(La camera è immersa in una profonda osurità.) (WALTER apre la porta della camera e vi lascia passare la WALLY, seguendola; poi richiude la porta e accende una lampada.—La Wally rimane immobile in mezzo alla stanza.)	(The room is in deep darkness. WALTER opens the door of the room and lets WALLY pass in, following her; then closes the door and lights a lamp.—WALLY remains immovable in the middle of the room.)	(Ritonano a gruppi quelli dell'Hockstoff che sono andati alla festa d Sölden. Tornano a coppie di quattro, di sei, Uomini, Donne; se ne vengono lentamente pel ponte, e silenziosi rincasano. Ultima si vede tornare la Wally, accompagnata del piccolo Walter. La Wally è ancora vestita della splendida veste di velluto, ma i fiori che l'adornavano sono tutti strappati. Essa è assorta in pensieri che l'addolorano, e affannosamente cammina, quasi inconscia di sè, seguendo il piccolo Walter.)	(Those who went to the festivities at Sölden, return in groups. They come in couples of four, of six, men, women; they slowly cross the bridge and silently enter their homes. Finally WALLY is seen, accompanied by little WALTER. WALLY is still dressed in her gorgeous velvet gown, but the flowers which adorned her are all torn. She is absorbed in the thoughts that grieve her, and walks wearily, as if unconscious of herself, following little WALTER.)
WALTER: Fa core, Wally!	WALTER: Be brave, Wally!
WALLY: (sempre pensierosa.) Hai tu veduto Gellner?	WALLY: (still thoughtful). Did you see Gellner?
WALTER: No! . . . Forse a Sölden passerà la notte.	WALTER: No! Maybe he'll spend the night at Sölden.	(VINCENZO GELLNER viene dal fondo, passa lentamente per la via dell'Hochstoff, ed entra in una delle case che la fiancheggiano. La notte è scesa oscurissma.)	(VINCENZO GELLNER comes from the background, slowly crosses the Hochstoff road, and enters one of the houses. The night is very dark.)
WALLY: Non l'hai veduto dunque? (La Wally si leva il vezzo di perle, e lo guardo sorridendo amaramente; poi con un gesto di disprezzo lo getta sopra una tavola, e siede annodandosi i capelli che disordinatamente le scendono sulle spalle. Walter la guarda addolorato.)	WALLY: Then you didn't see him yet? (WALLY takes off the pearl necklace, looks at it, smiling bitterly. Then with a gesture of disdain, she throws it on the table and sits down and unties her hair, which falls in disorder on her shoulders. WALTER looks at her sadly.)
WALTER: (con tenerezza.) Wally!	WALTER: (tenderly). Wally!
WALLY: (interrompendo.) Taci . . . Che è questo? Ascolta! . . .	WALLY: (interrupting him). Quiet! What is it? Listen! . . .	Dietro il ponte della Ache si ode avvicinarsi poco a poco una canzone. È il PEDONE DI SCHNALS, mezzo ubbriaco, che canta. Egli traversa il ponte, e se ne viene a sghimbescio verso l'Hochstoff.	(Behind the bridge, across the Ach, a song is heard, coming nearer and nearer. It is the SOLDIER OF SCHNALS, half drunk, who sings.) (He crosses the bridge and comes staggering toward Hochstoff.)
(Walter apre una della finestre e sta ad ascoltare; poi richiude.)	(WALTER opens one of the windows to listen, and then closes it.)
WALTER: È un ubbriaco che canta . . .	WALTER: It is a drunken man singing.	IL PEDONE: Non v'è maggior piacer d'un ben colmo bicchier. Ah sì! credete a me, altro non v'è! (Gellner, all'udire la voce del Pedone esce dalla casa ove era entrato poc'anzi, ne chiude la porta con gran precauzione, poi, quasi strisciando per la via, va a porsi allo sbocco del sentiero.)	THE SOLDIER: There is no greater joy Than an overflowing glass. Ah, yes! Believe me, There is no greater joy! (GELLNER, at the sound of the drunken man's voice, comes out from the house which he entered a short while ago, closes the door very cautiously, then almost crawling along the road, goes to the entrance of the path.)
WALLY: (che si è alzata, agitata, ad ascoltare, ritorna a sedere mormorando.) È ver! Pareami un lamento.	WALLY: (who got up, excited, to listen, comes back and sits down, muttering). It is true. It seemed a lamentation.
WALTER: (con effetto e quasi supplichevole.) Vuoi che con te rimanga questa sera?	WALTER: (affectionately, and almost supplicating). Do you want me to stay with you tonight?	IL PEDONE: (scendendo il sentiero) così sempre giocondo è questo falso mondo. Se l'amor t'inganna garzon, canta e tracanna! Ah sì! credilo a me, altro non v'è. Allo sbocco del sentiero là dove questo si congiunge alla strada dell'Hochstoff, GELLNER arresta il Pedone, ponendogli una mano sulla spalla.	THE SOLIDER: (going up the path.) Thus always gay Is this world so false! If love deceives you, Lad, go get drunk! (At the entrance to the path, there where it joins the street of Hochstoff, GELLNER stops the soldier and puts his hand on his shoulder.)
WALLY: No, voglio restar sola . . . te ne prego. (Walter bacia la Wally, ed esce per una porta interna a destra.)	WALLY: No, I want to be alone—I beg you! (WALTER kisses WALLY, and goes out by an inside door, to the right).

		GELLNER: (sottovoce, rapidamente) Ebben . . . dunque?	GELLNER: (whispering, quickly.) Well . . . what then?
		IL PEDONE: (lasciando sfuggire un comico gesto di paura.) Ah! siete voi? Pel ciel, m'avete fatto paura . . . (Gellner impaziente lo scuote.)	SOLDIER: (making a comical grimace of fear.) Ah, it's you? Good heavens, how you frightened me! (GELLNER shakes him impatiently.)
(La Wally è agitatissima, ad ogni istante paurosa tende l'orecchio; vorrebbe pregare, ma non può. Finalmente da in un pianto dirotto, e, la testa tra le mani, si lascia cadere in ginocchio a piè del letto.)	(WALLY is very much excited, every minute she listens, with fear; she would like to pray, but cannot. Finally she bursts into a torrent of tears and holding her head in her hands, she falls on her knees at the foot of the bed.)	Io là . . . rimasi fino a sera, quando ad un tratto l'Hagenbach disparve.	I stayed there till the evening, When suddenly Hagenbach disappeared.
		GELLNER: Disparve?	GELLNER: Disappeared?
		IL PEDONE: Me ne uscii; era già notte. Allor decisi di tornare . . . Un uomo scendeva lento il sentiero dell'Ache . . .	SOLDIER: I went out; it was already night. Then I decided to go back. A man Slowly climbed up the path of the Ach.
		GELLNER: Che!? . . . forse l'Hagenbach?	GELLNER: What? Maybe it was Hagenbach?
		IL PEDONE: Egli in persona! . . .	THE SOLDIER: He himself!
		GELLNER: Parla sommesso . . . Ebben?	GELLNER: Speak low . . . Well?
(La Wally a un tratto si scuote! Le sue mani corrono ai suoi occhi incredula del suo dolore, quasi a convincersi che essa ha pianto! . . .)	(WALLY suddenly starts up. Her hands seek her eyes, disbelieving her sorrow, as if to convince herself that she wept.)	IL PEDONE: Lo riconobbi. (maliziosamente.) Costui è certo un uomo di coraggio . . .	SOLDIER: I recognized him. (maliciously). He is surely a brave man . . .
		GELLNER: Perchè?	GELLNER: Why?
		IL PEDONE: Venir qui solo, e a notte tarda! . . . Per lui già piange Sölden . . . Là si teme che qui si voglia vendicar la Wally! . . .	SOLDIER: To come here alone, and late at night! Sölden is already weeping for him. They fear there that we want to avenge Wally!
		GELLNER: (ridendo) Ohibò! . . . pazzie! (dandogli del denaro.) Però . . . non si sa mai. Vanne a dormir lontano. Mala notte è questa per l'Hochstoff . . .	GELLNER: (laughing). Nonsense! . . . madness! (giving him money.) However . . . you never can tell. Go off to sleep far off. This is A bad night for Hochstoff . . .
		IL PEDONE: (strizzando 'occhio.) Non mi ci piglia! (parte dal fondo a sinistra, scomparendo dietro la casa dello Stromminger zuffolando.)	SOLDIER: (rubbing his eyes.) They won't catch me here. (He goes away from the rear at left, disappearing behind STROMMINGER's house, whistling.)
		GELLNER: L'Hagenbach qui? Egli all'Hochstoff? Ohibò! Ubbriaco è il pedon . . . non è possibile! . . . (dopo une pausa.) E se ciò fosse? Se . . . (arrestandosi e guardando d'intorno.)	GELLNER: Hagenbach here? He at Hochstoff? Oh, no! the soldier is drunk, it's impossible! (after a pause). And if this were true? If— (stopping to look around).

Nella camera della Wally.

(Con un gesto risoluto si dà a preparare il letto . . . si toglie di dosso il corsetto di velluto! . . . poi si inginocchia, fa il segno di croce e prega! . . . Ma a un tratto si alza esclamando contristata e dispettosa.)

WALLY: Nè mai dunque avrò pace?
E da pensieri
sempre o feroci o tristi la mia mente sarà turbata? Ohimè! solo una celia io fui per lui, e del mio ardente bacio egli si rise? . . .
(con accento d'odio)
Ebben, morrai, crudele!
(con raccapriccio prima, poi con isconforto.)
Misera me, che l'amo più di prima!
(singhiozzando)
La giovinezza coi suoi sogni ardenti, or crudeli tormenti,
tutta sola mi lascia;
e già s'accascia
nel triste ricordar la mia persona,
e la speranza fugge e mi abbandona!
In un suo bacio v'era la mia vita,
in un suo bacio la speranza tutta!
e m'ha il suo bacio la vita distrutta! . . .
Pur gli perdono; io non vo' la sua vita . . .
Vuò a Gellner tosto dir che pazza fui . . .

(apre la porta per iscendere nella via, ma si arresta sulla soglia spaventata dall'oscurità.)
Che tetra notte! . . . Come fischia il vento!
(guardando verso il ponte.)
Spento è il lume laggiù! . . . Giuseppe, certo, a Sölden è rimasto . . . per stanotte nulla ha a temer . . . Doman l'avvertirò!
(richiude la porta e più tranquilla si accinge a coricarsi)

WALLY: (sobbalzando.) È strano!
intorno a me solo lamenti odo stanotte. Oh! fosse digià l'alba!
O ciel! chi batte?
(con spavento.)

È Gellner! . . . Che vorrà?
(La Wally, atterrita, corre come una pazza alla porta, l'apre ed esce nella via.)

In Wally's Room.

(With a resolute gesture, she begins to make her bed—takes off her velvet corset. Then she kneels down, makes a sign of the cross, and prays. But suddenly she gets up, exclaiming sadly and haughtily.)

WALLY: Will I never have peace again?
Will my mind be always disturbed
By wild and sad thoughts?
Alas I was only a joke for him
And he laughs at my burning kiss?
(with hatred)
Well, then, you will die, cruel one!
(first with dread and then with discouragement).
Wretched that I am, to love him more than ever!
(sobbing)
Youth with its burning dreams, its cruel tortures,
Leaves me all alone;
And now I waken
From sad recollections,
And hope flees and abandons me!
In his single kiss lay my whole life,
In his kiss alone lay all my hopes!
And it was his kiss ruined my whole life—
I would rather tell Gellner that I was mad . . .

(She opens the door to go out, but stops, frightened by the darkness.) What a gloomy night,
How the wind howls!
(looking towards the bridge) The light up there has blown out!
Giuseppe surely remained at Sölden;
Tonight I have nothing to fear.
Tomorrow I will warn him!
(She closes the door, and more calmly prepares to go to bed.)

WALLY: (starting up.) It is strange! I hear only
Sobs tonight around me.
Oh, I wish it were dawn already!
Heavens, who knocks?
(frightened).

It's Gellner! What does he want?
(WALLY, frightened, runs madly to the door, opens it and goes out.)

Nella strada.

La notte è oscura . . . e una sventura può toccare a tutti . . . la lampada lassù . . . potrebbe spegnersi . . .
impetuoso è il vento . . .
(esitando)
Perchè tremo?
Ahimè! mi guarda il Crocifisso nero!
(riavendosi)
Gellner, su via! si tratta di Wally!

(Gellner si caccia su pel sentiero scrutando nell'osurità, e tendendo le orecchie per ascoltare il più piccolo rumore. Più che camminare, egli striscia su pel sentiero. Arrivato al ponte, si ferma quasi diffidente; guarda ancora intorno a sè, poi lo varca. Si avvicina al Crocifisso, e con grande destrezza ne spegne la lampada. Il vento soffia più che mai impetuoso. Gellner scompare nella oscurità dietro il ponte e aspetta. La scena rimane completamente immersa nel buio.)

L'HAGENBACH compare dietro il ponte; egli cammina a tentoni nella oscurità.

HAGENBACH: Buio è il sentier . . . la lampada s'è spenta . . .
Ebben che importa? Ai piedi di Wally il rimorso e l'amor mi guideranno.
(sta per passare il ponte, quando Gellner gli è addosso, e lo fa precipitare dal piccolo parapetto. L'Hagenbach getta un urlo terribile. Gellner scende rapidamente, quasi fuggendo. Poi, giunto allo sbocco del sentiero, rallenta il passo e fa per rientrare in casa sua. Ma vedendo la finestra della camera della Wally ancora rischiarata da un lume, vi si avvicina mormorando)

GELLNER: È desta ancora la selvaggia . . . e aspetta!
(batte sommessamente ai vetri di una finestra.)

On the Street.

Dark is the night . . .
And disaster can happen to anyone.
The lamp up there could blow out.
The wind is strong . . . (hesitating). Why do I tremble?
Alas! the black crucifix is looking at me!
(bracing himself again).
Gellner, up, up! Wally is in danger!

(GELLNER hurries over the path, gazing into the darkness and strains his ears to hear the slightest sound. He skulks along the path. Coming to the bridge, he stops suspiciously, looks around him, then crosses. He approaches the crucifix and dexterously puts out the lamp. The wind blows stronger than ever. GELLNER appears in the dark behind the bridge, and waits. The stage is entirely dark.)

(Hagenbach appears behind the bridge; he walks, groping in the dark.)

HAGENBACH: The path is dark—the lamp is out . . .
What's the difference? To Wally's feet
Remorse and love will guide me.
(He is crossing the bridge, when GELLNER comes upon him and hurls him from the small parapet. HAGENBACH gives an awful howl. GELLNER descends rapidly, fleeing. Then, reaching the entrance to the path, slows up, and enters his house. But seeing WALLY's windows still illuminated, approaches murmuring.)

GELLNER: The wild creature is up yet and waits!
(He knocks softly on the window pane.)

Da questo punto l'azione si svolge

GELLNER: Se vuoi vederlo morto . . . giù nell Ache discendi . . . e lo vedrai.

WALLY: No . . . non è vero.

GELLNER: Oh com'è vero Iddio
. . . giù dal ponte or ora l'ho precipitato . . .

WALLY: (afferrandolo convulsa per il collo) Vile!

GELLNER: Taci . . . che fai?

WALLY: (trascinandolo verso il ponte) Vieni con me.

GELLNER: (dibattendosi.) Mi lascia . . .

WALLY: Vieni! . . . Laggiù . . . noi due insieme! In fondo a quell'abisso, e presso al corpo suo, là v'è l'altare delle nostre nozze.
(La Wally ha trascinato Gellner sin presso al ponte, quando dall'abisso sorge un lamento. La Wally ascolta trepidante. Le sue braccia lasciano sfuggire Gellner.—S' ode distintamente un altro lamento.)

WALLY: (con impeto di gioia.)
Dio! vive ancor!
(scende precipitosa nella via, urlando e picchiando a tutte le porte)
A me, soccorso! A me! . . .
(Si schiudono alcune finestre, si aprono le porte delle case; Uomini e Donne compaiono.)

CORO: Che avvenne?

WALLY: Un uom nell'Ache . . .

CORO: Morto?

WALLY: Presto! . . .
È l'Hagenbach . . . ei
vive . . . lo salviamo!
La scena è invasa da Uomini, da Donne; chi porta torcie, chi corde e scale.
(Gellner è scomparso.)

ALCUNI: Presto alle corde . . .

ALTRI: presto . . .

I. i nodi stretti! . . .

II. Ben stretti i nodi . . .

WALLY: stretti . . .

TUTTI: Ora allacciamo!
Dall'altra parte del ponte intanto si vedono venire a frotte quei di Sölden con armi e torcie; fra essi è AFRA.

WALLY: Siam pronti; andiam!
(s'incammina con gli altri verso il ponte; ma allo sbocco del sentiero s'incontra con Afra e con quei di Sölden.)

(At this point, the action turns entirely to the street of Hochstoff.)

GELLNER: If you want to see him dead,
Go down to the Ach, and you'll see him.

WALLY: No, it is not true.

GELLNER: As true as God— I just Threw him down from the bridge.

WALLY: (clutching his throat convulsively.) Coward!

GELLNER: Be quiet! What are you doing?

WALLY: (dragging him to the bridge). Come with me.

GELLNER: (getting himself loose). Let me go . . .

WALLY: Come! down there—we two together!
At the bottom of that abyss
And near his body,
There is the altar of our wedding.
(WALLY drags GELLNER up to the bridge, when a wail rises from the abyss. WALLY listens anxiously. She lets GELLNER escape. Another sob is clearly heard.)

WALLY: (with a cry of joy). O Lord! He is still alive!
(She hurries up the road, shouting and knocking at all the houses.)
Help me! Help me!
(Some windows are opened, the doors of the houses are opened; men and women appear.)

CHORUS: What happened?

WALLY: A man in the Ach.

CHORUS: Dead?

WALLY: Quickly! It is Hagenbach—he lives—let us save him!
(The stage is filled with men and women; some carry torches, some rope and ladders.)
(GELLNER has disappeared.)

SOME: Quickly to the ropes.

OTHERS: Quickly!

I. Tighten the knots!

II. Let the knots be very tight!

WALLY: Tight . . .

ALL: Now let's bind!
(From the other side of the bridge, meanwhile, the people of Sölden are seen coming in crowds, with arms and torches; among them is AFRA.)

WALLY: We are ready; come on.
(She walks with the others towards the bridge, but at the entrance to the path, meets AFRA and those of Sölden.)

QUEI DI SÖLDEN: (minacciosi.)
Dell'Hagenbach cerchiamo . . .
Dov'è?
(un gran silenzio; nessuno osa rispondere.)
Dove'è? Rispondi!
(nuovo silenzio)

AFRA: (scoppiando il lacrime.)
Ah! l'hanno ucciso!
(Quei di Sölden stanno per iscagliarsi contro quelli dell'Hochstoff; la Wally s'interpone gridando.)

WALLY: Morto non è! No!
(a Afra)
Spera lo riavrai!
(*Rapidamente si apre un passaggio tra la folla, e corre verso il precipizio. Tutti la seguono collo sguardo.
La Wally, senza esitare, per un piccolo sentiero scende nell'abissa Merauigliati quasi a erriti del suo forte atto de coraggio, gli uomini, con le torcie alla mano, si affacciano al precipizio. Le donne s'inginocchiano in dis parte e pregano.*)

TUTTI: Oh! quale audacia . . . oh! spavento . . . oh! terror!

DONNE: Signor, la proteggete!
Salva ce la rendete!

ALCUNI: Caliam le corde . . .

ALTRI: L'abisso è profondo . . .

ALTRI: Ascoltiamo in silenzio . . .

TUTTI: (sbigottiti.) Nulla s'ode . . .

WALLY: (dal fondo dell'abisso, con gioia.) Vive!

TUTTI: Alle corde . . . All'opera . . . sù! sù!
Forza alle corde. ohè . . . Sù, issa!
(Tutti si affannano intorno all'abisso, tirando le corde. Dopo pochi minuti di un'ansia spaventevole, la Wally compare tenendo legato e stretto a sè il corpo dell'Hagenbach, privo di sensi.)

TUTTI: È salvo!
(Gli amici prendono Giuseppe e lo adagiano per terra. La Wally, in uno stato di suprema esaltazione, dall'alto della rupe, additando alla folla che le si accalca attorno il corpo del giovane cacciatore, esclama)

WALLY: Sì, vive ancora!
(ad Afra)
È Dio che te'l ridona,
e tuo lo vuole, per mia man salvato.
(sempre ad Afra con grande commozione.)
Così . . . pur la mia casa . . . e i campi . . . e i prati,
Afra, son tuoi . . .
(un singhiozzo le tronca la paro-

THOSE OF SÖLDEN:
(threatening). We look for Hagenbach . . .
Where is he?
(A long silence. No one dares to answer.)
Where is he? Answer!
(Again silence.)

AFRA: (bursting into tears). Ah, they have killed him!
(The people of Sölden are about to rush on those of Hochstoff. WALLY comes between them, shouting.)

WALLY: He is not dead! No!
(to Afra.)
Hope . . . You'll have him again!
(A passage is quickly made by her between the crowd. Wally, without hesitating, descends into the abyss by a little path. Amazed, frightend by her great act of bravery, the men, with torches in hand, step up to the precipice. The women kneel aside and pray.)

ALL: Oh! What boldness! Oh, horror! Oh, terror!

WOMEN: Lord protect her!
Lord, give her back to us!

SOME: Let us lower the ropes . . .

OTHERS: The abyss is deep.

OTHERS: Let us listen in silence!

ALL: (terrified). Nothing is to be heard . . .

WALLY: (from the depth of the abyss, with joy). He lives!

ALL: To the ropes—to the task—up, up!
Your strength to the ropes, up, now!
(All press around the abyss, pulling the ropes. After a few moments of frightful anxiety, WALLY appears, with HAGENACH's unconscious body bound and tied to her.)

ALL: He is saved!
(The friends take HAGENACH and lower him to the ground. WALLY, in a state of highest exaltation, from the tops of the cliff, pointing to the crowd which gathers around the body of the young hunter, exclaims.)

WALLY: Yes, he still lives!
(to Afra.)
It is God who gives him back to you, and wishes him to be yours, saved by my hand.
(with great agitation).
So,—even my house—and the field—and the meadows, Afra—are yours.
(A sob cuts short her speech. She la, scoppia in lagrime, e s'inginocchia presso Giuseppe baciandolo in volto e mormorando.)

Addio!
(poscia si scosta rapidamente da lui, e prendendo nelle sue le mani di Afra le dice a voce alta per modo che tutti possano udire.)
Allor che gli occhi ei riaprirà alla luce, gli dirai che il bacio che mi tolse, ora gli ho reso!

TUTTI: O pia creatura generosa e santa!

FINE DELL'ATTO TERZO.

ATTO QUARTO

Sul Murzoll.
"Stanca, non lontana dalla sua capanna stava un giorno Wally seduta sopra una delle più alte cime del Murzoll. La scena che l'attorniava somigliava nel triste e livido decembre un cimitero sparso di tumuli di neve, colle fronde bizzarramente foggiate dal ghiaccio in croci, coi cespugli di fiori alpestri transformati in tombe trasparenti e candide come il marmo. Sotto a' suoi piedi si stendeva il mare di ghiaccio, desolato, infinito, coi suoi riflessi verdastri e con le sue onde irrigidite che si prolungavano sino all'altro versante della montagna. L'orizzonte colle sue innumerevoli catene di monti era avvolto nei fantastici vapori del meriggio. Il Similaun, accanto a Wally, era accarezzato da una picola nuvola, e la ragazza, appoggiata la testa nelle mani, ne seguiva macchinalmente gli ondeggiamenti." (Wally dell'Avvoltoio—W. De Hillern.)

Dalla sinsitra, per un piccolo ed ascoso sentiero, sale faticosamente WALTER sino alla capanna, e si avvicina a WALLY.

WALTER: Luogo sicuro questo non è più!
Le valanghe distruggono i sentieri!
(La Wally si scuote; guarda d'intorno attentamente, poi ritorna a meditare come prima.)
(abbracciandola e costringendola affettuosamente ad alzarsi.)
Wally, torniamo!

WALLY: Se è scritto ch'io non debba più riveder la terra dove ho amato e pianto tanto . . . il mio destin si compia!

WALTER: L'inverno è desolato . . .

WALLY: Più non soffro pene di questo mondo! . . .

bursts into tears, and kneels down near GIUSEPPE, kissing his face, and muttering).
Farewell!
(She breaks away quickly from him, and taking AFRA's hand in hers, tells her in a loud voice so all can hear.)
When he shall have opened his eyes
To the light, you will tell him
That I have now returned
The kiss he snatched from me!

ALL: O faithful creature, generous and holy!

END OF THIRD ACT.

ACT IV

(On the Murzoll.)
"Weary, not far from her hut WALLY sat one day on one of the highest peaks of the Murzoll. The view which surrounded her seemed in the sad and pale December like a cemetery spotted with heaps of snow, with the leaves oddly formed into crosses out of ice, with the bushes of Alpine flowers transformed into tombs transparent and white as marble. Under her feet, extended a sea of ice, desolate, infinite, with greenish reflections, and with its stiffened waves which stretched out to the other slope of the mountain. The horizon, with its innumerable chains of mountains, was wrapped in the fantastic vapors of noon. Similaun, at WALLY's side, was caressed by a small cloud, and the girl, leaning her head on her hands, mechanically followed its undulations."
(Wally of the Vulture—W. DE HILLERN.)

(From the right, by a small steep path, WALTER ascends with difficulty to the hut, and approaches WALLY.)

WALTER: Surely this is not a safe place!
The avalanches destroy the paths!
(WALLY starts up, looks around attentively, then comes to meditate as before. WALTER embraces her and affectionately compells her to get up.)
Wally, let us return!

WALLY: If it is that I
Am never to see again the land that I loved
And mourned so much—my fate is being fulfilled!

WALTER: Winter is desolate . . .

WALLY: I no longer suffer pains of this world!

WALTER: È già il Natale . . .
Wally torniamo!

WALLY: Non ho più famiglia.

WALTER: Torniamo a riudir le allegre squille delle campane della chiesa nostra che cantano la pace . . .

WALLY: (con abbandono.) La mia pace?
È perduta per sempre! Tu ritorna . . .
alla tua casa, alla vita, all'amore!
Walter, ritorna ed ama!

WALTER: Senza te!

WALLY: (traendo dal seno il vezzo di perle che portava il dì della festa di Sölden e porgendolo a Walter, con un sorriso d'amara tristezza.)
Prendi, o fanciullo! . . . Serbala!
questa memoria pia,
questa, che un dì fu orgoglio
de la bellezza mia.
Son queste le mie lagrime
dal duolo irrigidite,
i ricordi soavi
dell'affranto mio cuor,
le parole d'amore
che ho detto e che ho sentite . . .
a te! . . . prendila. Walter!
È tutto il mio tesor!
(poi con immensa rassegnazione)
Ed or, fanciullo vanne. È già il Natale! . . .

WALTER: (piangendo.) Torna con me!

WALLY: (melanconicamente.)
Riudrai le allegre squille della campana della chiesa nostra cantar la pace . . .

WALTER: Wally, deh ritorna!

WALLY: Fanciullo, no. Soltanto . . . una preghiera.
(soavemente a Walter indicando il ghiacciaio.)
Allor che avrai varcato il periglioso mare di ghiaccio . . . canta, oh canta ancora la mesta cantilena del mio jodler!
(le lacrime le impediscono di più proseguire. Ella abbraccia con gran tenerezza Walter, e dolcemente lo spinge sul sentiero del ritorno. Walter pangendo si allontana e scompare dal sentiero di sinistra.)

WALLY: (sola.) (appena sola, la Wally si accascia presso la sua capanna. Il cielo, dapprima sereno, va lentamente coprendosi di nubi. Essa si guarda intorno.)
Eterne a me l'intorno
piange la neve lacrime!
Qui lagrima da secoli
eterno pianto il giorno!
(esaltandosi.)
Fra la densa caligine
laggiù la terra appar
mugghiante fra le tenebre un desolato mar.

WALTER: It is Christmas now—
Wally, let us return!

WALLY: I have no family any more.

WALTER: Let us return to hear
The merry peal of the church-bells
Singing peace . . .

WALLY: (with resignation.) My peace?
It is lost forever! Return
To your home, to life, to love!
Walter, return and love!

WALTER: Without you?

WALLY: (taking from her breast the pearl necklace she wore the day of the festivities at Sölden and handing it to Walter, with a bitter smile of sadness).
Take it, boy! Treasure it!
This pious memory,
This, which once was
The pride of my youth!
Those are my tears,
Grown hard with sorrow,
The tender recollections
Of my broken heart,
The words of love
Which I spoke and heard . . .
It is yours, take it, Walter!
It is my whole treasure!
(then, with great resignation).
And now, go, boy, it is Christmas!

WALTER: (weeping). Come back with me!

WALLY: (sadly). You will hear again
The merry peal of our church-bells
Singing peace!

WALTER: Wally, please return!

WALLY: No, boy,—Only—a prayer.
(gently, to WALTER, pointing to the ice.)
When you shall have crossed
The perilous sea of ice,
Sing, sing once again,
My jodler's sad strains.
(The tears prevent her from going on. She embraces WALTER very tenderly and gently pushes him on the path leading down. WALTER, weeping, walks away and disappears from the path to the left.)

WALLY: (alone.) (She sinks down on the ground near the hut. The sky, at first calm, becomes covered with clouds. She looks around.)
Eternally the snow around me
Weeps bitter tears!
Here the day, for centuries,
Sheds eternal tears!
(exalted).
Amid the thick gloom
The earth below appears
Like a desolate sea
Bellowing in the darkness!

Funesto mare dell'umana vita!
Un giorno sciolte le sue vele al vento sfidava la mia nave l'onda ardita, e dentro a la mia nave, alta, orgogliosa la giovinezza mia cantava forte canti d'amor sovra flutti di rosa . . .
(capa.)
Quei canti lieti on son nenie di morti!

WALTER: (da lontano.) E il vento iva lontano . . .
Poi le venìa vicino . . .
Quando fu giunta sovra l'alto monte presso alla neve bianca la pellegrina stanca
sciolse le treccie e chinò il bianco fronte.
(la voce di Walter va poco a poco perdendosi.)

WALLY: (con esaltazione.) Sì come te, fanciulla del mio canto l'amore fu dolor, la vita pianto.
Sì, come te morir deve la Wally . . .
(la Wally getta il mantello di pelle, si scioglie le chiome che le inondano le spalle, s'inginocchia, e come assorta in dolcissima estasi canta.)
O neve, o figlia candida di Dio, risplender t'ho veduta
dalla vallata muta,
nè l'aspro m'atterrì lungo pendìo,
e a te sono venuta.
Essere pari a te bella desìo!
(Lo jodler che segue, la Wally lo canta, con immensa passione, quasi nel delirio; ed è durante questo suo canto, che ha del dolore fantastico, che da lungi si sente la voce dell'Hagenbach chiamare: "Wally! Wally!" voce che si fa sempre più distinta.)

WALLY: Come sei triste, o vento, tu somigli al mio pianto.

HAGENBACH: (da lontano.) Wally!

WALLY: Sei l'ultimo lamento, sei l'ultimo mio canto.

HAGENBACH: (più distintamente.) Wally!

WALLY: (impaurita.) Una voce mi chiama! Chi mi vuole!
(ascolta, ma tutto è silenzio.)
No m'ingannai
(poco dopo riudendo ancora il suo nome.)
E ancora . . . Chi mi chiama?
(agitata dallo spavento.)
Ah! sono, ohime, le fanciulle beate!
Dei lividi ghiacciai sono le fate!
(coprendosi gli occhi con le mani per non vedere la spaventosa visione.)
Già la lugubre schiera ecco s'avanza, ed agitan su me l'orribil velo! . . .

O fatal sea of human life!
One day with its sails
Spread out to the wind,
My ship defied the stormy wave,
And within my ship, tall and proud,
My youth sang loud
Songs of youth about waves of roses!
(thoughtfully).
Those joyful songs are now funeral dirges!

WALTER: (from a distance. And the wind came slowly,
Then came nearer to her . . .
And when she reached the mountain-top
Near the white snow,
The weary pilgrim
Opened her braids and bowed down
Her snow-white forehead!
(WALTER's voice becomes fainter and fainter.)

WALLY: (with exultation). O snow, o white daughter of God,
I saw you shining below,
From the silent valley,
The long, steep precipice frightened me not.
I came here to you,
I want to be as beautiful as you!
(The yodler which follows, is sung by WALLY with great passion, almost as in delirium, and it is during this song, that is fantastically sad, that HAGENBACH'S voice is heard from the distance calling, "Wally, Wally"; the voice becomes more distinct.)

WALLY: How sad, o wind,
Your resemble my lamentation.

HAGENBACH: (from a distance). Wally!

WALLY: You are my last lament,
You, my last song.

HAGENBACH: (clearer). Wally!

WALLY: (frightened). A voice calls me! Who wants me?
(She listens, but all is quiet.)
No, I made a mistake.
(then, hearing her name again).
Again—who calls me?
(shaking with fear).
Ah, they are, alas, the happy children!
They are the creatures of livid ice!
(She covers her eyes with her hands to shut out the frightful visions.)
Now the mournful band approaches,
And wave at me its horrible veil . . .

e intrecciano d'intorno a me la danza, ver me tendendo le braccia di gelo!
(cade a terra ansante dallo spavento.)
(Dal sentiero di destra appare HAGENBACH che s'inerpica appoggiandosi a un bastone ferrato. Egli si ferma penosamente impressionato a vedere i segni che i patimenti hanno impresso sul volto della Wally, e dolcemente la chiama.)

HAGENBACH: O Wally!

WALLY: (dirizzandosi e vedendo Giuseppe.) Vergin santa! Egli è Giuseppe!
Perchè sei tu venuto?

HAGENBACH: M'hai salvato hai voluto obliar l'offesa mia
e tu mi chiedi perchè son tornato?
(con trasporto.)
A te ne vengo come a un santo altare!

WALLY: (con emozione.) (È la sua voce!)

HAGENBACH: Oh! come furon lunghi
i dì lontan da te, e come dentro mi struggeva il desìo di rivederti!
Tu nel tormento dell'ore infinite a me apparivi bella e innamorata!
Poi, la visione dolce si mutava . . .
e come la Madonna del dolore ai miei piè ti vedevo addolorata, mentre, a lavarvi l'oltraggio del bacio, dagli tuoi sulla tua scarna gota
vi sgorgava un'amara onda di pianto.

WALLY: (con voce appena intelligibile e rotta dalla commozione.)
Ah! l'armonia delle sue parole m'uccide!

HAGENBACH: (continuando con più passione il racconto.)
Poi . . . m'han detto un dì: la Wally non è più qui . . . Tu più non la vedrai! . . .
Ma la speranza non m'ha mai lasciato,
e t'ho, fanciulla bella, ritrovata.
(rimane in lunga contemplazione davanti alla Wally, tremante, e mormora)
Io t'amo, Wally.

WALLY: (spaventata, agitata, dubbiosa ancora della felicità che viene a lei nel momento appunto che ella la credeva per sempre perduta, e giudicando male dei sentimenti che animano Giuseppe, gli dice con amarezza, allontanandosi.) Ebben . . . se t'ho salvato . . .
perchè mentir? . . . Non s'ama per pietà.
Afra tu amavi ed ami.

And twist in dance around me,
Stretching out their icy arms!
(She falls to the ground, panting with fear.)
(HAGENBACH appears on the path to the left, clattering up, leaning on an iron stick. He stops, struck by the signs of suffering on WALLY's face, and gently calls her.)

HAGENBACH: Wally!

WALLY: (sitting up, and seeing GIUSEPPE.) Holy Virgin! It is Giuseppe!
Why did you come?

HAGENBACH: You saved me,
You wanted to forget my offense,
And you ask why I returned to you?
(passionately).
I come to you as a sacred shrine!

WALLY: (with emotion). It is his voice!

HAGENBACH: Oh, how long
Where the days without you,
And how the desire to see you
Tortured me!
Enamored and beautiful
Seemed you to me,
In the torments of the infinite hours!
Then the vision sweet changed . . .
And the Mater Dolorosa
I saw you, afflicted, at my feet,
While, to wash off the insult
Of the kiss,
From you eyes, on your thin cheeks
Gushed a bitter stream of tears.

WALLY: (with an almost unintelligible voice, broken with excitement). Ah, the harmony
Of his voice kills me!

HAGENBACH: (continuing, with greater passion). Then, one day they told me
Wally is gone.—I'll see her no more!—
But hope did not leave me,
And I found you, beautiful girl!
(He remains in deep contemplation before WALLY trembling and murmurs:)
I love you, Wally.

WALLY: (Frightened, excited, still doubtful of the happiness which comes to her just at the moment when she thought it forever lost, and thinking ill of the feelings with inspire GIUSEPPE tells him with bitterness, walking away). Well—If I saved you . . .
Why to lie? One does not love
Through pity!
Afra you loved and love.

HAGENBACH: Afra tu dici? Mi guarda! E una menzogna! No, Wally Credetti odiarti . . . ma il mio cuor ti amava (lentamente si avvicina alla Wally, così che le loro teste quasi si toccano.) Quando a Sölden provocatrice balda tu m'apparisti, allora io la credei una sfida crudel! . . . Pur già lottavo contro l'incanto della tua persona che dolcemente m'attraeva a sè! (con estrema passione.) No, credi, o Wally! È inebbriato e pazzo nel caro abbraccio alle ardenti parole che vile fui; ma il bacio che ti presi sulla tua bocca, era bacio d'amore . . .	HAGENBACH: Afra, you say? Look at me! It is a lie! No, Wally. I thought I hated you—but I loved you. (He slowly comes up to WALLY, so that their heads touch.) When at Sölden, bold incited You appeared to me, Then I believed it a cruel defiance; But already I struggled Against the charms of your beauty Which so gently drew me to you! (very passionately). No, believe me, Wally! I was drunk and mad In the dear embrace And the ardent words. But the kiss I took From your sweet lips Was a kiss of love!
WALLY: (fra sè, rapita dall'incanto soave delle parole di Giuseppe.) O dolce incanto! O paradiso nuovo!	WALLY: (Beside herself from the gentle charm of GIUSEPPE's words.) O sweet charm! O new paradise!
HAGENBACH: (continuando.) . . . e appena a sera, pieno d irimorsi io volli rivederti e ai piedi tuoi cadere. Tempestosa era la notte, e Dio vegliava sulla colpa mia! . . . Giù nell'abbisso mi perdetti . . . (La Wally impallidissce. La Memoria del suo delitto le ritorna in tutto il suo orrore.)	HAGENBACH: (continuing). And towards evening, full of remorse, I wanted to see you again And fall at your feet, The night was stormy, And God watched my sins! I was lost in the abyss below! (WALLY grows pale. The memory of her crime returns to her in all its horror.)
WALLY: (con voce rauca, interrompendolo) Dio?! Non Dio . . . ma un uom! . . . Gli avean detto: uccidilo! Ei t'attendeva . . . (non può più continuare.)	WALLY: (in a hoarse voice, interrupting him). God?! Not God—but a man! He was told . . . kill him! He watched for you! . . . (She cannot go on.)
HAGENBACH: Un uom? . . .	HAGENBACH: A man?
WALLY: (con sforzo supremo.) Questa crudele gli aveva susurrato: Va e l'uccidi! . . . (con raccapriccio.) Amami adunque ancor, se puoi. (si copre disperatamente il volto colle mani, e rimane così, ritta dinanzi a Giuseppe; questi commosso la guarda, le si avvicina, e dolcemente le dice.)	WALLY: (with great strength). I, cruel one, murmured to him: Go and kill! (with dread). Love me now, if you can. (She covers her face in desperation, and remains so erect in front of GIUSEPPE. He looks at her, very much moved, and approaches her and says sweetly).
HAGENBACH: Io t'amo! (La stringe teneramente al suo cuore. Intanto il cielo si è coperto di nubi; una caligine densa sale, sale minacciosa avvolgendo i picchi circostanti del Murzoll; fra poco anche la capanna della Wally sarà avvolta in questa tenebria spaventosa delle Alpi. Comincia asoffiare il vento. Ma i due amanti, felici, strettamente abbracciati, sembrano di nulla accorgersi, e si sussurrano all'orecchio parole d'amore.)	HAGENBACH: I love you! (He clasps her tenderly to his heart. In the meantime, the sky becomes covered with clouds; a thick mist and darkness rises threateningly, covering the peaks around Murzoll; soon even the hut will be covered up in this frightful darkness of the Alps. The wind begins to blow. But the lovers, happy, tightly embraced, seem to notice nothing and whisper words of love to each other.)
HAGENBACH: Vieni, vieni: una placida vita noi vivremo in un mondo ignorato!	HAGENBACH: Come, come we shall live A peaceful life In an unknown world!
WALLY: (ripete mormorando.) Noi viviemo in un mondo ignorato!	WALLY: We shall live in an unknown world.

WALLY: Chiederemo a una piaggia fiorita un asilo baciato dal sole.	WALLY: We shall seek on a flowery hill, A retreat kissed by the sun.
HAGENBACH: Là, su prati, fra rose e viole noi vivremo una placida vita.	HAGENBACH: We shall live a peaceful life! There, on the meadows, Midst violets and roses,
WALLY: Noi vivremo una placida vita là, su prati fra rose e viole. (Wally si guarda intorno spaventata dalla oscurità densa che li circonda.) Giuseppe, ove siam noi? . . .	WALLY: We shall live a peaceful life! There, on the meadows, Midst violets and roses. (WALLY looks around, frightened by the thick darkness surrounding them.) Giuseppe, where are we?
GIUSEPPE: (con amore.) Sei sul mio cuore . . . (guardandosi egli sbigottito dintorno) qual cupa oscurità!	GIUSEPPE: (lovingly). You are my heart . . . (looking frightened, around him). What deep darkness!
WALLY: Rugge il Murzoll sinsitramente . . .	WALLY: Murzoll rumbles sinistrously . . .
GIUSEPPE: La caligin nera ascende per la valle minacciosa. (scostandosi dalla Wally.)	GIUSEPPE: The black storm Threatening ascends the valley. (getting away from WALLY).
WALLY: Amor mio, sola qui non mi lasciare!	WALLY: My love, don't leave me here alone!
GIUSEPPE: (raccogliendo da terra il suo bastone ferrato s'incammina a tentoni fra la incertezza della nebbia e l'imperversare dell'uragano.) Fra le tenebre dense io vo cercando il desiato sentiero del ritorno. (Giuseppe scompare giù pel sentiero pel quale è venuto. Si fa più impetuoso il vento—di quando in quando rumori lontani si ripercuotono cupamente per le valli ingigantiti dall'eco.)	GIUSEPPE: (picking up his iron stick, walks groping his way amid the incertitude of the fog and the raging storm.) I am looking among the thick shadows For the path leading back. (Giuseppe disappears down the path by which he came. The wind rages more and more—every once in a while distant rumblings resound in the valley, redoubled by the echo.)
WALLY: (sola.) (guardando giù pei sentiero pel quale Giuseppe è disceso.) Ecco, già più nol vedo! L'Ha sommerso la densa nebbia come onda del mare,	WALLY: (alone). (Looking down the path which Giuseppe descended.) Now, I no longer see him! As a wave of the sea. The thick fog swallowed him.
GIUSEPPE: (dal fondo del sentiero.) Wally!	GIUSEPPE: (from the bottom of the path.) Wally!
WALLY: (con gioia.) Mi chiama! . . . (sporgendosi dal sentiero, forte.) T'odo!	WALLY: (joyfully). He calls me! (coming out from the path, loudly). I hate you!

GIUSEPPE: Il sentiero è scomparso . . .

WALLY: Ohimè!

GIUSEPPE: Fa core!
Discendi per le roccie e . . .
(lontano, di sotto, grida atterrito.)
La valanga!
(Odesi lo schianto terribile della valanga.—L'urto è così forte che la Wally è violentemente gittata a terra—in quello spavento un grido straziante esce dal suo petto.—Subito dopo un profondo silenzio.—La Wally si trascina fino al eiglio del precipizio formato dalla valanga—e un grido nuovo d'orrore viene strappato a lei dallo spettacolo che si offre ai di lei sguardi.—Protesa col busto fuori—essa guarda con occhi vitrei—e colla voce alterata chiama)

GIUSEPPE: The path has disappeared.

WALLY: Woe is to me!

GIUSEPPE: Be brave!
Descend over the rocks and—
(far away, from below, cries frightened).
The avalanche!
(The terrible crash of the avalanche is heard. The force is so strong that WALLY is violently thrown to the ground—in this fright a piercing cry comes from her breast. Suddenly after a long silence WALLY drags herself to the edge of the precipice formed by the avalanche—and a new cry of horror bursts from her at the sight which comes before her eyes. Stretched out, chest forward, —she looks with glassy eyes, and in changed voice, calls).

WALLY: Giuseppe!
(le risponde il silenzio.)
M'odi? . . . Giuseppe! . . .
Rispondi! . . .
(con voce piena di lagrime.)
Cupo silenzio! . . . La morte è laggiù! . . .
(Nasconde raccapricciata il volto nelle mani, e rimane così come impietrita.—Quando toglie dal volto le mani—il suo volto è livido—gli occhi larghi che guardano stranamente—si leva ritta sul precipizio, e stendendo con esaltazione le braccia:)
O neve—o candido destino mio, ecco la sposa di Giuseppe!—Il bianco velo nuzial tu sei della Wally. Anima cara, le tue braccia stendimi!
(e si getta nel precipizio, larghe le braccia come stese ad un supremo abbraccio)

FINE DELL'OPERA.

WALLY: Giuseppe!
(silence answers her).
Do you hate me? Giuseppe! Answer!
(with a voice full of tears.)
Deep silence! Death is down there!
(She hides her face in her hands, with terror, and remains as if petrified. When she takes her hands from her face—it is livid—staring eyes with a strange gaze—gets up erect, on the precipice, and stretching out her arms in exultation:)
O snow—my white destiny,
Here is Giuseppe's bride,
You are the white bridal veil of Wally.
Dear soul, stretch your arms to me!
(She throws herself over the precipice, with her arms stretched out as for a final embrace).

END OF THE OPERA.

Louise (1900)

Music & Libretto by Gustave Charpentier

This four-act Roman musical with five scenes, set to a libretto by the composer, was first performed in the Salle Favart at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on February 2, 1900. The story is set in Paris. Louise, the daughter of a working-class couple, is in love with Julien, a poor young poet. Louise's mother catches them talking to each other and immediately puts a stop to it. She chides her daughter, telling her that she is in love with a Bohemian who will amount to nothing. Louise's father agrees, although he has more compassion for his daughter's feelings. Louise promises never to see Julien again but burst into tears while reading to her father from a newspaper about the Parisian spring. In Montmartre at dawn, the streets come alive. Julien bumps into Louise as she and her mother are on their way to work at the dressmaker's. Julien rushes after Louise as her mother disappears, begging her to come and live with him. At work, Louise is distracted and unable to participate in the songs and conversations of her co-workers. They tease her; she hears her beloved's voice singing to her from outside. Pretending to be ill, she leaves; her co-workers watch her go with Julien. Louise and Julien live together in Montmarte, calling upon the city of Paris to protect their love and their lifestyle. A group of Bohemians enter and crown Louise as the Muse of Montmarttre. Louise's mother interrupts the festivities; her father is terminally ill, having taken sick when she left home. Louise agrees to go home with her mother, but gives her word to Julien that she will return. Her mother assures that this decision is all right with her. When Louise's father recovers, he and his wife don't let Louise go back to Julien. Desperate to return to the life behind, she argues with her parents, who tell her Julien will never marry her. She refuses to believe them, and insists on keeping her promise to Julien. Her father orders her to leave his house; as she walks away, he shakes his angry fist at the city which has robbed him of his daughter forever.

■ ACTE PREMIER.	■ ACT I.
(Une chambre mansardée dans un logement d'ouvrier. Au fond, la porte d'entrée; un peu à droite, la cuisine; sur le même côté, à l'avant-scène, une autre porte. A gauche, une porte vitrée, une grande fenêtre ouvrant sur le balcon; des toits, un coin de ciel parisien. Vis-à-vis le balcon, mais un peu plus élevée, une terrasse précédant un petit atelier d'artiste.)	A garret room in a workmen's lodging-house. At rear the entrance door. A little to the right, the kitchen; on same side, down stage, another door. Left, a glass door and a large window opening on balcony. Roofs, a little bit of Parisian sky. Opposite, but a little higher, a terrace fronting an artist's studio.
(Six heures du soir en avril.)	It is six o'clock, in April.
(Au lever du rideau, Louise va à la porte d'entrée où elle écoute, craintive, puis elle revient près du balcon, regarde d'abord derrière les rideaux, ouvre la fenêtre et se montre à Julien.)	As the curtain rises, Louise goes to entrance where she listens timidly, then she comes back to the balcony, watches first from behind the curtains, opens the window and shows herself to Julien.
JULIEN: (debout sur le terrasse.) O coeur ami! ô coeur promis! Helas si loin, si près! Toi! mon idole, ma joie, mon regret! Le jour s'envole... Ah! ta parole va-t-elle apprendre à mon amour que ton coeur prend plaisir à guetter mon bonjour?	JULIEN: (standing on terrace). Oh friendly heart, oh promised heart, alas so far, so near! You! my idol, my joy, my regret! The day sinks—Ah shall your speech teach my love that your heart finds pleasure in awaiting my "good-day"?
LOUISE: Vous avez tardé à m'envoyer votre bonjour quotidien; je ne l'espérais plus!... (Elle va écouter vers la porte d'entrée, puis revient.)	LOUISE: You delayed in sending me your usual "good-day." I had ceased to hope for it. (She goes to listen at entrance door, then returns.)
Je vous en remercie et vous envoie le mien du fond de mon coeur! (Elle lui envoie un baiser.)	I thank you for it and send you mine from the bottom of my heart. (She sends him a kiss.)
JULIEN: Tu m'as dit dans ta dernière lettre: "Prenez patience, l'heure est prochaine, écrivez à mon père; s'il refuse irrévocablement, je promets de fuir avec vous."	JULIEN: You told me in the last letter, "Be patient, the hour is near, write to my father; if he refuses irrevocably, I promise to fly with you."
LOUISE: (agitée, triste.) Je suis une folle de vous avoir dit cela. Que puis-je faire? Je vous aime tant! ... et j'aime tant mes parents! Si je les écoute, c'est la mort de mon coeur! ... Si je vous suis, Julien quel chagrin pour les miens!	LOUISE: (moved, sadly). I am foolish to have told you that. And I love my parents so much. If I listen to them ... the death of my heart! If I follow you, Julien, what a sorrow for my people! What can I do? I love you so much!
JULIEN: (doucement). Ame craintive et toujours flottante ... en songeant trop à leur bonheur, ne fais-tu pas notre malheur!	JULIEN: (gently). Fearsome heart and always doubting. In thinking too much of their happiness, do you not cause our misery?
LOUISE: (avec coquetterie). Malheur réparable!	LOUISE: (coquettishly). Reparable misfortune!
JULIEN: (avec chaleur). Irréparable!	JULIEN: (with arder). Irreparable!
LOUISE: Légère déception!	LOUISE: Slight deception.
JULIEN: Infinie souffrance!	JULIEN: Infinite suffering.
LOUISE: Vous m'oublierez!	LOUISE: You'll forget me.
JULIEN: Ah! tais-toi! Tes froides railleries me font trop de peine!	JULIEN: Oh! be quiet. Your cold sarcasms hurt me too much.
LOUISE: On ne peut badiner avec vous: vous ne seriez pas le premier à perdre vite la mémoire. Puis, vous parlez d'amour, et, semble-t-il, vous m'adorez; m'avez-vous jamais dit comment naquit cette tendresse? ...	LOUISE: One can no longer joke with you. You would not be the first to quickly forget. Besides, you speak of love and, it seems, you adore me. Have you ever told me how this love was born? Would it be indiscreet to ask you to Serais-je indiscrète en vous demandant d'en parler maintenant? Voyons, racontez et dépêchez-vous; maman va bientôt rentrer.	speak of it now? Come, tell me and hurry. Mamma will soon return.

JULIEN: Que voulez-vous dire?	JULIEN: What do you mean?
LOUISE: Contez-moi comment vous m'avez amiée. Avez-vous compris?	LOUISE: Tell me how you came to love me. Do you understand?
JULIEN: Prêtez l'oreille. Depuis longtemps j'habitais cette chambre sans me douter, hélas! que j'avais pour voisine une enfant aux grands yeux, une vierge des cieux, que des parents sévères gardaient comme une prisonnière.	JULIEN: Lend me an ear. For a long time I lived here without suspecting that I had for neighbor a child with big eyes, a virgin from heaven, whom severe parents were guarding like a prisoner.
LOUISE: La recluse attendait qu'un beau chevalier, ainsi que dans les livres, vint enfin la délivrer.	LOUISE: The recluse waited for a handsome knight, as in the books, to come and deliver her.
JULIEN: Comment l'aurais-je appris? Je dissertais le jour dans quelque brasserie, et, la nuit venue, je rimais des folies pour la lointaine Ophélie qu'évoquait mon désir; tandis que là, près moi, sommeillait l'avenir!	JULIEN: How was I to know it? I argued the day long in some brewery and at night I rhymed follies for the distant Ophelia that grew from my desire. While there, near me, lightly slept the future!
LOUISE: La recluse songeait au prince Charmant qui réveilla la Belle au Coeur Dormant! Comment aurait-elle su que son chevalier habitat au premier sous le ciel, et qu'en écoutant au mur, il pouvait surprendre les secrets de . . . mon coeur?	LOUISE: The recluse dreamt of the Prince Charming who awakened the Sleeping Beauty. How could she know that her knight lived on the first floor from the sky, and that, listening against the wall he could surprise the secrets of her heart?
JULIEN: (s'animant). Mais un soir dans l'escalier sombre, où je dégringolais comme d'habitude en chantant (Louise va écouter à la porte, puis revient), je vis passer près de moi, ô surprise! deux ombres inconnues dont la seconde, toute jolie, de forme frêle, indécise, dans l'ombre grise, laissa comme un sillage lumineux et parfumé. Le lendemain, c'était le jour de Pâques; de grand matin, je guettais votre fenêtre . . . Quelle musique dira l'émerveillement de mes yeux quand tu vins à paraitre, dans le soleil, souriante! . . . Une madone de Vinci ne sourit pas ainsi, non! non! ces sourires mutins ne fleurissent qu'à Paris! Je regardai longuement et mon destin m'apparut, lié pour jamais à ton image; tout autour de moi s'agitait la ville immense; tout fêtait l'heureux jour; tout clamait: Espérance! Et mon coeur chantait les matines d'amour! (La porte d'entrée s'ouvre, la mère parait. Elle reste sur le seuil, écoute, puis s'avance vers la fenêtre.)	JULIEN: (growing animated). But one evening on the sombre stairs, which I was as usual tumbling down while singing (Louise goes to door and listens, then returns) I saw two unknown shadows passing near me, the second of which, pretty, frail of form, uncertain in the gray light, left behind her something like a luminous and perfumed furrow. The next day, it was Easter, from early morning I watched your window. What music can tell the wonder of my eyes when I saw you appear in the sunlight, smiling! A madonna of Vinci does not smile like that; no, no. These cunning smiles only flower in Paris. I watched long and my destiny appeared to me united forever with your image. All about me was the movement of the immense city. Everything resounded. Hope and my heart sang the matins of love! (The entrance door opens, the mother appears. She remains on the sill, then moves toward window.)
LOUISE: Moi, je vous avais remarqué biein avant ce jour-là . . . Vous souvient-il qu'une fois à la fête de Montmartre vous nous avez suivies?	LOUISE: As for me, I had noticed you long before that day. Do you remember that once at the feast of Montmartre you followed us?
JULIEN: S'il m'en souvient . . . Vous m'avez souri et vous vous retourniez si fréquemment que votre mère prit la mouche et vous fit une scène . . . l'entêtée jalouse!	JULIEN: If I remember—you smiled to me and turned your head so frequently that your mother took alarm and made a scene—jealous obstinacy.
LOUISE: Une autre fois dans la cour, tandis que je puisais de l'eau, de votre fenêtre vous m'avez jeté des pétales de roses . . . J'en étais comme couverte et je restais tout étourdie, toute ravie . . .	LOUISE: Another time, in the courtyard, as I was drawing water, you threw rose petals on me from your window. I was covered with them and I stood astonished, delighted.
JULIEN: Mais votre mère de sa fenêtre nous guettait . . .	JULIEN: But your mother was watching us from a window.
LOUISE: Sous l'avalanche parfumée, mon coeur battait à se briser . . .	LOUISE: Under the avalanche of flowers my heart was beating, fit to break.
JULIEN: Notre ennemie, furieuse, vous rappela!	JULIEN: Our enemy, furious, called you away.
LOUISE: Et le doux songe s'envola! . . .	LOUISE: And the sweet dream flew off.
JULIEN: Mais l'amour veillait et dans l'ombre apprêtait d'inespérées, de chastes fiancailles. Or, un soir que je passais devant votre porte.	JULIEN: But love was watching and, in the dark, was making ready our unexpected and chaste betrothal. Thus one night I was passing by your door—
LA MERE: (à part.) Que vais-je apprendre?	MOTHER: (aside). What am I about to learn?
JULIEN: . . . Je la vis s'ouvrir lentement . . . une forme blanche se dressa . . . et s'élanca vers moi! C'était toi! C'etait Louise!	JULIEN: I saw it slowly open—a white form appeared—and rushed toward me. It was you—Louise.
LOUISE: Elle venait te dire: L'aveu que mes parents out tenté d'étouffer, je viens le proclamer!	LOUISE: She came to say: "The vow my parents tried to stifle, I come to proclaim."
LA MERE: (à part, ricanant). Ah! ah! ah! Très bien!	MOTHER: (aside, grinning). Ah, ah, ah; very good.
JULIEN: Ah! les douces fiancailles!	JULIEN: And the sweet betrothal—
LOUISE: Nous ne pouvions pas nous parler . . .	LOUISE: We couldn't speak.
JULIEN: Mes yeux cherchaient en vain tes yeux . . .	JULIEN: My eyes sought yours in vain.
ENSEMBLE: Nos deux coeurs, l'un près de l'autre, follement bondissaient! . . . De la maison endormie le souffle grondait . . . et la nuit nous bercait! . . . (Les deux amants restent un moment pensifs, puis Louise veut aller à la porte, elle se retourne et voit sa mère.)	TOGETHER: Our two hearts, one next to the other, beat madly. From the sleeping house, breaths grumbled—and the night cradled us! (The lovers remain thoughtful a moment. Louise turns to go to the door and sees her mother.)
LOUISE: Ah! . . . (La mère la saisu par le bras, l'entraine dans la cuisine, et revient près de la fenêtre.)	LOUISE: Ah! (Mother seizes her by the arm, pulls her in the kitchen, and comes back to the window.)
JULIEN: (écoute avec inquiétude). Eh bien! vous ne dites plus rien, chère Louise? (mimique furieuse de la mère.) De grâce, répondez avant que votre geôlière tienne nous prendre.	JULIEN: (listening anxiously). Well, you don't talk any more, dear Louise. (Mother is furious.) For pity's sake answer before your jailer surprises us.
LA MERE: (se moutrant à Julien). Allez-vous bientôt vous taire? ou faut-il que j'aille vous tirer les oreilles? . . . (Stupeur de Julien. La mère entre dans la chambre voisine; Louise sort de la cuisine. Julien reparait sur le balcon; il montre à Louise la	MOTHER: (showing herself to Julien). Are you going to stop talking; or shall I come and pull your ears? (Astonishment of Julien. Mother exits into room. Louise comes out of kitchen and Julien reappears on balcony. He shows Louise the letter he has written to the par-

lettre qu'il doit envoyer aux parents, puis il disparait. Louise craintive, regagne la cuisine.)	ents, then disappears. Louise, frightened, goes into kitchen again.)
JULIEN: (à la cantonade). Tra la la la la la! (Il rit bruyamment.) Ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! (La mère reparait. Elle ferme la fenêtre et guette un moment derrière le rideau. Louise, tremblante, sort de la cuisine; elle range sur le buffet, les provisions apportées par la mère; celle-ci s'avance vers elle.)	JULIEN: (outside). Tra, la, la, la, la, la. (He laughs loudly.) Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha, ha. (Mother reappears. She closes window and watches. Louise, trembling, comes out of kitchen. She arranges on the buffet the provisions brought by mother, who advances on her.)
LA MERE: (imitant Julien.) "C'etait mon adorée! (Louise, pour l'eviter, tourne autour de la table.) "Ma douce fiancée! La fidèle promise! Ma Louise! (La mère, féroce, prend les mains de Louise.) "Nous ne pouvions pas nous parler! . . . Mes yeux cherchaient en vain tes yeux! . . . Nos coeurs bondissaient! L'ombre frémissait! Et tout le monde dormait!" (Louise s'échappe; la mère lui montre le point.—Exaspérée.) . . . Ah! malheureuse enfant! Si ton père l'apprenait! S'il vous avait surpris! Hein! s'il vous avait surpris! dis! (Louise se cache le visage.) Lui qui te croit si naïve, si sage, s'il connaissait ta conduite, il en mourrait!	MOTHER: (Imitating Julien). It was my adored one. (Louise, to avoid her, turns around table.) 'My gentle betrothed! My promised one; my Louise! (The angry mother takes Louise's hands in hers.) 'We couldn't speak. My eyes sought yours in vain. Our hearts beat together. The shadows trembled. And the world slept.' (Louise breaks away. The mother shakes her fist exasperated.) Oh, unhappy child! If your father knew. If he had surprised you. Eh, say, had he surprised you? (Louise hides her face in her hands.) He who believed you to be so innocent, so good; if he knew of your goings on, he'd die of it.
LOUISE: (suppliante). Pouquoi ne roulez-vous pas nous marier? Pourquoi m'obligez-vous à me chacher? Qu-avez-vous à lui reprocher? Ses manières d'artiste, sa gaité, son métier de poète . . .	LOUISE: (pleading). Why don't you let us marry? Why compel me to hide? What can you reproach him with—his artist's manners, his good humor, his occupation of poet?
LA MERE: Un chenapan! un crève-faim! un débauché sans vergogne!	MOTHER: A rascal, a starveling, a dissipator.
LOUISE: Lui, si bon, si courageux!	LOUISE: He! So good, so courageous.
LA MERE: . . . Un pilier de cabaret!	MOTHER: The pillar of a wine shop.
LOUISE: S'il avait une femme, il n'irait pas cabaret!	LOUISE: If he had a wife he wouldn't go to the wine shop.
LA MERE: Une femme! Ah! ah! ah! Ce ne sont pas les femmes qui lui manquent!	MOTHER: A wife! Ha, ha, ha! It is not women that he seeks!
LOUISE: Ah, je t'en prie, si tu crois m'en détacher, tu te trompes, car tes attaques me le font chérir davantage! Tu peux nous empêcher d'être heureux . . . Jamais, jamais tu ne briseras notre amour!	LOUISE: I beg of you, if you think to turn me, you are mistaken; your running him down only makes me love him more. You may prevent our being happy. Never, never, will you break our love!
LA MERE: Ah! quel aplomb! Au lieu de baisser la tête, tu oses te vanter de ton amant!	MOTHER: What impudence! In place of being ashamed, you dare to boast of your lover.
LOUISE: Mon amant! . . . Il ne l'est pas encore! . . . mais on dirait vraiment que vous voulez qu'il le devienne!	LOUISE: My lover! He's not that yet, but one would almost think you wish he were.
LA MERE: (s'élance sur Louise qui l'évite en tournant autour de la table.) Petite malheureuse! Tu nous menaces! Ah! prends garde que je n'explique tout à ton père! . . . (Elles entendent des pas dans l'escalier; craintives elles se taisent, écoutent; le père entre. Le père tient une lettre à la main; la mère va vite à la cuisine; Louise, troublée, débarrasse la table pour le repas.)	MOTHER: (jumping at Louise, who avoids her around the table). Little wretch! You threaten us. Take care that I don't explain to your father! (They hear steps on the stairs. Frightened, they stop and listen. Father enters. He holds a letter in his hand. Mother goes quickly to kitchen. Louise, anxious, sets the table.)
LE PERE: Bonsoir! La soupe est prête?	FATHER: Good evening. Is the soup ready?
LA MERE: (criant de la cuisine.) Oui, de suite. (Le père s'assied. Louise tisonne le feu. Le père regarde la lettre, la dècachéte et lit. Louise revient portant les assiettes, les verres, les couverts. Le père pose la lettre sur la table et regarde sa fille. Le père lui tend les bras: ils s'embrassent. La mère rentre, portant la soupe; le père sert la soupe. Ils mangent. La mère se lève, va porter les assiettes et la soupière dans la cuisine.)	MOTHER: (from the kitchen). Yes, right away. (Father sits down. Louise pokes the fire. Father looks at letter, opens and reads it. Louise returns with the plates, glasses and napkins. Father puts letter down and looks at his daughter. He opens his arms. They embrace. Mother brings in the soup. They eat. Mother carries plates and tureen into kitchen.)
LE PERE: Ah! quelle journée!	FATHER: Oh, what a day!
LOUISE: Tu es fatigué?	LOUISE: You are tired.
LE PERE: Je sens que je ne suis plus jeune et les journées sont longues!	FATHER: I feel that I am no longer young and that the days are long.
LOUISE: Pauvre père, tu ne te reposeras donc jamais? (La mère revient avec le ragoût.)	LOUISE: Poor father, will you never have a rest? (Mother re-enters with stew.)
LE PERE: Et qui ferait bouillir la marmite si je quittais l'outil?	FATHER: And who'd keep the pot boiling if I quit work?
LA MERE: Depuis trente ans que tu t'échines, tu aurais bien mérité un peu de repos! (Regardant du côte de la fenêtre de Julien.) Quand on pense qu'il y a tant de fainéants qui passent leur vie à faire la fête!	MOTHER: For the thirty years you've kept at it, you've certainly earned a bit of rest. (Looking toward Julien's window.) And when one thinks of how many loafers there are who pass their lives enjoying themselves.
LE PERE: Ils ont la chance d'être venus au monde après leurs pères!	FATHER: They had the luck to come into the world after their fathers.
LA MERE: (rageuse). Tu trouves que c'est juste? Moi, je dis que tout le monde devrait travailler!	MOTHER: (raging). Do you find that just? I say that everybody ought to work.
LE PERE: L'égalité, les grands mots, l'impossible! Si on avait le droit de choisir, on choisirait le métier le moins fatigant!	FATHER: Equality, big words, the impossible. If one had the right to choose, he'd take the occupation that was easiest.
LA MERE: (regardant sa fille). C'est vrai, tout le monde voudrait être artiste!	MOTHER: (looking at Louise). True, everybody would want to be an artist.
LE PERE: (riant). Et il ne resterait personne pour faire les gros ouvrages! Il y a longtemps que j'en ai pris mon parti! . . . Quand on n'a pas de rentes, il faut se contenter d'en gagner pour les autres . . . Chacun son lot dans la belle vie!	FATHER: (laughing). And there would remain nobody to do the hard work. For a long time I've made up my mind when one hasn't an income one must work for others to have it. Everyone to his own fate in the great life.
LA MERE: Tu es bien résigné aujourd'hui: les rentes ne seraient pas à dédaigner.	MOTHER: You are too resigned. An income is not to be despised.

LE PERE: Ceux qui en ont sont-ils plus heureux? Le bonheur, vois-tu, c'est d'être comme nous sommes, nous aimant bien, nous portant bien; ce bonheur-là, nul ne peut nous le prendre! (La mère dessert.) Le bonheur, c'est le foyer où l'on se repose, où on oublie près de ceux qu'on aime, les malechances de la vie!... (Il attire sa fille à lui et l'embrasse.) Ceux qui ont des rentes aujourd'hui n'en auront peut-être plus demain... Nous, toujours, nous serons heureux! (Il se l'eve, saisit par ta taille la mere lui fait faire quelques tours de valse lourde. La mère se dégage.)	FATHER: Those who have one, are they any happier? Happiness, you see, is to be just as we are, loving one another, in good health. That happiness no one can take from us. (Mother clears table.) Happiness is the fireside where one rests, where one forgets, close to those one loves, the ill fortunes of life. (He draws her to him and kisses her.) Those who have the income today, perhaps won't have any tomorrow. As for us, we'll always be happy. (He rises, seizes Mother by the waist and makes a few heavy waltz steps. Mother gets away.)
LA MERE: Assez! Vas-tu finir! Grand fou!	MOTHER: Enough. Let up. Big fool!
LE PERE: (riant). Ah! ah! ah! je suis heureux! (Il cherche sa pipe, la bourre, s'assied près du feu.)	FATHER: (laughing). Ha, ha, ha! I'm happy! (He gets his pipe, fills it and sits by the fire.)
LA MERE: (à Louise, durement). Vas-tu me laisser faire toute la besogne? Allons, remue toi! (La mère débarrasse la table. Louise essule la table, elle apercoit la lettre de Julien; elle y met un baiser furtif, puis s'avance vers le père et la lui donne.)	MOTHER: (to Louise, hard). Are you going to let me do all the work? Come, move about. (Mother clears table; Louise wipes it off and sees letter of Julien. She kisses it furtively and gives it to her father.)
LE PERE: Ah! merci... (Il regard malignement sa fille. Louise s'éloigne. La mère apporte une lampe allumée. Le père relit la lettre.)	FATHER: Ah, thank you. (He looks banteringly at his daughter. Louise moves away. Mother brings lighted lamp. Father reads letter again.)
LA MERE: (au père). Une lettre?	MOTHER: (to Father). A letter?
LE PERE: Oui, une lettre du voisin . . .	FATHER: Yes; a letter from the neighbor.
LA MERE: Une autre lettre?	MOTHER: Another letter?
LE PERE: Il renouvelle sa demande . . .	FATHER: He renews his request.
LA MERE: Quel toupet! Après ce qui s'est passé!...	MOTHER: What a nerve, after all that has taken place!
LE PERE: Que veux-tu dire?...	FATHER: What do you mean?
LA MERE: (embarrassée). Après notre premier refus...	MOTHER: (embarrassed). After our first refusal.
LE PERE: (avec bienveillance). Mon Dieu! sa lettre est gentille... (Il montre Louise.) il semble l'aimer, il n'est pas déteste de Louise... (Louise se jette dans les bras de son père.)	FATHER: (kindly). Good Lord! His letter is nice. (Pointing to Louise.) He appears to love her, and he is not displeasing to Louise. (Louise throws herself in Father's arms.)
LA MERE: (dont la colère éclate). C'est trop fort! Il en a de l'aplomb!	MOTHER: (whose anger explodes). This is too much. He has his impudence with him.
LE PERE: Allons! allons! ce n'est pas la peine de se mettre en colère ... Tu tournes tout au tragique ... Il serait facile de prendre de nouveaux renseignements ... savoir s'il est devenu ... plus sérieux. Nous ne sommes pas forcés de lui donner Louise dès demain et il ne va pas nous l'enlever, je suppose? ... Si les renseignements ne suffisent pas, eh bien, on l'invitera ... lorsque je l'aurai vu, je ...	FATHER: Come, come; it's nothing to get in a rage about. You make a tragedy of everything. We can easily make new inquiries about him—find out if he has become more settled. We are not forced to give him Louise tomorrow, and he's not going to abduct her, I suppose. If our inquiries don't result well, then we'll have him call. When I shall have seen him, I—
LA MERE: Lui, ici, par exemple! S'il entre ici, moi, j'en sortirai!	MOTHER: Him, here! Indeed! If he comes, I leave.
LE PERE: (conciliant). Allons! allons!	FATHER: (conciliating). Come, come.
LA MERE: Tu voudrais m'obliger à recevoir ici ce vaurien qui me rit au nez quand il me rencontre ...	MOTHER: You would force me to receive here this good-for-nothing who laughs in my face when I meet him.
LE PERE: Des gamineries!	FATHER: Boyishness!
LA MERE: Ce chenapan, ce débauché, ce bohème, ce pilier de cabaret dont l'existence est le scandale da quartier? Et je ne dis pas tout! car j'en sais sur son compte des infamies! ...	MOTHER: This rascal, debauchee, bohemian! This saloon supporter whose existence is the scandal of the quarter. And I don't say everything. I know a few other dreadful things about him.
LOUISE: (perdant la tête). Ce n'est pas vrai! (La mère lui donne une gifle. Le père s'interpose, très ennuyé. Louise tombe accablée sur une chaise, et pleure ... Le père revient vers sa fille.)	LOUISE: (losing her head). It is not true. (Mother smacks her face. Father interferes, much annoyed. Louise falls on a chair exhausted and weeps. Father goes toward his daughter.)
LE PERE: O mon enfant, ma Louise, tu sais combien nous t'aimons! Si nous sommes prudents vis-à-vis de ceux qui te remarquent, c'est qu'arrivés au bout du chemin que tu vas gravir, nous en connaissons toutes les misères! (La mère est allée en bougonnant dans la cuisine, et s'est mise à repasser.) A ton âge, on voit tout beau, tout rose! ... Prendre un mari, c'est choisir une poupée. (Geste étonné de Louise.) Oui, une poupée! malheureusement, ces poupées-là, ma fille, vous font parfois pleurer bien des larmes!	FATHER: Oh, my child; my Louise. You know how we love you. If we are prudent toward those who notice you, it is, that having arrived at the end of the road that you begin, we know all the miseries of it. (Mother has gone sulkily into kitchen and starts ironing.) At your age everything is beautiful, rose colored. Taking a husband is choosing a doll. (Louise is astonished.) Yes, a doll. Unfortunately, these sorts of dolls, my daughter, often make you shed many tears.
LOUISE: Oui, quand elles sont méchantes ... Mais en la choisissant bonne, gentille, aimante ...	LOUISE: Yes, when they are wicked. But in choosing one that is good, gentle, loving—
LE PERE: Comment veux-tu la choisir, petite fille?	FATHER: How would you choose it, little girl?
LOUISE: Avec mon coeur!	LOUISE: With my heart.
LE PERE: C'est un bien mauvais juge ...	FATHER: It's a very poor judge.
LOUISE: Pourquoi donc?	LOUISE: But why?
LE PERE: Qui dit amoureux, toujours dit aveugle! ...	FATHER: One who speaks of love always speaks blindly.
LA MERE: (à part). S'il veut discuter avec elle, il n'a pas fini! (La mère pose son fer sur la table très fort.)	MOTHER: (aside). If he's going to argue with her he'll not finish. (Mother places iron down very hard.)
LOUISE: (plus hardiment). Mais avant d'aimer, avant d'être aveugle, ne peut-on découvrir les défauts de celui ... qu'on aimera?	LOUISE: (boldly). But before loving, before being blind, can one not discover the faults of the person—who will be loved?
LE PERE: Peut-être, s'il ne nous manquait une chose ...	FATHER: Perhaps, only that one thing is wanting.
LOUISE: Laquelle?	LOUISE: Which?
LE PERE: L'expérience!	FATHER: Experience.
LOUISE: (moqueuse). Alors ceux qui se marient deux fois sont plus heureux la seconde	LOUISE: (mockingly). Then those who marry twice are happier the second time.

LE PERE: (sérieux). Ne plaisante pas, Louise! S'il est difficile de déchiffrer les coeurs, on peut toujours lire dans le passé de celui qu'on aime, et par là pressentir l'avenir.
(La mère, qui s'impatiente, chante un motif du récit de Julien.)

LA MERE: La! la! la! la!

LE PERE: Crois-tu qu'il t'aime?

LOUISE: Oui!

LA MERE: La! la! la! la!

LE PERE: Et toi, crois-tu l'aimer?
(Louise se cache la tête sur la poitrine de son père.)

LA MERE: (à mi-voix). "C'etait mon adorée . . ."

LE PERE: Il ne t'a jamais parlé?

LOUISE: (avec effort). Non!
(Le père la regarde un peu méfiant.)

LA MERE: (à part, continuant d'imiter Julien). "Nous ne pouvions pas nous parler!
. . . Nous ne pouvions pas nous regarder! . . . Nos coeurs bondissaient! L'ombre frémissait! Et tout le monde dormait!"
(Louise très troublée se détourne; le père lui prend les mains.)

LE PERE: Louise, si je repousse sa demande, me promets-tu de l'oublier?
(Louise hésite.)
Promets-tu d'obéir en fille sage à notre volonté?
Ah! si tu devais un jour renier ma tendresse, sache bien que, privé de toi, je ne pourrais vivre . . . ô mon enfant, ma Louise! . . .

LOUISE: (émue). Père, toujours, je vous aimerai!
(Le père la presse sur son coeur, elle éclate en sauglots.)

LE PERE: (relève Louise). Allons, enfant, sèche tes belles mirettes!
Ce gros chagrin passera . . . et plus tard tu nous remercieras de t'avoir préservée du malheur . . . Allons! allons! petite folle!
(Il prend le journal sur la table, enjoué.)
Tiens, lis-moi le journal, ca te distraira et ca ménagera mes pauvres yeux . . . Veux-tu!
(La mère rentre et s'assied près de la table, reprisant du linge.)

LOUISE: (avec effort). Oui . . .
(Dix heures sonnent. Louise prend le journal, va s'asseoir près de la lampe et commence sa lecture d'une voix étranglée de sanglots.) (lisant). "La saison printanière est des plus brillantes. Paris

FATHER: (seriously). Do not joke, Louise. If it is difficult to know hearts, one can read in the past of whoever one loves and by that means learn something of the future.
(Mother, who is growing impatient, sings snatches from the song of Julien.)

MOTHER: La, la, la, la.

FATHER: Do you believe he loves you?

LOUISE: Yes.

MOTHER: La, la, la, la.

FATHER: And you; do you believe you love him?
(Louise hides her head in her father's breast.)

MOTHER: (in a low voice). "He was my adored one."

FATHER: And he never spoke to you?

LOUISE: (with effort). No.
(The Father looks at her doubtingly.)

MOTHER: (aside, still imitating Julien). "We could not speak to one another! We could not see each other. Our hearts beat madly. The shadows trembled. And all the world slept."
(Louise, troubled, turns away. Father takes her hands.)

FATHER: Louise, should I reject his request, will you promise me to forget him?
(Louise hesitates.)
Do you promise, like a good girl, to obey our will?
Ah, if some day you should betray my love, know this, that deprived of you, I could not live. Oh, my child, my Louise.

LOUISE: (moved). Father, always I shall love you!
(Father presses her to his heart. She bursts into tears).

FATHER: (raises her). Come child, dry your pretty eyes.
This big grief will pass, and later you will thank us for having saved you from trouble. Come, come, little fool.
(He takes up paper on table. Gaily.)
Here, read me the paper. It will make you forget and will save my poor eyes. Will you?
(Mother enters, sits at table, mending linen.)

LOUISE: (with effort). Yes.
(Ten o'clock strikes. Louise takes the paper, sits by the lamp and reads with voice full of tears. Reading.)
"The Spring season is most brilliant. All Paris is in holiday garb—" tout en fête."

(Elle sanglote.)
Paris! . . .
(Le rideau tombe lentement.)

■ ACTE DEUXIEME

PREMIER TABLEAU.

(Un carrefour au bas de la butte Montmartre. A gauche, un hangar; a droite une maison et un cabaret. Au fond, à droite, un escalier montant. Au fond, à gauche, un escalier descendant. Au loin, à droite, la Butte; à gauche le faubourg.)

(Sous le hangar, Une Laitiere prèpare son étalage et allume son feu; près d'elle Une Fillette plie les journaux du matin.—A droite, Une petite Chiffonniere travaille hâtivement; à côte d'elle une Glaneuse de charbon et, plus loin, un Bricoleur fouillent les ordures. Des Menageres vont aux provisions.)

(Cinq heures du matin, en avril.)

LA PETITE CHIFFONNIERE: (à la glaneuse). Dire qu'en c' moment y a des femmes qui dorment dans d'la soie!

LA GLANEUSE: Bah! les draps de soie s'usent plus vite que les autres . . .

LA PETITE CHIFFONNIERE: Oui, parce qu'on y dort plus longtemps!

LA GLANEUSE: Grande bête! . . . ton tour viendra.

LA PETITE CHIFFONNIERE: Mon tour! . . . si c'était vrai!
(Un noctambule parait.)

LE NOCTAMBULE: (à la plieuse).
Si jolie, si matin! . . .
Malice du destin
qui revêt de satin
et de robes d'aurore
les guetteuses de nuit
aux rides inclémentes
et cache au libertin,
sous des voiles de nuit,
les fillettes d'aurore
que le désir tourmente!
Un baiser?

LA PLIEUSE: Passez vot' chemin!

LE NOCTAMBULE: Mon chemin?
Je le cherche . . .
me tendras-tu la perche?
Sans les lanternes de tes jolis yeux, je risque fort de me perdre? . . . Tu veux? . . .
(Elle lui tourne le dos.)

LA GLANEUSE ET LE BRICOLEUR: Ah! . . . (s'étirant.) Ah! . . .

LE NOCTAMBULE: (regardant autour de lui). En ce froid carrefour où gémit la souffrance, je me sens mal à l'aise et . . .

(She sobs.)
"Paris—"
(The curtain falls slowly.)

■ ACT II.

SCENE I.

(Under the shed a milk woman prepares her layout and lights her fire. Near her a girl folds the morning papers. Right, a little rag picker works quickly. By her side a coal gatherer, and further a scavenger turning over the dirt. Housekeepers pass to market.)

(Five in the morning, April.)

LITTLE RAG PICKER: (to coal woman). And to think that, right now, there are women who sleep in silk.

COAL WOMAN: Bah, silk sheets go quicker than others.

LITTLE RAG PICKER: Yes, because they sleep longer in them.

COAL WOMAN: Big fool. Your turn'll come.

LITTLE RAG PICKER: My turn! If it were only true.
(Night Walker appears.)

NIGHT WALKER: (to newspaper girl). So pretty, so early!
Malice of fate,
That in satin, clothes
With robes of the dawn,
The watchers of night,
Wrinkled and pale,
And hides from the libertine
Under cover of night
The children of dawn
Whom desire torments!
A kiss.

PAPER FOLDER: Go your way.

NIGHT WALKER: My way I now seek.
Will you be my guide?
Without the lights of your pretty eyes
I risk being lost—Will you?
(She turns her back on him.)

COAL WOMAN and SCAVENGER: Ah! (stretching). Ah!

NIGHT WALKER: (looking about) In this cold, wretched street, where suffering reigns, I am not at my ease, and—

(A la fillette.) sans ta jeune chair, il me semblerait choir au seuil du sombre enfer où le Dante écrivit: "Ici point d'espérance!" Le son de ma voix éveille-t-il en toi une vague souvenance, que tu restes songeuse? Peut-être un frais désir fait tressaillir ton coeur d'amoureuse?	(To the girl) Without your young flesh I would seem to fall on the brink of sombre hell, where Dante wrote, "Here give up hope." The sound of my voice wakes in you A vague remembrance That you dreamt? Perhaps some fresh desire makes Your amorous heart palpitate.
LA PLIEUSE: (riant). Vous êtes fou!	THE PAPER GIRL: (laughing). You are crazy.
LA LAITIERE: (riant). Sa folie n'est pas dangereuse . . . Qui êtes-vous?	MILK WOMAN: (laughing). But it's not dangerous. Who are you?
LE NOCTAMBULE: (Rejetant son manteau sur l'épaule et apparaissant séduisant.) Je suis le Plaisir de Paris. (Les deux femmes font un geste d'étonnement admiratif. La petite chiffonnière interrompt son travail et s'approche.)	NIGHT WALKER: (opening cloak and looking seductive). I am the Pleasure of Paris. (The two women express surprised admiration. The Rag Picker stops her work to come nearer.)
LA LAITIERE: Où allez-vous?	MILK SELLER: Where are you going?
LE NOCTAMBULE: Je vais vers les amantes que le désir tourmente. Je vais cherchant les coeurs qu'oublia le bonheur. (Montrant la ville.) Là-bas glânant le rire . . . icí semant l'envie, prêchant partout le droit de tous à la folie. Je suis le procureur de la grande cité, ton humble serviteur! . . . ou ton maitre! . . .	NIGHT WALKER: I go to the lovers Whom desire torments; I go looking for hearts Forgotten by joy. (Pointing at the town.) There gathering laughter—here sowing envy— Preaching broadcast the right of all to folly. I am the soul of the great city. Your humble servant—or your master!
LA LAITIERE: (le menacant). Effronté! (Il s'enfuit en riant. Au coin de la rue, il heurte violemment un chiffonnier et disparaît. Le chiffonnier chancelle et tombe.)	MILK WOMAN: (threatening him). Impudent! (He escapes laughing. At the corner he knocks down a rag picker and disappears.)
LE CHIFFONNIER: Fait' attention . . . butor!	RAG PICKER: Look out—fool!
LE NOCTAMBULE: (déjà loin). Je suis le procureur de la grande cité!	NIGHT WALKER: (far away). I am the soul of the great city.
LE CHIFFONNIER: (à part). Ah! . . . je le connais . . . le misérable! Ce n'est pas la première fois qu'il se trouve sur mon chemin . . . (Au bricoleur.) Un soir, il y a longtemps, je m'en souviens comme si c'était hier . . . ici, au même endroit . . . il m'est apparu . . . Hélas! il n'était pas seul, ce jour-là! une fillette lui donnait la main et souriait à sa chanson! C'était ma fille! Je l'avais laissée là, au travail . . . il est venu, il lui a soufflé à l'oreille ses tentations mauvaises . . . et la coquette l'a écouté! Ell'l'a suivi! En s'enfuyant ell'm'a heurté! . . . Comme aujourd'hui . . . je suis tombé! . . . ah! . . . (Il sanglote et se met au travail.)	RAG PICKER: (aside). Ah! I know him—the wretch! This is not the first time I find him in my way. (To the Scavenger.) One night, long ago—I remember it as if it were yesterday—here, at the same place, he appeared to me. Alas! he was not alone that day, for a young girl held him by the hand and smiled at his song. It was my daughter! I had left her at work. He came and whispered his bad temptations in her ear. And the coquette listened to him. She followed him and, in escaping, knocked against me—like today. I fell—ah! (He sobs and starts working.)
LA GLANEUSE: Pauvre homme! . . .	CHARCOAL WOMAN: Poor man!
LE BRICOLEUR: Bah! dans toutes les familles, c'est la même chose! Moi, j'en avais trois . . . je n'ai pu les tenir! . . . Faut pas leur en vouloir si elles préfèr' à notre vie d'enfer le paradis qui les appelle làbas! . . .	SCAVENGER: Hah! It's the same thing in all families. I had three—I couldn't hold them. Who's to blame if they prefer to our life of hell the paradise that awaits them over there.
LA PETITE CHIFFONNIERE: (à part). Est-c'que les bons lits, les belles robes, comme le soleil, ne devraient pas être à tout le monde! (Elle tend les bras vers le soleil.) (Deux Gardiens de la Paix traversent lentement la scène et s'approchent de la laitière. Le carrefour s'anime.—Une Balayeuse apparait.)	LITTLE RAG PICKER: (aside.) Ought not good beds, fine dresses, like the sun, be the property of everyone? (She lifts her arms toward the sun. Two Peace Officers slowly cross stage and approach Milk Woman. Street gets animated. A Street Sweeper comes on.)
PREMIER GARDIEN: (à la laitière). Belle journée!	FIRST OFFICER: (to Milk Woman). Fine day.
LA LAITIERE: Voici le printemps!	MILK WOMAN: Spring is with us.
PREMIER GARDIEN: La saison des amours . . .	OFFICER: The season of love.
LA LAITIERE: Pour ceux qui ont vingt ans! . . .	MILK WOMAN: For those who are twenty.
DEUXIEME GARDIEN: Bah! Chacun son tour!	SECOND OFFICER: Bah! Each one in his turn.
LA LAITIERE: J'attends encore le mien!	MILK WOMAN: I'm still waiting for mine.
PREMIER GARDIEN: Vous n'avez jamais aimé? (Un gavroche s'approche et se chauffe les mains au fourneau.)	FIRST OFFICER: You've never loved? (Street urchin enters; warms his hands.)
LA LAITIERE: (simplement). Je n'ai pas eu le temps. (Les gardiens rient.)	MILK WOMAN: I hadn't the time. (Officers laugh.)
LE GAVROCHE: (à la laitière). Un p'tit noir!	STREET URCHIN: (to Milk Woman). A little black.
LA BALAYEUSE: (fanfaronne). Moi, j'ai eu ch'vaux et voiture . . . Y a vingt ans . . . J'étais la reine de Paris! Quell' dégringolade! hein? mais je ne regrette rien! . . . je me suis tant amusée. Ah! la belle vie! le joyeux, le tendre, l'inoubliable paradis!	STREET SWEEPER: (boastingly). I had horses and carriages—twenty years ago. I was the queen of Paris. What a fall, eh? But I regret nothing. I had so much fun. What a fine life—the joyous, the sweet, the unforgettable paradise.
LE GAVROCHE: (avec une naïveté feinte.) Dites; donnez-moi l'adresse . . .	URCHIN: (with feigned innocence). Say, give me the address.
LA BALAYEUSE: Quelle adresse?	SWEEPER: What address?
LE GAVROCHE: L'adresse . . . de vot' "paradis!"	URCHIN: Why, of your "paradise."
LA BALAYEUSE: Mais, mon petit . . . (Montrant la ville, tendre.) C'est Paris!	SWEEPER: Look here, young fellow (pointing at city tenderly). It's Paris.
LE GAVROCHE: (jouant l'étonnement). Paris! . . . C'est étonnant! depuis que j'suis au monde j'm'en étais pas encore apercu!	URCHIN: (pretending astonishment.) Paris! Astonishing! Since I came into the world, I never suspected it.
PREMIER GARDIEN: Allons! circule!	FIRST OFFICER: Come, move on.
LE GAVROCHE: De quoi! On n'peut pas s'instruire?	URCHIN: What for? Can't one learn anything?
PREMIER GARDIEN: Va travailler! (Il le pousse. Le gavroche s'en va. Il se retourne.)	FIRST OFFICER: Go to work. (Officer pushes him. Urchin goes, then turns.)

LE GAVROCHE: (criant). Y en a donc que pour les femm's, dans vot' "paradis"?
(Geste menacant des gardiens; le gamin s'enfuit; les gardiens s'éloignent. La petite chiffonière s'en va courbée sous le poids d'un sac de chiffons. La balayeuse reprend son travail.)

LA PETITE CHIFFONNIERE: (avec amertume.) Y en a qu'pour les femmes!
(Julien parait au fond de la scène: il fait un signe à ses amis dont les têtes surgissent en haut de l'escalier descendant. Les Bohèmes, s'avancent, comiquement, avec des allures de conspirateurs.)

LE PEINTRE: (à Julien). C'est ici?

LE SCULPTEUR: C'est là qu'elle travaille?
(Julien indique la maison.)

JULIEN: Sa mère l'accompagnera jusqu'à cette porte . . . sitôt disparue, je m'élance . . . je rattrape Louise, et si ses parents refusent . . .

LE PEINTRE: Tu l'enlèves!

TOUS: (entourant Julien). Bravo!

LE CHANSONNIER: Mais consentira-t-elle?

JULIEN: Je la déciderai! . . .
(Ils se répandent sur la place.)

L'ETUDIANT: (à Julien). Nous en ferons notre Muse!

LE SCULPTEUR: Le coin est joli!

UN JEUNE POETE: Muse des Bohèmes!

LE PEINTRE: Un vrai carrefour à sérénades . . .

UN PHILOSOPHE: (avec dédain). Une Muse?

LE CHANSONNIER: Nous aurions du nous munir de nos instruments . . .

L'ETUDIANT: On la couronnera!
(Des têtes de bonnes paraissent aux fenêtres de la maison.)

LE SCULPTEUR: Nous reviendrons.

LE PHILOSOPHE: Les Muses sont mortes!

LE POETE: On les ressuscitera!

LE PEINTRE: (lorgnant les fenêtres). Oh! les jolies filles!

LE SCULPTEUR: Mesdemoiselles?

LE CHANSONNIER: Elles sont charmantes!

LE POETE: Ravissantes!
(Les bohèmes envoient des baisers et saluent; d'antres font les clowns. Le chansonnier, grattant sa canne ainsi qu'une guitare.)

URCHIN: (shouting). There's only room for women—in your paradise.
(Officers threaten him—he flies. Officers depart. The little Rag Picker exits, bending under load. Sweeper resumes work.)

LITTLE RAG PICKER: (bitterly). There's only room for women.
(Julien appears at rear. Makes sign to friends whose heads appear above stairs. The Bohemians advance comically, like conspirators.)

PAINTER: (to Julien.) Is it here?

SCULPTOR: Is it here she works?
(Julien points to house.)

JULIEN: Her mother will bring her to the door. As soon as she disappears I rush in, catch Louise again and if her parents refuse—

PAINTER: You abduct her.

ALL: (surrounding Julien). Bravo!

SONGSTER: But will she consent?

JULIEN: I shall decide for her.
(They spread over the place.)

STUDENT: (to Julien). We'll make her our Muse.

SCULPTOR: The corner is pretty.

YOUNG POET: Muse of the Bohemians.

PAINTER: A choice spot for serenades.

PHILOSOPHER: (disdainfully). A Muse?

SONGSTER: We ought to have brought our instruments.

STUDENT: We'll crown her.
(Servant girls' heads appear at window.)

SCULPTOR: We'll come back.

PHILOSOPHER: The Muses are dead.

THE POET: We'll resurrect them.

PAINTER: (watching windows). Oh, the pretty girls.

SCULPTOR: Ladies!

SONGSTER: They are charming!

POET: Ravishing!
(Some send kisses. Others play the clown.)

LE CHANSONNIER: Enfants de la bohème,
Nous aimons qui nous aime!
Toujours gais et pimpans,
Les femmes nous trouvent séduisants.

DEUXIEME PHILOSOPHE: Pourquoi refuseraient-ils?

LE CHANSONNIER: Quoiqu' sans argents!

PREMIER PHILOSOPHE: Ils préfèrent sans doute en faire la femme d'un bourgeois.

LE CHANSONNIER: Presqu' indigents!

DEUXIEME PHILOSOPHE: Mais l'ouvrier mèprise le bourgeois.

PREMIER PHILOSOPHE: Ha! ha! tu crois ça, toi?
Mais nous somm's trés intelligents!
(Cris et bravos: des fenêtres on jette des sous. Les bohèmes saluent ironiquement.)

LES BOHEMES: (saluant). Aimez-vous la peinture?
—La sculpture?
—La musique?
—Je suis un grand poète!

LE PREMIER PHILOSOPHE: Mon cher, l'idéal des ouvriers, c'est d'être des bourgeois . . . Le désir des bourgeois; être des grands seigneurs; et le rêve des grands seigneurs . . . devenir des artises!

LE PEINTRE: Et le rêve des artistes?

LE PREMIER PHILOSOPHE: Etre des dieux!

TOUS: Bravo!

LE POETE: (avec enthousiasme). Oui, des dieux! . . .

L'APPRENTI: (traversant la scène). Allez donc travailler, tas d'feignants!
(Les bohèmes esquissent une poursuite, puis ilsl descendent l'escalier en chantant.)

LES BOHEMES: Enfants de la Bohème
Nous aimons qui nous aime.
Toujours gais et pimpants,
Les femm's nous trouvent séduisants . . .
Quoiqu' sans argents!
(Déjà loin.)
Presqu' indigents.
(Très loin.)
Mais nous somm's très intelligents! . . .

JULIEN: (à ses amis). Voici l'heure, laissez-moi . . .

LE PREMIER PHILOSOPHE: Allons, bonne chance!

LE CHANSONNIER: (l'excitant). Enlève la redoute!
(Ils s'éloignent.)

LE PEINTRE: Sois éloquent.

SONGSTER: (striking cane like a guitar). Children of Bohemia.
We love who ever loves us;
Always gay and natty,
Women find us seductive.

SECOND PHILOSOPHER: Why should they refuse us?

SONGSTER: Though very short of money.

FIRST PHILOSOPHER: They prefer, no doubt, to make them wives of tradesmen.

SONGSTER: Almost "broke."

SECOND PHILOSOPHER: But the workman despises the tradesman.

FIRST PHILOSOPHER: Ha, ha; you believe that?
But we are most intelligent.
(Cries and bravos. They throw pennies from the windows. Bohemians salute ironically.)

THE BOHEMIANS: (saluting). Do you like painting?
—Sculpture?
—Music?
—I am a great poet!

FIRST PHILOSOPHER: (on the side). My dear fellow, the ideal of the workman is to be a tradesman;
The desire of the tradesman to be a lord;
And the dream of the lord—
To become an artist.

PAINTER: And the dream of the artist?

FIRST PHILOSOPHER: To be a god.

ALL: Bravo!

POET: (with enthusiasm). Yes—gods.

APPRENTICE: (with enthusiasm). Go to work, lot of ne'er-do-wells.
(Bohemians chase him, then go down the stairs.)

BOHEMIANS: Children of Bohemia,
We love who ever loves us,
Always gay and natty,
Women find us seductive,
Though very short of money.
(Far away.)
Almost "broke."
(Very far.)
But we are most intelligent.

JULIEN: (to his friends). This is the hour; leave me.

FIRST PHILOSOPHER: Good luck!

SONGSTER: Carry the fort.
(They exit.)

PAINTER: Be eloquent!

L'ETUDIANT: (donnant une accolade à Julien). A tout à l'heure . . .
(Ils s'éloignent.)

JULIEN: (dans une agitation douloureuse). Elle va paraitre, ma joie, mon tourment! mia vie! . . .
Voudra-t-elle me suivre? Voudra-t-elle qu'aujourd'hui notre amour soit vainqueur? . . .
Que dois-je lui dire? . . . Comment la décider? . . .
Qui viendrait à mon aide? . . .

LA REMPAILLEUSE: (lointaine). La caneus', racc'modeus' de chais's!

MARCHAND DE CHIFFONS: (lointaine). Marchand d'chiffons, ferraill' à vendre!
(Il écoute avec émoi croissant; les chants se rapprochent.)
—Artichauts, des gros artichauts . . . à la tendress', la verduress' . . . à un sou, vert et tendre, et à un sou, en v'là des gros, des bien beaux! . . .
—Du mouron pour les p'tits oiseaux!
—V'là d'la carotte, elle est bell', v'là d'la carotte!
(Etc., etc.)

JULIEN: (avec enthousiasme). Ah! chanson de Paris où vibre et palpite mon âme! . . . Naïfs et vieux refrains du faubourg qui s'éveille, aube sonore qui réjouit mon oreille!
Cris de Paris . . . voix de la rue.
Etes-vous le chant de victoire de notre amour triomphant? . . .
(Des ouvrières paraissent au fond. Julien se cache sons le hangar, épiant.)

BLANCHE: Bonjour!

MARGUERITE: Bonjour!

BLANCHE: Comment vas-tu?
(Elles disparaissent à l'entrée de la maison. Une autre paraît et fait un geste à un quantrième.)

SUZANNE: Nous sommes en avance?

GERTRUDE: Il est huit heures . . .

SUZANNE: Ah!
(Elles entrent dans la maison. Deux autres s'avancent en caquetant.)

IRMA: Eh bien! tu t'es amusée, hier?

CAMILLE: Ah! c'que j'ai ri!

IRMA: Tu sais, i'grand Léon . . .
(Elle lui parle à l'oreille.)

CAMILLE: Vrai?

IRMA: En mariage, ma chère!
(Elles disparaissent.)

JULIEN: Viendra-t-elle?
(Impatient, il sort de sa cachette; trois ouvrières entrent et le regardent gesticuler.)

L'APPRENTIE: (riant). Ah! ah! ah!

STUDENT: (embracing Julien). See you by and bye.
(They are gone.)

JULIEN: (painfully nervous). She is about to appear, my joy, my torment, my life. Will she follow me?
Will she wish that today our love shall conquer?
What shall I tell her? How convince her?
Who will come to my aid?

CHAIR MENDER: (in distance). Caning—mending of chairs.

JUNK WOMAN: Rags, bottles, pans to sell.
(Julien listens; cries come nearer.)
Artichokes, big artichokes, tender and green—one penny; green and tender, one sou. Here you are, fine and big.
Seed for little birds;
Carrots, very fine—carrots.

JULIEN: (with enthusiasm). Oh song of Paris, wherein my soul vibrates. Simple and ancient refrains of the waking street, deep-voiced dawn that delights my ear!
Cries of Paris. . . Voices of the street.
Are you the song of victory of our triumphant love?
(Workgirls begin to appear. Julien hides under shed, watching.)

BLANCHE: Good morning.

MARGUERITE: Good morning.

BLANCHE: How are you?
(They go into house. A third appears and motions to fourth.)

SUZANNE: We are early.

GERTRUDE: It's eight o'clock.

SUZANNE: Ah!
(They enter house. Two others arrive, cackling.)

IRMA: Well, did you have a good time, yesterday?

CAMILLE: How I did laugh.

IRMA: Do you know big Leon?
(Whispers in her ear.)

CAMILLE: Really?

IRMA: In marriage, my dear.
(They go in.)

JULIEN: Will she come?
(Impatient, he leaves his hiding place. Three workgirls watch him gesticulate.)

APPRENTICE: (laughing). Ha, ha, ha.

ELISE: Qu'il est beau!

MADELINE: Hé! l'artiste?

L'APPRENTIE: Il attend sa belle! C'te tête!
(Elles entrent dans la maison.)
(La Mère et Louise entrent.)

LA MERE: (bougonnant). Pourquoi te retourner? Il nous suit, sans doute . . . Suffit! je demanderai à ton père que dorenavant tu travailles chez nous.
(Louise lève les yeux au ciel. Mimique de Julien qui, se montre à Louise. Louise, voyant Julien, porte la main sur son coeur.) Ah! t'as beau faire les gros yeux! . . .
On changera ta mauvaise tête; il faudra bien que Louise reste une fille honnête! . . .
Allons, au revoir!
(Louise, froidement, lui tend la joue; la mère l'embrasse. Louise entre dans la maison; la mère s'éloigne. Arrivée près de la rue, elle guette de tous côtés, puis disparaî. Julien se risque timidement, puis s'élance dans la maison.

CRIS DES RUES: (lointains). V'là d'la carotte, elle est bell', v'là d'la carotte, d'la carotte! d'la carotte! . . .

LOUISE: (affolée, se débattant). Laissez-moi, ah! de grâce!

JULIEN: Alors, ils ont refusé?

LOUISE: Je vous en prie! si ma mère revenait . . .

JULIEN: Ils ont refusé?

LOUISE: Vous me faites mourir de peur!

JULIEN: Et tu supportes cette chose! Tu ne te révoltes pas?

LOUISE: Que puis-je faire?

JULIEN: Tu le demandes?

LOUISE: Ils sont les maîtres!

JULIEN: Pourquoi, les maîtres? . . . Parce qu'ils t'ont fait naitre, se croient-ils le droit d'emprisonner ta jeunesse adorable? . . .

LOUISE: Julien! . . .

JULIEN: . . . d'asservir ta vie . . .

LOUISE: Ah! par pitié!

JULIEN: . . . de la murer pour leur plaisir?

LOUISE: Laissez-moi partir! . . .

JULIEN: Ta volonté, désormais, est celle d'une femme et vaut la leur: tu es femme, tu peux, tu dois vouloir!

LOUISE: Ah! je vais être en retard! laissez-moi partir! . . .
(Julien, fâché, la laisse partir. Elle fait queiques pas, puis revient souriante.)

JULIEN: Tu ne m'aimes plus!

ELISE: Isn't he handsome?

MADELINE: Ha—the artist.

APPRENTICE: He's waiting for his sweetheart—what a guy.
(They go in house.)
(Mother and Louise enter.)

MOTHER: (crossly). What are you turning around for? I suppose he's following us. Enough! I'll ask your father to let you work at home hereafter.
(Louise lifts her eyes to heaven. Julien shows himself to her. She, seeing him, puts her hand on her heart.)
Oh, you needn't make big eyes.
We'll change that wicked head of yours. I'll see that Louise remains a good girl. Come, au revoir.
(Louise, coldly, offers her cheek. Mother kisses her. Louise goes within. Mother, after watching on all sides, disappears. Julien comes forth timidly, then rushes in house.)

STREET CRIES: (distant). Here you are. Carrots, fine carrots, carrots, carrots.
(Julien reappears, dragging Louise).

LOUISE: (crazed, struggling). Let me go, in mercy's name!

JULIEN: Then they have refused?

LOUISE: I beg of you—if my mother came back!

JULIEN: They refused?

LOUISE: You'll make me die of fear.

JULIEN: And you'll stand that? You don't rebel?

LOUISE: What can I do?

JULIEN: You ask it?

LOUISE: They are the masters.

JULIEN: Why the masters? Because they gave you birth do they think they possess the right to imprison your golden youth?

LOUISE: Julien!

JULIEN: To enslave your life?

LOUISE: Have pity!

JULIEN: To wall it up for their pleasure?

LOUISE: Let me go!

JULIEN: Your will, from this time forth, is that of a woman, and is as good as theirs. You are a woman; you can, you must act.

LOUISE: Oh, I'm going to be late. Let me go!
(Julian, angry, releases her. She takes a few steps and returns, smiling.)

JULIEN: You don't love me any more.

LOUISE: (naïvement.) Ce n'est pas vrai! (Les cris de la rue reparaissent, lointains).	LOUISE: (simply). That is not true. (The cries of the street are heard again, distantly.)
JULIEN: Si tu m'aimais, oublierais-tu ta promesse? (Louise, troublée, se détourne).	JULIEN: If you loved me, would you forget your promise? (Louise turns her head.)
VOIX LOINTAINES: Voilà l'cresson d'fontaine, la santé du corps! . . .	VOICES IN DISTANCE: Fresh water-cress, health of the body.
JULIEN: "Ecrivez encore à mon père; s'il refuse votre demande, je promets de fuir avec vous."	JULIEN: "Write again to my father. If he refuses your request, I promise to fly with you."
VOIX LOINTAINES: Mouron pour les p'tits oiseaux!	VOICES: (distant). Seeds for little birds.
LOUISE: Ah! si je pouvais, si mon père . . .	LOUISE: If I could—if my father—
VOIX LOINTAINES: Pois verts! pois verts! . . .	VOICES: (distant). Green peas, green peas.
JULIEN: Ton père te pardonnerait.	JULIEN: Your father would forgive you.
LOUISE: Jamais!	LOUISE: Never.
JULIEN: Plus tard, quand ton bonheur . . .	JULIEN: And later, when your happiness—
LOUISE: Mon abandon le tuerait et je l'aime, mon père, autant que je t'aime!	LOUISE: My leaving would kill him, and I love my father as much as I love you.
JULIEN: (la serrant dans ses bras). Ah! Louise, si tu m'aimes, partons de suite au pays (montrant la Butte ensoleillée.) où vivent libres les amants; veins, je te choierai tant, et toute, et toute ta vie! (De la rue voisine viennent des cris et des rires). Viens vers la joie! le plaisir! (En entendant des rires, Louise, troublée, se cache sous le hangar. Quatre ouvrières traversent la scène en riant et entrent dans la maison). (plus pressant). Si tu m'aimes, Louise, viens, fuyons de suite; si tu m'aimes, n'attends pas plus longtemps; tiens ta promesse dès maintenant! . . . Louise! . . . Louise! . . . (Il veut l'entrainer).	JULIEN: (pressing her in his arms). Ah, Louise, if you love me, let us go at once to our country (pointing to the sunlit Butte) where lovers live free. Come, I'll pet you so much and all your life. (From the next street come cries and laughter.) Come to happiness—to pleasure. (Hearing the laughter, Louise hides in shed. Four workgirls cross the stage, laughing, and go in house.) If you love me, Louise, come, let us fly at once. If you love me, do not wait any longer. Keep your promise from now. Louise, Louise! (He tries to drag her.)
LOUISE: (se dèbattant). Julien!	LOUISE: (struggling). Julien!
JULIEN: Veins! . . .	JULIEN: Come!
LOUISE: Ah! je deviens folle . . .	LOUISE: I am going mad!
JULIEN: . . . vers le plaisir! . . .	JULIEN: —To pleasure!
LOUISE: (affolée). Je ne sais que faire. . . laissez-moi partir . . . demain . . . plus tard . . . (Avec tendresse). Je serai ta femme! . . . Julien! . . . mon bien-aimé! . . . (Flûte du chevrier lointaine. Louise se jette à son cou, puis se dégage et s'éloigne vers la maison; sur le seuil de la porte, elle envoie un baiser. Julien répond avec tristesse.—Louise disparaît).	LOUISE: I know not what to do. Let me go—tomorrow—later— (Tenderly.) I shall be your wife! Julien—my beloved. (Flute of goatherd in distance. Louise throws her arms about him, releases herself and goes toward the house. She sends him a kiss. Julian responds sadly. She disappears.)
LE MARCHAND D'HABITS: (descendant l'escalier). Marchand d'habits! avez-vous des habits à vendr'? (Il interroge les fenêtres). Marchand d'habits! . . . (Il se tourne). Avez-vous des habits à vendr'? (Il sort. Julien s'achemine tristement vers la rue).	OLD CLO' MAN: (coming down stairway). Old clo'! Any clothes to sell? (Looks up at windows.) Old clo'! (Turns about.) Any clothes to sell? (Exits. Julien sadly walks away.)
LE MARCHAND D'HABITS: (au loin). Merchand d'habits! Avez-vous des habits à vendr'? (Julien fait un dernier geste de désespoir et disparaît lentement).	OLD CLO' MAN: (distant). Old clo'! Any old clothes to sell? (Julien, in despair, slowly disappears.)
MARCHANDE DE MOURON: (au loin). Mouron pour les p'tits oiseaux!	BIRD DEALER: (in distance). Seed for your little birds.
MARCHANDE D'ARTICHAUTS: (très loin). A la tendress'! la verduress'! . . .	ARTICHOKE DEALER: (very distant). Tender and green.

DEUXIÈME TABLEAU.

SCENE II.

(Un atelier de couture; les ouvrières autour des 'tables travaillent en caquetant; quelques-unes chantent; près du mannequin, deux ouvrières plissent une jupe; l'apprentie, couchée à terre, ramasse les épingles; une ouvrière travaille à la machine).	(A sewing establishment. Workgirls around a table sew while gossiping. Close to a form two girls try on a skirt. The apprentice, on the ground, picks up pins. One girl works at machine.)
LES OUVRIERES, LOUISE: (Elise, Suzanne, Madeleine et l'apprentie). La! la! la! la!	ELISE, SUZANNE, MADELINE and APPRENTICE: La, la, la, la.
VIELLES OUVRIERES: La! la! la! la!	OLD WORKWOMEN: La, la, la, la.
BLANCHE: (près du mannequin, faisant les plis d'une jupe). C'est énervant! je n'peux pas y arriver . . .	BLANCHE: (by the form, setting skirt). Oh, bother! I can't seem to get it right.
MARGUERITE: Quell' mauvaise étoffe! les plis n'marquent pas . . .	MARGUERITE: Wretched stuff. The folds won't stay in place.
ELISE: (à Gertrude). Passez-moi vos ciseaux . . .	ELISE: (to Gertrude). Pass me your scissors.
GERTRUDE: Et les tiens?	GERTRUDE: What about your own?
ELISE: Perdus! . . .	ELISE: Lost.
GERTRUDE: J'en ai assez d'les prêter.	GERTRUDE: I've had enough of lending.
ELISE: Un' minute?	ELISE: Just a minute.
GERTRUDE: Tu a'as qu à t'en payer. (Blanche prend la jupe, la montre à la Première, puis va s'asseoir à la première table).	GERTRUDE: Better buy your own. (Blanche shows skirt to forewoman then sits at table.)
IRMA: Moi, j'ai vu l'Pré aux Clercs et Mignon.	IRMA: I've been to see the "Pré aux Clercs" and "Mignon."
CAMILLE: Moi, j'ai vu Manon.	CAMILLE: I've seen "Manon."
IRMA: C'est beau?	IRMA: Is it fine?
CAMILLE: Très beau, surtout quand ell' meurt.	CAMILLE: Very fine, especially where she dies.
ELISE: (à Marguerite, à mi-voix). Voudrais-tu m'montrer à baleiner?	ELISE: (to Marguerite, softly). Will you show me how to whalebone?
MARGUERITE: Tu prends ton ruban comm' ceci . . . tu commenc's par en bas, tu l'fais sout'nir très peu . . .	MARGUERITE: You take your ribbon like this—you begin low down, but supporting it a little bit—
GERTRUDE: J'peux pas arriver à finir c'corsage! sur l'mann'quin, c'est bien, mais sur la femme!	GERTRUDE: I can't get hold of the knack of finishing this waist. On the form it is all right, but on the woman—
IRMA: C'est pour qui?	IRMA: Who is it for?
GERTRUDE: Pour la duchesse . . .	GERTRUDE: For the duchess.

CAMILLE: En effet, j'vois ca d'ici!	CAMILLE: Just so; I can see it from here.
GERTRUDE: Faut lui mett' du crin sous les bras!	GERTRUDE: Got to put horsehair under the arms.
CAMILLE: Faut lui fair' des hanches!	CAMILLE: You'll have to give her hips.
IRMA: Un vrai rembourrag' quoi!	IRMA: A genuine stuffing, say.
L'APPRENTIE: (gavroche). C'qu'y a des clientes, tout d'même!	APPRENTICE: Funny clients, all the same.
BLANCHE: (à Marguerite). Moi, j'vais m'faire une robe pour le Grand Prix . . . J'ai vu un modèl', ma chère!	BLANCHE: (to Marguerite.) I'm going to make a dress for myself for the Grand Prix—I came across a model, my dear!
LA PREMIERE: (à Gertrude). N'oubliez pas le sachet d'héliotrope? . . .	FOREWOMAN: (to Gertrude). Don't forget the sachet of heliotrope.
ELISE: (à Suzanne qui lui donne des conseils). Ah! laiss'-moi tranquille, tu m'ennuies!	ELISE: (to Suzanne, who is advising her). Give me a rest—you're a nuisance.
SUZANNE: C'est pas comm' ca qu'on s'y prend!	SUZANNE: That's not the way to do it.
ELISE: Tu veux toujeurs en savoir plus qu'les autres!	ELISE: You always want to know more than anybody else.
SUZANNE: P'tite imbécile! tu n'vois pas qu'ca craqu' sous l'aiguille?	SUZANNE: Little fool, don't you see it breaks under the needle?
ELISE: Oh! la! la! quel cauch'mar!	ELISE: Oh, la, la; what a nightmare.
SUZANNE: T'en as un caractère!	SUZETTE: You've got a pretty disposition.
ELISE: Tu n't'es pas r'gardée!	ELISE: You haven't watched yourself, have you?
SUZANNE: Va donc! eh! bouffie! (Elise lance une pelote à la tête de Suzanne; les autres s'interposent. Toutes rient avec éclats. La première se léve).	SUZANNE: Get out, eh—fat head! (Elise throws a spool at Suzanne. Others interpose. All laugh, loudly. The forewoman rises.)
LA PREMIERE: Mesd'maiselles, un peu d'silence . . . nous n'sommes pas au marché. (Silence relatif. La première va causer avec Gertrude).	FOREWOMAN: Young women—a little silence. We are not in the markets. (Slight silence. Forewoman talks to Gertrude.)
CAMILLE: (bas à ses voisines). Voyez Louise, quell' drôl' de tête ell' fait aujourd'hui.	CAMILLE: (low, to others). Look at Louise. Queer way she's got about her today.
BLANCHE: C'est vrai!	BLANCHE: That's so?
IRMA: C'est vrai! on dirait qu'elle a pleuré.	IRMA: Yes, that is so. Looks as if she had been crying.
GERTRUDE: Elle a peut-être des ennuis de famille. . .	GERTRUDE: Perhaps she has some family troubles.
CAMILLE: Ses parents' sont très durs pour elle . . . (Les ouvrières se groupent et jettent des regards sur Louise qui semble ne rien voir).	CAMILLE: Her parents are very hard on her. (They group together and watch Louise, who doesn't see them.)
IRMA: Ell' n'a pas la vie belle . . .	IRMA: Her life's anything but a dream.
CAMILLE: Sa mèr' la frappe encore . . .	CAMILLE: Her mother still beats her.
BLANCHE, MARGUERITE: Ah!	BLANCHE, MARGUERITE: Ah!
ELISE: Ce n'est pas moi qui m'laisserais battre!	ELISE: I'm not one to let them beat me.
SUZANNE: Moi non plus!	SUZANNE: Nor I.
BLANCHE: Et moi, c'que j'les plaquerais!	BLANCHE: Wouldn't I give it back!
L'APPRENTIE: Moi, quand le père veut m' battre, j'lui dis: cogn' sur maman, y a plus d'largeur! (Rires, Louise, écoute et reprend son attitude indifferente).	APPRENTICE: Me, when papa wants to beat me, I tell him: "Give to mamma—there's more surface." (Laughter. Louise listens, but resumes her indifferent air).
IRMA: (regardant ironiquement Louise). Non; je crois que Louise est amoureuse.	IRMA: (looking ironically at Louise). No; I think Louise is in love.
GERTRUDE: (étonnee). Amoureuse! Louise . . .	GERTRUDE: (astonished). Louise! In love.
CAMILLE: Pourquoi Louise serait-ell' pas amoureuse?	CAMILLE: And why shouldn't Louise be in love?
BLANCHE: Amoureuse, Louise . . .	BLANCHE: In love, Louise—
L'APPRENTIE: (à part). Amoureuse!	APPRENTICE: (aside). In love!
SUZANNE et MADELEINE: Amoureuse!	SUZANNE and MADELINE: In love!
GERTRUDE et ELISE: Amoureuse!	GERTRUDE and ELISE: In love!
BLANCHE et MARGUERITE: Amoureuse!	BLANCHE and MARGUERITE: In love!
IRMA et CAMILLE: Amoureuse!	IRMA and CAMILLE: In love!
TOUTES: (sauf Irma, Camille, l'apprentie et la première.) Louise, entends tu? Ou dit que tu es amoureuse.	ALL: (save Irma, Camille, Apprentice and Forewoman). Louise, do you hear? They say that you're in love.
LOUISE: (troublée). Moi?	LOUISE: (nervous). Me?
IRMA et CAMILLE: Est-ce vrai?	IRMA and CAMILLE: Is it true?
LOUISE: (avec colère). Vous êtes folles . . .	LOUISE: (angrily). You are all mad.
GERTRUDE: Un amoureux à ton âge, c'n'est pas un péché, et tu peux l'avouer . . . A moins que tu ne veuilles garder le secret de tes aventures. (Orgue de barbarie lointain).	GERTRUDE: A lover, at your age; it is no sin, and you can own up to it, unless you would guard the secret of your adventures. (Street organ in distance.)
SUZANNE, ELISE: Louise, raconte-nous . . .	SUZANNE, ELISE: Louise, tell us—
LOUISE: Je n'ai pas d'aventure.	LOUISE: I have no adventure.
GERTRUDE: (Derrière elle, l'apprentie mime ironiquement la chanson). Que c'est charmant une aventure. Un garcon de jolie figure qui vous aime et vous le prouve à tout moment. C'est le rêve d'or jeunes filles . . . rêve auquel on pense tout enfant. Pour le baiser d'un amant, je donnerais sans regret le restant de ma vie.	GERTRUDE: (Behind her the apprentice mimics the song, ironically.) An adventure is most charming; A handsome young fellow who loves you and proves it every moment. It is the golden dream of girls—that one dreams when still a child; For the kiss of a young lover, without regret I'd give the remainder of life.
CAMILLE: D'où vient ce sentiment qui nous attire constamment vers les hommes? D'où vient qu'à leur approche nos coeurs chavirent? On a beau nous dire: "Prenez garde!" Qu'apparaisse le prédestiné, les scrupules s'envolent! . . . A son regard, on rougit; à sa parole on sourit; dans l'enthousiasme du baiser, on s'ouvre au dieu malin; c'est un bonnet de plus qu'on accroche au moulin! . . . (Rires étouffés).	CAMILLE: From where comes this sentiment that draws us constantly toward the men? How does it happen that at their approach our hearts are shipwrecked? It is no use telling us "Look out." Let the predestined appear, scruples fly. At his glance one blushes; at his word one smiles; in the enthusiasm of the kiss one is open to the cunning god. It is another victory he can put down to his cunning wiles. (Smothered laughter.)
L'APPRENTIE: Louise, raconte-nous tes aventures . . .	APPRENTICE: Louise, tell us your adventures.

LOUISE: (avec impatience). Je n'ai pas d'aventures (Peu à peu les ouvrières reprennent leur travail et causant à voix basse).	LOUISE: (impatiently.) I have no adventures. (little by little, the workers go back to their work and begin to make low noises.)
IRMA: (langoureusement) Oh! moi quand je suis dans la rue, tout mon être prend comme feu; sous les rayons ardents des yeux qui me désirent, je vais radieuse! Les frôlements, les appels, les flatteries m'attisent et me grisent! . . . Il me semble être en voyage, alors que paysages et maisons tourbillonnent en ronde folle autour du wagon.	IRMA: (langourously.) As for me when I am in the street All my being takes fire. Under the ardent rays Of eyes That desire me I go radiant. The brushings past, the hints The flatteries, fire me and intoxicate.
ELISE: (à Gertrude). C'est un beau brun!	ELISE: (to Gertrude) He is fine and dark.
GERTRUDE: Tu l'aimes?	GERTRUDE: You love him?
ELISE: J'en suis toquée!	ELISE: I'm mad about him.
GERTRUDE: Grande folle!	GERTRUDE: Big fool.
LA PREMIERE: (à Madeleine). Voyez la longueur des manches . . .	FOREWOMAN: (to Madeleine.) See the length of the sleeves.
GERTRUDE: Dieu, qu'l fait chaud! ovrez la f'nêtre! (L'Apprentie va ouvrir une fenêtre.)	GERTRUDE: Heaven! it's hot; open the window. (Apprentice opens it.)
BLANCHE: (à Elise). C'est tordant!	BLANCHE: (to Elise). It's great fun.
SUZANNE: (à Madeleine). Tu viens avec moi, ce soir?	SUZANNE: (to Madeleine.) You're coming with me tonight?
MARGUERITE: Louise, chante-nous quelque chose.	MARGUERITE: Louise, sing us something.
LA PREMIERE: (à Marguerite). Laissez-la donc tranquille!	FOREWOMAN: (to Marguerite.) Please let her alone.
L'APPRENTIE: (à Suzanne). J'ai rendez-vous à huit heures . . .	APPRENTICE: (to Suzanne.) I meet him at eight o'clock.
ELISE: (à Blanche). Il t'a fait la cour?	ELISE: (to Blanche). Did he court you?
LA PREMIERE: A qui l'corsage?	THE FOREWOMAN: Whose waist is this?
GERTRUDE: C'est à moi.	GERTRUDE: It's mine.
LA PREMIERE: Dépêchez-vous, il le faut pour ce soir.	FOREWOMAN: Hurry up, it must be ready tonight.
BLANCHE, ELISE et MADELEINE: (riant bruyamment). Ah! ah! ah! ah!	BLANCHE, ELISE, MADELINE: (loudly laughing.) Ha, ha, ha, ha.
CAMILLE et GERTRUDE: Chut! (La Première va dans la chambre voisine).	CAMILLE and GERTRUDE: Chut! (Forewoman goes in next room.)
L'APPRENTIE: Ecoutez! (L'Apprentie, près d'Irma, l'écoute avec admiration).	APPRENTICE: Listen. (She listens to Irma admiringly.)
IRMA: Une voix mystérieuse, prometteuse de bonheur, parmi les bruissements de la rue amoureuse, me poursuit et m'enjôle. C'est la voix de Paris! C'est l'appel au plaisir, à l'amour! . . . Et peu à peu l'vresse me gagne; dans un frisson délicieux, à tous les yeux je livre mes yeux; et mon coeur bat la campagne et succombe aux désirs de tous les coeurs.	IRMA: A mysterious voice, harbinger of happiness amid the sounds of the street, pursues and captivates me. It is the voice of Paris. It is the call to pleasure, to love. And little by little I'm intoxicated; in a delicious shiver to all eyes I give my eyes; and my heart beats madly and succumbs to the desires of all hearts.
LES JEUNES OUVRIERES: (Elise, Suzanne, Madeleine et l'apprente). C'est la voix de Paris . . .	THE WORKGIRLS, ELISE, etc: It is the voice of Paris.
GERTRUDE ET LES VIEILLES OUVRIERES: Régalez-vous, mesdam's, voilà l'plaisir! (Fanfare dans la coulisse).	GERTRUDE and OLD WORKWOMEN: Have a good time, ladies, there's the pleasure. (Sound of trumpets.)

LES JEUNES OUVRIERES: (assises). Menti . . . i . . . i . . . i . . . i . . . ! (L'apprentie court ramasser des chiffons et les jette dans la cour).	YOUNG GIRLS: Li, li, li, li, lied! (Apprentice picks up odds and ends and throws them in courtyard.)
LES VIEILLES OUVRIERES: A-t-il bientôt fini?	OLD WORKWOMEN: Will he ever have done?

JULIEN: Sois maudite!	JULIEN: Be cursed.
TOUTES LES OUVRIERES: Music! music! music! (Les musiciens de la cour obéissent et jouent. Charivari. Les	ALL THE WORKWOMEN: Music, music, music! (Musicians in street obey and play. Immense din. Work girls ouvrières dansent et chahutent. Louise se lève. Elle hésite un moment, puis elle prend son chapeau et se dirige vers la porte).

LES OUVRIERES: (chantant). La! la! la! la! la!

GERTRUDE: (s'apercevant du trouble de Louise). Louise, qu'avez-vous? Etes-vous souffrante? (Da'utres ouvrières s'approchent).

L'APPRENTIE: (à la fenêtre). Il s'en va . . .

LOUISE: (avec embarras). Oui . . . je ne suis pas bien . . . j'étouffe . . . je suis tout étourdie . . .
(Elle se lève, fiévreuse).
Je ne puis rester!

CAMILLE: Tu veux partier?
(Louise, indécise, semble écouter au loin).

LOUISE: (décidée). Oui, je préfèr' rentrer chez nous. (A Gertrude). Vous direz à Madame que j'ai dû m'en aller . . .
(Elle va vers la porte. Quelques ouvrières l'entourent).

IRMA: (affectueusement). Louise, qu'as-tu?

CAMILLE: (de même). Tu souffres?
(Louise, embarrasée, ne sait que répondre).

IRMA: Veux-tu que je t'accompagne?

LOUISE: Non, laissez-moi . . .
(Elle ouvre le porte.)
Adieu!
(Elle disparait. Les ouvrières, étonnées, se regardent).

ELISE: Qu'est-c' qui lui prend?

CAMILLE: Qu'est-c' que ca veut dire?

IRMA: (prenant la défense de Louise). Elle était malade!

BLANCHE: (ironique). Comm' vous et moi!

L'APPRENTIE: C'est la faute au chanteur.

TOUTES: Voyons!
(Elles se prècipitent aux fenêtres).

CAMILLE: La voici!

GERTRUDE: (restée assise). Eh bien! que fait-elle?

ELISE et SUZANNE: Parfait!

IRMA et CAMILLE: C'est bien ca!
(Les ouvrières restées assises, se lèvent et courent aux fenêtres).

TOUTES: (avec stupéfaction). Ah! . . .

L'APPRENTIE: (avec transport). Ils part'nt en prom'nade!
(Elle se roule à terre).
(Toutes rient. Gertrude joint les mains avec épouvante. Les rires continuent).

dance and kick up. Louise rises, hesitates a moment, then takes her hat and goes toward door.)

WORK GIRLS: (singing). La, la, la, la, la.

GERTRUDE: (noticing Louise's trouble). Louise, what's the matter? Are you suffering?
(Others come near.)

APPRENTICE: (at window). He's going away.

LOUISE: (awkwardly). Yes . . . I don't fell well . . . I'm suffocating . . . I'm all giddy.
(She rises feverishly).
I can't stay.

CAMILLE: You're going away?
(Louise, undecided, seems to listen far off.)

LOUISE: (decided). Yes, I prefer to go home. (to Gertrude) You'll say to Madame I had to go.
(She goes toward door. Girls surround her.)

IRMA: (affectionately). Louise, what's the matter?

CAMILLE: (same). You suffer?
(Louise, embarrassed, doesn't answer.)

IRMA: Would you like me to go with you?

LOUISE: No, let me go.
(She opens door.)
Good-bye.
(She exits. Workgirls astonished, look at each other.)

ELISE: What's the matter with her?

CAMILLE: What does it mean?

IRMA: (defending Louise). She is ill.

BLANCHE: (ironically). Just like you and me.

APPRENTICE: It's the fault of the singer?

ALL: Let us see!
(They rush to the window.)

CAMILLE: Here she is.

GERTRUDE: (remaining seated). Well, what is she doing?

ELISE and SUZANNE: Perfect.

IRMA and CAMILLE: That's it exactly.
(Those seated run to window.)

ALL: (amazed). Ah!

APPRENTICE: (transported). They're going to take a walk.
(She rolls on floor.)
(All laugh. Gertrude joins her hands in terror. Laughing continues.)

ACTE TROISIEME.

(Un jardinet au faîte de la butte Montmartre. A gauche, une petite maison sans étage, avec perron et vestibule découvert. A côté de la maison, un mur coupé d'une petite porte. A droite, des échafaudages. Au fond, unc haie. Un sentier extérieur côtoie la haie; au delà s'ètagent les toits des maisons voisines. Panorama de Paris. Le crépuscule est imminent).

(Au lever du rideau, Julien, assis près de la maison, semble plongé dans une méditation heureuse. Accoudée sur la rampe du perron, Louise, souriante, le regarde amoureu-sement, puis s'approche.)

LOUISE: Depuis le jour où je me suis donnée, toute fleurie semble ma destinée . . . Je crois rêver sous un ciel de féerie, l'âme encore grisée de ton premier baiser.

JULIEN: Louise! . . .

LOUISE: Quelle belle vie! Mon rêve n'était pas un rêve!
Ah! je suis heureuse! . . .
L'amour étend sur moi ses ailes!
Au jardin de mon coeur chante une joie nouvelle!
Tout vibre, tout se réjouit de mon triomphe!
Autour de moi tout est sourire, lumière et fête
Et je tremble délicieusement
Au sourire charmant
Du premier jour!
D'amour!

JULIEN: Louise est heureuse?

LOUISE: (se jetant dans ses bras). Trop heureuse!

JULIEN: (avec tendresse). Tu ne regretes rien?

LOUISE: Rien! . . . Que puis-je regretter? A l'atelier, parmi mes compagnes, j'étais une étrangère; personne ne me comprenait et personne ne m'aimait.
Chez nous, mon père me traitait toujours en petite fille . . .
Et la mère:—Qui aime bien, châtie bien—ne perdait pas son temps avec moi! C'était à tout moment, à propos de rien, des rebuffades, des attrapades:
Pan! pan!—"Ca t'apprendra!" Pan! pan! "Atrap' celle-là!"
—"Mais ma mère!"
—"Vas-tu te taire?"
—"Je n'ai rien fait!"
—"P'tite effrontée!"
Pan! pan! pan! pan! pan! pan!

JULIEN: (riant). Ah! ah! ah! ah!

LOUISE: Et mon père la laissait faire . . . Il m'aimait bien pourtant, mon pauvre père! Mais il croyait tout ce qu'inventait la jalouse: elle

ACT III.

(Panorama of Paris.)
(Twilight is near.*)

(As curtain rises, Julien seated near house seems plunged in happy meditation. With elbows on balustrade Louise, smiling, looks at him lovingly, then approaches.)

LOUISE: Since the day I gave myself, my destiny seems fluorescent. I seem to be dreaming under a fairy sky, the soul still drunk with your first kiss.

JULIEN: Louise!

LOUISE: A beautiful life. My dream was not a dream.
Ah, I am happy.
Love extends its wings over me.
In the garden of my heart sings a novel joy,
All vibrates with pleasure at my triumph;
Around me all is laughter, light and festival.
And I tremble deliciously
At the charming smile
Of the first day
Of love!

JULIEN: Louise is happy?

LOUISE: (throwing herself in his arms). Too happy!

JULIEN: (tenderly). You regret nothing?

LOUISE: Nothing. What can I regret? At the workshop, among my companions, I was a stranger. No one understood me and no one liked me.
At home father always treated me as if I were a little girl.
And the mother—who loves well, chastises well—lost none of her time with me. At every moment, about nothing, rebuffs and blows.
"Take that! Biff! That'll teach you."
Biff, biff. "Good for you."
"But mother."
"Shut up."
"I did nothing."
"Piece of impudence."
Biff, biff, biff, biff, biff.

JULIEN: (laughing). Ha, ha, ha, ha.

LOUISE: And my father let her go on. Yet he loved me well, poor papa. But he believed all that she said. She had made such a portrait avait fait de toi un tel portrait, critiquant ta conduite, ton métier, que mon père ne pouvait croire qu'il me fût possible de t'aimer.	of you, criticizing your conduct, your work, that my father didn't believe it possible I could love you.

JULIEN: (moqueur). La mère la Routine, le père Préjugé devaient bien s'entendre!	JULIEN: (mockingly). Mother Routine and Father Prejudice understood each other well.
LOUISE: (imitant son père). —"A ton âge, disait-il, on voit tout beau, tout rose . . . prendre un mari . . . c'est choisir une poupée . . ."	LOUISE: (imitating her father) "At your age," he would say, "one sees everything beautiful and rosy. Taking a thousand . . . It's choosing a doll . . ."
JULIEN: Une poupée?	JULIEN: A doll!
LOUISE: "Malheureusement, ces poupées-là, ma fille, vous font parfois pleurer bien des larmes! . . ."	LOUISE: "Unfortunately, these dolls, my daughter, often make you weep bitter tears."
JULIEN: (ironique). Ah! ah! ah! Les parents voudraient qu'on restât le marmot dont la pensée sommeille, à l'ombre de leur volonté! . . . Il fallait lui répondre gentiment: "Les poupées d'amour ne sont pas toutes méchantes . . ."	JULIEN: (ironically). Ah, ah, ah! Parents would wish that one remained the dormouse, the thoughts of which slumber in the shadow of their will. You ought to have answered that "The dolls of love are not all wicked."
LOUISE: "Comment veux-tu la choisir," disait mon père?	LOUISE: "How would you like to choose it?" said my father.
JULIEN: Avec mon coeur!	JULIEN: With all my heart.
LOUISE: (continuant l'imitation). "Cest un bien mauvais juge?"	LOUISE: (still imitating). "It's a very poor judge."
JULIEN: Pourquoi donc?	JULIEN: Why?
LOUISE: (ironique.) "Qui dit amoureux, toujours dit aveugle!"	LOUISE: (ironically). "One who speaks of love, speaks blindly."
JULIEN: Aveugle lui-même, d'avoir méconnu la souveraineté de l'amour et d'oser réclamer pour lui le droit d'élire le maitre de ta destinée! . . .	JULIEN: Blind himself, to have failed to recognize the sovereignty of love and to dare to claim for himself the right to elect the master of your destiny.
LOUISE: (imitant les gestes paternels). "C'est le droit de la vieillesse . . . le droit de la sagesse . . . le droit de l'expérience! . . ."	LOUISE: (imitating paternal gestures). "It is the right of old age . . . the right of wisdom . . . the right of experience! . . .
JULIEN: L'expérience! ha! ha! ha! L'expérience, c'est-à-dire la Routine, la Tradition, toute l'oppression des préjugés stupides! L'expérience, qui voudrait Dieu luimême en servage! L'expérience! lâche et tryannique servante de l'Envie, qui se dresse à l'entrée de la vie! Les juvéniles chevauchées des passions, tout l'idéal, tout l'amour, le vouloir, le génie, honnis, traqués, comme on traque l'ignominie! . . . Oh! la misérable, ô l'odieuse, l'infâme, l'hypocrite, l'inféconde expérience! . . .	JULIEN: Experience! Ha, ha, ha! Experience, that is to say, Routine, Tradition, all the oppression of stupid prejudices. Experience which would put God in slavery. Experience, cowardly and tyrannical servant of Envy, which stands at the portals of life. The juvenile leaps of the passions, all ideality, all love, will, genius, disgraced, tracked as we track ignominy. Oh the wretched, odious, infamous, hypocritical, unfecund experience! . . .
LOUISE: Ainsi, tout enfant a le droit de choisir lui-même le chemin du bonheur!	LOUISE: Thus every child has the right to choose for itself the path of happiness.
JULIEN: (avec conviction). Tout être a le droit d'être libre! Tout coeur a le devoir d'aimer. Aveugle celui qui voudrait garrotter l'originale et fière volonte d'une âme qui s'éveille et qui réclame sa part de soleil, sa part d'amour! (Le soir tombe).	JULIEN: Every being has the right to be free. Every heart has the duty of loving. Blind is he who would stifle the first and proud will of a soul that awakes and that claims its part of sun, its part of love! (Evening falls.)
LOUISE: (avec émotion). Les désirs de nos coeurs peuvent-ils sans remords briser d'autres coeurs?	LOUISE: (with emotion). Can the desires of our heart, without remorse, break other hearts?
JULIEN: L'égoïsme appelle l'égoïsme.	JULIEN: Egoism calls egoism.
JULIEN: L'amour des parents n'est donc que de l'égoïsme?	LOUISE: The love of our parents then is only egoism?
JULIEN: Rien qu'égoïsme!	JULIEN: Nothing but egoism.
LOUISE: Et mon père lui-même? . .	LOUISE: And even my father?
JULIEN: Un égoïste plus aveugle que les autres! (Julien, l'entraine doucement vers le fond du jardin). Jolie! . . . Tu regrettes d'être venue! . . . (Il lui montre la ville). De Paris tout en fête, entends monter la joyeuse, l'attrayante chanson! C'est pour toi, petite Muse, que la ville cette nuit s'amuse! Hors Paris, Louise ne serait pas Louise! Paris, sans toi, ne serait point Paris! Mignon symbole de la grande cité je t'aime en elle, et je l'adore en ta beauté!	JULIEN: An egoist blinder than the rest. (Julien draws her gently toward end of garden.) Pretty one . . . Do you regret having come? (Shows the town.) Of Paris in festival, listen, mount up to us the joyous, the attractive song It is for you, little Muse, that the town amuses itself tonight. Outside of Paris, Louise would not be Louise. Paris without you, would not be Paris. Dainty symbol of the great city, I love her and I adore her in your beauty.
LOUISE: Oh! l'attirante, la chère musique de la grande ville! . . .	LOUISE: Oh, the attractive, the dear music of the great town! . . .
JULIEN: La Ville m'a donné la Fille . . .	JULIEN: The Town has given me the Girl.
LOUISE: L'amour de la Fille te donnera la Ville! . . .	LOUISE: The love of the Girl will give you the Town!
JULIEN: Oui, tous deux nous marcherons à la conquête de la Cité Merveilleuse! . . .	JULIEN: Yes, together we'll march to the conquest of the Marvelous City.
LOUISE: Ta gloire aura mes yeux pour étoiles!	LOUISE: Your glory shall have my eyes for stars.
JULIEN: Par ton amour, j'aurai la victoire!	JULIEN: Through you I shall gain the victory.
ENSEMBLE: Paris! Ville de force et de lumière! Paris! Paris! Splendeur première! Paris! ô Paris! Cité de joie! cité d'amour, sois douce à nous amours . . . (s'agenouillent). Protège tes enfants! Garde nous de'fends nous. (Dans la nuit, Paris peu à peu s'illumine. Les amants, tendent les bras vers la ville).	TOGETHER: Paris, city of force and of light; Paris, Paris, first amidst Splendor. Paris! oh, Paris! City of joy, city of love, be kind to our loves. (Kneeling). Protect your children; Guard us, defend us. (Little by little the lights appear. The lovers stretch their arms toward the city.)
LOUISE: Julien!	LOUISE: Julien!
JULIEN: Louise!	JULIEN: Louise!
LOUISE: Vois, la ville s'éclaire . . .	LOUISE: Look, the town lights up.
JULIEN: C'est le firmament sur terre . . .	JULIEN: It is the firmament on Earth.
LOUISE: Entends les mille voix? . . .	LOUISE: Listen to the thousand voices.
JULIEN: Elles répondent à nos voix . . .	JULIEN: They answer to ours.
LOUISE: Regarde les lumières . . .	LOUISE: Look at the lights.
JULIEN: La ville tout entière se lève à ta prière! . . . (Ils se relèvent lentement).	JULIEN: The whole town rises at your prayer. (They arise slowly.)

LOUISE et JOLIEN: "Libres! vous êtes libres," nous crie la ville immense.	LOUISE and JULIEN: Free you are, free; the whole town shouts to us.
VOIX DE LA VILLE: Libres!	VOICES OF THE TOWN: Free!
LOUISE et JULIEN: Libres! Soyons libres selon notre conscience.	LOUISE and JULIEN: Free! let us be free according to our conscience.
VOIX DE LA VILLE: Libres!	VOICES OF THE TOWN: Free!
LOUISE: Libres dans l'amour!	LOUISE: Free in our love!
JULIEN: Libres dans la vie!	JULIEN: Free in our life.
LOUISE: Libres toujours!	LOUISE: Free always!
JULIEN: Toujours?	JULIEN: Always?
LOUISE: Toujours!	LOUISE: Always!
JULIEN: (la pressant dans ses bras). Toujours!	JULIEN: (pressing her in his arms). Always!
LOUISE: Vois la belle nuit!	LOUISE: Look! The beautiful night.
JULIEN: C'est notre nuit de noces!	JULIEN: It is our wedding night.
LOUISE: Je t'aime!	LOUISE: I love you.
JULIEN: Tu m'aimes?	JULIEN: You love me?
LOUISE: Je t'aime! . . .	LOUISE: I love you.
JULIEN: Oh! le doux miracle! . . . Je ne suis plus Julien! . . Tu n'es plus Louise!	JULIEN: Oh the sweet miracle. I am no longer Julien. You are no longer Louise.
LOUISE: (passionément). Des baisers! Julien! Des baisers!	LOUISE: (passionately). Kisses, Julien, kisses!
JULIEN: (se levant). Nous sommes tous les amants fidèles à leurs serments.	JULIEN: (rising). We are all lovers, faithful To our oaths.
LOUISE: (agenouillée devant lui). Oh! le divin roman! . . .	LOUISE: (kneeling by him). In the divine romance.
JULIEN: Nous sommes toutes les âmes qui veulent vivre sans maîtres!	JULIEN: We are all beings who would live Without masters.
LOUISE: En mes bras, sois mon maitre!	LOUISE: In my arms, be my master.
JULIEN: Nous sommes toutes les âmes que brùle la sainte flamme du Désir! (Il la prend dans ses bras).	JULIEN: We are all souls wherein burns The holy flame Of Desire. (He takes her in his arms.)
JULIEN: Depuis le jour où je l'ai prise toute, jamais Louise ne parut si belle!	JULIEN: From the day that I took you, never has Louise appeared more beautiful.
LOUISE: (pétulante). Ce n'est plus la petite fille?	LOUISE: (petulant). It is no longer the little girl . . .
JULIEN: C'est une femme nouvelle!	JULIEN: It is a new woman.
LOUISE: . . . enfant timide et craintive?	LOUISE: . . . The timid and frightened child.
JULIEN: Non, c'est l'amante éternelle!	JULIEN: No. It is the lover eternal.
LOUISE: C'est une femme, au coeur de flamme, dont l'être clame, dont l'âme crie éperdument.	LOUISE: It is a woman, with heart of flame, whose being cries out, whose soul madly clamors.
JULIEN: Au souffle du désir, Louise enfin s'éveille!	JULIEN: At the breath of desire Louise at last awakens.
LOUISE: (passionnée, impatiente). Prends-moi vite, vite, mon bien-aimé, plus beau que les fiers chevaliers des contes bleus de la Légende! . . . A mon appel hâte-toi d'accourir, Prince Charmant, dont la carresse éveilla la petite Montmartroise au coeur dormant!	LOUISE: (passionate, impatient). Take me quickly, my well beloved, more handsome than the proud knights in the blue stories of the Legend. At my voice, hasten to come, Prince Charming, whose caresses awake the little girl of Montmartre, of the sleeping heart.
Viens dans mes bras, ô mon poète, ne suis-je pas ta conquête? Embrassemoi . . . fais-moi mourir sous tes baisers! . . .	Come in my arms, oh my poet, am I not your conquest? Kiss me . . . make me die in your arms.
JULIEN: Ardente ivresse du baiser! ô vertige! ô volupté! La chair de l'amante a parlé! Elle appelle son maitre! . . .	JULIEN: Ardent bliss of the kiss; entrancing, voluptuous. The flesh of the loving one has spoken. She calls her master.
LOUISE: A toi tout mon être! . . .	LOUISE: My whole being is yours.
JULIEN: Ton cher corps me désire?	JULIEN: Your dear body desires me.
LOUISE: Je veux du plaisir!	LOUISE: I want pleasure.
JULIEN: Prends-moi!	JULIEN: Take me.
LOUISE: Jadis tu pris la vierge aimante, toute naïve en son printemps; mais aujourd'hui, l'amante femme veut à son tour prendre l'amant!	LOUISE: You took your loving virgin all innocent in her springtime. But today the loving woman in her turn will take her lover.
LOUISE: Viens! ô mon poète! Beau chevalier, sois ma conquête! Ah! viens mourir sous mes baisers!	LOUISE: Come, oh my poet, proud Knight, be my conquest. Ah, come die under my kisses.
JULIEN: O bien-aimée, emporte ta conquête! Fais-moi mourir sous tes baisers! . . .	JULIEN: Oh, beloved, take your conquest. Make me die under your kisses!
LOUISE: C'est le paradis!	LOUISE: It is paradise.
JULIEN: Non, c'est la vie!	JULIEN: No, it is life.
LOUISE: C'est une féerie!	LOUISE: It is a fairy dream.
JULIEN: Non! C'est la vie! l'éternelle, la toute-puissante vie! . . . (Louise entraine Julien au maison. Tambours lointains). (Un bohème apparaît sur le sentier; il saute la haie, se dirige vers la maison. Un autre bohème surgit de la même manière).	JULIEN: No, it is life! The eternal and powerful life. (Louise draws Julien toward the house. Distant drums.) (A bohemian appears on walk, jumps hedge and goes toward house. A second one appears.)
LE DEUXIEME BOHEME: (au premier). Ils sont là? (Il ouvre la porte à trois camarades porteurs d'un paquet volumineux. Ils en tirent des oriflammes, des draperies, des lanternes vénitiennes, dont ils décorent la facade et le perron de la maison).	SECOND BOHEMIAN: (to first). They are there. (He opens door to three carriers of a voluminous package. They draw from it flags, draperies, lanterns and decorate front and entrançe of house).
GRISETTES et BOHEMES: (lointains). Régalez-vous, mesdam's, voilà l'plaisir!	GRISETTES and BOHEMIANS: (distant). Enjoy yourselves, ladies; this is pleasure.
LA FOULE: (lointaine) N'en mangez pas, jeun's fill's, ca fait grossir!	MOB: (distant). Don't eat too much, young girls, or you'll get big.
GRISETTES et BOHEMES: Régalez-vous, mesdam's, voilà l'plaisir!	GRISETTES and BOHEMES: Enjoy yourselves, etc.
LA FOULE: N'en mangez pas, messieurs, ca fait mourir! (Peu à peu, les badauds se massent l'entrée du jardin. Des gueux apparaissent, grimpés sur les échafaudages).	MOB: Don't eat that, gentlemen, it is death. (Little by little people mass in garden. Loafers climb on scaffolding.)
RODEURS et RODEUSES: (à la porte du jardin). Honneur aux bohèmes! Gloire aux faiseurs de poèmes! Gloire aux belles qui les aiment! (Quelques grisettes, accourent sur le perron).	MEN an WOMEN: (at garden gate). Honor to bohemia. Glory to makers of rhymes. Glory to girls who love them. (Some grisettes appear on the steps. People of the Butte.)

MERES et PERES: Que vienn'nt faire ces gens-là avec tout leur tralala!
Regardez ces filles, ah!
En ont-ell's des des falbalas!

LES MERES: Oh! ma chère!
Si j'étais leur mère!

LES PERES: Quell' misère!
Si j'étais leur père!

MERES et PERES: Quelle extravagation!
Quelle dépravation!
C'est l'abomination
De la désolation!

FILLETTES et GARCONS: C'est ici qu'ils vont s'amuser . . .
Ils vont chanter, rire et danser.

LES FILLETTES: Et peut-être nous embrasser!

LES GARCONS: Et nous montrer leurs fiancés!

LES GAMINS: (s'appelant). Ohé! ohé!

LES GAMINS: (entrant). Le bourgeois voudrait les pendr' d'un seul coup!
La bourgeois' voudrait se pendr' à leur cou!
Mais la quille
plus maligne
de son oeil tranquille cligne:
"—O chaleur!
"—Quel malheur! . . .
—Attendez-moi tout à l'heur!"
(Paraissent les porteurs d'oriflammes et de bannières).

LES PORTEURS: (criant). Place!
Bonn's gens, élargissez-vous!

GRISETTES et BOHEMES: Y a des êtres qui s'ennuient . . .
y en a d'autr's qui n's'ennuient pas!
Y en a qui ont du génie!
y en a d'autr's qui n'en ont pas . . .

LES GUEUX: Vivent les artistes!
Gloire aux anarchistes!
En l'honneur des étudiants, compagnons, battons un ban!

LES GAMINS: Voyex donc ces têtes, ces binett's!
Voyez donc ces têt's qui'ils ont!
Conspuez!

LES GENS DE LA BUTTE: Voyez ces bannières!
Toutes ces lumières!
Quel étrange carnaval!
Quel infernal bacchanal!
Ils sont fous!
Ils sont saouls!
Ils mett'nt tout sens dessus d'ssous.

GRISETTES et BOHEMES: Dans un royal bachanal loin du flic et du cipal, chantons notre hymne triomphal!
(A la porte de l'enclos, apparait le cortège du "Plaisir". Sur un char escorté par les Filles, le Noctambule, entre solennellement).

FATHERS and MOTHERS: Why come all these people,
With all their tra-la-la?
Just look at these girls.
Aren't they a queer lot?

MOTHERS: Oh, my dear,
If I were their mother!

FATHERS: What misery,
If I were their father!

MOTHERS and FATHERS: What extravagance!
What depravity!
The abomination
Of desolation!

GIRLS and BOYS: It's here that they'll amuse themselves.
They will sing and laugh and dance.

GIRLS: And perhaps they will embrace us.

BOYS: And show us their promised ones.

URCHINS: (calling each other). Ohe, ohe!

MORE URCHINS: (entering). The tradesmen would like to hang them
With one stroke.
Tradeswomen would like to hang on them
Round the neck.
But knowing ones
Much wiser
With their other eye Wink.
Oh, city!
What a pity!
Wait for me a bit later.
(The carriers of flags appear.)

CARRIERS: (Crying out). Make room, good people, spread out.

GRISETTES and BOHEMES: There are people who are bored,
And others who are not;
There are some who have genius,
And others who have not a bit.

LOAFERS: Long live artists, glory to anarchists.
In honor of the students let's clap our hands.

URCHINS: Look at their heads, their faces.
What a queer lot they are.
Boo!

PEOPLE of the BUTTE: Look at these banners
And all these lights.
What a carnival?
What a bacchanal?
They are crazy,
They are drunk.
They put everything upside down.

GRISETTES and BOHEMES: In a royal bachanal,
Far from work and order,
We'll sing our hymn of triumph.
(At a gate appears the procession of pleasure. On a chariot escorted by girls the Night Walker enters.)

CHOEUR GENERAL: Jour d'allégresse et jour d'amour
sur la Butte en liesse!
Tout est rose,
tout flamboie!
C'est la joie!
L'apothéose!
Oyex ces cris.
De tous côtés
c'est la joie de Paris,
aux pieds de la Beauté!
Voici venir
les divins gueux
aux longs cheveux!
Les jeunes dieux!
Voici venir
Les fiers élus de l'avenir!
Gloire au génie
des fils de l'harmonie, riches d'éternité!
quoique vêtus de pauvreté!
(Louise paraît sur le perron. Ses amies s'empressent autour d'elle).
Gloire à la muse
dont la lèvre fleurie jamais rien ne refuse à son poète qui la prie! . . .
Riez, chantez, dansez!
Tout est rose!
Tout flamboie!
C'est la joie!
L'apothéose!
(Bravos prolongés de la foule).

LE PAPE DES FOUS: (se levant). Par Mercure aux pieds légers, puisque s'ouvre ici la Cour d'amour,
m'est avis, messeigneurs,
qu'il vous sied de céder le verbe au poète superbe et seul idoine à louanger que voici!
(Il va vers la foule et s'incline ironiquement; gambade autour des grisettes, la Dansense, s'avance vers lui).

LE PAPE DES FOUS: (montrant la Danseuse). O jolie!
Cette danseuse
est une fleur de vie
faite d'un peu de chacun de nous tous.
Et cette fleur vivante,
c'est notre âme
(Les grisettes prennent part à la danse).
Sous la forme d'une fleur
qui serait une femme,
Fleur-femme,
dont la grâce et le parfum
se traduisent en cadences, afin que tes sens
aussi bien que ton âme
puissent apprécier l'hommage suprême!

LA FOULE: Bravo! Bravo!
(Les grisettes, en demi-cercle devant Louise, lui envoient la Danseuse).

GENERAL CHORUS: Day of pleasure
And of love
On the Butte in leash.
All is rose
All is flaring
It is our joy,
Apotheose;
Hear these cries
On all sides;
It is the joy of Paris
At the feet of beauty.
Here they come
The divine tramps;
With longish hair
Young gods.
Here come
The proud elect of the future.
Glory to genius
Of the sons of harmony
Rich in eternity
Though clothed in poverty.
(Louise appears in the doorway. Her friends surround her.)
Glory to the muse
Whose favored lip
Refuses nothing
To her poet who begs.
Laugh, sing and dance;
All is rose
And repose;
It is our joy,
Apotheose.
(Prolonged applause of the mob.)

FATHER OF FOOLS: (rising). By Mercury, light of foot
Since here is opened the Court of Love
It is my advice, my lords
That you must cede the verb
To the superb poet
And only one to praise
Right here.
(He goes toward crowd and salutes ironically, dances around the grisettes. The Dancer advances to him.)

FATHER OF FOOLS: Oh pretty!
This dancer
Is a flower of life
Made up of a bit of us all.
And this living flower
Is our soul.
(The grisettes join in dance.)
Under form of a flower
Who would be a woman
Flower-woman
Whose grace and perfume
Are translated in cadences
So that all your senses
As well as your soul
May appreciate the supreme homage.

CROWD: Bravo!
(The grisettes in half circle around Louise send her the Dancer.)

LE PAPE DES FOUS: O jolie!
Soeur choisie!
Harmonie et beauté!
Poème de clarté!
(La Danseuse cueille des roses aux mains des enfants, s'incline devant Louise, lui offre ses fleurs. Les grisettes drapent sur les épaules de Louise le châle brodé d'argent, emblème de sa royauté).

LE PAPE DES FOUS: Gente fillette de Paris, en qui revivent Juliette, Ophélie.
O charmante,
Muse clémente,
de tes chevaliers recois l'hommage!
(Acclamations).

LA FOULE: Louise!

LES GRISETTES et les BOHEMES: (entourant Louise). Louise, acceptes-tu d'être reine de la Bohème?
Louise, acceptes-tu d'être Muse de la Butte Sacrée?
Réponds?
(Louise, souriante, fait un gest d'acquiescement).
(Julien s'approche).

JULIEN: O jolie!
Soeur choisie!
(Louise prend une rose à son corsage et l'offre à l'amant).
Je t'aime!
(Orgueilleusement, il prend Louise dans ses bras).

LOUISE: Je t'aime! . . .

LES GRISETTES: (enthousiasmées). Amoureuse beauté, ton chant d'éternité éveille en nous une adorable ivresse un désir de caresses . . .

LES GAMINS: (aburis). C'est renversant!
Epastrouillant!
Abracadabrant!
Regardez-les!
C'qu'ils sont chipés!

LES BOHEMES: (avec ferveur).
Harmonie et beauté!
Poème de clarté!
Parisienne sculptée
dans de l'éternité,
O jolie!
Tendre reine des amantes! . . .

LES GUEUX: (goguenards). S'ils continuent, y vont la rendre folle!
Y a qu'à Montmartre qu'on voit ca!
J'en suis bleu, j'en suis baba!
C'est plus bath qu'à l'Opéra!
Hourrah!
Pour la Muse de Montmartre!
Tant pis pour elle!
Fallait pas qu'elle y aille!
Ell' croit qu'la grande vie

FATHER OF FOOLS: Oh, pretty
Chosen sister;
Harmony and beauty,
Poem of light.
(The Dancer gathers flowers from the hands of children, bows before Louise and offers her the flowers. The grisettes drape over Louise's shoulders the shawl embroidered with silver, emblem of royalty.)

FATHER OF FOOLS: Gentle little girl of Paris,
In whom are revived Juliet, Ophelia.
Oh, charming,
Merciful muse,
Receive the homage of your knights.

CROWD: Louise!

GRISETTES and BOHEMES: (surrounding Louise). Do you accept,
Louise, to be queen of Bohemia?
Louise, will you be Muse of the sacred Butte?
Answer?
(Louise, pointing, makes sign of acquiescence.)
(Julien approaches.)

JULIEN: Oh pretty
Chosen sister.
(Louise takes rose and offers it to Julien.) I love you.
(Proudly he takes Louise in his arms.)

LOUISE: I love you!

GRISETTES: (enthusiastically).
Loving beauty,
Your song of eternity
Awakes in us an adorable bliss,
A want of caresses.

URCHINS: It's astonishing,
Wonderful,
Marvelous;
Look at them;
Ain't they got up fine?

BOHEMES: (with fervor). Harmony of beauty,
Poem of light.
Sculptured Parisian.
In eternity,
Oh pretty,
Tender queen of lovers.

LOAFERS: If they keep on They'll make her crazy;
Only at Montmartre can you see this;
I'm struck dumb and foolish;
It's better than at the opera; Hurrah
For the Muse of Montmartre!
It'll be the worst for her!
She shouldn't have gone;
She thinks a grand life

ca vaut mieux que l'travail!
Quell' folie!
Tu n'vois donc pas qu'ils te mentent!

JEUNES FILLES: (admiratives).
Adorable beauté,
chacune de nous t'envie;
car ta félicité
ô jolie,
c'est le rêve des amantes!

GARCONS: (charmés). Quel frisson de volupté sur nos têtes vient de passer!

MERES: (indignés). Voyez, quelle effrontée! . . .
Dans son immoralité,
dans son impudicité,
elle oublie
qu'ses parents, là-bas, s'tourmentent!

PERES: (méprisants). Admirez l'absurdité de cette solennité!
La Folie est triomphante!

LOUISE et JULIEN: Non, non, jamais rien ne séperera la muse du poète!
L'amante de l'amant!
Et Julien de Louise!
(Fanfares et tambours.—Apothéose).
(Mais une rumeur vient du fond de l'enclos. La foule s'écarte. Un grand silence se fait. Sur le seuil du jardin, la mère de Lousie, hésitant à entrer, apparaît).

LA FOULE: Ah! Regardez . . .
Quelle est cette femme? Que veut-elle?

LES GRISETTES et LES BOHEMES:
La mère de Louise! . . .
(Le pape des Fous se sauve en ricanant suivi des filles).

LA FOULE: La mère de la Muse!

LOUISE: Ah!
(Les porteurs d'étendards, les musicions et les danseuses disparaissent).

JULIEN: (se mettant devant elle).
Je te garde!
(La mère s'avance avec timidité. Les grisettes entourent Louise défaillante.)

LA FOULE: Quelle affaire!

LES GAMINS: Allons-nous-en à quatre patt's
C'est pas l'moment d'fair' des éspates!

LES GUEUX: Adieu, cochons, vache et couvée . . .
Encore un' rein' de dégommée!
(La mère s'approche de la maison. Un groupe de bohèmes lui barre le passage. Mais le regard de la femme, les font reculer).

LA FOULE: Quelle affaire!

LES GAMINS: (déjà loin). Gar' les mornifl'es et les peignées
Y va pleuvoir des giroflées! . . .

Is worth better than work;
Don't you see they're lying to you!

YOUNG GIRLS: (with admiration). Adorable beauty,
Each of us envies you
For your felicity;
Oh
The dream of lovers is pretty.

YOUNG MEN: What a spasm of passion
Has passed over us.

MOTHERS: (indignant). Look at her boldness;
In her immorality,
In her impudicity,
She forgets
That her parents are worried.

FATHERS: (with contempt). Admire the absurdity
Of this solemnity;
Folly is triumphant.

LOUISE and JULIEN: No, no nothing shall ever separate
The muse from the poet,
The lover from the one he loves,
Or Julien and Louise.
(Trumpets and drums. Apotheose.)
(But a rumor comes from the rear. The crowd gives way. A great silence ensues. On the step of the garden the mother of Louise, hesitating to enter, appears.)

CROWD: Look! Look! Who is this woman?
What does she want?

GRISETTES and BOHEMES: The mother of Louise! . . .
(The Father of Fools runs away laughing, followed by girls.)

CROWD: The mother of the Muse!

LOUISE: Ah!
(The carriers of banners, musicians and dancers disappear.)

JULIEN: (placing himself in front of her.) I'll guard you.
(The mother advances timidly. The grisettes surround Louise, who is half fainting.)

CROWD: What an affair.

URCHINS: Let us go on all fours;
It's not the time to make a row.

LOAFERS: Adieu, cow, pigs and litter,
Another queen in the gutter.
(Mother nears the house. A group of bohemes block her way. At her glance they fall back.)

CROWD: What an affair.

URCHINS: (far away). Take care of troubles and beatings,
It's going to rain blows! . . .

LES GUEUX: (descendant des échafandages). Adieu, chansons, adieu, chimér's!
Ah! quel malheur d'avoir un'mère!
(Louise se relève, voit sa mère, et s'elance dans les bras de Julien. La foule s'eloigne. Louise, se refugie dans le vestibule. Julien, dans une attitude de défi, barre la route).

LA MERE: (humblement, à Julien). Je ne viens pas en ennemie . . . Je venais dire à Louise que son père est très souffrant et qu'elle seule peut le sauver!

LOUISE: (à part). Mon père!

JULIEN: (à part). Que vient-elle faire?

LA MERE: (à Julien, simplement). Nous avions tout accepté; nous étions las de lutter, de chercher . . . et nous avions fait une croix sur la porte de sa chambre . . .
Elle était morte, bien morte pour nous! . . .
Mais aujourd'hui que son père est au plus mal, je viens vous supplier, monsieur, de permettre à Louise de revenir chez nous; et ce sera la guérison de mon pauvre homme à la maison.

LOUISE: Mon père est trés malade? (Julien manifeste sa méfiance).

LA MERE: (à Louise). Il est bien mal depuis hier . . . Le premier jour, il versa mille larmes! Il allait et venait de la porte à la fenêtre, regardant, écoutant, espérant à chaque minute, te voir revenir . . .
La nuit, comme le sommeil ne voulait pas traînait de lui, pendant des heures, il se trainait dans l'ombre, et gémissait . . . et sanglotait . . . Un soir, je le surpris sur le seuil de ta chambre, à genoux et criant:
Louise! Louise! mon enfant! m'entends-tu? . . . ne suis-je plus ton père? . . .
Puis il sembla se faire une raison, et reprit sa vie d'autrefois . . . enfin je crus qu'il oubliait, en le voyant parfois sourire à mes larmes.
Hélas! je m'étais trompée; ton père n'avait rien oublié. La douleur le minait, et plus il la cachait, plus il souffrait!
Seule, une joie peut le sauver . . .
Et vous pouvez la lui donner, en conseillant à Louise de revenir chez nous.
Oh! Elle sera libre maintenant!
Ce que nous voulons, c'est l'avoir un peu . . . nous l'aimions depuis plus longtemps que vous . . . Elle connaître nous aimait avant de vous connaître.
Oh! monsieur! vous ne voudriez pas que son père vous maudisse!
La malédiction d'un mourant vous poursuivrait toute la vie! . . .
(Le chiffonnier paraît, au fond de la scène. Il fouille le ruisseau en s'éclairant de sa lanterne).
(La mère attend avec inquiétude).

LE CHIFFONNIER: Un père cherche sa fille qui était toute sa famille.
Mais une fille
dans la cité,
c'est une aiguille
dans un champ de blé!
(Il s'éloigne).
Pourquoi chercher
et m'obstiner,
La grande ville
a besoin de nos filles . . .
(Louise et Julien regardent le chiffonnier avec compassion. Leurs hésitations s'envolent).

JULIEN: (à la mère). Prometez-moi de me rendre Louise?

LA MERE: Je le promets.

LE CHIFFONNIER: (trés loin). Tra la la la.
Tra la la la.
Elle est partie dans la nuit!

JULIEN: Allons! va, messagère de bonheur!
Et n'oublie pas que dès ce moment je vais compter toutes les heures!
(Louise ôte le châle dont on l'avait parée et le donne à Julien).
(La mère va vers la porte du jardin. Louise la suit, troublée, s'arrêtant à chaque pas. Sur un geste de Julien elle revient vers lui, se dans jette ses bras. Louise s'éloigne a reculons, une main sur les lèvres.)

JULIEN: (lui tendant les bras). O Jolie!

■ ACTE QUATRIEME.

(Même décor qu'au premier acte. La maison et la terrasse de Julien ont disparu et l'on voit, au loin, Paris. Neuf heures du soir. Eté).

(Le père est assis près de la table. La mère, dans la cuisine, fait la lessive. A travers la porte vitrée, on apercoit Louise dans sa chambre. La mère, s'approche du père, l'invite à boire. Celui-ci les yeux fixés sur Louise ne semble pas la voir).

LA MERE: (cherchant à l'égayer). Tu devrais te rapprocher de la fenêtre, il y fait si bon depuis que les démolisseurs ont balayé le vieux faubourg et ouvert à Paris le chemin de notre chambre.
Ah! on respire maintenant! Vois la belle trouée d'air, de lumière et de vie!

LE PERE: (après un silence). Oui! une fameuse trouée où sont disparues bien des choses . . .

LA MERE: Bien des gens!

LOAFERS: (descending scaffolding). Adieu to song, to fancies bright;
What a pity to have a mother.
(Louise rises, sees her mother, and rushes to the arms of Julien. The crowd melts away. Louise takes refuge in the vestibule. Julien, defiant, bars the way.)

MOTHER: (humbly to Julien). I do not come as an enemy . . . I come to tell Louise that her father is suffering and that she alone can save him.

LOUISE: (aside). My father!

JULIEN: (aside). What brings her here?

MOTHER: (to Julien, simply). We had accepted everything; we were tired of struggling and seeking . . . and we had made a cross on the door of her room.
She was dead . . . quite dead for us.
But today her father is much worse, I came to beseech you, sir, to permit Louise to come back home. And it means the getting well of my poor man at the house.

LOUISE: My father is very sick? (Julien manifests incredulity.)

MOTHER: (to Louise). He is very bad since yesterday. The first day he shed a thousand tears. He came and went from door to window, looking, listening, hoping each minute to see you return . . .
At night, as sleep would have nothing to do with him, for hours he would drag himself in the dark, groaning and sobbing. One night I surprised him on the floor of your room, on his knees, exclaiming "Louise, Louise, My child, do you hear me . . . am I no longer your father?"
Then he seemed to come to reason and resumed his ordinary life . . . at last I thought he was forgetting as I saw him sometimes smile at my tears.
Alas, I was mistaken. Your father had forgotten nothing. Sorrow was ruining him. The more he hid it the more he suffered.
Only a great joy can save him . . .
And you can give it to him in advising Louise to come back home.
Oh, she shall now be free.
What we want is to have her a little . . . we have loved her longer than you. She loved us before she knew you.
Oh, sir, you would not wish that her father should curse you.
The malediction of a dying man would pursue you all your life.
(The rag picker appears at rear of scene. He pokes in the gutter lighting himself with lantern. Mother waits with impatience.)

RAG PICKER: A father seeks his daughter
She was all he had of family
But a girl
in the city
Is a needle
In a field of wheat.
(He passes on.)
Why seek and pester.
The big town
Is in want of our girls.
(Louise and Julien look at rag picker with compassion. Their hesitations disappear.)

JULIEN: (to the mother). Do you promise to give me back Louise?

MOTHER: I promise.

RAG PICKER: (in distance). Tra, la, la, la,
Tra, la, la, la,
She disappeared in the night.

JULIEN: There, go, messenger of happiness! And don't forget that from this moment, I shall count all the hours.
(Louise takes off the shawl they had given her and hands it to Julien. The mother goes toward garden gate. Louise, troubled, follows her, stopping at each step. On a gesture of Julien she returns and throws herself in his arms. Louise goes out backward, one hand on her lips.)

JULIEN: (spreading his arms to her). Oh, pretty one!

■ ACT IV.

(Same scene as first act. The house and terrace of Julien have disappeared and one sees Paris in the distance. Nine o'clock in the evening. Summer.)

(The father is seated near the table. The mother, in the kitchen, making ready for the wash. Through a glass door Louise is seen in her room. The mother approaches father, invites him to drink. He, his eyes fixed on Louise, seems not to see her.)

MOTHER: (trying to cheer him). You ought to go to the window. It feels so good since the wreckers did away with old faubourg and opened to Paris the road to our room.
Ah! now we can breathe. See the big tunnel of air, light and life.

FATHER: (after a silence). Yes, a famous tunnel through which a good many things disappeared.

MOTHER: Many people.

LE PERE: Et quelque peu de bonheur.

LA MERE: (affectueusement). Tu as peut-être eu tort de travailler aujourd'hui . . .

LE PERE: Après vingt jours de paresse, j'ai dû faire un effort pour m'y remettre; mais maintenant, c'est fini et je suis d'aplomb . . .
Le coffre est encore solide et peut lutter longtemps!
La fatigue me fait du bien . . . et j'ai pris l'habitude du chagrin . . .
Les pauvres gens peuvent-ils être heureux?
A qui le bon Dieu donnerait-il son ciel s'il n'y avait sur la terre que des gens heureux?
Bête de somme que je suis, que tous nous sommes, sous le joug pesant de la Fatalité!
Tristes serfs d'une besogne qui ne cesse jamais!
Piteux jouets aux mains de l'injustice, dans un monde où tout n'est que misère et déception, où choses et gens sont nos ennemis, où les enfants même, dans l'égoïsme de l'amour, nous martyrisent et nous disent:
(Aprement).
—Vous avez assez vécu! Place! Place! nous n'avons plus besoin de vous! . . . nous ne voulons plus de maitres! . . .
(Douloureusement).
Et, si l'on veut lutter contre leur folie, ces êtres d'orgueil, narguant notre tendresse, ajoutent leur haine à toutes nos détresses, et silencieux, implacables, impatients, ils attendent que la mort vienne les délivrer de ceux qui voudraient mourir pour eux!
(Louise se lève lentement, ouvre la fenêtre de sa chambre et regarde dans la nuit. Le père la suit des yeux).
Voir naître une enfant, la fleurir de caresse, guider ses premiers pas, sourire à son premier sourire . . .
(Louise pleure; le père la contemple avec une émotion croissante).
Les fatigues, les tourments, rien ne coûte: c'est pour elle; qu'elle soit toujours plus belle!
L'enfant grandit; c'est maintenant une jolie demoiselle vers laquelle s'empressent les galants.
(Louise ferme sa fenêtre et se rassied).
Tout en elle est ravissant; ils sont fiers, les vieux parents, car la fille de leur sang est pour tous un modèle d'honneur et de sagesse!
Puis, un jour, un inconnu qui passe, d'un regard enjôleur séduit la pure fille et chasse le passé de son coeur; s'empare de sa pensée et détruit à jamais notre bonheur!
Ah! soit maudit le voleur d'amour qui, de notre fille, fit pour nous une étrangère; le ravisseur dont le caprice d'un jour nous causa tant de larmes et changes le foyer de calme et de joie en un enfer de discorde et de haine!
(Silence.)

FATHER: And some happiness.

MOTHER: (affectionately). You were, perhaps, wrong to work so much today . . .

FATHER: After twenty days of laziness, I had to make an effort to get in harness again; but now its over and I'm all right.
The trunk is still solid and can struggle a long time.
Fatigue does me good and I've taken the habit of sorrow . . .
Can poor people be happy?
To whom would the good God give his heaven if there were only happy people on earth?
Beast of burden that I am, that we all are, under the heavy weight of Fatality.
Sorrowful serfs of a task that never ends.
Piteous toys in the hands of injustice, in a world where everything is but misery and deception, where things and people are our enemies, where even the children, in the egoism of love, martyrize us and say to us:
(Bitterly.)
You have lived enough. Room. Room! We don't need you any more. We won't have any more masters! . . .
(Sadly.)
And, if one would fight against their folly, these proud beings, laughing at our tenderness, adding their hatred to all our distresses, silent, impatient, wait that death shall come to deliver them from those who would die for them!
(Louise slowly rises, opens her window and looks into the night. The father's eyes follow her.)
See a child born, flower her with caresses, guide her first steps, smile at her first smile.
(Louise weeps. The father looks at her with growing emotion.)
Fatigues, torments, nothing matters. It is for her—that she may always be handsome.
The child grows. She is now a pretty demoiselle upon whom gallants begin to press.
(Louise closes windows. Sits again.)
Everything about her is ravishing; they are proud, the old parents, for the girl of their blood is a model of honor and wisdom.
(He rises.)
Then one day, a passing stranger with a cunning glance seduces the pure girl and chases the past from her heart, takes possession of her thoughts and destroys our happiness forever.
Ah, cursed be the robber of love, who made our daughter a stranger to us; the ravisher whose caprice of a day caused us so many tears and changed the hearth of calm and joy into a hell of discord and hatred.
(Silence.)

LA MERE: (de la cuisine). Louise! Louise!

LOUISE: Quoi?

LA MERE: Viens m'aider!
(Louise se lève, range son ouvrage, éteint sa lampe, puis ouvre la porte; le père se tourne vers elle, lui tend les bras; elle passe sans le voir, se dirige vers la cuisine et disparaît. Les deux femmes, à la cantonade).

LA MERE: Auras-tu bientôt fini de bouder? Tu n'as donc pas pitié de ton père?
(Le père écoute avidement)
Tu supposes peut-être qu'on va te laisser retourner chez ton amoureux?

LOUISE: (vivement). Vous l'aviez promis!

LA MERE: Tu sais bien que c'est impossible. On n'peut pas te laiser r'commencer une vie pareile! Tu la connais, maintenant, la vie de bohème; tu sais ce que c'est: de la misère en chansons. Voyons, sois raisonnable! . . . sois bonne pour nous . . .
Ton pauvre père souffre tant!
(Père se lève et s'approche de la cuisine).

LOUISE: (dont la voix s'élève) . . . l'amour libre!

LA MERE: (moqueuse). L'amour libre, l'amour libre! en prônant aujourd'hui ce qu'il appelle l'amour libre, il n'a qu'un but: esquiver le mariage!
L'amour libre! . . . en voilà une histoire!
(Elle rit railleusement. Lentement, le père va se rasseoir).

LOUISE: Rira bien qui rira la dernière!

LA MERE: C'est ce que nous verrons . . . en attendant, va dormir, c'est l'heure; et n'oublie pas de dire bonsoir à ton père.
(Louise paraît à la porte; elle s'avance lentement, et se dirige vers le père).

LOUISE: Bonsoir, père.
(Elle lui présente son front. Le père la saisit avec violence, et l'embrasse longuement. Sans lui rendre son baiser, Louise se dégage et s'éloigne froidement. Le père tend vers elle ses bras, puis s'élance).

LE PERE: Louise!
(Suppliant).
Louise!
(Il l'attire à lui).
Regarde-moi!
(Tendre).
Ne suis-je plus ton père? N'es-tu plus l'enfant qu'autre fois j'ai

MOTHER: (from kitchen). Louise! Louise!

LOUISE: What?

MOTHER: Come and help me.
(Louise rises, arranges her sewing, puts out her lamp, then opens the door. The father turns to her with arms outstretched. She passes him without looking and goes to the kitchen and disappears. The two women, off stage.)

MOTHER: Will you soon stop sulking? Have you no pity on your father?
(Father listens anxiously.) Perhaps you think we are going to let you return to your lover?

LOUISE: (lively). You promised it.

MOTHER: You know that it's impossible. We can't let begin again such a life as that. You know now what it is, this bohemian life—misery in songs. Come, be reasonable . . . be good to us . . .
Your poor father suffers so much.
(Father rises and goes toward kitchen.)

LOUISE: (loud voice) . . . love that is free!

MOTHER: (mockingly). Free love, free love. In practicing today what is called free love he had only one aim, to slide out of marriage.
Free love . . . that's a fine story.
(She laughs mockingly. Father sits down again.)

LOUISE: Laughs best who laughs last.

MOTHER: We'll see about that. In the meantime, go to your sleep—it's time; and don't forget to say goodnight to your father.
(Louise appears at door, walks slowly and goes toward father.)

LOUISE: Good night, father.
(She presents her forehead. Father seizes her violently and embraces her long. Without giving back kiss, Louise moves away coldly. Father strains his arms toward her then springs.)

FATHER: Louise!
(Begging.)
Louise!
(He draws her to him.)
Look at me.
(Tenderly.)
Am I not your father? Are you no longer the child who used to cradle bercée dans mes bras? N'es-tu plus la fille de mon sang?

(Il l'assied sur ses genoux et la berce comme un enfant).

LE PERE: (la retenant). Reste . . . repose-toi . . . comme jadis, toute petite . . .
(Louise cherche à s'évader).
Reste . . . Ah! souviens-toi des beaux jours d'autrefois! . . .
(Louise essaie doucement de sa dégager).
Pourquoi veux-tu partir? Est-il donc pour toi un refuge sur la terre plus doux que le coeur de ton père?
(La bercant). L'enfant dormira bientôt . . .
L'enfant dormira bientôt . . .
l'enfant dormira bientôt . . .
Comme autrefois, endors-toil
(S'efforcant de sourire).
"Si la p'tite enfant est sage . . .
elle aura une belle image . . .
do-do . . .
l'enfant do."

LOUISE: (lève la tête). L'enfant serait sage, tout à fait sage, si son père voulait lui faire moins de peine et comprendre que la douleur est mauvaise conseillère . . .

LE PERE: Pourquoi parler de peine et parler de douleur, quand un père, une mère t'aiment et ne vivent que pour ton bonheur?

LOUISE: (avec ironie). Mon bonheur? . . .
Vous n'avez qu'un signe à faire pour que revienne le bonheur.
(Gentiment enfantin, mais toujours triste).
La belle image que l'enfant désire, la grâce qu'ell-vous demande c'est de n'être plus, comme un oiseau mis en cage . . .
(Elle se lève).
privée de liberté et emprisonnée par votre aveugle tendresse, qui s'imagine que je puisse être heureuse à vivre ainsi qu'une captive, dans l'âge où, sans la liberté, la vie est pire que la mort.
(La mère paraît).

LE PERE: Si tu veux être libre, laisse là ton rêve de folie . . .

LOUISE: (à part). Mon rêve de folie! . . .
Vous voulez que j'abandonne tout espoir, et que je mente à mes mentîtes serments . . . comme vous mentites . . . à vos promesses!

LA MERE: Insolente!

LOUISE: (imitant sa mère). "Oh! elle sera libre, maintenant; ce que nous demandons, c'est l'avoir un peu, car nous l'aimons depuis plus longtemps que vous; elle nous aimait avant de vous connaitre."
(Se tournant vers sa mère).
Vous nous reconnaissiez, alors, le droit de nous aimer et de nous le dire!

in my arms? Are you no longer the daughter of my blood?
(He seats her on his knees like a child.)

FATHER: (retaining her). Remain—rest . . . as in other days—long ago.
(Louise seeks to escape.)
Remain. Ah, do you remember the fine days of long ago?
(Louise tries gently to get away.)
Why do you want to go? Is there for you a refuge safer on earth than your father's heart?
(Rocking her.)
Soon the child will be asleep,
Soon the child will be asleep,
Go to sleep as in the old times.
(Forcing himself to smile.)
"If the little child is good
She shall have a pretty picture.
Do, do,
Baby, do, do."

LOUISE: (raising head). The child would be good, and very, very good, if her father would give her less trouble and understand that grief is a poor counselor . . .

FATHER: Why speak of trouble and grief, when a father and a mother only live for your happiness?

LOUISE: (ironically.) My happiness.
You have only to make a sign and happiness will return.
(Prettily childish, but sadly.)
The handsome picture the child wants, the mercy that she requests is no longer to be like a bird in a cage,
(She rises.)
deprived of liberty and imprisoned by your blind tenderness, which imagines that I can be happy living like a captive, at an age when, without liberty, life is worse than death.
(The mother appears.)

FATHER: If you wish to be free abandon your dream of folly . . .

LOUISE: (aside). My dream of folly! . . .
You wish me to abandon all hope,
That I belie my oaths . . .
As you lied . . .
In your promises.

MOTHER: Insolent.

LOUISE: (imitating her mother.)
"Oh now she will be free. What we ask is to have her a little for we have loved her longer than you. She loved us before she knew you."
(Turning to her mother.)
You recognized our right then to love one another and to say it.

LA MERE: Nous vous reconnaissions le droit de vous marier, pas autre chose! Tant pis pour toi, (Sarcastique).
si ton amant satisfait, réclame maintenant l'union libre.
(Brutale).
Tu n'as que ce que tu mérites.

LOUISE: (indignée). Comment! . . .comment!. . .Tuoseslenier!. . . n'est-il pas vrai que tu m'avais promis de me laisser libre?

LE PERE: La liberté que tu demandes, c'est la liberté de courir les rues . . . la liberté de nous déshonorer!
(Il prend Louise dans ses bras, avec détresse).
Louise, ô mon enfant! Qui m'aurait dit qu'un jour tu renierais ma tendresse, et que, loin de moi, tu demanderais à vivre?
O Louise, reviens à toi! Comme autrefois, dans mes bras, endors-toi!
. . . (Il l'assied sur ses genoux).
N'est-ce plus mon enfant, ma Louise chèrie, que ie presse en mes bras tremblants?

LOUISE: (avec amertume). Les parents voudraient qu'on restât le marmot dont la pensée sommeille à l'ombre de leur volonté!

LE PERE: Les misères, les tourments, tout s'ouble auprès d'elle; elle est si bonne, si aimante, si belle!

LOUISE: Pourquoi serais-je belle . . . si ce n'est pour être aimée? . . .

LE PERE: Ah! n'est-ce pas t'aimer que te donner notre vie?

LOUISE: Vous prenez la mienne!

LE PERE: N'est-ce pas t'aimer que t'avoir pardonné . . .

LOUISE: Pour m'emprisonner mieux qu'autrefois!

LE PERE: N'est-ce pas t'aimer que te supplier . . . quand j'aurais le droit de commander . . .
(Louise s'éloigue vivement du père. Celui-ci s'avance sur elle, menacant).

LOUISE: Tout être a le droit d'être libre!
Tout coeur a le devoir d'aimer!
Aveugle celui qui veut garrotter l'originale et fière volonté d'une âme qui s'éveille et qui réclame sa part de soleil, sa part d'amour!

LE PERE: (découragé). Ah! ce n'est pas toi qui parles par ta bouche, méchante! Non! ce n'est pas toi! C'est une étrangère, une ennemie impitoyable. Ce n'est plus ma fille! mon seul bien! mon espoir! ma jolie!

VOIX LONTAINES: O Jolie! . . .

LOUISE: Paris! Paris m'appelle!

VOIX LONTAINES: O Jolie! . . .

MOTHER: We recognized your right to marry—nothing else. The worse for you.
(Sarcastic.)
And if your lover satisfied, now cries, Free love—
(Brutally.)
You've only got what you deserve.

LOUISE: (indignant.) What . . . what! . . . You dare deny it? Is it not true that you promised to leave me free.

FATHER: The liberty you ask is the liberty to gad the streets—freedom to dishonor yourself.
(Taking Louise in his arms, distressedly.)
Louise, oh my child. Who could have told me that one day, you would give up my love and that you would wish to live far from me?
Oh Louise, come back to yourself as in the past, in my arms, go to sleep.
(He places her on his knees.)
Is it no longer my child, my darling Louise, whom I press in these trembling arms?

LOUISE: (bitterly). Parents would wish that one remained a dormouse, the thought of which slumbers in the shadow of their will.

FATHER: Miseries and torments, all are forgotten now. She is so good, so loving, so pretty.

LOUISE: Why should I be pretty
Unless it is to be loved?

FATHER: Is it not loving you to give you our life?

LOUISE: You take mine.

FATHER: Is it not loving you to have forgiven? . . .

LOUISE: So as to imprison me more than ever.

FATHER: Is it not loving you to beseech,
When I should have the right to command?
(Louise tears herself away from her father. He advances toward her, threateningly.)

LOUISE: All beings have the right to be free,
Every heart has the right to love.
Blind is he who would fetter the first and proud will of a soul that claims its share of sun,
Its share of love.

FATHER: (discouraged). Oh, it is not you who speaks by your mouth, wicked one. No it is not you. It is a stranger, an enemy, unforgiving. It is no longer my daughter, my only possession, my hope, my pretty one.

DISTANT VOICES: Oh, pretty one!

LOUISE: Paris, Paris calls me.

DISTANT VOICES: Oh, pretty one!

LOUISE: O la magique, la chère musique de la grande ville! . . .

LE PERE: (avec haine). Paris! . . .

LOUISE: O l'attirante promesse! . . .

LE PERE: Paris! . . .

LOUISE: L'inoubliable, l'affolant vertige! . . .
Au secours de la Fille, la Ville viendrait-elle?
(On apercoit la ville qui peu à peu s'éclaire).
Paris! Paris! Fête éternelle du plaisir!
Paris! splendeur de mes désirs!
Paris, ô Paris, secours ma détresse.
Ressucite l'ivresse des hymnes d'allégresse!
Que s'écroulent les murs de la triste prison!
Sonne, cloche de joie des libres épousailles!
Fais revivre le charme de l'heure où mon coeur battait contre son coeur!

LE PERE: (dont la colère augmente). Ah!

LOUISE: Vers sa demeure, asile des rêves, ville maternelle, porte moi d'un coup d'aile!

LE PERE: Tais-toi.

LOUISE: Encore un jour d'amour!
Encore un jour d'amour!
(Le père ferme la fenêtre).

LE PERE: Tais-toi! Tais-toi!

LA MERE: Elle devient folle.

LOUISE: (à toute volée). Qu'il vienne vite, vite, mon bien-aimé, pareil aux hardis chevaliers des contes bleus de la Légende.

LA MERE: Que dit-elle?

LOUISE: A mon appel va-t-il accourir, le Prince Charmant, dont la caresse éveilla la petite Montmartroise au coeur dormant!

LE PERE: Tu n'as pas honte!

LOUISE: Qu'il vienne donc le poète, dont la tendresse triomphante fit une Muse de la pauvre recluse!

LA MERE: Veux-tu te taire!

LOUISE: Ce n'est plus la petite fille au coeur timide et craintif, c'est une femme, au coeur de flamme, qui veut reprendre son amant!
(Elle s'élance vers la porte. Le père lui barre le passage).

LE PERE: Tu ne passeras pas!

LOUISE: (tournant dans la chambre comme une hallucinée). La! la! la! la! la! la! Il va venir bientôt! La! la! la! la! la! la! Je vais revoir les yeux du bien-aimé; je vais entendre sa parole; et mes lévres vont pouvoir se griser de son ardent baiser toute l'éternité!
Julien! à moi! Julien, pour toujours, prends-moi! . . .

LE PERE: (Au paroxysme de la colère, il s'élance sur elle comme pour la frapper; puis se ravise et, furieusement, ouvre la porte). Ah! misérable! va-t'en! va-t'en le retrouver! Dans la ville, qui t'appelle, va donc t'amuser! C'est plus gai qu'ici, là-bas! . . .
(Il court vers Louise, lui saisit les mains, la traine vers la porte).
Allons, dépêche-toi! voici la fête qui s'allume! Ah! ah! ah! Toutes les filles sont là; on les entend crier:
"—Que la danse commence!"
—Et brûlent les lampions! . . . et ronfle la musique!
(Montrant Paris.)
—"Voilà l'plaisir, mesdam's!"
On danse à crever, on rit à pleurer.
(Louise s'échappe et se réfugie au bout de la chambre).
"Voilà l'plaisir, mesdam's!"
On n'atend plus que toi! allons, va, mais va donc!

LA MERE: Pierre!

LOUISE: (tremblante, apeurée, hésitant à sortir court autour de la chambre). Ah!

LA MERE: (s'accrochant au père). Laisse-la!

LE PERE: Dépêche-toi!

LA MERE: Laisse-la, je t'en prie!

LE PERE: M'entends-tu?

LA MERE: (s'accrochant au père). Pierre!

LE PERE: (presque hurlé). Vas-tu t'en aller? ou je te jette à la porte!
(Il vent s'élancer. La mère le retient; hors de lui, il écarte la mère avec violence et s'élance).

LE PERE: (Cri). Ah!

LA MERE: (tombant). (Cri). Ah!

LOUISE: (affolée, s'enfuit). (Cri). Ah!
(Louise partie, le père regarde autour de lui . . . Sa colèrc tombe . . . Il regrette et s'élance dans l'escalier. On l'entend appeler).

LE PERE: Louise! . . . Louise! . . .
(La mère se relève, le père apparaît. Il reste un moment sur le seuil, comme terrassé par la douleur tendant le poing vers la ville, avec haine). O Paris!!!

FIN.

LOUISE: Oh, the magic, the dear music of the town.

FATHER: (with hatred). Paris!

LOUISE: The attractive promise.

FATHER: Paris!

LOUISE: The unforgettable, the delightful craze.
The town will come and help the girl?
(The city gradually lights up.)
Paris, Paris, eternal festival of pleasure;
Paris, splendor of my desires.
Paris, oh Paris, aid my distress.
Resurrect the bliss of your hymns of delight!
That the walls of the sad prison may fall,
Ring out, bell of joy of a free union,
Let the charm revive of the hour when his heart beat against mine.

FATHER: (whose anger grows). Ah!

LOUISE: Toward his habitation, home of dreams, maternal city, carry me with a stroke of the wing!

FATHER: Be quiet!

LOUISE: One more day of love!
One more day of love!
(Father closes the window.)

FATHER: Be quiet! be quiet!

MOTHER: She's going mad.

LOUISE: (loudly). Let him come quickly, quickly, my well beloved, like the bold knights of the blue stories of the Legend.

MOTHER: What is she saying?

LOUISE: At my call, will he come, the Prince Charming, whose kiss awakened the little Montmartraise of the sleeping heart.

FATHER: You are not ashamed?

LOUISE: Let him come then, the poet whose triumphant tenderness made a Muse of the poor recluse.

MOTHER: Will you shut up?

LOUISE: It is no longer the little girl of the timid heart and afraid, it is a woman, with heart of flame, who wants back her lover.
(She rushes to door. Father gets in front of her.)

FATHER: You shall not pass.

LOUISE: (turning about like a mad woman.) La, la, la, la, la, la. He will come soon. La, la, la, la, la, la. I shall once more see the eyes of my beloved. I shall hear him speak and my lips will get drunk under his ardent kiss for all eternity!
Julien, come to me, Julien, forever. take me!

FATHER: (In a paroxysm of anger, he throws himself upon her as if to strike her. On second thought, furiously he opens the door.) Ah, wretch! Go, go and find him. In the town that calls you, go then amuse yourself. It's gayer than here. over there!
(He goes to Louise, seizes her hands and drags her to door).
Come, hurry, here is the féte lighting up. Ah, ha, ha. All the girls are there. One can hear them cry out
"Let the dance begin!"
The lanterns burn—the music sounds.
(Showing Paris.)
Here's your pleasure, ladies.
They'll dance till they die, they'll laugh till they cry.
(Louise escapes to the end of the room).
There's the pleasure, ladies.
They're only awaiting you, go on, get out.

MOTHER: Pierre!

LOUISE: (trembling, frightened runs around the room).
Ah!

MOTHER: (holding on to father). Leave her alone.

FATHER: Hurry up.

MOTHER: Let her be, I beg.

FATHER: Do you hear me?

MOTHER: (holding to father). Pierre!

FATHER: (almost howling). Will you get out? or do you want me to throw you through the door?
(He rushes at her. Mother holds him back. He pushes her away and rushes at Louise).

FATHER: (with a cry). Ah!

MOTHER: (falling, with a cry). Ah!

LOUISE: (crazed, escapes, with a cry). Ah!
(Louise gone, the father looks about him. His anger falls. He regrets and runs to staircase. He is heard calling).

FATHER: Louise! . . . Louise! . . .
(The mother rises. The father returns, remains a moment on the sill expressing keenest sorrow. The Father shaking his fist with hatred).
Oh, Paris!!

THE END.

Julien, A Poet's Life (1913)

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY GUSTAVE CHARPENTIER

Set to a libretto by the composer, this four-act opera with prologue premiered at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on June 4, 1913. It was written as a sequel to the opera Louise, but this work did not equal the success of its predecessor. The story opens at the Villa Medici in Rome. Julien has received the Prix de Rome and is developing into a fine poet. His wife, Louise, is asleep on a sofa as he enters their room. He sits at his table and leafs through the poem he is writing, for which he has high hopes. He falls asleep and Louise wakes up and caresses him. She is happy about his work though she knows that she comes second in his heart—his writing comes first. Julien dreams that he is accompanied by Louise to the Temple of Beauty. He promises to pray to the Beautiful and the True, and he embraces Louise in happiness, knowing of her love for him. Other pilgrims and lovers travel along the same path. Halfway to the tmeple they must pass the Accursed Valley, a place containing mortals disappointed by their lost dreams, lies, and disillusionments. They pray that hope may be restored to them. Julien decides that he must help them and Louise agrees. He is asked if he will sacrifice everything to the high ideals for which he is searching and he pledges to do so. The high priest tells him of the sacrifices he will make and that his efforts will be in vain. Louise is upset by these words and joins the dream maidens. Julien prays in front of the altar, and the Goddess of Beauty appears to him with Louise's face. She tells him to "fear pride and human reason." Julien is now in a Hungarian valley sleeping near a peasant's cottage. He awakens and sees toil and misery all around him and is discouraged that no one listens to his words about love and beauty. An old peasant farmer and his daughter, who looks very much like Louise, watches him. The old peasant speaks to him and the girl tries to cheer him up, offering him love and asking him to give up his dream. The old peasant then speaks to him in the same voice as the high priest from the temple and he turns away from the peasants and continues on his journey, alone. He finds himself on the coast of Brittany, where he sees women going from their gloomy homes to a dark church. He is once again grieved by the unrelieved drudgery around him. His old grandmother, whose face reminds him of Louise's, comes out from a cottage and asks him to stay with her. She reminds him of his childhood and his belief in Christianity and he kneels to pray, but again he experiences feelings of failure. His grandmother asks him about the people that creep by on the road, and he tells her about the poets, hearing them cry and mock their lost dreams. She tells him to be careful of pride, and his faith is stifled by the mockery of the lost poets. In Paris in the Montmartre district, Julien is chased by the Furies on a dark and foggy night. He rejects his pledge to Love and Beauty, sits down, and a street girl brings him wine from the Cabaret of the Muses. He once again sees the face of Louise and begins to weep. He believes the girl to be Louise, but as he attempts to embrace her she goes laughingly back to the cabaret. He sees that everything he has done is the result of pride and that he is now ruined. Suddenly a crowd enters to celebrate Shrove Tuesday, and there is singing and dancing everywhere. The street girl comes to him again and they celebrate together. At the Theater of the Ideal is an old man who sells tickets to view Beauty. He resembles the high priest and Julien sees the dream maidens and all the others in the crowd who were at his consecration. They are now bestial beings and they destroy the theater. Darkness descends and a vision of the holy temple appears. Julien collapses as his hopes burn his soul. The street girl laughs at him as he dies in front of her.

LES FILLES DU RÊVE: (loin.) Dioné? Néora? Noéli? Philyra? Euryté? Séa? (Elles apparaissent peu à peu sur le sentier, le descendent en courant, joyeuses, comme si elles allaient à la rencontre d'êtres chers. Dioné, Néora, Noéli, Philyra, Euryté, Séa, demeurées en scène, échangent des gestes avec celles qui sont descendues dans la vallée.) Tiralla, tiralli-é-ti-é! Tiralla, tiralli-é-ti-é! Dioné, Néora, Noéli, Philyra, Euryté and Séa remain on the stage and exchange gestures with others who have gone down into the valley.*) Tiralla, tiralli-é-ti-é! Tiralla, tiralli-é-ti-é! La-i, la-i-é-la! La-i, la-i-é-la!

La-i, la-i-é-là!
(Rires. Elles vont au-devant de leurs soeurs qui reviennent portant des fleurs et des palmes.)

LES FILLES DU RÊVE: (revenant.)
Rallahi! . . .
Rallahi! . . .
(Elles repassent heureuses, turbulentes.)

DIONÉ, NÉORA, NOÉLI, PHILYRA, EURYTÉ: (déjà loin.) Rallahi! . . .
Rallahi! . . .
La-é-i-ti!

NOÉLI: (plus loin.) Laéti! . . .

SCÈNE II

SERVANTS, SERVANTES, PÈLERINS DU RÊVE, AMANTS, AMANTES, LOUISE, JULIEN. Bientôt apparaît sur le sentier le cortège des Pèlerins de la Beauté.

SERVANTS, ET SERVANTES DE LA BEAUTÉ: (semant des roses et portant des emblèmes.) Douce extase du poète élu
Et de l'amant aimé! . . .

LES PÈLERINS DU RÊVE: (religieusement.) Pure lumière,
Vers toi s'envole ma prière
Dans le mystère
D'un divin jour! . . .

LES AMANTS et LES AMANTES: (vêtus de printempts, tendrement enlacés. Louise et Julien sont parmi eux.) Abue d'amour, Aube première,
Dans ta lumière,
Chante le mystère
De mon amour!

LOUISE, puis JULIEN: Brûle, ô mon âme,
Brûle toujours, voluptueuse flamme!
Troublante aurore
De mon désir,
Dans ton amour,
Je sens éclore
L'ardente aurore
De l'avenir!

LES PÈLERINS DU RÊVE: Pure lumière,
Vers toi s'envole ma prière
Dans le mystère
D'un divin jour!
(Louise et Julien demeurent un moment, tandis que passent les derniers groupes du cortège.)

(They run out to meet their sisters and return bearing flowers and palms.)

THE DREAM MAIDENS: (returning) Rallahi!—Rallahi!
(They pass, gay and noisy.)

DIONÉ, NÉORA, NOÉLI, PHILYRA, EURYTÉ: (already distant)
Laéiti! Rallahi!—Rallahi!
(Séa, coming back, gives a call and goes up quickly.)
Noéli!.

DIONÉ: (off.)
Laéité!

NOÉLI: (further off.)
Laéiti!

SCENE II

WORSHIPPERS, MEN AND WOMEN, DREAM-PILGRIMS, LOVERS, LOUISE, JULIEN.
(The procession of the pilgrims to Beauty appears on the path.)

WORSHIPPERS OF BEAUTY: (strewing roses and waving emblems.) Sweet ecstasy of the elect Poet and well beloved!

DREAM-PILGRIMS: (devotedly.)
Pure radiance,
My prayer shall ever rise toward you
Wrapped in the mystery
Of sacred day!

THE LOVERS: (in springtide garb, fondly entwined; among them Louise and Julien.) O dawn of love,
O primal dawn,
In your radiance
Sing the mystery
Of my true love!

LOUISE, then JULIEN: Burn, oh my soul,
Burn, burn forever, flame of joy!
You troubling dawn
Of my desire,
In your true love
I feel
The ardent dawn
Of future fame unfold!

THE DREAM-PILGRIMS: Pure radiance,
My prayer shall ever rise toward you;
Wrapped in the mystery
Of sacred day.
(Julien and Louise stand aside while the last of the pilgrims pass them.)

LOUISE: (à Julien, montrant l'horizon merveilleux.) Ah! tout est beau . . .
On dirait un cortège
De fleurs d'azur, de fleurs de neige,
Naissant dans un décor nouveau!

JULIEN: Sous son grand manteau
Renaissant
La terre sent courir,
Comme du sang,
Les sèves . . .
Ainsi je sens
En moi monter le flot grandissant
Des rêves! . . .

LOUISE: (s'attardant à admirer le paysage.) Roses, lys, amoureuses fleurs . . .

JULIEN: (l'entraînant.) Prémices de bonheur!

LOUISE: Leur éclat est doux comme nos tendresses . . .

JULIEN: Leur parfum, ardent comme nos caresses . . .
(Ils gravissent lentement le sentier jonché de roses. Des nuages descendent derrière lesquels se fait le changement du décor.)

VOIX LOINTAINES: Gloire au Poète
Gloire à l'Amant!
Gloire à l'Amante!
(Les nuages continuant de descendre, découvrant le décor nouveau.)

Deuxième Tableau

LA VALLÉE MAUDITE

Sur la Montagne Sainte, à mi-chemin du Temple, près d'une gorge obscure.
Dans l'abîme, le groupe des POÈTES DÉCHUS. Sur un sentier surplombant, les CHIMÈRES semblent tisser des brouillards et de légères nuées multicolores qui descendent, flottant au-dessus des Poètes et leur dérobant la Montagne Sainte.)

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

LES CHIMÈRES, LES POÈTES DÉCHUS, puis JULIEN et LOUISE.

VOIS DANS L'ABÎME: Rêve! Rêve!
O Rêve! doux printemps de l'amour!
Daigne ouvrir tes ailes pour l'essor du retour!
Viens fleurir nos âmes de tes roses caresses . . .
Ah! ne trahis pas tes promesses!

LES CHIMÈRES: Filles du rêve, soeurs clémentes,
Pour ceux qui nous ont fuies . . .
Tissons sans bruit

LOUISE: (to Julien.) How fair it is!
It seems a shining file
Of flowers, blue and gold and white,
All rising from the new greensward.

JULIEN: Beneath her wrappings
Of the Spring
The earth can feel the course
Of rising sap
Like blood.
And so I feel
All through my veins the surging flow
Of dreams.

LOUISE: (lingering to admire the landscape.) Lily and rose, the flowers of love—

JULIEN: (drawing her away.)
Foretelling happiness!

LOUISE: Their splendor sweet as our dear love!

JULIEN: Their perfume ardent as our fond embrace!
(They go slowly up the path overhung with roses. Clouds come down behind them while the scenery is changed.)

DISTANT VOICES: Hail to the Poet!
To the Lover and the Mistress, hail!
(The clouds continue to come down, disclosing the new scenes.)

Second Tableau

THE DARK VALLEY

On the Holy Mount, halfway up to the temple, near a gloomy gorge. In the abyss are the Hapless Poets. On the path above, the Chimeras seem to weave mists and fogs of many colors, which float downward, hiding the Holy Mount from the Poets.

SCENE I

THE CHIMERAS, THE HAPLESS POETS, then JULIEN and LOUISE.

A VOICE FROM THE ABYSS:
Dreams!
Dreams!
Dreams!
O sweet Maytime of love!
Unfold your wings to waft it back to us!
Bloom again in our souls with rosy kisses,
And to your promise, oh, be true!

CHIMERAS: Dream-Maidens, Sisters of Mercy
For those that fall dismayed,
Weave we noiselessly
The kindly dreams that lie!—

Des songes cléments qui mentent . . .
Flots de trames, vols de rêves, dans la nuit!!!

LES POÈTES DÉCHUS: (tendant les bras vers la Montagne.) Viens, flamme divine!
Viens, chaude clarté! . . .
Jadis tes rayons embrasaient nos êtres.
A nos yeux charmés feras-tu renaître
Le pays du rêve et l'orbe enchanté?
Refleuris, ô Verbe! Érigez vos faîtes,
Temples si beaux que les plus beaux soirs
Brillent moins dans la pourpre de leurs fêtes!

LES CHIMÈRES: Tissons des rêves et des mirages
Pour étoiler
L'éternité de ruine et d'esclavage
Que sous des brumes
Nos doigts d'amour ont voilée.
(Les brumes qu'elles tissent envahissent peu à peu le haut de la scène. Louise et Julien paraissent sur un rocher qui domine la gorge obscure. Immobiles d'effroi, ils regardent écoutent.)

LES POÈTES DÉCHUS: (s'acheminant vers la vallée.)
Cieux lointains! ô mers! ô larges miroirs,
Pays inconnus à l'âme éblouie!
Ils s'offrent et l'ombre est évanouie . . .
(Apercevant Louise et Julien, les Chimères remontent vers la cime et disparaissent derrière les brumes.)

LES CHIMÈRES: (s'appelant.) La-i, la-i-é-là!

LES POÈTES DÉCHUS: (sanglotant au loin.) Flamme divine! . . .

JULIEN: (frissonnant contre Louise.) Quelle épouvante! . . .

LES POÈTES DÉCHUS: (loin.) Ah! ah! ah!
(Le bas de la Montagne disparaît à son tour derrière les brumes. Une émotion violente saisit Julien. Il voudrait secourir ses frères malheureux. En lui s'éveille l'instinct de sa mission divine.)

JULIEN: (avec ferveur.) Soleil du monde, suprême amour,
En moi tu t'éveilles! . . .
L'âpre douleur qui blessa mes oreilles
M'a révélé la raison de ma vie!
Mon coeur d'enfant prédestiné
Va se donner
Au triomphe de la Beauté!
Au triomphe de l'Amour!

Fateful meshes, flights of dreams, in the night.

THE HAPLESS POETS: (stretching their arms to the Mount.) Come, fire divine!
Come, fervent glow!
That burned within us in the days long since;
Can you bring again before our charmed eyes
The land of dreams and the enchanted world?
Give us old hopes, and show your starry heights,
Glorious temples, where the clearest nights
Shone yet less brightly than their festal lamps.

THE CHIMERAS: We weave illusions, and kind dreams,
To hang with stars
The void of ruin and of slavery
Whose gloomy fogs
Our loving fingers veil.
(The mists they have woven gradually fill the top of the stage. Louise and Julien appear on a rock above the gloomy gorge. They stand terrified, looking and listening.)

THE HAPLESS POETS: (going towards the Valley.) Fair skies! Blue seas!
A wide and smiling land,
A land unknown to our dazzled souls;
The sun has risen and the shadows flee.
(Perceiving Louise and Julien, the Chimeras go up to the mountain-top and disappear in the mists.)

THE CHIMERAS: (calling.) La-i! La-i-é-là!
(Julien draws Louise to the edge of the abyss. Both lean over.)

THE HAPLESS POETS: (sobbing in the distance.) Fire divine!

JULIEN: (shuddering.) How terrible!

THE HAPLESS POETS: (far away.) Ah! Ah! Ah!
(The foot of the mountain is now lost in the mists. Julien is deeply moved. He wishes to help his unhappy brothers. The sense of his divine mission is aroused.)

JULIEN: (fervently.) Sun of the world, O Love supreme,
Awake within me!
The bitter sorrow that my ears have heard
Has shown me a reason for my life,
And as a consecrated child, my heart
I now will lay
Upon the shrine of Beauty!
Upon the shrine of Love!

LOUISE: (enthousiaste.) L'Amour!

JULIEN: L'amour!

LOUISE: L'amour!
(Soudain le décor de la Montagne s'enfonce; les brumes disparaissent, découvrant le décor suivant.)

Troisième Tableau

LE CHOEUR MAGNIFIQUE DU TEMPLE COLOSSAL DE LA BEAUTÉ

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

LOUISE, JULIEN, L'HIÉROPHANTE, L'OFFICIANT, LES FILLES DU RÊVE, SERVANTES, SERVANTS DE LA BEAUTÉ, LÉVITES, AUGURES, SAGES, AMANTS, AMANTES, POÈTES ÉLUS, DANSEUSES SACRÉES, LA FOULE.

TOUS: (avec des gestes d'appel.) Flamme!

LOUISE et JULIEN: Soleil du monde, suprême amour,
En moi tu t'éveilles! . . .

TOUS: Flamme!

LOUISE et JULIEN: O merveilles! . . .
Des baisers d'or enchantent mes oreilles!

TOUS: Flamme!

LOUISE et JULIEN: Dans ce premier printemps,
Sous les cieux éclatants,
Mon coeur d'enfant prédestiné
Va se donner
Au triomphe de l'amour,
Sans nul retour!
Ma voix chante pour l'adorer.
Je m'enivre
De sa beauté!
Je veux suivre
Sa volonté!
Et j'abandonne à tout jamais
Le passé que j'aimais!
L'amour qui luit
Commande en roi: je suis à lui!

LES FILLES DU RÊVE, LES LÉVITES, LES AUGURES: Voix de mon âme!
Splendeur qui m'illumines, ô Vérité!
Dieu se proclame
En ta beauté!
Pures musiques,
Promesses magnifiques,
Chant d'éternité,
Dans ta volupté,
Se lève
Mon Rêve!

LA FOULE DU TEMPLE: O flamme immense,
Accable-moi de ta puissance!
Bientôt, naissez,
Soleils triomphants des passés!
Ah! le ciel est dans nos êtres;

LOUISE: (enthusiastically.) Love!

JULIEN: Love!

LOUISE: Love!
(The mountain suddenly disappears; the mists vanish and disclose the following scene.)

Third Tableau

THE MAGNIFICENT CHOIR OF THE VAST TEMPLE OF BEAUTY

SCENE I

LOUISE, JULIEN, the HIGH PRIEST, the OFFICIANT, the DREAM-MAIDENS, WORSHIPPERS OF BEAUTY, LEVITES, AUGURS, SAGES, LOVERS, the CHOSEN POETS, the SACRED DANCERS, the CROWD.

ALL: (with beckoning gestures.) Fire!

LOUISE AND JULIEN: Sun of the world, O love supreme,
Awake within me!

ALL: Fire!

LOUISE AND JULIEN: O marvellous!
What golden kisses now enchant my ears!

ALL: Fire!

LOUISE AND JULIEN: In this young springtime,
Under these brilliant skies,
My heart, in utter consecration,
Will here be laid
Upon the shrine of Love
Unfaltering!
I sing Love's adoration.
I will exalt
Love's beauty,
And forever
Do Love's will!
I will abandon for all time
The past I loved so well!
The love that glows
Speaks like a king—and I obey.

THE DREAM MAIDENS LEVITES AND AUGURS: Voice of my soul!
O piercing splendor of the Truth!
God declares Himself
In your beauty!
Pure music,
Glittering promises,
Song of eternity!
In your magnificence
My Dream rises!

TEMPLE WORSHIPPERS: O mastering flame!
Overwhelm me with your strength,
And rise again
You mighty suns long set!
Oh, Heaven is in our souls,

Et l'éclair fait apparaître
Les palais merveilleux,
Les grands temples orgueilleux
Du Rythme et du Rêve!

LES FILLES DU RÊVE, L'HIÉROPHANTE et L'OFFICIANT: Beauté!
Beauté puissante!
Beauté!
Beauté clémente!
Lumière, Espoir et Vie . . .
Montre-toi!
Donne-toi!
Reine éternelle!

LA FOULE DU TEMPLE: (en mouvement intense et passionne.) Dans un rayon, Suprême vision,
Révèle
A ton peuple d'Amants
Le sublime enchantement
De ta grâce éternelle! . . .

JULIEN: (grave, souriant.) Vous m'accueillez comme on accueille le printemps,
Et dans vos chants de joie il semble que j'entends
Chanter, plus éloquente et plus pure, ma joie!
Vous avez enflammé mon firmament d'Avril,
Et mes pas, délivrés des langes puérils,
Gravirent les sommets où l'azur se déploie!
(Murmures d'admiration.)
Me voici, voici mon âme,
Mon coeur, pur comme la flamme!
Je veux aimer infiniment
Tout être obscur et son tourment . . .
Je suis venu, fervent amant,
Te consacrer, Beauté, ma vie entière.
Ah! voudras-tu fleurir pour mes yeux en prière?

SCÈNE II

LES PRÉCÉDENTS, LE SONNEUR, L'ACOLYTE, LES POÈTES DÉCHUS.

Majestueux, l'Hiérophante s'avance vers Julien qu'il fixe sympathiquement. Silence subit. Julien, descendu des degrés, soutient bravement l'examen. Cependant on le devine troublé. Louise, craintive, s'est réfugiée dans le groupe des Filles du Rêve empressées autour d'elle. En haut du transept, sur une corniche (ou derrière un pillier), apparaissent le Sonneur et l'Acolyte, invisibles pour l'assemblée.)

LE SONNEUR: (à l'Acolyte.) Attention! . . . l'Hiérophante va parler . . .
(Goguenard.)
Qu'est-ce qu'il va prendre pour son rhume,
Celui qui oublia de verser

And by the lightning's glare
Appear the palaces
And the proud temples
Of Rhythm and of Dreams.

DREAM MAIDENS, HIGH PRIEST and OFFICIANT: Beauty!
Beauty all-powerful!
Beauty!
Beauty all-merciful!
You are our Light, our Hope,
Our Life!
Show yourself!
Give yourself!
O Queen eternal!

TEMPLE WORSHIPPERS: (agitated by passionate excitement.) Vision supreme,
In a clear ray
Reveal
To all your folk of Lovers
The sublime enchantment
Of your eternal grace!

JULIEN: (grave and smiling.) You welcome me as one would welcome Spring,
And in your chanted joy I seem to hear,
More pure and eloquent, my own joy-song!
Your greeting glorifies my April skies,
And now my feet, struck free of youthful gyves,
Will reach the heights where Heaven seems to rest.
(Murmurs of admiration.)
I am here—here is my soul,
Here is my heart, as pure as flame!
I am a brother to the humble ones
And feel their sorrow and their griefs!
I come an ardent lover
To give my whole life unto Beauty!
O Goddess! shine before my prayerful eyes!

SCENE II

THE PRECEDING, THE BELL-RINGER, THE ACOLYTE, THE HAPLESS POETS.

Majestic, the High Priest advances towards Julien, looking at him with sympathy. Sudden silence. Julien, having come down the steps, meets his eye bravely. Nevertheless, he is uneasy. Louise, frightened, has taken refuge with the Dream-Maidens, who surround her. High up in the transept (or behind a pillar) appear the Bell-Ringer and the Acolyte, unseen by the multitude.

BELL-RINGER: (to the Acolyte.) Attention! The High-Priest is going to speak.
(Impudently.)
Whatever will he take now for his cold?
They're clean forgot the customary

En entrant la coutumière thune?
(Les Augures, les Sages, les Officiants s'assoient autour du choeur, formant un tableau inspiré des fresques de Raphaël. Sur un geste de l'Hiérophante, la foule s'écarte de Julien et se masse sous les arcades.)

L'ACOLYTE: (qui a une voix de fausset.) C'est cocasse! . . .
A les voir, on pourrait croire que c'est arrivé!

LE SONNEUR: (secouant la tête.) Ainsi toute l'année . . . toute la vie!

L'ACOLYTE: Mais, dans quel but cette comédie?

LE SONNEUR: Hum! . . . Faire croire aux autres ce qu'on suppose être la "Splendeur du Vrai . . . "!

L'ACOLYTE: (ricanant.) Et tous marchent!

LA FOULE: (impatientée.) Chut! . . .

LE SONNEUR: Tu vois!

L'HIÉROPHANTE: (à Julien, avec douceur et autorité.) Frère! . . .

L'ACOLYTE: (admiratif, montrant Louise qui s'est avancée de quelques pas vers Julien.) En voilà une que j'aimerais mieux la voire tomber en mon lit que l'tonnerre! . . .
(Le Sonneur lui impose silence.)

L'HIÉROPHANTE: Présompteux poète, qui t'en vins
Déchiffrer les secrets des abîmes divins!
Ô toi, qui désertas les humaines cohortes,
Et n'as point redouté nos redoutables portes!
Ô Juvénile croyant!
Téméraire vaillant!
Dont l'audacieuse prunelle,
Sans émoi, fixe cet autel . . .

L'ACOLYTE: (au Sonneur.) T'as pas soif?

L'HIÉROPHANTE: Frère! doux héros dont l'appel
Osa provoquer la Reine éternelle,
N'interrogeas-tu point les lendemains amers?
Sais-tu qu'il est des deuils plus profonds que les mers?
(Julien fait un geste d'insouciance. Fanfares lointaines.)
Ta jeune foi colore d'espérance
La triste vie où tes pas s'en iront . . .
Et tes désirs te masquent la souffrance
Et les nuits vides d'où tes rêves s'enfuiront . . .
(Brutal.)
Prends garde qu'ayant connu la thummim!

(The Augurs, the Sages and the Officiant sit around the choir, forming a picture similar to the frescoes of Raphael. At a sign from the High Priest the people draw away from Julien and gather under the arches.)

ACOLYTE: (in falsetto throughout.) Get on to that!
You'd think they really meant it.

BELL-RINGER: (shaking his head.) Every year the same—and all through life.

ACOLYTE: But what's the use of all this farce?

BELL-RINGER: To make the people believe in what they think "The Splendor of the True."

ACOLYTE: (sneering.) And they fall for it?

THE CROWD: (impatiently.) Hush!

BELL-RINGER: You see!

HIGH PRIEST: (with gentle authority.) Brother!

ACOLYTE: (admiringly pointing to Louise, who has come forward a few steps towards Julien.) I'd rather be struck by her than lightning!
(The Bell-Ringer silences him.)

HIGH PRIEST: Presumptuous poet! have you come
To search the secrets that the gods have hid?
O you, who have abjured the haunts of men,
You are not appalled to stand before these doors?
O trusting youth!
O dauntless heart!
That can look unafraid
Upon the altar there!

ACOLYTE: (to Bell-Ringer.) Are you thirsty?

HIGH PRIEST: O gentle hero, who has dared
To call upon the omnipotent queen,
Have you never thought upon the bitter morrows?
Nor yet of griefs far deeper than the seas?
(Julien makes a gesture of indifference.)
Your youthful fate colors with hope
The sad life where the road will lead your feet;
Your ardor hides the suffering from your eyes,
And the black nights wherein your dreams shall flee.

source vive de Gloire,
La vie où tu marcheras ne te semble encor plus noire.
(Même geste de Julien.)

L'ACOLYTE: (admiratif.) Il crâne! . . .

L'HIÉROPHANTE: Bien d'autres sont venus avant toi sans nul fruit! . . .
(Pitoyable.)
Ils agonisent dans la nuit!

LES POÈTES DÉCHUS: (au loin.)
Rêve!
Rêve!
Rêve!
Doux printemps de l'amour! . . .
Daigne ouvrir ton aile à l'essor du retour . . .
Rêve!
Rêve! Pur arc-en-ciel de promesses . . .
Rêve!
Vois tes suppliants qui s'empressent!
(Julien reste impassible.)

L'HIÉROPHANTE: Tu ne redoutes rien, enfant? Pleurs ni vertige?
Tu veux, dis-tu, aimer infiniment?
(Julien et Louise, souriants, se tournent doucement l'un vers l'autre.)
La femme t'apparaît en robe de prestige . . .
Tu sembles ignorer les affres de l'Amant . . .

JULIEN: (résolu.) Qu'importent les regrets et la mort elle-même . . .
Trois fois heureux l'amant qui pleure, car il aime!

L'HIÉROPHANTE: (plus pressant.) Ton vouloir généreux pour d'obscurs malheureux,
Bêtes de somme parmi les hommes,
Ton rêve d'altruisme et de fraternité
Au désastre est voué! . . .
Et ceux-là mêmes dont tu crois
Assurer le bonheur te cloueront sur la Croix.

JULIEN: (exalté.) Qu'importe la fureur des hommes? Je les aime!
(Dans un grand geste.)
L'ample moisson surgit des douleurs qu l'on sème!

L'HIÉROPHANTE: (menaçant.)
Puisque ton esprit indompté
Ne veut croire à la vanité
De l'amour et du sacrifice,
Penche ton coeur vers l'orifice
De l'abîme où s'effondre et meurt le monde entier . . .
Un homme est descendu dans le gouffre des haines;
O frère! il en a parcouru chaque sentier . . .
Apprends la vanité de tes luttes prochaines! . . .

ACOLYTE: (admiringly.) Hear him spout!

HIGH PRIEST: Many before you have brought forth no fruit,
For all their nights of agony!

THE HAPLESS POETS: Dreams!
Dreams!
Dreams!
O sweet Maytime of life!
Unfold your wings to waft it back to us!
Dreams!
Dreams!
The mocking rainbow-hopes!
Dreams!
Behold these suppliants who pray!
(Julien remains unmoved.)

HIGH PRIEST: Do you fear nothing, youth?
Nor tears, nor qualms?
To love infinitely—is that your wish?
(Julien and Louise, smiling, turn toward each other.)
This woman comes as garmented with light:
Do you ignore a lover's mortal pangs?

JULIEN: (resolutely.) What matters bitterness, or death itself?
Thrice-blessed the lover's tears, because he loves!

HIGH PRIEST: (more insistently.) Thy kindly feeling for the humble folk,
Those who are beasts of burden among men,—
Thy altruistic dream of brother's love,—
Is doomed to come to nothing;
And even those that your have thought to succor,—
Themselves are they who'll nail you to the cross.

JULIEN: (in exalted mood.) I care not for men's rage!
I love them all.
(With a lofty gesture.)
From sorrows sown will grow a mighty harvest.

HIGH PRIEST: (menacingly.)
Poet, since your undaunted soul
Will not believe the emptiness
That lies in love and sacrifice,
Incline your ear and listen at the mouth
Of that abyss where the world sinks and dies.
One man descended to that gulf of hate:
Brother! he searched each path and hidden place;
Learn that your struggles will be

"Au seuil du monde de souffrance Abandonnez toute espérance! . . . "

JULIEN: (aved ferveur.) Si tout me renie, il me reste un coeur
Assez vaste pour que j'y vive et que j'y chante!
Si la femme est frivole et la foule méchante,
Des voix en mon âme ourdiront un choeur
De victoire!
Comme tous ceux qui par les ciècles ont chanté.
Mon nom resplendirait, soleil d'humanité!
De mon rêve je veux éterniser la gloire!

HIÉROPHANTE: Avant que de chanter, tu verseras des pleurs!

JULIEN: Je chanterai mes douleurs!

HIÉROPHANTE: Tu n'atteindras pas ton rêve!

JULIEN: (avec énergie.) Je l'atteindrai!
(Tous deux se contemplent longuement.)

HIÉROPHANTE: Soit, que ton attente s'achève! . . .
Voici l'instant sacré . . .
Contemple! . . .
Et que ta force persévère . . .
Car de ce jour, enfant, commence ton calvaire.
(Les Lévites viennent processionnellement revêtir Julien des attributs de servant de la Beauté. L'Hiérophante lui donne l'accolade et disparaît derrière l'autel, suivi des Augures. La Foule, respectueuse, s'écoule silencieusement par les côtés, les regards fixés sur Julien.)

LE CHOEUR: (s'éloignant.)

1ER GROUPE: Le doux vainqueur
Qui triompha des abîmes
Va connaître l'indicible peur
Des attentes divines.

2E GROUPE: Son coeur est animé
De volontés sublimes.
Il est le bien-aimé
Qu'ont espéré les cimes!

TOUS: Daigne fleurir, ô mère!
Pour ses yeux en prière.
(Les deux loustics ont reparu sur la corniche haute.)

LE SONNEUR: (à l'Acolyte, railleur.) Tiens! t'essuies une larme?

L'ACOLYTE: Est-ce qu'ils se r'verront? . . .

LE SONNEUR: Qui donc?

L'ACOLYTE: La môme et son crâneur . . .

LE SONNEUR: (hausse les épaules.) Viens sonner, c'est l'heure.
(Il l'entraîne.)

vanity:
"Abandon hope, all that enter here!"

JULIEN: (with fervor.) Though all deny me, yet remains a heart,
Where I shall live—that I shall sing!
If a woman is fickle, and the people false,
The voices in my heart shall be a choir
Of victory!
As all those who have sung since time began,
My name will shine upon humanity!
And I'll make eternity of my dream!

HIGH PRIEST: You shall shed bitter tears before your song.

JULIEN: I'll sing of all my pain.

HIGH PRIEST: You'll never realize your dream!

JULIEN: I shall!
I shall!
(They gaze at each other.)

HIGH PRIEST: So be it!
May you reach your goal!
Now is the sacred moment.—
Think well!—and may your strength fail not;
To-day, O youth, begins your Calvary.
(The Levites come in procession to clothe Julian with the garments of a servant of Beauty. The High Priest embraces him and disappears behind the altar, followed by the Augers. The people withdraw respectfully, their eyes fixed on Julien.)

CHORUS: (departing)

1ST GROUP: The gentle victor
Who conquers the abyss,
Will know the misery
Of striving heavenwards.

2D GROUP: His heart glows with the love
Of noble things!
He is the well beloved,
Destined to reach the heights!

ALL: Graciously bloom, O mother!
Before his prayerful eyes.
(The two Jesters reappear on the cornice.)

BELL-RINGER: (to the Acolyte.) What!
Are you crying?

ACOLYTE: (with emotion.) Will they ever meet again?

BELL-RINGER: Who?

ACOLYTE: The donkey and his driver.

BELL-RINGER: (with a shrug.) It's time to ring.

L'ACOLYTE: (revenant avec mystère, une main en porte-voix, souffle à Julien qui ne l'entend pas:) Tiens bon la rampre!
(Il ricane et se sauve.)

LE SONNEUR: (de loin.) Hé! . . . t'es pas folle?

SCÈNE III

JULIEN, L'OFFICIANT, LES LÉVITES, LES AUGURES.

Julien se met en prière. La nuit descend, lunaire, mystérieuse.

L'OFFICIANT: (loin.) Ô
Beauté! . . .
Daigne fleurir pour ses yeux en prière!

LES LÉVITES et LES AUGURES: (loin.) Ô Beauté!

SCÈNE IV

LES PRÉCÉDENTS, LES FILLES DU RÊVE, L'HIÉROPHANTE, L'OFFICIANT, LE CHOEUR INVISIBLE.

Coups de cloche tombant en tonnerre du haut de la nef. Éclair sur l'autel. Bruit de tempête. L'obscurité s'épaissit brusquement.

LES FILLES DU RÊVE: (soli, derrière l'autel, accompagnées de célestas et de harpes. Mélopée religieuse.) Ah! Ah! Ah!
(Sur l'autel, l'Officiant, l'Hiérophante et les Augures dessinent dans l'ombre des gestes d'incantation.)

LE CHOEUR: (invisible, psalmodiant mystérieusement sous la mélopée.) Beauté puissante, Éblouissante,
Immaculée,
Voûte étoilée,
Protégez-nous!
Exaucez-nous!

L'HIÉROPHANTE: (d'un ton de commandement.) Ahiha!

L'OFFICIANT: Ô Beauté!
Soleil sans voiles,
Soleil d'étoiles,
Soleil d'amour,
Source de jour,
Protégez-nous!
Exaucez-nous!
Porte d'aurore,
Porte d'or,
Porte de gloire,
Miroir!
Protégez-nous!
Exaucez-nous!
(Au-dessus de l'autel passent et repassent à intervalles de plus en plus rapprochés des lueurs vives et prolongées.)

ACOLYTE: (comes back mysteriously, and making a megaphone of his hand, calls to Julien, who does not hear him:) Hold on to the railing!
(He laughs and runs away.)

BELL-RINGER: (off.) Are you crazy?

SCENE III

JULIEN, the OFFICIANT, the LEVITES, the AUGURS.

Julien kneels to pray. The night falls, moonlit and mysterious.

OFFICIANT: O Beauty!
Graciously bloom before his prayerful eyes!

LEVITES AND AUGURS: (off.) O Beauty!

SCENE IV

THE PRECEDING, the DREAM-MAIDENS, the HIGH PRIEST, the OFFICIANT, the INVISIBLE CHORUS.

The clash of a bell peals suddenly from the nave. Lightning flashes upon the altar. The darkness deepens suddenly.

DREAM-MAIDENS: (behind the altar, accompanied by celestas and harps. Religious melody.) Ah! Ah! Ah!
(Before the altar of the High Priest, the Officiants and the Augurs are seen dimly in attitudes of incantation.)

CHORUS: (invisible, intoning mysteriously through the melody.) Almighty Beauty!
Dazzling,
Immaculate,
Starry vault,
Deliver us!
Hear our prayer.

HIGH PRIEST: (with authority.) Aliha!

OFFICIANT: O Beauty!
Sun of our souls,
Sun of the stars,
Sun of our love,
Source of the day,
Deliver us!
Hear our prayer!
Gate of the dawn,
A door of gold,
A door of glory
And of truth,
Deliver us!
Hear our prayer!
(Above the altar, at intervals becoming closer and more prolonged, gleam lights.)

LES FILLES DU RÊVE: (toujours invisibles.) Mère et flamme
Des âmes!
Flamme et fête
Des poètes!
Reine et mère
Des mystères! . . .
Montre-toi!
Donne-toi!
Verse la vie!
(Orgues lointaines dans le silence. Émergeant insensiblement des vapeurs, la Beauté apparaît.)

SCÈNE V

LES PRÉCÉDENTS, LA BEAUTÉ.

JULIEN: (extasié.) Ah! je t'aime,
Ô suprême!
Ah!
Te chérir!
Et mourir!
(Il se traîne jusqu'aux marches de l'autel sur lesquelles il s'abîme.)

L'OFFICIANT, L'HIÉROPHANTE, LÉVITES et AUGURES: (encensent la Beauté à larges volées.)
Blanche clarté d'éternité!
Beauté!

LE CHOEUR: (autour de l'autel et dans les bas côtés.) Alléluia!
Alléluia! Alléluia!
Heureux les yeux ouverts
Aux grands éclairs
D'amour!

DREAM MAIDENS: (still unseen.)
Mother and fire
Of souls!
Fire and joy
Of poets!
Queen and mother
Of mysteries!
Show yourself!
Give yourself!
Give us life!
(Distant organ music amid the silence. Disclosed little by little through the mists, Beauty appears.)

SCENE V

THE PRECEDING, BEAUTY.

JULIEN: (in ecstasy.) I love you,
Supreme one!
Ah!
To embrace you!
And then to die!
(He drags himself to the steps of the altar and sinks upon them.)

THE OFFICIANT, HIGH PRIEST, LEVITES AND AUGURS: (waving censers before Beauty.) Clear light of eternity!
Beauty!

CHORUS: (around the altar and down-stage.) Alleluia! Alleluia! Alleluia!
Happy the eyes that see
The lightning-flash
Of love!

■ ACTE DEUXIÈME

(Doute)

Un paysage pittoresque; un pays slovaque: champs, bois aux nombreuses clairières où un ruisseau serpente. A droite, une vieille chaumière; à gauche, un tertre de gazon, une fontaine. Banc rustique près de la maison. La grande route traverse le fond du théâtre. Un sentier va de la maison au bois. 3 heures. Été.

■ ACT II

(Doubt)

A picturesque countryside; fields, a wood with numerous clearings through which a brook winds. To the right an old cottage, to the left a grassy hillock and a fountain. A rustic bench near the house. SCENE I

JULIEN, a PEASANT, his WIFE, his DAUGHTER, a LABORER, a WOODCUTTER, a STONE-BREAKER, DITCHERS, WOODCUTTERS, GYPSIES, HARVESTERS and GLEANERS, VOICES in the Countryside.

Near the cottage Julien is sleeping as if exhausted. The Young Girl looks at him with love and sympathy. Sitting before the door, her father watches her tenderly. In the distance her mother spreads linen on the bushes that separate the house from the road.

LES TERRASSIERS: (farouches.) Hou! Hou! Creuse vit' ton trou! La terre gémit sous la pelle, L'entends-tu qui t'appelle?	DITCHERS: (savagely.) Hou! Hou! Dig the ditch quick! The earth groans under the spade, Do you hear her calling?
LES BÛCHERONS: (goguenards.) Hein! Hein! Prépare ta bière De demain. Dans le bois qui geint Sous ta main Pleure ta dernière Prière!	WOODCUTTERS: (jeeringly.) Hein! Hein! Make ready your bier For tomorrow; In the wood that moans Beneath our hand, Weep your last Sorrow!
LA PAYSANNE: (à son homme qui est venu sur le seuil.) Il dort encore . . . (Une voiture de Bohémiennes passe sur la route. Des fillettes déguenillées l'escortent.)	PEASANT WOMAN: (to her husband, who has come to the door.) He's still asleep. (A Gypsy wagon passes, escorted by little ragged girls.)
BOHÉMIENNES: (en voiture.) Eho!	GYPSIES: (in wagon.) Eho!
PAYSANS: (loin.) Eho!	PEASANTS: (off.) Eho!
TERRASSIERS: (loin.) Eho!	DITCHERS: (off.) Eho!
LES BÛCHERONS: (loin, tirant avec des cordes les troncs d'arbres.) O-hisse! . . . O-hisse! . . .	WOODCUTTERS: (drawing tree-trunks with ropes.) Yo-ho!—Yo-ho!
LE PAYSAN: Depuis son arrivé au pays c'est son premier repos.	PEASANT: This is his first sleep since he came here!
LA PAYSANNE: Son âme souffre d'un rêve que nous ne pouvons comprendre.	PEASANT WOMAN: A dream we cannot guess, vexes his soul!
LE PAYSAN: D'où vient-il? On l'ignore . . . Où ira-t-il? Lui-même ne le sait . . .	PEASANT: We don't know where he came from, Nor can we tell where he will go!
LA JEUNE FILLE: Il fut très malheureux sans doute?	YOUNG GIRL: Do you think he was unhappy?
UN CASSEUR DE PIERRES: (sur la route.) Trimez, les bons ouvriers! Faut que vous trimiez! Nul repos, ni trêve pour les amours! . . . Trimez . . . toujours!	STONE-BREAKER: (on the road.) Up and down, good workmen! Up and down all day! No repose nor time for courting, On the go forever!
UNE VOIX: (lointaine, en écho.) Toujours! . . .	A VOICE: (in the distance, like an echo.) For aye!
JULIEN: (s'éveillant.) Une chanson de souffrance plane sur la terre . . . Quelle est cette plainte? Est-ce la terre elle-même qui se plaint?	JULIEN: (awaking.) A song of suffering pervades the world; What is this song? Is it the Earth herself that murmurs?
UNE VOIX: (lointaine.) Toujours! . . .	A VOICE: (off.) Forever!
AUTRE VOIX: (plus lointaine.) Toujours!	ANOTHER VOICE: (further off.) Forever!
JULIEN: De partout monte un long cri de misère Comme la rumeur éternelle de la vie. L'instant où chacun naît . . . L'instant où chacun meurt . . .	JULIEN: From everywhere there comes a cry of pain, Like the eternal muttering of life— The moment one is born— The moment that one dies—
LE CASSEUR DE PIERRES: Trimer toujours!	STONE-BREAKER: On the go forever!
VOIX LOINTAINES: Toujours.	DISTANT VOICES: Forever!
JULIEN: Parmi les peuples éplorés Dont je rêvais la délivrance Naguère j'ai connu cette désespérance! . . . Les tristes cités pleines de sanglots! Là, je m'étais penché sur des êtres de souffrance, Voulant combler le gouffre D'où la douleur se répandait à flots! . . . (Des ouvriers des forges passent, las, sur la route.)	JULIEN: I knew that hopelessness Among the people as they wept: My dream, to free them from their pain and tears! O, the sad cities full of misery! There I have stood beside the suffering creatures, And tried to bridge the gulf Whence grief and pain rose like a tide. (The Blacksmiths pass, wearied, along the road.)
LES TERRASSIERS: Hou! . . . Hou! . . .	DITCHERS: Hou!—Hou!
LES BÛCHERONS: O-hisse! . . . O-hisse! . . .	WOODCUTTERS: Yo-ho!—Yo-ho!
LES PAYSANS: Trimer toujours! (Les cris et les appels continuent jusqu'à la fin de la tirade de Julien.)	PEASANTS: On the go forever! (The cries and calls continue till the end of Julien's speech.)
JULIEN: (avec amertume.) A mon chant d'amour Ils ont jeté des sarcasmes, des cris de haine. (Farouche.) Laisse-nous, va-t'en! Tes paroles sont vaines! Nos pères furent des gueux, Nos enfants seront comme eux! Va prêcher ailleurs ton inutile espoir! A t'entendre chanter tes rêves illusoires Notre infernale vie apparaîtrait plus noire! (Il mime des gestes désespérés et menaçants.) Malheur sur toi! Poète maudit! Malheur et mort au prometteur de paradis! Malheur! . . .	JULIEN: (bitterly.) My song of love They mocked with gibes and cries of rage: (Savagely.) Leave us! Get hence! Your words are vain! Our fathers begged their bread, Our children will do the same! Go preach elsewhere your hopes of Paradise! If we should hear you sing your rosy dreams, Our wretches lives would seem but blacker still! (He mimics their desperate and threatening gestures.) Curses upon you! Damned Poet! Curses and death, singer of Paradise! Curses!
LA JEUNE FILLE: (apitoyée.) Ah! (Les voix rudes se perdent peu à peu dans la campagne.)	YOUNG GIRL: (pityingly.) Ah! (The rough voices are gradually lost in the distance.)
JULIEN: . . . Tristement, je suis reparti . . . Cherchant un horizon derrière l'horizon, Où ne gronderaient plus la haine et l'égoïsme. (Coucher de soleil or et rose.) Et je suis venu près de cette humble chaumière Croyant trouver la paix, l'oubli, un coin de terre Béni des dieux, d'où la douleur serait absente. (Des voix nouvelles surgissent de l'autre côté de la plaine chantant la gloire de la terre.)	JULIEN: Sadly I went my way, Seeking the heights that lie behind the heights, Beyond the grumbling selfishness and hate! (Sunset of gold and rose-color.) And then I came to this poor humble cot, Thinking to find here peace, a bit of earth Blessed by the gods, where suffering would not be! (New voices rise on the other side of the plain, singing the glory of the earth.)
MOISSONNEURS et GLANEUSES: (comme un cantique.) Terre, Terre! Doux printemps de l'amour! Donne-nous des ailes pour l'essor du retour! Terre promise! Terre conquise! Protège le joyeux labeur des jours! (Durant ce choeur le paysan apitoyé s'avance vers Julien que la jeune fille regarde avec une naïve et amoureuse compassion.)	REAPERS AND GLEANERS: (like a canticle.) Earth! Earth! O, sweet springtime of love! Give us the wings to bring it back to us! O promised land! O conquered land! Bless the happy labor of our days! (During this chorus the kindly Peasant goes to Julien; the Young Girl looks at him with loving and naïve compassion.

LE PAYSAN: L'universel bonheur . . . ah! . . . la belle chimère!
N'aie pas l'orgueil de vouloir accomplir
Ce qu'un fils de Dieu n'a pu réussir! . . .
Détourneras-tu le soleil de sa course?
Feras-tu remonter le fleuve à sa source?
(Pressant.)
Ah! écoute-moi . . . ami!
Reste avec nous!
(Les Moissonneurs, les Glaneuses, les Paysans, passent sur la route graves et souriants. Et c'est comme un cortège du travail heureux de la Terre: ni Julien, ni le groupe qui l'entoure ne semblent l'apercevoir. Avec autorité.)
Reste! . . .
Près de la bonne terre
Ton coeur se guérira de toutes ses folies!
Et le repos, l'oubli viendront . . .
(Regardant sa fille.)
Peut-être aussi . . . le bonheur.
(Le cortège a passé, suivi de groupes dansant au son du tambourin. C'est la fin du coucher du soleil. Le crépuscule va tomber lentement, préparant une nuit claire d'été.)

JULIEN: Puis-je être heureux . . . loin de ceux que j'aime?
Puis-je être heureux . . . quand je doute de moi-même?

LES MOISSONNEURS: (au loin.) Chasse l'hiver de détresse! . . .
Ne trahis pas tes promesses! . . .

JULIEN: (agité, nerveux.) Tandis que je suscitais l'espoir et chantais
Pour calmer la détresse humaine,
Naissait en moi, pire qu'une démence,
Une mortelle angoisse où mon esprit sombrait!
(Plus calme.)
A toute heure attristé des trahisons, des haines,
Chaque jour effrayé de mon oeuvre incertaine,
J'errais le coeur transi, sanglotant!
Fantôme en peine de mon esprit flottant,
J'ai fui, ne cherchant qu'à me fuir, qu'à disparaître!
Mais j'emporte avec moi ce qui ronge mon être,
Tenaille ma chair et brûle mon sang:
Le Doute implacable!
Le Doute qui m'accable!
(Se tournant vers l'horizon assombri.)
Toutes mes illusions de Vie
N'on pu vivre! . . .
L'illusion de Rêve
Pourra-t-elle survivre?
(Il cherche à se rappeler son rêve . . . Le Paysan hoche la tête fait signe aux siens et rentre dans la maison. Les deux femmes le suivent, s'arrêtent sur le seuil, écoutent encore.)

JULIEN: (avidement.) Oh! l'ardent souvenir du Mont inaccessible!
Pourquoi fleurissiez-vous, sublimes vision? . . .

LA PAYSANNE: (à sa fille, en une maternelle complicité de sympathie pour l'inconnu.) Son rêve est plus joli que notre vie . . .
(Railleuse.)
Ses regrets sont plus forts . . . que ton envie . . .
(Elle pousse sa fille doucement vers l'intérieur et ferme al porte. Julien interroge longtemps l'horizon vide . . . puis il s'assied avec accablement, près du tertre, les yeux toujours fixés sur le couchant assombri. Dans l'air flotte l'écho des fanfares féeriques. Un coucou salue la nuit qui monte.)

SCÈNE II

JULIEN, LA JEUNE FILLE, LES VOIX DE LA NUIT.

La lune se lève. La Jeune Fille paraît sur le seuil de la maison, une cruche d'eau à la main. Elle va lentement à la fontaine, s'y s'accoude, regarde Julien. Subitement décidée, elle s'approche de lui.

LES VOIX DE LA NUIT: (choeur invisible.) Entends-tu la nuit, la nuit calme
Qui te parle?
Un frisson profond d'amour vient des cimes.
Perçois-tu ce bruit étrange et sublime?
L'univers entier frémit de tendresse
Pour ton coeur blessé que l'espoir caresse.
(Julien lève la tête, aperçoit la Jeune Fille qui lui sourit.)

LA JEUNE FILLE: Ami, votre souffrance est-elle donc si grande Que personne ne puisse la partager?
contre votre douleur ne peut-on vous défendre?
Vous parlez de fuir . . . où le destin vous mène . . .
(Gentiment pressante.)
Si vous saviez combien nous en souffririons tous! . . .
Pourquoi ne pas rester avec nous?
La solitude rend si dure toute peine.

JULIEN: (souriant.) Enfant de tendresse!
Ta voix limpide et douce
En vain berce et caresse

PEASANT: A universal happiness—a lovely dream!
Don't have the pride to think that you can do
What God's own Son could not achieve!
Can you deflect the sun from his set path?
Can you turn back the river to its source?
(Earnestly.)
Now, listen to me, friend—
Stay here with us!
(The Reapers, Gleaners and Peasants pass along the road, grave and smiling. It is like a procession of the happy labor of the Earth. Neither Julien nor the group about him seem to notice it.)
Stay here—close to the good Earth,
Your heart will heal itself of all its griefs,
And rest will come, and then forgetfulness,
And maybe—happiness.
(The procession is followed by groups dancing to tambourines. The sunset is fading, and twilight falling before a clear summer night.)

JULIEN: Can I be happy, far from those I love?
Can I be happy, when I doubt myself?

REAPERS: (off.) Drive away distressful winter!
Do not deny your promises!

JULIEN: (distressed and nervous.) While I was borne up with hope
To ease the misery of humanity,
Was born in me, but deadlier than madness
A mortal anguish that has wrecked my soul!
(More quietly.)
Saddened always by treachery and hate,
And terrified by my uncertain work,
I wandered, weeping, with my heart benumbed,
A tortured phantom of my faltering will!
I fled, and only prayed to disappear.
But I took with me that which gnaws my flesh—
Shackles my body—burns within my blood:
Doubt! Doubt implacable!
Doubt, that rends my soul!
(He turns to the darkening horizon.)
All the illusions of life
Have died for me!
And the illusion of my Dream,
Will that survive?
(He tries to recall his dream. The Peasant nods his head, makes a sign to the women, and goes into the house. They follow him, but pause at the door, listening.)

JULIEN: (eagerly.) O glowing memory of that far Mount;
O wondrous visions that can never die!

PEASANT WOMAN: (with maternal sympathy for the stranger.) His dreams are brighter than our life.
(Teasingly.)
His regrets are stronger—than your wish!
(Gently pushes her daughter before her and closes the door.—Julien gazes long at the empty horizon; then, overcome, he sits on the hillock, his eyes always fixed on the fading sunset. In the air floats an echo of fairy music. A cuckoo greets the nightfall.)

SCENE II

JULIEN, the YOUNG GIRL, the VOICES OF THE NIGHT.

The moon rises. The Young Girl appears at the door of the house, a jug in her hand. She goes slowly to the fountain, and leans upon it watching Julien. Suddenly making up her mind, she goes towards him.

VOICES OF THE NIGHT: (Invisible Chorus). Do you hear the Night—the Night that is so still,
That speaks to you?
A quiver of deep love comes from the heights,
Do you perceive this murmur strange and sweet?
The Universe that yearns with tenderness
For your sore heart, that pity seeks to heal.
(Julien raises his head and sees the Young Girl, who smiles.)

YOUNG GIRL: And is your suffering so great, my friend,
That it cannot be shared by any one?
And may one not protect you 'gainst your grief?
You say you'll flee as destiny directs.—
(With sweet insistence.)
Ah, if you knew how much we suffer here!
Why not stay here with us?—
It is loneliness that makes your grief so hard.

JULIEN: (smiling.) Ah, child, so pitiful,
In vain, your tender voice
Will strive to lull and soothe

Mon pauvre coeur meurtri!
Hélas! ce n'est qu'un baume, endormant ma détresse . . .
Le mal est trop profond, rien ne peut le guérir.

LA JEUNE FILLE: (ingénument.) Si pourtant vous aviez près de vous une amie
Qui vous aime . . .
A qui vous puissiez vous confier . . .
Qui parvienne à vous faire oublier
L'injustice des hommes et le triste passé!
(Plus tendrement.)
Pour trouver le bonheur n'est-il d'autre chemin
Que la route sans fin? . . .
Est-ce là vraiment tout sagesse?
(Persuasive.)
Le silence a peut-être une voix qui caresse . . .
Mais sur les monts déserts, qui vous tendra la main?
(Julien attendri la regarde un instant, puis détourne la tête.)

LES VOIX DE LA NUIT: Vois, c'est la nuit, la nuit calme et belle Qui t'appelle! . . .

JULIEN: Oh! l'arden souvenir de mon premier amour! . . .
Louise . . .
(Sombre.)
Elle est loin ma Louise . . . que m'a ravie le destin!

LA JEUNE FILLE: (humble.) Je me nomme aussi . . .
(Hésitante.)
Louise . . .

JULIEN: (supris.) Louise?

LA JEUNE FILLE: (timide.) Voudras-tu m'aimer comme elle?
Je serai pour toi le reflet de celle
(Grave.)
Qui fut ton désire.

JULIEN: Tout désir est mort . . . avec la morte . . .

LA JEUNE FILLE: (craintive, avec amour.) Je serai celle qui guérit la peine et console . . .
Ah! d'un pur baiser pour ton coeur blessé
Accepte l'offrande!

LES VOIX DE LA NUIT: (en murmure.) Miracles réels . . .
Réelles féeries! . . .

JULIEN: (pensif, en lui-même.)
Louise?

LA JEUNE FILLE: (penchée sur lui, avec affirmation.)
Louise! . . .
(Julien la contemple et la repousse doucement.)

LES VOIX DE LA NUIT: Des rêves plus beaux fleurissent sur terre . . .
Ils ont leur douceur, ils ont leur mystère! . . .

My weary, broken heart.
Alas! It is but a balm, easing my pain,
But the real hurt lies deep, and nothing can heal it.

YOUNG GIRL: (ingenuously.)
Still, if you had near you a friend
Who loved you,
In whom you could confide—
Who might at last, perhaps, make you forget
Both man's ingratitude and the sad past!
(More tenderly.)
Is there no other way to happiness
Than the long road?
Is that indeed the only wisdom?
(Persuasively.)
Silence, we know, speaks with a soothing voice.
But who holds out a hand on desert hills?
(Julien looks at her sadly for a moment and then turns away his head.)

VOICES OF THE NIGHT: Behold the night, the night so fair and still,
That calls to you!

JULIEN: Ah, glowing memory of my first love!
Louise!
(Gloomily.)
She's far from here, ravished from me by fate.

YOUNG GIRL: That's my name too—
(Hesitating.)
Louise!

JULIEN: (surprised.) Louise?

YOUNG GIRL: (timidly.) Could you not love me as you once loved her?
I might be, to your eyes, as the reflection
(Seriously.)
Of her who was your heart's desire.

JULIEN: Desire is dead—with death.

YOUNG GIRL: (timidly but lovingly.) Let me then be the one to comfort you,
And take the offering of a tender kiss
For your sick heart.

VOICES OF THE NIGHT: (murmuring.) Real miracles—true fairy tales—

JULIEN: (aside, pensively.)
Louise?

YOUNG GIRL: (bending over him, positively.) Louise!
(Julien looks at her and pushes her gently away.)

VOICES OF THE NIGHT: Yet brighter dreams bloom here upon the Earth,
That have their softness and their mystery.

JULIEN: Fol espoir! . . .
Ton amour que j'envie,
Dont s'illuminerait ma sombre vie . . .
Cette aventure que tu m'offres, Jolie!
Ne serait pour moi qu'amertume, inutiles regrets!
(Se levant.)
Ne crée pas à mon coeur trahi d'autres remords! . . .
(Plus brutal.)
Laisse-moi poursuivre mon chemin . . .
(Déchirant.)
Eloigne-toi, enfant, laisse-moi!
(Il recule comme pour suivre le sentier qui va au bois. La porte de la chaumière s'ouvre. Le paysan paraît sur le seuil. D'un geste bref, il indique sa demeure à Julien.)

SCÈNE III

LES MÊMES, LE PAYSAN.

LE PAYSAN: (dont la voix et les gestes évoquent le souvenir de l'Hiérophante, gardien de l'idéal sanctuaire.) Ami, la maison est ouverte . . . si tu veux entrer;
Mais . . . je ne veux pas d'amourettes . . . à ma porte.
(La Jeune Fille s'achemine vers la maison, lentement, comme à regret.)

JULIEN: (immobile, sombre.) La même voix qui prophétisait là-bas:
"Conter fleurette à la beauté ne suffit pas!"
(Plus déclamé, un peu railleur.)
Ici, la menace est plus brève:
"Entre! . . . ou va-t'en!"
(Avec ferveur, presque parlé.)
Héros d'un rêve de clarté! . . .
(Avec amertume et dédain.)
Ou d'une aventure de banalité!
(La porte se ferme.)

SCÈNE IV

JULIEN, LES VOIX DE LA NUIT.

JULIEN: (se dressant.) J'ai franchi le seuil du temple!
J'ai proféré les paroles sacrées! . . .
(Avec défi, sans colère ni rancune, presque joyeusement.)
Et je nargue la vie . . . sans prestige et sans beauté!
(Les voix de la nuit murmurent. Il va vers la route, s'arrête, écoute, surpris, la protestation de l'ombre.)

JULIEN: (tendant les bras vers la nuit.) Que me réserves-tu, Nuit Mystérieuse et troublante?
Où ma frêle étoile fuit,
Blanche dans l'ombre flottante?
Où vogues-tu dans la nuit

JULIEN: An empty hope! Your love might be for me
A pleasant light upon my sombre life.
The amorous chance you offer, pretty one,
Would mean regret for me and bitterness!
(He rises.)
Don't bring a fresh remorse to my sad heart.
(More harshly.)
Leave me alone to follow my own road—
(In agony.)
Leave me, my child, and go!
(He draws back as if to follow the path into the woods. The cottage-door opens. The Peasant, on the threshold, with a quick gesture indicates his house to Julien.)

SCENE III

THE SAME, THE PEASANT.

PEASANT: (whose voice and manner recall the High Priest, guardian of the ideal sanctuary.)
My door is open, friend, if you'll come in.
But—if you please—no love-affairs outside here.
(The Young Girl goes slowly and regretfully towards the house.)

JULIEN: (motionless and gloomy.) The same voice prophesied to me, before,
"It will not do to make light love to Beauty!"
(In a derisive, more declamatory tone.)
Here, the menace is more brief:
"Come in—or get you gone!"
(With fervor, almost spoken.)
The hero of a dream of light?
(Bitterly and disdainfully.)
Or of a commonplace adventure!
(The door shuts.)

SCENE IV

JULIEN, the VOICES OF THE NIGHT.

JULIEN: (straightening up.) I have crossed the Temple's threshold!
I have taken the sacred vows!
(Defiantly, but without anger or bitterness, almost joyfully.)
And I defy life—that has not charm or beauty!
(The Voices of the Night murmur. Going towards the road, he listens, surprised at the plaint of the shadows.)

JULIEN: (extending his arms to the night.) What are you holding back for me,
Uneasy and mysterious night?
There where my faint star floats
White in the shadowy mist?

Mystérieuse et troublante,
Stella du Futur qui fuit,
Blanche dans l'ombre flottante?

LES VOIX DE LA NUIT: Que veux-tu, toi dont j'entends
L'appel triste en mon silence?

JULIEN: Ô Nuit! où mon coeur s'élance,
J'ai peur de toi, peur du temps!
Enveloppé d'ombre dense,
Je tâche de percevoir
Ce que dérobe ton silence:
Triomphe ou mort de mon espoir!
(Le chant du rossignol fait écho à la plainte du poète. La lune reparaît. Le ruisseau fait à l'horizon un fin collier d'argent. A la fenêtre de la chaumière, le rideau se soulève, la Jeune Fille se penche, regarde Julien s'éloigner.)

RIDEAU.

■ ACTE TROISIÈME

(Impuissance)
Un site sauvage, en Bretagne, non loin de la mer. A gauche une maison familiale, délabrée, avec une large terrasse couverte et un perron. A droite, une église pauvre. Plus loin, un calvaire. Une route serpente venant de la vellée abrupte. Aube glaciale. Des nuages obscurs galopent dans le ciel. Automne.

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

L'AÏEULE, JULIEN, LES BRETONNES,

VOIX DANS LA TEMPÊTE.
Au lever du rideau, tempête, tous les éléments déchaînés. Julien sur la terrasse, comme pétrifié par le malheur, confie à la nature tumultueuse son immense désespoir. L'Aïeule le couve d'un regard désolé. Devant le calvaire, des Bretonne récitent des litanies. Une atmosphère de tragique mystère planera sur tout l'acte.

LES BRETONNES: (devant le calvaire.) Vierge puissante,
Éblouissante,
Immaculée . . .
Vierge Marie,
Priez pour nous!
Soleil sans voiles,
Soleil d'étoiles,
Soleil d'amour . . .
Protégez-nous,
Exaucez-nous!
Porte d'aurore,
Porte d'or!
Priez pour nous!
Porte de gloire,

Where are you sailing in the night,
Uneasy and mysterious,
Star of the Future, drifting away
White in the shadowy mist?

VOICES OF THE NIGHT: What will you, whom I hear Calling me sadly through my silence?

JULIEN: O night, where my soul soars,
I am afraid of you—of time!
I am wrapped up in heavy gloom,
I strive to pierce the mystery
That broods upon your silence:
Success—or death to all my hopes!
(The song of the nightingale echoes the complaint of the poet. The moon reappears. The brook makes a line of silver against the horizon. The curtain is lifted at the cottage-window and the Young Girl leans out, watching Julien depart.)

CURTAIN

■ ACT III

(Impotence)
A wild spot in Brittany near the sea. At the left, a ruined manor-house with a large covered terrace and porch. To the right, a poor church. Further on, a wayside crucifix. The road winds upward from a deep valley. Chill day-break. Dark clouds scud across the sky. Autumn.

SCENE I

The GRANDMOTHER, JULIEN, BRETON WOMEN, VOICES IN THE STORM.

As the curtain rises, a furious tempest is raging. Julien on the terrace, stands as if petrified by grief, confiding his deep despair to the stormy elements. The Grandmother watches him with a brooding look of sadness. Before the crucifix Breton Women are reciting litanies. An atmosphere of tragic mystery pervades the entire act.

BRETON WOMEN: (before the crucifix.) Virgin omnipotent,
Dazzling,
Immaculate,
Mary the Virgin,
Pray for us!
Sun of our souls,
Sun of the stars,
Sun of our love,
Deliver us,
Hear our prayer!
Gate of the dawn,
O door of gold,
Pray for us!
O door of glory

Pur miroir!
Priez pour nous!
Reine charitable
Et secourable!
Protégez-nous!
(Les Bretonnes se relèvent et vont vers l'église où elles disparaissent.)

JULIEN: (tendant les bras avec angoisse.) Ciel sans pitié! De ma lutte dernière N'entends-tu pas gémir la suprême prière?
(Il écoute les bruits de la tempête, insensible à éblouissement des éclairs.)

VOIX DANS LA TEMPÊTE: Ho! ho!

JULIEN: Voix de revenants
Ressuscitant . . .
Voix d'ancêtres,
Créateurs de mon être . . .
Venez-vous à mon secours? . . .

VOIX DANS LA TEMPÊTE: Ho! ho!

JULIEN: Messagers du Néant d'où je vins . . . où je cours?
(L'Aïeule va s'asseoir dans un coin sombre d'où elle surveille avidement les gestes de Julien, tout en disant son rosaire. Elle se signe à chaque éclair.)
Mon coeur battu par la tourmente,
Comme vous, hurle et se lamente,
Jouet du fatal tourbillon!
(Perdu dans ses pensées, les yeux fixés sur les cimes lointaines où la lueur d'un phare tournoie, affolée.)
Jadis, dans un splendide songe,
Pourquoi m'appelais-tu, pur et divin rayon? . . .
Oh! l'odieux mensonge! . . .
(L'Aïeule se lève, va vers Julien.)
Mystérieux tumulte où je suis entraîne . . .
Ah! pourquoi suis-je né? . . .
(L'Aïeule, qui s'est approchée, lui ferme la bouche d'une main tremblante. Elle le prend dans ses bras comme une mère son enfant, le cajole tendrement, puis l'entraîne vers le perron. Orgues lointaines.)

SCÈNE II

L'AÏEULE, JULIEN, puis LES POÈTES DÉCHUS.
Les sons de l'orgue évoquent en l'esprit de Julien le souvenir de l'ineffable apparition. Les larmes jaillissent de ses yeux. Il se cache la tête sur l'épaule de l'Aïeule frissonnante.)

L'AÏEULE: Ô mon fils bien-aimé, pour ton coeur désolé, la prière, seule, est salutaire! . . .
Te souviens-tu . . . mon fils . . . de celle que jadis tu récitais avect ta bonne mère . . . au coin de l'âtre . . . de la vieille mai-

And the truth,
Pray for us!
Queen of mercy
And charity,
Deliver us!
(The Breton Women rise, go towards the church, and disappear.)

JULIEN: (stretching out his arms in agony.) Pitiless sky—do you not hear the groan
Of final agony in my last prayer?
(He hears the noise of the storm, indifferent to the glare of the lightning.)

VOICES IN THE STORM: Ho! ho!

JULIEN: Voices of ghosts
Come back again—
Ancestral voices,
Creators of my being—
Come you to help me now?

VOICES IN THE STORM: Ho! ho!

JULIEN: Envoys of nothingness from where I've come—and where I go!
(The Grandmother goes to sit in a dark corner, whence she watches Julien closely while telling her beads. At each lightning flash she crosses herself.)
My heart, tossed and tormented,
Shrieks and laments like you,
Toy of the whirlwind's wrath!
(Lost in thought, his eyes fixed on the distant hilltops where the lamp from a lighthouse flashes fitfully.)
Why did you call me in a splendid dream,
Once, long ago, O clear and shining gleam,
To prove a hideous lie?
(The Grandmother rises and approaches Julien.)
The mysterious vortex drew me in:—
Why was I ever born?
(The Grandmother covers his mouth with a trembling hand; she takes him in her arms like a child and caresses him tenderly, then draws him back towards the porch. Distant organ music.)

SCENE II

The GRANDMOTHER, JULIEN, later the HAPLESS POETS.
The tones of the organ awaken in Julien's soul a memory of the ineffable vision. Tears start from his eyes; he buries his face on the shoulder of the trembling Grandmother.

GRANDMOTHER: O well-beloved son! for your broken heart there is only prayer!
Do you recall, my son, the prayer recited to your dear mother in the inglenook of the old house?
The old house that she left forever, to go up there, to pray—to pray for son? . . .

La vieille maison qu'elle a quittée à jamais! . . . s'en allant là-haut, prier . . . prier pour son fils . . . pour qu'il ne soit pas damné! . . .
(Au loin dans la clarté blafarde du matin, un lugubre cortège s'avance lentement.)

VOIX LOINTAINES: Si l'esprit dans le vide
Tourne et crie, éperdu,
Sois maudit, Dieu perfide!
C'est toi qui l'as voulu.

L'AÏEULE: (inquiète.) Quel est ce long troupeau qui rôde dans le soir? . . .

JULIEN: (reconnaissant les malheureux Pèlerins du Rêve.) Tous ceux dont un espoir, frère de mon espoir, Égara vers l'azur les âmes inquiètes:
Mes frères, les Poètes!

LES POÈTES DÉCHUS: (s'avançant sur la route.) Si l'esprit dans le vide, etc.
(L'Aïeule, terrifiée, se cache la tête dans les mains. Julien a descendu le perron, s'est avancé vers la route; son visage exprime tour à tour l'enthousiasme et la terreur.)

L'AÏEULE: (s'élançant vers Julien qu'elle entraîne derrière la terrasse, hors du regard des Déchus.) Mon fils! . . . Ne m'abandonne pas! . . .

JULIEN: (avec ferveur.) Tous ceux qui, comme moi, ravagés par le doute
Et voyant chaque jour avorter leur effort,
Sont tombés sur la route
En maudissant le sort!

PREMIER GROUPE: Si tout être agonise
A chaque heure du jour! . . .
(Suivent les Poètes Déchus, sombres, agressifs, appuyés sur les Muses en deuil.)

DEUXIÈME GROUPE: Si le deuil s'éternise
Aux baisers de l'amour! . . .
(Puis de groupes d'Éphèbes et d'Amantes éplorées.)

TROISIÈME GROUPE: Si la douce espérance
Passe, rit et s'enfuit! . . .

L'AÏEULE: (s'accrochant à Julien qui semble vouloir les suivre.) Julien! . . .

JULIEN: (dans la plus vive émotion.) Laisse-moi! . . . Pitié!

PREMIER GROUPE: Éternel recommencement de l'existence
Qui naît et meurt à tout moment! . . .
C'est le Temps qui mène la danse.
Tout vient en se tenant la main,
S'en va, revient, jadis, aujourd'hui, demain.
Tout s'assemble et tout se ressemble,
Tout meurt et tout refleurit, danse et rit,
Et soudain s'enfuit!

DEUXIÈME et TROISIÈMES GROUPES: Si la pire souffrance
Nous brise sans répit! . . .
Si l'envie et la haine
Dans leur malignité
A jamais souveraines
Te raillent, Charité!
Si l'âme dont le songe
Est d'exprimer le ciel
S'épuise au vain mensonge
Qui l'abreuve de fiel! . . .
(Tous se tournent vers la croix avec des gestes de blasphème.)

L'AÏEULE: (Ad libitum.)
Blasphémateurs!
Diaboliques menteurs!
Lucifer vous inspire! . . .
Oui! comme le sien, votre orgueil délire!
Dignes servants de son empire! . . .
(Elle les menace de gestes forcenés et tremblants.)

LE CHOEUR: Vérité! Beauté! Rêve!
Si tout l'homme est trahi . . .
Sois maudit! oh! sans trêve!
Dieu trompeur! Dieu haï!
(Tous reprennent leur marche vers la grève, groupe par groupe, indifférents.)

JULIEN: (tendant les bras vers le calvaire. (Ad libitum.)) O Créateur!
O Rédempteur!
Surhumaine figure!
Et toi, nature!
Mère en qui j'avais foi!
Ton obscur devenir
N'est-il donc qu'un cercle étroit
Où tout passe et tournoie?
Trop incertaine voie . . .
Trop sinueux détours . . .
Dans l'éternel retour
Des deuils et des fêtes . . .
Des victoires et des défaites!
(L'Aïeule suit du regard la disparition du sombre cortège. Trottinant menu elle s'avance vers Julien calmé.)

L'AÏEULE: (en confidence grave à Julien.) De Satan s'écroula le rêve ambitieux . . .
Ainsi sont-ils tombés du haut de leur folie
En maudissant la Vie
Et le doute éternel!
(Peu à peu prophétique et plus directement à Julien qui l'écoute étonné.)
Crains l'orgueil . . .
C'est l'écueil! . . .

JULIEN: (se souvenant, douloureusement.) Crains l'orgueil? . . .

L'AÏEULE: La raison:
Du poison!

---

her son, that he might not be lost!
(Far off, in the chilly morning light, a dismal procession advances slowly.)

DISTANT VOICES: If the soul in the void
Turns and cries, dismayed:
Curses on you perfidious God!
It is so your will is done.

GRANDMOTHER: (fearfully.) Who are those people trailing through the gloom?

JULIEN: (recognizing the unhappy Dream-Pilgrims.) All those a hope—the brother to my hope—
Has lured into the blue of restless souls!
They are my kin—the Poets!

HAPLESS POETS: (drawing nearer.) If the soul in the void, etc.
(The Grandmother, terrified, hides her face in her hands, Julien comes down from the porch to the road. His face expresses alternately enthusiasm and terror.)

GRANDMOTHER: (running to Julien and drawing him behind the terrace out of sight of the unfortunates.) My son—do not abandon me!

JULIEN: (earnestly.) Those who, like me, have been destroyed by dobut,
And, seeing every effort come to nothing,
Have fallen by the way
And cursed their destiny!

FIRST GROUP: If every soul sweats agony,
At every day and hour!
(The Hapless Poets follow, gloomy and defiant, leaning on the Muses draped in mourning.)

SECOND GROUP: And if our woe perpetuates
The kisses of our loves!
(Then come groups of young men and weeping true-loves.)

THIRD GROUP: If every pleasant hope
Draws near, and mocks, and flies!

GRANDMOTHER: (clinging to Julien, who would follow them.) Julien!

JULIEN: (deeply moved.) Leave me!
Have pity!

FIRST GROUP: Eternal recommencement of existence,
That dies each moment, and is born again,
For it is Time itself that leads the dance.
All come to us, and all hold out the hand,
Then go, return, past, present and to come.
All dies, and grows again, dances and laughs,
And suddenly is gone!

SECOND AND THIRD GROUPS: If the worst suffering Breaks us remorselessly!—
If envy and hate,
Forever sovereign,
In their malignity
Mock you, O Charity!
If the dream of the soul
Is Heaven to express,
And pours itself in lies,
And slakes its thirst with gall!
(All turn to the crucifix with blasphemous gestures.)

GRANDMOTHER: Blasphemers!
And devilish liars!
Lucifer prompts you!
Even as his, your presumptuous pride
Worthy servants of his empire!

CHORUS: Truth!
Beauty!
Dreams!
If all men be betrayed—
Curses upon you forever,
God, the traitor! God we hate!
(Group by group they go slowly and listlessly toward the shore.)

JULIEN: (stretching his arms towards the crucifix. (Ad libitum)) O Creator!
O Redeemer!
Figure divine!
And you, O nature,
In whom I put my trust!
Is your veiled path
Only a narrow round
Where all men must pass and turn?
A too uncertain road—
Too many winding paths—
An everlasting round
Of mourning and rejoicing,
Of victory and defeat?
(The Grandmother watches the gloomy procession disappear, and goes, tottering, to Julien, who is now more calm.)

GRANDMOTHER: (to Julien, with grave faith.) It was for ambition, too, that Satan fell,
As these have fallen from their heights of madness
While cursing life
And the eternal doubt!
(Growing prophetic and speaking directly to Julien, who listens, amazed.)
Beware of Pride!
That is the reef!

JULIEN: (sadly reminiscent.) Beware of Pride?

GRANDMOTHER: Your reason:
It is poison!

JULIEN: (frémissant.)
Grand'mère! . . . qui t'a dit? . . .
Comment peux-tu savoir?
Qui t'inspire? . . .
Toi, qui ne sais pas même lire . . .

L'AÏEULE: (grave, montrant le Christ du calvaire.) Celui dont tu ne veux pas voir
Le pitoyable sourire!

JULIEN: (avec reproche mais sans conviction.) Grand'mère! . . .
(Les Bretonnes sortent de l'office et s'éloigment. L'orgue élève de nouveau sa voix plaintive. Lentement l'Aïeule sa vers le calvaire, s'agenouille et prie. Julien écoute les voix lointaines des Déchus, regarde l'Aïeule.)

JULIEN: Maudire? . . . Prier?
(Il secoue la tête, s'assied, médite douloureusement. Au loin, un pâle arc-en-ciel se dessine sur le ciel de cuirre et de suie.)

LES POÈTES DÉCHUS: (très loin.)
Si tout l'homme est trahi . . .
Sois maudit! oh! sans trêve
Dieu trompeur, Dieu haï!

JULIEN: (sombre, fatal, fixant l'Aïeule, de plus en plus courbée sur les marches du calvaire.)
Vainement à travers les cieux,
Sans écho dans l'ombre infinie,
Se perdent nos cris et notre agonie!
Dans l'abîme silencieux
Vainement l'homme souffre et pleure . . .
Tout rayon divin n'est qu'un leurre!
(Dans un geste désespéré, tendant le poing vers l'horizon.) Sois maudit!
(Au pied de la croix l'Aïeule tombe comme morte, silencieusement.)

RIDEAU.

ACTE QUATRIÈME

Premier Tableau

(Ivresse)

Un coin désert près du boulevard extérieur en fête. A gauche, "entrée des artistes" d'un théâtre forain. A droite, terrasse de guinguette. Nuit d'hiver.

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

JULIEN, CHOEUR INVISIBLE.

JULIEN: (trembling.) Grandmother!
Who told you that?
How can you know?
Who prompted you?
You cannot even read.

GRANDMOTHER: (gravely pointing to the crucifix.) He, whose pitying smile
You will not see!

JULIEN: (reproachfully, but unconvinced.) Grandmother!
(The Breton Women come out from Mass. The organ peals plaintively. The Grandmother goes slowly to the crucifix, kneels and prays. Julien listens to the distant voices of the unfortunates while watching her.)

JULIEN: To curse?
Or pray?
(He shakes his head sadly. Overhead a pale rainbow is seen against the coppery, murky sky.)

THE HAPLESS POETS: (far off.) If all men be betrayed,
Curses upon you—yes, forever!
God the Traitor!—God we hate!

JULIEN: (Gloomy, watching the Grandmother bent lower and lower over the steps beneath the crucifix.) Vainly, across the skies
Silent in infinite gloom,
Are lost our agonized cries!
And in the deep abyss,
Vainly man suffers and dies,
The heavenly light is a lure!
(Shaking his fist towards the sky; despairingly.)
Be accursed!
(The Grandmother falls, as if dead, at the foot of the crucifix.)

CURTAIN

ACT IV

First Tableau

(Intoxication)

A deserted corner in one of the outer boulevards, decorated for a holiday. At the left, "Stage Entrance" of a traveling show. At the right, the terrace of a public-house.

SCENE I

JULIEN, the INVISIBLE CHORUS.

Julien entre, égaré, comme poursuivi par les voix fatales. Il a vieilli, sa barbe et ses cheveux sont grisonnants et sa démarche, ses gestes, le désordre de son costume témoignent d'un commencement de déchéance morale et physique.)

JULIEN: (à lui-même.) Des maudits la plainte obsédante
Harcèle ma douleur ardente! . . .
Devant elle, sans cesse, je fuis . . .
M'enfonçant plus avant dans la nuit! . . .
(Il lève la tête vers le ciel fleuri d'étoiles. En lui chantent les souvenirs des jours enfuis.)

CHOEUR INVISIBLE: Vois, c'est la nuit, la nuit calme . . .

JULIEN: (mélancolique.) Et toi, nuit malicieuse et fausse!
Que me dit ton mystère? . . .
M'announces-tu la fin de mon triste calvaire?
(Des bruits de fête glissent dans l'aire. Railleur:)
Là-bas, dans Paris, on s'amuse . . .
La joie grouille, confuse . . .
(Une Fille sort de la guinguette.)
Tout brille, et tout rit, et tout chante! . . .
Ces hommes sont heureux! . . .
Suis-je un homme comme eux?
(Il s'assied.)
Moi seul, ne puis rien oublier!
(La Fille l'écoute. Elle s'approche.)
Sous ma douleur . . . je reste brisé!

SCÈNE II

LA FILLE, JULIEN, LES CHIMÈRES, UN GARÇON DE CAFÉ.

LA FILLE: (à l'oreille de Julien.)
Pour tuer le chagrin
Faut la chaleur du vin.
(S'offrant.)
Pour oublier l'amour
Il faut aimer toujours.

LES CHIMÈRES: (dans l'ombre.)
Tissons des songes . . .

LA FILLE: (fait signe à un garçon qui paraît sur le seuil.) Moi je connais un philtre
Qui dans la peau s'infiltre (1)
Et guérit tous les maux . . .

LES CHIMÈRES: Tissons des brumes d'oubli.
((1) Variante: Qui dans le sang s'infiltre.)

LA FILLE: (orgueilleuse.) C'est une science
Toute en nuances . . .
C'est un métier divin
Comme le tien,
Poète malchanceux,
Que rendre un homme heureux.

Julien enters, wildly, as if pursued by haunting voices. He has aged, his hair and beard are gray, and his walk, his movement, his untidy clothes, bear witness to the beginning of a moral and physical decline.

JULIEN: (to himself.) The haunting song of the accursed
Harasses my consuming grief!
From that refrain I strive to flee
And hide myself within the night.
(He raises his eyes to the starry sky. The memories of other days sing within him.)

INVISIBLE CHORUS: Behold the night!—the night so still.

JULIEN: (gloomily.) And you, O mocking and deceitful night,
What is it that your mystery tells?
Is my sad Calvary to end at last?
(The noise of merrymaking is heard.—Derisively:)
Down there, in Paris, all is gay,
And joy is murmuring, confused.
(A Grisette comes from the public-house.)
All glitters there, they laugh and sing;
Those men are happy there!—
Am I a man like them?
(He sits.)
I, who alone cannot forget!
(The Grisette listens and comes towards him.)
Under my grief—I am a broken thing!

SCENE II

The GRISETTE, JULIEN, the CHIMERAS, a WAITER from the cabaret.

GRISETTE: (in Julien's ear.)
There's nothing like red wine
To drive away your pain!
(Offering herself.)
And to forget your love.
You needs must love again!

THE CHIMERAS: (in the dark.)
We weave the dreams.

GRISETTE: (signaling a Waiter in the door of the public-house.) I know a famous philtre,
That runs through all your veins
And makes you young again.

THE CHIMERAS: We weave the mists of sweet oblivion.

GRISETTE: (boastfully.) It is a science
Made all of tones!
It is a noble trade,
A bit like yours,
Unlucky Poet,
That makes a man feel glad.

LES CHIMÈRES: Tissons des voiles, des mirages dans la nuit! . . .
(Le garçon apporte deux verres qu'il remplit.)

LA FILLE: (se méprenant à un geste de Julien.) Qui je suis? . . .
(Se drapant avec mystère.)
Une muse
Qui s'use (1)
A souffler de tendres sons
Dans les cornemuses
Des coeurs polissons.
(Crânant.)
Je suis la Belle (Humble.)
Aui fait la Bête
(Gamine, tendant la main.)
Pour avoir du son!
(Curieuse, familièrement.)
Es-tu riche . . .
Ou chiche
De pognon?
(Effarée.)
Tu pleures! . . .
Tes illusions? . . .
(L'invitant à trinquer.)
Elle peut t'en vendre de plus belles.
((1) Variante: Qui s'amuse.)
Celle qu'on appelle
Casque d'Ognon! . . .
Pourquoi?
Je vais te le dire . . .
(Elle prend une chaise et s'assied près de Julien qui l'écarte d'un geste las, presque brutal. Avec reproche.)
Décidément, je te fais peur?
(Avec toute sa séduction.)
On trouve pire
Pourtant
Sur le chemin du bonheur.
(Julien se détourne.)
Sois indulgent . . .
(Humble, avec une exagération plaisante.)
Si le feu de mes châsses
N'es plus aussi joyeux,
C'est que, vois-tu, j'ai fait la chasse
A tant d'yeux!
(Julien ne l'entend plus. Il compare le magnifique passé à la hideuse réalité.)
Si mes dents ont des brèches . . .
Sois généreux,
C'est qu'elles ont trop mordu dans la dèche!
Si je suis . . . démolie,
C'est d'avoir, si lasse . . .
Dormi sur des lits
Sans paillasse.
(Délurée, le verre en main.)
Mais ceci n'est rien
Quand on s'aime bien!
Et ce soir, je suis l'amoureuse,
Et c'est toi, le vaurien,
(Elle vide son verre d'un trait et le repose sur la table.)
Qui va la rendre heureuse!
(Comme inspirée.)
Oui, je veux me payer
Avec toi le loyer
D'une nuit à la belle étoile . . .
(Julien tend l'oreille, dans l'air vibrent les réminiscences de ses amours defuntes. Il contemple avec une émotion croissante celle dont la voix évoque de radieux souvenirs.)

JULIEN: Spectre infernal! Que veux-tu? . . .

LA FILLE: (se découvrant le visage.) Je veux pour ciel de lit
Ces toiles d'araignées . . .
Et pour oreiller
(Grandiloquente.)
Ta puissante poitrine! . . .

JULIEN: (effrayé, croyant revoir l'adorée disparue.) D'où reviens-tu?

LA FILLE: . . . Tout imprégnée
De choses divines!

LES CHIMÈRES: (comme un écho plaintif.) Soeur clémente!
(Julien semble se débattre dans un cauchemar. Il contemple, frissonnant, la Fille qui maintenant esquisse une dans qu'elle voudrait lascive.)

JULIEN: (se détournant.) Quelle épouvante!

LA FILLE: (s'éloigne en dansant, tournée vers lui, comme pour l'inviter à la suivre.) C'est un métier divin
Comme le tien,
Poète malchanceux! . . .
(L'appelant du doigt.)
Que savoir rendre un homme heureux!
(Un groupe de masques sort de la guinguette vers la fête.)

SCÈNE III

JULIEN, seul.

JULIEN: (sombre.) Mystère de la destinée! . . .
Quel est ce doute dont mon âme s'épouvante? . . .
J'ai vu
Devant moi se lever le fantôme éperdu
De mes jeunes années!
Si je n'étais certain que Louise n'est plus,
Je croirais que c'est elle,
Cette femme damnée!
J'étais halluciné!
(Avec remords.)
Louise! . . .
(En un appel lointain.)
Louise! . . .
Ah! me consume le remords,
D'avoir sacrifié à la chimère insaisissable
Plus d'amoureux bonheur
Que n'en auront connu les plus heureux des hommes.
(Il se rassied.)
Mystère des destinées! . . .
(Creusant ses souvenirs.)
Je me vois tout enfant
Dévoré d'un orgueil immense . . .

THE CHIMERAS: We weave in clouds, a mirage of the night.
(The Waiter brings out two glasses, which he fills.)

GRISETTE: (misunderstanding Julien's movement.) Who am I?
I'm a Muse,
Who can breathe
A sentimental tune
Through the bagpipes
Of rascal's hearts!
(Boastfully.)
I am Beauty!
(Humbly.)
Who makes the Beast.
(Holding out her hand.)
To have his cash!
(With familiar curiousty.)
Are you rich?
Are you stingy
Of the ready?
(Disconcerted.)
You're crying!
Your illusions?
(Inviting him to drink.)
They will sell you the finest ever;
They call the drink
The Onion Head!
Why's that?
I'll tell you why.—
(She takes a chair and sits near Julien, who draws away with a weary movement, almost brutal. Reproachfully.)
O, really, do I frighten you?
(Seductively.)
You can find worse,
You know,
Upon the road of joy!
(Julien turns away.)
Won't you be kind?
(Humbly, with comical exaggeration.)
If these old bones of mine,
Are not so gay as once,
It is because I've made my hunt
Before so many eyes!
(Julien does not heed. He compares the magnificent past with the hideous reality.)
And if some teeth are gone—
Forget it!
They've bitten deep in poverty!
If I am—broken up,
It is because I've slept
Dog-tired on a bed
Without a quilt!
(Briskly, waving her glass.)
But all this doesn't count
When one's in love!
And tonight I am in love
With good-for-nothing you!
(She empties her glass at a gulp, and puts it on the table.)
Who means to make me happy?
(As if inspired.)
Yes, yes, tonight
I'll lodge with you
Under the open sky.
(Julien listens; the air quivers with the memories of his dead love. He looks with growing emotion at her whose voice evokes these radiant recollections.)

JULIEN: Infernal spectre!
What is it that you want?

GRISETTE: (uncovering her face.) I want my bed-curtains
To be these spider-webs!
And for my pillow
(Grandiloquently.)
Your mighty breast—

JULIEN: (startled, thinking he sees again his lost love.)
From where have you come back again?

GRISETTE: —that is all filled
With lofty fancies!

THE CHIMERAS: (like a plaintive echo.) Sister of Mercy!
(Julien seems to struggle with a nightmare. He gazes, shuddering, at the Grisette, who is attempting a would-be lascivious dance.)

JULIEN: (turning away.) How terrible!

GRISETTE: (dancing away, turns as if inviting him to follow.) It is a noble trade,
A bit like yours,
Unlucky poet!
(Beckoning.)
That can make a man feel glad!
(Some Maskers come from the public-house and drag her with them to the merrymaking.)

SCENE III

JULIEN, alone.

JULIEN: (gloomily.) O mystery of fate!
What is this doubt that shakes my very soul?
I've seen
Rise up the sad forlorn ghost
Of my lost youth!
Were I not certain that Louise is dead,
I'd think that it was she,
This outcast courtesan.
I was bewitched!
(Remorsefully.)
Louise!
(Like a distant call.)
Louise!
I am consumed by remorse;
I've sacrificed, all for an empty dream,
More amorous happiness
Than often is the lot of lucky men!
(Sits.)
O, mystery of fate!
I see myself a child,
Devoured by growing pride!
More than my love, I loved my hopes!
I loved love, too!
(Ardently.)

Plus que l'amour, j'aimais mon espérance! . . .
J'aimais aussi l'amour . . .
(Ardent.)
J'aimais la vie!
J'aimais les êtres qu'elle offense!
J'aimais toute peine et toute beauté! . . .
(Avec une fierté un peu gavroche.)
Et Paris et la France . . .
Et l'Humanité!
(Il se dresse, esquisse un grand geste d'enthousiasme, puis retombe.)
Si m'attirait la souffrance,
Si je cherchais tant d'amour,
C'était que mon orgueil avide de victoires
Précipitait mon être à l'assaut des émotions:
Duperie inconsciente dont mon âme agonise
Je ne peux plus aimer
Depuis que mon espoir a sombré!
Depuis qui ma raison
A compris le néant
De l'immortalité!
(Répondant à une voix intérieure.)
Mourir? . . .
(Comme inspiré.)
Finir . . .
(Souriant à l'idée qui l'illumine.)
En beauté! . . .
(Musique de bal dans la guinguette.)

SCÈNE IV

JULIEN, UNE BANDE JOYEUSE.

Précédés d'une bande de gavroches et de fillettes en liesse, des Modèles et des Rapins, déguisés sous leurs manteaux d'hiver, débouchent de la rue voisine et se dirigent vers la fête. Une fanfare les précède. Des couples attirés par le bruit paraissent sur le seuil de la guinguette, encore essouflés d'avoir dansé. Les Modèles et les Rapins chantent une scie du quartier latin en gambadant follement.)

MODÈLES ET RAPINS: (s'éloignant vers la fête.) Nina, la pauvre fille est morte, etc.

GAVROCHES et FILLETTES: (les entourant.) Gais et contents
Nous allions triomphants, etc.
(Cris, rumeurs, Julien regarde avidement la foule turbulente.)

SCÈNE V

JULIEN, LE CHOEUR INVISIBLE.

LE CHOEUR: (plaintif.)
Ah! . . . Ah! . . .

And I loved life!
I loved the creatures that it hurts;
I loved distress, as well as I loved beauty!
And Paris, yes, and France,
And all humanity!
(He rises with a gesture of enthusiasm and then falls back.)
If I were drawn by suffering,
And if I sought love everywhere,
It was my pride, hungry for victory,
That tossed me as a sop to my emotions.
Unconscious trickery of my tortured soul!
I can no longer love,
Since my fond hopes were wrecked;
Nor since my understanding
Has grasped the nothingness
Of immortality!
(Answering an inner voice.)
To die?
(With an idea.)
To end—
(Smiling at an inspiring thought.)
In beauty!
(Dance-music in the public-house.)

SCENE IV

JULIEN, a MERRY GROUP.

Preceded by a merry group of Street Boys and Girls, the Models and Rowdies, muffled in winter cloaks, come from a neighboring street and go towards the merry-making. They are preceded by horns. Other couples, attracted by the noise, come to the door of the public-house. They are out of breath from dancing. The Models and Rowdies sing a song of the Latin Quarter, as they gambol madly.

MODELS AND ROWDIES: (as they go.) Nina, poor girl, is dead, etc.

STREET BOYS AND GIRLs: (surrounding them.) Gay and content,
We go triumphantly, etc.
(Cries, noise. Julien looks longingly at the turbulent crowd.)

SCENE V

JULIEN, the INVISIBLE CHORUS.

CHORUS: Ah!—Ah!

L'ACOLYTE: (avec envie.) Les chouettes pourboires!
(Rageur.)
Même pour deux sous . . .
(Montrant le poing à la ville.)
Ils n'en veulent point!

LE SONNEUR: (sarcastique.) Ils ont aut' chose à penser!

L'ACOLYTE: (plaintif, approuvant.) Y a trop d'misère! . . .

LE SONNEUR: (goguenard.)
Penses-tu
Y z'aim'nt mieux rigoler!
(Sentencieux.)
L'humanité . . . c'est une . . .

L'ACOLYTE: (l'interrompant joyeux.) Tiens! . . . V'là nos déesses!
(Trois Filles du Rêve, déguisées en fées, débouchent d'une rue voisine et s'empressent vers les deux compères.)

LA PREMIÈRE: (à l'Acolyte.)
C't'autre! Bonjour! . . .

LA DEUXIÈME: (se recoiffant.)
Mince de bousculade!

LA TROISIÈME: (remontant sa jupe.) Va-t'on z'arriver enfin?

L'ACOLYTE: (saluant d'autres Fées et Sirènes qui accourent essouflées.) Pas de presse! . . .
La baraque est encore vide . . .
(Tous s'éloignent vivement. Obscurité subite, durant laquelle le décor change. Lumière aussitôt.)

Deuxième Tableau

La Place Blance à Paris, un soir de Carnaval et de fête foraine.
A droite, premier plan, cabaret avec terrasse débordant sur la chaussée, fenêtre au premier étage, lampions; second plan, un toboggan.
A gauche, à l'avant-scène, le coin d'une baraque.
Au centre, le "Théâtre de l'Idéal" au décor défraichi de féerie.
Sur les côtés, on aperçoit, en enfilade, les façades merveilleuses des cabarets montmartrois. Au fond, très loin, bal populaire (rue Lepic). Les ailes du Moulin-Rouge dominent la scène de leurs lumières en tournoiement intermittent.
Foule de fête et de Carnaval. Il est dix heures du soir.

SCÈNE PREMIÈRE

LE MAGE, LES FÉES et SIRÈNES, LE SONNEUR, L'ACOLYTE, LA FOULE, puis LA FILLE, et JULIEN.

ACOLYTE: (regretfully.) The nice little tips!
(Furiously.)
Even a penny or two!
(Shaking his fist towards the town.)
But they won't have it!

BELL-RINGER: (sarcastically.) They've other things to think of!

ACOLYTE: (agreeing sadly.) There's too much misery!

BELL-RINGER: (jeering.) Do you think
That makes them like to lark?
(Sententiously.)
Humanity—is a—

ACOLYTE: (cheerfully interrupting.) Look—Here come our Goddesses!
(Three Dream-Maidens, dressed like Fairies, come from the neighboring street.)

THE FIRST: (to the Acolyte.) Hello you!
Howdy!

THE SECOND: (pinning her hair.) Where's the push?

THE THIRD: (gathering up her skirt.) Will they ever get here?

ACOLYTE: (greeting other Fairies and Sirens who have come up breathlessly.) No hurry!
The booth is empty.
(All go off quickly. Sudden darkness, during which the scene is changed.)

Second Tableau

The Place Blanche in Paris, the evening of the Carnival. At right, down-stage, a cabaret, with a terrace reaching the sidewalk. A window in the first story. High lamps. Further up-stage a toboggan slide. At left, the corner of a booth. In the centre, "Theatre of the Ideal," with shabby pantomime scenery. At the sides are seen in a long line the wonderful façades of the cabarets of Montmarte. At the back in the distance a public ball. The sails of the Moulin-Rouge dominate the scene with their lights that revolve intermittently. Holiday crowd, Carnival maskers. Ten o'clock, evening.

SCENE I

The SHOWMAN, the FAIRIES and SIRENS, the BELL-RINGER, the ACOLYTE, the CROWD, then the GRISETTE and JULIEN.

Au lever du rideau, la foule déambule, grouillante et chantante. Des curieux sont massés devant le théâtre où paradent des Danseuses Sacrées, rappelant piteusement les Danseuses du Temple, dont elles imitent le geste en lançant au-dessus des têtes une nuée de légers serpentins, tandis qu'un Mage, grotesque Hiérophante, montre à la foule l'énorme tableau-réclame du spectacle du jour. Les terrasses regorgent de buveurs en perpétuel mouvement, exubérants et familiers. La fanfare du Toboggan, par instants, domine le tumulte. Une compagnie de cors sur les marches d'une estrade, attend, d'un air noble, le moment de jouer. Bruits de fête foraine, cloches, trompes, coups de feu, tambours, sirènes . . .

LE MAGE: Miracle inconcevable!
Prodige avéré!
La Splendeur du Vrai
Est visible à toute heure!
Ceci n'est pas pour les bêtes . . .
Seuls sont invités moyennant dix centimes.
Les serviteurs de l'Idéal,
Hors duquel, pour l'humanité,
Il n'est point de salut!

COMMIS (1) et GAVROCHES (2): (soufflant dans des mirlitons, etc.) Ta, ta, ta, taratata, ta, ta, Etc.

MODÈLES, RAPINS: (encore loin.) Nina, la pauvre fille, est morte, Etc.

LORETTES et ÉTUDIANTS: (apparaissent au bout de la place, en monôme, comiquement lugubre.) Aux larmes, citoyens!

(Des Danseuses allant au bal sont entourées par des Commis qui font autour d'elles une ronde endiablée.)

LE MAGE: (bonimentant.) Entrez, entrez, vous verrex la Beauté!
Authentique! . . . sans rivale! . . .
Dépêchez-vous!
C'est si beau qu'on en pleure!
C'est si grand qu'on en meurt!
Messieurs et dames!
(Il salue cérémonieusement.)
Entrez! Entrez!
(Les Fées et Sirènes, venant de l'intérieur, font irruption sur l'estrade, suivies du Sonneur et de l'Acolyte.)

LES FÉES, LES SIRÈNES: Jadis les Sirènes et les Fées
Changeaient en Dieux et en Orphées
De simples hommes. Leur pouvoir
Est toujours le même . . .
Il suffit d'y croire pour avoir
A l'instant tout ce qu'on aime!

LES GARÇONS: (criant.) Voyez terrasse!
Versez!
Boum!
Voilà! . . .
((1) Les Commis en cache-poussière.
(2) Les Gavroches en chienlits amusants, quelques pierrots.)

LE SONNEUR: (sur l'estrade.)
Deux sous!
Deux sous!

L'ACOLYTE: Prenez vos places!

LORETTES, ÉTUDIANTS, MODÈLES, RAPINS: (soudainement délirant de gaîté.) Cloum, catacloum, catacloum, Cloum! Cloum!
Ohé! Louisette!
Lève ta liquette!
Boum, Baïboum, Baïboum,
Boum! Boum!
Lève ta liquette
Bien plus haut que ça!
Aussi haut que le font les Pierrettes
De Willette!
Pas autant que l'osa la Phrynette.
De Donnay!
Mais aussi gaîment que Marcel Legay
Sortant d'un banquet!

JULIEN: (au bout de la place, encore invisible.) Hallali! . . .
Hallili! . . .

LES FÉES, LES SIRÈNES, LE MAGE: Venez voir la Beauté!

LORETTES et ÉTUDIANTS: (s'éloignant vers le toboggan.)
Lève ta liquette! . . .
(En scie populaire répétée aux quatre coins de la place. L'attention du public se partage. Des groupes se portent vers Julien, qui s'avance entouré de noceurs du faubourg, beau de gaîté trépidante et farouche. Le plus grand nombre écoute la parade du Théâtre de l'Idéal, où les danseuses ébauchent des danses sacrées, où des cors romantiques semblent saluer l'arrivée de Julien d'un hallali rappelant les fanfares féeriques.)

JULIEN: (s'avançant comme triomphalement.) Hallali!
Le vin crapuleux
Devient miraculeux!
La généreuse absinthe
Devient sainte!

As the curtain rises, the Crowd moves about shouting and singing. Some sightseers are massed in front of the theatre where the Sacred Dancers are parading. They are a wretched travesty of the Dancers of the Temple, whose gestures they imitate as they throw out over the heads of the crowd light serpentines, while the Showman, like a grotesque High Priest, shows the Crowd a huge picture poster of the performance. The terraces are choked with people who drink and move on continually, gay and saucy. The noise of the toboggan is heard from time to time above the tumult. A brass band on the steps of the platform waits, with a lofty air, the time for it to play. Noise of the fair, bells, horns, fireworks, drums, whistles.

SHOWMAN: Wonderful miracle!
Genuine prodigy!
The Splendor of the True
On view every hour!
It is not a show for dunces!
No one invited under ten centimes
To worship the Ideal!
Without the price, mankind
Can't get salvation!

CLERKS (1) AND STREET-URCHINS, (2): (blowing whistles, etc.) Ta, ta, ta, taratata, ta, ta, etc.

MODELS AND ROWDIES: (off.)
Nina, poor girl, is dead, etc.

LORETTES AND STUDENTS: (appearing in single file, with mock solemnity.) To tears, O citizens!
(The Women going to the ball are surrounded by the Clerks, who dance around them furiously.)

SHOWMAN: (grandiloquently.)
Come in!
Come in!
Behold our Beauty!
Positively genuine!
Unrivalled!
Make haste!
It is so beautiful, that you will weep!
It is so noble that you will want to die!
(Bowing.)
Ladies and Gentlemen,
Come in!
Come in!
(The Fairies and Sirens, coming from within, burst out on the platform, followed by the Acolyte and the Bell-Ringer.)

FAIRIES AND SIRENS: In former times the Sirens and the Nymphs
Changed into gods and into Orpheus
Your everyday plain men. Their power
Remains the same today.
You've only to believe, to have
All that you wish for on the minute!

BOYS: (shrieking.) Get on to that!
Fill up!
Boum!
Hello there!
((1) The Clerks in dust-coats.)
((2) The Street-urchins in motley garb, some as Pierrots.)

BELL-RINGER: (on the platform.)
Tuppence!
Tuppence!

ACOLYTE: Take your places!

LORETTES, STUDENTS, MODELS, ROWDIES: (wild with mirth.) Cloum!
Catacloum!
Catacloum!
Cloum!
Cloum!
Ah there, Louisette!
Lift up your leg!
Boum!
Baïboum!
Baïboum!
Boum!
Boum!
Lift up your leg!
As high as you can reach!
As high as do all the Pierrettes
Of Willette!
Not so high as dared the Phrynette
Of Donnay!
But be as jolly as Marcel Legay
When he comes from a spread!

JULIEN: (at the end of the square, but unseen.) Hallali!
Hallali!

FAIRIES, SIRENS, THE SHOWMAN: Come in!
Come see Beauty!

LORETTES AND STUDENTS: (going towards the toboggan-slide.)
Lift up your leg!
(The popular song is repeated from every side. The attention of the crowd is divided. Some go towards Julien, who is surrounded by merrymakers from the neighborhood full of wild and headlong gayety. Most of the Crowd listens to the address before the Theatre of the Ideal, where the dancers perform the sacred dances, where the horns seem to greet Julien with a hallali that recalls the flourishes of the fairy trumpets.)

JULIEN: (advancing triumphantly.) Hallali!
The crapulous wine
Becomes miraculous!
And generous absinthe
Becomes a holy thing!

LES FÉES, LES SIRÈNES, LE MAGE, LE SONNEUR, L'ACOLYTE: Pour deux sous: la Splendeur du Vrai!
Pour deux ronds: l'Éternité!

MODÈLES, RAPINS, COMMIS, GAVROCHES: (à la Fille qu'ils portent en triomphe.) Ohé! Louisette!
Lève ta liquette!

LA FOULE: (hilare.) Y a qu'à Montmartre qu'on rigole comme ça!
C'est inimaginable!
Même les gens les plus minables
S'amusent comme des pachas!
Et sans galette
S'offrent des lippettes
De gala!
(Apogée du tumulte . . . Julien et sa bande s'assoientt à la terrasse du cabaret. Ils toastent en cadence.)

LES NOCEURS: Hip! Hip! Hourrah!
(Ils boivent.)

LA FOULE: (applaudissant.) Bravo! . . .

LE MAGE: (continuant son boniment, le regard fixé sur Julien.)
Venez à la Beauté!
Mortels infortunés!
La Beauté, pour vos yeux,
Va sa faire plus belle
Que pour des dieux!
(Bonhomme.) "Si qu'on" vous la réserve
Cette soeur de Minerve
Qui se rit de Pluton
Et sourit à Platon!
C'est parce que vous êtes
Le contraire des bêtes! . . .

LA FILLE: (dans un groupe, loin de Julien.) C'est moi la Beauté,
Un peu désenchantée!
(En confidence, mais de façon à être entendue de Julien.)
Et c'est lui mon Orphée!
Il ressemble à mon premier
Qu'était un sage . . .
Car il s'en est allé
A la fleur de l'âge!
(Agressive pour le Mage.)
Plus sage
Que ce mage,
Il sourit à Pluton
Et se rit de Platon!
(Elle s'avance vers Julien et rôde autour de lui avec ostentation.)

LE MAGE: Venez à la Beauté!
D'un éternel été
Elle parera vos
Juvéniles cerveaux.

JULIEN: (à ses voisins de table ou plutôt à lui-même, lointain.) J'ai connu la Beauté
Moins qu'une éternité . . .
(Rageur.)
La Beauté n'est qu'un mot

FAIRIES, SIRENS, THE SHOWMAN, BELL-RINGER, ACOLYTE: For tuppence: The Splendor of the True!
For tuppence: Eternity!

MODELS, ROWDIES, CLERKS, STREET-URCHINS: (to the Grisette, whom they carry in triumph.)
Ah there!
Louisette!
Lift up your leg!

THE CROWD: (hilariously.) It's only in Montmartre we lark like this!
You'd never guess how much!
Even the very proper ones
Amuse themselves like pachas!
Without a penny
They stand a gala treat
To every one!
(Height of the tumult. Julien and his crowd sit on the terrace of the cabaret and toast the Crowd in cadence.)

MERRYMAKERS: Hip! Hip! Hurrah!
(They drink.)

CROWD: (applauding.) Bravo!

THE SHOWMAN: (Continuing his gabble, his eyes fixed on Julien.)
Come to Beauty!
Unfortunate mortals!
Beauty, for your eyes,
Will make herself more fair
Than for the gods.
(Ingratiatingly.)
If "they" reserve for you
That sister of Minerva
Who laughed at Pluto
And smiled at Plato,
It is because you are
The opposite of dull!

GRISETTE: (in a group at a distance from Julien.) I am your Beauty,
Somewhat disenchanted!
(In confidence, but so that Julien may hear her.)
And there's my Orpheus!
He looks like my first love,
Who had good sense—
Because he went
While he was young!
(Defiantly, to the Showman.)
And wiser
Than this guy,
He smiled on Pluto
And laughed at Plato!
(She goes towards Julien and prowls about him ostentatiously.)

THE SHOWMAN: Come to Beauty!
She will adorn
Your youthful wits
With lasting summer!

JULIEN: (to his table-companions, or rather to himself, absently.) I once met Beauty
Less than an eternity ago—
(Angrily.)
Beauty is just a word,—

Et ce mot c'est: mensonge!
(Le regard de la Fille ne quitte pas Julien dont la curiosité demeure attachée aux gens de la parade.)

LE MAGE: (aux Étudiants, montrant les cabarets.)
Fuyex ces gynécées
Déprimants, infertiles,
Qu'ont bâtis vos aînés
Pour que devienne un jour
Ce triomphant faubourg,
Le fabourg des ratés!
(Approbation.)

UN RAPIN: (au Mage.) Raté toi-même!

UN ÉTUDIANT: (La Beauté! C'est un mythe!

UN BOHÈME: Elle est mangée aux mites!

UN OUVRIER: La Beauté! c'est l'amour!

UNE FILLE: L'amour? . . .

LA FILLE: (lançant un baiser à Julien.) Je t'aime!

LE MAGE: (lyrique, tourné vers Julien, joyeux presque.) Venez à la Beauté, Mortels infortunés!
La Beauté, pour vos yeux,
Va se faire plus belle
Que pour des dieux!
(Sa voix éveille en Julien des échos de voix anciennes. Peu à peu celui-ci s'énerve de sentir dans le discours du bateleur un reproche direct à sa déchéance. Brusquement, il se lève, s'adresse à la foule, surprise, puis amusée.)

JULIEN: (railleur, avec défi, provoquant du regard le Mage.) O foule,
Sublime et hargneuse foule!
Dont l'énorme gaîté
S'écoule et se déroule . . .
Toi! dont j'entendis s'enfler
Comme une houle
Le rire moqueur . . .
O foule,
Qui déchaînais contre mon coeur
Ton outrage inexorable!
Foule, je viens à toi, faire amende honorable!
(Applaudissements ironiques et rires.)
Mes paroles, jadis, n'étaient point de saison!
La vérité réside en ta gaîté bruyante,
Foule grouillante!
Ta folie est pure raison!
(Le Mage et sa troupe, comme pour lui répondre, frappent sur des gongs et agitent les cloches.)

LE MAGE, LES FÉES: Deux sous: la Splendeur du Vrai!
Deux ronds: l'Éternité!

JULIEN: (narguant la parade, frénétique.) Bêtes
De somme
Que vous êtes,
Les hommes!
Bêtes de somme que je suis, que

And the word's name is—lie!
(The Grisette keeps her eyes on Julien, who continues to gaze curiously on the passing show.)

THE SHOWMAN: (to students, indicating the cabarets.)
Avoid these female haunts,
Blighting and barren, too!
Your elders built them here,
That one day they might be
This glorious neighborhood
Of down-and-outers!
(Applause.)

ROWDY: (to the Showman.) Down-and-out yourself!

A STUDENT: Beauty!
That's a myth!

A BOHEMIAN: She's gnawed by maggots!

A WORKMAN: Beauty is Love!

A GIRL: Love?

GRISETTE: (throwing a kiss to Julien.) I love you!

THE SHOWMAN: (in lyric vein, to Julien, almost happy.) Come to Beauty.
Unfortunate mortals!
Beauty, for your eyes,
Will make herself more fair
Than for the gods!
(His voice awakes in Julien the echo of former voices. Little by little he is overcome to feel in the mountebank's address a reproach of his decline. Suddenly he rises and addresses the Crowd, that is surprised and then amused.)

JULIEN: (mocking, defiant; attracting the Showman's attention.) O Crowd!
Sublime and surly Crowd,
Whose mighty gaiety,
Flows and expands.
O Crowd, that I've seen fill
And rise and swell
With mocking laughs!
O Crowd!
That loosed against my heart
Your deadly outrage!
I come to ask your pardon, Crowd!
(Ironical applause and laughter.)
But formerly my words were not in season:
The truth indeed lives in your noisy glee!
O swarming Crowd!
You madness is pure reason!
(As if in answer, the Showman and his troupe strike their gongs and ring their bells.)

SHOWMAN AND FAIRIES: Tuppence: The Splendor of the True!
Two coins: For Eternity!

JULIEN: (frenziedly.) Beasts
Of burden
That you are,
You men!
Beast of burden that I am! That we all are!

tous nous sommes!
(Approbations qui se continuent durant la tirade.)
Bêtes, vivons comme des bêtes!
Sans évangile! . . .
Et sans remords, lâchons la bride
Aux appétits
Grands et petits,
Qui fermentent dans notre argile!
La vertu, c'est trop fragile!
Le songe,
C'est du mensonge!
Rions,
Crions
A tue-tête.
Partout où le plaisir appelle
Galopons pêle-mêle . . .
Il n'y a plus ni Bien, ni Mal!
L'Homme est mort! Vive l'Animal!
(La Fille enthousiasmée se jette dans les bras de Julien.)

LA FOULE: Bravo! Bravo!

LA FILLE: (avec une sincérité gouailleuse.) Bêtes
De somme
Que vous êtes,
Les hommes!
Bêtes de somme
Que je suis, que tous nous sommes . . .
Bêtes,
Vivons comme des bêtes:
Sans évangile . . .
Lâchons la bride
Aux appétits
Qui fermentent dans notre argile! . . .
(Faisant la nique au Mage.)
Il n'y a plus ni Bein, ni Mal!
L'Homme est mort: Vive l'Animal!
(Rumeurs et bravos. Elle entraîne Julien dans le cabaret.)
Hop! . . . Hop! . . .

SCÈNE II

LES PRÉCÉDENTS, sauf JULIEN et LA FILLE, puis D'AUTRES GROUPES DE LA FÊTE, DANSEUSES DU MOULIN-ROUGE.

Sortie du Toboggan et du Moulin-Rouge. La Foule de tout à l'heure, de plus en plus agitée, reparaît, faisant cortège aux danseuses du Moulin-Rouge qui s'avancent comme à la parade, saluant de la jambe le public qui s'écarte et applaudit.)

GROUPES: (riant.) Hi! Hi!

GROUPES: (gambadant.) Ho! Ho!

CHOEUR GÉNÉRAL: (en canon.)
Bêtes de somme
Que nous sommes . . .
Les hommes.
Bêtes, vivons comme des bêtes, etc.
(Le Mage contemple avec dédain l'orgie populaire. Il salue le mot Bêtes de gestes approbatifs. On le hue.)

(Continuous plaudits.)
Beasts, we'll live like beasts!
Without a gospel
And without remorse, let free the rein
Of appetites
Both great and small,
That ferment in this clay of ours!
Virtue is far too frail,
And dreams
Are only lies!
Let's laugh,
Let's cry,
To split our throats!
Wherever pleasure calls to us,
Let's rush pell-mell!
There is no Good nor Evil!
And Man is dead! Long live the Beast!
(The Grisette, carried away, throws herself into Julien's arms.)

THE CROWD: Bravo! Bravo!

GRISETTE: (with jesting sincerity.) Beasts
Of burden
That you are,
You men!
Beast of burden that I am! That we all are!
Beasts!
We'll live like beasts!
Without a gospel
Let free the rein
Of appetites
That ferment in this clay of ours!
(Making a face at the Showman.)
There's no more Good or Evil!
And Man is dead!
Long live the Beast!
(Noise and applause. She drags Julien into the cabaret.)
Hop!—Hop!

SCENE II

THE PRECEDING (except JULIEN and the GRISETTE), then OTHER CARNIVAL GROUPS, DANCERS FROM THE MOULIN-ROUGE.

The toboggan-slide and the Moulin-Rouge let out their patrons. The Crowd becomes more and more lively and makes a procession with the dancers from the Moulin-Rouge, who come forward, saluting with their legs the crowd that makes way and applauds.

GROUPS: (laughing.) Hi! Hi!

GROUPS: (prancing.) Ho! Ho!

GENERAL CHORUS: Beasts of burden
That we are,
We men!
Beasts, let us live like beasts, etc.
(The Showman looks disdainfully at this orgy of the people. He bows at the word 'Beasts' with appropriate gestures. He is hissed.)

LE MAGE: (haussant les épaules.) Turpitude!
Servitude!
(Des Noceurs embrassent les Fées de la parade.)
(Repoussant les Noceurs.)
L'âme des bouteilles est leur âme!
Et la flamme des verres, leur flamme!

LES NOCEURS: (le narguant.) Il n'est rien de vrai,
De sacré
Sur la terre
Que l'ivresse salutaire!
(Un gavroche va effacer quelques lettres au tableau de façon qu'on lise: Ceci est pour les Bêtes.)

UN GROUPE: A la vie, il n'est aucun lendemain, Aucun refuge!

AUTRE GROUPE: Rions, buvons, la main dans la main!

TOUS: (menaçant la baraque et sa parade.) Mort à l'Idéal! . . .
A bas les Mages! . . .
(Ils bombardent le tableau d'oranges et d'ordures.)

LE MAGE: (les menaçant.) Barbares!
Bipèdes!

LES FÉES, LES SIRÈNES: (épeurées.) Ah! voyez! . . . leur imbécile rage . . .

LA FOULE: (en émeute.) A bas!
A bas!
(Les Commis reparaissent dans le costume des Poètes Déchus du troisième acte. Ils montent à l'assaut de la baraque. Les cafés et les établissements voisins ferment hâtivement.)

LES FÉES, LES SIRÈNES: Bornés!
Ratés!
Sauvages!
(Elles se sauvent à l'intérieur ainsi que les Danseuses. Le Mage essaie furieusement de repousser les assaillants. Il est débordé et doit battre en retraite.)

LA FOULE: (démolissant.) Pan!
Pan! Pan! Pan!
(Sous la poussée des énergumènes, la façade du théâtre s'ébranle et s'écroule avec fracas. La foule épouvantée fuit dans tous les sens. Obscurité subite.)

SCÈNE III

LA FILLE: (dans le cabaret, riant.) Ah! Ah! Ah!
La, la, la, la, la,
Hop!! Hop!!
Ah!
Hop! Hop!
Ah!
(Elle apparaît, suivie de Julien, sur le seuil du cabaret.)

THE SHOWMAN: (shrugging his shoulders.) Turpitude!
Servitude!
(The Merrymakers kiss the Fairies. He pushes them away.)
The soul of bottles is their soul!
The fire of goblets is their flame!

MERRYMAKERS: (scoffing.)
There's nothing that's true,
Or sacred
On earth
But wholesome drunkenness!
(A Street-urchin rubs some letters from the picture on the wall, making it read: "It is a show for dunces.)"

A GROUP: In life there is no morning after,
And no appeal!

ANOTHER GROUP: Hand in hand, let's laugh and drink!

ALL: (threatening the theatre and its show.) Death to the Ideal!
Down with the mountebanks!
(They bombard the picture with oranges and rubbish!)

SHOWMAN: (threateningly.) Barbarians!
Loafers!

FAIRIES AND SIRENS: (scared.)
O look there!—Their silly rage!

THE CROWD: (infuriated.) Down with him!
Down with him!
(The Clerks reappear, dressed as the Hapless Poets of Act III. They climb up to attack the booth. The cabaret and other establishments shut up hastily.)

FAIRIES AND SIRENS: Donkeys!
Has-beens!
Swine!
(They escape inside, as do the dancers. The Showman tries desperately to drive back his assailants. He is overcome and beats a retreat.)

THE CROWD: (demolishing.)
Bang! bang! Go hang!
(The front of the theatre totters and falls with a crash. The Crowd takes to its heels in all directions. Sudden darkness.)

SCENE III

The GRISETTE.

THE GRISETTE: (laughing in the cabaret.) Ha! Ha! Ha!
La, la, la la!
Hop! Hop!
Ah!
Hop! Hop!
Ah!
(She comes to the door of the cabaret, followed by Julien.)

SCÈNE IV

JULIEN, LA FILLE, LA FOULE DU TEMPLE.

Julien et la Fille, ivres, sortent du cabaret. Ils regardent d'un oeil vague le désordre de la place. Soudain, Julien sursaute . . . Il lui semble que dans l'ombre du théâtre écroulé des voix chantent, comme jadis chantaient les Pèlerins du Rêve . . . Une lueur mystérieuse envahit tout le fond. Le Temple apparaît peu à peu.

JULIEN: (avec stupeur.) Là-bas . . . on dirait . . . des choses . . . déjà vues . . . dans ma jeunesse . . .
Je rêve encore . . . Ces chants? . . . (Les reconnaissant, il crie) Oui!
(Comme brûlé par le souvenir.)
Ah!
(Pressant sa poitrine à mains crispées.)
Ça fait mal!
(Il sanglote.)

VOIX LOINTAINES D'AUTREFOIS: Douce lumière,
Vers toi s'envole ma prière . . . etc.
(La vision grandit. Le temple du Rêve se dresse tout vibrant de chants et de chants et de lumières.)

JULIEN: (à la Fille, se raccrochant à la rélité comme à une épave.)
Trille,
O Fille! . . .
Chante,
Bacchante! . . .

SCENE IV

JULIEN, the GRISETTE, the THRONG of the TEMPLE.

Julien and the Grisette, both intoxicated, come out of the cabaret. They look about vacantly at the disorder of the place. Suddenly Julien starts—it seems to him that in the shadow of the ruined theatre voices are singing, as in other days the Dream-Pilgrims sang. A mysterious light fills the back of the stage. The Temple is gradually discovered.

JULIEN: (dazed.) Out there—I see the—things—I've seen—when I was young!
Do I dream now—Those songs?—
(He recognizes them and cries:)
Yes!
(As if stabbed by a memory.)
Ah!
(Pressing his breast with his clenched hands.)
It hurts!
(He sobs.)

DISTANT VOICES OF OTHER DAYS: O tender radiance,
My prayer will ever rise to you, etc.
(The vision grows clearer. The Temple of Dreams rises, alive with music and lights.)

JULIEN: (to the Grisette, clinging to reality as to a spar.) O sing
You thing!
And chant,
Bacchante!

LES VOIX DU TEMPLE: (formidables.) O flamme immense,
Accable-moi de ta puissance! . . . etc.

LA FILLE: (riant de la tête que fait Julien.) Ha! Ha! Ha!
(Elle s'affale sur un banc . . .)

JULIEN: (délirant.) Trille,
O Fille
En guenille (1)
Ton rire fou.
(La vision disparaît. Nuit épaisse.)
Chante,
Bacchante,
Délirante,
Que je suis saoul! . . .
Rogne,
Besogne,
Ma charogne! . . . (2)
Gentil démon!
Vide,
Avide
Et livide,
Jusques au fond! . . .
(Trébuchant.)
Sèves
Et rêves,
Coeurs
Et pleurs! . . .

LA FILLE: (sur le banc.) Ha! Ha! Ha!

JULIEN: Pleurs . . .
(Il s'écroule aux pieds de la Fille.)

VOIX LOINTAINES: Ah!
(Plaintivement.)
Ah!
Ah!

RIDEAU.

((1) Variante: Éparpille.)
((2) Variante: Sans vergogne.)

VOICES OF THE TEMPLE: O Fire Divine!
Overwhelm me with your power—etc.

GRISETTE: (laughing at Julien's expression.) Ha, ha, ha!
(Throws herself on a bench.)

JULIEN: (deliriously.) O sing
You thing
And throw like chaff
Your silly laugh!
(The vision vanishes. Dark night.)
O chant
Bacchante!
In a funk!
Oh, but I'm drunk!
Defame,
O shame!
My corpse!
Kind devil,
I'm needy,
You're greedy,
Be speedy—
Until I am gone!
(Stumbling.) Screams
And dreams!
Fears
And tears!

GRISETTE: (from the bench.) Ha! Ha! Ha!

JULIEN: Tears!
(He collapses at her feet.)

DISTANT VOICES: Ah!
(Wailing.)
Ah! Ah!

CURTAIN

Il Maestro di Cappella (1790)

The Choir-Leader

Music by Domenico Cimarosa

This short work, in one movement, was intended possibly as an intermezzo giocoso, humorous cantata, or aria buffa to be performed between acts of an opera seria. It follows in a tradition of parodies of music professors, music directors, presenters/impresarios and prima donnas to be found in works of the 18th century. It is scored for solo baritone, flute, oboes, bassoons, horns and strings. The Music Director states that he is singing an aria for everyone to hear, and he is also directing the orchestra in a rehearsal. But the musicians show a distinct lack of discipline, starting with the oboes entering at the wrong time, followed by the basses doing the same thing. He shows that the violins must play their passage in a certain manner and begs that they do it right. Then the violas and flutes are the next ones to mess up the works. He loses patience with everyone, and he pleads with them to pay attention to what he is saying. He demonstrates each line, imitating the melodies of each instrument, until at last he succeeds in getting them to play together correctly. He commends each section and is finally consoled by their beautiful playing. He repeats this same exercise in a different piece, an Allegro. At the end, he thanks them and promises to present them in the next season with an Andante, Allego e Presto "that a first-rate talent could never imitate".

■ Atto Unico	■ Act I
Un appartamento ammobigliato modestamente.—Nel fondo un caminetto con orologio.—Due usci, uno di prospetto, l'altro di fianco.— Una tavola a sinistra.—Un cembalo a destra, nel fondo.	A modestly furnished apartment. — In the rear, a mantel with a clock. — Two doors, one in the front view and the other at the side. — A table to the left.— To the right, a cymbal, in the background.
Scena Prima	Scene I
GELTRUDE sola, in atto di preparare la tavola.	GELTRUDE, alone, setting the table.
GELTRUDE: Ah! quel maestro! gli è venuto in mente D'invitar suo nipote a desinare . . . Quel noioso Benetto, e per di più Vuol che gli canti un certo suo duetto . . . Io che so appena canticchiar il Credo! È matto! . . . da una parte far Cleopatra, È da quell'altra far andar lo spiedo!	GELTRUDE: Oh, that teacher! he has taken into his head To invite his neighbor to dinner— That boresome Benetto, and what's more, He wants me to sing one of his duets— I, who can hardly hum through the Credo! He is mad! On the one hand to sing the Cleopatra. And on the other to turn the spit!
Scena II	Scene II
BARNABA, BENETTO e GELTRUDE.	BARNABA, BENETTO and GELTRUDE.
BARNABA: Ma ti par, cara mia? Lasciar la casa Aperta, a questi lumi Di luna? Se mi rubano Cleopatra!	BARNABA: Do you think it's right, my dear, to leave the house Open to the light Of the moon? If they should steal my Cleopatra!
GELTRUDE: Piove che Dio la manda!	GELTRUDE: It's raining cats and dogs!
BARNABA: Eh! ma mon conti I francesi?	BARNABA: What! Don't you count the Frenchmen?
BENETTO: I francesi? Ah ci scommetto, Zio, che a voi fan paura!	BENETTO: The Frenchmen? I can wager That they frighten you!
BARNABA: E a te?	BARNABA: And you?
BENETTO: Chi ha visto . . .	BENETTO: He who has seen—
BARNABA: Che cosa?	BARNABA: What?
BENETTO: Faccia a faccia . . . corpo a corpo . . .	BENETTO: Face to face, body to body—
BARNABA: Ma che cosa?	BARNABA: But what?
BENETTO: Il Vesuvio!	BENETTO: Vesuvius!
BARNABA: Bella bravura! Io . . . come tu mi vedi . . . Senza ombrello . . . sfidato ho . . . Giove Pluvio!	BARNABA: Fine bravery! I, as you see me— Without an umbrella—have defied Rainy Jupiter!
GELTRUDE: Udite quel rumor?	GELTRUDE: Do you hear that noise?
BARNABA e BENETTO: Zitti! che mai sarà?	BARNABA and BENETTO: What can it be?
GELTRUDE: Ma nol sentite ancor? Son Francesi che fan chiasso . . . Nelle case penetrar E d'ogni erba un fascio far, Quando è notte, è il loro spasso! Quando è notte, è il loro spasso!	GELTRUDE: But don't you hear it? They are Frenchmen who are making an uproar— To penetrate the houses And to make a bundle of all the grass, At night, it's their pastime!
GLI ALTRI DUE: (guardandosi l'un l'altro). Son Francesi che fan chiasso . . . Nelle case penetrar E d'ogni erba un fascio far, Quandro è notte, è il loro spasso!	THE OTHER TWO: (looking at each other). They are Frenchmen who are making an uproar— To penetrate the houses And to make a bundle of all the grass, At night, it's their pastime!
GELTRUDE: Non sentite là il cannon? Pon, pon, pon!	GELTRUDE: Don't you hear the cannon? Bang, bang, bang!
I DUE: Questo è il rombo del cannon! Pon, pon, pon!	THE TWO: It's the roar of the cannon! Bang, bang, bang!

GELTRUDE: E quest'altra è proprio tromba!
Una squilla e l'altro romba!

I DUE: All'inferno anche la tromba!

GELTRUDE: (imitando la tromba). Tara ta ta, tara ta!
Or vedremo il mio padrone
Come esponga il petto ignudo,
In sì orribil occasione!

BARNABA: In cantina io mi richiudo . . .

BENETTO: L'orme vostre io seguirò . . .
Di lasciarvi il cor non ho!

BARNABA: Tremi troppo! io non ti vo'!
Siamo andati! a ognun in volto
Vedo nascere il pallor;
E quantunque io valga, e molto,
Sento in core un gran terror!

BENETTO: Persi siam! a ognuno in volto
Vedo nascer il pallor!
E, benchè sia prode e molto,
Sento in petto un gran terror!

GELTRUDE: (additando BENETTO). Al veder su quella faccia
La tristezza ed il pallor,
Il coraggio che ei minaccia,
Mi fa rider di gran cor!
(Mettendosi a ridere allegramente.)
Ah! riuscita è la burletta!
Voi mi fate sgansaciar!

BARNABA e BENETTO: Che pretendi dir, fraschetta?
Ci hai tu presi a canzonar?

GELTRUDE: Perchè dir dovrei di no?

BARNABA e BENETTO: (alternandosi) Che? lo squillo del clarion . . .
Come? il rombo del cannon . . .
La pesante artiglieria?

GELTRUDE: Tutto vol di fantasia!

BENETTO: M'hai voluto spaventar,
Ma hai perduto il tuo sapone . . .

GELTRUDE: Anche un miglio da lontano
L'ardimento vostro appar!

BENETTO: Se si tratta di pugnar
Ho un coraggio da leone!

BARNABA: Grazie al cielo, pel momento
È passata l'occasione!

BENETTO e BARNABA: La non può finir così!
Della burla, o rea fraschetta,
Pria che vada a monte il dì,
Voglio trar crudel vendetta!

GELTRUDE: And that other is the trumpet!
The one roars and the other rumbles!

THE TWO: To the devil with the trumpet!

GELTRUDE: (imitates the trumpet). Tara ta ta, tara ta!
Now let us see my master,
How he bears his breast,
On such a terrible occasion!

BARNABA: I'll lock myself in the cellar—

BENETTO: I'll follow your footsteps—
I haven't the heart to leave you!

BARNABA: You tremble too much! I don't want you!
Let us go! I see every one's face grow pale;
And however much I try,
And more, still I feel awful terror in my breast.

BENETTO: We are lost! I see every one's face
Grow pale! And, though I am brave,
I feel awful terror in my heart!

GELTRUDE: (pointing to BENETTO). In seeing that face
Sad and pale,
The courage which he musters up
Makes me laugh!
(Beginning to laugh joyfully.)
Ah, the joke worked well!
You make me burst with laughter!

BARNABA and BENETTO: What do you mean, you fool?
Have you taken to jesting?

GELTRUDE: Why should I say no?

BARNABA and BENETTO: (in turn). What? The sound of the horns—
What? The war of cannon—
The heavy artillery?

GELTRUDE: All flights of fancy!

BENETTO: You wanted to frighten us,
But your trick failed—

GELTRUDE: One could see your excitement
A mile off!

BENETTO: When it comes to fighting,
I have the courage of a lion!

BARNABA: Thank heaven that for the Moment, the opportunity has passed!

BENETTO and BARNABA: One can't let her off so easily!
For this jest, oh, wicked rogue,
Before the day goes behind the mountain
I'll take cruel vengeance on you!

GELTRUDE: Perdonare, miei signor.
Non vi spiaccia la burletta!
Una celia, se ha sapor,
Non è degna di vendetta!

BARNABA: Ma il nostro pranzo?

GELTRUDE: È pronto.

BARNABA: E la tacchina . . .
E il duetto?

GELTRUDE: Allo spiedo!

BARNABA: Ah! malandrina!
Anche Cleopatra arrosto!

GELTRUDE: Eh! nossignore!

BARNABA: Meno mal! . . . Vieni qua . . . Senti, Benetto,
Val dal curato a chiedergli
Una di quelle sue certe bottiglie . . .
Fra una mezz'ora, al più tardi, ti aspetto!
(BENETTO esce dall'uscio di prospetto: GELTRUDE da quello di fianco.)

Scena III

BARNABA, solo.

BARNABA: Approfittiam di questo quarto d'ora
Per ripassar le pagine sublimi
Dell'opera e del salmo . . .
Ma incominciam da quella . . .
Mi par già di vedermi
Incipriato e in abito di gala
Chiamato alla ribalta della Scala!
Oh! qual piacer di pregustar la gloria!
Fra il nuovo De-profundis,
E l'opera che fo,
Insedïato io m'ho
Fra i Dei con la Vittoria!
L'orchestra udir mi par
Gli accordi modular!
Con un Tutti maestoso
La sinfonia comincia . . .
Ivi i fagotti gemono
(imita il fagotto).
Là sospirano i corni . . .
(li imita).
D'una regina in lagrime
La mesta melodia
Annuncia la presenza!
Ad imitar l'incanto seduttor,
Ispirami, Cleopatra, alma Sirena!
Del labbro tuo mi distilla l'ardor,
Ed otterò le palme della scena!
Ella compar . . . un superbo larghetto
Pinge lo stato del trepido core . . .
Poche battute ancora e l'allegretto
Ne scolpisce l'amore!
Ogni palpito di lei
È dal timpano imitato . . .
Pan . . . pan . . . pan . . . pan . . .
Ella vede il suo bello arrivar?
Ed in flauto vel fa divinar!
(Imita il flauto.)
Esprimo i lor sospir,
I fervidi desir,

GELTRUDE: Pardon me, sirs,
Let this jest not anger you!
A joke, if there is a point to it,
Does not deserve vengeance!

BARNABA: But our meal?

GELTRUDE: It is ready.

BARNABA: And the turkey—
And the duet?

GELTRUDE: To the spit!

BARNABA: Ah! you rogue!
And Cleopatra roasted, too?

GELTRUDE: Oh! No, sir!

BARNABA: That's good. Come here. Listen, Benetto,
Go to the curate and ask him
For one of those bottles of his—
I'll expect you in a half an hour, at the latest!
(BENETTO goes out of the front door: GELTRUDE out of the side.)

Scene III

BARNABA, alone.

BARNABA: Let us profit by this quarter of an hour
In going over the sublime pages
Of the opera and of the psalm—
But let us begin by that—
I can already see myself
In holiday attire
Called to the foot-lights of the Scala!
Oh! what pleasure to taste glory!
Between the new De-profundis
And the work which was before,
I have placed myself
Between the gods with Victory!
I seem to hear the harmonies
Of the orchestra.
With a sad Tutti
The symphony begins—
Then the bassoons sob
(imitates the bassoons).
There the horns sigh—
(imitates them).
The sad melody
Announces the presence
Of a queen in tears!
Inspire me, Cleopatra, benign Siren,
To imitate the seducing charm!
Distil for me the passion of your lips,
And I shall obtain the palm of the stage!
She appears—a proud larghetto
Depicts the state of her trembling heart—
A few more beats and the allegretto
Will pronounce her love!
Every trembling of hers
Is imitated by the tabour—
Pan—pan—pan—pan.
Does she see her loved one coming?
The flute makes her guess it!
(Imitates the flute.)
I express their sighs,

Nel mentre degli amor
La leggera coorte
Danza intorne di lor!
(Si mette a ballare.)
Ma . . . rea fatalità,
Quasi peggior di monte!
Marc' Antonio soccombe
Al tetro suo destin
Ed il tam-tam re annuncia l'atra fin!
Cleopatra allor delira
E sul suo corpo si dispera e spira!
Ed il pubblico, commosso
A spettacolo si grande,
Mi applaudisce a più nn posso,
Mi tempesta di ghirlande,
E trottar a vol mi fa
Per la gran posterità!
(Si odono dei fischi.)
Ma . . . chi sibila . . . chi latra?
Questo strepito che è?
Forse fischi contro me?
No — è il serpente di Cleopatra.
Ma invano, invan si vuol dai vili armar
Avverso ai grandi l'aspide invidioso!
Di fischi e d'urli in mezzo al tempestar,
Sa il vero genio uscir vittorioso!
(Chiamando.)
Geltrude, Geltrude!

Scena IV

GELTRUDE e detto.

BARNABA: Stavi forse studiando i tuoi francesi?

GELTRUDE: E perchè no? son pur miei patrioti! . . .

BARNABA: Come sarebbe a dir?

GELTRUDE: Son Savojarda!

BARNABA: (con sussiego). La tua patria, mia cara, è . . . la leccarda.

GELTRUDE: (erigendosi). Grazie davvero!

BARNABA: Ah! fra i piccanti intingoli
El il velluto della tua vocina,
Vorrei . . . vorrei . . .

GELTRUDE: Sentiamo! . . .

BARNABA: Intenderti e mangiarti notte e giorno! . . .
(Fa atto di morderla.)

GELTRUDE: Padron, le gira!

BARNABA: Non lo sai che t'amo!
Vieni al cembalo, vien! cara e proviamo.

GELTRUDE: Cantar? Invero, che questa è bella!
In italiano? . . . se non lo so!

BARNABA: Tel vo' insegnare, o cattivella,
Sol devi fare com'io farò!

Their fervid desires,
In the midst of their love
The light cohort
Dances around them!
(Begins to dance.)
But—evil fate,
Almost worse than death!
Marc Antony succumbs
To his bitter destiny
And the tam-tam announces the dreadful end!
Then Cleopatra raves
And on his body she despairs and expires!
And the public, moved
At so great a spectacle,
Applauds me to its utmost,
Showers garlands upon me
And sets my fame flying
Through posterity!
(Hisses are heard.)
But—who whistles, who barks?
What noise is that?
Are those hisses for me?
No—it is Cleopatra's serpent.
But in vain, in vain does the jealous snake
Want to arm itself with the evil ones against me.
The true genius is able to come great and victorious
Out of the hisses and cries in the midst of the tempest!
(Calling.)
Geltrude, Geltrude!

Scene IV

GELTRUDE and above.

BARNABA: Were you studying your Frenchmen?

GELTRUDE: Why not? They are my compatriots!

BARNABA: And how is that?

GELTRUDE: I am a Savoyarde.

BARNABA: (seriously). Your country, my dear, is—the dripping pan.

GELTRUDE: (straightening up). Many thanks!

BARNABA: Ah! You are such a dear,
That, twixt the piquant stews
And the velvet of your little voice,
I should like—I should like—

GELTRUDE: Listen!

BARNABA: To hear you and eat you night and day!
(Pretends to bite her.)

GELTRUDE: Master, look out!

BARNABA: Don't you know that I love you!
Go to the cymbal, go, dear, and let us try.

GELTRUDE: To sing? Indeed, that's fine!
In Italian—and if I don't know it!

BARNABA: I'll teach you, little rascal,
But you must do as I tell you!

GELTRUDE: Ebben! proviamolo questo duetto . . .
Lo zelo mio vi vo' mostrar!
(Comincia a cantare.)

BARNABA: C'è il ritornello e poi l'aspetto
L'a solo tuo pria d'attaccar!
(Canta il ritornello.)

GELTRUDE: Ma . . . padron, che mai farà
Quella povera regina,
Sin che il lungo ritornello
La cadenza non combina?

BARNABA: Eh! anche lei passeggerà,
Ruminando nel cervello,
Come all'Opera si fa!
(Cammina maestosamente agitando il fazzoletto che tiene in mano.)

GELTRUDE: Sta ben! sta ben!

BARNABA: Comincia! il tempo stringe!

GERTRUDE: (storpiando gli accenti).
"Perchè crudel, o Dio,
Rapirmi il caro ben?"

BARNABA: Ahimè! no — no — così non va
Tu dèi badar — com'io pronunzio!

GELTRUDE: Ma se lo so che non mi sta! . . .
A proseguire omai rinunzio!

BARNABA: Non t'inquietare! vien dietro a me
E senza sforzo vedrai che canti!
"Perchè crudel, o Dio,
Rapirmi il caro ben?"

GELTRUDE: (senza sbagliare gli accenti).
"Perchè crudel, o Dio,
Rapirmi il caro ben?"

BARNABA: Bene! benissimo! in fede mia
Hai bene espresso il sentimento,
Ma . . . un pò di spasimo, dell'energia,
Quasi il delirio!

GELTRUDE: Ah! vi comprendo . . .
Espresso meglio il gran tormento!
"In quel funesto addio
Voglio morir almen!"
(Torna a sbagliare gli accenti.)

BARNABA: Ma Geltrude, me Geltrude,
Siamo fuor di careggiata!

GELTRUDE: Son parole troppo crude,
È una frase indiavolata!

BARNABA: La imparerai — ten do mia fè . . .
La imparerai — vien dietro a me!

A DUE: "In quel funesto addio
Voglio morire insiem!"

GELTRUDE: Well then, let's try this duet:
My ardor will teach you!
(Begins to sing.)

BARNABA: There is the refrain and then the pause—
You a solo before beginning!
(Sings the refrain.)

GELTRUDE: But, master, what will
That poor queen do,
Until the long refrain
Will combine with the cadence?

BARNABA: Ah! She'll pace up and down,
Thinking it over,
As they do at the opera!
(Walks sadly pulling at a handkerchief which he holds in his hand.)

GELTRUDE: That's good! That's fine!

BARNABA: Begin! It's high time.

GERTRUDE: (accents incorrectly). "Why, O cruel God,
To deprive me of my beloved?"

BARNABA: Alas,—no, that's not right,
You must listen to how I pronounce!

GELTRUDE: But if I know that it's not for me!
I refuse to go on!

BARNABA: Don't get confused!
Come behind me
And you'll see that you'll sing without effort.
"Why, cruel God
To deprive me of my beloved?"

GELTRUDE: (accenting correctly). "Why, cruel God
To deprive me of my beloved?"

BARNABA: Good! Fine! By my faith
You have well expressed my feelings,
But a little more sobbing, more energy,
As if in a delirium!

GELTRUDE: Ah! I understand you—
I express great torments!
"In this fatal farewell
I at least want to die!"
(Accents incorrectly.)

BARNABA: But Geltrude, my Geltrude,
You are all wrong!

GELTRUDE: Your words are too cruel,
It is a fiendish phrase!

BARNABA: You'll learn it—by my faith—
You'll learn it—come behind me.

BOTH: "In this fatal farewell
Let us die together."

BARNABA: Non si può aver, in fede,
Più spirito di te!
E, a ringraziarti, lascia ch'io t'abbracci!

GELTRUDE: Padron, no, no, di grazia . . .
È troppo onor per me!
Non siamo qui per coniugar l' "io t'amo!"

BARNABA: One can't have more
Spirit than you!
And to thank you, let me embrace you.

GELTRUDE: Master, no, please don't—
It's too much honor for me!
We're not here to conjugate "I love."

BARNABA: Insieme, a due, mia cara, allor cantiamo!

BARNABA e GELTRUDE: "O barbaro momento!
Nell'anima mi sento
Furiosa una tempesta
Che mi solleva il cor!
Pietà, stella funesta,
Pietà di tanto amor!"

FINE.

BARNABA: Together, my dear, let us sing!

BARNABA and GELTRUDE: "O barbarous moment!
I feel
A furious tempest in my breast.
Excites my heart.
Pity, O fatal star,
Pity so much love!"

END.

Pelléas et Mélisande (1902)

Pelleas and Melisande

MUSIC BY CLAUDE DEBUSSY ■ LIBRETTO BY MAURICE MAETERLINCK

Pelléas et Mélisande, set to a libretto based on Maurice Maeterlinck's play, premiered at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on April 30, 1902. In Allemonde, an imaginary kingdom, during an imaginary time. Golaud, grandson of King Arkel, comes upon a beautiful, crying young girl in the forest. She doesn't recall anything about herself except her name, Mélisande. He writes to his blind father, King Arkel, asking for permission to bring home his new bride, Mélisande. He will arrive in three days and will look for a lit lamp up in the tower as a sign that he may come. Arkel gives his consent- Golaud's first wife has died and left him with a young son, Yniold, who needs a mother. On a stormy night, Pelléas escorts Mélisande on the castle, while Golaud goes to find his son. At the edge of an old fountain whose waters supposedly cure blindness Mélisande toys with her wedding band, which slips off her finger into the water. While tending to Golaud's hunting injuries Mèlisande has a premonition. Taking her hand in his to comfort her, Golaud sees that her ring is missing; she tells him that she lost it in a seaside cave. He insists that she look for it immediately, accompanied by Pelléas, for it is already dark. In the castle tower Mélisande lets down her hair à la Rapunzel and sings at her window. Pelléas is spellbound. She leans out to give him her hand and he is completely surrounded by her hair. Golaud, who witnessed this event, tells Pelléas that he must not see Mélisande any longer. Goland asks his son about how Pelléas and Mélisande act with each other and lifts up Yniold so he can watch through a window. Yniold says that they are doing and saying nothing, and he begins to cry in fright. Pelléas, who has decided to leave, begs his beloved to meet him one final time at the fountain. Golaud comes upon them and drags his wife off by the hair. Yniold is looking for a golden ball he has dropped by the fountain, and Pelléas and Mélisande appear as if pre-ordained. They swear their love for each other and embrace for the first and only time. Watching from behind the scenes, Golaud confronts the lovers, first killing his brother, then chasing his petrified wife. Poor Mèlisande, who has just given birth to a baby daughter, is dying. Golaud, in total despair, demands to know whether she has been faithful to him. She dies without saying a word.

SCENE I.	SCENE I.
(Un forêt. On découvre Mélisande au bord d'une fontaine.—Entre Golaud).	Melisande discovered on the edge of a fountain.—Enter Golaud.
GOLAUD: Je ne pourrai plus sortir de cette forêt.— Dieu sait jusqu'où cette bête m'a mené. Je croyais cependant l'avoir blessée à mort; et voici des traces de sang. Mais maintenant, je l'ai perdue de vue; je crois que je me suis perdu moi-même—et mes chiens ne me retrouvent plus—je vais revenir sur mes pas . . . — J'entends pleurer . . . Oh! oh! qu'y a-t-il là au bord de l'eau? . . . Une petite fille qui pleure au bord de l'eau? (Il tousse.)— Elle ne m'entend pas. Je ne vois pas son visage. (Il s'approche et touche Mélisande à l'épaule.) Pour-quoi pleures-tu? (Mélisande tressaille, se dresse et veut fuir.)— N'ayez pas peur. Vous n'avez rien à craindre. Pourquoi pleurez-vous ici toute seule?	Golaud: I shall not be able to leave this forest again. God knows how far this beast has led me. Yet I thought I had wounded it to death; and here are traces of blood. But now, I have lost sight of it. I fear that I am lost myself—and my dogs no longer find me. I shall retrace my steps . . . I hear weeping . . . Oh, oh, what is it there by the water? . . . A little girl who weeps near the water? (He coughs.) She does not hear me. I do not see her face. (He goes near and touches Melisande on the shoulder.) Why do you weep? (Melisande rises, trembles and wants to fly.) Do not fear. You have nothing to be afraid of. Why do you weep here all alone?
MÉLISANDE: Ne me touchez pas! ne me touchez pas!	MELISANDE: Do not touch me! do not touch me!
GOLAUD: N'ayez pas peur . . . Je ne vous ferai pas . . . Oh! vous êtes belle!	GOLAUD: Have no fear I will do you no . . . Oh, you are beautiful!
MÉLISANDE: Ne me touchez pas! Ne me touchez pas! ou je me jette à l'eau! . . .	MELISANDE: Do not touch me! Do not touch me! or I shall throw myself in the water . . .
GOLAUD: Je ne vous touches pas . . . Voyez, je resterai ici, contre l'arbre. N'ayez pas peur. Quelqu'un vous a-t-il fait du mal?	GOLAUD: I do not touch you . . . See, I'll stay here, against the tree. Have no fear. Has any one hurt you?
MÉLISANDE: Oh! oui! oui, oui! . . . (Elle sanglote profondément).	MELISANDE: Oh, yes, yes, yes! (She weeps profoundly.)
GOLAUD: Qui est-ce qui vous a fait du mal?	GOLAUD: Who has done you harm?
MÉLISANDE: Tous! tous!	MELISANDE: All, all!
GOLAUD: Quel mal vous a-t-on fait?	GOLAUD: What harm has been done to you?
MÉLISANDE: Je ne veux pas le dire! je ne peux pas le dire! . . .	MELISANDE: I will not say it. I cannot say it.
GOLAUD: Voyons; ne pleurez pas ainsi. D'où venez-vous?	GOLAUD: Come; do not weep thus. Where do you come from?

MÉLISANDE: Je me suis enfuie . . . enfuie, enfuie!	MELISANDE: I escaped, escaped, escaped!
GOLAUD: Oui; mais d'où vous êtes-vous enfuie?	GOLAUD: Yes; but from where did you escape?
MÉLISANDE: Je suis perdue! . . . perdue ici . . . Je ne suis pas d'ici . . . Je ne suis pas née là . . .	MELISANDE: I am lost . . . lost here. I am not from here . . . I was not born there . . .
GOLAUD: D'où êtes-vous? Où êtes-vous née?	GOLAUD: Where are you from? Where were you born?
MÉLISANDE: Oh! oh! loin d'ici . . . loin . . . loin . . .	MELISANDE: Oh, oh! far from here . . . far . . . far . . .
GOLAUD: Qu'est-ce qui brille ainsi au fond de l'eau?	GOLAUD: What sparkles at the bottom of the water?
MÉLISANDE: Où donc?— Ah! c'est la couronne qu'il m'a donnée. Elle est tombée en pleurant.	MELISANDE: Why, where? Oh, it is the crown that he gave me. It fell because of my weeping.
GOLAUD: Une couronne?— Qui est-ce qui vous a donné une couronne? Je vais essayer de la prendre . . .	GOLAUD: A crown? Who gave you a crown? I will try to get it . . .
MÉLISANDE: Non, non; je n'en veux plus! Je n'en veux plus! Je préfère mourir tout de suite . . .	MELISANDE: No, no; I do not want it any more. I do not want it. I prefer to die at once . . .
GOLAUD: Je pourrais la retirer facilement. L'eau n'est pas très profonde.	GOLAUD: I could recover it easily. The water is not very deep.
MÉLISANDE: Je n'en veux plus! Si vous la retirez, je me jette à sa place! . . .	MELISANDE: I do not want it any more. If you recover it, I shall throw myself in its place! . . .
GOLAUD: Non, non; je la laisserai là; on pourrait la prendre sans peine cependant. Elle semble très belle. Y a-t-il longtemps que vous avez fui?	GOLAUD: No, no; I shall leave it there. Yet one could get it very easily. It appears very handsome.—Has it been long since you fled?
MÉLISANDE: Qui, oui . . . qui êtes-vous?	MELISANDE: Yes, yes . . . who are you?
GOLAUD: Je suis le prince Golaud—le petit-fils d'Arkël, le vieux roi d'Allemonde . . .	GOLAUD: I am Prince Golaud—grandson of King Arkel, the old King of Allemond.
MÉLISANDE: Oh! vous avez déjà les cheveux gris . . .	MELISANDE: Oh! you already have grey hair.
GOLAUD: Oui; quelques-uns, ici, près des tempes . . .	GOLAUD: Yes, a few, here, by the temples.
MÉLISANDE: Et la barbe aussi . . . Pourquoi me regardez-vous ainsi?	MELISANDE: And the beard too . . . Why do you look at me in that way?
GOLAUD: Je regarde vos yeux.— Vous ne ferme jamais les yeux?	GOLAUD: I look at your eyes. You never close your eyes?
MÉLISANDE: Si, si; je les ferme la nuit . . .	MELISANDE: Yes, I do. I close them at night.
GOLAUD: Pourquoi avez-vous l'air si étonné?	GOLAUD: Why do you wear such a look of surprise?
MÉLISANDE: Vous êtes un géant?	MELISANDE: You are a giant.
GOLAUD: Je suis un homme comme les autres . . .	GOLAUD: I am a man like any other . . .
MÉLISANDE: Pourquoi êtes-vous venu ici?	MELISANDE: Why did you come here?
GOLAUD: Je n'en sais rien moi-même. Je chassais dans la forêt. Je poursuivais un sanglier. Je me suis trompe de chemin.— Vous avez l'air très jeune. Quel âge avez-vous?	GOLAUD: I do not know, myself. I was hunting in the forest. I followed a boar. I missed my way. You look very young. How old are you?
MÉLISANDE: Je commence à avoir froid . . .	MELISANDE: I am beginning to feel cold . . .
GOLAUD: Voulez-vous venir avec moi?	GOLAUD: Will you come with me?
MÉLISANDE: Non, non;! je reste ici . . .	MELISANDE: No, no; I remain here . . .
GOLAUD: Vous ne pouvez pas restez seule. Vous ne pouvez pas rester ici toute la nuit . . . Comment vous nommez-vous?	GOLAUD: You cannot remain alone. You cannot remain here all night . . . What is your name?
MÉLISANDE: Mélisande.	MELISANDE: Melisande.
GOLAUD: Vous ne pouvez pas rester ici, Mélisande. Venez avec moi . . .	GOLAUD: You cannot remain here, Melisande. Come with me . . .
MÉLISANDE: Je reste ici . . .	MELISANDE: I stay here . . .
GOLAUD: Vous aurez peur, toute seule. On ne sait pas ce qu'il y a ici . . . Toute la nuit . . . toute seule, ce n'est pas possible. Mélisande, venez, donnez-moi la main . . .	GOLAUD: You will be afriad, all alone. One does not know what there is here . . . all night . . . all alone, it is not possible. Melisande, come, give me your hand . . .
MÉLISANDE: Oh! ne me touchez pas! . . .	MELISANDE: Oh! do not touch me . . .
GOLAUD: Ne criez pas . . . Je ne vous toucherai plus. Mais venez avec moi. La nuit sera très noire et très froide. Venez avec moi . . .	GOLAUD: Do not cry out . . . I will not touch you. But come with me. The night is very dark and very cold. Come with me . . .
MÉLISANDE: Où allez-vous?	MELISANDE: Where are you going?
GOLAUD: Je ne sais pas . . . Je suis perdu aussi . . . (Ils sortent.)	GOLAUD: I do not know . . . I am lost also. (They depart.)
SCENE II.	SCENE II.
(Une salle dans le château. On découvre Arkel et Genevieve.)	(A Room in the Castle. Arkel and Genevieve discovered).
GENEVIEVE: Voici ce qu'il a écrit à son frère Pelléas: "Un soir, je l'ai trouvée tout en pleurs au bord d'une fontaine, dans la forêt où je m'étais perdu. Je ne sais ni son âge, ni qui elle est, ni d'où elle vient et je n'ose pas l'interroger, car elle doit avoir eu une grande épouvant, et quant on lui demande ce qui lui est arrivé, elle pleure tout à coup comme un enfant et sanglote si profondément qu'on a peur. Il y a maintenant six mois que je l'ai épousée et je n'en sais pas plus qu'au jour de notre rencontre. En attendant, mon cher Pelléas, toi que j'aime plus qu'un frère, bien que nous ne soyons pas nés du même père; en attendant, prépare mon retoure . . . Je sais que ma mère me pardonnera	GENEVIEVE: Here is what he has written to his brother, Pelléas: 'One evening, I found her all in tears on the rim of a fountain, in the forest where I had gotten lost. I know not her age, nor whom she is, nor where she comes from and I do not dare question her, for she must have had a great fright, and when I ask her what had happened to her, she weeps all at once like a child and sobs so deeply that one is afraid. It is now six months since I married her and I know no more than the day of our meeting. In the meantime, my dear Pelléas, you, that I love more than a brother, even though we were not born of the same father; in the meantime, prepare my return. I know that my mother will willing-volontiers.

Mais j'ai peur d'Arkël, malgré toute sa bonté, car j'ai décu, par ce mariage étrange, tous ses projets politiques, et je crains que la beauté de Mélisande n'excuse pas à ses yeux, si sages, ma folie.
S'il consent néanmoins à l'accueillir comme il accueillerait sa propre fille, le troisième soir que suivra cette lettre, allume une lampe au sommet de la tour que regarde la mer.
Je l'apercevrai du pont de notre navire; sinon j'irai plus loin et ne reviendrai plus . . .
Qu'en dites-vous!

ARKEL: Je n'en dis rien.
Cela peut nous paraître étrange, parce que nous ne voyons jamais que l'envers des destinées . . .
Il avait toujours suivi mes conseils jusqu'ici; j'avais cru le rendre heureux en l'envoyand demander la main de la princesse Ursule . . .
Il ne pouvait pas rester seul, et depuis la mort de sa femme il était triste d'être seul; et ce mariage allait mettre fin à de longues guerres et à de vieilles haines . . .
Il ne l'a pas voulu ainsi.
Qu'il en soit comme il l'a voulu: je ne me suis jamais mis en travers d'une destinée: et il sait mieux que moi son avenir.
Il n'arrive peut-être pas d'événements inutiles . . .

GENEVIEVE: Il a toujours été si prudent, si grave et si ferme..
Depuis la mort de sa femme il ne vivait plus que pour son fils, le petit Yniold.
Il a tout oublié . . .
—Qu'allons-nous faire? . . .
(Entre Pelléas.)

ARKEL: Qui est-ce qui entre là?

GENEVIEVE: C'est Pelléas.
Il a pleuré.

ARKEL: Est-ce toi, Pelléas?—
Viens un peu plus près, que je te voie dans la lumière . . .

PELLÉAS: Grand-père, j'air recu, en même temps que la lettre de mon frère, une autre lettre; une lettre de mon ami Marcellus . . .
Il va mourir et il m'appelle.
Il dit qu'il sait exactement le jour où la mort doit venir . . .
Il me dit que je puis arriver avant elle si je veux, mais qu'il n'y a plus de temps à perdre.

ARKEL: Il faudrait attendre quelque temps cependant . . .
Nous ne savons pas ce que le retour de ton frère nous prépare.
Et d'ailleurs ton père n'est-il pas ici, au-dessus de nous, plus malade peut-être que ton ami . . .
Pourras-tu choisir entre le père et l'ami? . . .
(Il sort.)

ly forgive me.
But I fear Arkel, in spite of all his goodness, for I deceived, by this strange marriage, all his political projects, and I fear that the beauty of Melisande will not excuse in his eyes, so wise, my folly.
If, nevertheless, he consents to receive her as he would receive his own daughter, the third evening that follows this letter, light a lamp at the summit of the tower that looks on the sea.
I shall perceive it from the bridge of our ship; if not, I shall go farther and shall never return' . . .
What do you say of it?

ARKEL: I say nothing of it.
It may appear strange to us, for we never see but the reverse of destinies . . .
He had always followed my advice until this; I had thought to make him happy in sending him to ask for the hand of the Princess Ursula . . .
He could not remain alone, and since the death of his wife he was sad in being alone; and this marriage was to put an end to long wars and to some ugly hatreds . . .
He would not have it so: Let it be as he wishes.
I have never put myself at cross purposes with a destiny; and he knows his future better than me.
There, perhaps, happen no useless events . . .

GENEVIEVE: He has always been so prudent, so serious and so firm.
Since the death of his wife he only lived for his son, the little Yniold.
He has forgotten everthing.
What shall we do?
(Enter Pelléas.)

ARKEL: Who enters there?

GENEVIEVE: It is Pelléas. He has wept.

ARKEL: Is it you, Pelléas?
Come a little nearer, that I may see you in the light . . .

PELLÉAS: Grandfather, I received, at the same time as the letter from my brother, another letter; a letter from my friend Marcellus.
He is about to die and he calls me.
He says he knows exactly the day that death must come.
He tells me that I can arrive before it if I please, but that there is no more time to lose.

ARKEL: And yet it is needful to wait awhile.
We do not know what the return of your brother prepares for us.
And besides is not your father here, just above us, sicker, perhaps, than your friend.
Could you choose between the father and the friend?
(He leaves).

GENEVIEVE: Aie soin d'allumer la lampe dès ce soir, Pelléas . . .
(Ils sortent séparément).

SCENE III.

(Devant le château. Entrent Genevieve et Mélisande.)

MÉLISANDE: Il fait sombre dans les jardins.
Et quelles forêts, quelles forêts autour des palais! . . .

GENEVIEVE: Oui; cela m'étonnait aussi quand je suis arrivée ici, et cela étonne tout le monde.
Il y a des endroits où l'on ne voit jamais le soleil.
Mais l'on s'y fait si vite . . .
Il y a longtemps, il y a longtemps . . .
Il y a près de quarante ans que je vis ici . . .
Regardez de l'autre côté, vous aurez la clarté de la mer . . .

MÉLISANDE: J'entends du bruit au-dessous de nous . . .

GENEVIEVE: Oui; c'est quelqu'un qui monte vers nous . . .
Ah! c'est Pelléas . . .
Il semble encore fatigué de vous avoir attendue si longtemps . . .

MÉLISANDE: Il ne nous a pas vues.

GENEVIEVE: Je crois qu'il nous a vues, mais il ne sait ce qu'il doit faire . . .
Pelléas, Pelléas, est-ce toi?

PELLÉAS: Oui! . . .
Je venais du côté de la mer . . .

GENEVIEVE: Nous aussi; nous cherchions la clarté.
Icic, il fait un peu plus clair qu'ailleurs! et cependant la mer est sombre.

PELLÉAS: Nous aurons un tempête cette nuit: il y en a toutes les nuits depuis quelque temps . . . et cependant elle est si calme ce soir . . .
On s'embarquerait sans le savoir et l'on ne reviendrait plus.

MÉLISANDE: Quelque chose sort du port . . .

PELLÉAS: Il faut que ce soit un grand navire . . .
Les lumières sont très hautes, nous le verrons tout à l'heure quand il entrera dans la bande de clarté . . .

GENEVIEVE: Je ne sais si nous pourrons le voir . . .
il y a encore une brume sur la mer . . .

PELLÉAS: On dirait que la brume s'élève lentement . . .

MÉLISANDE: Oui; j'apercois, là-bas, une petite lumière que je n'avais pas vue . . .

GENEVIEVE: Be careful to light the lamp from tonight on, Pelléas.
(They go out separately.)

SCENE III.

(In front of the Castle. Enter Genevieve and Melisande.)

MELISANDE: It is dark in the gardens.
And what forests, what forests around the palaces! . . .

GENEVIEVE: Yes; it astonished me too when I came here, and it astonishes everybody.
There are places where one never sees the sun.
But one is soon used to it.
It is a long time, it is a long time . . .
It is nearly forty years that I live here . . .
Look on the other side and you will have the light of the sea . . .

MELISANDE: I hear a noise beneath us . . .

GENEVIEVE: Yes; it is someone coming up to us . . .
Ah! it is Pelléas . . .
He seems still tired from having waited for you so long . . .

MELISANDE: He has not seen us.

GENEVIEVE: I think he has seen us, but he does not know what he should do . . .
Pelléas, Pelléas, is it you?

PELLÉAS: Yes.
I was coming from the side of the sea . . .

GENEVIEVE: We also; we were looking for light.
Here, it is a little clearer than elsewhere.
And yet the sea is dark.

PELLÉAS: We shall have a storm tonight.
There is one every night since some time . . . and yet it is so calm this evening . . .
One would embark without knowing it and never come back.

MELISANDE: Something leaves the port.

PELLÉAS: It must be a large ship.
The lights are very high, we will see it by and by, when it enters the ray of light.

GENEVIEVE: I do not know if we will see it, there is still a mist on the sea.

PELLÉAS: It looks as if the mist were slowly rising.

MELISANDE: Yes; I perceive, over there, a little light I had not seen.

PELLÉAS: C'est un phare; il y en a d'autres que nous ne voyons pas encore.	PELLÉAS: It is a beacon; there are others that we do not yet see.
MÉLISANDE: Le navire est dans la lumière . . . Il est déjà bien loin . . .	MELISANDE: The vessel is in the light. It is already very far . . .
PELLÉAS: Il s'éloigne à toutes voiles . . .	PELLÉAS: It is going away with all sails set.
MÉLISANDE: C'est le navire qui m'a menée ici. Il a de grandes voiles . . . Je le reconnais à ses voiles . . .	MELISANDE: It is the ship that brought me here. It has great sails. I recognize it by its sails.
PELLÉAS: Il aura mauvaise mer cette nuit . . .	PELLÉAS: There will be a bad sea tonight.
MÉLISANDE: Pourquoi s'en va-ti-il cette nuit? . . . On ne le voit presque plus . . . Il fera peut-être naufrage . . .	MELISANDE: Why does it go away tonight? One hardly sees it any more. It will perhaps be wrecked.
PELLÉAS: La nuit tombe très vite . . . (Un silence.)	PELLÉAS: Night is falling very fast . . . (A silence.)
GENEVIEVE: Il est temps de rentrer. Pelléas, montre la route à Mélisande. Il faut que j'aille voir, un instant, le petit Yniold. (Elle sort.)	GENEVIEVE: It is time to go within. Pelléas, show the way to Melisande. I must go and see, for a moment, the little Yniold. (She leaves.)
PELLÉAS: On ne voit plus rien sur la mer . . .	PELLÉAS: One no longer sees anything on the sea . . .
MÉLISANDE: Je vois d'autres lumières.	MELISANDE: I see other lights.
PELLÉAS: Ce sont les autres phares . . . Entendez-vous la mer? . . . C'est le vent qui s'éléve . . . Descendons par ici. Voulez-vous me donner la main?	PELLÉAS: It is the other beacons . . . Do you hear the sea? It is the wind that is rising. Let us get down this way. Will you give me your hand?
MÉLISANDE: Voyez, voyez, j'ai les mains pleines de fleurs.	MELISANDE: See, see, I have my hands full of flowers.
PELLÉAS: Je vous soutiendrai par le bras, le chemin est escarpé et il fait très sombre . . . Je pars peut-être demain . . .	PELLÉAS: I will support you by your arm, the way is steep and it is very dark, I go away perhaps tomorrow.
MÉLISANDE: Oh! . . . pourquoi partez-vous? (Ils sortent.)	MELISANDE: Oh! . . . Why do you go away? (They leave.)

ACTE II.

ACT II.

SCENE I.

(Une fontaine dans le parc. Entrent Pelléas et Mélisande).	(A Fountain in the Park. Enter Pelléas and Melisande.)
PELLÉAS: Vous ne savez pas où je vous ai menée?— Je viens souvent m'asseoir ici, vers midi, lorsqu'il fait trop chaud dans les jardins. On étouffe, aujourd'hui, même à l'ombre des arbres.	PELLÉAS: You do not know where I have brought you— I come often to sit here, toward noon, when it is too hot in the gardens. It is suffocating today, even in the shade of the trees.
MÉLISANDE: Oh! l'eau est claire . . .	MELISANDE: Oh! the water is clear . . .
PELLÉAS: Elle est fraîche comme l'hiver. C'est une vieille fontaine abandonnée. Il paraît que c'était une fontaine miraculeuse,—elle ouvrait les yeux des aveugles.— On l'appelle encore la "fontaine des aveugles."	PELLÉAS: It is as fresh as in winter. It is an old abandoned fountain. It seems that it was a miraculous fountain,—it made the blind to see. It is still called the "Fountain of the Blind."
MÉLISANDE: Elle n'ouvre plus les yeux des aveugles?	MELISANDE: It no longer opens the eyes of the blind?
PELLÉAS: Depuis que le roi est presque aveugle lui même, on n'y vient plus . . .	PELLÉAS: Since the King is nearly blind himself, no one comes to it any more . . .
MÉLISANDE: Comme on est seul ici . . . On n'entend rien.	MELISANDE: How lonely it is here . . . one hears nothing.
PELLÉAS: Il y a toujours un silence extraordinaire . . . On entendrait dormir l'eau . . . Voulez-vous vous asseoir au bord du bassin de marbre? Il y a un tilleul où le soleil n'entre jamais . . .	PELLÉAS: There is always an extraordinary silence. One might hear the water sleep. Will you sit on the edge of the marble basin? There is an elm which the sun never penetrates . . .
MÉLISANDE: Je vais me coucher sur le marbre. Je voudrais voir le fond de l'eau . . .	MELISANDE: I will lie on the marble. I should like to see the depth of the water . . .
PELLÉAS: On ne l'a jamais vu.— Elle est peut-être aussi profonde que la mer.	PELLÉAS: No one has ever seen it It is, perhaps, as deep as the sea.
MÉLISANDE: Si quelque chose brillait au fond, on le verrait peut-être . . .	MELISANDE: If something sparkled at the bottom, perhaps one could see it.
PELLÉAS: Ne vous penchez pas ainsi . . .	PELLÉAS: Do not lean over so . . .
MÉLISANDE: Je voudrais toucher l'eau . . .	MELISANDE: I would like to touch the water . . .
PELLÉAS: Prenz garde de glisser . . . Je vais vous tenir la main . . .	PELLÉAS: Take care of slipping. I will hold your hand . . .
MÉLISANDE: Non, non, je voudrais y plonger mes deux mains . . . on dirait que mes mains sont malades aujourd'hui . . .	MELISANDE: No, no, I should like to plunge in my two hands . . . it seems as if my hands were sickly today . . .
PELLÉAS: Oh! oh! prenez garde! prenez garde! Mélisande! . . . Mélisande!— Oh! votre chevelure! . . .	PELLÉAS: Oh, oh, take care, take care. Melisande! Melisande? Oh, your hair . . .
MÉLISANDE: (se redressant). Je ne peux pas, je ne peux pas l'atteindre.	MELISANDE: (drawing herself back). I cannot, I cannot reach it.
PELLÉAS: Vos cheveux on plongé dans l'eau . . .	PELLÉAS: Your hair is soaked with water.
MÉLISANDE: Oui, ils sont plus longs que mes bras. Ils sont plus longs que moi . . . (Un silence.)	MELISANDE: Yes, it is longer than my arms . . . It is longer than myself. (A silence.)
PELLÉAS: C'est au bord d'une fontaine aussi, qu'il vous a trouvée?	PELLÉAS: It is on the brink of a fountain, also, that he found you.
MÉLISANDE: Oui . . .	MELISANDE: Yes . . .
PELLÉAS: Que vous a-t-il dit?	PELLÉAS: What did he say to you?
MÉLISANDE: Rien;—je ne me rappelle plus . . .	MELISANDE: Nothing;—I no longer remember . . .
PELLÉAS: Etait-il tout près de vous?	PELLÉAS: Was he quite close to you?
MÉLISANDE: Oui; il voulait m'embrasser . . .	MELISANDE: Yes; he wanted to embrace me . . .
PELLÉAS: Et vous ne vouliez pas?	PELLÉAS: And you did not wish to?
MÉLISANDE: Non.	MELISANDE: No.

PELLÉAS: Pourquoi ne vouliez-vous pas?

MÉLISANDE: Oh! oh! j'ai vu passer quelque chose au fond de l'eau . . .

PELLÉAS: Prenez garde! prenez garde!—
Vous allez tomber!—
Avec quoi jouez-vous?

MÉLISANDE: Avec l'anneau qu'il m'a donné . . .

PELLÉAS: Ne jouez pas ainsi, au-dessus d'une eau si profone . . .

MÉLISANDE: Mes mains ne tremblent pas.

PELLÉAS: Comme il brille au soleil!—
Ne le jetez pas si haut vers le ciel . . .

MÉLISANDE: Oh! . . .

PELLÉAS: Il est tombé?

MÉLISANDE: Il est tombé dans l'eau! . . .

PELLÉAS: Où est il?
Où est-il?

MÉLISANDE: Je ne le vois pas descendre . . .

PELLÉAS: Je crois que je le vois briller . . .

MÉLISANDE: Ma bague?

PELLÉAS: Oui, oui, . . . là-bas . . .

MÉLISANDE: Oh!
Oh! elle est si loin de nous! . . . non, non, ce n'est pas elle . . . ce n'est plus elle . . .
Elle est perdue . . . perdue . . .
Il n'y a plus qu'un grand cercle sur l'eau . . .
Qu'allons-nous faire maintenant? . . .

PELLÉAS: Il ne faut pas s'inquiéter pour une bague.
Ce n'est rien . . . nous la retrouverons peut-être.
Ou-bien nous en retrouverons une autre.

MÉLISANDE: Non, non; nous ne la retrouverons plus, nous n'en trouverons pas d'autres non plus . . .
Je croyais l'avoir dans les mains cependant . . .
J'avais déjà fermé les mains, et elle est tombée malgre tout . . .
Je l'ai jetée trop haut, du côté du soleil . . .

PELLÉAS: Venez, nous reviendrons un autre jour . . . venez, il est temps.
On irait à notre rencontre . . .
Midi sonnait au moment où l'anneau est tombé . . .

MÉLISANDE: Qu'allons-nous dire à Golaud s'il demande où il est?

PELLÉAS: La vérité, la vérité, la vérité . . .
(Ils sortent.)

PELLÉAS: Why did you not wish to?

MELISANDE: Oh, oh!
I saw something pass at the bottom of the water . . .

PELLÉAS: Take care, take care!
You will fall!
What are you playing with?

MELISANDE: With the ring he gave me . . .

PELLÉAS: Do not play like that, above water so deep.

MELISANDE: My hands do not tremble.

PELLÉAS: How it shines in the sun!
Do not throw it so high toward the sky . , .

MELISANDE: Oh!

PELLÉAS: It has fallen?

MELISANDE: It has fallen in the water! . . .

PELLÉAS: Where is it, where is it?

MELISANDE: I do not see it sinking . . .

PELLÉAS: I think that I see it sparkle . . .

MELISANDE: My ring?

PELLÉAS: Yes, yes, . . . over there . . .

MELISANDE: Oh, oh, it is so far from us . . . no, no, that is not it . . . that is no longer it . . .
It is lost . . . lost . . .
There is no longer anything but a great circle on the water . . .
What shall we do now?

PELLÉAS: There is no need to be anxious over a ring.
It is nothing, we will find it again, perhaps.
Or else we will find another.

MELISANDE: No, no; we shall never find it again, nor shall we find others either.
Still I thought I had it in my hands.
I had already closed my hands, and it fell in spite of all . . .
I threw it too high, on the sunny side . . .

PELLÉAS: Come, we will return another day . . . come, it is time.
They would come out to meet us.
Noon sounded at the moment the ring was lost.

MELISANDE: What shall we say to Golaud if he asks where it is?

PELLÉAS: The truth, the truth, the truth . . .
(They go out.)

SCENE II.

(Un appartement dans le château. On découvre Golaud étendu sur son lit; Mélisande est à son chevet.)

GOLAUD: Ah! ah! tout va bien, cela ne sera rien.
Mais je ne puis m'expliquer comment cela s'est passé.
Je chassais tranquillement dans la forêt.
Mon cheval s'est emporté tout à coup, sans raison.
A-t-il vu quelque chose d'extraordinaire? . . .
Je venais d'entendre sonner les douze coups de midi.
Au douzième coup, il s'effraie subitement, et court, comme un aveugle fou, contre un arbre.
Je ne sais plus ce qui est arrivé.
Je suis tombé, et lui doit être tombé sur moi.
Je croyais avoir toute la forêt sur la poitrine; je croyais que mon coeur était déchiré.
Mais mon coeur est solide.
Il parait que ce n'est rien . . .

MÉLISANDE: Voulez-vous boire un peu d'eau?

GOLAUD: Merci; je n'ai pas soif.

MÉLISANDE: Voulez-vous un autre oreiller? . . .
Il y'a une petite tache de sang sur celui-ci.

GOLAUD: Non, non; ce n'est pas le peine.

MÉLISANDE: Est-ce bien sûr? . . .
Vous ne souffrez pas trop?

GOLAUD: Non, non, j'en ai vu bien d'autres.
Je suis fait au fer et au sang . . .

MÉLISANDE: Fermez les yeux et tâchez de dormir.
Je resterai ici toute la nuit . . .

GOLAUD: Non, non; je ne veux pas que tu te fatigues ainsi.
Je n'ai besoin de rien; je dormirai comme un enfant . . .
Qu'y a-t-il, Mélisande?
Pourquoi pleures-tu tout à coup? . . .

MÉLISANDE: (fondant en larmes). Je suis . . .
Je suis malade ici . . .

GOLAUD: Tu es malade? . . .
Qu'as-tu donc, qu'as-tu donc, Mélisande? . . .

MÉLISANDE: Je ne sais pas . . .
Je suis malade ici . . .
Je préfère vous le dire aujourd'hui; seigneur, je ne suis pas heureuse ici . . .

GOLAUD: Qu'est-il donc arrivé? . . .
Quelqu'un t'a fait du mal? . . .
Quelqu'un t'aurait-il offensée?

SCENE II.

(An apartment in the Castle. Golaud is discovered extended on his bed. Melisande is at the head.)

GOLAUD: Ah, ah!
All goes well.
It will be nothing.
But I cannot explain to myself how it took place.
I was hunting quietly in the forest.
My horse suddenly ran away, without reason.
Did he see something extraordinary?
I had just heard ring the twelve strokes of noon.
At the twelfth stroke, he is suddenly frightened, and runs like a blind fool, against a tree. I know no longer what happened.
I fell and he must have fallen on me.
I thought I had the whole forest on my chest; I thought that my heart was torn apart.
But my heart is solid.
It appears that it is nothing . . .

MELISANDE: Would you like to drink a little water?

GOLAUD: Thanks; I am not thirsty.

MELISANDE: Will you have another pillow? . . .
There is a little stain of blood on this one.

GOLAUD: No, no; it is not worth the trouble.

MELISANDE: Are you sure? . . .
You do not suffer too much?

GOLAUD: No, no, I have seen much worse.
I am inured to iron and blood.

MELISANDE: Shut your eyes and try to sleep.
I will remain here all night . . .

GOLAUD: No, no; I will not let you tire yourself thus.
I am in want of nothing; I will sleep like a child . . .
What is it, Melisande?
Why do you weep all of a sudden?

MELISANDE: (breaking into tears). I am . . . I am sick here.

GOLAUD: You are sick?
What ails you, what ails you, Melisande? . . .

MELISANDE: I do not know . . .
I am sick here . . .
I prefer to tell you today; lord, I am not happy here.

GOLAUD: What has happened?
Someone has done you harm . . .
Has some one offended you?

MÉLISANDE: Non, non; personne ne m'a fait le moindre mal . . . Ce n'est pas cela . . .	MELISANDE: No, no; no one has done me the least harm . . . It is not that . . .
GOLAUD: Mais tu dois me cacher, quelque chose? . . . Dis moi tout la vérité, Mélisande . . . Est-ce le roi? . . . Est-ce ma mère? . . . Est-ce Pelléas? . . .	GOLAUD: But you must be hiding something from me? Tell me the whole truth, Melisande . . . Is it the King? Is it my mother? Is it Pelléas? . . .
MÉLISANDE: Non,non; ce n'est pas Pelléas. Ce n'est personne . . . Vous ne pouvez pas me comprendre . . . C'est quelque chose qui est plus fort que moi . . .	MELISANDE: No, no; it is not Pelléas. It is nobody . . . You cannot understand me . . . It is something that is stronger than myself . . .
GOLAUD: Voyons; sois raisonnable, Mélisande.— Que veux-tu que je fasse?— Tu n'es plus une enfant.— Est-ce moi que tu voudrais quitter?	GOLAUD: Come; be reasonable, Melisande. What would you have me do? You are no longer a child. Is it me that you would leave?
MÉLISANDE: Oh! non; ce n'est pas cela . . . Je voudrais m'en aller avec vous . . . C'est ici, que je ne peux plus vivre . . . Je sens que je ne vivrais plus longtemps . . .	MELISANDE: Oh no! it is not that . . . I would like to go away with you . . . It is here that I cannot longer live . . . I feel that I should not live long.
GOLAUD: Mais il faut une raison cependant. On va te croire folle. On va croire à des rêves d'enfant.— Voyons, est-ce Pelléas, peut-être?— Je crois qu'il ne te parle pas souvent . . .	GOLAUD: But there still needs a reason. They will think you mad. They will think you have childish dreams. Come, is it Pelléas, perhaps? I think he does not speak to you often . . .
MÉLISANDE: Si, si; il me parle parfois. Il ne m'aime pas, je crois; je l'ai vu dans ses yeux . . . Mais il me parle quand il me rencontre . . .	MELISANDE: Yes. yes; he speaks to me at times. He does not like me, I think; I have seen it in his eyes . . . But he speaks to me when he meets me . . .
GOLAUD: Il ne faut pas lui en vouloir. Il a toujours été ainsi. Il est un peu étrange. Il changera, tu verras; il est jeune . . .	GOLAUD: You must not mind him. He has always been that way. He is a little singular. He will change, you will see; he is young . . .
MÉLISANDE: Mais ce n'est pas cela . . . ce n'est pas cela . . .	MELISANDE: But it is not that . . . it is not that.
GOLAUD: Qu'est-ce donc?— Ne peux-tu pas te faire à la vie qu'on mène ici? Fait-il trop triste ici? Il est vrai que ce château est très vieux et très sombre . . . Il est très froid et très profond. Et tous ceux qui l'habitent sont déjà vieux. Et la campagne peut sembler bien triste aussi, avec toutes ses forêts, toutes ses vieilles forêts sans lumière. Mais on peut égayer tout cela si l'on veut. Et puis, la joie, la joie, on n'en a pas tous les jours; il faut prendre les choses comme elles sont. Mais dis-moi quelque chose; n'importe quoi; je ferai tout ce que tu voudras . . .	GOLAUD: What is it then? Can you not fit yourself to the life we lead here? Is it too sad here? It is true that this castle is very old and very sombre. It is very cold and very deep. And all those who live in it are already old. And the country side may seem very sad also, with all its forests, all its old forests without light. But we can make all that gayer if we want to. And after that joy, joy. One does not taste it every day; one must take things as they are. But tell me something; no matter what, I will do all that you wish.
MÉLISANDE: Oui, c'est vrai . . . on ne voit jamais le ciel clair . . . Je l'ai vu pour la première fois ce matin . . .	MELISANDE: Yes, it is true . . . one never sees the clear sky . . . I saw it for the first time this morning.
GOLAUD: C'est donc cela qui te fait pleurer, ma pauvre Mélisande?— Ce n'est donc que cela?— Tu pleures de ne pas voir le ciel?— Voyons, tu n'es plus à l'âge où l'on peut pleurer pour ces choses . . . Et puis l'été n'est-il pas là? Tu vas voir le ciel tous les jours.— Et puis l'année prochaine . . . Voyons, donne-moi ta main; donne-moi tes deux petites mains. (Il lui prend les mains.) Oh! ces petites mains que je pourrais écraser comme des fleurs . . . — Tiens, où est l'anneau que je t'avais donné?	GOLAUD: So it is that which makes you weep, my poor Melisande? Then it is only that. You weep to have not seen the sky. Come you are no longer at the age when one weeps for these things . . . And then, is not summer here? You will see the sky every day. And then next year. Come, give me your hand; give me your two little hands. (He takes her hands.) Oh, these little hands that I could crush like flowers . . . Eh, where is the ring that I gave to you?
MÉLISANDE: L'anneau?	MELISANDE: The ring?
GOLAUD: Oui; la bague de nos noces, où est-elle?	GOLAUD: Yes; our nuptial ring, where is it?
MÉLISANDE: Je crois . . . Je crois qu'elle est tombée . . .	MELISANDE: I think . . . I think it fell . . .
GOLAUD: Tombée?— Où est-elle tombée . . . Tu ne l'as pas perdue?	GOLAUD: Fell! Where did it fall? You have not lost it?
MÉLISANDE: Non, elle est tombée . . . elle doit être tombée . . . mais je sais où elle est . . .	MELISANDE: No, it fell . . . it must have fallen . . . but I do not know where it is.
GOLAUD: Où est-elle?	GOLAUD: Where is it?
MÉLISANDE: Vous savez bien . . . vous savez bien . . . la grotte au bord de la mer?	MELISANDE: You know very well . . . you know . . . the grotto on the seashore?
GOLAUD: Oui.	GOLAUD: Yes.
MÉLISANDE: Eh bien, c'est là . . . Il faut que ce soit là . . . Oui, oui; je me rappelle . . . J'y suis allée ce matin, ramasser des coquillages pour le petit Yniold . . . Il y en a de très beaux . . . Elle a glissé de mon doigt . . . puis la mer est entrée; et j'ai dû sortir avant de l'avoir retrouvée.	MELISANDE: Very well, it is there . . . it must be there . . . Yes, yes; I remember . . . I went there this morning, to gather shells for little Yniold . . . there are some beautiful ones . . . it slipped from my finger . . . and then the sea came in; and I had to go before having found it.
GOLAUD: Es-tu sûre que ce soit là?	GOLAUD: Are you sure that it was there?
MÉLISANDE: Oui, oui; tout à fait sûre . . . Je l'ai sentie glisser . . .	MELISANDE: Yes, yes; entirely sure . . . I felt it slip . . .
GOLAUD: Il faut aller la chercher tout de suite.	GOLAUD: You must go and look for it at once.
MÉLISANDE: Maintenant?—tout de suite?—dans l'obscurité?	MELISANDE: Now!—at once—in the dark?

GOLAUD: Maintenant, tout de suite, dans l'obscurité.
J'aimerais mieux avoir perdu tout ce que j'ai plutôt que d'avoir perdu cette bague.
Tu ne sais pas ce que c'est.
Tu ne sais pas d'où elle vient.
La mer sera très haute cette nuit.
La mer viendra la prendre avant toi . . . dépêche-toi.

MÉLISANDE: Je n'ose pas . . .
Je n'ose pas aller seule . . .

GOLAUD: Vas-y, vas-y avec n'importe qui. Mais il faut y aller tout de suite, entends-tu?—
Dépêche-toi; demande à Pelléas d'y aller avec toi.

MÉLISANDE: Pelléas?—
Avec Pelléas?—
Mais Pelléas ne voudra pas . . .

GOLAUD: Pelléas fera tout ce que tu lui demandes.
Je connais Pelléas mieux que toi.
Vas-y, hâte-toi.
Je ne dormirai pas avant d'avoir la bague.

MÉLISANDE: Oh! oh!
Je ne suis pas heureuse! . . .
Je ne suis pas heureuse!
(Elle sort en pleurant.)

SCENE III.

(Devant une grotte. Entrent Pelléas et Mélisande.)

PELLÉAS: (parlant avec une grande agitation). Oui; c'est ici, nous y sommes.
Il fait si noir que l'entrée de la grotte ne se distingue pas du reste de la nuit . . .
Il n'y a pas d'étoiles de ce côté.
Attendons que la lune ait déchiré ce gran nuage; elle éclairera toute la grotte et alors nous pourrons y entrer sans danger.
Il y a des endroits dangereux et le sentier est très étroit, entre deux lacs dont on n'a pas encore trouvé le fond.
Je n'ai pas songé à emporter une torche ou une lanterne, mais je pense que la clarté du ciel nous suffira.—
Vous n'avez jamais pénétré dans cette grotte?

MÉLISANDE: Non . . .

PELLÉAS: Entrons-y . . .
Il faut pouvoir décrire l'endroit où vous avez perdu la bague, s'il vous interroge . . .
Elle est très grande et très belle.
Elle est pleine de ténèbres bleues.
Quand on y allume une petite lampe, on dirait que la voûte est couverte d'étoiles, comme le ciel.
Donnez-moi la main, ne tremblez pas, ne tremblez pas ainsi.
Il n'y a pas de danger: nous nous arrêterons au moment que nous n'apercevrons plus la clarté de la

GOLAUD: Now, at once, in the dark.
I would sooner have lost all I have than to have lost this ring.
You do not know what it is.
You do not know where it comes from.
The sea will be very high tonight.
The sea will come to take it before you . . .
You must hurry.

MELISANDE: I dare not . . .
I dare not go alone . . .

GOLAUD: Go there, go there, it matters not with whom.
But you must go at once, do you hear?
Hurry; ask Pelléas to go with you.

MELISANDE: With Pelléas?
But Pelléas would not like . . .

GOLAUD: Pelléas will do whatever you ask him.
I know Pelléas better than you.
Go, hasten.
I will not sleep until I have the ring.

MELISANDE: Oh, oh!
I am not happy . . .
I am not happy!
(She goes out weeping.)

SCENE III

(Before a Grotto. Enter Pelléas and Melisande.)

PELLÉAS: (speaking with great excitement). Yes, it is here, we have arrived.
It is so black that the entrance to the grotto cannot be distinguished from the rest of the night . . .
There are no stars on this side . . .
Let us wait until the moon has torn apart this great cloud; it will light up the whole grotto and then we can enter without danger.
There are dangerous places and the path is very narrow, between two lakes of which they have not found the bottom.
I had not thought of bringing a torch or a lantern, but I think that the light of heaven will suffice us.
You have penetrated into this grotto?

MELISANDE: No . . .

PELLÉAS: Let us enter . . .
You must be able to describe the place where you lost the ring, if he questions you.
It is very large and very beautiful.
It is full of blue darkness.
When one lights a little lamp, it is as if the vault were covered with stars, like the heavens.
Give me your hand, do not tremble, do not tremble so.
There is no danger: we will stop at the moment when we longer see the light of the sea . . .

mer . . .
Est-ce le bruit de la grotte qui vous effraie?
Entendez-vous la mer derrière nous?
—Elle ne semble pas heureuse cette nuit . . .
Ah! voici la clarté!
(La lune éclaire largement l'entrée et une partie des ténèbres de la grotte; et l'on apercoit, à une certaine profondeur, trois vieux pauvres à cheveux blancs, assis côte à côte, se soutenant l'un à l'autre, et endormis contre un quartier de roc.)

MÉLISANDE: Ah!

PELLÉAS: Qu'y a-t-il?

MÉLISANDE: Il y a . . . Il y a . . .
(Elle montre les trois pauvres.)

PELLÉAS: Oui, oui; je les ai vus aussi . . .

MÉLISANDE: Allons-nous-en! . . .
Allons-nous-en! . . .

PELLÉAS: Ce sont trois vieux pauvres qui se sont endormis . . .
Pourquoi sont-ils venus dormir ici? . . .
Il y aura une famine dans le pays.

MÉLISANDE: Allons-nous-en! . . .
Venez . . .
Allons-nous-en! . . .

PELLÉAS: Prenez garde, ne parlez pas si fort . . .
Ne les éveillons pas . . .
Ils dorment encore profondement . . .
Venez.

MÉLISANDE: Laissez-moi; je préfère marcher seule . . .

PELLÉAS: Nous reviendrons un autre jour . . .
(Ils sortent.)

■ ACTE III

SCENE I

(Une des tours du château.—Un chemin de ronde passe sous une fenêtre de la tour.)

MÉLISANDE: (à la fenêtre, pendant qu'elle peigne ses cheveux dénoués) Mes longs cheveux descendent jusqu'au seuil de la tour!
Mes cheveux vous attendent tout le long de la tour!
Et tout le long du jour!
Et tout le long du jour.
Saint Daniel et Saint Michel,
Saint Michel et Saint Raphaël,

Is it the noise of the grotto that frightens you?
Do you hear the sea behind us?
It does not seem happy tonight . . .
Ah! here comes the light.
(The moon clearly illuminates the entrance and a part of the darkness of the grotto; and one perceives, at a certain depth, three old, poor, men with white hair, seated side by side, supporting each other and asleep against a boulder.)

MELISANDE: Ah!

PELLÉAS: What is it?

MELISANDE: It is . . . it is . . .
(She points at the three poor men.)

PELLÉAS: Yes, yes; I saw them also . . .

MELISANDE: Let us go!
Let us go! . . .

PELLÉAS: It is three old poor men who have fallen asleep
Why have they come to sleep here?
There will be a famine in the country.

MELISANDE: Let us go . . .
Come . . .
Let us go! . . .

PELLÉAS: Take care, do not speak so loud . . .
Let us not awaken them . . .
They still sleep profoundly . . .
Come.

MELISANDE: Let me be; I prefer to walk alone . . .

PELLÉAS: We will return another day . . .
(They go out.)

■ ACT III

SCENE I

(One of the towers of the Castle.—A watchman's path passes under one of the windows of the tower.)

MELISANDE: (at the window combing her unbound hair) My long, long hair it reaches to the foot of the tower!
My hair is waiting for you down the tower all the way!
And waiting all the day!
And waiting all the day!
Saint Daniel and Saint Michel,
Saint Michel and Saint Raphael,

Je suis née un Dimanche! Un Dimanche à midi! (Entre Pelléas par le chemin de ronde)	I was born on a Sunday! On a Sunday at noon! (Pelléas enters by the path)
PELLÉAS: Holà! Holà! ho!	PELLÉAS: Hey ho! Hey ho! there!
MÉLISANDE: Qui est là?	MELISANDE: Who is there?
PELLÉAS: Moi, moi, et moi! . . . Que fais-tu là à la fenêtre en chantant comme un oiseau qui n'est pas d'ici?	PELĹAS: I, I and I! . . . What are you doing up at the window, singing so like a bird that comes from afar?
MÉLISANDE: J'arrange mes cheveux pour la nuit . . .	MELISANDE: I'm arranging my hair for the night.
PELLÉAS: C'est là ce que je vois sur le mur! . . . Je croyais que c'était un rayon de lumière . . .	PELLÉAS: Is that what I see there on the wall? . . . Why, I thought you had a light there in the window.
MÉLISANDE: J'ai ouvert la fenêtre. Il fait trop chaud dans la tour, il fait beau cette nuit.	MELISANDE: I have opened the window. It was too warm in the tower; it is lovely tonight.
PELLÉAS: Il y a d'innombrables étoiles; je n'en ai jamais autant vu que ce soir; . . . mais la lune est encore sur la mer . . . Ne reste pas dans l'ombre, Mélisande, penche-toi un peu, que je voie tes cheveux dénoués. (Mélisande se penche à la fenêtre.)	PELLÉAS: There's no end to the stars that are shining; I never saw so many of them before; . . . but the moon is still over the sea . . . Keep not within the shadow, Mélisande, but bend down more; let me look at your hair all unbound. (Mélisande leans out of the window.)
MÉLISANDE: Je suis affreuse ainsi.	MELISANDE: I'm very ugly so.
PELLÉAS: Oh! Mélisande! . . . oh! tu se belle! . . . tu es belle ainsi! . . . penche-toi! penche-toi! . . . laisse-moi venir plus près de toi . . .	PELLÉAS: Oh! oh! Mélisande! . . . oh! you are lovely . . . you are lovely so! . . . But lean out! but lean out, so that I'll not be so far away.
MÉLISANDE: Je ne puis pas venir plus prés de toi . . . je me penche tant que je peux . . .	MELAISANDE: This is as near to you as I can come . . . I'm leaning as far as I can.
PELLÉAS: Je ne puis pas monter plus haut . . . donne-moi du moins ta main ce soir . . . avant que je m'en aille . . . Je pars demain . . .	PELLÉAS: And I can come no higher up . . . Let me touch your hand at least tonight . . . before I go away . . . I leave in the morning.
MÉLISANDE: Non, non, non . . .	MELISANDE: No, no, no. . .
PELLÉAS: Si, si; je pars, je partirai demain . . . donne-moi ta main, ta main, ta petite main sur mes lèvres . . .	PELLÉAS: Yes, yes, I must; tomorrow I must go . . . Let me have your hand, your hand, put your little hand on my lips now—
MÉLISANDE: Je vois une rose dans les ténèbles . . .	MELISANDE: I see a rose in the darkness . . .
PELLÉAS: Où donc? . . . Je ne vois que les branches du saule qui dépassent le mur . . .	PELLÉAS: Where? I only see the branches of the willow which surmount the wall . . .
MÉLISANDE: Plus bas, plus bas, dans le jardin; là-bas, dans le vert sombre.	MELISANDE: Lower down, lower down, in the garden; over there in the dark greenery.
PELLÉAS: Ce n'est pas une rose . . . J'irai voir tout à l'heure, mais donne-moi ta main d'abord; d'abord ta main . . .	PELLÉAS: It is not a rose. I will go and see by and bye, but give me your hand first; first your hand . . .
MÉLISANDE: Voilà, voilà; . . . je ne puis me pencher davantage . . .	MELISANDE: There, there; . . . I cannot bend over farther . . .
PELLÉAS: Mes lèvres ne peuvent pas atteindre ta main . . .	PELLÉAS: My lips cannot reach your hand . . .
MÉLISANDE: Je ne puis pas me pencher davantage . . . Je suis sur le point de tomber . . . —Oh! oh! mes cheveux descendent de la tour! . . . (Sa chevelure se révulse tout à coup, tandis qu'elle se penche ainsi et inonde Pelléas).	MELISANDE: I cannot bend over farther . . . I am on the point of falling. Oh, oh, my hair descends from the tower! . . . (Her hair suddenly revolutes, as she bends over thus, and covers Pelléas.)
PELLÉAS: Oh! oh! qu'est-ce que c'est? . . . Tes cheveux, tes cheveux descendent vers moi! . . . Toute ta chevelure, Mélisande, toute ta chevelure est tombée de la tour! . . . Je les tiens dans les mains, je les tiens dans ma bouche . . . Je les tiens dans les bras, je les mets autour de mon cou . . . Je n'ouvrirai plus les mains cette nuit . . .	PELLÉAS: Oh, oh, what is it? . . . Your hair, your hair comes down toward me! . . . All you hair, Melisande, all your hair is fallen from the tower . . . I hold it in my hands, I hold it in my mouth . . . I hold it in my arms, and I put it around my neck. I shall not open my hands again tonight . . .
MÉLISANDE: Laisse-moi! laisse-moi! . . . Tu vas me faire tomber! . . .	MELISANDE: Let me go, let me go! You will make me fall! . . .
PELLÉAS: Non, non, non; . . . je n'ai jamais vu de cheveux comme les tiens, Mélisande! . . . Vois, vois, vois, ils viennent de si haut et ils m'inondent jusqu'au coeur . . . Ils m'indondent encore jusqu'aux genoux . . . Et ils sont doux, ils sont doux comme s'ils tombaient du ciel! . . . Je ne vois plus le ciel à travers tes cheveux. Tu vois, tu vois, mes mains ne peuvent plus les tenir . . . Il y en a jusque sur les branches du saule . . . Ils vivent comme des oiseaux dans mes mains . . . et ils m'aiment, ils m'aiment mille fois mieux que toi!	PELLÉAS: No, no, no; I have never seen hair like yours, Melisande . . . Look, look, look, it comes from so high and it inundates me to the very heart. It inundates me more, even to the knees . . . It is so soft, it is soft as if it fell from heaven! I no longer see the sky through your hair. You see, you see, my hands can no longer hold it. It even reaches to the branches of the willow. It lives as a bird in my hands, and it loves me, it loves me a thousand times more than you!
MÉLISANDE: Liasse-moi . . . laisse-moi . . . quelqu'un pourait venir . . .	MELISANDE: Let me go . . . let me go . . . someone might come . . .
PELLÉAS: Non, non, non; je ne te délivre pas cette nuit . . . Tu es ma prisonnière cette nuit; toute la nuit, tout la nuit . . .	PELLÉAS: No, no, no; I will not deliver you tonight . . . You are my prisoner this night; all the night, all the night.
MÉLISANDE: Pelléas! Pelléas!	MELISANDE: Pelléas! Pelléas!
PELLÉAS: Tu ne t'en iras plus . . . Je les noue, je les noue aux branches du saule, tes cheveux. Je ne souffre plus au milieu de tes cheveux. Tu entends mes baisers le long de tes cheveux? Ils montent le long de tes cheveux. Il faut que chacun t'en apporte. Tu vois, tu vois, je puis ouvrir les mains . . . Tu vois, j'ai les mains libres et tu ne peux m'abandonner . . . (Des colombes sortent de la tour et volent autour d'eux dans la nuit.)	PELLÉAS: You shall not go away any more . . . I tie it, I tie it to the branches of the willow, your hair. I suffer no longer in the midst of your hair. You hear my kisses through the length of your hair. They go up through your hair. Each particular one must carry some. You see, you see, I can open my hands . . . You see, I have my hands free and you cannot abandon me . . . (Two doves come out of the tower and fly about them in the night.)

MÉLISANDE: Oh! oh! tu m'as fait mal . . .
Qu'y a-t-il, Pelléas?—
Qu'est-ce qui vole autour de moi?

PELLÉAS: Ce sont les colombes qui sortent de la tour . . .
Je les ai effrayées; elles s'envolent.

MÉLISANDE: Ce sont mes colombes, Pelléas.—
Allons-nous en, laisse-moi; elles ne reviendraient plus . . .

PELLÉAS: Pourquoi ne reviendraient-elles plus?

MÉLISANDE: Elles se perdront dans l'obscurité . . .
Laisse-moi relever la tête . . .
J'entends un bruit de pas . . .
Laisse-moi!—
C'est Golaud! . . .
Je crois que c'est Golaud! . . .
Il nous a entendus . . .

PELLÉAS: Attends!
Attends! . . .
Tes cheveux sont autour des branches . . .
Ils se sont accrochés dans l'obscurité.
Attends, attends! . . .
Il fait noir . . .
(Entre Golaud par le chemin de ronde.)

GOLAUD: Que faites-vous ici?

PELLÉAS: Ce que ja fais ici? . . .
Je . . .

GOLAUD: Vous êtes des enfants . . .
Mélisande, ne te penche pas ainsi à la fenêtre, tu vas tomber . . .
Vous ne savez pas qu'il est tard?—
Il est près de minuit.—
Ne jouez pas ainsi dans l'obscurité.—
Vous êtes des enfants . . .
(Riandt nerveusement.)
Quels enfants!
Quels enfants! . . .
(Il sort avec Pelléas.)

SCENE II.

(Les souterraines du château. Entrant Golaud et Pelléas0.)

GOLAUD: Prenez garde: par ici, par ici.—
Vous n'avez jamais pénétré dans ces souterrains?

PELLÉAS: Si, une fois, dans le temps; mais il y a longtemps.

GOLAUD: Eh bien, voici l'eau stagnante dont je vous parlais . . .
Sentez-vous l'odeur de mort qui monte!—
Allons jusqu'au bout de ce rocher qui surplombe et penchez-vous un peu.
Elle viendra vous frappe au visage.
Penchez-vous; n'ayez pas peur . . . je vous tiendrai . . . donnez-moi . . . non, non, pas la main . . . elle pourrait glisser . . . le bras . . .
Voyez-vous le gouffre? . . .
Pelléas? Pelléas?

PELLÉAS: Oui, je crois que je vois le fond du gouffre . . . Est-ce la lumière qui tremble ainsi? . . .
Vous . . .

GOLAUD: Oui; c'est la lanterne . . .
Voyez, je l'agitais pour éclairer les parois.

PELLÉAS: J'étouffe ici . . . sortons.

GOLAUD: Oui, sortons . . .
(Ils sortent en silence.)

SCENE III.

(Une terrasse au sortir des souterrains.)

PELLÉAS: Ah! je respire enfin!
J'ai cru un instant que j'allais me trouver mal dans ces énormes grottes; j'ai été sur le point de tomber . . .
Il y a là un air humide et lourd comme un rosée de plomb, et des ténèbres épaisses comme une pâte empoisonnée.
Et maintenant tout l'air de toute la mer! . . .
Il y a un vent frais, voyez; frais comme un feuille qui vient de s'ouvrir, sur les petites lames vertes.
Tiens!
On vient d'arroser les fleurs au pied de la terrasse et l'odeur de la verdure et des rose mouillées monte jusqu-ici . . .
Ild doit être près de midi, elles sont déjà dans l'ombre de la tour.
Il est midi; j'entends sonner les cloches et les enfants descendent sur la plage pour se baigner.
Tiens, voilà notre mère et Mélisande à une fenêtre de la tour.

GOLAUD: Oui, elles se sont réfugiées du côté de l'ombre.
A propos de Mélisande, j'ai entendu ce qui s'est passé et ce qui s'est dit hier au soir.
Je le sais bien, ce sont là jeux d'enfant; mais il ne faut pas que cela se répète.
Elle est très délicate et il faut qu'on la ménage, d'autant plus qu'elle sera peut-être bientôt mère et la moindre émotion pourrait amener un malheur.
Ce n'est pas la première fois que je remarque qu'il pourrait y avoir quelque chose entre vous.
Vous êtes plus âgé qu'elle; il suffira de vous l'avoir dit . . .
Evitez-la autant que possible; mais sans affectation d'ailleurs; sans affectation.
(Ils sortent.)

MELISANDE: Oh, oh! you hurt me.
What is it, Pelléas?
What is it that flies around me?

PELLÉAS: It is the doves that come out of the tower.
I frightened them.
They fly away.

MELISANDE: They are my doves, Pelléas.
Let us go, leave me; they would not return . . .

PELLÉAS: Why would they not return?

MELISANDE: They will be lost in the obscurity . . .
Let me lift my head . . .
I hear a noise of footsteps . . .
Leave me!
It is Golaud . . .
I think it is Golaud . . .
He has heard us . . .

PELLÉAS: Wait, wait! . . .
Your hair is around the branches . . .
It has got caught in the darkness.
Wait, wait! . . .
It is black . . .
(Golaud enters by the watch path)

GOLAUD: What are you doing here?

PELLÉAS: What I am doing here? . . .
I . . .

GOLAUD: You are like a child
Melisande, do not lean that way from the window, you will fall . . .
You do not know it is late?
It is nearly midnight.
Do not play thus in the dark.
You are like a child
(Laughing nervously.)
What children, what children! . . .
(He goes out with Pelléas.)

SCENE II.

(The Vaults of the Castle. Enter Golaud and Pelléas.)

GOLAUD: Take care: this way, this way.
You have never been in these vaults?

PELLÉAS: Yes, once, a while ago; but it is a long time.

GOLAUD: Well, then, here is the stagnant water of which I spoke to you . . .
Do you smell the odor of death that rises?
Let us go to the end of this rock that overlooks it and lean over a little.
It will come and strike you in the face.
Lean over; do not be afraid . . . I will hold you . . . give me . . . no, no, not your hand . . . it might slip . . . your arm . . .
Do you see the abyss?
Pelléas, Pelléas? . . .

PELLÉAS: Yes, I think I see the bottom of the abyss . . .
Is it the light that trembles in that way? . . .
You . . .

GOLAUD: Yes; it is the lantern . . .
See, I was swinging it to light up the walls.

PELLÉAS: I suffocate here . . .
Let us go out.

GOLAUD: Yes, let us go out . . .
(They leave in silence.)

SCENE III.

(A Terrace at the exit of the Vaults.)

PELLÉAS: Ah, at last I breath!
I believed for a moment that I was going to be faint in these enormous vaults; I was on the point of falling . . .
There is there a damp and heavy atmosphere like a dew of lead and a thick darkness like a poisoned paste.
And now all the air of all the sea!
There is a fresh wind, see; fresh as a leaf that has just opened, on the little green blades.
Ah! they have just watered the flowers at the foot of the terrace and the smell of the verdure and of wetted roses rises this far . . .
It must be nearly noon, they are already in the shadow of the tower.
It is noon; I hear the bells ring and the children descend to the shore to bathe.
Ah, there are our mother and Melisande at a window of the tower.

GOLAUD: Yes, they have taken refuge in the shade.
On the subject of Melisande, I heard what took place and what was said last night.
I know it well, those are children's games; but it must not be repeated.
She is very delicate and we must be careful about her, all the more that she may perhaps soon be a mother and that the least emotion might bring about a misfortune.
It is not the first time I notice that there might be something between you.
You are older than she; it will suffice to have told you . . . avoid her as much as possible; but besides, without affectation; without affectation.
(They go out.)

SCENE IV.	SCENE IV.
(Devant le château. Entrent Golaud et le petit Yniold.)	(In front of the Castle. Enter Golaud and little Yniold.)
GOLAUD: Viens, nous allons nous asseoir ici, Yniold; viens sur mes genoux: nous verrons d'ici ce qui se passe dans la forêt. Je ne te vois plus du tout depuis quelque temps. Tu m'abandonnes aussi; tu es toujours chez petite-mère . . . Tiens, nous sommes tout juste assis sous les fenêtres de petit mère. —Elle fait peut-être sa prière du soir en ce moment . . . Mais dis-moi, Yniold, elle est souvent avec ton oncle Pelléas, n'est-ce pas?	GOLAUD: Come, we will seat ourselves here, Yniold; come on my knees: we can see from here what goes on in the forest. I don't see you at all for some time past. You abandon me also. You are always with little-mother. Ah, here we are just exactly seated under the windows of little-mother. She is, perhaps, saying her evening prayer at this moment . . . But tell me. Yniold, she is often with your uncle Pelléas, is she not?
YNIOLD: Oui, oui; toujours, petit-père; quand vous n'êtes pas là.	YNIOLD: Yes, yes; always, little-father; when you are not there.
GOLAUD: Ah! Tiens, quelqu'un passe avec une lanterne dans le jardin.— Mais on m'a dit qu'ils ne s'aimaient pas . . . Il paraît qu'ils se querellent souvent . . . non? Est-ce vrai?	GOLAUD: Ah! hallo, someone passing with a lantern in the garden. But I was told that they did not like each other . . . It seems that they often quarrel . . . No? Is it true?
YNIOLD: Oui, c'est vrai.	YNIOLD: Yes, it is true.
GOLAUD: Oui?— Ah! ah!— Mais à propos de quoi se querellent-ils?	GOLAUD: Yes? Ah, ha! But what do they quarrel about?
YNIOLD: A propos de la porte.	YNIOLD: About the door.
GOLAUD: Comment? à propos de la porte?— Qu'est-ce que tu racontes là?— Mais voyons, explique-toi; pourquoi se querellent-ils à propos de la porte?	GOLAUD: How, now? about the door? What are you telling there? But come, explain yourself. Why do they quarrel about the door?
YNIOLD: Parce qu'elle ne peut pas être ouverte.	YNIOLD: Because it cannot be opened.
GOLAUD: Qui ne veut pas qu'elle soit ouverte?— Voyons, pourquoi se querellent-ils?	GOLAUD: Who doesn't want it to be opened? Let us see, why do they quarrel?
YNIOLD: Je ne sais pas, petit-père, à propos de la lumière.	YNIOLD: I do not know, little-father, because of the light.
GOLAUD: Je ne te parle pas de la lumière: je te parle de la porte . . . Ne mets pas ainsi la main dans la bouche . . . voyons . . .	GOLAUD: I am not talking of the light: I am talking to you of the door . . . Do not put your hand that way in your mouth . . . come . . .
YNIOLD: Petit-père! petit-père! . . . Je ne le ferai plus . . . (Il pleure.)	YNIOLD: Little father, little-father . . . I will not do it again. (He cries.)
GOLAUD: Voyons; pourquoi pleures-tu? Qu'est-il arrivé?	GOLAUD: Come; why do you cry? What has happened?
YNIOLD: Oh! oh! petite-père, vous m'avez fait mal . . .	YNIOLD: Oh, oh, little-father, you hurt me . . .
GOLAUD: Je t'ai fait mal?— Où t'ai-je fait mal! C'est sans le vouloir . . .	GOLAUD: I hurt you? Where did I hurt you? It was without intending to . . .
YNIOLD: Ici, à mon petit bras . . .	YNIOLD: Here, on my little arm.
GOLAUD: C'est sans le vouloir; voyons, ne pleure plus, je te donnerai quelque chose demain . . .	GOLAUD: I did not mean it; come, do not cry any more, I will give you something tomorrow . . .
YNIOLD: Quoi, petit-père?	YNIOLD: What, little-father?
GOLAUD: Un carquois et des flèches; mais dis-moi ce que tu sais de la porte.	GOLAUD: A quiver and some arrows; but tell me what you know about the door.
YNIOLD: De grandes flèches?	YNIOLD: Great big arrows?
GOLAUD: Oui, de très grandes flèches.— Mais pourquoi ne veulent-ils pas que la porte soit ouverte?— Voyons, réponds-moi à la fin!— non, non; n'ouvre pas la bouche pour pleurer. Je ne suis pas fâche. De quoi parlent-ils quand ils osnt ensemble?	GOLAUD: Yes, very large arrows. But why did they not wish that the door should be open? Come, are you going to end by answering?—no, no, do not open your mouth to cry. I am not angry. What do they talk about when they are together?
YNIOLD: Pelléas et petite-mère?	YNIOLD: Pelléas and little-mother?
GOLAUD: Oui; de quoi parlent-ils?	GOLAUD: Yes; what do they talk about?
YNIOLD: De moi; toujours de moi.	YNIOLD: Of me; always of me.
GOLAUD: Et que disent-ils de toi?	GOLAUD: And what do they say of you?
YNIOLD: Ils disent que je serai très grand	YNIOLD: They say that I will be very big.
GOLAUD: Ah! misère de ma vie! . . . je suis ici comme un aveugle qui cherche son trésor au fond de l'océan! . . . Je suis ici comme un nouveau-né perdu dans la forêt et vous . . . Mais voyons, Yniold, j'étais distrait; nous allons causer sérieusement. Pelléas et petite-mère ne parlent-ils jamais de moi quand je ne suis pas là?	GOLAUD: Ah! misery of my life! I am here like a blind man who seeks his treasure at the bottom of the ocean I am here like one newly born, lost in the forest and you . . . But, come, Yniold, I was absent minded; we will talk seriously. Do Pelléas and little mother never speak of me when I am not there?
YNIOLD: Si, si, petit-père.	YNIOLD: Yes, yes, little-father.
GOLAUD: Ah! . . . Et que disent-ils de moi?	GOLAUD: And . . . What do they say of me?
YNIOLD: Ils disent que je deviendrai aussi grand que vous.	YNIOLD: They say that I will become as big as you.
GOLAUD: Tu es toujours près d'eux?	GOLAUD: You are always near them?
YNIOLD: Oui, oui; toujours, petit-père.	YNIOLD: Yes, yes; always, little-father.
GOLAUD: Ils ne te disent jamais d'aller jouer ailleurs?	GOLAUD: They never tell you to go and play elsewhere?
YNIOLD: Non, petit-père; ils ont peur quand je ne suis pas là.	YNIOLD: No, little-father; they are afraid when I am not there.
GOLAUD: Ils ont peur? . . . Comment vois-tu qu'ils ont peur?	GOLAUD: They are afraid? . . . By what do you see that they are afraid?
YNIOLD: Ils pleurent toujours dans l'obscurité.	YNIOLD: They always weep in the darkness.
GOLAUD: Ah! ah! . . .	GOLAUD: Ah, ah!
YNIOLD: Cela fait pleurer aussi . . .	YNIOLD: That makes one weep also . . .
GOLAUD: Oui, oui . . .	GOLAUD: Yes, yes . . .
YNIOLD: Elle est pâle, petit-père.	YNIOLD: She is pale, little-father.
GOLAUD: Ah! ah! . . . patience, mon Dieu, patience . . .	GOLAUD: Ah, ah! . . . patience, my God, patience . . .
YNIOLD: Quoi, petit-père?	YNIOLD: What, little-father?

GOLAUD: Rien, rien, mon enfant.—
J'ai vu passer un loup dans la forêt.—
Ils s'embrassent quelquefois?—
Non?

YNIOLD: Ils s'embrassent, petit-père?—
Non, non.—
Ah! si, petit-père, si; une fois . . . une fois qu'il pleuvait . . .

GOLAUD: Ils se sont embrassés?—
Mais comment, comment se sont-ils embrassés?

YNIOLD: Comme ca, petit-père, comme ca! . . .
(Il lui donne un baiser sur la bouche; riant.)
Ah! ah! votre barbe, petit-père! . . .
Elle pique! elle pique!
Elle devient toute grise, petit-père, et vos cheveux aussi; tout gris, tout gris . . .
(La fenêtre sous laquelle ils sont assis s'éclaire en ce moment, et sa clarté vient tomber sur eux.)
Ah! ah! petite-mère a allumé la lampe.
Il fait clair, petit-père; il fait clair.

GOLAUD: Oui; il commence à faire clair . . .

YNIOLD: Allons-y aussi, petit-père.

GOLAUD: Où veux-tu aller?

YNIOLD: Où il fait clair, petit-père.

GOLAUD: Non, non, mon enfant: restons encore un peu dans l'ombre . . . on ne sait pas, on ne sait pas encore . . .
Je crois que Pelléas est fou . . .

YNIOLD: Non, petit-père, il n'est pas fou, mais il est très bon.

GOLAUD: Veux-tu voir petite-mère?

YNIOLD: Oui, oui; je veux la voir!

GOLAUD: Ne fais pas de bruit; je vais te hisser jusqu'a la fenêtre.
Elle est trop haute pour moi, bien que je sois si grand . . .
(Ils soulève l'enfant.)
Ne fais pas le moindre bruit; petite-mère aurait terriblement peur . . .
La vois-tu?
—Est-elle dans la chambre?

YNIOLD: Oui . . .
Oh! il fait clair!

GOLAUD: Elle est seule?

YNIOLD: Oui . . . non, non; mon oncle Pelléas y est aussi.

GOLAUD: Lui! . . .

YNIOLD: Ah! ah! petit-père! vous m'avez fait mal! . . .

GOLAUD: Nothing, nothing, my child.
I saw a wolf pass in the forest.
They embrace each other sometimes
No?

YNIOLD: They embrace each other, little father?—
No, No.—
Ah, yes; once . . . once that it was raining . . .

GOLAUD: They embraced each other?
But how, how did they embrace each other?—

YNIOLD: This way, little-father, this way.
(He gives him a kiss on the mouth; laughing.)
Ah, ha, your beard, little father!
It prickles, it prickles.
It is becoming all grey, little-father, and your hair also; all grey, all grey . . .
(The window, under which they sit, lights up at this moment and its reflection falls on them.)
Ah, ah, little mother has lighted the lamp.
It is light, little-father; it is light.

GOLAUD: Yes; it begins to be light . . .

YNIOLD: Let us go there also, little-father . . .

GOLAUD: Where would you go?

YNIOLD: Where it is light, little-father.

GOLAUD: No, no, my child; let us remain a little in the shadow . . . one does not know, one does not yet know . . . I think that Pelléas is mad.

YNIOLD: No, little-father, he is not mad, but he is very good.

GOLAUD: Do you want to see little-mother?

YNIOLD: Yes, yes; I want to see her.

GOLAUD: Do not make a noise; I am about to hoist you up to the window.
It is too high for me, though I am tall . . .
(He lifts the child.)
Do not make the least noise; little-mother would be terribly frightened . . .
Do you see her?
Is she in the room?

YNIOLD: Yes . . . oh, it is light.

GOLAUD: She is alone?

YNIOLD: Yes . . . no, no, my uncle Pelléas is there too.

GOLAUD: He! . . .

YNIOLD: Ah, ah! little-father, you hurt me . . .

GOLAUD: Ce n'est rien; tais-toi; je ne le ferai plus; regarde, regarde, Yniold! . . .
J'ai trébuché; parle plus bas.
Que font-ils?—

YNIOLD: Ils ne font rien, petit-père.

GOLAUD: Est-ce qu'ils parlent?

YNIOLD: Non petit-père; ils ne parlent pas.

GOLAUD: Mais qu font-ils?

YNIOLD: Ils regardent la lumière.

GOLAUD: Tous les deux?

YNIOLD: Oui, petit-père.

GOLAUD: Ils ne disent rien?

YNIOLD: Non, petit-père; ils ne ferment pas les yeux.

GOLAUD: Ils ne s'approchent pas l'un de l'autre?

YNIOLD: Non, petit-père; ils ne bougent pas, ils ne ferment jamais les yeux . . .
J'ai terriblement peur . . .

GOLAUD: De quoi donc as-tu peur?
Regarde!
Regarde!

YNIOLD: Petit-père, laissez-moi descendre!

GOLAUD: Regarde!

YNIOLD: Oh!
je vais crier, petit-père!
Laissez-moi descendre! laissez-moi descendre!

GOLAUD: Viens! nous allons voir ce qui est arrivé.
(Ils sortent.)

ACTE IV.

SCENE I.

(Un corridor dans le château.)

PELLÉAS: Où vas-tu?
Il faut que je te parle ce soir.
Te verrai-je?

MÉLISANDE: Oui.

PELLÉAS: Je sors de la chambre de mon père.
Il va mieux.
Le médecin nous a dit qu'il était sauvé.
Il m'a reconnu.
Il m'a pris la main, et il m'a dit de cet air étrange qu'il a depuis qu'il est malade:
"Est-ce toi, Pelléas?
Tiens, je ne l'avais jamais remarqué, mais tu as le visage grave et amical de ceux qui ne vivront pas longtemps.
Il faut voyager; il faut voyager . . ."
C'est étrange; je vais lui obéir . . .
Ma mère l'écoutait et pleurait de joie.
Tu ne t'en es pas apercue?

GOLAUD: It is nothing; be quiet; I will not do it again; watch, watch, Yniold!
I stumbled; speak lower.
What are they doing?

YNIOLD: They are doing nothing, little-father.

GOLAUD: Do they speak?

YNIOLD: No, little, father; they do not speak.

GOLAUD: But what are they doing?

YNIOLD: They look at the light.

GOLAUD: Both of them?

YNIOLD: Yes, little-father.

GOLAUD: They say nothing?

YNIOLD: No, little-father; they do not close their eyes.

GOLAUD: They do not come near one another?

YNIOLD: No, little-father; they do not stir, they never close their eyes . . .
I am terribly afraid . . .

GOLAUD: Of what are you afraid?
Look, look!

YNIOLD: Little-father, let me down.

GOLAUD: Look!

YNIOLD: Oh!
I am going to cry out, little-father.
Let me down, let me down!

GOLAUD: Come! we will go and see what has happened.
(They go out.)

ACT IV.

SCENE I

(A passage way in the castle.)

PELLÉAS: Where go you?
I must speak to you this evening.
Shall I see you?

MELISANDE: Yes.

PELLÉAS: I am just leaving my father's room.
He is better.
The physician has told us that he is safe.
He knew me.
He took my hand and said to me with that strange expression he has assumed since he is ill:
"Is it you, Pelléas?
Ah, I had never remarked it, but you have the grave and friendly face of those who will not live long.
You must travel; you must travel . . ."
It is strange; I am about to obey him . . .
My mother listened to him and wept with joy.
You have not perceived it?

Toute la maison semble déjà revivre, on entend respirer, on entend marcher . . . Ecoute, j'entends parler derrière cette porte. Vite, vite, réponds vite, où te verrai-je?	The whole house seems to revive already, one hears people breathe, one hears them walk Listen, I hear talking behind this door. Quick, quick, answer quickly, where will I see you?
MÉLISANDE: Où veux-tu?	MELISANDE: Where would you?
PELLÉAS: Dans le parc: près de la fontaine des aveugles? Veux-tu? Viendras-tu?	PELLÉAS: In the park; near the fountain of the blind? Will you, will you come?
MÉLISANDE: Oui.	MELISANDE: Yes .
PELLÉAS: Ce sera le dernier soir. Je vais voyager comme mon père l'a dit. Tu ne me verras plus . . .	PELLÉAS: It will be the last evening. I am about to travel as my father said. You will see me no more . . .
MÉLISANDE: Ne dis pas cela, Pelléas . . . Je te verrai toujours; je te regarderai toujours . . .	MELISANDE: Do not say that, Pelléas . . . I will see you always; I will look on you always . . .
PELLÉAS: Tu auras beau regarder . . . je serai si loin que tu ne pourras plus me voir.	PELLÉAS: You will look in vain . . . I shall be so far that you will be unable to see me more.
MÉLISANDE: Qu'est-il arrivé, Pelléas? Je ne comprends plus ce que tu dis . . .	MELISANDE: What has happened, Pelléas? I no longer understand what you say . . .
PELLÉAS: Va-t-en, va-t-en, séparons-nous. J'entends parler derrière cette porte. (Ils sortent séparément.) (Puis Arkel entre accompagné de Mélisande.)	PELLÉAS: Go away, go away. Let us separate. I hear talking behind this door. (They go out separately.) (then Arkel enters accompanied by Melisande.)
ARKEL: Maintenant que le père de Pelléas est sauvé, et que la maladie, la vieille servante de la mort, a quitté le château, un peu de joie et une peu de soleil vont enfin rentrer dans la maison . . . Il était temps!— Car depuis ta venue, on n'a vécu ici qu'en chuchotant autour d'une chambre fermée . . . Et vraiment, j'avais pitié de toi, Mélisande . . . Je t'observais, tu étais là, insouciante peut-être, mais avec l'air étrange et égaré de quelqu'un qui attendrait toujours un grand malheur, au soleil, dans un beau jardin . . . Je ne puis pas expliquer . . . Mais j'étais triste de te voir ainsi; car tu es trop jeune et trop belle pour vivre déjà, jour et nuit, sous l'haleine de la mort . . . Mais à présent tout cela va changer. A mon age, —et c'est peut-être là le fruit le plus sûr de ma vie,—à mon âge, j'ai acquis je ne sais quelle foi à la fidélité des événements, et j'ai toujours vu que tout être jeune et beau, créait autour de lui des événements jeunes, beaux et heureux . . . Et c'est toi, maintenant, qui vas ouvrir la porte à l'ère nouvelle que j'entre-vois . . .	ARKEL: Now that the father of Pelléas is saved, and that sickness, the old maidservant of death, has left the Castle, a little joy and a little sun are at last to re-enter the house . . . It was time! For since your coming, we have lived here only in whispering around a closed room . . . And really I pitied you, Melisande . . . I observed you, you were there, careless, perhaps, but with the strange and wild air of someone who awaited always a great misfortune, by sunlight, in a beautiful garden . . . I cannot explain . . . But I was sad to see you thus: for you are too young and too handsome to live thus, day and night, under the breath of death . . . But at present all will be changed. At my age.,—and there, perhaps, is the surest fruitage of my life,—at my age, I have acquired, I know not what faith in the truth of events, and I have always seen that every being, young and handsome, created about itself events that were young, handsome and happy . . . And it is you, now, who will open the door to the new era that I foresee . . .
Viens ici; pourquoi restes-tu là sans répondre et sans lever les yeux?— Je ne t'ai embrassée qu'une seule fois jusqu'ici, le jour de ta venue; et cependant, les vieillards ont besoin de toucher quelquefois de leurs lèvres, le front d'une femme ou la joue d'un enfant, pour croire encore à la fraîcheur de la vie et éloigner un moment les menaces de la mort. As-tu peur de mes vieilles lèvres? Comme j'avais pitié de toi ces mois-ci! . . .	Come here: why do you remain there without answering and without lifting your eyes? I have kissed you thus far only once, the day you came; and yet, old men want to touch sometimes with their lips, the forehead of a woman or the cheek of a child, to still believe in the freshness of life and to put farther away the threat of death. Are you afraid of my old lips? How I pitied you these past months . . .
MÉLISANDE: Grand-père, je n'étais pas malheureuse . . .	MELISANDE: Grandfather. I was not unhappy . . .
ARKEL: Laisse-moi te regarder ainsi, de tout près, un moment . . . on a tant besoin de beauté aux côtés de la mort . . . (Entre Golaud.)	ARKEL: Let me look at you, quite near, a moment . . . one has so much need of beauty by the side of death . . . (Enter Golaud.)
GOLAUD: Pelléas part ce soir.	GOLAUD: Pelléas goes away tonight.
ARKEL: Tu as du sang sur le front.— Qu'as-tu fait?	ARKEL: You have blood on your forehead. What have you done?
GOLAUD: Rien, rien . . . j'ai passé au travers d'une haie d'épines.	GOLAUD: Nothing, nothing . . . I passed through a hedge of thorns.
MÉLISANDE: Baissez un peu la tête, seigneur . . . Je vais essuyer votre front . . .	MELISANDE: Bend your head a little, lord . . . I will wipe your forehead . . .
GOLAUD: (la repoussant). Je ne veux pas que tu me touches, entend-tu? Va-t'en, va-t'en!— Je ne te parle pas.— Où est mon épée? . . . Je venais chercher mon épée . . .	GOLAUD: (pushing her off). I do not want you to touch me, do you hear? Go away, go away! I do not address you. Where is my sword? I came to get my sword . . .
MÉLISANDE: Ici; sur le prie-Dieu.	MELISANDE: Here; on the praying stall.
GOLAUD: Apporte-là.— (A Arkel.) On vient encore de trouver un paysan mort de faim, le long de la mer. On dirait qu'ils tiennent tous à mourir sous nos yeux.— (A Mélisande.) Eh bien, mon épée?— Pourquoi tremblez-vous ainsi?— Je ne vais pas vous tuer. Je voulais simplement examiner la lame. Je n'emploie pas l'épée à ces usages. Pourquoi m'examinez-vous comme un pauvre?— Je ne viens pas vous demander l'aumône. Vous espérez voir quelque chose dans mes yeux, sans que je voie quelque chose dans les vôtres?— Croyez-vous que je sache quelque chose?— (A Arkel.) Voyez-vous ces grands yeux?— On dirait qu'ils sont fiers d'être riches . . .	GOLAUD: Bring it. (to Arkel.) They have just found the body of a peasant, starved to death, on the seashore. One would think they all wanted to die under our eyes. (to Melisande.) Well, my sword? Why do you tremble thus? I am not going to kill you. I simply wanted to examine the blade. I do not use a sword for these purposes. Why do you examine me like a pauper? I do not come to beg of you. You hope to see something in my eyes without my seeing anything in yours? Do you think that I know anything? (to Arkel.) Do you see these big eyes? One would imagine they were proud to be rich . . .
ARKEL: Je n'y vois qu'une grande innocence . . .	ARKEL: I only see a great innocence . . .

GOLAUD: Une grande innocence! . . .
Ils sont plus grands que l'innocence! . . .
Ils sont plus purs que les yeux d'un agneau . . .
Ils donneraient à Dieu des lecons d'innocence!
Une grande innocence!
Ecoutez-j'en suis si près que je sens la fraîcheur de leurs cils quand ils clignent; et cependant, je suis moins loin des grands secrets de l'autre monde que du plus petit secret de ces yeux! . . .
Une grande innocence! . . .
Plus que de l'innocence!
On dirait que les anges due ciel y célèbrent sans cesse un baptême! . . .
Je le conanis ces yeux!
Je les ai vus à l'oeuvre!
Fermez-les!
Fermez-les! ou je vais les fermer pour longtemps! . . . —
Ne mettez pas ainsi la main à la gorge; je dis une chose très simple . . .
Je n'ai pas d'arrière-pensée . . .
Si j'avais une arrière-pensée, pourquoi ne la dirais-je pas?
Ah! ah!—ne tâchez pas de fuir!—
Ici!—
Donnez-moi cette main!—
Ah! vos mains sont trop chaudes . . .
Allez-vous-en!
Votre chair me dégoûte! . . .
Il ne s'agit plus de fuir à présent!—
(Il la saisit par les cheveux.)—
Vous allez me suivre à genoux!—
A genoux!—
A genoux devant moi!—
Ah! ah! vos longs cheveux servent enfin à quelque chose! . . .
A droite et puis à droite—
Absalon!
Absalon!—
En avant! en arrière!
Jusqu'à terre!
jusqu'à terre! . . .
Vous voyez, vous voyez; je ris déjà comme un vieillard . . .

ARKEL: (accourant). Golaud! . . .

GOLAUD: (affectant un calme soudain). Vous ferez comme il vous plaira, voyez-vous.—
Je n'attache aucune importance à cela.—
Je suis trop vieux; et puis, je ne suis pas un espion.
J'attendrai le hasard; et alors . . .
Oh! alors! . . . simplement parce que c'est l'usage; simplement parce que c'est l'usage . . .
(Il sort.)

ARKEL: Qu'a-t-il donc?—
Il est ivre?

MÉLISANDE: (en larmes). Non, non; mais il ne m'aime plus . . .
Je ne suis pas heureuse! . . .

GOLAUD: A great innocence!
They are bigger than innocence!
They are purer than the eyes of a lamb . . .
They would give God lessens in innocence.
A great innocence!
Listen: I am so near that I feel the freshness of their lashes when they blink; and yet, I am less far from the great secrets of the other world than from the little secret of these eyes! . . .
A great innocence! . . .
More than innocence!
One would think that the angels of heaven were there ceaselssly celebrating a baptism!
I know them, these eyes!
I have seen them at work.
Close them, close them! or I shall close them for a long time . . .
Do not put your hand in that way to your throat; I say a very simple thing . . .
I have no hidden thoughts . . .
If I had a hidden thought, why should I not speak it?
Ah, ah!—do not attempt to fly!
Here!
Give me this hand!
Ah, your hands are too hot . . .
Go away!
Your flesh disgusts me!
It is not, at present, a question of escape . . .
(He seizes her by the hair.)
You must follow me on your knees!
On your knees!
On your knees before me!
Ah, ah, your long hair at last serves some purpose! . . .
To the right and now to the left!
To the left and now to the right!
Absalom!
Absalom!
Front! now back!
Down to the ground! down to the ground . . .
You see, you see, I laugh like an old man . . .

ARKEL: (running forward.) Golaud! . . .

GOLAUD: (affecting a sudden calm.) You will do as you like, do you see.
I do not attach any importance to that.
I am too old; and then, I am not a spy.
I shall await chance; and then . . . oh, then; simply because it is the custom; simply because it is the custom . . .
(He goes out.)

ARKEL: What ails him?
He is drunk.

MELISANDE: No, no; but he loves me no more . . .
I am not happy! . . .

ARKEL: Si j'étais Dieu, j'aurais pitié du coeur des hommes . . .

SCENE II.

(Une terrasse, dans la brume.)
(On apercoit le petit Yniold qui cherche à soulever un quartier de roc.)

YNIOLD: Oh!
Cette pierre est lourde . . . elle est plus lourde que moi.—
Elle est plus lourde que tout le monde.—
Elle est plus lourde que tout.
Je vois ma balle d'or entre le rocher et cette méchante pierre, et je ne puis pas y atteindre . . .
Mon petit bras n'est pas assez long—et cette pierre ne veut pas être soulevée . . .
On dirait qu'elle a des racines dans la terre . . .
(On entend au loin les bêlements d'un troupeau.)
Oh! oh!
J'entends pleurer les moutons.—
Tiens!
Il n'y a plus de soleil!
—Ils arrivent les petits moutons; ils arrivent . . .
Il y en a! . . .
Il y en a! . . .
Ils ont eu peur du noir . . .
Ils se serrent. Ils se serrent!
Ils pleurent . . . et ils vont vite! . . .
Il y en a qui voudraient prendre à droite . . .
Ils voudraient tous aller à droite.
Ils ne peuvent pas! . . .
Le berger leur jette de la terre! . . .
Ah! ah! . . .
Ils vont passer par ici . . .
Je vais les voir de près.—
Comme il y en a! . . .
Maintenant, ils se taisent tous.
Berger?
Pourquoi ne parlent-ils plus?

LE BERGER: (qu'on ne voit pas). Parce que se n'est pas le chemin de l'étable!—

YNIOLD: Où vont-ils?
Berger?
Berger?
Où vont-ils? . . .
Il m'entend plus.
Ils sont déjà trop loin . . .
Ils ne font plus de bruit.—
Ce n'est pas le chemin de l'étable . . .
Où vont-ils dormir cette nuit? . . .
Oh! oh! il fait trop noir . . .
Je vais dire quelque chose à quelqu'un!
(Il sort.)

SCENE III.

(Une fontaine dans le parc.)
(Entre Pelléas.)

ARKEL: Were I God, I would have pity for the hearts of men . . .

SCENE II.

(A terrace, in the gloom. Yniold is seen trying to lift a rock).

YNIOLD: Oh, this stone is heavy . . .
It is heavier than I am.
It is heavier than all the world.
It is heavier than everything.
I see my golden ball between the rock and this naughty stone and I cannot reach it . . .
My little arm is not long enough—and this stone will not be lifted
One would think it had roots in the earth . . .
(The bleating of sheep is heard in the distance.)
Oh, oh!
I hear the sheep cry.
Hallo, there is no more sun!
They come, the little sheep; they come . . . what a lot . . . what a lot!
They are afraid of the dark . . .
They press together . . . they press together!
They cry . . . and they go quickly! . . .
There are some would go to the right . . . they all want to go to the right.
They cannot!
The shepherd throws earth at them!
Ah! ah! . . .
They will pass this way . . .
I will see them near by.
What a lot there are! . . .
Now, they are all quiet.
Shepherd!
Why do they speak no more?

THE SHEPHERD: (who is not seen). Because it is not the way to the stable!—

YNIOLD: Where go they?
Shepherd?
Shepherd?
Where are they going?
He hears me no longer.
They are already too far . . . they make no more noise
It is not the way to the stable . . .
Where will they sleep tonight?
Oh, oh! it is too dark . . .
I will go and say something to somebody!
(He goes out.)

SCENE III.

(A Fountain in the Park. Enter Pelléas).

PELLÉAS: C'est le dernier soir . . . le dernier soir . . . Il faut que tout finisse . . . J'ai joué comme un enfant autour d'une chose que je ne soupconnais pas . . . J'ai joué en rêve autours des pièges de la destinée . . . Qui est-ce qui m'a réveillé tout à coup? Je vais fuir en criant de joie et de douleur comme un aveugle qui fuirait l'incendie de sa maison . . . Je vais lui dire que je vais fuir . . . Il est tard; elle ne vient pas . . . Je ferais mieux de m'en aller sans la revoir . . . Il faut que je la regarde bien cette foisci . . . Il y a des choses que je ne me rappelle plus . . . on dirait, par moment, qu'il y a plus de cent ans que je ne l'ai vue . . . Et je n'ai pas encore regardé son regard . . . Il ne me reste rien si je m'en vais ainsi. Et tous ces souvenirs . . . c'est comme si j'emportais un peu d'eau dans un sac de mousseline . . . Il faut que je la voie une dernière fois, jusqu'au fond de son coeur . . . Il faut que je lui dise tout ce que je n'ai pas dit . . . (Entre Mélisande.)	PELLÉAS: It is the last evening . . . the last evening . . . It is needful that everything end . . . I have played like a child around a thing that I did not suspect . . . I have played in a dream around the traps of destiny . . . Who has awakened me all of a sudden? I shall fly crying with joy and sorrow like a blind man who runs from his house on fire . . . I will tell her that I mean to fly . . . It is late; she does not come . . . I would do better by going away without seeing her . . . I must look at her well this time . . . There are things I no longer remember . . . one would think, at times that a hundred years had gone since I had seen her . . . And I have not yet looked at her look . . . There remains to me nothing if I go away thus. And all these memories . . . it is as if I carried away a little water in a muslin bag . . . I must look at her one last time, to the bottom of her heart . . . I must tell her all that I have not told her . . . (Enter Melisande.)
MÉLISANDE: Pelléas?	MELISANDE: Pelléas?
PELLÉAS: Mélisande!— Est-ce toi, Mélisande?	PELLÉAS: Melisande! Is it you, Melisande?
MÉLISANDE: Oui.	MELISANDE: Yes.
PELLÉAS: Viens ici: ne reste pas au bord du clair de lune.— Viens ici. Nous avons tant de choses à nous dire . . . Viens ici dans l'ombre du tilleul.	PELLÉAS: Come here: do not remain on the edge of the moonlight. Come here. We have so many things to say to one another. Come here in the shadow of the elm.
MÉLISANDE: Laisse-moi dans la clarté . . .	MELISANDE: Let me remain in the light . . .
PELLÉAS: On pourrait nous voir des fenêtres de la tour. Viens ici; ici, nous n'avons rien à craindre.— Prends garde; on pourrait nous voir . . .	PELLÉAS: They might see us from the windows of the tower. Come here; here, we have nothing to fear. Take care; they might see us . . .
MÉLISANDE: Je veux qu'on me voie . . .	MELISANDE: I want them to see me . . .
PELLÉAS: Qu'as-tu donc?— Tu as pu sortir sans qu'on s'en soit aperçu?	PELLÉAS: What is the matter with you? You were able to come out without anyone seeing you?
MÉLISANDE: Oui, votre frère dormait . . .	MELISANDE: Yes; your brother was sleeping.
PELLÉAS: Il est tard.— Dans une heure on fermera les portes. Il faut prendre garde. Pourquoi es-tu venue si tard?	PELLÉAS: It is late. In one hour they will close the gates. We must take care. Why have you come so late?
MÉLISANDE: Votre frère avait un mauvais rêve. Et puis ma robe s'est accrochée aux clous de la porte. Voyez, elle est déchirée. J'ai perdu tout ce temps et j'ai couru . . .	MELISANDE: Your brother had a bad dream. And then my grown got caught on the nails of the gate. See, it is torn. I lost all this time and I ran . . .
PELLÉAS: Ma pauvre Mélisande! . . . J'aurais presque peur de te toucher . . . Tu es encore hors d'haleine comme un oiseau pourchassé . . . C'est pour moi, pour moi que tu fais tout cela? . . . J'entends battre ton coeur comme si c'était le mien . . . Viens ici . . . plus près de moi.	PELLÉAS: My poor Melisande! . . . I would be almost afraid to touch you . . . You are still out of breath like a hunted bird . . . It is for me, for me that you do all this? I hear your heart beat as if it were mine . . . Come here . . . nearer, nearer to me.
MÉLISANDE: Pourquoi riez-vous?	MELISANDE: Why do you laugh?
PELLÉAS: Je ne ris pas;—ou bien je ris de joie, sans le savoir . . . Il y aurait plutôt de quoi pleurer . . .	PELLÉAS: I do not laugh;—or else I laugh for joy, without knowing it . . . There is rather cause for weeping . . .
MÉLISANDE: Nous sommes venus ici il y a bien longtemps . . . Je me rappelle.	MELISANDE: We came here a long time ago . . . I recall it.
PELLÉAS: Oui . . . Il y a de longs mois.— Alors, je ne savais pas . . . Sais-tu pourquoi je t'ai demandé de venir ce soir?	PELLÉAS: Yes . . . Long months since. Then, I did not know . . . Do you know why I asked you to come tonight?
MÉLISANDE: Non.	MELISANDE: No.
PELLÉAS: C'est peut-être la dernière fois que je te vois . . . Il faut que je m'en aille pour toujours . . .	PELLÉAS: It is perhaps the last time that I see you . . . It is necessary that I go away forever . . .
MÉLISANDE: Pourquoi dis-tu toujours que tu t'en vas? . . .	MELISANDE: Why do you say that you are going away? . . .
PELLÉAS: Je dois te dire ce que tu sais déjà?— Tu ne sais pas ce que je vais te dire?	PELLÉAS: I am bound to say what you already know. You do not know what I am about to say?
MÉLISANDE: Mais non, mais non; je ne sais rien . . .	MELISANDE: No, no; I know nothing . . .
PELLÉAS: Tu ne sais pas pourquoi il faut que je m'éloigue . . . (Il l'embrasse brusquement.) Tu ne sais pas que c'est parce que je t'aime . . .	PELLÉAS: You do not know why I must go far away. (He embraces her brusquely.) You do not know it is because I love you . . .
MÉLISANDE: (à voix basse). Je t'aime aussi . . .	MELISANDE: (with lowered voice). I love you, too.
PELLÉAS: Oh! Qu'as-tu dit, Mélisande! Je ne l'ai presque pas entendu! . . . On a brisé la glace avec des fers rougis! . . . Tu dis cela d'une voix qui vient du bout du monde! . . . Je ne t'ai presque pas entendue . . . Tu m'aimes?— Tu m'aimes aussi? . . . Depuis quand m'aimes-tu?	PELLÉAS: Oh! what have you said, Melisande? I almost failed to hear it . . . They have broken the ice with red hot irons! . . . You say that with a voice that comes from the end of the world . . . I almost failed to hear you . . . You love me? You love me, too? . . . Since when do you love me?
MÉLISANDE: Depuis toujours . . . Depuis que je t'ai vu . . .	MELISANDE: Since always . . . Since I have seen you . . .

PELLÉAS: Oh! comme tu dis cela! . . . On dirait que ta voix a passé sur la mer au printemps! . . . je ne l'ai jamais entendue jusqu'ici . . . on dirait qu'il a plu sur mon coeur! Tu dis cela si franchement . . . Comme un ange qu'on tnterroge! . . . Je ne puis pas le croire, Mélisande! . . . Pourquoi m'aimerais tu?— Mais pourquoi m'aimes-tu!— Est-ce vrai ce que tu dis?— Tu ne me trompes pas?— Tu ne mens pas un peu, pour me faire sourire? . . .	PELLÉAS: Oh, how you say that! . . . One would say that your voice had passed over the sea in Springtime! I have not heard it up to now . . . one would think it had rained on my heart! You say it so frankly . . . like an angel who is questioned. I cannot believe it, Melisande! Why should you love me? But why do you love me? Is what you say true? You do not deceive me? You do not lie a little, so as to make me smile? . . .
MÉLISANDE: Non; je ne mens jamais; je ne mens qu'à ton frère . . .	MELISANDE: No; I never lie; I only lie to your brother . . .
PELLÉAS: Oh! comme tu dis cela! . . . Ta voix! ta voix . . . Elle est plus fraîche et plus franche que l'eau! . . . On dirait de l'eau pure sur mes mains . . . Donne-moi, donne-moi tes mains . . . Oh! tes mains sont petites! . . . Je ne savais pas que tu étais si belle! . . . Je n'avais jamais rien vu d'aussi beau, avant toi . . . J'étais inquiet, je cherchais partout dans la maison . . . je cherchais partout dans la campagne . . . Et je ne trouvais pas la beauté . . . Et maintenant je t'ai trouvée! . . . Je ne crois pas qu'il y ait sur la terre une femme plus belle! . . . Où es-tu?— Je ne t'entends plus respirer . . .	PELLÉAS: Oh how you say that! . . . Your voice, your voice! It is fresher and franker than water. One thinks of pure water on your lips. One would imagine pure water on my hands. Give me, give me, your hands . . . Oh, you hands are little! . . . I did not know you were so beautiful! I had, before you, never seen anything so beautiful . . . I was anxious, I sought everywhere in the house . . . I sought everywhere in the country . . . and I did not find beauty . . . And now I have found you . . . I have found you . . . I do not believe that on earth there is a woman more beautiful Where are you? . . . I do not hear you breathe any more . . .
MÉLISANDE: C'est que je te regarde . . .	MELISANDE: It is that I look at you . . .
PELLÉAS: Pourquoi me regardes-tu si gravement!— Nous sommes déjà dans la lumière. Nous ne pouvons pas voir combien nous sommes heureux. Viens, viens; il nous reste si peu de temps . . .	PELLÉAS: Why do you look at me so gravely? We are already in the shadow. It is too dark under this tree. Come into the light. We cannot see how happy we are. Come, come; there remains so little time for us . . .
MÉLISANDE: Non, non; restons ici . . . Je suis plus près de toi dans l'obscurité . . .	MELISANDE: No, no, let us stay here . . . I am nearer to you in the darkness.
PELLÉAS: Où sont tes yeux?— Tu ne vas pas me fuir?— Tu ne songes pas à moi en ce moment.	PELLÉAS: Where are your eyes? You are not going to run away from me? You are not thinking of me at this moment.
MÉLISANDE: Mais si, mais si, je ne songe qu'à toi . . .	MELISANDE: Yes, I am, I only think of you . . .
PELLÉAS: Tu regardais ailleurs . . .	PELLÉAS: You were looking elsewhere . . .
MÉLISANDE: Je te voyais ailleurs . . .	MELISANDE: I saw you elsewhere . . .
PELLÉAS: Tu es distraite . . . Qu'as-tu donc?— Tu ne me semble pas heureuse . . .	PELLÉAS: You are absent minded . . . What is the matter? You do not seem happy to me . . .
MÉLISANDE: Si, si; je suis heureuse, mais je suis triste . . .	MELISANDE: Yes, I am; I am happy but I am sad . . .
PELLÉAS: Quel est ce bruit?—on ferme les portes! . . .	PELLÉAS: What is this noise? They are closing the gates! . . .
MÉLISANDE: Oui, on a fermé les portes . . .	MELISANDE: Yes, they have closed the gates . . .
PELLÉAS: Nous ne pouvons plus entrer!— Entends-tu les verrous!— Ecoute! écoute! . . . les grandes chaînes! . . . Il est trop tard, il est trop tard! . . .	PELLÉAS: We can no longer get in. Do you hear the bolts? Listen, listen! the great chains! It is too late, it is too late! . . .
MÉLISANDE: Tant mieux! tant mieux!	MELISANDE: All the better, all the better!
PELLÉAS: Tu? . . . Voilà, voilà! . . . Ce n'est plus nous qui le voulons! . . . Tout est perdu, tout est sauvé! tout est sauvé ce soir!— Viens viens . . . Mon coeur bat comme un fou jusqu'au fond de ma gorge . . . (Il l'enlace.) Ecoute! mon coeur est sur le point de m'etrangler . . . Viens! viens! . . . Ah! qu'il fait beau dans les tênèbres! . . .	PELLÉAS: You? . . . There, there . . . It is no longer our will . . . All is lost, all is gained! All is gained this night! Come, come . . . My heart beats wildly even to the bottom of my throat . . . (He enfolds her.) Listen! my heart is on the point of strangling me. Come, come! Ah, how beautiful it is in the dark . . .
MÉLISANDE: Il y a quelqu'un derrière nous! . . .	MELISANDE: There is some one behind us . . .
PELLÉAS: Je ne vois personne . . .	PELLÉAS: I see nobody . . .
MÉLISANDE: J'ai entendu du bruit . . .	MELISANDE: I heard a noise . . .
PELLÉAS: Je n'entends que ton coeur dans l'obscurité . . .	PELLÉAS: I only hear your heart in the darkness . . .
MÉLISANDE: J'ai entendu craquer les feuilles mortes . . .	MELISANDE: I heard the crackling of dead leaves . . .
PELLÉAS: C'est le vent qui s'est tû tout à coup . . . Il est tombé pendant que nous nous embrassions . . .	PELLÉAS: It is the wind that suddenly became silent. It has fallen while we were kissing.
MÉLISANDE: Comme nos ombres sont grandes ce soir! . . .	MELISANDE: How long our shadows are tonight . . .
PELLÉAS: Elles s'enlacent jusqu'au fond du jardin . . . Oh! qu'elles s'embrassent loin de nous! . . . Regarde! Regarde!	PELLÉAS: They enfold each other to the end of the garden. Oh, they embrace each other far from us! Look, look!
MÉLISANDE: (d'une voix étouffée). A-a-h!— Il est derrière un arbre!	MELISANDE: (with muffled voice). Aah! He is behind a tree!
PELLÉAS: Qui?	PELLÉAS: Who?
MÉLISANDE: Golaud!	MELISANDE: Golaud!
PELLÉAS: Golaud?—où donc?— je ne vois rien . . .	PELLÉAS: Golaud? Where? I see nothing . . .
MÉLISANDE: Là . . . au bout de nos ombres . . .	MELISANDE: There . . . at the end of our shadows . . .

PELLÉAS: Oui, oui; je l'ai vu . . .
Ne nous retournons pas brusquement . . .

MÉLISANDE: Il a son épée . . .

PELLÉAS: Je n'ai pas la mienne . . .

MÉLISANDE: Il a vu que nous nous embrassions . . .

PELLÉAS: Il ne sait pas que nous l'avons vu . . .
Ne bouge pas; ne tourne pas la tête . . .
Il se précipiterait . . .
Il nous observe . . .
Il est encore immobile . . .
Va-t'en, va-t'en tout de suite par ici . . .
Je l'attendrai . . .
Je l'arrêterai . . .

MÉLISANDE: Non, non, non! . . .

PELLÉAS: Va-t'en! va-t'en!
Il a tout vu! . . .
Il nous tuera! . . .

MÉLISANDE: Tant mieux! tant mieux! tant mieux! . . .

PELLÉAS: Il vient! il vient! . . .
Ta bouche! . . .
Ta bouche! . . .

MÉLISANDE:
Oui! . . . Oui! . . . Oui! . . .
(Ils s'embrassent éperdument.)

PELLÉAS: Oh! oh!
Toutes les étoiles tombent! . . .

MÉLISANDE: Sur moi aussi! sur moi aussi! . . .

PELLÉAS: Toutes! toutes! toutes! . . .
(Golaud se précipite sur eux l'épée à la main, et frappe Pelléas, qui tombe au bord de la fontaine. Mélisante fuit épouvantée.)

MÉLISANDE: (fuyant). Oh! oh!
Je n'ai pas de courage! . . .
Je n'ai pas de courage! . . .
(Golaud la poursuit à travers le bois, en silence.)

ACTE V.

SCENE I.

(Un appartement dans le château.)
(On découvre Arkel, Golaud et le médecin dans un coin de la chambre. Mélisande est étendue sur son lit.)

LE MÉDECIN: Ce n'est pas de cette petite blessure qu'elle peut mourir; un oiseau n'en serait pas mort . . . ce n'est donc pas vous qui l'avez tuée, mon bon seigneur; ne vous désolez pas ainsi . . .
Et puis, il n'est pas dit que nous ne la sauverons pas . . .

ARKEL: Non, non; il me semble que nous nous taisons trop, malgré nous, dans sa chambre . . .
Ce n'est pas un bon signe . . .
Regardez comme elle dort . . . lentement, lentement . . . on dirait que son âme a froid toujours . . .

GOLAUD: J'ai tué sans raison!
Est-ce que ce n'est pas à faire pleurer les pierres! . . .
Ils s'étaient embrassés comme des petits enfants . . .
Ils étaient frère et soeur . . .
Et moi, moi tout de suite! . . .
Je l'ai fait malgré moi, voyez-vous . . .
Je l'ai fait malgré moi . . .

LE MÉDECIN: Attention; je crois qu'elle s'éveille . . .

MÉLISANDE: Ouvrez la fenêtre . . . ouvrez la fenêtre . . .

ARKEL: Veux-tu que j'ouvre celle-ci, Mélisande?

MÉLISANDE: Non, non; la grande fenêtre . . . c'est pour voir . . .

ARKEL: Est-ce que l'air de la mer n'est pas trop froid ce soir?

LE MÉDECIN: Faites, faites . . .

MÉLISANDE: Merci . . .
Est-ce le soleil qui se couche?

ARKEL: Oui; c'est le soleil qui se couche sur la mer; il est tard.—
Comment te trouves-tu, Mélisande?

MÉLISANDE: Bien, bien.—
Pourquoi demandez-vous cela?
Je n'ai jamais été mieux portante.—
Il me semble cependant que je sais quelque chose . . .

ARKEL: Que dis-tu?—
Je ne te comprends pas . . .

MÉLISANDE: Je ne comprends pas non plus tour ce que je dis, voyez-vous . . .
Je ne sais pas ce que je dis . . .
Je ne sais pas ce que je sais . . .
je ne dis plus ce que je veux . . .

ARKEL: Mais si, mais si . . .
Je suis tout heureux de t'entendre parier ainsi; tu as eu un peu de délire ces jours-ci, et l'on ne te comprenait plus . . .
Mais maintenant, tout cela est bien loin . . .

MÉLISANDE: Je ne sais pas . . . —
Etes-vous tout seul dans la chambre, grand-père?

ARKEL: Non; il y encore le médecin qui t'a guérie . . .

PELLÉAS: Yes, yes; I saw him . . .
Do not let us turn around suddenly . . .

MELISANDE: He has his sword.

PELLÉAS: I do not have mine . . .

MELISANDE: He could see that we were embracing.

PELLÉAS: He does not know that we have seen him . . .
Do not move; do not turn your head . . .
He would precipitate himself . . .
He watches us . . .
He is still immovable
Go away, go off at once this way . . .
I will wait . . .
I will stop him . . .

MELISANDE: No, no, no! . . .

PELLÉAS: Go away, go away.
He has seen all!
He will kill us! . . .

MELISANDE: All the better! all the better! all the better!

PELLÉAS: He is coming, he is coming!
Your mouth . . . your mouth! . . .

MELISANDE: Yes . . .
Yes . . .
Yes! . . .
(They kiss one another wildly.)

PELLÉAS: Oh, oh! all the stars are falling! . . .

MELISANDE: On me, too, on me too! . . .

PELLÉAS: All, all, all! . . .
(Golaud, sword in hand, throws himself upon them and strikes Pelléas, who falls on the edge of the fountain. Melisande flees, terror-stricken.)

MELISANDE: (fleeing). Oh, oh!
I have not the courage! . . .
I have not the courage! . . .
(Golaud pursues her through the wood, in silence.)

ACT V.

SCENE I.

(An apartment in the Castle. Arkel, Golaud and the physician discovered in a corner of the room. Melisande is extended on her bed.)

THE PHYSICIAN: It is not from this little wound that she can die; a bird would not die from it . . . thus it is not you who have killed her, my good lord; do not take on so . . .
And it is not said that we will not save her . . .

ARKEL: No, no; it seems to me that we are too silent, in spite of ourselves, in her room . . .
It is not a good sign . . .
Look how she sleeps . . . slowly, slowly . . . one would think her soul was cold forever . . .

GOLAUD: I killed without reason.
Is it not enough to make the stones weep? . . .
They were embracing each other like little children . . .
They were brother and sister . . .
And I, I at once! . . .
I did it in spite of myself, you see . . .
I did it in spite of myself . . .

THE PHYSICIAN: Attention; I think she awakes . . .

MELISANDE: Open the window . . . open the window . . .

ARKEL: Do you wish me to open this one, Melisande?

MELISANDE: No, no; the great window . . . it is that I may see . . .

ARKEL: Is not the sea air too cold tonight?

THE PHYSICIAN: Do it, do it . . .

MELISANDE: Thank you.
Is it the sun that is sinking?

ARKEL: Yes; it is the sun that is sinking in the sea; it is late.
How do you find yourself, Melisande?

MELISANDE: Well, well.
Why do you ask that?
I was never in better health.
It seems to me, however, that I know something . . .

ARKEL: What do you say?
I do not undertstand . . .

MELISANDE: I do not understand all that I say either, you see . . .
I do not know what I say . . .
I do not know what I know . . .
I do not say any more what I want to . . .

ARKEL: Yes, you do . . .
I am quite happy to hear you speak in this way; you have had a little delirium these past days, and we no longer understood you . . .
But now, all that is long past.

MELISANDE: I do not know . . .
Are you all alone in the room, grandfather?

ARKEL: No; there is also the physician who cured you . . .

MÉLISANDE: Ah . . .

ARKEL: Et puis il y a encore quelqu'un . . .

MÉLISANDE: Qui est-ce?

ARKEL: C'est . . . il ne faut pas t'effrayer . . .
Il ne te veut pas le moindre mal, sois-en sûre . . .
Si tu as peur, il s'en ira . . .
Il est très malheureux . . .

MÉLISANDE: Qui est-ce!

ARKEL: C'est . . . c'est ton mari . . . c'est Golaud . . .

MÉLISANDE: Golaud est ici?
Pourquoi ne vient-il pas près de moi?

GOLAUD: (se trainant vers le lit).
Mélisande . . .
Mélisande . . .

MÉLISANDE: Est-ce vous, Golaud
Je ne vous reconnaissais presque plus . . .
C'est que j'ai le soleil du soir dans les yeux . . .
Pourquoi regardez-vous les murs?
Vous avez maigri et vieilli . . .
Y a-t-il longtemps que nous ne nous sommes vus?

GOLAUD: (à Arkel et au médecin.) Voulez-vous vous éloigner un instant, mes pauvres amis . . .
Je laisserai la porte grande ouverte . . .
Un instant seulement . . .
Je voudrais lui dire quelque chose; sans cela je ne pourrais pas mourir . . .
Voulez-vous?—
Vous pouvez revenir tout de suite . . .
Ne me refusez pas cela . . .
Je suis un malheureux . . .
(Sortent Arkel et le médecin.)—
Mélisande, as-tu pitié de moi, comme j'ai pitié de toi? . . .
Mélisande? . . .
Me pardonnes-tu, Mélisande? . . .

MÉLISANDE: Oui, oui, je te pardonne . . .
Que faut-il pardonner?

GOLAUD: Je t'ai fait tant de mal, Mélisande . . .
Je ne puis pas te dire le mal que je t'ai fait . . .
Mais je le vois, je le vois si clairement aujourd'hui . . . depuis le premier jour . . .
Et tout est de ma faute, tout ce qui est arrivé, tout ce qui va arriver . . .
Si je pouvais le dire, tu verrais comme je le vois! . . .
Je vois tout, je vois tout! . . .
Mais je t'aimais tant! . . .
Je t'aimais tant! . . .
Mais maintenant, quelqu'un va mourir . . .
C'est moi qui vais mourir . . .

MELISANDE: Ah . . .

ARKEL: And then there is someone else . . .

MELISANDE: Who is it?

ARKEL: It is . . . you must not get frightened . . .
He does not wish you the least harm, be sure of that . . .
If you are afraid he will go away . . . he is very unhappy . . .

MELISANDE: Who is it?

ARKEL: It is . . . it is your husband . . . it is Golaud . . .

MELISANDE: Golaud is here?
Why does he not come close to me?

GOLAUD: (dragging himself toward the bed.) Melisande . . . Melisande.

MELISANDE: Is it you, Golaud?
I hardly recognized you at all . . .
It is because I have the evening sun in my eyes . . .
Why do you look at the walls?
You have grown thin and older . . .
Is it long since we have seen one another?

GOLAUD: (to Arkel and the physician). Will you go away for a moment, my poor friends . . .
I will leave the door wide open . . .
A moment only . . .
I would like to tell her something; without it I shall not be able to die . . .
Will you?
You can come back at once . . .
Do not refuse me this . . .
I am an unfortunate.
(Arkel and the physician go out.)
Melisande, do you have pity on me as I have pity on you? . . .
Melisande? . . . do you forgive me, Melisande? . . .

MELISANDE: Yes, yes, I forgive you . . . what shall I forgive?

GOLAUD: I have done you so much harm, Melisande . . .
I cannot tell you the harm I have done you . . .
But I see it, I see it so clearly today . . . since the first day . . .
And all is of my fault, all that has happened, all that will happen . . .
If I could tell it, you would see it as I see it . . . I see all, I see everything . . .
But I loved you so much . . .
I loved you so much . . . It is I who will die . . .
And I would like to know . . .
I want to ask you . . .

Et je voudrais savoir . . .
Je voudrais te demander . . .
Tu ne m'en voudras pas? . . .
Il faut dire la vérité à quelqu'un qui va mourir . . .
Il faut qu'il sache la vérité, sans cela il ne pourrait pas dormir . . .
Me jures-tu de dire la vérité?

MÉLISANDE: Oui.

GOLAUD: As-tu aimé Pelléas?

MÉLISANDE: Mais oui; je l'ai aimé.
Où est-il?

GOLAUD: Tu ne me comprends pas?—
Tu ne veux pas me comprendre?—
Il me semble . . .
Il me semble . . .
Eh bien, voici:
Je te demande si tu l'as aimé d'un amour défendu? . . .
As-tu . . . avez-vous été coupables?
Dis, dis, oui, oui, oui?

MÉLISANDE: Non, non; nous n'avons pas été coupables.—
Pourquoi demandez-vous cela?

GOLAUD: Mélisande! . . . dis-moi la vérité pour l'amour de Dieu!

MÉLISANDE: Pourquoi n'ai-je pas dit la vérité?

GOLAUD: Ne mens plus ainsi, au moment de mourir!

MÉLISANDE: Qui est-ce qui va mourir?—
Est-ce moi?

GOLAUD: Toi, toi! et moi, moi aussi, après toi! . . .
Et il nous faut la vérité . . .
Il nous faut enfin la vérité, entends-tu! . . .
Dis-moi tout!
Dis-moi tout!
Je te pardonne tout! . . .

MÉLISANDE: Pourquoi vais-je mourir.—
Je ne le savais pas . . .

GOLAUD: Tu le sais maintenant! . . .
Il est temps!
Il est temps! . . .
Vite! vite! . . .
La vérité! la vérité! . . .

MÉLISANDE: La vérité . . . la vérité . . .

GOLAUD: Où es tu?—
Mélisande!—
Où es-tu?—
Ce n'est pas naturel!
Mélisande!
Où es-tu?
(Apercevant Arkel et le médecin à la porte de la chambre.)—
Oui, oui; vous pouvez rentrer . . .
Je ne sais rien; c'est inutile . . .
Elle est déjà trop loin de nous . . .
Je ne saurai jamais! . . .
Je vais mourir ici comme un aveugle! . . .

You will not be angry with me?
The truth must be told to one about to die . . .
He must know the truth with out that he could not sleep . . .
Do you swear to tell me the truth?

MELISANDE: Yes.

GOLAUD: Did you love Pelléas?

MELISANDE: Why, yes; I loved him.
Where is he?

GOLAUD: You do not understand me?
You will not understand me.
It seems to me, it seems to me . . .
Well, then, here: I ask you if you loved him with a forbidden love? . . .
Have you . . . have you both been guilty?
Say it, say it, yes, yes, yes?

MELISANDE: No, no; we have not been guilty.
Why do you ask that?

GOLAUD: Melisande! . . . tell me the truth for the love of God!

MELISANDE: Why, have I not told the truth?

GOLAUD: Do not lie like this any more, at the moment of dying!

MELISANDE: Who is going to die?
Is it me?

GOLAUD: You, you! and me, too, after you . . .
And we must have the truth . . .
We must at last have the truth, do you hear?
Tell me all, tell me all.
I forgive you everything . . .

MELISANDE: Why am I about to die.
I did not know it . . .

GOLAUD: You know it now!
It is time, it is time . . .
Quick! quick! . . .
The truth, the truth!

MELISANDE: The truth . . . the truth . . .

GOLAUD: Where are you?
Melisande! where are you?
It is not natural!
Melisande!
(Seeing Arkel and the physician at the door of the room.)
Yes, yes, you can come back . . .
I know nothing; it is useless . . .
She is already far from us . . .
I shall never know! . . .
I shall die here like a blind man! . . .

ARKEL: Qu'avez-vous fait? Vous allez la tuer . . .	ARKEL: What have you done? You will kill her . . .
GOLAUD: Je l'ai déjà tuée . . .	GOLAUD: I have killed her already . . .
ARKEL: Mélisande . . .	ARKEL: Melisande . . .
MÉLISANDE: Est-ce vous, grand-père?	MELISANDE: Is it you, grandfather?
ARKEL: Oui, ma fille . . . Que veux-tu que je fasse?	ARKEL: Yes, my daughter . . . What do you wish me to do?
MÉLISANDE: Est-il vrai que l'hiver commence?	MELISANDE: Is it true that winter begins?
ARKEL: Pourquoi demandes-tu cela?	ARKEL: Why do you ask that?
MÉLISANDE: Parce qu'il fait froid et qu'il n'y a plus de feuilles . . .	MELISANDE: Because it is cold and there are no more leaves . . .
ARKEL: Tu as froid?— Veux-tu qu'on ferme les fenêtres?	ARKEL: You are cold? Do you wish the windows closed?
MÉLISANDE: Non, non . . . jusqu'à ce que le soleil soit au fond de la mer.— Il descend lentement, alors c'est l'hiver qui commence?	MELISANDE: No, no . . . until the sun is at the bottom of the sea. It goes down slowly, then it is the winter that begins?
ARKEL: Oui.— Tu n'aimes pas l'hiver?	ARKEL: Yes. You do not like the winter?
MÉLISANDE: Oh! non. J'ai peur du froid.— Ah! J'ai peur des grands froids . . .	MELISANDE: Oh, no. I am afraid of the cold. Ah, I am afraid of the great colds . . .
ARKEL: Te sens-tu mieux?	ARKEL: Do you feel better?
MÉLISANDE: Oui, oui; je n'ai plus toutes ces inquiétudes . . .	MELISANDE: Yes, yes; I no longer have all those anxieties . . .
ARKEL: Veux-tu voir ton enfant?	ARKEL: Do you wish to see your child?
MÉLISANDE: Quel enfant?	MELISANDE: What child?
ARKEL: Ton enfant, ta petite fille . . .	ARKEL: Your child, your little girl . . .
MÉLISANDE: Où est-elle?	MELISANDE: Where is she?
ARKEL: Ici . . .	ARKEL: Here . . .
MÉLISANDE: C'est étrange . . . je ne puis pas lever les bras pour la prendre . . .	MELISANDE: It is strange . . . I cannot lift my arms to take her . . .
ARKEL: C'est que tu es encore très faible . . . Je la tiendrai moi-même; regarde . . .	ARKEL: It is because you are still very weak . . . I will hold her myself; look . . .
MÉLISANDE: Elle ne rit pas . . . Elle est petite . . . Elle va pleurer aussi . . . J'ai pitié d'elle . . . (La chambre est envahie, peu à peu, par les servantes du château qui se rangent en silence le long des murs et attendant.)	MELISANDE: She does not laugh . . . She is little . . . She will also weep . . . I pity her . . . (The room is invaded, little by little, by maid-servants of the Castle, who range themselves in silence along the walls and wait.)
GOLAUD: (se levant brusquement). Qu'y a-t-il?— Qu'est-ce que toutes ces femmes viennent faire ici?	GOLAUD: (rising suddenly.) What is it? What are all these women doing here?
LE MÉDECIN: Ce sont les servantes . . .	THE PHYSICIAN: It is the maid servants.
ARKEL: Qui est-ce qui les a appelées?	ARKEL: Who called them?
LE MÉDECIN: Ce n'est pas moi . . .	THE PHYSICIAN: It was not me . . .
GOLAUD: Pourquoi venez-vous ici?— Personne ne vous a demandées . . . Que venez-vous faire ici?—mais qu'est-ce que donc! Répondez! . . . (Les servantes ne répondent pas.)	GOLAUD: Why do you come here? Nobody asked you . . . What do you come to do here? But what is it? Answer! (The servants do not answer.)
ARKEL: Ne parle pas trop fort . . . Elle va dormir; elle a fermé les yeux . . .	ARKEL: Do no speak so loud . . . She is about to sleep; she has closed her eyes . . .
GOLAUD: Ce n'est pas? . . .	GOLAUD: It is not? . . .
LE MÉDECIN: Non, non; voyez, elle respire . . .	THE PHYSICIAN: No, no; look, she breathes . . .
ARKEL: Ses yeux sont pleins de larmes.— Maintenant c'est son âme qui pleure . . . Pourquoi étend-elle ainsi les bras? Que veut-elle?	ARKEL: Her eyes are full of tears. Now it is her soul that weeps . . . Why does she stretch her arms this way? What does she want?
LE MÉDECIN: C'est vers l'enfant sans doute. C'est la lutte de la mère contre la mort . . .	THE PHYSICIAN: It is toward the child, no doubt. It is the struggle of the mother against death . . .
GOLAUD: En ce moment?— En ce moment? Il faut le dire, dites! dites!	GOLAUD: At this moment? At this moment? You must say it, speak, speak!
LE MÉDECIN: Peut-être . . .	THE PHYSICIAN: Perhaps . . .
GOLAUD: Tout de suite? . . . Oh! Oh! Il faut que je lui dise . . . — Mélisande! Mélisande! . . . Laissez-moi seul! laissez-moi seul avec elle! . . .	GOLAUD: At once? . . . Oh, oh! I must tell her . . . Melisande! Melisande! . . . Leave me alone, leave me alone with her! . . .
ARKEL: Non, non; n'approchez pas . . . Ne la troublez pas . . . Ne lui parlez plus . . . Vous ne savez pas ce que c'est qu l'âme . . .	ARKEL: No, no; do not approach . . . Do not trouble her. Do not speak to her any more . . . You do not know what the soul is . . .
GOLAUD: Ce n'est pas ma faute, ce n'est pas ma faute!	GOLAUD: It is not my fault, it is not my fault!
ARKEL: Attention . . . Attention . . . Il faut parler à voix basse.— Il ne faut plus l'inquiéter . . . L'âme humaine est très silencieuse . . . L'âme humaine aime à s'en aller seule . . . Elle souffre si timidement . . . Mais la tristesse, Golaud . . . mais la tristesse de tout ce que l'on voit! . . . Oh! oh! oh! . . . (En ce moment, toutes les servantes tombent subitement à genoux au fond de la chambre.)	ARKEL: Attention . . . attention . . . We must speak low. Do not annoy her any more . . . The human soul is very silent . . . The human soul likes to go away alone . . . It suffers so timidly . . . But the sadness, Golaud . . . but the sadness of all one sees! Oh, oh, oh! . . . (At this moment all the servants fall suddenly on their knees at the end of the room).
ARKEL: (se tournant.) Qu'y a-t-il?	ARKEL: (turning). What is the matter?
LE MÉDECIN: (s'approchant du lit tâtant le corps). Elles ont raison . . . (Un long silence.)	THE PHYSICIAN: (approaching the bed and feeling the body). They are right . . . (A long silence.)
ARKEL: Je n'ai rien vu.— Etes-vous sûr? . . .	ARKEL: I have seen nothing Are you sure? . . .

LE MÉDECIN: Oui, oui.

ARKEL: Je n'ai rien entendu . . .
Si vite, si vite . . .
Tout à coup . . .
Elle s'en va sans rien dire . . .

GOLAUD: (sanglotant). Oh! oh! oh! . . .

ARKEL: Ne restez pas ici, Golaud . . .
Il lui faut le silence, maintenant . . .
Venez, venez . . .
C'est terrible, mais ce n'est pas votre faute . . .
C'était un petit être si tranquille, si timide et si silencieux . . .
C'était un pauvre petit être mystérieux, comme tout le monde . . .
Elle est là, comme si elle était la grande soeur de son enfant . . . — Venez, il ne faut pas que l'enfant reste ici dans cette chambre . . .
Il faut qu'il vive, maintenant, à sa place . . .
C'est au tour de la pauvre petite . . .
(Ils sortent en silence.)

FIN.

THE PHYSICIAN: Yes, yes.

ARKEL: I heard nothing . . . so quick, so quick . . .
All at once . . .
She goes away saying nothing . . .

GOLAUD: (sobbing). Oh, oh, oh! . . .

ARKEL: Do not remain here, Golaud . . .
Now she needs silence . . .
Come, come . . .
It is terrible; but it is not your fault . . .
It was a little being so quiet, so timid, and so silent . . .
It was a poor little being, mysterious, like everybody . . .
She is there, as if she were the big sister of her child . . .
Come; it will not do for the child to stay here in this room . . .
It must live, now, in her place . . .
It is the turn of the poor little one . . .
(They go out in silence.)

THE END.

Lakmé (1883)

MUSIC BY LÉO DELIBES ■ LIBRETTO BY EDMOND GONDINET & PHILLIPE GILLE

This three-act opéra comique, set to a libretto by Edmond Goudinet and Phillippe Gille (based on Goudinet's Poem "Le Mariage de Loti"), premiered at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on April 14, 1883. The story is about Lakmé, daughter of Nilakantha, a fanatical Brahmin (Hindu) Priest. He is forbidden to practice his religion by the British, rulers of India. Lakmé and other members of the Hindu religion pray to their gods as Nilakantha goes to another gathering of his followers. He leaves Lakmé alone with her companions, including Mallika, in the beautiful garden surrounding the temple. Lakmé and Mallika sing a beautiful barcarole together as they bathe in the stream, after which Lakmé takes off her jewelry and leaves it on a rock. Then they get into a boat and sail away. Now two British army officers are introduced, along with a couple of young girls and their governess. None of them has any understanding of the land in which they find themselves. They break through the fence surrounding the temple and exclaim at the beauty in front of their eyes. They are told about the priest and the joy of his life, his beautiful daughter, by Frédéric. The young girls want a sketch of the jewels, which Gérald promises to do. He speculates about the owner of the jewels, sees Lakmé and Mallika sailing back, and hides. Lakmé sends Mallika away, sees Gérald, and cries for help. When Mallika and Hadji enter, she sends them away. She is alone with Gérald and tells him that she could have had him killed. He is totally infatuated with her, and they sing together until she hears the entrance of her father. Nilakantha is enraged that his temple has been profaned and cries out for revenge. A festival is being held in a public square, where the governess is pick-pocketed until rescued by Frédéric. Nilakantha arrives, accompanied by Lakmé, and Gérald comes with his finacée, Ellen. Gérald is told by Frédéric that their regiment leaves before dawn. Nilakantha commands that Lakmé must sing in order to attract the man who has profaned the temple as he is sure that this man was drawn by her beauty. Nobody appears in response to her singing, and he tells his daughter to continue until she sees Gérald, at which she cries out and faints. Nilakantha thus knows his enemy and plans to destroy him during the procession of the goddess. Lakmé is left alone with Hadji, who promises to help her. Gérald comes to her, and they sing of their love. She admits her feelings for him and plans a new life for them. The procession enters, and the English young girls watch with their escort, Frédéric. He comments on his friend's infatuation but is not worried as they are leaving that night. As the procession continues, Gérald is stabbed, according to Nilakantha's plan. Lakmé finds that he has only a minor wound and, assisted by Hadji, moves him to a secret hiding place in the forest. Gérald awakens in this place, and she tells him that a group of lovers have come to drink the waters of the sacred spring. These waters give the gift of eternal love to those who drink them. She goes out, and Frédéric enters, having followed drops of blood which left a trail. Frédéric reminds Gérald of his duty, but Gérald is in love with Lakmé, forgetting about Ellen, his fiancée. But can Gérald truly forget his soldier's honor, asks Frédéric, and he leaves knowing that he has gotten through to his comrade. Gérald knows this as well when he hears the sounds of soldiers marching in the distance. Lakmé sees the change in him immediately, and as he listens to the sounds of the march, she tears a poisonous leaf off of the datura tree and eats it. She and Gérald drink water together and swear to love each other for all time. Then she tells him that he will not need to break his oath as she is dying. She tells her father before she dies that she and Gérald have drunk the sacred water together. Gérald cries out in grief as Nilakantha thinks about his daughter's journey to eternal life.

■ ACTE I

(Un jardin très ombragé où croissent et s'entremêlent toutes des fleurs de l'Inde. Au fond, une maison peu élévée, à demi chachée par es arbres. L'image du Lotus sur la porte d'entrée et plus loin un statue de Ganeça, idole à tête d'éléphant, dieu de la sagesse, donnent à cette mystérieuse habitation l'aspect d'un sanctuaire. Au fond, le commencement d'un petit cours d'eau qui se perd dans la verdure.—Le jardin est entouré d'une frêle clôture en bambous.—C'est le lever du jour.)

■ ACT I

A well-shaded garden, where flourish and intermingle the flowers of India. In the back-ground, near a little river, stands a building of modest proportions, half concealed by the trees, a figure of Lotus over the door; and near by, a statute of Ganesá, the God of Wisdom, an idol with the head of an elephant, give this mysterious abode the appearance of a sanctuary. The garden is enclosed by a light fence of bamboo. Time, daybreak.

(Hadji, Mallika, Nilakantha, puis Hindous, hommes et femmes.) (Au lever du rideau, Hadji et Mallika vont ouvrir la porte du jardin à des Hindous, hommes et femmes, qui entrent avec recueillement.)

CHOEUR: A l'heure accoutumée.
Quand la plaine embaumée
Par l'aurore enflammée,
Fête le jour naissant,
Unissons nos prières,
Pour calmer les colères
De Brahma menaçant.

NILAKANTHA: (Sortant de sa demeure.) Soyez trois fois bénis, vous qui rendez hommage
Au prêtre abandonné qu'on raille et (Hadji, Malliká, Nilakantha; then Hindu men and women. Hadji and Malliká come to open the garden gate to the Hindus, who enter reflectively.)

PRAYER AND CHORUS: Here at the usual moment.
When the plain, perfume-freighted,
By the dawn's flame lighted,
Greets the new-born day,
Let our prayers rise united,
That the anger of Brahma
May from us pass away.

NILAKANTHA: (Coming from his dwelling). Thrice blessed may you be,
Who faithful homage render qu'on outrage.

De nos vainqueurs odieux
Nous lasserons les colères;
Ils ont pu chasser nos dieux
De leurs temples séculaires!
Mais, sur leurs têtes, Brahma
A suspendu sa vengeance,
Et, quant elle éclatera,
Ce sera la déliverance,
Dans ma retraite, aujourd'hui
La puissance de Dieu brille,
Je le vois, je monte à lui
Quand j'entends prier ma fille.

LAKMÉ: (A ce moment, on entend la voix de Lakmé, dans la demeure du brahmane. Tous les Hindous se prosternent.) Blanche Douga,
Pâle Siva!
Puissant Ganeça!
O vous, que créa Brahma!
Apaisez-vous,
Protégez-nous!
(A la fin du chant sacré, Lakmé a paru sur le seuil de la demeure du brahmane et mêle sa prière à celles des Hindous.)

NILAKANTHA: (Aux Hindous.)
Allez en paix, redites, en partant
La prière au matin, allez, Dieu vous entend!
(Toute le monde sort, à l'exception du brahmane, de Lakmé et de ses deux serviteurs.)

NILAKANTHA: Lakmé, c'est toi
qui nous protèges,
Et si je puis braver les haines sacrilèges
De l'ennemi triomphant
C'est que Dieu prend pitié de ta candeur d'enfant.

LAKMÉ: Lorsque Brahma, dans sa
clémence,
En broyant une fleur, fit la terre et le ciel,
Il y laissa le miel.
Et ce fut l'espérance.

NILAKANTHA: Il faut que je te quitte à l'instant.

LAKMÉ: Quoi déjà?

NILAKANTHA: Sois sans crainte!
Dans la pagode sainte,
Qui reste encor debout à la ville ou
m'attend,
La fête de demain m'appelle.
(Aux serviteurs.)
Restez prèz de Lakmé!

HADJI: Nous veillerons sur elle!

MALL: Nous veillerons tous deux!

NILAKANTHA: Je serai de retour
Avant la fin du jour!

NILAKANTHA: Que le ciel me
protège,
Me guide par la main,
Chasse le sacrilège
Au loin de mon chemin!

To heaven's high priest in me,
Reviled, scoffed at, and outraged!
Of our base victors, the sway
We'll weary out, slowly;
They have driven our gods away
From the ancient temples holy.
But Brahma over their heads
His vengeance has suspended;
When that explodes and spreads,
Our bondage will be ended!
In my dwelling here, today,
I saw God's power displaying.
Up to him I soared away,
While I heard my daughter praying.
(In the wing.)

LAKMÉ: O Dourga fair, O Shiva great!
Powerful Ganesá, who Brahma did create.
(Hindus kneeling.)
(Lakmé enters and joins in the prayer.)
Calm yourselves!
Protect us!

NILAKANTHA: (To Hindus.) Go,
now, in peace;
But as you leave, repeat
Your devout morning prayer.
God hears you
(All now depart except Nilakantha, Lakmé, and the two servitors.)

NILAKANTHA: (Tenderly.)
Lakmé! It is you who shall protect us!
And if I dare to brave the sacrilegious hatred
Of the triumphant enemy;
It is that God takes pity on
Your childlike purity.

LAKMÉ: When Brahma great, in pity tender,
Bruising flowers on his way,
Made earth and sky,
He let their honey lie,
And from that hope did render!

NILA: I now must leave you for a while.

LAKMÉ: What? so soon?

NILA: Be fearless,
In that pagoda peerless
That's still allowed to stand,
Some are waiting my command.
The festival tomorrow calls me.
(To the servants.)
Stay here with Lakmé.

HADJI: Together we'll watch over her.

MALL: We will stay beside her.

NILA: I shall back find my way
Before the close of day.
(Ensemble.)

NILA: Kind heaven will guard and keep me.
And lead me by the hand,
And drive all foes away
That in my path may stand.

LAKMÉ, HADJI, MALLIKA: Que
le ciel te protège,
Te guide par la main,
Chasse tout sacrilège
Au loin de ton chemin!
(Nilakantha s'éloigne accompagné jusqu'à la porte par Lakmé et ses deux serviteurs. Hadji rentre dans la maison.)

LAKMÉ: (Après s'être dèbarrassèe de quelques bijoux qu'elle a placer sur une table en pierre.) Viens,
Mallika, les lianes en fleurs
Jettent déjà leur ombre
Sur le ruisseau sacre qui coule, calme et sombre,
Eveillé par le chant des oiseàux tapageur

MALL: Oh, maîtresse, c'est l'heure où je te vois sourire,
L'heure bénie où je puis lire,
Dans le coeur toujours fermé
De Lahkmé!
(Pendant les dernières measures du chant, Mallika détaché une petite barque qui était amarrée dans les roseaux; Lakmé y monte, suivie de Mallika qui a pris l'aviron; à barque s'éloigne et leurs voix s'éteignent dans le lointain.)
(Gérald, Frédéric, Ellen, Rose, Mistress Bentson.)
(On entend des éclats de rire en dehors de la clôture du jardin.)

ROSE: Que voyez-vous?

FRÉDÉRIC: Je vois un jardin

ELLEN: Et vous, Gérald?

GÉRALD: Je vois de très beaux arbres.

ELLEN: Il n'y a personne?

GÉRALD: Je ne sais pas.

ROSE: Regardez bien.

FRÉDÉRIC: Ce n'est pas commode, à travers une pareille clôture.

ELLEN: Essayez d'écarter les bambous!

MRS. B: Mesdemoiselles, mesdemoiselles, soyez prudentes.

GÉRALD: Tiens, je vois la statue de Ganeça, le dieu de la sagesse.

FRÉDÉRIC: Je vois une feuille de lotus dessinée sur la porte. C'est la demeure d'un brahmane.

ROSE ET ELLEN: D'un brahmane!

FRÉDÉRIC: Allons-nous-en!

ROSE ET ELLEN: Pourquoi?

FRÉDÉRIC: Parce qu'il ne faut pas plaisanter avec ces gens-là.

ELLEN: (Écartant les bambous.) Oh! moi, je veux absolument voir le jardin d'un brahmane.

MRS. B: Miss Ellen, soyez prudente!

ELLEN: Oh! il est trop tard! (Les bambous ont cédé, elle est entrée dans le jardin.)

LAKMÉ, MALL., HADJI: May heaven guard and keep you.
And lead me (your) by the hand,
And drive all foes away
That in my (your) path may stand.
(Nilakantha goes out followed to the door by the others. Hadji re-enters the house.)

LAKMÉ: (Taking off some jewels and laying them on stone table)
Come, Malliká, the flowering vines
Are now their shadows throwing
Along the sacred stream,
That calmly here is flowing;
Enlivened by the songs of birds
amid the pines.

MALL: O mistress, dear! it is now—
When I behold you smiling,
In this blessed hour, no cares beguiling,
That your oft-closed heart I may read. Lakmé! and more music
(During the latter measures Mallika has unfastened a little boat which was anchored among the reeds in the stream. Lakmé steps into it, followed by Mallika, who sits at the helm. The boat moves on and their voices are lost in the distance.)
(Enter Gerald, Frederic, Ellen, Rose, Mrs. Benson.)
(Laughter heard outside the enclosure.)

ROSE: What do you see?

FREDERIC: I see a garden.

ELLEN: And you, Gerald?

GERALD: I see lovely trees.

ELLEN: There are no people?

GERALD: I don't know.

ROSE: Look well.

FREDERIC: It's difficult, across this fence.

ELLEN: Try to move the bamboo.

MRS. B: Girls, girls, be careful.

GERALD: Wait! I see the statue of Ganesa, goddess of wisdom.

FREDERIC: There's a lotus leaf on the door. A Brahmin must live there.

ROSE AND ELLEN: A Brahmin!

FREDERIC: Let's go.

ROSE AND ELLEN: Why?

FREDERIC: You can't fool with these people.

ELLEN: (Pushing aside the bamboo.) Oh! I must see a Brahmin's garden.

MRS. B: Miss Ellen, be careful.

ELLEN: It's too late.
(She pushes through the bamboo into the garden)

ROSE: La brèche est faite, on peut passer.	ROSE: The opening is made, we can go through.
MRS. B: (Éperdue.) Miss Rose, vous aussi!	MRS. B: You too, Rose!
GÉRALD: Nous ne pouvons plus reculer, vénérable mistress Bentson.	GERALD: We can't go back, ma'am.
MRS. B: (Entrant en faisant la grimace.) Mais je ne sais pas chez qui nous sommes.	MRS. B: (Following after, making a face.) But in whose place are we?
FRÉDÉRIC: Moi, je le sais très bien. Je ne connais pas le propriétaire de ce petit temple, mais j'ai beaucoup entendu parler de lui.	FREDERIC: I know. I don't know the owner of this temple but I've heard about him.
GÉRALD: Très positivement, nous n'avons pas été presentés.	GERALD: Right! We haven't been introduced.
FRÉDÉRIC: Nous nous livrons là à une plaisanterie extrêmement dangereuse.	FREDERIC: Let's not fool around. It's dangerous.
ROSE: (Vivement.) N'effrayez pas, mistress Bentson.	ROSE: Don't worry, Mrs. Benson.
ELLEN: Oh! non, ne l'effrayez pas!	ELLEN: Of course, don't worry.
MRS. B: Permettez, mesdemoiselles, je suis votre gouvernante, la prudence est un devoir pour moi.	MRS. B: Please, girls, I am your governess and caution is my duty.
ROSE: La prudence, oui: mais la peur?	ROSE: Caution, yes; fear, no.
MRS. B: La peur aussi. Quand M. le gouverneur a diagné me confier sa fille et sa nièce, il m'a recommandé d'avoir peur. Je me suis engagée avoir peur. J'ai peur!	MRS. B: Fear, too. When the governor entrusted his daughter and his niece to me he told me to have fear. I was engaged to have fear. I have fear.
ELLEN: (Gaiment, à Rose.) Vois comme c'est joli.	ELLEN: (Gaily, to Rose.) Isn't it lovely.
ROSE: Quel adorable fouillis de feuilles et de fleurs!	ROSE: Flowers and lovely buds–how adorable!
FRÉDÉRIC: Prenez garde aux serpents, sous les fleurs, miss Rose!	FREDERIC: Look out for snakes! Under the flowers!
ELLEN: Comme elle est coquette, cette rivière, toute bordée de verdure.	ELLEN: And the river! How charming with its grassy banks.
ROSE: Elle a l'air de s'allonger dans une courbe gracieuse pour arriver jusqu'ici.	ROSE: It seems to have gone to great lengths just to come here for us.
ELLEN: Vois donc ces belles fleurs.	ELLEN: Look at these flowers.
FRÉDÉRIC: N'y touchez pas, miss Ellen! ce sont des daturas, des daturas stramonium, très inoffensifs en Angleterre, mais, sous en beau ciel indien, il suffirait d'en mettre une feuille sous vos jolies dents.	FREDERIC: Don't touch them, Ellen! They're daturas stramonium–innocuous in England but here in India, if just one leaf–
MRS. B: Pour être empoisonnée?	MRS. B: They're poisonous.
GÉRALD: Pour être empoisonnée.	GERALD: Poisonous.
FRÉDÉRIC: Parfaitement, mistress Bentson.	FREDERIC: Right.
MRS. B: C'est un pays abominable.	MRS. B: This is a terrible country.
FRÉDÉRIC: Si vous me permettiez de vous parler raison.	FREDERIC: Now, if you'll listen to reason–
ROSE: Nous ne voulons pas!	ROSE: We won't.
ELLEN: Non, non, nous ne voulons pas!	ELLEN: No, we won't.
FRÉDÉRIC: Voyons, Gérald, toi qui as des droits ou du moins un semblant de droits, puisque tu auras le bonheur d'épouser miss Ellen dans quelques semaines.	FREDERIC: Look, Gerald, you have some rights, or seem to have since you're going to marry Ellen in a couple of weeks . . .
GÉRALD: Je n'userai jamais de mes droits pour contrarier ma femme.	GERALD: I will never use my rights against my wife.
ELLEN: (Lui tendant la main.) A la bonne heure, voilá une bonne parole!	ELLEN: (Giving him her hand.) Well said, darling.
FRÉDÉRIC: Oh! ces amoureux! (A Gérald.) L'aventure, d'ailleurs, ne te déplaît pas. (A miss Ellen.) Vous ne le connaissez pas bien, miss Ellen; il aime le danger, il y met de la poésie! c'est un rêveur de l'impossible, un enthousiaste de l'inconnu; il ai perd avec amour dans les nuages bleu.	FREDERIC: Oh! these lovers! (To Gerald) The prospect does not displease, then. (To Ellen) You don't know him well. He loves danger and puts poetry into it. He's a dreamer of the impossible, an enthusiast of the unknown. He's lost with love in the blue shadows.
ELLEN: (Vivement.) Je ne le lui reproche pas.	ELLEN: (With spirit.) I don't blame him.
FRÉDÉRIC: (Gaiement.) Au contraire, n'est-ce pas? C'est moi qui suis prosaïque. Je vous jure pourtant que si j'étais seul.	FREDERIC: (Gaily.) On the contrary, eh? Well, I'm the prosaic one. But let me tell you, if only I could . . . .
ROSE: Quoi? Nous ne nous exposons pas beaucoup, puisque nous ne rencontrons personne. On dirait cette demeure inhabitée.	ROSE: What? We're not taking a chance. We won't meet anyone. My guess is that no-one lives here.
FRÉDÉRIC: Je vous répète qu'elle est parfaitement habitée par un brahmane fanatique qui se nomme Nilakantha. Il desservait une pagode que la conquête a ruinée, ce qu'il nous pardonne difficilement.	FREDERIC: I tell you, this house certainly is inhabited by a fanatic Brahmin named Nilakantha. He built a pagoda here which was ruined in the conquest and now he hates all of us.
MRS. B: Mais j'en vois encore partout des pagodes!	MRS. B: I see plenty of pagodas here.
FRÉDÉRIC: Dans les villes, oui; nous aurons même demain une des plus grandes fêtes indoues. Tous les brahmanes des environs vont se réunir à la grande pagode, mais dans les campagnes, le culte disparaît peu à peu. Nilakantha s'est retiré sur ce coin de terre qu'il a consacré à Brahma, de sa propre autorité, et il vit des modestes offrandes de quelques Hindous qui lui sont restés fidèles. Il a une fille.	FREDERIC: In the cities, yes. In fact, tomorrow's one of their big holidays. And all the Brahmins will gather in the main pagoda. But in the country the cult is gradually disappearing. Nilakantha has retired into this obscure place which he has dedicated to Brahma, living on the modest contributions of his few remaining faithful Hindus. He has a daughter.
ELLEN: Une fille?	ELLEN: A daughter.
MRS. B: C'est gens-là ont des filles?	MRS. B: Do these people have daughters?
FRÉDÉRIC: Elle se nomme Lakmé.	FREDERIC: Her name is Lakmé.
ELLEN: Oh! le joli nom: Lakmé!	ELLEN: What a beautiful name: Lakmé!
ROSE: Je voudrais bien la voir.	ROSE: I'd like to see her.
FRÉDÉRIC: Il ne manquerait plus que cela. Mais vous ne savez donc pas, Européenne que vous êtes, que cette petite personne née dans une pagode, vouée à quelque Dieu ou à quelque déesse du ciel indien, se croit elle-même d'essence divine. Elle méprise tout ce qui se passe en dehors de cette enceinte et elle ne se montre pas.	FREDERIC: It's quite impossible. You don't understand, being European, that this little person born in a pagoda, vowed to some god or goddess in the Indian heaven, believes herself divine. Everything outside is profane and she never shows herself.
ELLEN: Et vous croyez qu'elle est belle?	ELLEN: Do you think she's beautiful?
FRÉDÉRIC: Ravissante, dit-on.	FREDERIC: They say she's ravishing.
ELLEN: Quand une femme est si jolie Elle a bien tort de se cacher.	ELLEN: When a woman is youthful and jolly, She is wrong to hide herself;

FRÉDÉRIC: Dans ce pays tout est folie
Et j'admets tout, moi, sans brancher.

GÉRALD: Une idole qu'on divinise!

ROSE: Qu l'on enferme avec ferveur!

GÉRALD: Et qui jamais ne s'humanise!

MRS. B: Je la crois laide à faire peur!

ELLEN: Une femme est toujours sensible
Au juste hommage qu'on lui rend.

FRÉDÉRIC: En Europe, c'est bien possible,
Mais ici, c'est tout diffèrent!

GÉRALD, ROSE, ELLEN, MRS. B:
Beaux faiseurs de systèmes,
Amoureux du changement,
Laissez là vos poèmes
Et raisonnons froidement;
Les femmes sont partout les mêmes
Fort heureusement.

FRÉDÉRIC: Je hais tous les systèmes,
J'observe tout simplement
Sans faire de poémes,
Les femmes changent vraiment
Et ne sont point partout les mêmes,
Fort heureusement!

ELLEN: Si nous cherchions un peu sa trace
Dans cet enclos mystérieux?

FRÉDÉRIC: On! non—ce serait d'une audace
A faire bondir tous leurs dieux.

ROSE: (Railleuse.) A-t-elle une grâce divine?

FRÉDÉRIC: (Avec bonhomie.)
Mon Dieu! moi, je me l'imagine.

GÉRALD: (Raillant.) Fraudrait-il vivre à ses genoux?

MRS. B: (Ironique.) Dites donc qu'elle est mieux que nous!

FRÉDÉRIC: Je ne dis pas cete sottise.
Non. Mais, sous ce beau ciel de feu,
Les femmes que leur soleil grise,
Des nôtres diffèrent un peu.
Leur vertu bizarre
Manque d'apparat;
L'amour s'en empare
Sans loi ni contrat.
Ce n'est plus l'amour aux façons coquettes
Ce n'est plus ce tendre et doux sentiment
Un bonheur d'allures discrètes
Qui finit très moralement.
Non, leur coeur s'enivre
Du plaisir d'aimer,
Et pour elles, vivre
Ce n'est que charmer!

FREDERIC: But in this strange land all is folly.
Yet, we must abide by its rulings.

GERALD: Like an idol deified ever,

ROSE: Shut up from the light by herself;

GERALD: Stirred up with humanity never,

MRS. B: She'd be a perfect fright for me.

ELLEN: Every woman listens with pleasure
To the praises that men bring to her;

FREDERIC: In Europe it is so in a measure,
But here it is a different thing!

GERALD, ROSE, ELLEN, MRS. B:
Ah! adepts in plans aesthetic,
Loving changes and brilliant show;
Lay aside all your dreams poetic,
Let us reason with calmness now.

FREDERIC: I hate all systems aesthetic,
And say and think what all know;
Without a fancy poetic,
I see only what the facts show.

ELLEN: Should we seek them for gracious footprints,
In these calm, mysterious abodes?

FREDERIC: Oh! no, it would be something audacious,
And a bustle it would make among their gods.

ROSE: (Jestingly.) Then has she divine grace within her?

FREDERIC: My god! I would imagine so.

GERALD: (Jestingly.) Must we live, then, on bended knee?

MRS. B: (Ironically.) Say then she's better than we!

FREDERIC: I'll not speak in such foolish fashion,
But beneath this hot sky aflame,
The women here, burning with passion
As our own, are not quite the same.
Their peculiar virtue needs some outward show,
Though love engrossed, they neither love nor contract know.
It is not love, in our fine, coquettish manner,
Not a state of warm, gentle sentiment,
That often ends in moral sweet content.
No, their hearts are full while love is warm;
Life, for them, is knowing how to charm.
Living, is to charm.

ELLEN: Ce sont des femmes idéales
Qui charment instantanément
Et nous leur paraîtrons banales,
Nous, qui voulons plaire autrement.
Nous sommes conquises
Avec moins d'éclat;
De peur des surprises,
La raison combat.
Mais elles n'ont pas, vos enchanteresses,
Les effrois charmants des premiers aveux
Ni les troubles, ni les ivresses
D'un bonheur que l'on rêve à deux
Ces beautés célestes
Savent tout charmer,
Mais nous, plus modestes.
Nous savons aimer.

FRÉDÉRIC: Ne croyez pas que je compare.

ELLEN, ROSE ET MRS. B: C'est votre esprit qui vous égare.

GÉRALD: (Riant.) Il est naïf, en vérité!

FRÉDÉRIC: Je dis ce qu'on m'a raconté.

ROSE: (Apercevant les bijoux sur table de pierre.) Tiens! des bijoux de femme!

ELLEN: De la fille du brahmane!

ROSE: Qu'ils sont gracieux de forme!

FRÉDÉRIC: (Vivement.) Mesdemoiselles! n'y touchez pas.

ELLEN: Rassurez-vous, je n'y toucherai pas puisqu'ils sont sacrés. Mais Gérald pourrait en prendre le dessin!

FRÉDÉRIC: Vous voulez qu'il s'installe avec ses crayons?

GÉRALD: Pourquoi pas?

FRÉDÉRIC: Comment! pourquoi pas? Parce qu'en entrant ici, nous n'avons pas seulement commis une violation de domicile comdamnable en tous pays, mais un véritable sacrilège, la demeure d'un brahmane étant sacrée comme la pagode elle-même. Or, un sacrilége commis par un Européen n'est jamais reste impuni. Le coupable tombe un jour ou l'autre frappé par une main invisible.

MRS. B: Ah! mon Dieu, pourquoi ne nous avez-vous pas dit ça tout de suite?

GÉRALD: Les officiers de Sa Majesté la reine d'Angleterre se moquent des brahmanes.

FRÉDÉRIC: Il ne s'agit pas de courage avec des ennemis qui ne se montrent jamais, qui poursuivent leur vengeance dans l'ombre sans

ELLEN: Such women we should call ideal,
Who charm all instantaneously;
And we seem commonplace and real
Who may be pleasing otherwise.
We're subdued, with less of brilliant noise and light;
Against surprises sudden we let reason fight.
But they've not, you know, your fine enchantresses,
Felt the sweet dismay when love is first declared.
Nor the pleasures, or the distresses,
Or the bliss, when one's dreams are shared.
Those celestial beauties know how to move hearts.
We know how to love with more modest feeling.

FREDERIC: Do not think that I compare

ELLEN, ROSE AND MRS. B: It is but his wit that leads him straying.

GERALD: He deals with facts, we plainly see.

FREDERIC: I say it as reported to me.

ROSE: (Perceiving jewels.) See! lovely jewels!

ELLEN: The Brahmin's daughter's.

ROSE: They're grand.

FREDERIC: Girls! Don't touch them.
(Quickly.)

ELLEN: Don't worry. Since they're sacred, I won't touch them. But Gerald can copy the design.

FREDERIC: What! Start drawing right here?

GERALD: Why not?

FREDERIC: Why not? Because, in coming here, we have not only violated privacy, but have committed a sacrilege, the Brahmin's home being as sacred as his pagoda. A sacrilege committed by a European never remains unpunished. Sooner or later, an unseen hand strikes the fatal blow.

MRS. B: Why didn't you say so in the first place?

GERALD: The officers of Her Majesty the Queen just laugh at that nonsense.

FREDERIC: It's not a question of courage with enemies who never show themselves but pursue their vengeance, unhurried, waiting for se hâter, attendant l'instant propice, sûrs que pas un des leurs ne les dénoncera. Rappelez-vous que nous sommes en pays conquis.

MRS. B: Oui! oui! en pays barbare. Quand je pense que nous serions si bien à Londres, à Hyde-Park, humant ce joli brouillard qui nous fait le teint frais. Maintenant, mesdemoiselles, j'userai de mon autorité.

GÉRALD: Je propose une transaction. Vous allez retourner à la ville, respectable mistress Bentson.

MRS. B: Merci.

GÉRALD: Avec ces demoiselles et Frédéric. Moi, je resterai pour copier ces bijoux qui plaisent à miss Ellen.

ELLEN: (À Gérald.) Si pourtant vous deviez courir un danger.

GÉRALD: (Riant.) Pas le moindre. Aussitôt que je vois arriver quelqu'un, je me sauve. Je n'y mettrai pas d'amour-propre.

ELLEN: Je porterai ces bijoux-là, le jour de notre mariage.

GÉRALD: C'est alors que je les trouverai jolis.

MRS. B: Eh bien, mesdemoiselles?

ROSE: (À Ellen.) Je regrette de m'en aller.

ELLEN: Je le regrette bien davantage.

FRÉDÉRIC: (À Gérald.) Rappelle-toi que tu as tort.

MRS. B: Monsieur Frédéric.

FRÉDÉRIC: (En sortant.) C'est un héros, lui! Tu es un héros! Et me je suis ridicule, parfaitement ridicule. Voilà, généralement en ce monde la vie des hommes sages.

MRS. B: Monsieur Frédéric.
(Ils sortent.)
(Seul, se préparant à dessiner.)

GÉRALD: Prendre le dessin d'un bijou,
Est-ce donc aussi grave? Ah!
Frédéric est fou!
(Il se dirige vers les bijoux, puis s'arrête.)
Mais d'où vient maintenant cette craint insensée;
Quel sentiment surnaturel
A troublé ma pensée
Devant ce calme solennel!
(S'animant.)
Fille de mon caprice
L'inconnue est devant mes yeux.
Sa voix à mon oreille glisse
Des mots mystérieux!
Fantaisie aux divine mensonges. Tu ne viens m'égarer encore. Va retourne au pays du songes. Ô fantaisie aux ailes d'or. Ô fantaisie aux ailes d'or! Va! va! va, retourne au pays des songes. Ô fantaisie aux ailes d'or. Au bras polide la païenne Cet annelet dut s'en façer! Elle tiendrait ton te en la mienne, 'La main the proper time and certain of secrecy. Remember you're in a conquered country.

MRS. B: Yes. A barbarous country. When I think how happy we were in London, in Hyde Park, breathing that beautiful invigorating fog! Well, girls, I'm going to use my authority.

GERALD: I have a suggestion to make. You go back to town, Mrs. Benson.

MRS. B: Thanks.

GERALD: With Frederic and the girls. I'll stay here to copy these jewels that Ellen likes.

ELLEN: (To Gerald.) If there's any danger.

GERALD: (Laughing.) Not the least. If anyone comes, I'll go. I won't be ashamed.

ELLEN: I'll wear these jewels on our wedding day.

GERALD: That's why I like them.

MRS. B: Well, girls.

ROSE: (To Ellen.) I hate to go.

ELLEN: I, too.

FREDERIC: (To Gerald.) I think you're making a mistake.

MRS. B: Mr. Frederic . . . .

FREDERIC: (Leaving.) A hero! He's a hero! And I am ridiculous. That's the way life is. Wisdom looks foolish.

MRS. B: Mr. Frederic. . .
(They go out.)
(Gerald alone, preparing to sketch.)

GERALD: Taking the design of a jewel, – is that so serious an action? Ah! Frederic is mad!
(He moves toward the jewels, then stops.)
But then, from where comes, this foolish forewarning of danger; what supernatural fancy has disturbed my reflections, amid these calm and solemn shades?
(Becoming animated.)
Daughter of my caprices, the unknown stands before my sight; her voice plain to my hearing, utters this one mysterious word, No! no! Idle fancy, cradled by delusion, You mislead me now, as of old. Go to dreamland, turn back in confusion, O phantom dove, with wings of Gold, O dove fantastic, with wings of gold! Go! go! to the dreamland, O sweet illusion! Fair dove fantastic, with wings of gold. Of some fair maid folding round her arm, This bracelet rich must oft ent-

Et ce collier encor parfumé d'elle, De sa personne encor tout enbaume A pu sentir battre son coeur fidele, Tout tressaillant au nom du bien aimé, Tout tressaillant au nom du bien aimé. non! non! (Reconçant à dessiner.)
Eh bien! non! Je ne veux plus toucher à ces bijoux. Ce serait, pour moi, comme une profanation. Lakmé, elle s'appelle Lakmé.
(Il va pour s'en aller quand il entend la voix de Lakmé a la barque.)
C'est elle, les mains pleines de fleurs. C'est elle!
(Il se cache dans un massif d'arbustes.)
Gérald, caché, puis Lakmé et Mallika.

MALLIKA, LAKMÉ: (Devant la statue de Ganeça.) O toi qui nous protèges,
Garde-nous des pièges
De nos persécuteurs!
(Elles posent des fleurs aux pieds de l'idole.)

LAKMÉ: (À Mallika.) Et maintenant, dans cette eau transparente
Qui, sur le sable frais, murmure insouciante,
D'un soleil accablant vient braver les ardeurs.

MALL: Oui, profitons de l'heure propice
Où les arbres touffus
Répandent sur la rive une ombre protectrice.
(Elle disparaît vivement derrière les arbres.)
(Lakmé, Gérald, caché.)

LAKMÉ: (Défait le manteau qui l'enveloppe, puis au moment de suivre Mallika, elle s'arrête rêveuse.) Mais je sens en mon coeur des murmures confus,
Les fleurs me paraissent plus belles wine. Ah! what delight would be the holding, The hand that passes there, in mine! This ring of gold .. my dream supposes, Often has followed, wandering for hours, With the small foot, that but reposes On moss banks or beds of flowers. This necklace too, with her own perfume scented . . . Embalmed as yet with sweets from her lips that came . . . Has felt the true heart, . . . beating glad, contented, Trembling with joy at the one well-love name, Trembling at sound of one . . . beloved name. No! No! Away fly, found illusions, Swiftly passing visions That my reason disturb . . . . Idle fancy cradled by delusion, You mislead me now again Back to dream-land, go, in swift confusion! O fantastic dove, with wings of gold, O fantastic dove, with wings of gold! Go! Go! . . to the dream-land, O fair illusion, O fair illusion, with wings of gold. O fair illusion, with wings of gold!

(Renounces his intention of sketching.)
Well no! I'll not touch those jewels again.
It would be for me a sort of profanation.
Lakmé, she calls herself Lakmé!
(He is about to leave when he hears the voice of Lakmé from the boat.)
It is she! with her hands filled with flowers.
It is she!
(He hides himself in a thicket of shrubbery.)
Gerald, (concealed); then Lakmé, Mallika.

LAKMÉ and MALLIKÁ: (Standing before the statue Ganesá.) O you who watches over us,
From our foes before us
Keep us unharmed we pray.
(They place the flowers at the feet of the idol.)

LAKMÉ: (To Malliká.) And briefly now,
In the stream cool and flowing,
Which over the golden sand murmurs
Heedless going,
Of an overpowering sun,
Come and brave the hot rays!

MALL: The moment, now, will find advantageous,
Where the dense forest trees spread over the mossy bank,
A shelter cool, umbrageous!
(She quickly disappears among the trees.)
(Lakmé, Gerald.)
(Concealed.)

LAKMÉ: (Having laid aside her mantle is about to follow her, but stops thoughtfully.) But I feel in my heart sudden movements confused!
The flowers are seeming more fair

Le ciel est plus resplendissant,
Les bois ont des chansons nouvelles
L'air qui passe est plus caressant;
Je ne sais quel parfum m'enivre,
Tout palpite et commence à vivre.
Pourquoi dans les grands bois aimé-je à m'égarer
Pour y pleurer?
Pourquoi suis-je attristée au chant d'une colombe,
Par une fleur fanée, une feuille qui tombe?
Et cependant ces pleurs ont des charmes pour moi,
Je me sens heureuse! Pourquoi?
Pourquoi chercher un sens au murmure des eaux
Dans les roseaux?
Pourquoi ces voluptés à sentir dans l'espace
Comme un souffle divin qui m'embaume et qui passe?
Parfois aussi ma bouche a souri malgré moi,
Je me sens heureuse! Pourquoi?
(Après avoir vu Gérald et poussant un grand cri.)
Ah! Mallika!
(Entrent Lakmé, Hadji, Mallika.)

MALL: Lakmé! Quel danger te menace?
(Hadji paraît.)

LAKMÉ: (Maîtrisant son émotion.)
Aucun! Je me trompais! Tout m'effraie aujourd'hui!
Mon père ne vient pas, et pourtant l'heure passe.
Allez tous deux vers lui!
(Mallika et Hadji sortent en la regardant avec étonnement.)
(Lakmé, Gérald.)
(Lakmé, dès que les deux serviteurs sont sortis, va droit à Gérald qui a fait un pas vers elle et qui la regarde avec ravissement.)

LAKMÉ: (Courroucćee.) D'où viens-tu? Que veux-tu? Pour punir ton audace
On t'aurait tué devant moi.
Mais je rougis de mon effroi,
Et je ne veux pas qu'on sache,
Que le pied d'un barbare a souillé d'une tache
La demeure sacrée où mon père se cache,
Oublie et pour jamais ce qui frappe les yeux.
Va-t-en! je suis fille des Dieux!

GÉRALD: Oublier que je t'ai vue
Te redressant tout émue
Sous un geste triomphant?
De colère frémissante,

to me,
The sky is more splendid in hue;
The wood is teeming with new bird-songs,
Sweeter kisses the wind never blew.
What's the perfume here that excites me,
And to new life now invites me!
But why?
Ah! why in these grand woods
Do I love to roam and creep,
Is it to weep?
Why is my heart so saddened
At voices of ring-doves calling,
At sight of flowers fading,
Or of brown leaflets falling?
And yet these tears have charms for me,
Even though I sign.
And I feel that I still am happy,
But why?
Why seek a sense to find
In the stream's murmuring flow
Among the reeds below?
From where came all these sweet delights,
While through space comes the feeling,
Like a breath half divine,
Leaving balm, then on-stealing?
My lips, at times, with smiles with sadness defy,
And I feel I am happy,
But why?

LAKMÉ: (Perceiving Gerald, and with loud cry.) Ah, Mallikà!

MALLIKÀ: (Running back to her.) Lakmé! are you threatened with danger?
(Hadji runs in.)

LAKMÉ: (Conquering her emotion.) Ah, no.
I was deceived. Trifles frighten me to-day; my father does not come, though the time is past already! Go, both, in search of him. Away!
(Mallikà and Hadji depart, looking at her with astonishment.)
(Lakmé, Gerald.)
(So soon as the servants are gone, Lakmé walks straight up to Gerald, who has taken a step towards her, and gazes upon her with ravishment.)

LAKMÉ: *(Angrily.)*From where did you come? What do you want?
Your rash boldness to punish,
They should have killed you here on sight!
I blush, ashamed of my fright!
To no one here shall it be said that a barbarian has with the presence of a task sealed the domain where my father hides. Be gone and forget forever what your eyes have seen. Depart! I'm the child of the gods!

GERALD: (Warmly.) Forget that I saw you standing
There, erect, with eyes expanding,
In a posture of command?

Inflexible, menaçante
Avec ce regard d'enfant?

LAKMÉ: Jamais le plus téméraire,
Jamais un Hindou, mon frère,
N'oserait parler ainsi.
Et le Dieu qui me protège
Punira ton sacrilège
Va-t'en! va-t'en! sors d'ici!

GÉRALD: Oublier que je t'ai vue,
Et cette grâce ingénue,
Et ce charme pénétrant?
Ah! tu veux que je t'oublie
Lorsque je sens que ma vie
A tes lèvres se suspend?

LAKMÉ: (Un peu radoucie.) Tu ne savais pas, sans doute,
Quel danger tu courais. Maintenant, suis ta route,
Va! c'est la mort dont rien ne saurait a garder,
Va!

GÉRALD: (Sans bouger.) Laisse-moi te regarder.

LAKMÉ: (À part.) C'est pour moi dont il sait la haine,
Et c'est pour me voir un instant
Qu'il brave la mort, qu'il l'attend?
Quelle force vers moi l'entraîne?
Rien ne l'épouvante?
(À Gérald.)
D'où te vient
Cette audace surhumaine?
Quel est le Dieu qui te soutient?

GÉRALD: Ah c'est le Dieu de la jeunesse C'est la Dieu du printemps, C'est le Dieu qui nous caresse De ses baisers ardents, par qui s'ouvrent les calices Des roses chaque jour; C'est le Dieu de tes caprices C'est l'amour!.

LAKMÉ: Il m'a semblé qu'une flamme Avait passe sur mon âme, L'empissant tout d'èmoi! Quels sont ces mots nouveaux pour moi? Ah! C'est le Dieu de la jeunesse C'est le Dieu du printemps C'est the Dieu qui nous caresse De ses baisers ardent Par qui s'ouivrent les calices Des roses chaque jour C'est le Dieu de mes caprices! C'est l'amour, C'est l'amour!

GÉRALD: Ah! reste, reste encor, pensive et rougis sante, Laisse passer sur la douce pâleur, le charme enchanteur De ta pudour naisante!

LAKMÉ, GÉRALD: Ah! C'est le Dieu de la jeunesse. C'est le Dieu du printemps C'est le Dieu qui nous caresse De ses baisers ardents Par qui s'ouvrent les calices Des roses chaque jour. C'est le Dieu de tes caprices, C'est l'amour C'est le Trembling, with your anger lowering;

Stern, unyielding, overpowering,
With that childlike gaze, so grand!

LAKMÉ: So boldly; never has another,
If Hindu, or even my brother,
Dared address such speech to me,
And the gods still watching over me;
Will chastise your sin before me,
Now, depart, away, quickly flee!

GERALD: Forget that I saw you standing
There, with simple grace commanding,
And that penetrating charm?
Go, forget, are you decreeing,
When I feel my very being Hangs upon your lips so warm?

LAKMÉ: (Aside and softened.)
Doubtless you had no suspicion
Of the danger you incur;
Now depart, with quick decision,
Or meet death, which no power can deter.

GERALD: (Without moving.) Let me stay and gaze.

LAKMÉ: (Aside.) It is for me, though he knows I hate him;
To behold me, here he stays,
Braving death by his delays!
Strong the force is that draws him towards me:
Nothing frightens him!
(To Gerald.)
From where comes to you that superhuman courage?
What god is that who lends you aid?

GERALD: Ah it is the god of youth and beauty; It is the young God of Spring, Who repays love for duty Brings ardent kisses; Opens for us the delicious cups of roses in the grove; It is the god of capricious whims, Ah! It is love.

LAKMÉ: Saints inherit its breath from the realms, Has seemed to pass over my spirit, Filling me with ecstacy! What words are those, So new to me? Ah! It is the god of youth and beauty; It is the young god of Spring, Who repays us love for duty, And brings warm kisses. Opens for us the cups delicious Of roses in the grove; It is the god of capricious whims, Ah! It is love. Ah It is love.

GERALD: Ah! stay you! remain here. Thus pensive fair and blushing Let pass I pray . . over that pale cheek again . . That sweetest Of charms of mildest rosy flushing.

LAKME, GERALD: Ah! .. It is the god of youth and beauty, It is the sweet god of spring, Who repays with love our duty, And brings kisses warm; opens for us the delicious cups of roses in the grove; It is the god of capricious whims, Ah! It Dieu de la jeunesse! C'est l'amour!

LAKMÉ: (Poussant un grand cri.)
Grands dieux! Mon père! Fuis!
(Suppliant.)
Par pitié pour moi!

GÉRALD: (En sortant.) Non, je ne t'oublierai plus, ô douce vision!
(Lakmé, Nilakantha, Hadji puis des Hindous.)
(Gérald est sorti quand le Brahmane, guidé par Hadji paraît à la porte.)

HADJI: (Montrant la clôture brisée.) Viens, là, là!

NILA: Dans ma demeure?
Un profane est entré chez moi!

LAKMÉ: Je meurs d'effroi!

NILA: Vengeance! Il faut qu'il meure!
(Des Hindous qui sont entrés sur les pas du Brahmane répentent son cri de vengeance pendant que Lakmé reste terrifiée.)

■ ACTE II

Promeneurs, Marchands, Matelots, un Domben, un Chinois, un Cipaye.

CHOEUR: Allons, avant que midi sonne
Venez, on ne vend plus, on donne,
Jamais nous ne trompons personne.
Venez, le marché va finir.

Et ce mouchoir merveilleux!

Et ravissants pour les yeux!

Et ces feuilles de bétel,

for my sake fly!

GERALD: (Departing.) No, I'll never forget you; O fair vision!
(Goes quickly out.)
Lakmé, Nilakantha, Hadji; then Hindus (Gerald is gone, when the Brahmin, guided by Hadji, appears at the door.)

HADJI: (Showing the broken enclosure.) Come here!

NILAKANTHA: (Indignantly.)
Here, in my dwelling, the profane one has defiled my home!

LAKMÉ: I die of fright!

NILAKANTHA: The foe must die!
Ah! Vengeance!
(The Hindu entering, join the cry. Lakmé remains terrified.)

■ ACT II

A public square. Numerous Indian and Chinese shops, bazaars, displays of rugs, stuffs, etc. An awning of a café or confectionery shop, divans, and two low bamboo chairs; little tables, encrusted with pearl. In the background, a grand pagoda. Time, near noon; the market hour.
(Chorus and market scene.)

Promenaders, merchants, sailors, a soothsayer, a Chinaman, a sepoy. At the rising of the curtain, dealers in stuffs, jewels, and fruits call out to the promenaders who are come to the festival.

CHORUS: Come in before the noon bell rings;
We sell no more, but freely give you;
We give away, and don't deceive you.
So come, the market soon will close,
And we shall all repose.

HINDUS: (1st group.) Look and see these slippers easy,
There gay kerchiefs, wondrous dyes.

CHINESE: (2nd group.) Here are cakes, quite sure to please you,
And as tempting to the eyes.

FRUITERERS: (3rd group.) See these golden, ripe bananas,
Leaves of betel, fresh and strong;
Braided mats of green lianas,
Taste, they will prolong you lives.

MATELOTS: (4e Groupe.) Servirez-vous les profanes,
Fils de Brahma, roi du ciel!
(mistress Bentson puis Frédéric et Rose.)

MRS. B: (Égarée dans la foule.)
Ces égoïstes,
Peu formalistes,
Causent de leurs amours
Et me perdent

UN DOMBEN: Madame, la bonne aventure?

MRS. B: Laissez-moi, je vous en conjure!

UN MARCHAND: Voyez ces bijoux dorés.

MRS. B: Messieurs, vous m'exaspérez!

UN CIPAYE: (S'approchant.) Laissez madame, on la désole!
(Il lui vole sa montre.)

MRS. B: Ah! merci. Mais il me vole!

LE DOMBEN: Je vais lire dans votre main
Quel bonheur vous attend demain!

MRS. B: Mais, monsieur, laissez-moi tranquille!

LE MARCHAND: Cet élixir rend la santé
Et donne aux femmes la beauté!

MRS. B: Merci, monsieur, c'est inutile!

LE DOMBEN: Encore un mot!

LE MARCHAND: A moi plutôt!

MRS. B: (Furibonde.) Assez! je suis la gouvernante
De la fille du gouverneur!

FRÉDÉRIC: (Accourant.) C'est mistress Bentson en fureur!

ROSE: Qu'avez vous?

MRS. B: On me violente!

LE CHOEUR: (Reprend comme ai rien ne s'était passé.) Allons, avant que midi sonne
Venez, on ne vend plus, on donne,
Jamais nous ne trompons personne,
Venez, le marché va finir!

FRÉDÉRIC ET ROSE: Fault-il s'effrayer de la sorte
De quelques honnêtes marchands
Trop pressants!

MRS. B: Voilà qu'ils font les innocents,
Mai c'est ma montre qu'on emporte!
(On entend la cloche du marché.)
Ciel quel est ce nouveau tapage?

SAILORS: (4th group. Rapping on a table.) Come help us quick, you believers, Sons of Brahma, come along.
(Mrs. Benson; then Rose and Frederic.)

MRS. B: (Lost in the crowd.) These selfish lovers,
These careless rovers,
Talk love from morn till night,
And of me they quite lose sight.

SOOTHSAYER: (To Mrs. Benson.) My lady, I'll tell you your fortune.

MRS. B: Let me pass, or I'll compel you.

MERCHANT: Look here! gold jewels are these.

MRS. B: Sirs, you exasperate me!

SEPOY: (Steals her watch.) In peace leave madam; you treat her poorly.

MRS. B: Thank you, sir. But he robbed me!

SOOTHSAYER: In your hand pray let me read
What good luck you'll reach; take heed.

MRS. B: But, sir, leave me tranquil only.

MERCHANT: This new elixir health restores,
And makes women beauteous by scores.

MRS. B: Thank you sir; no use, I tell you.

SOOTHSAYER: Spare me one word.

MERCHANT: To me speak fair.

MRS. B: (Enraged.) I'm governess–take notice–of the governor's young daughter here!

FREDERIC: (Running in.) Mrs. Benson! Mad, it is clear.

ROSE: (Running in.) Mistress Benson, dear. What is here?

MRS. B: They insult me grossly.

CHORUS: (As if nothing had happened.) Come in before the noon bell rings,
We sell no more, but freely give you;
We give away and don't deceive you.
So come, the market soon will close,
And we shall all repose.

FREDERIC and ROSE: Though afraid, must you speak crossly
What these honest men may hear?

MRS. B: Observe how guileless they appear!
My watch, alas, they've stolen from me.
What's this new rumpus they are making?

FRÉDÉRIC: C'est le signal du départ, Le marché déménage! (Les marchands se retirene peu à peu.) (La musique continue en sourdine.)	FREDERIC: It is the signal for upbreaking; It is the warning now to close. (The peddlers leave gradually. The music continues.)
MRS. B: Ils sont assourdissants! Je demande calme, un peu de calme!	MRS. B: They are deafening! I ask for quiet –
FRÉDÉRIC: Il faudra y renouncer pour aujourd'hui mistress Bentson. Moi, j'adore ce tapage!	FREDERIC: You must renounce that for to-day, Mrs. B. Ah! I adore this rumpus!
MRS. B: Cependant, le marché est fini.	MRS. B: Meanwhile the market is over.
FRÉDÉRIC: Mais la fête commence.	FREDERIC: But the festival commences!
MRS. B: Et que vont-ils faire encore?	MRS. B: And what will they do now?
FRÉDÉRIC: Ils vont danser sur toutes les places chanter à tous les coins de rue. La foule se plait à aller de l'une a l'autre tantôt ici, tantôt là, c'est très amusant.	FREDERIC: They will dance on all the squares, and sing at the street corners. The crowds delight in going from one to another; now here, now there. It is quite amusing.
MRS. B: Mais nous avons perdu miss Ellen.	MRS. B: But we have lost Miss Ellen.
FRÉDÉRIC: Elle est sous la garde de son fiancé.	FREDERIC: She is in the care of her lover.
ROSE: Oh! elle ne court aucun danger. Voici les danseuses.	ROSE: Oh! She is not in any danger. Here are the dancers!
MRS. B: Quelles danseuses?	MRS. B: What dancers?
FRÉDÉRIC: N'aviez-vous jamais entendu parler des bayadères de l'Inde?	FREDERIC: Have you never heard tell of the Bayaderes of India?
MRS. B: Que font-elles ordinairement?	MRS. B: What do they do, ordinarily?
FRÉDÉRIC: Elles vivent dans les pagodes pour la plus grande joie des prêtres de Brahma.	FREDERIC: They live in the pagodas for the pleasure of the priests of Brahma.
MRS. B: Ce sont des vestales?	MRS. B: Are they vestals?
FRÉDÉRIC: Si vous voulez. Ce sont des vestales qui n'ont rien à garder. (Ballet.) (Composé de différentes parties appelées Terana, Kaklah, Persian, etc. A la fin du ballet, la foule se retire suivant a bayadères. Pendant qu'elles sortent on voit passer Nilakantha et sa fille. Il est revêtu du costume de Sanniassy ou pétinent hindou.) (Rose, Frédéric, Mistress Bentson, puis Gérald, et Ellen)	FREDERIC: If you like. They are vestals with nothing to guard. (Ballet of the Bayaderes.) (At the close of which Nilakantha and daughter are seen. He in the costume of a Hindu penitent or beggar. The Bayaderes retire, followed by the crowd. Nilakantha goes back with Lakmé.) (Rose, Frederic, Mrs. Benson, and later on, Gerald and Ellen.)
ROSE: (À Frédéric.) Voyez donc ce vieillard et cette jeune fille ils ne ressemblent pas aux autres!	ROSE: Yonder see that old man Leaning upon his daughter.
FRÉDÉRIC: C'est un moine mendiant ou Saniassy, qui vient à le fête dans l'espoir d'y trouver quelques menus profits. Et la jeune fille? Doit chanter des complaintes, des mystères ou des scenes dramatiques dont les Hindous raffolent.	FREDERIC: It is a Sanniassay. He wanders about And scorns not the humblest of offerings, While his daughter sings sacred ballads, Which the Hindus will hearken to the live-long day.
MRS. B: Ah! voici miss Ellen. Ne nous séparons plus, je vous en conjure. (Miss Ellen est entrée au bras de Gérald.)	MRS. B: Ah! Miss Ellen! at last!
FRÉDÉRIC: Ah! miss Ellen, comme on voit bien que vous êtes fière de donner le bras à un héros!	FREDERIC: And how contented She rests upon his arm!
ELLEN: Ne plaisantez pas. J'ai été très inquiète et je me reprochais d'avoir laiseé Gérald dans le jardin de ce brahmane.	ELLEN: Yes, in truth, I am happy! See my heart, Full of sunshine and love, Is all gladness!
ROSE: Mais il n'a pas rapporté les dessins qu'on lui demandait.	ROSE: He hasn't brought you the designs you wanted.
FRÉDÉRIC: Bah! vraiment?	FREDERIC: Really?
ELLEN: Il a eu raison.	ELLEN: He was right.
GÉRALD: Le fille du brahmane était là cueillant des fleurs.	GERALD: The Brahmin's daughter was there, picking flowers.
FRÉDÉRIC: Tu l'as vue!	FREDERIC: You saw her?
GÉRALD: Je l'ai aperçue.	GERALD: Yes.
FRÉDÉRIC: Ah! ah!	FREDERIC: Oh!
ELLEN: J'aurais eu de vrais remords si ma curiosité avait causé le moindre chagrin à cette jeune fille. Voilà que maintenant elle va m'interesser, la petite déesse.	ELLEN: I hope my curiosity hasn't caused her any trouble. That goddess interests me.
FRÉDÉRIC: (A part.) Elle ne s'aperçoit pas qu'il est tout à fait rêveur, l'ami Gérald. Il y a des grâces d'état.	FREDERIC: (Apart.) She doesn't see that he's just a dreamer. What a wonderful way to be. (To Gerald, undertone.) You know we must report at 3?
GÉRALD: Vraiment?	GERALD: Yes?
FRÉDÉRIC: Le régiment part cette nuit, pour combattre des rebelles.	FREDERIC: The regiment leaves tonight to fight the rebels.
GÉRALD: Il faut absolument le cacher à ces dames.	GERALD: We mustn't let the women know.
FRÉDÉRIC: C'est cela. (A mistress Bentson.) Je vous conseille maintenant, mistress Bentson, de rentrer avec ces demoiselles au palais du gouverneur. Il n'y aura plus à voir que la cérémonie de la pagode et le passage de la déesse Dourga. Nous irons vous prendre.	FREDERIC: Right. (To Mrs. Benson.) I advise you now, to go back with the girls to the governor's palace. There's only the pagoda ceremony and the passage of Dourga to see and we'll take you to that.
ELLEN: Vous rentrez avec nous, Gérald?	ELLEN: Ar you coming with us, Gerald?
GÉRALD: Mais certainement.	GERALD: Certainly.
ELLEN: Vous ne m'avez pas dit si elle était vraiment belle, la fille du brahmane.	ELLEN: You didn't tell me whether this Brahmin's daughter was beautiful.
GÉRALD: Elle est étrange. (Il sort avec Ellen.)	GERALD: She's sort of strange. (He goes out with Ellen.)
MRS. B: Je ne suis pas fâchée de rentrer, moi, et cependant on n'a plus rien à plus rien à me voler. (Elle sort.)	MRS. B: I might as well go. I've nothing left that they can steal. (She goes out.)
ROSE: (Au moment de les suivre, à Frédéric, en s'arrêtant.) Est-ce que vous n'avez pas une revue aujourd'hui?	ROSE: (Follows, then stops and to Frederic.) No review today?
FRÉDÉRIC: Un simple appel.	FREDERIC: Ordinary parade.
ROSE: En tenue de guerre.	ROSE: With arms?
FRÉDÉRIC: Mais, non, pas en tenue de guerre. Pourquoi en tenue de guerre?	FREDERIC: No. Not with arms, why?
ROSE: Vous ne nous dites pas que votre régiment part cette nuit? Oh! je sais qu'on le cache.	ROSE: Didn't you say your regiment was leaving tonight? Oh! I know you're trying to keep it quiet.
FRÉDÉRIC: Où avez-vous pris ces nouvelles?	FREDERIC: Where did you hear this?

ROSE: Chez mon oncle le gouverneur, par hazard.
On ne se défie pas de moi.

FRÉDÉRIC: C'est-à-dire que nous devons faire a l'aube une promenade militaire.

ROSE: Dans une province révoltée. Je n'ai pas voulu en parler à Ellen parce quelle tremblerait à l'idée de voir partir sa fiancé. Ellen n'a pas mon courage et puis, moi, je n'air pas de fiancé.

FRÉDÉRIC: (À part.) Elle est ravissante!

ROSE: (Apercevant Nilakantha et Lakmé.) Voici encore ce vieillard et cette jeune fille.
Ils m'effraient.

FRÉDÉRIC: Prenez mon bras.

ROSE: Oh! volontiers! C'est parce que j'ai peur.

FRÉDÉRIC: Elle est adorable!
(Ils sortent.)
Lakmé, Nilakantha, puis La Foule.

NILA: C'est un pauvre qui mendie,
Une diseuse de chansons.
Cette foule étourdie
S'éloigne quand nous passons!
Sous ce vêtement misérables!
Voit-on le justicier qui poursuit un coupable!
Ces Anglais sentent-ils tout leur sang de figer
En lisant sur mon visage?
Que je vais me venger?

LAKMÉ: Brahma nous défend-il d'oublier un outrage!

NILA: L'outrage d'un étranger!

NILAKANTHA: Lakmé, ton doux regard se voile, Ton sourire s'est attristé Comme on voit pâler une étoile, Une ombre assombrit ta beauté C'est que Dieu de nous se retire, C'est qu'il attend la mort du criminel Mais je veux retrouver ton sourire. Oui je veux retrouver ton sourire, Et dans tes yeux, et dans tes yeux! Je vous revoir le ciel! Le coeur rempli d'ardentes fièvres, J'ai voulu l'écouter dormir! Un rêve passait sur le lévres Et je voyons ton front rougir. C'est que Dieu de nous se retire, C'est qu'il attend la mort du criminel. Mais je veux retrouver ton sourire, Oui, je veux retrouver ton sourire Et dans les yeux Et dans les jeux, je veux revoir le ciel!

ROSE: At my uncle's palace, by chance.

FREDERIC: Oh! It's just a dawn parade.

ROSE: In a revolting province. I wouldn't want Ellen to know because she trembles at the very idea of her lover leaving. As for me, I have no lover.

FREDERIC: (Apart.) She's ravishing.

ROSE: (Seeing Nilakantha and Lakmé.) Here's that old man and his daughter. He scares me.

FREDERIC: Take my arm.

ROSE: I will–because I am afraid.

FREDERIC: She's adorable.
(Lakmé, Nilakantha, then the crowd.)

NILAKANTHA: (Coming forward with Lakmé.) I, a beggar, alms imploring
And she, a ballad-singing maid.
(Frederic and Rose pass by, indifferent.)
All but self, the crowds ignoring.
They run when we reach for aid,
Beneath these faded robes defective
Who would think here to discover
A skillful, sharp detective?
Do these vile English foes
Feel their blood ceasing to flow
When they read upon my visage,
That I for vengeance go?

LAKMÉ: (Timidly.) Does Brahma ever forbid we should overlook an outrage?

NILA: The outrage of a wicked foe!
(Recitative.)

NILAKANTHA: (with much tenderness.) Lakmé, some grief your look is veiling; Your sweet smile, once gay, now is sad As we see a star that is paling A cloud shades your brow, once so glad It is that God hides from us His presence, It is that he waits the death of our base foe In your smile, let me see life's sweet essence, Yes, once more I would see life's sweet essence, And in your eyes, And in your eyes, would once more see the skies! Your beating heart with fever burning, While you slept, I listened to hear! A dream over your lips passed with yearning, A blush I saw your brow did wear. It is that God hides from us his presence, It is that He waits the death of our base foe In your smiles let me find life's sweet essence, Yes, I would, I would find life's sweet essence, And in your eyes, And in your eyes, would once more see the skies.

LAKMÉ: Ah! c'est de ta douleur que je me sens émue,
Ma gaîté reviendra, vois, elle est revenue.

NILA: Si ce maudit s'est introduit chez moi,
S'il a bravé la mort pour arriver à toi.
Pardonne-moi ce blasphème,
C'est qu'il t'aime!
Toi, ma Lakmé, toi, la fille des dieux!
Il va triomphant par la ville,
Nous allons retenir cette foule mobile,
Et s'il te voit, Lakmé, je lirai dans ses yeux.
Affermis bien ta voix—sois souriante,
Chante, Lakmé, chante,
La vengeance est là.
(Peu à peu la foule s'est approchée, attirée par la voix de Lakmé.)

NILA: (À la foule.) Pas les dieux inspirée,
Cette enfant vous dira
La légende sacrée
De la fille du paria.

LAKMÉ: Légende. Où va la jeune Hindoue,
Fille des parias,
Quand la lune se joue
Dans les grands mimosas?
Elle court sur la mousse.
Et ne se souvient pas
Que partout on repousse
L'enfant des parias!
Le long des lauriers roses,
Elle passe sans bruit.
Rêvant de douces choses
Et riant à la nuit!

Là bas dans la forêt plus sombre, Quel est-ce voyageur perdu? Autour de lui des yeux brillent dans l'ombre, Il march encore au hasard é perdu! Les fouves rugissent de joie, Ils vont se jeter sur leur proie La Jeune fille accourt et brave leurs furreurs. Elle a dans sa main la baquette, Où tinte la clochette, où tinte la clochette Des charmeurs. Ah! ah! ah! ah! L'étranger la regarde, Elle reste éblouie. Il est plus beau que les Rajahs! Il rougira, s'il sait qu'il doit la vie. A la fille des parias Mais lui, l'endormant dans un reve. Jasque dans le ciel il l'enlève. En lui disant; ta place est là! C'était Vishnou, fils de Brama! Depuis ce jour au fond des bois, Le voyageur entend parfais, Le bruit léger de la baguette Où tinte la clochette, Où tinte la clochette Ces chameurs. Ah! ah! ah! ah!

LAKMÉ: Ah! It is from your own grief I feel my heart yearning.
My gay thoughts will return! See!
Even now they are returning.

NILA: If that vile man has found access to me,
If he, too, has braved death, at your dear side to be,– Forgive the anger that moves me,–
Ah! It is that he loves you!
You, my Lakmé, child of the gods,
He goes triumphant through the city;
We must draw the crowds by some motive of pity.
If he sees you Lakmé, in his eyes I shall read,
Now strengthen well your voice,
Look gay and smiling.
Sing now, Lakmé, vengeance awaits you here!
(Scene and legend of the Pariah's Daughter.)

NILA: Through the gods' inspiration,
This young girl will here relate
A legendic narration
Of the pariah's fair daughter's fate.

CHORUS: Let us hear this legend. Listen now!

LAKMÉ: Where goes the maiden straying,
This child of the pariah band?
When the bright moonlight is playing
Amid the forests grand,
Tripping light over the mosses,
Never remembers she
That a deadly hate ever crosses
The pariah's progeny.
Tripping light over the mosses,
Wanders the maiden free;
Through the pink oleanders,
With her sweet thoughts she wanders,
She moves on with steps light,
And laughs out at the night!

Down there, where shades more deep and glooming, What traveller's that, alone, astray?. . . . Around him flame bright eyes, dark depths illuming, But on he journeys, as by chance, on the way! The wolves in their wild joy are howling. As if for their prey they were prowling; The young girl runs forward, and their fury dares. A ring in her grasp she holds tightly, Whence tinkles a bell, sharply, lightly, A bell that tinkles lightly, That charmers wear. Ah! ah! ah! ah! While the stranger regards her Stands the dazed, flushed and glowing More handsome than the Rajahs, he! Yet with a blush, he'll learn his life he's owing To the Pariah's fair progeny, But he, in a dream her enfolding, Till to heaven she soars in his holding, To her he says, "Your mead is won." It was Vishnu, great Brahma's son! And since the day in that dark wood, The traveler hears, where Vishnu stood,

NILA: (À part.) La rage me dévore,
Il n'est pas venu,
Je l'aurais reconnu.
(A sa fille.)
Chante, chante encore!

LAKMÉ: (Hésitante.) Mon père!

LE CHOEUR: Ah! chante encore.
(Quelques officiers paraissent au fond. Gérald et Frédéric sont parmi eux.)

LAKMÉ: (D'une voix tremblante.) Où va le juene Hindoue,
Fille des parias,
Quand la lune se joue
Dans les grands mimosas?
(Elle aperçoit Gérald qui ne l'as pas encore vue.—Très émue.)
Où va la jeune Hindoue,
Fille des parias.

NILA: Encor!

LAKMÉ: (Chante le refrain de la clochette et pousse un cri en voyant Gérald qui s'approche.) Ah!

GÉRALD: (S'élançant pour la soutenir.) Lakmé.

NILA: (S'emparant de sa fille.)
C'est lui.

LE CHOEUR: Qui la trouble ainsi?

LAKMÉ: (Cherchant à maitriser son émotion.) C'est un mal que j'ignore,
Çe n'est rien, c'est fini, je veux chanter encore.
(D'une voix faible.)
Ah!

GÉRALD: (À Frédéric.) La fille du brahmane!

FRÉDÉRIC: Ici!

NILA: (À sa fille.) Ah! Brahma t'inspirait! L'étranger s'est trahi!

GÉRALD: (Avec exaltation.) C'est Lakmé, c'est elle!

FRÉDÉRIC: Sois prudent!

GÉRALD: Laisse-moi la voir!

FRÉDÉRIC: On nous appelle!

GÉRALD: Attends!

FRÉDÉRIC: Par cette enfant es-tu donc retenu!

GÉRALD: Non, non!
(Ils s'éloignent.)

NILA: Je le connais! Dieu nous est revenu!
(Les soldats anglais défilent au fond du théâtre, fifres et tambours en tête. La foule les accompagne et s'éloigne lentement. Nilakantha et les Hindous se

The sound of a little bell ringing.
The legend back to him bringing, a small bell ringing like those the charmers wear. Ah! ah! ah! ah!

NILA: (Aside.) My fury doth overwhelms me! He has not yet come. I should know him at once!
(To Lakmé.)
Sing out; repeat it!

LAKMÉ: My father!

CHORUS: Ah! Sing it again.
(Officers appear at the back, Gerald and Frederic among them.)

LAKMÉ: Where goes the Hindu straying,
Child of the pariah band?
Where the moonlight is playing
Through the mimosas grand,—
(She perceives Gerald, who has not yet seen her.)
(Greatly moved.)
Where goes the Hindu straying,
Child of the pariah band?

NILA: Sing on! once more, sing on!

LAKMÉ: (More and more disturbed.) Ah!
(Utters a cry at sight of Gerald approaching.)

GERALD: (Springing forward to support her.) Lakmé!

NILAKANTHA: (Catching at Lakmé.) It is he!

CHORUS: What disturbs her thus?

LAKMÉ: (Trying to conquer her emotion.) It is a sudden pain – nothing more.
It was unexpected;
Now it is gone. I'll try to be collected.
(With a faltering voice.)
Ah!—

GERALD: (To Frederic.) Behold! the Brahmin's daughter!

FREDERIC: What, here?

NILAKANTHA: (To Lakmé.) You are inspired by Brahma, and the stranger is betrayed!

GERALD: (With emotion.) It is herself; It is Lakmé!

FREDERIC: Ah! prudent be.

GERALD: Leave me free! Her once more let me see.

FREDERIC: On us they are calling.

GERALD: But stay.

FREDERIC: And that young girl; does she then detain you?

GERALD: No, no.
(They go out.)

NILA: I know him now! God is with us again.
(The English soldiers file out the back, headed by fifers and drummers. The crowd gathers slowly. The Brahmin and conspirators group on the front of the stage.) groupent sur le devant de la scène.)

(Nilakantha, Lakmé, Hadji, Hindous.)

NILA: Au milieu des chants d'allégresse,
Ce soir, quand la foule suivra
Le cortège de la déesse!
Mon regard le designera!
Des siens séparant le coupable,
Sans bruit, pas à pas, vous irez,
Et dans un cercle infranchissable
Lentement vous l'enfermerez.

LE CHOEUR: Des siens, séparant le coupable,
Sans bruit, pas à pas, nous irons
Et dans un cercle infranchissable,
Lentement nous l'enfermerons!

NILA: Alors, éloignez-vous sans crainte,
Je serai là, j'air préparé
Mon bras pour cette tâche sainte,
Et c'est moi qi le frapperai!

LAKMÉ: O mon père, je te suivrai!

NILA: Non! non! mon coeur qui n'a jamais faibli
Se troublerait. Non, reste avec Hadji!
(Les Hindous et Nilakantha sortent lentement. Lakmé reste seul avec Hadji.)
(Lakmé, Hadji.)

HADJI: Le maître ne pense qu'à sa vengeance, il n'a pas vu couler tes larmes, ô maîtresse, mais Hadji était là. Hadji sait lire sur les visages, et il t'appartient, et la vie d'Hadji ne compte pas; quand tu étais petite, j'allais défier les tigres dans les forêts sauvages pour cueillir la fleur que tu aimais; j'allais au fond de la mer chercher pour toi une perle plus belle que toutes les perles. Aujourd'hui, tu es femme, ta pensée a d'autres caprices, ton coeur a d'autres désires. Si tu as un ennemi à punir, parle, si tu as un ami à sauver.
(Lakmé lui saisit vivement la main.) Ordonne.
(A ce moment Gérald revient rêveur. Lakmé fait signe à Hadji de s'éloigner, puis court vers Gérald.)

GÉRALD: Lakmé! Lakmé! c'est toi!
C'est toi qui viens à moi.
Dans le vague d'un rêve
Je t'ai vue en passant,
Le voile se soulève
Et l'idole descend.
Je subis ta puissance

(Nilakantha, Lakmé, Hadji, and Hindus.)

NILA: (Mysteriously to the conspirators.) Amid the songs of joy and pleasure,
When the crowd turns to go;
Where the priests march in stately measure,
By a glance I'll point out the foe;
We'll then from his friends separate him,
And noiselessly onward we'll go.
Till in a circle we instate him,
And will close on him sure and slow.

CHORUS: We'll then from his friends separate him,
And noiselessly onward we'll go.
Sure and slow,
And ready for the blow.

NILA: Depart then without trepidation.
I shall be there, with arm trained and strong;
It is mine, by heaven's consecration,
Ah! It is I who'll avenge the wrong,–
To me the task belongs,

LAKMÉ: O my father, with you I'll go.

NILA: No, daughter no!
My heart, that weakness never hath known,
Would fail if you were at my side.
With faithful Hadji here abide.
(Nilakantha and the conspirators depart slowly. Lakmé remains with Hadji.)
(Lakmé, Hadji.)

HADJI: The master thinks only of his vengeance.
He has not seen your tears flow, O mistress; but Hadji was nigh. Hadji reads what the face tells, he knows what traces grief leaves there; he belongs to you and his life is of no account. When you were a child I defied the tigers in the jungle to cull the flowers for which you smiled. In the depths of the sea I sought to find a pearl for you more fair than others knew. A woman you are to-day; your thoughts have other caprices, your heart other desires. If you have an enemy to punish, tell me! If you have a friend to save, give me your order!
(Lakmé grasps his hand firmly.)
(At this moment Gerald returns thoughtfully. Lakmé makes a sign to Hadji to go farther away. Then she runs toward Gerald.)

GERALD: Lakmé! It is you I see?
You come to me!
(With warmth.)
In the fancies of dreaming,
I saw you as I neared;
The veil uplifted, seeming,
The the idol appeared.

Par ton charme enchaîné
Et je vais sans défense
Vers le ciel entraîne!

LAKMÉ: Mon ciel n'est pas le tien.
Le Dieu qui me protège
N'est pas celui que tu connais,
A lui si je te ramenais
Alors sans sacrilège,
Je pourrais te parler,
Tu ne courrais aucun danger.

GÉRALD: Viennent tous les dangers du monde!
Dans l'ivresse profonde
Où mon raison se perd
Verrais-je sous mes pas un abîme entr'ouvrent
Quand de tes longs cheveux, doucement te m'effleures?

LAKMÉ: Je ne veux pas que tu meures!

GÉRALD: Ah! c'est l'amour endormi
Qui de son aile t'effleure,
Et ton coeur s'est raffermi,
Tu ne veux pas que je meure!

LAKMÉ: Hélas! c'est un ennemi
Dont le souffle ardent m'éaleure,
Tout mon être en a frémi,
Mais je ne veux pas qu'il meure!
Dans le fôret, près de nous,
Ce cache, tout petite,
Une cabane en bambous
Qu'un grand arbre vert abrite.
Comme un nid d'oiseaux peureux,
Dans les lianes posée
Et sous les fleurs écrasée
Elle attend des gens heureux.
Elle échappe à tous les yeux,
Dehors, rien ne la révèle,
Le grand bois silencieux
Qui l'enferme est jaloux d'elle.
C'est là que tu me suivras
Toujours à l'aube naissante
Je reviendrai souriante
Et c'est là que tu vivras.

GÉRALD: O douce enchanteresse,
Parle, parle, toujours!

LAKMÉ: Ah! viens, viens, le temps presse
Et les instants sont courts.

GÉRALD: Tu veux que je me cache,
Tu ne peux pas savoir
Qu'ici l'honneur m'attache,
L'honneur et le devoir.

To your power I submitted,
By your charms drawn away;
And, defenceless, I quitted
Earth, for heaven's brighter day.

LAKMÉ: (Sadly.) My heaven is not your own,
The God you worship blindly
Is not the one whom I have known.
If I to mine could bring you heart,
Our Hindu brothers, kindly,
Would always take your part
(Hesitating a little.)
Against dangerous foes, or guileful art.

GERALD: Come! all the dangers of creation!
In this wild adoration,
When reason's lost in bliss.
Should I see at my feet a yawning abyss
While your long tresses
Sweep me, with tender caresses?

LAKMÉ: (Resolutely.) Your death I'll never consent to.

GERALD: (Passionately) Ah! this is love, yet asleep,
Who with his wing has caressed you;
Your heart though too strong to weep,
My death assured, has depressed you.

LAKMÉ: Ah! yes, an enemy hold
It is, whose hot breath has caressed me,
All my heart has shuddered with cold,
While the thought of death oppressed me.
In the forest, quite near by,
A little cabin is hiding,
Built of bamboo, light and dry, –
Beneath a tall tree, shade providing, –
Like a nest for timid birds,
Amid flowering vines, there abiding,
And with welcomes plain as words,
It awaits
Two happy mates.
It escapes all curious eyes–
Outside no secret revealing,
While the wood all silent lies
And surrounds it with jealous feeling.
There it is, – you will follow me;
Each day when the dawn is breaking,
Smiling, there I'll come at waking, –
And it is there you will dwell.

GERALD: Sweetest of enchantresses.
Say more of that resort!

LAKMÉ: Ah! come; time now presses,
And fleeting hours are short.

GERALD: You wish that I should hide me,
But cannot understand
That honor must decide me
When duty makes demand,

LAKMÉ: Lakmé t'implore et te supplie!

GÉRALD: Demande-moi plutôt ma vie!

LAKMÉ: Ai-je donc perdu mon pouvoir!

GÉRALD: Ah! Lakmé, Lakmé, tu pleures.

LAKMÉ: Je ne veux pas que tu meures!

GÉRALD: Ah! c'est l'amour endormi, etc.

LAKMÉ: C'est fini, les nôtres sont là.
Voici la déesse Dourga
(Gérald, Frédéric, Ellen, Rose, mistress Benston, puis Nilakantha, Les Brahmanes, Les Danseuses Sacrées, Les Hindous, puis Lakmé.)
(Des prêtres arrivent et se dirigent vers la pagode.)

CHANT DES BRAHMANES: O Dourga, toi qui renais
Dans les flots du Gange,
A nos yeux, viens, apparais,
Toi par qui tout change!
Déesse d'or, entends nos voix,
Que ton bras nous protège!
Tu nous souris et tu nous vois
Saluant ton cortège.
De ta douce image
Nous venons fêter le passage,
Déesse d'or, entends nos voix!
Les prêtres entrent dans la pagode. Ellen et Rose rentrent accompagnées de mistress Bentson, puis Frédéric arrive avec Gérald.)

ELLEN: Voyez cette ville en fête,
Et ces cris et ces hourrahs!

MRS. B: Ils ont tous perdu la tête
Pour leur déesse aux dix bras!

FRÉDÉRIC: (Entrant avec Gérald.) C'est pour admirer la déesse
Que tu nous as quittés ainsi?

GÉRALD: (Préoccupé.) Oui, leur fête m'intéresse!

FRÉDÉRIC: (Souriant.) La fille du brahmane a passé par ici!

GÈRALD: (Éclatant.) C'est un rêve, une folie
Qui passe et qu'on oublie,
Mais dans mon coeur révolté
Je sens avec épouvante,
Que Lakmé seule est vivante
Je n'y vois que sa beauté!

FRÉDÉRIC: (Gaîment.) Je te ferais une belle morale
Si nous ne partions pas demain,
Mais la guerre a du bon, cette fille idéale
Ne sera plus sur ton chemin!
(Il s'éloigne.)

LAKMÉ: Lakmé implores with supplication.

GERALD: Ask of me rather life than station.

LAKMÉ: Have I lost my power to command?

GERALD: Ah! your eyes are filling!

LAKMÉ: That you must die I'm yet unwilling. (With great energy.)

GERALD: Ah! this is love, yet asleep, etc.

LAKMÉ: Ah! It is too late–our people now are here!
Behold when the goddess is near.
(Gerald, Frederic, Ellen, Rose, Mrs. Benson; then Nilakantha, Brahmins, Bayaderes, Hindus; then Lakmé. Priests arrive and move towards the pagoda.)

CHORUS:
Dourga fair, you who was born
From the waves of Ganges,
To our eyes appear, and dawn,
Ruler of Time's changes.
Goddess of gold, hear us, we pray.
Give us here thy protection;
Over us still smile;
Look down meanwhile
On us with pure affection.
(The Brahmins and Bayaderes enter the pagoda; Ellen and Rose reenter with Mistress Benson; then Frederic arrives with Gerald.)

ELLEN: The town is gleaming with splendor.
Hear the cries, the shouts of greetings glad.

MRS. B: They are crazed, or so are seeming;
Their ten-armed goddess drives them mad.

FREDERIC: (To Gerald.) Was it to admire this fair goddess
That you left us in the throng?

GERALD: (Preoccupied.) Yes, their festival amused me.

FREDERIC: (Smiling.) The Brahmin's daughter
Has just now passed along.

GERALD: (Breaking out.) It is a dream, a whim enthralling,
Which, flown, is past recalling,
But in my heart, dazed, confounded,
I feel, doubting and astounded,
That alone is Lakmé living.
No one else seems fair to me.

FREDERIC: (Gaily.) Then I should like a moral to borrow,
If we should not depart tomorrow,
But the war has some good;
That ideal maiden,
You'll no more meet, It is understood.
(Goes out.)

ELLEN, ROSE ET MRS. B: Comment fuir ce tapage!
Ils ont juré, je le gage,
De nous étourdir du soir au matin!
(Les brahames sortent de la pagode, escortant la déesse Dourga dont la statue est portée à bras dans une sorte de palanquin. La nuit est venue. Des porteurs de torches accompagnent le cortége. Les danses sacrées reprennent.)

CHORUS: O Dourga, toi qui renais, etc.
(Les Hindous et Nilakantha guettent Gérald.—Nikalantha le désigne du doigt, la place se vide peu à peu.)

GÉRALD: C'est un rêve, une folie
Qui passe et qu'on oublie,
Mais dans mon coeur révolté
Je sens avec épouvante
Que Lakmé seule est vivante
Je n'y vois que sa beauté.
(Il aperçoit Lakmé qui se montre à droite. Il va vers elle, Nilakantha le suit et, au moment où Gérald est près de Lakmé, il le frappe et se sauve vivement en le voyant tomber. Lakmé se précipite vers Gérald, se penche sur lui, l'examine et sa figure s'éclaire lorsqu'elle reconnaît que la blessure n'ont pas dangereuse.)

LAKMÉ: Ils croient leur vengeance assouvie,
Tu m'appartiens pour toujours.
Je ne vivias que de ta vie,
Dieu protège nos amours!
(Elle appelle Hadji qui accourt.)

ACTE III

(Le théâtre représente un partie de forêt de l'Inde que le soleil éclaire de ses plus chauds rayons. Sous un arbre gigantesque une cabane à peine fermée et perdue dans les roses, les daturas à double calice blanc, les tulipias jaunes.)

(Au lever du rideau, Gérald est étendu sur un lit de feuillage. Lakmé, à demi penchée, inquiète, épie son sommeil en murmurant une chanson.)

LAKMÉ: Sous le ciel tout étoilé, Le ramier blanc au loin s'en est allé Ah! reviens, ma vois l'appelle, Mon deux ami reviens ferme ton aile Sous le ciel tout étoilé, Le remier blanc au loin s'en est allé! Il dors! Puisse encor un moment Me naive chanson le bercer doucement Puisse-t-il près de moi reposer un moment. Sus le ciel leut étoilé, Le ramier blanc hélas s'en est allé. Sa compagne qui l'appelle, N'entrendra plus jamais battre son aille. Sous le ciel tous étoilé Le rammer blanc hélas s'en est allé . . . Ah! reviens! .. Ah!

GÉRALD: (S'éveillant sans voir Lakmé.) Quel vague souvenir alourdit ma pensée?
Et sur ma poitrine oppressée
Quel rêve s'est appesanti?
Sous un charme accablant je rest anéanti.
Je me souviens, la ville était en fête,
J'allais dans mon extase, à demi réveillé,
Quand l'éclair d'un poignard à mes yeux a brillé,
Et la nuit s'est faite!

LAKMÉ: (Se penchant vers lui et continuant.) Alors Hadji, dans l'ombre se glissant,
T'a transporté sous ce toit de verdure,
J'ai ramené la vie à ton front pâlissant;
Les filles de ma caste apprennent en naissant
Comment le suc des fleurs guérit une blessure.

GÉRALD: Je me souviens, sans voix, inanimée,
Je te voyais sur mes lévres penchée,
Mon âme à tes regards tout entière attachée,
Revivait sous ton souffle ô ma douce Lakmé!
Ah! viens, dans cette paix profonde
L'aile de l'amour a passé,
Et pour nous séparer du monde,
Sur nous le ciel s'est abaissé.
Ces fleurs courant capricieuses
Ont des senteurs voluptueuses
Qui jettent au coeur amolli
L'ivresse et l'oubli.
Ah! viens, dans cette paix profonde,
Sur nous le ciel s'est abaissé.
Pour nous faire oublier le monde
L'aile de l'amour a passé!

LAKMÉ: Là, je pourrai t'entendre,
Nous vivrons tous les deux,
Et je pourrai t'apprendre
L'histoire de nos dieux!
Nous chanterons ensemble
Ces dieux trois fois bénis
Devant lesquels tout tremble,
Qui nous ont réunis.
Et ton âme enflammée
De bonheur s'emplira,
Sur la terre charmée
Que protège Brahma!
(On entend des chants dans le lointain).

GÉRALD: Ecoute!
On passe sur la route
Qui longe la forêt.

ELLEN, ROSE and MRS. B: How leave this noise tremendous?
They've sworn, I'll make a bet stupendous,
Our poor ears to smite
From morning till night.
(The procession comes from the pagoda, escorting the ten-armed statue of the goddess Dourga, which is borne in a sort of palanquin. Night has come. Torch-bearers accompany the procession. The Bayaderes join in.)

CHORUS: O Dourga bright, etc.
(While the procession marches on, Nilakantha points out Gerald to the conspirators.)

GERALD: It is a dream, a whim enthralling, etc.
(Nilakantha and the Hindus watch Gerald; the square empties gradually.)
(He perceives Lakmé, who enters at the right, and goes towards him. Nilakantha follows Gerald, and, at the moment when he is near Lakmé, he strikes him, and escapes quickly, after seeing him fall. Lakmé rushes towards Gerald, leans over and examines him. Her face lightens when she sees that the wound is not mortal.)

LAKMÉ: They think that their vengeance is sated!
Forevermore, love, you are mine.
My life with yours is hence related.
Over our loves may heaven's star shine.
(Calls Hadji, and runs out.)

ACT III

(The stage represents a forest in India, that the sun illumines with its fiercest rays. Under a gigantic tree a cabin is nearly concealed and crowned with brilliant flowers.)

(Gerald is extended upon a bed of foliage. Lakmé anxiously watches his slumbers while murmuring a song.)

LAKMÉ: Beneath the starry canopy, The dovelet white has wandered far from me Ah! return from far dominions; My voice recalls you, Come and fold your pinions. Beneath the starry canopy, The dove-let white has wandered far away! He sleeps! Haply one moment more May my low, gentle song soothe his dream as before. At my side, it may be, Rest will new life restore. Beneath the starry canopy, the dove-let white has wandered from from me His fond mate in these dominions, Will no more hear the beating of his pinions. Beneath the starry canopy, The pure white dove has wandered from from me. Ah! . . . return! . . Ah!

GERALD: (Opens his eyes without observing Lakmé.) What memories, strangely vague,
On my thoughts are now weighing?
All my weakened senses overlaying;
What dream is this that does me oppress?
As beneath some charm I lie without redress.
I now recall; the town in guise was festive,
Along the street I strolled with fancies suggestive,
When the gleam of a poniard flashed quick on my sight;
Then around me all was night!

LAKMÉ: (Leaning over him.) It was here that Hadji, through the shadows dark,
Has borne you senseless to this verdant park;
I soon brought the life to your pale brow again.
The daughters of my caste, with early youth attain
The power to heal all wounds,
By juices of flowers applying.

GERALD: I too, recall,—still mute, inanimate,—
I saw you bent over my lips; while thus lying,
My soul upon your look was attracted and fastened;
Beneath your breath life awoke and recovery hastened.
O my charming Lakmé; ah, come!
Through the forest depths secluded,
Love's wing above us has passed;
Earth-cares have not been intruded,
And heaven on us falls at last.
These flowering vines, with blooms capricious,
Bear over our pathway scents delicious;
Which soft hearts, with raptures beset,
While all else we forget.

LAKMÉ: Here I may always reach you,
And together we'll live;
And while fondly I teach you,
The gods' history will give.
Here, with voices united,
We will sing the gods blest,
Before whom all bend, affrighted,
But who give to us rest;
And your spirit outflaming
Shall with rapture be full,
Over the charmed world proclaiming,
Here that Brahma rules!
(Songs are heard in the distance.)

GERALD: Oh, listen! Some persons are passing
Along the forest road.
No curious eyes will see us,
Or find out our abode.

CHOEUR: (Dans la coulisse.)
Descendons la pente
Doucement,
La source qui chante
Nous attend!
Près de son murmure,
Deux à deux,
Puisons l'onde pure
Sous les cieux.

GÉRALD: Quel est ce chant plein de tendresse,
Qui passe comme une caresse?

LAKMÉ: Ce sont des couples amoureux
Qui, par les doux chemins ombreux,
Vont à la source vénérée
Pour puiser l'eau sacrée
Chère aux amants heureux.
Quand ils ont effleuré de leurs lèvres brûlantes
La même coupe, ils sont réunis pour toujours.
Et les déesses bienfaisantes
Veillent sur leurs amors.
(Reprise du choeur.)

LAKMÉ: Nous ne pourrions sans crainte
Suivre ces amoureux
Tous les deux,
Mais à la source sainte
J'irai seule, sans toi,
Attends-moi!
(Elle s'éloigne lentement.)

GÉRALD: (En la suivant des yeux.) O douce tentatrice,
Ton charme m'a dompté,
Je vis de ton caprice
Et de ta volonté!
(Frédéric, entrant.)

FRÉDÉRIC: Vivant!

GÉRALD: Ah!

FRÉDÉRIC: J'ai marché sous les hautes fougères
Qu'on venait de froisser.—J'ai vu sur les bruyéres
Et sur la mousse au reflet blanc,
Des gouttes de sang!
Je t'ai cru mort.—Que fais-tu là?

GÉRALD: Je rêve!

FRÉDÉRIC: Quand les nôtres vont partir?

GÉRALD: Laisse-moi me souvenir!

FRÉDÉRIC: Quand le pays tout entier se soulève?

GÉRALD: Hier on m'a frappé.
Lakmé m'a sauvé.

FRÉDÉRIC: La fille du Brahmane?

CHORUS: (In the wings.) Down along the mountain
Let's repair,
While the tuneful fountain
Waits us there,
From its rippling waters,
Two by two,
Drink we, sons and daughters,
Beneath skies blue.

GERALD: What's that song of tender feeling
That seems like kisses over us stealing?

LAKMÉ: Of lovers it is and amorous maids,
Who, wandering through the sylvan shades,
Go to the fountain pure, there springing,
And holy water come bringing,
To happy maids and lovers dear.
(Sedately.)
When this cool draught is drained
By their lips' burning fever,
From the same cup obtained,
They wedded are, and evermore
The goddesses, unthoughtful never,
Their love-life they watch over.

CHORUS: Down along the mountain, etc.

LAKMÉ: But we shall scarce be able
Those maids to follow through,
Two by two.
To this spring venerable
I'll go alone for you!
Wait for me!
(Going out.)

GERALD: O temptress, charming still!
Wait for me!
(Gerald follows her with his eyes.)
I live through your caprice,
And by your sovereign will!
(Enter Frederic.)

FREDERIC: He lives.

GERALD: Ah—

FREDERIC: I forced my way through the bushes–a painful task! I found in the meadow and on the lawn traces of blood which led me here. I thought you dead; what do you here?

GERALD: I was dreaming.

FREDERIC: While the regiment was marching on?

GERALD: Let me collect my thoughts.

FREDERIC: The land rises in revolt against us.

GERALD: A dagger thrust nearly killed me; Lakmé saved and nursed me.

FREDERIC: The daughter of the Brahmin?

GÉRALD: Elle m'a fait revivre
Dans un monde où je reste éperdu, sans force, ivre
De son charme et de son amour.

FRÉDÉRIC: Ah! je connais ces ivresses d'un jour.
Alors, il faut la fuir,
La fuir à l'instant même.
Garde-toi d'un remords,—si tu crois qu'elle t'aime
Ces enfants-là ne savent pas souffrir.

GÉRALD: Je l'envelloperai si bien de ma tendresse.

FRÉDÉRIC: Et miss Ellen?

GÉRALD: Je subis le pouvoir
D'une enchanteresse.

FRÉDÉRIC: Est notre passion—à nous tous, la meilleure,
Notre honneur de soldat?
C'est demain qu'on se bat.

GÉRALD: (Avec résolution.) J'y serai!
C'est Lakmé! C'est Lakmé qui m'apporte l'eau sainte!

FRÉDÉRIC: Oh! maintenant, tu peux la voir, je suis sans crainte.
(En sortant.)
En je t'attends.—Il est sauvé!

LAKMÉ: (Revient triomphante, elle apporte l'eau consacrée.) Ils allaient deux à deux
Et les mains enlacées,
Les jeunes amoureux.—
Moi, je marchais prés d'eux.—
Seule avec mes pensées.—
J'allais, le coeur tout en émoi,
Comme eux de tendresse altérée,
Et maintenant, écoute-moi.
(Avec un accent religieux.)
Quand à la même coupe on a bu l'eau sacrée,
On reste pour toujours unis.
(Elle le regarde attentivement, puis comme frappée de stupeur elle pose la coupe en s'écriant.)
Ce n'est plus toi! Quand tu parlais, ton âme
Sur tes lèvres se posait;
Ton regard n'a plus la flamme
Qui m'embrasait.
Sur ton visage
Un nuage
A passé
Et l'a glacé.

GÉRALD: N'es-tu plus l'enfant charmante
Pour qui j'ai tout oublié?
Es-tu moins belle te moins aimante?

LAKMÉ: (Gravement.) Veux-tu qu'à mon destin ton destin soit lié?

GÉRALD: Je veux ce que tu veux, je veux ce que t'inspire
Ton caprice, je veux, je veux et voir sourire!

GERALD: She restored me to life before the vital spark had fled. I was unconscious, helpless. Love only could work such wonders.

FREDERIC: These are but idle fancies! Tarry no more, and do not court remorse; if you think she loves you, spare her new grief.

GERALD: I will with tender care reward her kindness.

FREDERIC: And your betrothed?

GERALD: I am in the power of an enchantress!

FREDERIC: And your duties as a soldier? These you'll not forget. I know you too well.

GERALD: Count on me. But Lakmé comes, bringing the sacred water.

FREDERIC: Now you may see her, I have no fear! You will resist. I count on you. Now he is saved.
(Exit Frederic.)

LAKMÉ: (Returns triumphant, bringing the cup of holy water.)
So they walked two by two
With their arms interlacing,
These lovers young and true;
I walked quite near them, too,
With my thoughts figures tracing,
I walked; my heart did swiftly beat,
Like theirs,–all athirst,–hope embracing,
And now the tale hear me repeat:
(Religiously.)
When from one cup between them
They've drunk, each other facing,
United they will ever remain!
(She looks at him attentively, and, struck with stupor, lays down the cup.)
It is you no more!
Your soul, when you spoke sweetly,
On your lips was plainly posed
Fire has left your glance completely,
Which lately me enclosed.
Upon your face
Clouds I trace,
Which, though past,
Have frozen it fast.

GERALD: Aren't you still the charming maiden
For whom all else I have forgot?
Are you less fair, your heart with love less laden?

LAKMÉ: (Seriously.) Wish you that our two fates
Should be joined hence, evermore?

GERALD: I wish what you desire,—
Our wishes reconciling.
Your whims I still admire,
And wish to see you smiling.

LAKMÉ: (De même.) Quel que soit le Dieu clément
Dont tu bénis la puissance,
Quelle que soit ta croyance,
Tu sais ce que vaut un serment.
A cette coupe où l'amour te convie,
Jure de m'aimer pour la vie!
(On entend au loin des chants militaire.)

GÉRALD: Ciel! ce sont nos soldats!

LAKMÉ: Bois, et tu m'appartiendras!
(Avec force en posant la coupe.)
Tu n'oses pas.
(Elle regarde attntivement Gérald dont les yeux restent fixés du côté où l'on entend le chant des soldats.)
C'est là-bas que va sa pensée.
Son coeur a tressailli,
Et sa patrie à ses yeux s'est dressée.
(Avec déchirement après avoir essayé d'attirer son regard.)
Tout est fini!
(Pendant que Gérald, la tête penchée, suit de l'oreille les tambours qui s'éloignent, Lakmé, désespérée, arrache une feuille de datura et la mâche sans que Gérald s'en aperĉoive.)

GÉRALD: Lakmé, qu'avez vous fait?

LAKMÉ: (Allant à lui, avec tendresse et souriante.) Tu m'as donné plus doux rêve
Qu'on puisse avoir sous notre ciel,
Reste encore pour qu'il s'achève
Ici, loin du monde réel.
Tu m'as dit des mots de tendresse
Que les Hindous ne savent pas,
Et tu m'as appris l'ivresse
Des aveux murmurés tout bas.

GÉRALD: Ce que je lis sur ton visage,
Ma Lakmé, me glace d'effroi.
De tout mon âme se dégage
Et je ne serai plus qu'à toi.

LAKMÉ: (Avec passion.) Ah! maintentant, je veux te croire,
Voici la coupe où je vais boire.
(Elle y trempe ses lèvres et la lui tend.)

GÉRALD: Prends!
(La prenant avec exaltation.)
A toi, Lakmé, pour toujours!

LAKMÉ: C'est la fête de nos amours!
(Il boit.)

GÉRALD: Qu'autour de moi tout sombre, Je ne veux pas une ombre, Je ne veux pas une ombre Sur ton frout enchantanté Je reste sous le

LAKMÉ: (Seriously.) Whichsoever the god may be
Whose power you worship blindly,
Whatever your faith be, harsh or kindly,
You know an oath's worth to me,
Then drink from this cup holy,
Where true love never fails.
Drink! and swear to love me forever!
(Military music in the distance.)

GERALD: Heavens! they are our soldiers!

LAKMÉ: Drink! and mine to be, thus vow!
Drink! Ah! you dare not now!
(Throws down the cup violently.)
(Gazes fixedly upon Gerald, who looks away at the side whence comes the chorus.)
It is here his thoughts are returning;
His heart is falling now.
For friends and native land he's yearning.
(With anguish, after trying vainly to attract his attention.)
Ah! all is ended now!
(While Gerald listens with bowed head, Lakmé desperately culls a flower of the datura, and eats it, smilingly, without notice from Gerald.)

GERALD: Lakmé, what's that you do?

LAKMÉ: (Goes to him, smiling tenderly.) You've given me love, the sweetest dreaming
That one may know beneath our sky;
Longer stay, till exquisite seeming
Is here made reality.
To me you've whispered tender phrases,
More sweet than Hindus ever know;
You've taught me what delights and graces
Dwell in vows murmured soft and low.

GERALD: That which I read upon your features
Chills my heart, fear smitten, like a stone;
My soul floats free from duller creatures,
And from here I am yours alone.

LAKMÉ: (With passion.) Ah! it is now I'd fain believe you; Behold the cup that here I give you!
(She wets her lips from it, then holds it out to him.)
Drink!

GERALD: (Taking it exaltedly.) I am yours, Lakmé, forevermore!

LAKMÉ: It is to our love feast we outpour!
(Gerald drinks.)

GERALD: (With exaltation.) Though doubt may shade our morrow, I'd have not cloud of sorrow, I'd have no cloud of sorrow On charme, Que jamais une larme Que jamais une larme, Ne me voile la beauté

LAKMÉ: C'est la fête de nos amours, C'est la fête de nos amours.

GÉALD: Qu'autour de moi tout sombre Je ne veux pas une ombre Je ne veux pas une ombre Sur le frout enchantanté Je reste sous le charme, Que jamais une larme Que jamais une larme Ne me voule ta beauté!

LAKMÉ: C'est ma première larme. Et je meurs sous le charme Par l'amour apporté!

GÉRALD: Toujours à toi, je te le jure!

LAKMÉ: C'est un serment que tu pourras té mir. Je ne crains pas, va! que tu sús parjure! Je vais mourir

GÉRALD: Mourir!

LAKMÉ: La mort ne sépare pas. C'est elle qui nour lie. Je te donne ma vie, Et je meurs dans tes bras.

GÉRALD: Lakmé!

LAKMÉ: Et je meurs dans tes bras!

GÉRALD: Non! ce n'est pas la mort. C'est la vie ardente Qui coule à plein bord Sur ta lèvre frémisante. Ah! Qu'autour de moi tout sombre, Je ne veux pas une ombre Je ne veux pas une ombre Je ne veux pas une ombre Sur ton front enchanté Je reste sous le charme Que jamais une larme Que jamais one larme, Ne me voile ta beauté Ne me voile to ta beauté!

LAKMÉ: A dieu!. . . . . .Rêve que sombre Hélas, quelle ombre en mon coeur attristé!
(Les Memes, Nilakantha.)

NILA: C'est lui! c'est! lui près de Lakmé!

GÉRALD: Frappez!
Je suis désarmé!

LAKMÉ: (Retenant son père d'un geste.) Nous avons bu tous deux à la coupe d'ivoire.
Il est sacré pour vous.

NILA: Lui!

LAKMÉ: S'il faut à nos dieux
Une victime expiatoire,
Qu'ils m'appellent vers eux!

GÉRALD: (Effrayé.) Quel éclair en ses yeux brille!

LAKMÉ: (Avec extase.) Ils m'ont parlé!

NILA: (Éperdu, la saisissant.) Lakmé, ma fille!

GÉRALD: (Avec des sanglots.) Elle meurt pour moi!

your enchanting brow, Beneath the charm I'm resting, That never a tear protesting, That never a tear protesting, Shall obscure you beauty's glow!

LAKMÉ: It is the festal of our young love, Of our love, It is the festal day.

GERALD: Though doubt may shade our morrow, I'd have no cloud of sorrow, I'd have no cloud of sorrow On your enchanting brow, Beneath the charm I'm resting, that never a tear protesting, That never a tear protesting, Shall obscure your beauty's glow!

LAKMÉ: It is my first tear of sorrow. A charm from death I borrow. Since it love bestows.

GERALD: (plus anime) I'm all your own, I truly swear it!

LAKMÉ: (failing.) Ah it is an oath that scarce your strength will try. I have no fear, Ah! Here I now declare it, I soon shall die!

GERALD: Shall die!

LAKME: (smiling) But death does not lovers part, Our souls rejoined, foreseeing, I to you give my being, And I die on your heart.

GERALD: Lakme!

LAKMÉ: And I die . . . on your heart!

GERALD: No! it is no more death. Life it is strong and glowing, Passing a full breath From your pale lips overflowing. Ah! . . . . . Though doubt may shade our morrow, I'd have no tear of sorrow, I'd have no tear of sorrow On your enchanting brow. Beneath the spell I'm resting, That never a tear protesting, That never tear protesting, Shall obscure your beauty's glow! Shall obscure you beauty's glow!

LAKMÉ: Farewell, ... O dream of sorrow! Alas! what shadow on my heart lies now!
(Nilakantha, Hindus enter.)

NILA: It is he! beside Lakmé. You must die!

GERALD: Strike now! All unarmed am I!

LAKMÉ: (Withholding her father by a gesture.) We have both taken a drink from the ivory flagon, which is sacred for you.

NILA: What, he?

LAKMÉ: (With failing voice.) If so it must be—
A victim to the gods you offer,
Let them claim one in me!

GERALD: (Frightened.) In her eyes what light is shining!

LAKMÉ: (With ecstasy.) Ah! they've spoken to me!

NILA: (Lifting her.) Lakmé, my daughter!

GERALD: (Sobbing.) She dies now for me.

LAKMÉ: (Mourant, le sourire su la lèvres.) Tu m'as donné le plus doux rêve
Qu'on puisse avoir sous notre ciel.
Reste encore pour qu'il s'achève
Ici, loin du monde réel!

GÉRALD: Morte!

LAKMÉ: (Failing.) You have given me love, the sweetest dreaming
That one may know beneath our sky;
Let me stay, till exquisite seeming
Has become here reality!
Far from worldly.
(She dies.)

GERALD: Ah! heaven!

NILA: (Avec extase.) Elle a l'éternelle vie
Quittant cette terre asservie,
Elle porte là-haut nos voeux
Elle est dans la splendeur des cieux.

FIN

NILA: (With exaltation.) Her soul now has life eternal,
She leaves earth for regions supernal.
Upward bears she our vows on high,
Where angel glories fill the sky!

L'Elisir d'Amore (1832)

The Elixir of Love

MUSIC BY GAETANO DONIZETTI ■ LIBRETTO BY FELICE ROMANI

This two-act opera comica, set to a libretto by Felice Romani (based on Eugène Scribe's libretto Le Philtre written for Auber in 1831), premiered at the Teatro della Cannobiana in Milan on May 12, 1832. A group of harvesters and young women are resting under the trees on Adina's Basque country farm while she reads aloud the story of Tristan, whose love for Isolde is revived via a love potion. Nemorino is in love with Adina, but she completely ignores him, preferring Belcore, the sergeant of the garrison. Dulcamara, a fake doctor, gives Nemorino a potion that will heal all ills. Nemorino, remembering Tristan, is hopeful that it will help him. The doctor guarantees Adina will fall in love with Nemorino within twenty-four hours. Nemorino is so confident about the potion that his behavior changes radically. He ignores Adina, which angers her. She decides that she must marry Belcore at once, since the garrison is departing the following morning. Disconsolate, Nemorino begs Adina to wait for twenty-four hours (time enough for the potion to work), but she refuses. As preparations are being made for the wedding, Nemorino enlists, at Belcore's suggestion. He now has twenty crowns, enough to purchase another bottle of love potion. Nemorino is ignorant of the rumor that his uncle has died and left him a huge legacy. Surrounded by all of the village girls, he thinks the love potion is working. Adina is jealous and realizes at last that she is in love with Nemorino, with or without an inheritance. When she learns of all the things he has done to win her love, she buys back his enlistment papers. Nemorino sees a tear on her cheek and knows that she loves him. Doctor Dulcamara's potion becomes instantly popular, and the village celebrates the marriage of Adina and Nemorino.

■ ATTO I.

SCENA I.

(Ingreso d'una fattoria Campagna in fondo ove scorre un ruscello, sulla cui riva alcune lavandaje preparano il bucato. In mezzo un grand albero.)
(Gianetta, Mietitori e Mietitrici. Adina siede in disparte leggendo. Nemorino l' osserva da lontano.)

GIANNETTA e CORO: Bel confoto al mietitore,
Quando il sol più ferve e bolle
Sotto un faggio appiè di un colle,
Ripposarsi e respirar!
Del meriggio il vivo ardore
Tempran l'ombre e il rio corrente;
Ma d'amor in vampa ardente
Ombra o rio no può temprar,
Fortunato il mietitore
Che da lui si può guardar.

NEMORINO: Quanto è bella, quanto è cara!
Più la vedo, e più mi piace . . .
Ma in quel cor non son capace
Lieve affetto ad inspirar.
Essa legge, studia, impara . . .
Non vi ha cosa ad essa ignota . . .
Io son sempre un idiota,
Io non sò che sospirar.
Chi la mente mi rischiara?
Chi m'insegna a farmi amar?
(Ridendo.)

ADINA: Benedette queste carte!
E bizzara l'avventura.

GIANNETTA: Di che ridi? fanne parte
Di tua lepida lettura.

ADINA: E la storia di Tristano,
E una cronaca d'amor.

CORO: Leggi, leggi.

NEMORINO: (A lei pian piano Vò accostarmi, entrar fra lor.)

ADINA: Della crudele Isotta
Il bel Tristano ardea,
Nè fil de speme avea
Di possederla un dì.
Quando si trasse al piede
Di saggio incantatore,
Che in un vasel gli diede
Certo elisir d'amore.
Per cui la bella Isotta
Da lui più non fuggì.

TUTTI: Elisir di sì perfetta,
Di sì rara qualità,
Ne sapessi la ricetta,
Conoscessi chi ti fa!

■ ACT I.

SCENE I.

(Homestead of a farm—an open Country at the back—River in landscape—a large tree, under which are seated Gianetta and Reapers—Adina is seated R., reading—Nemorino standing pensively observing her at the wing, L.—Curtain rises to Symphony of Introduzione and Chorus.)

CHORUS: Beneath this leafy shade reclining,
Sweet repose with pleasure blending,
While the noontide sun is shining,
Here we pass an hour away;
Screened from heat by fragrant bowers,
Cooling streams, and beauteous flowers,
But when love exerts his power,
Nothing's impervious to his ray.
No; when love exerts his sway,
Neither tower nor bower's impervious to his ray.
(Nemorino advances L., observing Adina).

NEMORINO: Ah! how lovely! ah! how dear to me!
While I gaze, I adore more deeply;
Ah! what rapture that soft bosom
With a mutual flame to move.
But while reading, studying, improving,
She has learning and every attainment,
While I can do nothing but love, etc.
(Chorus repeated.)

ADINA: Ah! ah! ah! It is a most amusing story! what a singular adventure!

GIANETTA: You are laughing! tell me why! Let us share the mirth that moves you.

ADINA: It is the story of Tristano. It is a legend, too, of love.

GIANETTA and CHORUS: Read it! read it!

NEMORINO: (I will listen to what she says, but so that she cannot perceive me.)

ADINA: Beauteous, but cruel Isotta,
With love inspired Tristano:
But though the knight adored her,
No prayers could move this fair one.
So at the feet low bent he,
Of a most sage enchanter,
Who in a vial gave him
A certain love elixir,
Through which the beauteous Isotta
In turn felt all the pangs of love.

CHORUS: Ah! elixir most divine,
I'd give the world if you were mine.
Ah! elixir most divine! etc.

ADINA: Appena ei bebbe un sorso
Del magico vasello,
Che tosto il cor rubello
D'Isotta intenerì.
Cambiata in un istante
Quella beltà crudele
Fu di Tristano amante,
Visse a Tristan fidele;
E quel primiero sorso
Per sempre ei benedì.
Elisir di sì perfetta,
Di sì rara qualità,
Ne sapessi la ricetta,
Conoscessi chi ti fa!

SCENA II.

(Suona il tamburo, tutti si alzano. Giunge Belcore guidando un drappello di soldati che rimangono schierati nel fondo. Si appressa ad Adina, la saluta e le presenta un mazzetto.)

BELCORE: Come Paride vezzoso
Porse il pomo alla più bella,
Mia diletta villanella,
Io ti porgo questa fior.
Ma di lui più glorioso,
Più di lui felice io sono.
Poichè in premio del mio dono
Ne riporto il tuo bel cor.

ADINA: (alle donne.) È modesto il signorino!

GIANNETTA e CORO: Sì, davvero.

NEMORINO: Oh mio dispetto!

BELCORE: Veggo chiaro in quel visino
Ch'io fo breccia nel tuo petto.
Non è cosa sorprendente;
Son galente, son sargente;
Non v'ha bella che resista
Alla vista d'un cimiero;
Cede a Marte, iddio guerriero,
Fin la madre dell'amor.

ADINA: È modesto!

CORO: Sì, Davvero.

NEMORINO: Essa ride . . . oh! mio dolor!

BELCORE: Or se m'ami, com'io t'amo,
Che più tardi a render l'armi?
Idol mio, capitoliamo:
In qual dì vuoi tu sposarmi?

ADINA: Signorino, io non ho fretta:
Un tantin pensar ci vò.

NEMORINO: (Me infelice! s'elle accetta, Disperato io morirò.)

TUTTI e BELCORE: Più tempo invan non perdere:
Volano i giorni e l'ore:
In guerra ed in amore
È fallò l' indugiar.
Al vincitore arrenditi
Da me non puoi scappar.

ADINA: Now, when Tristano tasted the magic draught of power, she, from that very hour, proved gentle as a lamb—quite changed even in the instant was the cruel lady, and when wedded to the knight; she proved most true and faithful, and ever blessed the magic draught which taught her how to love.
O wonderful elixir! I wish I had the recipe of it, that I might know how to prepare it!

SCENE II.

(Martial Music, at the close of which, enter Belcore, R. U. E.—He presents flowers to Adina.)

BELCORE: As the gay and gallant Paris
Gave the apple to the most lovely,
So to you, most fair Adina,
I present these flowers rare.
Yet while happy, even as he, love,
Fate grants me more glory, love,
If, in pledge for this, my token,
I bear away your heart.

ADINA: (to the girls). Isn't he modest?

CHORUS: So he is.

NEMORINO: Oh! my despair!

BELCORE: I read in your bright eyes,
That I have conquered your heart.
This is not at all surprising—
I am a gallant, a sergeant.
There is no girl who can resist
the sight of a soldier;
Was not the mother of love
Conquered by Mars, the god of battle?

ADINA: The modest man!

CHORUS: So he is.

NEMORINO: She laughs! Oh! torture!

BELCORE: If you love me as I love you,
Why not ground our arms instanter.
Make your conqueror your slave.

ADINA: Gentle Sergeant, I humbly crave
a few days' leisure to reflect.

NEMORINO: Ah! most unhappy! should she accept him,
Naught is left me but the grave.

BELCORE: Ah! waste not time so uselessly,
He's ever on the wing, dear,
In love, as in war, be sure
Victory brings speed
To the conqueror then yield,
Take shelter beneath a soldier's wing.

ADINA: Vedete di quest' uomini,
Vedete un pò la boria!
Già cantano vittoria
Inanzi di pugnar.
Non è, non è sì facile
Adina a conquistar.

NEMORINO: (Un po' del suo coraggio
Amor mi desse almeno!
Direi siccome io peno,
Pietà potrei trovar.
Ma sono troppo timido
Ma non poss' io parlar.

GIANNETTA e CORO: (Davver, saria di ridere Se Adina ci cascasse.)
Se tutti vendicasse.
Cotesto militar!
Sì, sì; ma è volpe vecchia:
E a lei non si può far.)

BELCORE: Intanto, o mia ragazza,
Occuperò, la piazza.—Alcuni instanti
Concedi a miei guerrieri
Al coperto posar.

ADINA: Ben volontieri
Mi chiamo fortunata
Di potervi offerir una bottiglia,

BELCORE: Obbligato (Io son già della famiglia.)

ADINA: Voi ripigliar potete
Gl' interrotti lavori. Il sol declina.

TUTTI: Andiamo.
(Partono Bel., Gia. e il coro.)

SCENA III.

Nemorino e Adina.

NEMORINO: Una parola, o Adina.

ADINA: L' usata seccatura!
I soliti sospir! Faresti meglio,
A recarti in città presso tuo zio,
Che si dice malato gravemente.

NEMORINO: Il suo mal non è niente—appreso al mio.
Partirmi non poss' io—
Mille volte il tentai—

ADINA: Ma s' egli more
E lascia erede un' altro?—

NEMORINO: E che m' importa—

ADINA: Morria di fame, e senza apoggio alcuno—

NEMORINO: O di fame o d' amor—per me è tutti

ADINA: Odimi. Tu sei buono,
Modesto sei, nè nel parlar di quel Sargente
Ti credi certo d'inspirarmi affetto;
Così ti parlo schietto,
E ti dico che in vano amor tu speri,
Che in me tosto non muoja appena è desta.

ADINA: These men, these men, how vain they are,
How forward, how presuming!
Before one blow struck for victory,
They sing a note of triumph
But Adina's not so easily caught
In a wedding ring, etc.

NEMORINO: If love would give me courage,
I'd tell of all my torture,
And then this fluttering bosom
Perchance would sing of victory.
But this poor heart's timidity
My bark to wreck will bring.

CHORUS: It truly would be laughable
If Adina should be caught now
By this gallant son of Mars,
Who conquers all he sees!
It would be very laughable.
But she, she's far too cunning
He never will victory sing.

BELCORE: Meanwhile, my dear girl, allow that my comrades may rest a little here, under these shady trees.

ADINA: With the greatest pleasure; and I shall be most happy in offering a bottle of wine to them.

BELCORE: Much obliged. I see I am already one of the family.

ADINA: (to peasants). The sun is setting, you may leave off working now.

CHORUS: Let us go.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE III.

Nemorino and Adina.

NEMORINO: One word, Adina—

ADINA: Nemorino, it would be much better for you to go to town and see your uncle, who, it is reported, is seriously ill, than to waste your time in the indulgence of a fruitless passion.

NEMORINO: His illness is nothing compared with mine. I tried many times to leave this place, but it's impossible.

ADINA: But if he dies, and you lose the inheritance

NEMORINO: What do I care?

ADINA: You will die with hunger.

NEMORINO: Whether I die with hunger or with love, it's all the same.

ADINA: Listen to me. You are good and modest. I do not believe you so vain as that sergeant; and for that reason I speak to you plainly, and tell you that it is in vain to hope for love from me, because I can not love.

NEMORINO: Oh! Adina—e perchè mai?

ADINA: Bella richiesta!
Chiedi all' aura lusingiera
Perchè vola senza posa
Or sul giglio, or sulla rosa,
Or sul prato, or sul ruscel;
Ti dirà che è in lei natura
L'esser mobile e infedel.

NEMORINO: Dunque io deggio?—

NEMORINO: All' amor mio
Rinunziar, figgir da me.

NEMORINO: Cara Adina!—non poss' io.

ADINA: Tu nol puoi? perche?

NEMORINO: Perche?
Chiedi al rio perchè gemente
Dalla balza, ov' ebbe vita,
Corre al mar sen va a morir:
Ti dirà che lo strascina
Un poter che non sà dir.

ADINA: Dunque vuoi!—

NEMORINO: Morir com' esso
Ma morir sequendo te.

ADINA: Ama altrove: è a te concesso.

NEMORINO: Ah! possibile non è.

ADINA: (illegible word) guarir da tal pazzia,
Chè è pazzia l' armor costante
Dêi seguir l' usanza mia.
Ogni dì cambiar d'amante.
Come chiodo scaccia chiodo,
Così amor discaccia amor.
In tal guisa io rido e godo,
in tal guisa ho sciolto il cor.

NEMORINO: Ah! te sola io vedo, io sento
Giorno e notte, in ogni oggetto;
E obbliarti invano io tento,
Il tuo viso ho sculto in petto—
Col cambiarsi qual tu fai,
Può cambiarsi in altro amor.
Ma non può giammai,
Il primiero uscir dal cor.
(Partono.)

SCENA IV.

(Piazza nel villagio. Osteria della Pernice da un lato.)
(Paesani che vanno e vengono. Odesi un suono di tromba: escono dalle case Donne con curiosità.)

NEMORINO: And why not, O Adina?

ADINA: A wise question.
Go demand of yon light zephyr,
Why it roams from flower to flower,
Wand'ring on through sunshine and shower
Over mountain high or shady grange,
I will reply—it is my nature
That incites me thus to change.

NEMORINO: What remains then?

ADINA: This fruitless passion
Renounce, and fly from me.

NEMORINO: Ah! I can not, dear Adina.

ADINA: You can not? and why? and why?

NEMORINO: You ask why?
Go demand of that fair river
Why parts it from its source and fountain,
Coursing on through dale, down mountain,
'Till lost in the far distant sea.
It will reply, some unknown power
Still drives me on, fate wills, so it must be.

ADINA: Then you will not.

NEMORINO: Like that fair river,
I'll be lost while following you.

ADINA: Seek some other, with her forget me.

NEMORINO: Ah! no, no, that never can be.

ADINA: Would you cure this idle madness—
For it is madness to think of constant love—
Then like me, with mirth and gladness,
You'll prove some new attachment each hour
As the night displaces day,
And in turn gives place to morn
So each fading elder passion
Should be the dawn of its younger.

NEMORINO: Ah! night and day, in every object
I do see and hear only you, love;
On this heart that form is graven,
And I would not, if I could, be free.
Other love perchance might waver,
Thus repelled with mirth and scorn;
But my true soul can never be driven
From the fond faith where it is born.
(Exeunt, Adina, L. S. E., Nemorino, R. U. M.)

SCENE IV.

(Enter Gianetta, Floretta, and Chorus, L. U. E., backing in on the Stage.)

DON: Che vuol dire cotesta sonata?

UOM: La gran nuova, venite a vedere.

DON: Cos' è stato?

UOM: In carrozza dorata
È arrivato un signor forestiere.
Se vedeste che nobil sembiante!
Che vestito, che treno brilliante.

TUTTI: Certo, certo egli è un gran personaggio,
Un Barone, un Marchese in viaggio—
Forse un Duca—fors' anche di più.
Osservate—si avanza—si accosta;
Giù i berretti, i capelli giù, giù.

SCENA V.

(Il Dottore Dulcamara sopra una carrozza in piedi. Diero ad esso un servitore che suona la tromba. Tutti i Paesani lo circondano.)

DULCAMARA: Udite, udite, o rustici;
Attenti, non fiatate.
Io già suppongo e imagino
Che al par di me sappiate
Ch' io sono quel gran Medico
Dotore enciclopedico,
Chiamato Dulcamara,
La cui virtù preclara,
E i portenti infiniti
Son noti in tutto il mondo—e in altri siti
Benefattor degli uomini,
Riparator de' mali
In pochi giorni io sgombero,
Io spazzo gli ospedali,
E la salute a vendere
Per tutto il Mondo io vò.
Compratela, compratela,
Per poco io ve la do.
È questo l' odontalgico
Mirabile liquore
Dei topi e delle cimici
Possente distruttore,
I cui certificati
Autentici, bollati,
Toccar vedere e leggere
A ciaschedun farò.
Per questo mio specifico
Simpatico, prolifico
Un uom settuagenario
E valeturinario,
Nonno di dieci bamboli
Ancora diventò.
Per questo tocca e sana.
In breve settimana
Più d' una affiitta vedova
Ei piangere cessò.
O voi matrone rigide,
Ringiovanir bramate?
Le vostre rughe incomode
Con esse cancellate.

CHORUS OF PEASANTS: What can
Those strange sounds mean, echoing near us—
Great news it is! Come, now, and look!
What is it? what is it?
Oh! what wonder, all wonders excelling!
In a carriage of gold,
A traveller approaches our dwelling.
Whoever he looks on, he straightway confounds him!
He's a Baron, or Marquis, I think, boys,
Off hats, and he'll treat us to drink, boys!
He's a Baron, or Marquis, I'm sure, girls!
Here's a chance if you look but demure, girls!
See, he approaches,
How splendid his coach is,
All in flowers of gold and of green,
Such an equipage never was seen.

SCENE V.

(Enter Dulcamara and Attendant, L. U. E.)

DULCAMARA: Give ear now, rustic ones,
Attention now, and silence all!
I think—yes, and imagine now,
That all who stand before me now,
Have heard of my wondrous fame,
And understand my glorious name—
The Italian Dulcamara,
A doctor from Ferrara!
And my wonderful renown
Is known through all the world—
And—and—and elsewhere, too!
Of all men, I am
The greatest, wondrous benefactor:
A doctor sans pareille.
I sell the "Magic Pain Extractor;"
I make the people happy all
In every place I go.
Come buy, come buy!
Cheap, you every one shall have it!
The famous odontalgicum is this—
Truly, an admirable mixture!
Which every sort of toothache cures,
And ne'er was known to fail.
Its infallible efficacy is corroborated,
As each of you himself may testify,
By certificates undoubted.
By this invaluable specific,
Sympathetic and prolific,
And old man, of eighty years,
Quickly changed was to youth
Of strong and active frame.
By this magic "Pain Extractor,"
Many an afflicted widow
Quickly of her tears was freed,
And, oh! all you stately matrons,
Do you wish to be young again?
If so, take this wondrous balsam,
And let your wrinkles disappear.

Volette voi donzelle
Ben liscia aver la pelle!
Voi giovani galanti
Per sempre avere amanti?
Per poco io ve lo do.
Ei move i paralitici,
Spedisce gli apopletici;
Gli asmatici, gli asfitici,
Gl' isterici, i diobetici;
Guarisce, timpanitidi,
E scrofole e rachitidi,
E fino il mal di fegato
Che in moda diventò.
Comprate il mio specifico,
Per poco io ve lo do,
L' ha portato per la posta
Da lontano mille miglia.
Mi direte: quanto costa?
Quanto vale la bottiglia?
Centro scudi—trenta—venti—
No—nessun osi sgomenti.
Per provarvi il mio contento
Di si amico accoglimento,
Io vi voglio, o buona gente,
Uno scudo regalar.

CORO: Uno scudo! veramente?
Più brav' uom non si può dar.

DULCAMARA: Ecco qua: così stupendo,
Si balsamico elisire,
Tutta Eurpoa sa ch' io vendo
Niente men di nove lire:
Ma siccome è pur palese,
Ch' io son nato nel paese,
Per tre lire a voi richiedo;
Così chiaro è come il Sole,
Che a ciascuno che lo vuole
Uno scudo bello e netto
In saccoccia io faccio entrar.
Ah! di patria il caldo affetto.
Gran miracoli può far.

GIANNETTA: E verissimo: porgete,
Oh! il brav'uom, Dottor, che siete;
Noi ci abbiam del vostro arrivo
Lungamente a ricordar.

SCENA VI.

Nemorino e detti.

NEMORINO: (Ardir. ha forse il cielo
Mandato espressamente per mio bene
Quest' uom miracoloso nel villaggio.)
Della scienza voglio far saggio,) Dottore—perdonate—
E ver che possediate
Segreti portentosi?

DULCAMARA: Sorprendenti.
La mia saccoccia è di Pandora il vaso.

You maidens, too, who, I know,
All like to have a snowy skin;
And young gallants, who wish to win
Kind favor in their mistress' eye—
Come buy this great specific
Which I'll sell to you all cheaply.
This cures the apoplectical,
That asthmatical, the paralytical,
The dropsical, the diuretical,
Consumption, deafness, too,
The rickets and the scrofula—
All evils are at once upset
By this new and fashionable mode.
Come buy, come buy my grand specific,
For a mere trifle you shall buy it.
For you this mixture I have brought
More than ten thousand miles.
You will wonder what the price is—
One hundred dollars—thirty—twenty—
No! I think you'll scarce believe me,
But, to prove to you my friendship,
I am happy—yes, contented,
That all these good folks around me,
Now shall have it for one dollar.

CHORUS: One dollar, only! Truly
The most liberal offer we ever knew.

DULCAMARA: Now, observe these pills tremendous,
Their cures have been stupendous!
And you scarcely need be told,
At four dollars they are sold.
But you know, my friends most dear,
I was born among you here,
And you shall buy of me
This four-dollar box for three!
And for certain, it is most plain, sirs,
That each will gain a dollar, sirs!
But, to serve my native country,
I shall sacrifice my profits.

CHORUS: This is right, he tells us truly,
Let's accept his liberal offer.
Oh! most wise and wondrous doctor,
Your arrival at this place
Will be very long remembered.

SCENE VI.

(Nemorino and Dulcamara.)

NEMORINO: Courage! Heaven itself has sent this miraculous doctor into our village to save me. I will try his science.
Doctor! I beg your pardon—is it true that you are in possession of important secrets?

DULCAMARA: Most surprising ones. My box is like that of Pandora!

NEMORINO: Avreste voi—per caso—
La bevanda amorosa
Della regina Isotta?

DULCAMARA: Ah!—che?—che cosa?

NEMORINO: Voglio dire—lo stupendo
Elisir che desta amore—

DULCAMARA: Ah! sì, sì, capisco, intendo,
Io me son distillatore.

NEMORINO: E fia vero?

DULCAMARA: Se ne fa,
Gran consumo in quest' età.

NEMORINO: Oh! fortuna! e ne vendete?

DULCAMARA: Ogni giorno, a tutto il mondo.

NEMORINO: E qual prezzo ne volete?

DULCAMARA: Poco—assai—cioè—secondo—

NEMORINO: Un zecchin—null' altro ho qua—

DULCAMARA: E la somma che ci va.

NEMORINO: Ah! prendetelo. Dottore.

DULCAMARA: Ecco il magico liquore.

NEMORINO: Obbligato, ah! sì obbligato!
Son felice, son rinato.
Elisir di tal bontà,
Benedetto chi ti fa!

DULCAMARA: Bei paesi che ho girato
Più d' un gonzo ho ritrovato
Ma un eguale in verità
Non ve n' e', non se dà.

NEMORINO: Ehi! Dottore—un momentino—
In qual modo usar si puote?

DULCAMARA: Con riguardo, pian pianino
La bottiglia un po' si scote—
Poi si stura—ma si bada—
Che il vapor non se ne vada.
Quindi al labbro la avvicini
E lo bevi a centellini,
E l' effecto sroprendente
Non è tardi à conseguir.

NEMORINO: Sul momento?

DULCAMARA: A dire il vero,
Necessario è un giorno intero.
(Tanto tempo sufficiente Per cavarmela e fuggir.)

NEMORINO: E il sapore?

DULCAMARA: Egli è eccellente—
(È bordò, non elisir)

NEMORINO: Obbligato, ah! sì, obbligato!
Son felice, son rinato.
Elisir di tal bontà.
Benedetto chi ti fa!

NEMORINO: Have you perhaps by chance, the amorous drink of the Queen Isotta!

DULCAMARA: Ah! the—what is it?

NEMORINO: I mean to say, the miraculous elixir that can awaken love.

DULCAMARA: Oh! yes, yes; I understand you now. I prepare it.

NEMORINO: Is it possible!

DULCAMARA: Oh! it is in great use nowadays.

NEMORINO: Oh! happiness! And do you sell it?

DULCAMARA: Daily, sir, to the whole world.

NEMORINO: And what will you have for it?

DULCAMARA: Little; it is according to—

NEMORINO: One eagle is all that I possess.

DULCAMARA: That's exactly the price for it.

NEMORINO: Oh! there, take it, doctor.

DULCAMARA: Here is the magic liquid.

NEMORINO: Much obliged. How happy I am with this powerful elixir! Blessed be he who invented it!

DULCAMARA: (In the countries that I roamed through, I have found many a simpleton, but none to match this one.)

NEMORINO: Eh! doctor, one moment. How am I to take this?

DULCAMARA: Shake the bottle a little, with great care, then open it—but beware that none of the vapor escapes; then put it to your mouth and drink it up, and the desired stupendous effect will be produced.

NEMORINO: Immediately?

DULCAMARA: To tell the truth, a whole day will be required. (After that time I shall be off.)

NEMORINO: How does it taste?

DULCAMARA: Oh! excellent. (It does taste rather more like wine than elixir.)

NEMORINO: Thank you kindly, etc.

DULCAMARA: (Nei paesi che ho girato
Più d' un gonzo ho ritrovato;
Ma un eguale in verità
Non ve n' è, non se ne dà.)
Giovinotto! ehi! ehi!

NEMORINO: Signore!

DULCAMARA: Sopra più—silenzio—sai?
Oggidì spacciar l'amore
È un affar geloso assai.
Impacciar se ne potria
Un tantin l' Autorità.

NEMORINO: Ve ne do la fede mia:
Nè anche un' anima il saprà.

DULCAMARA: Va, mortale avventurato;
Un tesoro io t' ho donato:
Tutt' il sesso femminino
Te doman sospirerà.
(Ma doman di buon mattino
Ben lontan sarò di quà.)

NEMORINO: Ah! dottor, vi do parola
Ch' io berrò per una sola:
Nè per altro, e sia pur bella,
Nè una stilla avanzerà.
(Veramente amica stella Ha costui condotto qua.)
(Dul. entra nell' ost.)

SCENA VII.

NEMORINO: Caro elisir! sei mio! Sì, tutto mio. Com' esser de possente la tua virtù, se, non bevuto ancora,
Di tanta gioia già mi colma il petto!
Ma perchè mai l' effetto non ne poss' io vedere prima che un giorno inter non sia trascorso?
Bevasi: oh! buono: oh! caro! un altro sorso. Oh! qual di vena in vena dolce calor mi scorre!
Ah! forse anch' essa—forse la fiamma istessa incomincia a sentir.
Certo la sente . . . me l' annunzia la gioia e l' appettito che in me si risveglia tutto in un tratto.
(Siede sulla panca dell' osteria: si cava di saccoccia pane e frutti e mangia cantando.) La rà, la rà.

SCENA VIII.

ADINA: (Chi è mai quel matto?
Traveggo, o è Nemorino?
Così allegro! e perchè?)

NEMORINO: La la la . . .
(Diamine! è dessa—
(Se alza per correre a lei, ma si arresta.) Ma no—non, ci appressiam. De' miei sospiri Non si stanchi per or. Tant' è . . . domani
Adorar mi dovrà quel cor spietato.)

ADINA: (Non mi guarda neppur!
Com' è cambiato!)

NEMORINO: La rà la rà; la rà!
Larà, larà, larà.

ADINO: (Non so se è finta o vera La sua giocondità.)

NEMORINO: (Finora amor non sente.)
Lalleralla la la la.

ADINA: (Vuol far l' indifferente.)
(ride)
Ah! Ah!

NEMORINO: Esulti pu la barbara
Per poco alle mie pene!
Domani avranno termine,
Domani m'amerà.

ADINA: Spezzar vorria lo stolido,
Gettar le sue catene;
Ma gravi più del solito
Pesar le sentirà.

NEMORINO: Lallara, la, la, la.

ADINA: Bravissimo!
(Avvicinandosi a lui.)
La lezion ti giova.

NEMORINO: È ver: la metto in opera
Così, per una prova.

ADINA: Dunque il soffrir primiero?

NEMORINO: Dimenticarlo io spero.

ADINA: Dunque l' antico foco?

NEMORINO: Si estinguerà fra poco.
Ancora un giorno solo.
E il core guarirà.

DULCAMARA: In all my travels
I've seen many
Fools of every sort and size;
But of all the fools the biggest,
Now he stands before my eyes. Ah!
Yes, he surpasses, etc.
Eh! young man? eh! eh!

NEMORINO: Well, doctor!

DULCAMARA: Not a word, but keep silence;
Silence, silence, sir, I pray.
(Aside.)
Selling love in this queer fashion
May bring me no little trouble
So, not a word—not a look!
Discovered should it be this sale,
They may put me in jail.
Mind—not a word! be silent!

NEMORINO: Silent as a grave I'll be;
They'll get no word or look from me.

DULCAMARA: Go, and spend the day in pleasure;
I have given you a treasure;
All the women will adore you
When tomorrow shall arrive.

NEMORINO: Ah! Adina, each earthly blessing
Centered is in you alone, love.
Your loved image each thought possessing,
Makes this heart all your own.
Friendly powers, take thanks for guiding
This good doctor to my home.

DULCAMARA: (aside). But before tomorrow morning,
Dulcamara will be gone!
Go,and spend, etc.
Not a word, etc.
Not a word about the charming,
Fear the magistrates alarming,
But before, etc.

NEMORINO: Silent as the grave I'll be, etc.

(Exit Dulcamara, L. S. E., leaving Nemorino with the bottle in his hand.)

SCENE VII.

NEMORINO: Elixir of love! You're mine now, rarest of treasures!
How great must be your power, how strong your force!
Before I even taste you, my heart is floating and my pulse beats faster!
But what can be the reason that your magic virtue
Will not exert its spell until tomorrow?
(He shakes the bottle and drinks.)
Delicious! I love it! Let's have another!
(He drinks again.)
I feel a cozy burbling warming up my stomach.
Perhaps Adina feels it as well as I do and is longing for me. Yes, I am certain, I feel it in my blood. She's my Isolda and I'm her happy love, I'm her Tristan!
(He sings.)
Lalalalalalala!
(He sits down on a bench, takes fruit and bread from his pocket, and eats, while singing.)

SCENE VIII.

ADINA: Now who's that idiot, I wonder?
Not Nemorino? And so happy? Why is that?

NEMORINO: (seeing Adina) Lalala . . . Hang it all! Adina! (He rises, as if to run toward her, then stops.)
But no, I'll take my time.
I will not burden her with my sighing just now.
Because . . . tomorrow, when the potion takes hold, she will adore me.

ADINA: (aside) He doesn't even look!
He dares ignore me!

NEMORINO: Lalalalalalalalalalala.

ADINA: Can he be really happy,
Or is it just put on?

NEMORINO: Lalalalalalala . . .

ADINA: I think he wants to fool me.

NEMORINO: She's still as cold as ever.
She's laughing at my love for her,
That heartless, cruel Adina!
Tomorrow she will laugh no more,
She'll fall in love with me.

ADINA: The fool! He tries to tear in vain
The bond that holds him captive.
The more he strives to break his chain,
The stronger it will be.

NEMORINO: Lalalalala la la la . . .

ADINA: (approaching him) Not bad, my lad!
You learned your lesson quickly.
You're doing what I told you.

NEMORINO: I try to make the best of it
As long as I can't hold you.

ADINA: So you no longer love me?

NEMORINO: I'm hoping to forget you.

ADINA: Then you can live without me?

NEMORINO: I hope it won't upset you.
And by tomorrow morning
My heart will be all well.

ADINA: Davver? Me ne consolo . . .
Ma pure . . . si vedrà.

NEMORINO: (Esulti pur la barbara
Per poco alle mie pene!
Domani m'amerà.)

ADINA: (Spezzar vorria lo stolido,
Getar le sue catene;
Ma gravi più del solito
Pesar le sentirà.)

SCENA IX.

(Belcore di dentro, indi in scena, e detti.)

BELCORE: Tran tran, tran tran, tran tran.
In guerra ed in amore
L'assedio annoja e stanca.

ADINA: (A tempo vien Belcore.)

BELCORE: Io vado all' arma bianca
In guerra ed in amor.

ADINA: Ebben, gentil Sargente,
La piazza vi è piaciuta?

BELCORE: Difesa à bravamente,
E invano ell' è battuta.

ADINA: E non vi dice il core
Che presto cederà?

BELCORE: Ah! lo volesse amore!

ADINA: Vedrete che vorrà.

BELCORE: Quando? saria possible!

NEMORINO: (A mio dispetto io tremo.)

BELCORE: Favella, o mio bell' Angelo.
Quando ci sposeremo?

ADINA: Prestissimo.

NEMORINO: Che sento?

BELCORE: Ma quando?

ADINA: Fra sei dì.
(Guardando Nem.)

NEMORINO: Oh! gioja! son contento.

BELCORE: Ah! ha! va ben così.
(Che cosa trova a ridere
Cotesto scimunito?
Or or lo piglio a scoppole
Se non va via di qua.)

ADINA: (E può sì lieto ed ilare
Sentir che mi marito!
Non posso più nascondere
La rabbia che mi fa.)

ADINA: Indeed? So much the better . . .
However . . . time will tell.

NEMORINO: She's laughing at my love for her,
That heartless, cruel Adina!
Tomorrow she will laugh no more,
She'll fall in love with me.

ADINA: The fool! He tries to tear in vain
The bond that holds him captive.
The more he strives to break his chain,
The stronger it will be.

SCENE IX.

(Enter Belcore, L. U. E.)
(Adina, Nemorino and Belcore.)

BELCORE: Tran, tran, tran, tran!
In love, boys, as in war,
A siege is wondrously trying.

ADINA: He comes most opportunely.

BELCORE: While both keen blades require, boys,
Without a speck or flaw.

ADINA: How now most valorous sergeant,
When will the siege be ended?

BELCORE: Alas! in vain I lay before
A place so well defended!

ADINA: Does not your heart inform you,
That soon the place will fall!

BELCORE: Ah! if I dare imagine—

ADINA: Courage, you'll batter down the wall!

BELCORE: Dearest! Oh! is it possible?—

NEMORINO: In spite of myself, I tremble!

BELCORE: Then love, pray name our wedding-day—
No longer dissemble.

ADINA: Tomorrow!

NEMORINO: Good heavens!

BELCORE: My angel!

ADINA: In three days.

NEMORINO: Ah!—what rapture fills my bosom!
In three days—ha, ha, ha!—you'll see

BELCORE: I wonder what he's laughing at,
The stupid ignoramus!
I certainly shall punch his head,
Unless he march away.

ADINA: I can no longer hide my rage!
That he, but now my vassal,
When hearing that I soon shall wed,
Is yet so blithe and gay.

NEMORINO: Gradasso! ei già s'immagini
Toccar il ciel col dito:
Ma tesa è già la trappola,
Doman se ne avvedrà)

SCENA X.

(Suona il tamburo: esce Giannetta con le contadine, indi accorrono i soldati di Belcore.)

GIANNETTA: Signor sargente, signor sargente
Di voi richiede la vostra gente.

BELCORE: Son qua: ch' è stato? perchè tal fretta?

SOL: Son due minuti che una staffetta
Non so qual ordine per voi reco.

BELCORE: Il Capitano . . . ah! ah! va bene.
(Leggendo.)
Su, camerata: partir conviene.

CORI: Partire . . . ! e quando?

BELCORE: Doman mattina.

CORI: O Ciel, sì presto!

NEMORINO: (Afflitta è Adina.)

BELCORE: Espresso è l' ordine—che dir non so.

CORI: Maledettisima combinazione!
Cambiar sì spesso di guarnigione!
Dover le amanti abbandonar.

BELCORE: Espresso è l' ordine—non so che far
Carino, udisti? domani, addio!
(Ad Adi.)
Almen ricordati dell' amor mio.

NEMORINO: (Sì, sì, domani ne udrai la nuova.)

ADINA: Di mia costanza ti darò prova:
La mia promessa rammenteró.

NEMORINO: (Sì, sì, domani te lo dirò.)

BELCORE: Se a mantenerla tu sei dispota,
Chè non anticip? che mai ti costa?
Fin da quest' oggi non puoi sposarmi?

NEMORINO: (Fin da quest' oggi!)

ADINA: (osservando Nem.). (Si turba, parmi.)
Ebben; quest' oggi . . .

NEMORINO: Quest' oggi! o Adina,
Quest' oggi, dici? . . .

ADINA: E perchè no?

NEMORINO: Aspetta almeno fin domattina.

BELCORE: E tu che c' entri? vediamo un po'.

NEMORINO: He thinks himself a conqueror,
This man of war, so famous;
Tomorrow he will hide his head,
Through they exult today, ha, ha!

SCENE X.

(Enter Gianetta, Floretta, and Chorus, L. U. E.)

GIANETTA: O Mr. Sergeant, Mr. Sergeant,
Your soldiers seek you through the village

BELCORE: I am here, now: what's the matter?

CHORUS OF SOLDIERS: An hour ago, sir,
Was left below, sir,
This dispatch, sir, directed to you.

BELCORE: It is from the Captain.
Ah! ah! it is well! it will be something new.
Comrades, prepare: We change our quarters.

CHORUS: You change! and when?

BELCORE: Faith, tomorrow at ten.

CHORUS: O heavens! so soon!

NEMORINO: Adina is pensive.

BELCORE: Ah, dear Adina, I must go!

CHORUS: It is thus the garrison is always changing
And thus the soldier is forever ranging
We might have guessed it is nothing new.

BELCORE: Ah, dearest Adina, however unwilling,
Tomorrow, love, tomorrow,
I must say adieu.

NEMORINO: (aside). Yes, yes, tomorrow
You'll hear something new.

ADINA: I shall be faithful, you have my pledge, sir;
I shall be faithful, faithful to you

NEMORINO: Yes, yes. Tomorrow, dearest,
You'll hear something new!

BELCORE: If to be constant you are disposed, love,
Why not anticipate our nuptials?
If in a week, love—why not today?

NEMORINO: Ah! not today

ADINA: He seems disturbed.
yes, today! why not, sir?

NEMORINO: Not today, O Adina,
Say not today!

ADINA: And pray, sir, why?

NEMORINO: Ah! wait till tomorrow!

BELCORE: Today or tomorrow,
Pray, sir, what have you to say?

NEMORINO: Adina, credemi, te ne scongiuro . . .
Non puoi sposarlo . . . te ne assicuro . . .
Aspetta ancora . . . un giorno appena
Un breve giorno . . . io so perchè.
Domani, o cara, ne avresti pena,
Te ne dorresti al par di me.

BELCORE: Il ciel ringrazi, o babbuino,
Che matto, o presso tu sei dal vino!
Ti avrei strozzato, ridotto in brani,
Se in questo istante tu fossi in te.
Ma finch' io tengo a fren le mani.
Va via, buffone, ti ascondi a me.

ADINA: Lo compatite, egli è un ragazzo:
Un mal' accorto, un mezzo pazzo:
Si è fitto in capo ch' io debba amarlo,
Perch'ei delira d' amor per me.
(Vo' vendicarmi, vo' tormentarlo,
Vo' che pentito mi cada al piè.)

GIANNETTA e CORI: Vedete un poco quel semplicione
Ha pur la strana presunzione:
Ei pensa farla ad un sargente.
A un uom di mondo che par non è.
Oh! sì per Bacco, è veramente
La bella Adina boccon per te!

ADINA: Andiamo, Belcore. Si avverta il notaro.

NEMORINO: Dottore! Dottore! . . . —Soccorso! riparo!

GIANNETTA e CORI: È matto davvero.

ADINA: (Me l' hai da pagar.)
A lieto convito—Amici, v' invito.

BELCORE: Giannetta, ragazze.—
Vi aspetto a ballar.

GIANNETTA e CORI: Un ballo, un banchetto!
Chi puó ricusar?

TUTTI: Fra lieti concenti,
Gioconda brigata,
Vogliamo contenti,
Passar la giornata;
Presento alla festa,
Amore sarà,
Ei perde la testa
Da rider mi fa,
Ah, ah, ah, ah,
Da rider mi fa,
Ei perde la testa,
Da rider mi fa.

NEMORINO: Wait till tomorrow,
Adina, not today.
Adina, trust me, I beg you,
You cannot wed him.
I tell you truly, wait, I beg you,
Until tomorrow.
But one short day, love, but one short day.
The future, dearest, you'll spend in sorrow,
If to my suit, love, you now say no.

BELCORE: Thank heaven, you most consummate donkey,
You noodle, that nothing but contempt moves me;
If you had brains, I'd scatter 'em to the winds.
But when did an ass do anything but bray!
As I'm a soldier, I'll crack your crown, sir,
If you dare to stay here, you scoundrel,
I'll crack your crown, sir, if you stay.

ADINA: Oh! pray excuse him, he's young and foolish.
A stupid peasant half-mad with passion,
Whom I discarded this very morning,
So take no notice of him, I pray.
Revenge is pleasant:
I'll now torment him
Until he, repenting,
Shall mercy pray.

GIANETTA and CHORUS: Was ever seen such strange presumption!
This foolish fellow would fain outwit him.
Fight with a soldier!—why, we'd pit him
Against great Mars, in such a fray.

ADINA: Sergeant Belcore, send for the Notary.

NEMORINO: O Doctor, assist me!

CHORUS: He's mad, sirs! how sad, sirs.

ADINA: I pay in his own coin.
(To Peasantry.)
I know it will delight you and therefore invite you—

BELCORE: To a ball and banquet,
On this happy day!

CHORUS: A ball and banquet!
It is their wedding day.

ENSEMBLE: These moments entrancing,
Such happiness bringing,
Enjoy them with dancing,
With feasting, with singing;
From love's cup of pleasure
We'll gladden the hours,
And fill up its measure
With joy and with flowers.

NEMORINO: Mi sprezza il sargente, mi burla l' ingrata,
Zimbello alla gente—mi fa la spietata,
L'oppresso mio core—più speme non ha.
Dottore! dottore!
Soccorso! pietà!
(Adina dà la mano a Belcore: Nemorino si smania gli astanti lo dileggiano.)

CALA IL SIPARIO

NEMORINO: The Sergeant is sneering,
Adina derides me,
The villagers leering—
Whatever betides me
I care not for all.
Now all is dark as night.
O Doctor, the nostrum has ruined me!
(At the close of this chorus, Nemorino is pushed about by all the characters.—Adina, in a coquettish manner, keeps near Belcore, who in return pays her attention.—Nemorino runs out, R. U. E. in a fit of distraction, amid the jeers and laughter of the chorus when the curtain falls.)

END OF ACT ONE.

■ ATTO II.

SCENA I.

Interno della fattoria d' Adina. (Adina, Belcore, Dulcamara, Giannetta seduti a tavola Gli abitanti del villaggio in piedi bevendo e cantando.)

CORO: Cantiamo, faccian brindisi
A sposi così amabili.
Per lor sian lunghi e stabili
I giorni del piacer.

BELCORE: Per me l' amore e il vino
Due numi ognor saranno.
Compensan d' ogni effanno
La donna ed il bicchier.

ADINA: (Se fosse Nemorino!
Me la vorrei goder.)

CORO: Cantiamo, facciam brindisi, etc.

DULCAMARA: Poichè cancar vi alletta,
Uditemi, signori.
Ho qua una canzonetta
Di fresco data fuor
Vivace, graziosa
Che gusto vi può dar;
Purchè la bella sposa
Mi voglia secondar.

TUTTI: Sì, sì, l' avremo cara;
Dev' esser cosa rara,
Se il grande Dulcamara
E giunta a contentar.

DULCAMARA: (Cava di saccoccia alcuni librettini, e ne da una ad Adi.) La Nina Gondoliera
E il Senator Tredenetti
Barcaruola a due voci—Attenti

■ ACT II.

SCENE I.

(The interior of a village farmhouse with preparations for a feast. A table running across the back of the stage—another much smaller at which Dulcamara and Belcore sit.—Gianetta, Floretta, and Chorus seated at the other.

CHORUS: A song, boys, a song! And a jovial one!
A toast, boys, and a noble one!
To them may pleasure, without measure,
Long and constant!

BELCORE: Thanks for your kindly greeting,
May pleasure, without measure,
Long and constant be.
This our merry meeting,
As pleasant be to every one
As it is now to me.
A health to all around, boys,
And a bumper let it be, etc.

ADINA: Would that Nemorino were here this sight to see.

CHORUS: A song, boys, a song! a song! a song, etc.

DULCAMARA: My friends, I have the last new barcarolle from Venice, in my pocket; it is for two voices, and, if the fair Adina will sing it with me, I shall be happy to let you hear it.

ALL: Yes, yes—we shall be delighted. It must be very clever to have pleased the learned Dulcamara.

TUTTI: Attenti.

DULCAMARA: Io son ricco, e tu sei bella,
Io ducati e vezzi hai tu:
Perchè a me sarai ribella,
Nina mia, che vuoi di più?

ADINA: Quale onore!—Un senatore
Me d'amore—supplicar!
Ma, modesta gondoliera,
Un par mio vò sposar.

DULCAMARA: Idol mio, non più rigor;
Fa felici un Senator.

ADINA: Eccellenza, troppo onor,
Io non merto un Senator.

DULCAMARA: Adorata Barcaruola,
Prendi l' oro e lascia amor;
Lieve è questo, e lieve vola;
Pesa quello e resta ognor.

ADINA: Quale onore!—Un Senatore
Me d' amore—supplicar!
Ma Zanetto—e giovinetto;
Ei mi piace, e il vo' sposar.

DULCAMARA: Idol mio non più rigor;
Fa felice un Senator.

ADINA: Eccellenza! troppo onor.
Io non merto un Senator.

TUTTI: Bravo, bravo, Dulcamara!
La canzone è cosa rara,
Sceglier meglio non può certo
Il più esperto cantator.

DULCAMARA: Il Dottore Dulcamara
In ogni arte è professor.
(Viene un notaro.)

BELCORE: Silenzio!—E qua il Notaro.
Che vien a compier l'atto
Di mia felicità.

TUTTI: Sia il ben venuto!

DULCAMARA: T' abbraccio, e ti saluto
O medico d' Amor, spezial d' imene.

ADINA: (Giunto è il Notaro, e Nemorino non viene!)

BELCORE: Andiam, mia bella Venere . . .
Ma in quelle luci tenere
Qual veggo nuvoletto?

ADINA: Non è niente.
(S' egli non è presente.
Compita non mi par la mia vendetta.)

DULCAMARA: (Dulcamara presents Adina with one roll of music, and keeps the other himself.) You must—now, then, attention, silence! the subject is Nina, a pretty fish-woman, and old Tredenti, the Collector of Taxes.

DULCAMARA: I have riches, you have beauty,
I have gold, and you have charms,
Then fly, delightful Nina, to your fond adorer's arms.

ADINA: What an honor!—
My husband aspires to be, a collector!
But my heart goes with my hand, sir,
And your's is far too old for me.

DULCAMARA: Lovely girl, behold your slave,
At your feet I crave an answer.

ADINA: Ah! you're far too old and grave
Sir, to be a young girl's slave.

DULCAMARA: Most adored and beauteous creature,
Riches cleanse us from all stains;
Love is light, while gold is heavy,
This takes wing while that remains.

ADINA: What an honor!—a director
My husband aspires to be a director!
But my heart goes with my hand, sir,
And I am far younger than you.

DULCAMARA: Dearest idol, relax your rigor,
And make your senator happy.

ADINA: Excellent sir, your proffered love
Is too much honor for me.

CHORUS: Bravo! bravo! Dulcamara,
It is a most amusing song, sir;
Taste and style belong to you, sir,
In no moderate degree.

DULCAMARA: Yes, I flatter myself, sirs,
That taste and style pertains to me.
(Enter Notary.)

BELCORE: Silence, I say. Here comes the Notary to accomplish my felicity.

ALL: And right welcome he is.

DULCAMARA: (to Notary). Great carpenter and joiner of Love and Hymen, I embrace and salute you.

ADINA: (The Notary has come, and Nemorino is not here.)

BELCORE: Adina, my love, you look sorrowful; brush away the little clouds that obscure the lustre of those eyes. What has happened to vex you?

ADINA: Nothing! (Aside.) If Nemorino is not present, my triumph will be but half complete.

BELCORE: Andiamo a segnar l' atto: il tempo affretta.

TUTTI: Cantiamo ancora un brindisi
A sposi così amabili
Per lor sian lunghi e stabili
I giorni del piacer.
(Partono tutti. Dul. ritorna indietro, e si rimette a tavola.)

SCENA II.

Dulcamara, indi Nemorino.

DULCAMARA: La feste nuziali
Son piacevoli assai; ma quel che in esse
Mi dà maggior diletto.

NEMORINO: Ho veduto il Notaro. (Sopra pensiero.)
Sì, l' ho veduto . . . Non v' ha più speranza;
Nemorino, per te; spezzato ho il core.

DULCAMARA: (Dettando fra i denti.) Idol mio non più rigor;
Fa felice un Senator.

NEMORINO: Voi, qui, Dottore!

DULCAMARA: Sì, m' han voluto a pranzo
Questi amabili sposi, e mi diverto
Con questi avanzi.

NEMORINO: Ed io son disperato!
Fuori di me son io. Dottore, ho d'uopo
D'essere amato . . . prima di domani . . .
Adesso . . . su du piè.

DULCAMARA (S'alza): (Cospetto è matto!)
Recipe l'elisir, e il colpe è fatto.

NEMORINO: E veramente amato
Sarò da lei . . .

DULCAMARA: Da tutte: io te 'l prometto.
Se anticipar l' effetto
Dell' elisir tu vuoi, bevine tosto
Un' altra dose. (Io parto fra mezzora.)

NEMORINO: Caro dottor, una bottiglia ancora.

DULCAMARA: Ben volontier. Mi piace
Giovare a' bisognosi.—Hai tu danaro?

NEMORINO: Ah! non ne ho più.

BELCORE: Come now, then, to sign the contract which makes you mine forever.

CHORUS: Let us sing and fill our glasses—bumpers, in honor of this amiable couple. May their days of mirth last for ever.
(Exeunt all but Dulcamara, who remains at the table eating and drinking.)

SCENE II.

DULCAMARA: Witnessing a contract is all very well, if one has nothing better to do; but, as it is quite uncertain when the next dinner gratis may fall in, I'll even make the most of the one that's before me.

NEMORINO: All is lost! I saw the Notary—my poor uncle, too, who has ever been so kind to me, lies now, they say, upon his death-bed at Ravienna, and yet, madman as I am, I can not tear myself away.

DULCAMARA: (sings). "Lovely girl, I crave an answer,
At your feet behold your slave!

NEMORINO: O Doctor! you here!

DULCAMARA: Yes, the amiable contracting parties are signing and sealing in the next room; they are feasting on love, but as that is rather short commons for lookers on, I stick to the lobster salad and champagne.

NEMORINO: I am desperate—I am mad, doctor. Where's the use of being loved tomorrow by one who is to be wedded today? I want to be loved now, instantly.

DULCAMARA: (Rising.) (By Heavens, he's mad!)
Take another dose of the elixir, and the thing's completely accomplished.

NEMORINO: I must be loved! before tomorrow! Instantly!

DULCAMARA: Undoubtedly: that I promise you. If you would anticipate the effect of the magic elixir, you have only to take another dose. (I go in half an hour).

NEMORINO: (impatiently). Give it me, give it me, Doctor!

DULCAMARA: With pleasure, my dear friend. (Producing it.) Nothing ever causes me so much happiness as being able to assist the unfortunate; the price is twenty crowns.

NEMORINO: I haven't one farthing in the world.

DULCAMARA: La cosa cambia aspetto. A me verrai
Subito che ne avrai.—Vieni a trovarmi
Quì presso alla Pernice.
Ci hai tempo un quarto d' ora.

SCENA III.

Nemorino indi Belcore.

NEMORINO: (Si getta sopra una panca.) Oh! me infelice!

BELCORE: La donna è un animale
Stravagante davvero. Adina m' ama,
Di sposarmi è contenta, e differire
Pur vuol fino a sta sera!

NEMORINO: Ecco il rivale!
(Mi spezzerei la testa di mia mano?)

BELCORE: (Ebbene—che cos' ha questo baggiano?
Ehi, ehi, quel giovinotto!
Cos' hai che ti disperi?

NEMORINO: Io mi dispero . . .
Perchè non ho denaro . . . e non so come.
Non so dove trovarne.

BELCORE: Eh! scimunito!
Se danaro non hai.
Fatti soldato . . . e venti scudi avrai.

NEMORINO: Venti scudi!

BELCORE: E ben sonanti,

NEMORINO: Quando? adesso?

BELCORE: Sul momento.

NEMORINO: (Che far deggio?)

BELCORE: E coi contanti,
Gloria e onore al reggimento.

NEMORINO: Ah non è l' ambizione,
Che seduce questo cor.

BELCORE: Se è l' amore, in guarnigione
Non ti può mancar l' amor.

NEMORINO: Ai perigli della guerra
Io so ben che esposto sono;
Che doman la patria terra,
Zio, congiunti, ahimè, abbandono.
Ma so per che fuor di questa,
Altra strada a me non resta
Per poter del cor d' Adina
Un sol giorno trion far.
Ah! cri un giorno ottiene Adin
Fin la vita può lasciar.)

BELCORE: Del tamburo al suon vivace,
Fra le file e le bandiere
Aggirarsi amor si piace

DULCAMARA: Ah! my dear friend, you are so extremely unfortunate, that it is quite impossible for me to assist you.
For half an hour I shall be at the inn—if in the course of that time you can find means to apply to my aid, pray command it. (Exit).

SCENE III.

(Nemorino, and afterwards, Belcore.)

NEMORINO: (casting himself on a seat) Oh, most unfortunate am I!

BELCORE: What an incomprehensible being is woman! Adina loves me, that is evident enough—wishes to be married to me—and yet insists on deferring the nuptials till tonight.

NEMORINO: Oh, there is my rival! How I should like to punch his head with this fist of mine!

BELCORE: That fellow here! what is the matter with the dolt, I wonder? Hark, friend, you seem disturbed.

NEMORINO: I am mad—desperate—heartbroken—
Because I have no money, and don't know where to get any!

BELCORE: Enlist for a soldier, and you'll get twenty crowns!

NEMORINO: Twenty crowns!

BELCORE: Full weight, I vow, sir.

NEMORINO: Given directly! How determine!

BELCORE: Here, and now, sir!

NEMORINO: What shall I do?

BELCORE: And, besides the money, you will get glory and promotion in the regiment.

NEMORINO: It is not gold nor stern ambition that moves
My heart to this step.

BELCORE: Ah! if it is Cupid that enthralls you,
The soldier need never fall in love.

NEMORINO: I know full well that the path of war
Ever teems with fearful dangers—
That, tomorrow, for strangers I abandon
My home, country, friends, relations,
But no other path is left me
To secure Adina's heart.
And, oh! what rapture unexampled,
To say I triumph before I part!
Once I have gained
Adina, I may die content.

BELCORE: At the drum's enlivening roll,
While flaunting banners grace the line,

Con le vispe vivandiere:
Sempre lieto, sempre gajo
Ha di bella un centinajo;
Dì costanza non s' annoja
Non si perde a sospirar.
Credi a me: la vera gioja
Accompagna il militar.

NEMORINO: Ebben, vada. Li prepara.

BELCORE: Ma la carta che tu vedi
Pria di tutto dei segnar
Qua una croce.
(Nemorino segna e prende la borsa.)

NEMORINO: (Dulcamara
Volo tosto a ricercar.)

BELCORE: Qua la mano, giovinotto,
Dell' acquisto mi consolo.
In complesso, sopra e sotto
Tu mi sembri un buon figlinolo,
Sarai presto caporale,
Se me prendi ad esemplar.
(Ho ingaggiato il mio rivale:
Anche questa è da contar.)

NEMORINO: Ah! non sai chi m' ha ridotto
A tal passo, a tal partito;
Tu non sai qual cor sta sotto
A quest' umile vestito;
Quel che a me tal somma vale
Non potresti immaginar.
(Ah! non v' ha tesoro eguale, Se riesce a farmi amar.)
(Partono.)

SCENA IV.

(Campagna come nell' atto primo. Giannetta e paesane.)

CORI: Saria possibile.

GIANNETTA: Possibilissimo.

CORI: Non è probabile.

GIANNETTA: Probabilissimo.

CORI: Ma come mai?—ma d' onde il sai?
Chi te lo disse? chi è? do' è?

GIANNETTA: No fate strepito: parlate piano:
Non anco spargere si può l' arcano.
E noto solo al merciajuolo;
Che in Confidenza l'ha detto a me.

CORI: Il merciajuolo l' ha detto a te!
Sarà verissimo . . . oh! bella affè!

GIANNETTA: Sappiate dunque che l' altro dî
Di Nemorino lo zio morì;
Che al giovinotto lasciato egli ha.

Love is pleased to wander round:
Amid the girls who sell provisions,
Always joyful, always gay,
You will find a hundred beauties.
Nor, by constancy if ennuied,
Need you waste much time in wooing.
Trust to me, there's no delight
To match a soldier's day and night.

NEMORINO: It is well—to enlist, then, I agree

BELCORE: But this paper must be signed,
First by you, and then by me. (Both sign paper.)
So, that's enough.

NEMORINO: Dulcamara, man of fame
I fly to claim
Your promised aid!

BELCORE: Now your hand—our bargain's ended;
I'm delighted to have gained you!
Your appearance will be splendid,
When the sergeant will have trained you;
And you'll soon become a corporal.
If you will but take example of me.
Yes, I have enlisted my rival
Now the field lies fair and free:
Thus success still waits on boldness,
And my triumph is decreed.

NEMORINO: To honor and glory, a name found in story,
All danger deriding, on, onward we march!
He knows not the motive my freedom I barter;
Nor ever can imagine its value to me.
The sun brightly gleaming, our arms gaily streaming,
The name of Adina shall be my bright star
(They leave.)

SCENE IV.

(Enter Gianetta, Floretta and Peasantry, L. U. E.)

CHORUS: Is it possible?

GIANETTA: Yes, it is.

CHORUS: It can't be possible.

GIANETTA: Yes, it is.

CHORUS: But tell us how, who has told you, how do you know it; quick, tell us here.

GIANETTA: Hush! don't make a noise. This secret must not be known yet; because I have it from the peddler, who told me in the strictest confidence.

CHORUS: If he has told you of it, there can't be any doubt. O happy news!

GIANETTA: Know, then, that Nemorino's uncle died the other day, and left him a considerable inheritance. But silence! nobody must Cospicua, immensa eredità.

Ma zitte . . . piano . . . per carità.
Non deve dirsi.

CORI: Non si dirà.
Or Nemorino è millionario . . .
E l' Epulone del circondario . . .
Un uom di vaglia, un buon partito . . .
Felice quella cui fia marito!
Ma zite . . . piano . . . per carità.
Non deve dirsi, non si dirà.
(Veggono Nem. che si avvicina, si ritirano in disparte.)

SCENA V.

Nemorino e detti.

NEMORINO: Dell' elisir mirabile
Bevuto ho in abbondanza,
E mi promette il Medico
Cortese ogni beltà.
In me maggior del solito.
Rinata è la speranza,
L' effeto di quel farmaco
Già, Già, sentir si fa.

CORI: (E ognor negletto ed ùmile:
La cosa ancor non sa.

NEMORINO: (per uscire). Andiam.

GIANNETTA e CORI: (inchinandolo) Serva umillissima.

NEMORINO: Giannetta!

CORI: (L'una dopo l'altra). A voi m' inchino.

NEMORINO: (Cos' han coteste giovani?
(Fra sè maravigliato.)

GIANNETTA e CORI: Caro quel Nemorino!
Davvero ch' egli è amabile;
Ha l' aria da Signor.

NEMORINO: (Capisco, è questa l' opera Del magico licor.)

SCENA VI.

Adina e Dulcamara.

ADINA: Come sen va contento!

DULCAMARA: La lode è mia.

ADINA: Vostra o Dottor?

DULCAMARA: Sì, tutta.
La gioja è al mio comando,
Io distillo il piacer, l' amor lambicco,
Come l' acqua di rose; e ciò che adesso
Vi fa maravigliar nel giovinotto,
Tutto portento egli è del mio decotto.

ADINA: Pazzie!

know it yet.

CHORUS: Nobody shall know it. Now, Nemorino is a millionaire; he is the richest man in all the neighborhood—he is a worthy man—a good match—happy the girl who gets him. But be silent, nobody must know it yet.
(They see Nemorino coming, and retire to one side, looking at him anxiously.)

SCENE V.

NEMORINO: I have already drank so much,
Of this miraculous elixir,
That doubtless every beauty will court me,
As the great Doctor promised
I have now more hopes than ever;
And already I begin to feel the power,
The wonderful effects of this elixir.

CHORUS: At other times he is both humble and ignorant,
Now he is quite beside himself!

NEMORINO: Let us go. (Going.)

GIANETTA and CHORUS: Your humble servant, sir (Bowing.)

NEMORINO: Gianetta!

CHORUS: (one after another). I salute you.

NEMORINO: What is the matter with these young people?

GIANETTA and CHORUS: How dear is that Nemorino!
How exceedingly amiable he is!
He has quite the appearance of a Duke!

NEMORINO: I begin to comprehend—Their courtesy
Is the effect of the magic liquor.

SCENE VI.

Dulcamara and Adina.

ADINA: How contentedly he goes with them.

DULCAMARA: It's all my doing!

ADINA: Yours, Doctor?

DULCAMARA: Yes, mine! I mix up happiness at twenty crowns a bottle, and distill love like rose-water. That which excites wonder in young men is a prodigy of my concoction.

ADINA: Psha!

DULCAMARA: Pazzie, voi dite?
Incredula! pazzie! Sapete voi
Dell' Alchimia il poter, il gran valore
Dell' Elisir d' amore
Della regina Isotta.

ADINA: Isotta!

DULCAMARA: Isotta.
Io n' ho ogni mistura e d' ogni cotta.

ADINA: (Che ascolto?) E a Nemorino
Voi deste l' Elisir?

DULCAMARA: Ei me lo chiese
Per ottener l' affetto
Di non so qual crudele . . .

ADINA: Ei dunque amava?

DULCAMARA: Languiva, sospirava
Sena' ombra di speranza; e, per avere
Una goccia del farmaco incantato.
Vendè la libertà, si fe soldato.

DUETTO:

ADINA: (Quanto amore! ed io, spietata Tormentai sì nobil cor!)

DULCAMARA: (Essa pure è innamorato; ha bisogno del liquor.)

ADINA: Dunque . . . adesso—è Nemorino.
In amor sì fortunato! . . .

DULCAMARA: Tutto il sesso femminino
E pel giovine impazzato.

ADINA: E qual donna è a lui gradita?
Qual fra tante è preferita?

DULCAMARA: Egli è il gallo delle Checca
Tutte segue; tutte becca.

ADINA: (Ed io sola, sconsigliata, Possedea quel nobil cor!)

DULCAMARA: (Essa pure è innamorata;
Ha bisogno del liquor.)
Bella Adina! qua un momento
Più d' appresso . . . su la testa,
Tu sei cotta . . . io l' argomento
A quell' aria afflitta e mesta.
Se tu voi? . . .

ADINA: S' io vo'? che cosa?

DULCAMARA: Psha! do you say? I like that. Do you know the secrets of Alchemy? do you know the power of the love elixir of Queen Isotta? I have it in bottles of all sizes. Here, now, is one only ten crowns. (Aside.) A black drink—but never mind!

ADINA: Isota!

DULCAMARA: Isotta.
I have mixtures to suit all purposes.

ADINA: What do I hear? and you sold that elixir to Nemorino?

DULCAMARA: I did. He applied for it to try its effects upon some person who had refused him.

ADINA: Then he was in love?

DULCAMARA: He was—he languished, sighed—without a ray of hope—and now look at the effect; yonder he is (Pointing, R. U. E.) Sixteen women round him—look at that, there's an elixir for you! Sold his liberty, and became a soldier—sixteen women—very cheap, too, I think.

DUET:

ADINA: What affection! and I—how cruel
To torment that noble heart!
Ah! cruel! ah! cruel!

DULCAMARA: (She's in love and wants the elixir, Faith, I won't depart so soon!)

ADINA: Then it's certain that Nemorino has at length requited his love.

DULCAMARA: He's invited to every feast
All the women are delighted,
Every masculine is blighted.
Every feminine excited.

ADINA: And which fair damsel has
He made choice of; pray, on Whom does his preference fall?

DULCAMARA: I think that, like a butterfly,
He flies from flower to flower.

ADINA: Some dark fiend, it was sure, tempted me—
To reject that noble heart.

DULCAMARA: She's in love and wants the elixir.
Hist, Adina, hear me a moment!
No, come nearer—
What! do you fear me?
You are caught now,
I see it plainly,
And
it is owing mainly
To my plans.
Now, if you will—

ADINA: Will what—what mean you?

DULCAMARA: Su la testa, schizzinosa!
Se tu vuoi, ci ho la ricetta,
Che il tuo mal guarir potrà.

ADINA: Ah! Dottor, sarà perfetta,
Ma per me virtù non ha.

DULCAMARA: Vuoi vederti mille amanti
Spasimar, languire al piede?

ADINA: Non saprei che far di tanti;
Il mio core un sol mi chiede.

DULCAMARA: Render vuoi gelose, pazze
Donne, vedove, ragazze?

ADINA: Non mi alletta, no mi piace,
Di turbar altrui la pace.

DULCAMARA: Conquistar vorresti un ricco?

ADINA: Di richezze io non mi picco.

DULCAMARA: Un Contino? un Marchesino?

ADINA: Io non vo' che Nemorino.

DULCAMARA: Prendi su la mia ricetta,
Che l' effetto ti farà

ADINA: Ah! Dottor, sarà perfetta,
Ma per me virtù non ha.

DULCAMARA: Sconsigliata! e avresti ardire
Di negare il suo valore?

ADINA: Io rispetto l'Elisire,
Ma per me n' ha un maggiore:
Nemorino, lasciata ogni altra
Tutto mio, sol mio sarà.

DULCAMARA: Ahi! Dottore! è troppo scaltra
Più di te costei ne sa.

ADINA: Una tenera occhiatina,
Un sorriso, una carezza,
Vincer può chi più si ostina,
Ammollir chi più si sprezza.
Ne ho veduti tanti e tanti
Presi, cotti, spasimanti,
Che nemmeno Nemorino
Non potrà da me fuggir.
La ricetta è il mio vicino
In quest' occhi è l'elisir.

DULCAMARA: Sì, lo vedo, o bricconcella,
Ne sai più dell' arte mia;
Questa bocca così bella
E d' amor la spezieria:
Hia lambicco ed hai fornello
Caldo più di un Mongibello,
Per filtrar l' amore che vuoi
Per bruciare e incenerir.
Ah! vorrei cambiar coi tuoi
I mie vasi d' Elisir.
(Partono.)

DULCAMARA: Oh! my dear, you're caught,
I see it very plainly,
But if art of man can save you,
It is the Doctor whom you see.
I've a wonderful receipt, dear,
For your identical disease.

ADINA: Ah! though your drugs are all powerful
They've no virtue for me.

DULCAMARA: Would you have a thousand lovers
Pining at your feet in anguish?

ADINA: What should I do with so many?
It is for one alone I languish!

DULCAMARA: Would you wish to render jealous
Every widow, wife and maiden?

ADINA: No, indeed, I'd add no burden
To the heart overladen with love.

DULCAMARA: Would you marry one with treasure?

ADINA: Ah! I find no pleasure in gold.

DULCAMARA: Would you like a nobleman to court you?

ADINA: I'd have none but Nemorino.

DULCAMARA: My receipt will surely cure you.

ADINA: No—no virtue, I assure you.

DULCAMARA: have you the presumption, maiden
To deny its great virtues?

ADINA: With respect to your elixir,
I have one more potent, sir,
Through whose great virtues Nemorino,
Leaving all to me will fly.

DULCAMARA: (aside). Oh! she's far too wise and cunning
These girls know even more than I.

ADINA: With a tender look I'll charm him—
With a modest smile invite him—
With a tear or sigh alarm him—
With a fond caress excite him.
Never yet was a man so mulish,
That I could not make him yield,
Nemorino's fate's decided
When Adina takes the field.
My receipt is in my eyes,
There the true elixir lies.

DULCAMARA: Ah, you baggage! It is most certain
That your art far surpasses mine;
Your bright eyes are burning-glasses,
Within whose tremendous focus,
Just as though it were hocus-pocus—
Even the astutest heart must yield
You—you hussy, can distill
Just whatever love you will.
(Exeunt.)

SCENA VII.

(Entra Nemorino.)

NEMORINO: Una furtiva lacrima
Negli occhi suoi spuntò . . .
Quelle festose giovani
Invidiar sembrò.
Che più cercar io vo?
M' ama, lo vedo.
Un solo istante i palpiti
Del suo bel cor sentir! . . .
Co' suoi sospir, confondere
Per poco i miei sospir! . . .
Cielo, si può morir;
Di più non chiedo.
Eccola . . . Oh! qual le accresce
Beltà l' amor nascente!
A far l' indifferente
Si seguiti così, finchè non viene
Elle a spiegarsi.

SCENE VII.

(Enter Nemorino.)

NEMORINO: In her dark eye embathed there stood
Trembling, the furtive tear;
While each gay smile that others wear,
Seemed parent to a fear.
What can this heart wish more?
She loves me! what joy in store.
Ah! but to feel for a moment
The throbbing of that heart!
While glance to glance, sigh echoes sigh
As though we never could part.
Death were a price too poor—I'd give Eternity to share such bliss!
But here she comes. Oh, how her beauty grows with her growing love! I will, however, continue to affect indifference till she explains herself.

SCENA VIII.

Adina e Nemorino.

ADINA: Nemorino!—ebbene?

NEMORINO: Non so più dove io sia; giovani e vecchie,
Belle e brutte me voglion per marito.

ADINA: E tu?

NEMORINO: A verun partito
Appigliarmi non posso: attendo oncora . . .
La mia felicità . . . (che è pur vicina.)

ADINA: Odimi.

NEMORINO: (allegro.) (Ah! ah! ci siamo.) Io v' odo Adina.

ADINA: Dimmi; perchè partire,
Perchè farti soldato hai risoluto?

NEMORINO:
Perchè! . . . perchè ho voluto
Tentar se con tal mezzo il mio destino
Io potea migliorar.

ADINA: La tua persona
La tua vita ci è cara . . Io ricomprai
Il fatale contratto da Belcore.

NEMORINO: Voi stessa. . . .(E Naturale: opera è d' amore.)

ADINA: Amico prendi or il contratto.
(Nemorino lacera il contratto.)
A tanta gioia è poco un core
Se pietoso d' un obb o
Copri o caro i torti miei
Fortunato appien son io
Fortunato appien tu sei
Amor brami? e il cor nel petto
Arderà per te d' affetto.

SCENE VIII.

Adina and Nemorino.

ADINA: Well, Nemorino!

NEMORINO: I scarcely know whether I stand on my head or my heels! the old, the young, the ugly, the pretty, all want to marry me.

ADINA: And you—

NEMORINO: I really don't know what to do. I feel it quite impossible to decide. (Aside.) My happiness and triumph are both near.

ADINA: Listen to me.

NEMORINO: (joyfully). Ah, she's coming to it. (Aside.) I'm all attention.

ADINA: Tell me, why do you leave us, why are you resolved to be a soldier?

NEMORINO: Because I'm tired of being idle, and would try in any way to better my condition.

ADINA: Nemorino, your life is dear to me—I have paid your smart money, and rebought the fatal contract from Sergeant Belcore.

NEMORINO: You! you love me, then? (Aside.) It is natural—the Elixir has done the business.

ADINA: Dearest, take this contract.
(Nemorino signs the contract.)
So much joy is more than my heart can contain,
If you can dismiss from your mind,
The wrongs that I have done you,
Then I shall be most happy.
And you, I know, will be the same.
Do you desire my love? my heart shall burn truly
With fondest love for you.

NEMORINO: La memoria del passato
Come un sogno svanirà
Il mio cor rigenerato
Al piacer rinascerà.

ADINA: Come mai nel nuovo incanto
Infelice a te d' accanto
La memoria dei tormenti.
In contenti fa cangiar
Ah! con te per sempre unita.
Sarà un estasi la vita
Nè più in cor saprà quest' alma
Che di gioia palpitar.

CORO: I moment dell' affanno
Più per te non spunteranno.
Per te alfin sfavilla un iride;
Hai cessato di penar.

SCENA ULTIMA.

(Belcore con soldati e detti; indi Dulcamara con tutti i villaggiani.)

BELCORE:
Alto! . . . fronte . . . che vedo? al mio rivale!

ADINA: Ella è così, Belcore,
E convien darsi pace ad ogni patto.
Egli è mio sposo; quel che è fatto.

BELCORE: E fatto.
Tientelo pur, briccona.
Peggio per te. Pieno di donne è il mondo;
E mille ne otterrà Belcore.

DULCAMARA: Ve le darà questo eliser d' amore.

NEMORINO: Caro dottor, felice
Io son per voi.

TUTTI: Per lui!!!

DULCAMARA: Per me. Sappiate.
Che Nemorino è divenuto a un tratto
Il più ricco castaldo del villaggio . . .
Poichè morto è lo zio—

ADINA e NEMORINO: Morto lo zio!

GIANNETTA e CORI: Io lo sapeva . . .

DULCAMARA: Lo sapeva anch' io.
Ma quèl che non sapete,
Nè potreste saper, egli è che questo
Sovrumano elisir può in un momento
Non solo rimediare al mal d' amore
Ma arrichir gli spiantati.

CORI: Oh! gran liquore.

DULCAMARA: Ei corregge ogni diffetto;
Ogni vizio di natura,
La più brutta creatura:
Caminar ei fa le rozze,
Schiaccia gobbe, appiana bozze,
Ogni incomodo tumore
Copre sì, che piu non è.

CORI: Qua, dottore, a me dottore . . .
Un vasetto . . . due . . . tre.

DULCAMARA: Egli è offa seducente
Pei guardiani scrupolosi;
E un sonnifero eccellente
Per le vecchie e pei gelosi;
Dà coraggio alle figliuole
Che han paura a dormir sole,
Svegliarino è per l' amore
Più potente del caffè

CORI: Qua, dottore . . . a me dottore . . .
Un vasetto . . . due . . . tre.
(Tutte circondano a Dulcamara.)

DULCAMARA: Predilette dalle stelle,
Io vi lascio un gran tesoro;
Tutto è in lui; salute e belle,
Allegria, fortuna ed oro:
Rinverdite, rinfiorite,
Impinguate ed arricchite;
Dell' amico Dulcamara
Ei vi faccia ricordar.

CORI: Viva il grande Dulcamara
Dei dottori la fenice.

NEMORINO: Io gli debbo la mia cara.

ADINA: Per lui solo io son felice!
Del suo farmaco l' effetto
Non potrò giammai scordar.

BELCORE: Ciarlatano maladetto,
Che tu possa ribaltar!
(Il servo di Dulcamara suona la tromba—La carrozza si move—Tutti scuotono i loro cappelli e lo salutano.)

CORI: Viva il grande Dulcamara,
La fenice dei dottori!
Con salute e con tesori
Possa presto a noi tornar.

FINE.

NEMORINO: The memorial of the past
Like a dream shall fade away;
And my heart, renewed with life,
Shall be born again to pleasure.

ADINA: Happy in the dear enchantment,
Which I feel while at your side,
The anguish which I've felt before
Is changed to supreme delight.
Ah, love, to you united ever,
Life will be one ecstasy;
And nothing but joy will ever possess
The heart that beats alone for you.

CHORUS: Moments of sorrow and of grief
Shall no more have an existence;
For you, at last, a rainbow's beaming,
And your sufferings now shall cease.

SCENE IX.

Belcore, with Soldiers, Dulcamara, and all the Villagers.

BELCORE: Attention! to the right, face!
What's this? my rival! present arms!

ADINA: Exactly so, Belcore. You may as well submit placidly to your destiny. He is my husband: What is done—

BELCORE: Cannot be undone. So much the worse for you, Madame Flirt: there are plenty of women in the world, and thousands will be glad to marry Belcore.

DULCAMARA: I will let you have my elixir of love.

NEMORINO: Dear Doctor, through you I am happy.

CHORUS: Through him!

DULCAMARA: Through me. Know that Nemorino has become the richest man in the village—his uncle is dead!

ADINA: His . . .

NEMORINO: My . . .

BOTH: . . . uncle dead.

GIANETTA AND CHORUS: We knew it.

DULCAMARA: And I knew it, too; but there is something that you do not yet know, and that is this, that my powerful elixir is the only thing that will procure you the affection of the girl you love in a moment. And besides this, it possesses the wonderful property of making the poor rich.

CHORUS: Oh! the wonderful elixir.

DULCAMARA: It corrects every imperfection, every natural defect of the person. It gives beauty to the most ugly creature; makes the most awkward and clumsy run as swift as the wind; and the largest tumors quickly disappear under its magic influence.

CHORUS: Doctor, let me have a bottle of it—give me one—two—three.

DULCAMARA: It exercises a most seductive effect over scrupulous guardians, producing profound sleep in old and jealous people. It inspires courage to such girls as are afraid to sleep alone; and to lovers gives a watchfulness more potent than coffee.

CHORUS: O Doctor! let me have a bottle—give me one—two—three. (All surround Dulcamara.)

DULCAMARA: Favored as you are by the stars, I give you the possession of this great treasure. By its means you will possess everything—good health, fortune, and gold. Prosperity will attend you, and you will think of your friend Dulcamara forever and ever.

CHORUS: Viva the great Dulcamara,
The very Phoenix of all doctors.

NEMORINO: I am indebted to him for my dearest love.

ADINA: He has made me happy.
The effects of this elixir
Can never be forgotten.

BELCORE: Away, you cursed charlatan,
Who have thus frustrated my hopes.
(Dulcamara's Servant blows the trumpet—the chariot moves on—All take off their hats, wave them, and salute him.)

CHORUS: Viva the great Dulcamara,
The very Phoenix of all doctors,
May he pay another visit quickly,
Will his health and treasures.

THE END.

Lucrezia Borgia (1833)

MUSIC BY GAETANO DONIZETTI ■ LIBRETTO BY FELICE ROMANI

This two-act opera seria with a prologue, set to a libretto by Felice Romani (based upon Victor Hugo's tragedy), premiered at the Teatro alla Scala in Milan on December 26, 1833. The story takes place during the early sixteenth century. At a feast in a Venetian palace, Maffio Orsini tells the gathering about an old man who prophesied the death of one of his friends at the hand of Lucrezia Borgia. Among those present is Gennaro, who saved Orsini's life during the battle of Rimini. Gennaro does not know his mother's identity; all he has is a letter from her in which she beseeches him never to look for her. While he is asleep on a sofa, a woman wearing a mask leans over to kiss him. His friends tell him that she is the infamous Lucrezia Borgia. Gennaro and his friends arrive in Ferrara. Lucrezia's husband, Alfonso, is jealous of the attention she pays to Gennaro. Gennaro's friends make fun of this and tease him that he has fallen prey to her attentions. He denies this, and on the Borgia crest he scratches out the first letter, "B", so that only "orgia" remains. Alfonso orders his arrest, and Lucrezia demands that the perpetrator be put to death at once for the offense. When she discovers that Gennaro is the offender, she changes her mind. She gives him an antidote to a poisoned drink which he has been given and arranges for him to escape through a secret door. At the last moment, Gennaro decides to go with his friends to a party at the Negroni palace. When the ladies have withdrawn to another room, a servant enters with drinks for the young men. The lights go out and death-like music is played. Lucrezia Borgia comes in with an armed guard and all exits are locked. She tells them that the wine they are drinking is poisoned because she is seeking revenge for their taunts. She recognizes Gennaro, too late. He refuses to drink the antidote as there is only enough to save himself and he dies as she sings that she is his mother.

■ PROLOGO.

SCENA I.

Terrazzo nel Palagio Gremani in Venezia.—Festa di notte.—Alcune Maschere attraversano di tratto in tratto il Teatro.—Dai due lati del Terrazzo si vede il Palagio spendidamente illuminato. In fondo, il Canale della Giudecca, sul quale si veggono passare ad intervalli nelle tenebre alcune Gondole. In lontano, Venezia il chiaror della luna.

Entrano in iscena lietamente, Gubetta, Gazella, Orsini, Petrucci, Vitellozzo e Liverotto. Quindi Gennaro che, com' Uomo affaticato, si riposa sovra un sedile appartato dagli altri.

GAZ: Bella Venezia!

PET: Amabile;
D' ogni piacer soggiorno!

ORS: Men di sue notti è limpido
D' ogni altro cielo il giorno.

TUTTI: E l' orator Grimani,
Noi seguirem domani;
Tali avrem mai delizie,
Tai feste in riva al Po?

GUB: Le avrem; D' Alfonso è splendide,
Lieta la corte assai.
(Inoltrandosi.)
Lucrezia Borgia—

■ PROLOGUE.

SCENE I.

Terrace in the Grimani Palace, Venice.—Festival by night.—Several Masks traverse the stage from time to time.—From the two sides of the Terrace is seen the Palace, illuminated. At the back, the Canal of the Giudecca, on which Gondolas are dimly seen passing at intervals. In the distance, Venice by moonlight.

Enter gaily, Gubetta, Gazella, Orsini, Petrucci, Vitellozzo, Liverotto; afterwards, Gennaro, apparently weary: he rests himself on a seat apart from the rest.

GAZ: Hail, lovely Venice!

PET: Fair Queen of earth!
Birthplace and home of pleasure!

ORS: Sunlight in less favored climates were shamed
By your sweet night's poetic azure.

ALL: We follow brave Grimani,
A charge preferred to any;
Think on the glories waiting our progress
Down fertile Po.

GUB: Well said, Alfonso's splendid court
Far will surpass all splendor.
(Advancing.)
Lucretia Borgia—

ORS: (Interrompendolo.) Acquetati!
Non la nomar giammai.

VIT: Nome esecrato è questo.

LIV: La Borgia! io la detesto!

TUTTI: Chi le sue colpe intendere,
E non odiar la può?

ORS: Io più di tutti; Uditemi.
(Tutti si accosta.)
Un vecchio, un indovino—

GEN: (Interrompendolo.) Novellator perpetuo,
Esser vuoi dunque, Orsini?
Lascia la Borgia in pace:
Udir di lei mi spiace.

TUTTI: Taci, non l' interrompere—
Breve il suo dir sarà.

GEN: Io dormirò, destatemi
Quando cessato avrà.
(Si adagia, e a poco a poco si oddormenta.)

ORS: Nella fatal di Rimini
E memorabil guerra,
Ferito e quasi esanimo,
Io mi giaceva a terra;
Gennaro a me soccorse,
Il suo destrier mi porse
E in solitario bosco
Mi trasse e mi salvò.

TUTTI: La sua virtù conosco;
La sua pietade io so.

ORS: (Interrupting him.) Forbear to name
Sin's very worst offender!

VIT: Italy's cankering fester.

LIV: The Borgia, gods! I detest her!

ALL: Her lightest crime where breathed alike
The deepest hate you sow.

ORS: Chiefest in my breast, I pray you listen.
(They all gather about him.)
An old man, a sage magician—

GEN: (Interrupting him.) To spin that same perpetual yarn
Seems your delight, Orsini.
Leave Borgia in peace:
Why have my patience tested?

ALL: Pray not to interrupt the tale;
Fortunately, it is brief enough.

GEN: So for a nap; awake me then
When he has finished off.
(Wrapping his mantle round him, turns on his side and falls asleep.)

ORS: There, where the field of Rimini
Swam with the blood of legions,
My prostrate and nearly breathless form
Spoke out how true my allegiance is.
Gennaro, till then a stranger,
Bore me from the danger,
And in a convent lonely
Assuaged the galling wound.

ALL: In him not virtue only,
But charity is found.

ORS: Là nella notte tacita,
Lena pigliando e speme.
Giurammo insiem di vivere,
E di morire insieme,
'E insiem morreto,' allora
Voce gridò sonora,
E un veglio in veste nera,
Gigante a noi s' offrì.

TUTTI: Cielo! Qual mago egli era,
Per profetar così!

ORS: 'Fuggite i Borgia, oh, giovani,
Ei prosequi più forte:
'Odio alla rea Lucrezia!
Dove è Lucrezia è morte!'
Sparve ciò detto; e il vento,
In suono di lamento,
Quel nome ch' io detesto,
Tre volte replicò.

TUTTI: Rio vaticinio è questo;
Ma fè puoi dargli?—no.

ORS: Fede a fallaci oroscopi
L' anima mia non presta;
Pur mio malgrado un palpito,
Tal sovvenir mi desta.
Spesso, dovunque io movo,
Quel vecchio orrendo io trovo,
Quella minaccia, orribile
Parmi la notte udir.
Te, mio Gennaro, invidio,
Che puoi così dormir.

TUTTI: Lenti. La danza invitaci;
Bando a sì tristre immagini!
Passiam la notte in gioja!
Assai quell' empia femina
Ne diè tormento e noja.
Finchè il Leon temuto
Ne porge a silo e ajuto,
L' arte e il furor de Borgia
Non ci portran colpir.
(Partono tutti, traendo seco Orsini.)

SCENA II.

Passo una Gondola—n' esce una Dama mascherata: è Lucrezia Borgia. S' inoltra guardinga; vede Gennaro addormentato, e si appressa a lui contempiandolo con piacere e rispetto.—Gubetta ritorna.

LUC: Tranquillo ei posa! Oh, sian così tranquillo
Sue notti sempre! e mai provar non debba
Qual delle notti mie, quanto è il tormento!
Sei tu?
(Si accorge di Gubetta.)

GUB: Son io. Pavento
Che alcun vi scopra: ai giorni vostri, è vero,
Scrudo è Venezia; ma vietar non puote
Che conosciuta non v' insulti alcuno.

ORS: There, in the solemn hush of night,
Friendship bade gather fresh hopes
Vowing to pass life side by side,
We swore to end it together.
'Fate shall fulfil your forestalling,'
Thundered an appalling voice.
Shrouded in black, a
Gigantic phantom met our eyes.

ALL: Heavens! What was the import
Foretold by anything so wise?

ORS: Avoid the Borgia, gallant youths,
(These were his words ensuing)
'Wherever dwells Lucrezia
Destruction and ruin dwells also.'
This said, he vanished, and zephyr
Did waft presently and ever
The name that palsied our hearing
Three times echoed sad and slow.

ALL: Weighing its every bearing
Can we believe this? No.

ORS: Never to fallacious horoscope
Gave I the faintest credence;
But willing or not, a presentiment
This time asserts precedence,
That fatal spell enchants me,
That awful specter haunts me;
Still his ill-omened terrific threat
Night after night do I hear.
Ah! happy is Gennaro,
Quite free from boding fear.

ALL: Listen! Music invites us.
Banish doleful imaginings,
And drown night deep in all pleasure.
Long too, Lucrezia, that woman fiend,
Has given us trouble's full measure;
Our winged lion's assistance
Was ever Venice's existence.
Were there ten thousand more Borgias,
While he reigns who could fear?
(All go out, taking Orsini with them.)

SCENE II.

A Gondola passes—a masked Lady issues from it: it is Lucretia Borgia. She advances cautiously; she sees Gennaro asleep, and approaching him, remains gazing upon him with pleasure and interest.—Gubetta returns.

LUC: How calm a slumber! Ever be his reposings
Light as gentlest music, his visions undisturbed
By such appalling shapes as haunt me forever!
Is it you? (Perceiving Gubetta.)

GUB: Yea, madam, much dreading
Some here should know; for though assassination
Spare your days in Venice, her mighty power
Cannot shield you from the keener stab of insult.

LUC: E insultata sarei! M' abborre ognuno!
Pur per sì trista sorte
Nata io non era. Oh! potess' io far tanto
Che il passato non fosse, e in un cor solo
Destare un senso di pietà che invano
In mia grandezza all' universo io chiedo!
Quel giovin vedi?

GUB: Il vedo,
E da più di lo seguo.
Indarno io tento
Scoprir l' arcano che per lui vi tragge
Da Ferrara a Venezia in tanta ambascia.

LUC: Tu scoprirlo!—Non puoi—
Seco mi lascia.
(Gubetta si ritira.)

SCENA III.

Lucrezia, e Gennaro addormentato. Mentre Lucrezia si avvicina a Gennaro non si accorge di due Uomini mascherati che passano dal fondo, e si fermano in disparte.

LUC: (Con affetto guardandolo.) Com' è bello quale incanto in quel volto onestoe altero No: giammal leggiadro tanto non sel pinse il mio pensiero. L'alma mia di gioja e piena orchè afin lo puo mirar mi risparmia oh! ciel la pena ch'ei mi debba un di sprezzar ah! risparmi a oh! ciel la pena risparmi o della pena ci. ei mi debba un di sprezzar ah risparmi a oh ciel la pena ch'ei mi debba un di sprezzar.
Se il destessi? No, no, non oso.
(Piango.)
Nè scoprir il mio sembiante;
Pure il ciglio lagrimoso,
Terger debbo—un solo istante.
(Si toglie la maschera, e si asciuga le lagrime.)

DUCA: (Aparte.) Vedi? è dessa!

RUST: (Aparte.) E dessa, è vero.

DUCA: (Aparte.) Chi è il garzone?

RUST: (Aparte.) Un venturiero.

DUCA: (Aparte.) Non ha patria?

RUST: (Aparte.) Nè parenti;
Ma è guerrier fra i più valenti.

DUCA: (Aparte.) Di condurlo adopro ogn' arte
A Ferrara in mio poter.

RUST: (Aparte.) Con Grimani all' alba ei parte—
Ei previene il tuo pensier.

LUC: Mentre geme il cor sommesso,
Mentre io piango a te d' appresso.
Dormi, e sogna, o dolce oggetto,

LUC: Let them slay with their insults! all earth abhor us!
Why were we ever nurtured to a fate so hideous? Why were the feelings all torn out
And erased from our bosom, alone that render
A woman's breast the throne of virtue and of mercy,
For them we'd barter our Universe of Grandeur.
You see that young man?

GUB: I see him!
Long have my steps pursued him with fruitless effort
To filch the secret at whose back my lynx-eye
From Ferrara to Venice, tracked and spied him.

LUC: Learn our secret!—That you cannot. Leave me with him. (Exit Gubetta.)

SCENE III.

Lucretia, and Gennaro asleep. While Lucretia draws near Gennaro, she does not perceive two Men in masks, who come from the back, and stand apart.

LUC: Holy beauty, child of nature,
Firstborn of the one great parent,
Graces gem your every feature. To your only self inherent, Your charms are given to these traits,
Gently blessing, while they win . . . Emblems of that purest Heaven, Heart of man untouched by sin, Emblems of that purest heaven, that purest heaven, heart of man untouched by sin. Emblems of that purest Heaven, Heart of man untouched by sin.
Should I awake him? dare I venture?
(Weeping)
This disguise albeit still keeping,
Its removal counts not censure,
But to dry up this bitter weeping.
(She removes the mask from her face and applies her kerchief to wipe her eyes.)

DUKE: (Aside.) Look: it is she—

RUST: (Aside.) You hit on the truth, sir!

DUKE: (Aside.) Who's the stranger?

RUST: (Aside.) A soldier youth, sir.

DUKE: (Aside.) With no country?

RUST: (Aside.) Nor relations.
Brave men find them in all nations!

DUKE: (Aside.) Then neglect no art, and lure him
Toward Ferrara in my leash.

RUST: (Aside.) Service duty must ensure him
To fulfil your very wish.

LUC: Would that ever I thus could linger,
Granting fond, though poor protection,

Sol di gioja e di diletto;
Ed un angiol tutelare
Non ti desti che al piacer!
Triste notti, e veglie amare
Debbo io sola sostener
Li volì il primo a cogliere,
Bacio d' unsanto amore
Quell' innocente core,
Riposè sul mio cor
Un dolce sogno un estasi
Un lusinghiero incanto.
La vita lui d' accanto,
Delizia fia d'amor.
(Si alza: i due mascherati si ritirano.—Lucrezia ritorna indietro, e bacia la mano di Gennaro: egli si desta, e l' afferra per le braccia.)

LUC: Ciel!
(Per isciogliern da lui.)

GEN: Che vegg' io?

LUC: Lasciatemi.

GEN: No, no, gentil signora;
No, per mia fede.
(Trattenendola.)
Ch' io vi contempli ancora!
Leggiadra e amabil siete;
Nè paventar dovete
Che ingrato ed insensibile
Per voi si trovi un cor.

LUC: Gennaro! E sia possibile
Che a me tu porti amor?

GEN: Qual dubbio è il vostro?

LUC: Ah! dimmelo!

GEN: Sì, quanto lice io v' amo.

LUC: (Aparte.) Oh, gioja!

GEN: Eppure uditemi:
Esser verace io bramo.
Avvi un più caro oggetto,
Cui nutro immenso affetto.

LUC: E ti è di me più caro!
Che mai?

GEN: Mia madre ell' e.

LUC: Tua madre!—O, mio Gennaro!
Tu l' ami?

GEN: Ah! più di me!

LUC: Ed ella?

GEN: Ah! compiangetemi,
Io non la vidi mai.

LUC: Come?

GEN: E funesta istoria,
Che sempre altrui celai;
Ma son da ignoto istinto
A dirla a voi sospinto:
Alma cortese e bella,
Nel vostro volto appar.

LUC: (Aparte.) Tenero cor! Favella:
Tutto mi puoi narrar.

While young Slumber's dainty finger
Gives that perfect more perfection!
With my dream joys never blending
Touched their darkness once with light;
Soon this too-bright vision ending
Shrouds me back in dawnless night.
To cull but a kiss the daintiest,
Laden with holy affection,
Yielding him more protection.
Reposing on my heart
One world of bliss, one ecstasy
Pervades me in his presence.
A mother's love!
The magic imparts love's essence.
(She rises; the two Masks retire.—Lucretia goes back again, and kisses the hand of Gennaro: he awakes, and detains her by the arm.)

LUC: Heavens! (Endeavoring to break from him.)

GEN: Who do I perceive?

LUC: Oh! leave me, sir!

GEN: No, no, my gentle lady;
No, on my honor.
(Holding her.)
I long to learn every feature, I am never blind
To beauty
So do not think to find me
Ungrateful or insensible
Where so much grace would charm.

LUC: Gennaro, can this be possible,
Your breast warms for me?

GEN: And why doubt it?

LUC: Speak candidly.

GEN: Then, by my knighthood, I love you!

LUC: (Aside.) Too joyous!

GEN: I love, but my sincerity
Faithfully will I prove to you;
There is a prior selection
To whom I owe more affection.

LUC: Even more than that you swore me?
To whom then?

GEN: To my mother!

LUC: Your mother?—O! dearest Gennaro,
You love her?

GEN: Far more than self.

LUC: And she?

GEN: Alas! that mother's face
Never have I beheld.

LUC: And why so?

GEN: It is a mournful story,
From every ear withheld;
Some strange resistless feeling
Now prompts the quick revealing:
Angel of light and beauty!
Hear what I yearn to relate.

LUC: (Aside.) Keep still, my heart!
(Aloud.) Proceed:
All then you may narrate!

GEN: Di pescatore ignobile esser figliuol credei e seco oscuri in Napoli vissi i prim' anni miei quandoun guerrier o incognito venne d'inganno a trarmi mi die cavallo ed armi e un foglio a me lascio Era mia madre ahi misera mia madre che scriveadirio possen te vittima per se per me temea di non parlar ne chiedere Il nome suo qual' era calda mi fe preghiera ed obbedita io l'ho calda mi fè preghiera ed obbedita io l'ho.

LUC: E il foglio suo?

GEN: Miratelo!
Mai dal mio cor non parte.

LUC: Oh! quante amare lagrime,
Forse in vergario ha sparte!

GEN: Ed io, signora, oh! quanto
Su quelle cifre ho pianto!
Ma che? voi pur piangete!

LUC: Ah sì! Per lei—per te!

GEN: Alma gentil! voi siete,
Ancor più cara a me.

LUC: Ama tua ma ire e tenero sempre perte i serba pregache l'ira plachi si della sua sorte acerba pregache un giorno stringerti ella ti possa al cor . . . pregache un giorno stringerti ella ti possa al cor pregache un giorno stringerti possa ah! stringerti possa al cor.

GEN: L'amo—sì l'amo! e sembrami
Vederla in ogni oggetto—
Una soave immagine
Me n' ho formata in petto!
Seco, dormente o vigile
Seco io favello ognor.

SCENA IV.

Si avvicinano da varie parti Orsini, Vitellozo, Petrucci, Gazella, Dame e Cavalieri in maschera.

LUC: Gente appressa—io ti lascio.

GEN: (Trattenendola.) Ah! fermate!

ORS: Che mai veggo!
(Riconosce Lucrezia, l' addita ai compagni, e seco loro favella.)

LUC: Mi è forza lasciarti.

GEN: Deh! chi siete almen dirmi degnate.
(Sempre trattenendola.)

LUC: Tal che t' ama, e sua vita è t' amarti.

ORS: (Inoltrandosi.) Io dirollo.

GEN: Deemed of a fisher's lowly race, Where the wide beach, and wild wood Echoing smiles from Naples' sun Witnessed my humble childhood; One day there sought me an unknown knight, Breaking the spell that charmed me, Who having horsed and well armed me, A writing then bade me scan—Penned by a mother, ah misery The scroll was bearing each word, Told how a wretch seduced a breast For me, its child sore fearing, Hushed in my heart, I guard her will, Though look nor deed betray it, Honor and faith obey it, O as a son's only care! Honor and faith obey it, O as a son's only care.

LUC: But then her letter?

GEN: Here, look on it,
Safe near my heart long hidden.

LUC: How many bitter, bitter tears
Moistened these pages when written!

GEN: Mine, lady, without measure
Have bathed the priceless treasure!
You weep, so purely tender!

LUC: Ah yes! for her sake and yours.

GEN: Angel too kind, you render
No heart as blessed as mine.

LUC: O, with the fervent soul of youth, Always adore your mother, Pray that good heaven avert her fate, and change it for another. Pray for the day her longing kiss Welcomes you on her breast, Pray for the day her longing kiss welcomes you on her breast, Pray for the day her kiss shall welcome, yes . . . . welcome you unto her breast.

GEN: Fancy, induced by purest love,
Pictures her every feature;
Magical, bright imaginings
Depict her gentlest nature.
Until I can share that longing kiss,
Never will my step have rest.

SCENE IV.

Orsini, Vitellozzo, Petrucci, Gazella, Ladies and Cavaliers, in masks, approach from different parts of the stage.

LUC: People approach us—I must leave you!

GEN: (Detaining her.) Please, wait!

ORS: Who do I see?
(He recognizes Lucretia, points her out to this companions, and speaks with them.)

LUC: It behooves me to leave.

GEN: Then do not be sorrowful of your name.
(Still detaining her.)

LUC: One who loves you, whose only duty is to love me.

ORS: (Advancing.) I will tell you.

LUC: Gran Dio!
(Si copre colla maschera e vuola allontanarsi.)

ORS: (Appendendosi.) Non partite!
Forza è udirne.
(Riconducendola.)

LUC: Gennaro!

GEN: Che ardite!
S' avvi alcun d' insultarla capace,
Di Gennaro più amico non è.

ORS: Chi siam noi sol chiarirla ne piace.
E poi fugga da te.

LUC: (Aparte.) Oh, cimento!

GEN: Favellate!

ORS: Maffio Osini, signora son' lo cui svenaste il dormente fratello.

VIT: Io Vitelli cui feste lo zio trucidar nel rapito castello.

LIV: Io Ne pote d' Appiano tradito che fu spento in infame convito.

GEN: Ciel che as colto.

LUC: Oh malvagia mia sorte:

GEN: Oh cielo oh cielo che as colto!

GAZ: Io, con guinto d' oppresso consorte,—

LUC: Ciel! . . . . ove fuggo che fare che dir!

ORS: Maffio Orsini signora son'—

LUC: Ah! . . . . ove fuggo che fare che dir.

LUC: (Aparte) Oh! malvagia mia sorte!

CORO: Qual rea donna!

ORS: Or che a lei l' esser nostro è palese,
Odi il suo.

GEN, CORO: Dite, dite!

LUC: Ah, pietade!

A 5: Ella è donna che infame si rese,
Che l' orrore sarà d' ogni etade!
Ella e donna venefica, impura,
Vilipese oltraggiò la natura
Com è odiata è temuta del paro;
Chè potente il destino la fa.

GEN: Oh, chi è mai? Ah! lo dite!

LUC: Non udirli, o Gennaro!
(Supplichevole a' suoi piedi.)

A 5: E la Borgia! Ravvisala!
(Strapp. la maschera.)

TUTTI: (Con un grido d' orrore.) Ah!
(Lucrezia sviene.)

LUC: Great heavens!
(Covers her face with her mask, and attempts to go out.)

ORS: (Stopping her.) You shall not go!
You must hear me!
(Bringing her back.)

LUC: Gennaro!

GEN: How dare you?
Whomever presumes to offend her
Boasts Gennaro no more for his friend.

ORS: Our intent here we merely would tender,
Then she may wend her ways!

LUC: (Aside.) Dark misfortune!

GEN: State your purpose!

ORS: Madam, I am Orsini, whose brother you did poison the while he was sleeping, VIT: One Vitelli, the twin of my mother you have stabbed, and his birthright are keeping.

LIV: Know Appiano's young nephew! you drew him To the infamous banquet that slew him!

GEN: God, what do I hear?

LUC: Bitter curse on their onslaught!

GEN: Oh heaven! oh heaven! what do I hear?

GAZ: I am kin to the Spaniard, that consorts,—

LUC: Heaven . . . . strength would fail me, both power and breath!

ORS: Madam, I am Orsini,—

LUC: Or Heaven . . . . strength would fail me, both power and breath.

LUC: Deep curse on their onslaught!

CHO: Monstrous woman!

ORS: Since our names now are too well apparent,
Learn her own, then.

GEN, CHO: Say it!

LUC: Ah, have pity!

ALL: For her infamous crimes duly warrant
The approbrium and horror of ages.
She is a wanton! a faithless betrayer,
An incestuous night-loving slayer!
Nature, owning abortion so hideous,
Stands appalled at the awful offence.

GEN: But who is she? Ah! declare it!

LUC: Do not hear them, Gennaro!
(At his feet, imploring him.)

ALL: It is the Borgia! Yes, look on her!
(Tearing off her mask.)

ALL: (With a cry of horror.) Ah!
(Lucretia faints.)

CALA IL SIPARIO.

ATTO I.

SCENA I.

Una Piazza di Ferrara.—Da un lato un Palazzo con un Verone, sotto al quale uno Stemma di Marmo ove e scritto con caratteri visibili di rame dorato, Borgia. Dal' altro una piccola Casa, le cui finestre sono illuminate di dentro.—Notte.

Il Duca Alfonso e Rustighello, coperti da lunge manto.

DUCA: Nel Veneto corteggio
Lo ravvisasti?

RUS: E me gli posi al fianco,
E lo seguii come se l' ombra io fossi
Del corpo suo.—Quello è il suo tetto.
(Addita la Casa di Gennaro ancora illuminata.)

DUCA: Quello?
Appo il ducale ostello
Lucrezia il volle!

RUS: E in esso ancora, il vuole
Se non m' inganna di quel vil Gubetta
L' ire e il redir, e lo spïar furtivo.

DUCA: Entrarvi ei puote, non ne uscir mai vivo.
Odi?
(Odonsi voci e suoni dalla Casa di Gennaro.)

RUS: Gli amici in festa
Tutta notte accoglieva in quelle porte
Il giovin folle. Separarsi all' alba
Essi han costume.

DUCA: E l' ultim' alba è questa
Che al temerario splende,—
L' ultimo addio che dagli amici ei prende.

DUCA: Vieni la mia vendetta è meditata e pronta Ei l'assicu ra e affretta Col cieco suo fidar.
Ah! . . . . vie ni! la mia vendetta è meditata e pronta Ei l'assicura e affretta Col cieco suo col cieco suo fidar. Col cieco suo, col cieco suo . . . . fidar.

RUS: Ma se l' altier Grimani,
La si recasse ad onta?

DUCA: Mai per cotesti insani
Me non vorria sfidar.

THE CURTAIN FALLS.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

A Public Place in Ferrara.—On one side, a palace with a gallery, under which is an escutcheon of marble, on which is written, in visible characters of metal, gilded, Borgia. On the other side, a small house, the windows of which are illuminated from within.—Night.

Duke Alphonso and Rustighello, covered with long mantles.

DUKE: Have you observed him
With Lord Grimani's escort?

RUS: You could have made his shadow
Forget its substance easier than divorce me
From scent of his track.—Yonder, sire, he dwells.
(Points to Gennaro's house, still lighted up.)

DUKE: There?
Near to our Ducal Palace
Lucretia bade him!

RUS: Men thus would read the purpose,
If I mistake not, of that vile Gubetta,
Since he so often visits him in secret.

DUKE: And he shall enter, leaving only for burial.
Hear you?
(Voices and sounds are heard from Gennaro's House.)

RUS: Himself and comrades.
Night after night, sir, in too numerous wine cups
Temper their youthful folly. When the dawn is breaking
They break up also.

DUKE: And this shall prove the last one
That breaks over his rash head;
That final parting, which he takes with his friends!

DUKE: Hurry then to glut a vengeance Fraught with the fell rage of demons: Malice prepares her engines, Walk blindly toward your doom! Ah! . . . . Hasten! to glut a vengeance Fraught with the fell rage of demons: Malice prepares her engines, Walk blindly, walk blindly toward your doom, Walk blindly, blindly, walk blindly toward . . . . your doom.

RUS: But should the proud Grimani dream
Some purposed wrong here?

DUKE: Too slight the cause if any
Never would he so presume.

DUCA: Qua lunque sia, l'evento che può recar fortuna, ne mi co non pavento l'altero ambascia-tor. Non sempre piu sa ai popoli lù la fatal l'aguna non sempre, non sempre lù la fatal L'aguna nò e ad oltraggiato principe a prir si puote ancora ad oltraggiato principe aprir si puote ancor ad oltraggiato principe aprirsi puo . . . . te si puote ancor.
(Le voci si fan più vicine: si spengono i lumi, ecc.)
(Si ritirano.)

SCENA II.

Gennaro, Orsini, Liverotto, Petrucci, Gazella, Vitellozzo. Escono tutti lieti dalla Casa di Gennaro. Egli solo è pensoso. Gubetta si fa vedere in disparte.

TUTTI: Addio, Gennaro.

GEN: Addio!
Nobili amici.
(Con serietà.)

ORS: Ma che! degg' io sì mesto
Mirarti ognor?

GEN: Mesto? no gia! (Aparte.) Potessi,
Se non vederti, almen giovarti, o madre!

ORS: Mille beltà leggiadre
Laran stasera al genïal festino,
Cui la gentil me invita
Principessa Negroni. Ove qualcuno
Obblïato avess' ella, a me lo dica;
Di riparar l' errore è pensier mio.

TUTTI: Tutto fummo invitati.

GUB: (Inoltrandosi.) E il sono anch' io!

TUTTI: Oh, il Signor Beverano!
(Tutti gli vanno incontro, tranne Gennaro e Orsini.)

GEN: (Aparte ad Orsini.) Da per tutto è costui! Già da gran tempo Ei mi è sospetto.

ORS: (Aparte.) Oh, non temer: uom lieto
E, qual siam tutti, uno sventato è desso.

VIT: Or via; così dimesso
Io non ti vo', Gennaro.

LIV: Ammalïato
T' avria forse la Borgia?

DUKE: My fame lies at stake in it, A heart that never winces, Would brave Venetia's senate Not fear . . . one poor puny lord? Unbounded power, unswerving will, ever appertains to Princes, unbounded, unswerving power appertains to princes, yes and woe to the daring worm who dares oppose their word then, and woe to the reckless worm who dares oppose their word, and woe to the reckless worm, the worm who dares . . . . oppose their word.
(The voices sound nearer; the lights are extinguished.)
(Duke and Rus. retire.)

SCENE II.

Gennaro, Orsini, Liverotto, Petrucci, Gazella, Vitellozzo. They all enter gaily from Gennaro's house, the latter alone pensive. Gubetta is perceived apart from the others.

ALL: Farewell, Gennaro!

GEN: Farewell!
My noble friends. (In a serious tone.)

ORS: And why does your spirit bear
The tint of grief?

GEN: I am not sad. (Aside.) To see you,
Alas, forbidden, if only I could help you mother!

ORS: Beauties of fairest deeming
Tonight assemble, and give a festal banquet,
Unto which we're bidden
By the princess Negroni. Be there forgotten
Any qualified Signor, she has appointed
Straight to repair such error my happy office.

CHO: All of us are invited.

GUB: (Advancing.) And I, Sirs, among you.

ALL: O! It is the Count Beverano!
(All saluting him, except Gennaro and Orsini)

GEN: (Aside to Orsini.) This man dogs our footsteps. Long have I held Suspicion toward him.

ORS: (Aside.) Cast it aside: consider him
As all do, that is, a boon companion.

VIT: It grieves me to thus observe you
So very sad, Gennaro.

LIV: He is happily
In love, Sir, and with the Borgia.

GEN: E ognor di lei
V' udrò parlarmi? Giuro al Ciel, signori,
Scherzi non voglio. Uomo non v' ha che abborra
Al par di me costei—

PET: Tacete! è quello
Il suo palagio.

GEN: E il sia. Stamparle in fronte
Vorrei l' infamia, che a stampar son pronto
Su quelle mura dove scritto è Borgia.
(Ascende un gradino innanzi alto Stemma, e col suo pugnale ne cancella la prima lettera: in quel mentre escono dal fondo due Uomini vestiti di nero.)

TUTTI: Che fai?

GEN: Leggete adesso!

TUTTI: Oh, diàmin', Orgia!

GUB: Una facezia è questa,
Che può costar domani
Ben cara a molti.

GEN: Ove del reo si chieda,
Me stesso a palesar pronto son io.

ORS: Qualcun ci osserva—separiamci.

TUTTI: Addio!
(Gennaro rientra in sua Casa; gli altri si disperdono.)

SCENA III.

Astolfo e Rustighello, ambidue passeggiando: indi Scherani.

RUS: Quì che fai?

AST: Che tu te 'n vada,
Questo aspetto;—e tu che fai?

RUS: Che tu sgombri la contrada,
Fermo attendo.

AST: Con chi l' hai?

RUS: Con quel giovane straniero
Che ha quì stanza;—e tu con chi?

AST: Con quel giovin forestiero,
Che pur esso alberga quì.

RUS: Dove il guidi?

AST: Alla Duchessa.
E tu dove?

RUS: Al Duca appresso.

AST: Oh, la via non è l' istessa!

RUS: Nè conduce al fine istesso.

AST: Una a festa—

RUS: L' altra a morte!
Delle due qual s' aprirà?

GEN: Signors, I bid you
Forbear that mention, else must the dawnlight
Reflect itself in our sword blades.
No man on earth
Abhors the she-fiend more than I do.

PET: Be silent,
For there stands her palace!

GEN: Then if so, would I could thus
Write disgrace upon it as with ready dagger
I blot that scutcheon where is written Borgia.
(He ascends a flight of stairs leading to the escutcheon, and with his dagger strikes out the first letter of the name "Borgia": while he is doing it, two men, habited in black, come from the back of the stage.)

ALL: Your purpose?

GEN: Now read the inscription!

ALL: By Jove, Sirs! Orgia!

GUB: That letter off the name there
Will one day prove your shoulders
Minus the head, friend.

GEN: Should they demand the offender,
I gladly render my presence at the call!

ORS: Some one observes us—let us part here.

ALL: Adieu then!
(Gennaro retires to his dwelling; the others disperse.)

SCENE III.

Astolfo and Rustighello walking about, afterwards Bravos.

RUS: What is your purpose?

AST: To see you vanish,
And the coast clear. Why do you tarry here?

RUS: Loiterers such as you to banish
Is now my duty.

AST: Whom your quarry?

RUST: Yonder young Venitian stranger
Who resides there.—Your business here?

AST: Just to save a youth from danger,
One who lodges somewhere near.

RUS: Where would you guide him?

AST: Unto the duchess.
Where would you, friend?

RUS: The duke's my preference.

AST: Between our roads the contrast such is—

RUST: That their ends have mighty difference.

AST: One means pleasure—

RUST: The other death!
What result our game then takes—

A 2: Del più destro—e del più forte
Dal voler dipenderà.
(Rustighello fa un segno dal cantone della strada.—Entra un drappello di Scherani, i quali circondano Astolfo.)

RUS, CORO: Non far motto! parti, sgombra.
Il più forte appien lo scorgi.
Guai per te se appena un' ombra
Di sospetto a lui tu porgi!
Solo Alfonso ancor quì:
Somma legge è il suo voler.

AST: Ma il furor della Duchessa.

RUS: Taci, e d' essa—non temer.

CORO: Al suo nome, alla sua fama
Fê l' audace estrema offesa:
Vendicarsi il Duca brama—
Impedirlo è stolta impresa.
Se da saggio oprar tu vuoi,
Dei piegar, partir, tacer.

AST: Parto, sì. Che avvenga poi
Vostro sia, non mio pensier.
(Astolfo si ritira.—Rustighello e gli Scherani atterran le porte della Casa di Gennaro.)

SCENA IV.

Sala nel Palazzo Ducale.—Gran porta al fondo; a diritta un uscio chiuso da invetriata a sinistra un altr' uscio segreto. Tavolino nel mezzo coperto di velluto.

Alfonso, poi Rustighello; indi un Usciere.

ALF: Tutto eseguisti?

RUS: Tutto! Il prigioniero
Quì presso attende.

ALF: Or bada. A quell in fondo
Segreta sala, della statua a' piedi
Dell' avol mio, riposti armadj schiude
Quest' aurea chiave: ivi d' argento un vaso
E un d' or vedrai. Nella propinqua stanza
Ambi li reca; nè desio ti tenti
Dell' aureo vaso—vin de' Borgia è desso.
Attendi—all' uscio appresso
Tienti di spada armato. Ov' io ti chiami
I vasi apporta; ov' altro cenno intendi,
Col ferro accorri.

BOTH: Most depends how best I smother
Points that my opponent makes.
(Rustighello turns deftly aside and makes a signal: a troop of Sbirri enters and surrounds Astolfo.)

RUST, CHO: Not a word, a thought, a motion:
Learn the force of overwhelming numbers.
Woe to you had your devotion
Broke his unsuspecting slumbers!
Our dread monarch has here created
His mere wishes supremest law.

AST: But the anger of the Duchess?

RUST: Silence; her mandate must bow in awe.

CHORUS: On her name and reputation
He has thrown the greatest slighting:
Not a man, though king in station
Dare neglect the duke's inditing.
If your wisdom equals your valor,
Take its presence from here at once.

AST: I depart! The coming sequel
Falls to your, not my, expense.
(Astolfo retires.—Rustighello and the Sbirri steal into Gennaro's dwelling.)

SCENE IV.

Saloon in the Ducal Palace.—At the back, grand central entrance, to the right a small door, to the left another small door, partly hidden from observation. Behind this door, a recess is seen, in which a descending spiral staircase commences.

Duke, Rustighello, afterwards an Usher.

DUKE: All has been followed?

RUST: All, Sire. For here the prisoner
Awaits your pleasure.

DUKE: Then mark me: Those stairs conducts
To "Numa's chamber," beneath the panel painted
By Ludovico, a secret niche is hidden;
This key unlocks it; seek for a vase of silver
And one of gold there: In the adjoining lobby
Have them both ready; and beware—taste not
Of the golden: It is the wine of the Borgia!
One moment.—Take a stand behind us
Armed with you ready weapon. So when I call you Bring in the vases; but should I touch this signal
Come sword in hand then.

USCIERE: La Duchessa!
(Annunzia dalla porta di fondo.)

ALF: Affretta.
(Rustighello parte, e poco dopo si vede passeggiando dall' invetriata.)

SCENA V.

Lucrezia ed Alfonso; indi Gennaro, fra le guardie.

ALF: Così turbata?

LUC: A voi mi trae vendetta!
Colpa inaudita, infame,
A denunziarvi io vengo. Avvi in Ferrara
Chi della vostra sposa a pien meriggio
Oltraggio il nome, e mutilarlo ardisce.

ALF: Mi è noto.

LUC: E no 'l punisce!
E il soffre Alfonso in vita?

ALF: A noi dinanzi
Tosto ei fia tratto.

LUC: Qual ei sia, pretendo
Che morte egli abbia, e al mio cospetto; e sacra
Ducal parola al vostro amor ne chiedo.

ALF: E sacra io dôlla.—Il prigionier.
(All' Usciere si presenta immantinente Gennaro disarmato fra le Guardie.)

LUC: (Aparte.) Chi vedo!

ALF: (Con un sorriso.) Noto vi è desso?

LUC: (Aparte.) Oh, Ciel! Gennaro! Ahi quale
Fatalità!

GEN: L' Altezza vostra, o Duca,
Toglier mi fece dal mio tetto a forza
Da gente armata. Chieder posso, io spero,
D' ond' io mertai questo rigore estremo?

ALF: Capitano, appressate.

LUC: (Aparte.) Io gelo! io tremo!

ALF: Un temerario osava
Testè, di giorno, dal ducal palagio
Con man profana cancellar l' augusto
Nome di Borgia.—Il reo si cerca.

LUC: Il reo—
Non è costui!

ALF: D' onde il sapete?

LUC: Egli era
Stammane altrove. Alcun de' suoi compagni
Commiso il fallo.

GEN: Non è ver.

USHER: Sire, the Duchess.
(Announcing from the central door.)

ALF: Admit her.
(Rustighello enters the staircase.)

SCENE V.

Lucrezia and Duke Alfonso; afterwards Gennaro and Soldiers.

ALF: In trouble, Madam?

LUC: I look to you for vengeance!
Since there is lately committed
Crime of the blackest nature! One in Ferrara
Holds your spouse so lightly: in actual daylight
He insults her, and mutilates her scutcheon.

DUKE: I know it.

LUC: If you have known it
Why then have you not punished?

DUKE: He here is captive,
And waits our pleasure.

LUC: Let me urge then,
Whatever his guilty reason, be who he may be,
I ask of you, Don Alfonso, that he does not quit this room alive.

DUKE: I give my promise. Admit the man.
(To the Usher.—Gennaro appears immediately, disarmed, among guards.)

LUC: (Aside.) Who shall I see?

DUKE: (Smiling.) Know you the prisoner?

LUC: (Aside.) Oh heavens! Gennaro! Oh fatal, Fatal day!

GEN: Your gracious Highness, my Lord Duke,
Has been pleased to drag me from my home
By armed men. Let me ask then, I pray you,
What great transgression calls for such rigorous treatment?

DUKE: Captain, pray approach us!

LUC: (Aside.) I shudder! I tremble!

DUKE: Some idle varlet has boldly,
By day, in public, on our ducal palace,
In profanation travestied the mighty name
Of Borgia! We seek the culprit!

LUC: No culprit
Have we here!

DUKE: How do you know that?

LUC: He passed
The morning elsewhere! Some one of his companions
Has wrought this insult.

GEN: No, in truth.

ALF: L' udite?
Siate sincero, e dite
Se il reo voi sieto.

LUC: Uso a mentir non sono;
Chè della vita istessa
Più caro ho l' onor mio.
Duca Alfonso, il confesso—il reo son io.

LUC: (Aparte.) Misera me!

ALF: (Piano a Lucretia.) Vi diedi
La mia ducal parola.

LUC: Alcuni istanti
Favellarvi in segreto, Alfonso, io bramo.
Deh! secondami, o Ciel! (Aparte.)
(Ad un cenno d' Alfonso, Gennaro e ricondotto via.)

SCENA VI.

Lucrezia; Alfonso.

ALF: Soli noi siamo.
Che chiedete?

LUC: Vi chiedo, o signore,
Di quel giovane illesa la vita.

ALF: Come?—E dianzi cotanto rigore!
L' ira vostra è si tosto sparita.

LUC: Fu capriccio! A che giova ch' ei mora?
Giovin tanto! Perdòno gli do!

ALF: La mia fede io vi diedi, o signora;
Nè a mia fede giammai fallirò.

LUC: Don Alfonso, favoro ben lieve
Voi negate a sovrana, a consorte!

ALF: Chi v' offese irne impune non deve—
Voi chiedeste; io giurai la sua morte.

LUC: Perdoniam—siam clementi del paro:
La clemenza è regale virtù.

ALF: No, non posso.

LUC: E sì avverso a Gennaro
Chi vi fa, caro Alfonso?

ALF: Chi?—tu!

LUC: Io, che dite?

ALF: Tu l' ami!

LUC: Che ascolto?

ALF: Sì, tu l' ami! In Venezia il seguisti.

LUC: (Aparte.) Giusto Cielo!

ALF: Anche adesso nel volto
Ti leggea l' empio ardor che nudristi.

LUC: Don Alfonso!

ALF: T' acqueta.

LUC: Io vi giuro.

DUKE: You hear him?
Pray, Sir, be candid, say truly
Are you the culprit?

GEN: To tell but the truth's a maxim
Which, though our life it perils
Can never risk our honor.
Duke Alfonso, I confess it, I only am guilty.

LUC: (Aside.) Unhappy me!

DUKE: (In an undertone.) Remember
I gave my Ducal promise.

LUC: Let us a moment
Give this matter together more close discussion.
(Aside.) Be my helper, oh heaven!
(At a sign of the Duke, Gennaro is taken away.)

SCENE VI.

Lucretia; the Duke.

DUKE: We are in private;
What do you wish to say?

LUC: I ask you, best beloved,
To spare that gentle youth his existence.

DUKE: How now? So lately his death did you covet!
Has your anger taken wings such a distance?

LUC: It was a mere whim! I am ready to pardon.
What would his death now avail to us!

DUKE: But we gave you our promise, fair lady.
When we promise we never do fail.

LUC: Don Alfonso; how trifling a favor
Do you deny to Lucretia, your consort!

DUKE: He has crimes even deeper and graver.
You did ask me, and I vowed you his life.

LUC: Is not mercy the brightest jewel
That should gleam from a great prince's brow?

DUKE: No, I cannot.

LUC: What has made you so cruel
Toward Gennaro, my dear Alfonso?

DUKE: What?—You!

LUC: I have your meaning?

DUKE: You love him!

LUC: What say you?

DUKE: Yes, you love him! Straight to Venice you pursued him.

LUC: (Aside.) Ha! gracious heaven!

DUKE: Guilty looks that betray you
Speak the passion that bade delude him.

LUC: Don Alfonso!

DUKE: Pray calm yourself!

LUC: I implore you!

ALF: Non macchiarti di nuovo spergiuro.

LUC: Don Alfonso!

ALF: E omai tempo ch' io prenda
De' miei torti vendetta tremenda;
E tremenda da questo momento,
Sul tuo complice infame cadrà!

LUC: (Inginocchiandosi.) Grazia, Alfonso!

ALF: L' indegno vo' spento!

LUC: Per pietà!

ALF: Più non odo pietà!

LUC: Oh! a te bada, a te stesso pon mente don Alfonso mio quarto marito omai troppom' hai vista piangente omai troppo il mio coree feerito al dolo re sottentra la rabbia ti potria far la Borgia pentir bada bada Alfonso, bada ti potria farla Borgia pentir bada bada Alfonso bada ti potria farla Borgia pentir.

ALF: Mi sei nota; nè porre in obblio
Chi sei tu, se il volessi, potrei
Ma tu pensa che il Duca son io—
Che in Ferrara, e in mia mano tu sei.
Io ti lascio la scelta s' egli abbia
Di veleno o di spada a perir.
Scegli.

LUC: (Fuori di sè.) Oh, Dio! Dio possente!

ALF: Trafitto
Tosto ci sia.
(Per uscire.)

LUC: Deh! t' arresta!

ALF: Ch' ei cada.

LUC: Non commetter sì nero delitto!

ALF: Scegli! scegli!

LUC: Ah, non muoja di spada!

ALF: Sii prudente! D' appresso io ti sono:
Nulla speme te è data nutrir.

LUC: L' infelice al suo fato abbandono!
Uom crudele! io mi sento morir!
(Cade sopra una sedia.—Alfonso accenna alle Guardie.)

SCENA VII.

Gennaro ritorna fra i Custodi; indi Rustighello.

ALF: Della Duchessa ai preghi
Che il vostro fallo oblblia,
E forza pur ch' io pieghi;
E libertà vi dia.

LUC: (Aparte.) Oh, come ei finge!

DUKE: From additional falsehood forbear now.

LUC: Don Alfonso!

DUKE: Now it is my time for action,
Mine to gain for my wrongs satisfaction,
That tremendous revenge now I cherish shall fall
On your hated accomplice!

LUC: (Clinging to him.) Mercy, Alfonso!

DUKE: No, the traitor must perish!

LUC: Oh, have mercy!

DUKE: I am deaf to your call!

LUC: Oh, though the fourth of my husbands, you lord it, Don Alfonso, too sternly, I assure you! They who have wronged me have ever deplored it! They who slight me cannot shun my fury. I scorn all your malice with derision, Know you have to deal with the Borgia, wary, wary Alfonso, wary, Know that you have to deal with the Borgia, Wary, wary Alfonso. Wary, know that you have to deal with the Borgia.

DUKE: Well I know you! your deeds have no covering,
You yourself duly tell to the world:
Yet think you once that I here am sovereign
In Ferrara you dwell in my power.
I but leave you to fix the decision,
That he die by either poison or steel.
Choose then!

LUC: (Wildly.) Oh, heaven! oh, mighty heaven!

DUKE: It were shorter
By the sword—
(As if going out.)

LUC: Stay one moment!

DUKE: The word, then!

LUC: Oh, refrain from this horrible murder.

DUKE: Choose the manner—

LUC: Let it not be the sword, then!

DUKE: Now be cautious, and do not deceive yourself:
I reveal not one glimmer of hope.

LUC: Wretched boy! I must leave you to your fate!
Cruel monster! how vain all appeal!
(She sinks on a seat.—The Duke makes a sign to the guards.)

SCENE VII.

Gennaro returns amid his warders; afterwards Rustighello.

DUKE: Her grace's intercession,
Anger at insult ceasing,
Commands our quick concession,
And grants you your releasing.

LUC: (Aside.) O, how he feigns!

ALF: E poi
Tanto è valore in voi,
Che d' Adria il mar privarno,
E Italia insiem, non vo'.

LUC: (Aparte.) Perfido!

GEN: Quai so darno,
Grazie, signor, ve'n do!
Pur—poichè dirlo è dato
Senza temer viltade—
In uom che l' ha mertato
Il beneficio cade.
Di vostra Altezza il padre
Cinto da avverse squadre
Perir, se scudo e aïta
Non gli era un venturier.

ALF: E quel voi siete?

LUC: (Sorgendo.) E vita
Voi gli serbaste?

GEN: E ver.

LUC: (Aparte.) Duca—

ALF: (Aparte.) L' indegna spera!

LUC: (Aparte.) S' ei si mutasse!

ALF: (Aparte.) E vano!
Seguir la mia bandiera
Vorreste, o capitano?

GEN: Al Veneto Governo
Nodo mi stringe eterno—
Mio fede io gli giurai;
E sacro è un giuro.

ALF: (Volgendosi con intenzione a Lucrezia.) Il so!
Quest' oro almeno—
(Presentendogli una borsa.)

GEN: Assai
Da' miei signori io n' ho.

ALF: Almen, siccome antico
Stile è fra noi degli avi,
Libare a nappo amico
Spero che a voi non gravi.

GEN: Sommo per me favore
Questo sarà, signore.

ALF: Gentil la mia consorte
Coppiera a noi sarà.

LUC: (Aparte.) Stato peggior di morte!

ALF: Meco, o Duchessa.—Olà.

Esse Rustighello.

ALF: (Prendendola per mano, aparte.) Guai se ti sfugge un moto—
Se ti tradisce un detto!
Uscir dal mio conspetto
Vivo costui non dè.
Versa! Il licor ti è noto!
Strano è il ribrezzo in te.

DUKE: In sequel
Few lands show equal valor;
Shall ours appear deficient
Towards one so brave as you?

LUC: (Aside.) Perfidy!

GEN: All sufficient
Thanks, I, my lord, allow.
Sire; if you will please hear it,
And I may speak unhampered,
For one of some slight merit
Blame should be tempered with grace.
Once, when around your father
Adverse the foe did gather,
His death was sure, till assistance
Was rendered by one poor youth.

DUKE: You then are he, Sir?

LUC: (Rising.) Existence
You restored him?

GEN: In truth.

LUC: (Aside.) Hear!

DUKE: (Aside.) False hope fans her!

LUC: (Aside.) Can this not change him?

DUKE: (Aside.) How vainly!
(Aloud.) Will you serve beneath our banner,
Sir Captain? I ask it plainly.

GEN: Venice's lovely regions
Own my entire allegiance;
I've sworn and vowed my faith to them;
And sacred shall my oath be.

DUKE: (Turning significantly to Luc.) Just so!
This gold at least may—
(Offering a purse.)

GEN: The State, your grace,
Ample does allow.

DUKE: Since then our every offer
Meets with a similar rejection,
I proffer a parting cup,
To that, show no objection!

GEN: Such were a regal favor
Touched with the finest flavor.

DUKE: At your hands, gentle wife, here
The generous wine shall flow.

LUC: (Aside.) Air with worst death is rife here.

DUKE: Hear me, O Duchess!—
What ho!

(Enter Rustighello with a salver, on which are two flagons, one of silver, the other of gold, and two cups; he places them on the table and withdraws.)

DUKE: (Keeping Luc, by the hand, aside.) Guard from all emotion,
Lull thought to subtlest essence;
This man, here, in our presence
Ceases to live this day.
As often as you pour that potion
Other than fear has swayed!

LUC: (Aparte.) Oh, se sapessi a quale
Opra m' astringi atroce,
Per quanto sii feroce,
Ne avvresti orror con me!
Va—non v' ha mostro eguale—
Colpa maggior no v' è!

GEN: (Aparte.) Meco benigni tanto
Mai non credea costoro.
Trovar perdono in loro
Sogno pur sembra a me.
Madre, esser dee soltanto
Del tuo pregar mercè.

ALF: Or via mesciamo.
(Si versa dal Vaso d' Argento.)

GEN: Attonito
A tanta onor son io.

ALF: A voi, Duchessa.

LUC: (Aparte.) Il barbaro!

ALF: (Aparte.) Il vaso d' or.

LUC: (Aparte.) Gran Dio!
(Versa dal Vaso d' Oro.)

ALF: Vi assista il Ciel, Gennaro!

GEN: Fausto a voi sia del paro!
(Bevono.)

ALF: (Aparte.) Trema per te, spergiura!
Vittima prima egli è.

LUC: (Aparte.) Vanne! Non ha natura
Mostro peggior di te!

GEN: (Aparte.) Madre! è la mia ventura
Del tuo pregar mercè!

ALF: Or, Duchessa, a vostr' agio potete
Trattenerlo, oppur dargli commiato.
(Si allontana con Rustighello.)

LUC: (Aparte, pensando.) Oh, qual raggio!

GEN: (Inchinandosi.) Signora, accogliete
I saluti di un cor non ingrato.

LUC: Infelice il veleno bevesti non farmotto trafitto cadresti Prendi e parti una goccia una soladi quel farmaco vita ti dà. lo na scondi, t'affretta t'invola t'accompagni del ciel la pietà t'accompagni del ciel la pietà t'accompagni del ciel la pietà Del ciel o del ciel la pietà del cielo . . . . del ciel la pietà.

GEN: Che mai sento? E tutt' altro che morte
Aspettarmi io doveva in tua corte!
Un rio genio mi pose la benda,
M' inspirò sì fatal securtà.
Forse—ah! forse una morte più orrenda,

LUC: (Aside.) O, could you know the sequel
From such your atrocious deed
Even would your ferocious hate
Bid me stay in horror,
Monster without an equal,
And can you do nothing but slay?

GEN: (Aside.) Grace or benignant favor
Scarce had I hoped as my guerdon,
But here to find a pardon
Must seem a dream always;
Mother, you are my saviour,
For your son's well-being, pray!

DUKE: Now, Madam! to help him!
(Helps himself out of the silver flagon.)

GEN: Excuse the blush
Such regal kindness causes.

DUKE: We wait you, Duchess.

LUC: (Aside.) Barbarian!

DUKE: The vase of gold!

LUC: (Aside.) Great heaven!
(Pours out for Gennaro from the golden flagon.)

DUKE: Young man, may long life attend you!

GEN: Fortune the same befriend you! (They drink.)

DUKE: (Aside.) Tremble, vile creature,
He falls, though first, not last.

LUC: (Aside.) Can there be in nature
Monster of crime so vast?

GEN: (Aside.) Life wears another feature,
This hour of peril past!

DUKE: (Aside to Lucrezia.) Up, fond Duchess, for your paramour needs
All your love, his few moments remaining.
(Retires with Rustighello.)

LUC: (Aside, reflecting.) What thus inspires me!

GEN: (Bowing.) Your goodness so overpowers me,
Such impression can scarcely be forgotten.

LUC: Hapless victim of the poison he gave you, This one antidote only can save you, Take it! drink it! but a drop from the vial, Precious life is yours! Then again, Drink! and fly from here! I brook no denial, Over you, angels forevermore reign . . . . Over you, angels forevermore reign, Over you, angels forevermore reign, forever and evermore reign, forever and evermore reign.

GEN: Deep designing could I else have expected?
They that near you are selected for death,
False the genius who now bending over me
Whispers hope where all hope is in La tua destra, o malvagia, mi dà?

LUC: Oh, in me fida!

GEN: In te, cruda!

LUC: Sì; parti!
Morto, in te vuole il Duca un rivale.

GEN: Oh, cimento!

LUC: Ei ritorna a svenarti!
Bevi, e fuggi!

GEN: Oh, dubbiezza fatale!

LUC: Bevi, e fuggi, io te 'n prego, o Gennaro!
Per tua madre—per quanto hai più caro!

GEN: Ti punisca, s' è in te tradimento,
Chi più speri che t' abbia pietà.
(Beve.)

LUC: Tu sei salve! Oh, supremo contento!
Quinci involati—affrettati—va!
(Lucrezia lo fa fuggire per la porta segreta. Si presenta dal fondo Rustighello col Duca.—Ella dà un grido, e cade sovra una sedia.)

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO.

■ ATTO II.

SCENA I.

Piccolo Cortile che mette alla Casa di Gennaro. Una finestra della Case è illuminata.—E notte.

Un drappello di Scherani entra spiando.

RUST E CORO: Rischiarata è la finestra:
In Ferrara egli è tuttora.
La fortuna al Duca è destra—
Del rival vendetta avrà.
Inoltriam! propizia è l' ora,
Buio è il cielo, alcun non v' ha.
(Avvicinano alla Casa di Gennaro; odono rumore, e si arrestano.)
Ma, silenzio, Un mormorio—
Un bisbiglio s' è levato:
E di gente calpestio
Più distinto udir si far.
Là in disparte—là in aggusto
Chi è si esplori, e dove va
(Si ritirano.)

GEN: Com' è soave quest' ora di silenzio
Al mio dolente cor! Quì non ascolto
Umana voce—e sembra
In dolce calma riposar natura.
Ah! non han posa le tempeste orrende vain.

A still more horrible ending,
Three times accursed one, your hand contains!

LUC: Do but trust me!

GEN: Trust you, vile fiend!

LUC: I pray you!
Your death, as a rival's, the Duke wills.

GEN: Fearful trial!

LUC: Comes he back, he will slay you!
Drink and fly from here!

GEN: Oh, this doubting is madness!

LUC: Dear Gennaro, I beg, I implore you
By that mother who lives to adore you!

GEN: May the gods with their utter resentment
Curse you ever if this be pretence!
(Drinks.)

LUC: You are saved! O supreme contentment;
Like the lightning, fly this moment from here!
(Lucrezia makes him escape by a secret door. The Duke and Rustighello appear at the back of the stage. She gives a shriek and sinks on a seat.)

END OF ACT I.

■ ACT II.

SCENE I.

A small court adjoining the house of Gennaro. One window is lighted. Night.

Rustighello enters with a band of Bravos, all disguised.

RUST, CHO: Yonder light is the guiding beacon
In Ferrara our man remaining,
Proves the Duke's only chance does not weaken;
He will be revenged at last.
Let us on the advantage now gaining,
Slumber and darkness over all seem cast.
(Advancing towards the house of Gennaro, they hear voices and stop.)
Yet, be silent! a sound encroaches
Like a breeze in leafy summer;
Softly, gently it approaches,
Clear, distinct, increasing fast.
Let us in ambush, noting the comer,
Well explore him till he has passed.
(Retire.)

GEN: Oh, how delightful this pleasing hour of silence
Comes over this lonely heart! No voice of discord
Can assail me here. In tranquil slumber

Che mi premono il petto! Ove n' andaste
Giorni felici come un sogno scorsi,
Quando il mio cor non conoscea rimorsi!
Io pur sentii le placide
Gioie d' un puro amore,—
Conobbi io pure il fervido
Desio di gloria e onore;
E mi ridea nell' anima
De pace il bel seren!
Perderne la memoria,
Mi fosse dato almen!
Or da rimorsi lacero,
Calma non ho, ne speme.
Un affannoso palpito
Il cuor mi scuote e freme!
Mille funeste immagini,
Mi colmano d' orror!
Almen bastasse a uccidermi
L' immenso mio dolor!

SCENA II.

Entra Orsini e batta alla porta.

GEN: Lei tu?

ORS: Son io.
Venir non vuoi, Gennaro, dalla Negroni?
Ogni piacer m' èscemo
Le nol dividi tu.

GEN: Grave cagione a te mi toglie
Per Venezia io parto fra pochi istanti.

ORS: E me qui lasci?
E uniti fem alla morte
Non giùrammo entrambi
Essere in ogni evento?

GEN: E ver.

ORS: Mi tieni cosi tua fede
Com' io la tengo.

GEN: E tu vien meco.

ORS: All' alba attendi, e vengo.
Al geniale invito
Mancar non posso.

GEN: Oh! questa tua Negroni
M' d di sènistro auspicio.

ORS: E a me piultosto il tuo parter cosi,
Notturno è solo—così pensoso è mesto.
Restae, restae Gennaro!

GEN: Odi—e se il chiedi
Io resto!—Mi vacciata è la mia vita,
Alla morte io son presso.

ORS: Chè l' insidia? à me lo addita?
Che è costui?

GEN: Parla sommesso.

Wrapped, nature seems reposing.
Ah! quiet comes not to the fearful tempest
Still raging in this bosom. Where have you gone
Bright days of rapture, like a vision faded,
When my young heart had not one thought remorseful.
Oh, I have felt the rapture,
The joy of love's pure devotion,
Have known the burning eagerness
For fame and glorioús promotion,
Yet peace within my bosom
Ever smiling so mild and fair!
Never will depart the memory
Till death relieves from care!
Now my soul's torn with agony,
Calmness and hope have departed,
Tremblings have seized and shaken me,
Borne me to earth faint-hearted.
Thousands of dark imaginings
My senses overpower—
Enough at least to wither me
The sorrows of this hour!

SCENE II.

Enter Orsini and raps at the door of Gennaro's dwelling.

GEN: Is it you?

ORS: None else, friend.
Will you come with me and grace Negroni's supper?
There I can take no pleasure
If you do not share it.

GEN: Causes compel me now to refuse you,
Since I depart for Venice one hour from this time.

ORS: And will you leave me?
In life and death is our friendship
Sworn to share together
Equally cloud or sunshine?

GEN: It is true.

ORS: And think you I so could treat you
With like unkindness?

GEN: Come with me then.

ORS: Wait but the dawnlight, I'm with you.
Courtesy will not suffer
To slight Negroni.

GEN: This, her aforesaid banquet,
Rouses my worst suspicions.

ORS: Then rather, my friend, going away alone,
Unarmed, by night, too—through brigand-haunted regions,
Stay now, stay, dear Gennaro.

GEN: Well then, since you urge it
So be it!—Over my life there hangs a menace,
Death impends with fatal power.

ORS: Who asserts so? From where comes the menace?
Show me the man.

GEN: Speak lower.

CORO DI SBIRRI: Ci par tempo.

RUST: No s' aspetti
L' importunato partira.

ORS: Ah!

GEN: Taci! incanto!

ORS: Nè d' inganni tu sospetti
Quale in te credulita!
Non sai tu di donna l'arti:
Onde a lei ti mostri grato Ella ha finto, ella ha finto di salvarti; Di veleni, di veleni che ragioni dove fondi dove fondi il tuo ti mor? Gentil donna è la Negroni uom è il Ducauomo è il Ducadalto cor!

GEN: Tu conosci apien tu sai se codardo io fui giammai se un ist ante in faccia a morte mai fu scemo il mio valor pure a desso in questa corte m'e di guai presago il cor m'e di guai presago il cor m'e di guai presago il cor presago il cor presago il cor, il cor.

ORS: Gentil dama è la Negroni uomo e il Duca d'alto cor uomo è il Ducad' alto cor uomo è il Duca d'alto cor d'alto cor d'alto cor.

ORS: Va se tu vuoi
Teutar m' ecaro
Afferrar la mia ventura.

GEN: Addio dungue—

ORS: Addio Gennaro.

GEN: Veglia a te!

ORS: Ti rassicura.

GEN: Ah, non posso abbandonarti.

ORS: Ah, non io lasciarti ouò.

GEN: Al feslin vuò seguitarti—

ORS: Teco all' alba partirò.

A DUE: Sì a qual vuolsi, si tuo destino,
Esse è mio, lo giuro ancora,
Tuo sempre, o viva amora.
Qual due fiori a un solo stello
Qual due fronde a un ramasol,
Noi vedremo sereno il cielo,
O saremo curvati al suol.
(Li retirano.)

RUST AL SBIRRI: Nol seguite!

CORO: A noi s' invola.

RUS: Stolti!
Ei corse alla Negroni.

CORO: Basta allora;
Al laccio ei corrè
Non v'ha dubbio al vert 'apponi,
E tenace è certo l' amo
Che gettato al cieco è la.

CHORUS OF SBIRRI: Now's the moment.

RUST: No, have patience
Till that meddling fool departs.

ORS: Ah!

GEN: Silence! you madcap!

ORS: These, your fears, are sad vexations;
Oh, how credulous your heart!
Look how the woman served you:
Thinking love must pay such kindness, She pretends, she pretends to have preserved you: As to poison, as to poison that lay only in your fear, your foolish fear and nothing more! O, a dove is the fair Negroni, As for the Duke, the Duke I know true to the core!

GEN: None but you are so empowered To declare me never a coward! But the snare of an assassin calls for energy yet more stern, Common valor even surpassing That pure courage men adore, That pure courage men adore, That pure courage men adore, we men adore, we men adore, adore.

ORS: O a dove is fair Negroni, and the Duke true to the core, and the Duke true to the core, and the Duke true to the core, true to the core, true to the core

ORS: I take the broad path,
You choose the narrow,
I must work out my adventure.

GEN: Adieu then, comrade.

ORS: Adieu, Gennaro.

GEN: Farewell!

ORS: Luck bless your venture.

GEN: Thus abandon you? ah never!
(Rushing back.)

ORS: Do you think I could leave you so?

GEN: Since tonight we do not sever—

ORS: I will go with you at dawn.

BOTH: O fortune, whatever it may be,
Shall be mine, again I swear it,
Life or death, together we share it.
Twin-born flowers, growing in union,
Twin-born leaflets upon a branch.
We show one smile, if summer be glowing,
Beneath the tempest we equally blanch.
(Exit.)

RUST TO THE SBIRRI: Do not follow!

CHORUS: But they escape us!

RUS: Madmen!
They seek Negroni's palace.

CHORUS: That is sufficient.
They rush into danger;
Then how useless such puny malice,
One with passion newly burning

Ir si lasci ritorniamo
Di ferir mestier non fa.

SCENA III.

Sala del Palazzo Negroni illuminata e addobbata per festivo banchetto.

Sono sedute ad una tavola riccamente imbandita la Principessa Negroni con molte Dame splendidamente vestite. Orsini, Liverotto, Vitellozzo, Gazella, Petrucci, ciascuno con una Dama al fianco. Da un lato della tavola è Gubetta; dall' altro è Gennaro.

LIV: Viva il Madera!

TUTTI: Evviva!

VIT: Il Ren che scalda e avviva!

GAZ: De' vivi il Cipro è re!

PET: I vini—per mìa fè—Tutti so i buoni.

ORS: Io stimo quel che brilla,
Siccome la scintilla,
Che desta il Dio d' Amor
Nell' occhio seduttor,
Della Negroni!

TUTTI: Ben detto! A lei si tocchi!
Si beva ai suoi begli occhi!
Amore la formò!
Ciprigna in lei versò
Tutti i suoi doni!
(Toccano e bevono.)

GUB: (Aparte.) Ebbri son già: conviene
Tentar che restin soli.
(S' alzn.)

GEN: (Aparte.) Nojato io sono.
(Si allontana.)

ORS: Ebbene?
Gennaro, a noi t' involi?
Odi il novello brindisi
Da me composto un giorno.

GUB: (Ridendo.) Ah! ah!

ORS: Chi ride?

GUB: Ridono
Quanti ci sono intorno.

ORS: Come?

GUB: Oh l' esimio lirico!

ORS: M' insulteresti tu?

GUB: S' egli è insultarti il ridere,
Far no 'l potrei di più.

ORS: (Alzandosi.) Marrano di Castiglia!

GUB: Scheran Trasteverino!
(Orsini afferra un coltello.)

DAME: Cielo! costor si battono!

TUTTI: Che fai? T' acqueta, Orsini.
(Trattenen.)

Drags his friend where pitfalls lurk.
Let's be turning for other game,
Neater hands will do that work.
(Exit.)

SCENE III.

Saloon in the Negroni Palace; brilliantly illuminated and decorated.

On a table, covered with luxuries and rare flowers, the Princess Negroni is seated, with her ladies of honor. Orsini, Liverotto, Vitellozzo, Gazella, Petrucci, each with a lady seated at his side. At one end of the table Gubetta, opposite to him Gennaro.

LIV: Long live Madeira!

ALL: Evviva!

VIT: Yet give us your Rhine wine forever!

GAZ: Cyprus the grape for me!

PET: God Bachus bids agree
Foeman and crony.

ORS: I praise the cup whose flowing
With golden, glorious glow,
Wakes Cupid from his trance
In your seducing glance,
Fairest Negroni!

ALL: Let us drink and sing her praises;
We sing the thousand graces
Love formed with so much art,
That Venus could impart
Such beauty only!
(All touch their glasses and drink.)

GUB: (Aside.) Half in their cups of those fair dames
I must bereave them.

GEN: (Aside.) I am weary.
(Rising, as if about to go.)

ORS: Such women,
Gennaro, can you leave them?
Hear but my last effusion
Composed the other morning.

GUB: (Laughing rudely.) Ha, ha!

ORS: Who laughs there?

GUB: All present,
Such absurd efforts scorning.

ORS: How so?

GUB: Ha, ha! a new Anacreon!

ORS: Would you insult me?

GUB: If laughing be insulting you,
More could I not, Sir dolt!

ORS: (Rising). You beggarly Castilian!

GUB: You gross Italian bully!
(Orsini seizes a knife.)

LADIES: Heavens, these men will come to swords!

ALL: What would you do? Be calm, Orsini.
(Drawing him back.)

ORS: Io ti darò, balordo—

GUB: —Tale di me ricordo,
Che temperante e sobrio
Per sempre ti farà.

TUTTI: Finitela, cospetto!
All' ospite rispetto.
O tutta quanta accorrere
Farete la città.
(Le Dame si ritirano.)

SCENA IV.

Gubetta, Orsini, Liverotto, Vitellozzo, Gazella, Petrucci, e Gennaro.

LIV: Pace, pace, per ora!

VIT: Avrete il tempo
Di battervi doman da cavalieri;
Non col pugnal come assassin' di strada.

TUTTI: E ver.

GEN: Ma della spada
Che femmo noi?

ORS: L' abbiam deposta fuori.

TUTTI: Non ci si pensi più.

GUB: Beviam, signori.

GAZ: Ma intanto sbigottite
Ci han lasciate le dame.

GUB: Torneranno;
Ed umilmente chiederemo scusa.
(Un coppiere vestito di nero porta in giro una bottiglia.)

COPPIERE: Vino di Siracusa.

TUTTI: Ottimo vino, affè.
(Tutti bevono: Gubetta versa il bicchiere dietro le spalle.)

GEN: (Aparte.) Maffio, vedesti? o Spagnuol non beve.

ORS: (Aparte.) Che importa? E naturale: ebbro esser deve.

GUB: Or, se gli piace, amior,
Può schiccherare Orsin versi a sua posta,
Poichè poeta lo farà tal vino.

ORS: Sì, a tu dispetto.

TUTTI: Una ballata, Orsini!

ORSINI: Il segreto peesser felice sò per prova e l'insegno agli a mici sia se reno sia nubilo ilcielo ogni tempo sia cal do sia gelo scherzo e bevo e de ri do gl'insani che si dandel futuro pensier scherzo e bevo e derido gl'insani che si dandel futuro pensier Non curiamo l'incerto domani se quest' oggi n'è data goder. (Odesi un lugubre suono e voci lontane che cantano flobilmente:—)
La gioja de' profani

ORS: This small account I'll settle—

GUB: —With such a taste of metal,
As cannot fail to sober you
Forever and a day.

ALL: These ill-timed, ugly measures,
Have scarred our fairest treasures;
The total town will be aroused,
Inquiring of the fray.
(The Ladies retire.)

SCENE IV.

Gubetta, Orsini, Liverotto, Vitellozzo, Gazella, Petrucci, e Gennaro.

LIV: Peace, peace, I implore!

VIT: The time is ample
To battle tomorrow at the sword's point,
Not here with knives, like your cutthroat butchers!

ALL: Well said.

GEN: Apropos of our swords:
Where have we left them?

ORS: Outside in that chamber.

ALL: Here let this matter end.

GUB: Now drink, my masters!

GAZ: Our harsh ill-mannered rudeness
Has dispersed all our ladies.

GUB: Each will come back
And smile on who woos her for humblest.
(A cupbearer, clad in black, carries round a flask of wine.)

CUPBEARER: Wine of Syracuse.

ALL: Best of the best—by Jove.
(All drink, except Gubetta, who empties his goblet over shoulder.)

GEN: (Aside.) Maffio, did you see that? That Spaniard, he drank not.

ORS: (Aside.) What does it matter?
It is passing likely; why, he is reeling!

GUB: Now, if it please him, my comrades,
Bid the great bard Orsini verse us a strophe;
Gods, what a poet such wine as this should make him.

ORS: Yes, without your help, friend!

ALL: Tune us a stanza, Orsini!

ORSINI: O the secret of bliss in perfection, Is to never raise any objection Whether winter hang tears on the bushes Or the summer kiss deck them in blushes, Drink and pity the fool who on sorrow Ever wastes the pale shade of a thought; Drink and pity the fool who on sorrow Ever wastes the pale shade of a thought, Never hope for one jot from the morrow, Save a new day of joy by it brought.
(They are interrupted by the distant sound of a funeral bell, and voices chanting in a dismal tone, part of the Catholic funeral service.)

E un fumo passeggier!

GEN: Quai voci?

ORS: Alcun si prende
Gioco di noi.

TUTTI: Che mi sarà?

ORS: Scommetto
Che delie dame una malizia è questa.

TUTTI: Un' altra strofa, Orsin!

ORS: La strofa è presta.
Profittiamo degli anni fiorenti,—
Il piacer li fa correr più lenti.
Se vecchiezza con livida faccia,
Stammi a tergo, e mia vita minaccia,
Scherzo e bevo, e derido gl' insani
Che si dan del futuro pensier!

TUTTI: Non curiamo l'imparto l' domani,
Se quest' oggie dato goder!

VOCI: Quitium sapicutiae
Est timor Domini. (A poco a poco si spengono i lumi.)

ORS: Gennaro!

GEN: Maffio! Vedi?
Si spengono le faci!

ORS: A farsi grave
Incomincia lo scherzo.

TUTTI: Usciam! Son chiuse!
Tutte le porte! Ove siam mai venuti?

SCENA V.

Si apre la porta dal fonde, e si presenta Lucrezia Borgia con gente armata.

LUC: Presso Lucrezia Borgia!

TUTTI: (Con un grido.) Ah, siam perduti!

LUC: Sì, son la Borgia! Un ballo, un tristo ballo
Voi mi deste in Venesia: io rendo a voi
Una cena in Ferrara.

TUTTI: Oh, noi traditi!

LUC: Voi salvi ed impuniti
Credeste invano. Dell' ingiuria mia
Piena vendetta ho già: cinque son pronti

CHORUS: (Within.) Et plusquam non videbunt
Si habent oculos.

CHORUS: (Within, in response.)
Et nares habent omnes
Sed non odorabunt.

GEN: What means that?

ORS: While we pipe chansons
Echo sings vespers.

ALL: But yet, what is it?

ORS: Some dead monk;
With doleful chanting now to his grave they post him.

ALL: Let's drink to him, Orsini!

ORS: In this verse, I'll toast him.
On the springtime of life fully flowing,
On the ripe sun of youth gaily glowing,
Death may gloat with his bleary eye so yellow;
Here's a health for the jolly old fellow!
With a fig for the fool who on sorrow
Ever wastes the pale shade of a thought!

ALL: Life or death then must wait till tomorrow, and not spoil this delight we have sought.

CHORUS OF PENITENTS: (Entering and ranging themselves on each side of the banquet chamber.) Quitium sapicutiae
Est timor Domini.
(One by one the lights go out.)

ORS: Gennaro!

GEN: Maffio! look round!
The lamps are expiring.

ORS: This wears an aspect
Surpassing even strangeness.

ALL: Let's fly! Our swords!
All exit is prevented! Have we a demon among us?

SCENE V.

The central door opens and Lucrezia appears, attended by armed men.

LUC: No! but Lucrezia Borgia!

ALL: (With a cry of horror.) Ah! we are lost then!

LUC: See, it is the Borgia! how lately a sorry ball
All here did give me in Venice:
I now in turn bid you sup in Ferrara.

ALL: Hope! be banished!

LUC: You thought to pass unpunished;
Yet thought so vainly. Great as was your insult

Strati funèbri per coprirvi estinti, Poichè il veleno a voi temprato è presto.	My vengeance is as great: five narrow coffins Now are in waiting to receive your bodies; For one and all have taken poison!
GEN: (Avanz.) Non bastan cinque: avvi mestier del sesto!	GEN: (Advancing.) Five will suffice not—still you need a sixth one!
LUC: Gennaro! Oh, Ciel!	LUC: Gennaro! Oh, heavens!
GEN: Perire Io saprò cogli amici.	GEN: Yes, Madam; Here, to die with my comrades.
LUC: Ite: chiudete Tutte le sbarre, e per rumor che ascolti, Nessuno in questa sala entrar s' attenti.	LUC: Hasten, and fast close Every barrier; no matter, should you hear anything: Let none else enter within this present chamber.
TUTTI: Gennaro! (Strascinati.)	ALL: Gennaro! (Being led away.)
GEN: Amici!	GEN: Farewell then!
LUC: Uscite!	LUC: Remove them!
TUTTI: Oh, noi dolenti! (Escono fra gli armati, e la gran porta si chiude.)	ALL: Heaven be our refuge. (Exit, among the armed men, and the great door closes.)

SCENA VI.

SCENE VI.

Lucrezia e Gennaro.	Lucrezia, Gennaro.
LUC: Tu pur quì, nè sei fuggito? Qual ti tenne avverso fato?	LUC: You are here, as if it were seeming Fate must shadow your young horizon.
GEN: Tutto, tutto ho presentito!	GEN: I foresaw this envisioned dreaming.
LUC: Sei di nuovo avvelenato!	LUC: You have again taken the poison.
GEN: Ne ho il rimedio. (Cava l' ampolla del contraveleno.)	GEN: Here's the cure, still! (Shows the vial.)
LUC: Ah, me 'l rammento! Grazie, grazie, al Ciel ne dò!	LUC: Ah! I remember! I will thank for this with my latest breath!
GEN: Cogli amici io sarò spento, O con lor lo partirò.	GEN: Till my comrades all have drank I will risk their chance of death.
LUC: Ah, per te fia poco ancora, Ah non basta per gli amici. (Osservando l' ampolla.)	LUC: Scarce that drop of life's restorer Saves yourself, much less a friend.
GEN: Ei non basta? Allor! signora, Morrem tutti.	GEN: Have no more? If so, Signora, All must perish.
LUC: Che mai dici?	LUC: How will this end, then?
GEN: Voi primiera di mia mano Preparatevi a perir.	GEN: First, your course of more than badness Ends beneath my vengeful steel.
LUC: Io—Gennaro! Ascolta, insano!	LUC: I? I? Gennaro.—Withhold, oh, insensate—
GEN: Fermo io son! (Prende un coltello dalla tavola.)	GEN: Nothing can shake me. (Takes a knife from the table.)
LUC: (Sbigottita, aparte.) Che far—che dir?	LUC: (Terrified, aside.) Must I reveal?
GEN: Preparatevi! (Ritornando.)	GEN: Quick, prepare yourself! (Seizing her.)
LUC: Spietato! Ne ferir, svenar potresti?	LUC: Unkind one! By your hand, too, shall I perish?
GEN: Lo posso io, son disperato! Tutto, tutto mi togliesti. Non più indugi. (Risoluto.)	GEN: See, how despair and grief can blind one. Where are the comrades I did cherish? No more talk! (Resolutely.)
LUC: Ah! ferma, ferma!	LUC: Ah! wait, wait!
GEN: Preparati!	GEN: Prepare to die! (Lifting the knife.)
LUC: (Con un grido.) Ah, un Borgia sei! Son tuoi padri i padri miei. Ti risparmia un fallo orrendo— Il tuo sangue non versar.	LUC: (With a shriek.) You're a Borgia; You may call my fathers your own. From an awful crime I stay you! Do not spill your race's blood!
GEN: Sono on Borgia! Oh Ciel! ce intendo?	GEN: I a Borgia! Oh God, how say you!
LUC: Ah! ancora domandar. SCENA ULTIMA.

Si spalancano le porte del fondo, e n' esce Alfonso con Rustighello e Guardie.

ALF: Dove è desso?

LUC: Mira: è là.
(Correndo ad Alfonso e additandogli Gennaro estinto.)
Era desso il figlio mio!
La mia speme, il mio conforto:
Ei potea placarmi Iddio—
me parea far puro ancor!
Ogni luce in lui mi è spenta—
Il mio cor non esso è morto!
Sul mio capo il Cielo avventa
Il suo strale punitor!
(Cade sul Figlio.)

TUTTI: Rio mistero! orribil caso!

ALF: Si soccorra!

TUTTI: Oh, Ciel! se 'n muor!

LA FINE.

LAST SCENE.

The central door opens and admits Duke Alfonso and Rustighello, followed by guards.

DUKE: Where then is he?

LUC: Look: at your feet.
(Feebly raising her head and pointing to the body.)
To my heart this hope was given:
His affection my soul redeeming,
Still might win me back to heaven,
With me share its holy shore.
Crushed in darkness, destroyed, extinguished,
Fate has broken the magic dreaming;
Over this head too surely vanquished
See her wrathful vial pour now!
(Sinks lifeless on Gennaro's body.)

CHORUS: Wretched offspring, more wretched mother—

DUKE: Vain is help!

CHORUS: Vain is help; all is over.

THE END.

Lucia di Lammermoor (1835)

MUSIC BY GAETANO DONIZETTI ■ LIBRETTO BY SALVATORE CAMMARANO

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by Salvatore Cammarano (based upon Sir Walter Scott's novel, The Bride of Lammermoor) was first performed at the Teatro San Carlo in Naples on September 26, 1835. In Scotland at the end of the sixteenth century Lord Enrico Ashton finds himself in need of strong political allies. His home, Ravenswood castle, is not even rightfully his. Enrico's sister, Lucia, has been promised to Arturo Bucklaw but refuses to marry him. Normanno, captain of Lord Ashton's guard, is on to Lucia; she is in love with someone else. He discovers that Lucia's paramour is Sir Edgardo of Ravenswood. Lucia waits for Edgardo that night in the park, accompanied by Alisa, who pleads with her to end a relationship that can only come to grief because of the enmity between the Ravenswoods and the Ashtons. Edgardo wants to make peace with the Ashton family by asking for Lucia's hand in marriage. Although Lucia tries discourage him, they exchange rings as a pledge of their intentions. But, Enrico intervenes. He shows Lucia a forged letter from Edgardo to another woman, which convinces Lucia that she must marry Arturo after all. Edgardo interrupts the wedding after the marriage contract has been signed, accusing Lucia of unfaithfulness. Cursing the Ashtons, he draws his sword and attacks Enrico and Arturo. Raimondo, the chaplain, stops the fight. Enrico arrives at Wolf's Crag, the Ravenswood family's present home. He challenges Edgardo to a duel. The festivities continue, as the bride and groom retire for the night. Raimondo arrives suddenly with the news the Lucia has gone mad and, in her insanity, slain Arturo. In complete delirium, she acts out a wedding with the oblivious Edgardo. At the burial grounds, Edgardo hears the deathbell's toll and is told of Lucia's insanity and death. In the final dramatic moment of the opera, he dies, throwing himself on his own sword.

NORMANDO E CORO: Percorrete le spiagge vicine—Percorriamo le spiagge vicine—Della torre le vaste rovine. Cada il vel di si turpe mistero; Lo domanda, lo impone l'onor! Fia che splenda il terribile vero, Come lampo fra nubi d'orror!	NORMAN AND CHORUS: Search well through the neighboring valley, through the ruins of the gloomy tower. This dark mystery that lowers around us it concerns our honor to clear. As the lightning up rends the storm cloud; so asunder this veil we will tear. (Exeunt Chorus.)
SCENA II	SCENE II
ENRICO, RAIMONDO.	Enter HENRY and RAYMOND
NORMANDO: Tu sei turbato?	NORMAN: You seem troubled?
ENRICO: E n'ho ben d'onde. Il sai, del mio destin Si ottenebrò la stella; intanto Edgardo, Quel mortale nemico Di mia prosapia, dalle sue rovine Erge la fronte baldanzosa, e ride. Sola una mano raffermar mi puote Nel vacillante mio poter: Lucia Osa responger quella mano! Ah! suora Non m'è colei!	HENRY: And with reason; you know that the star of my destiny Darkly declines, This hated Edgar Bearing enmity deep and deadly to my race, laughing from his rock-bound tower To scorn my vows of vengeance, braves me! One hand alone can prop my falling fortune! There is just one thing that can save me now. Yet Lucy To Arthur still refuses her hand! Ah! sister She is no longer.
RAIMONDO: Dolente Vergin, che geme sull' urna recente Di cara madre, al talamo potria Volger io sguardo? Ah! rispettiam quel core Che, traffitto dal duol, schivo è d'amore.	RAYMOND: A sorrowing Maiden, who mourns over the tomb of a parent, A dear loved mother, say how can you suppose She'll think of marriage? Ah, respect that heart Which, enslaved by grief, dreams not of love.
NORMANDO: Schivo d' amor! Lucia D' amore avvampa!	NORMAN: Dreams not of love? You're fearfully mistaken.
ENRICO: Che favelli?	HENRY: What are you saying?
RAIMONDO: (Oh, detto!)	RAYMOND: (I tremble.)
NORMANDO: M'ascolta. Ella sen gia colà Del parco nel solingo vial Dove la madre giace sepolta— Impetuoso toro Ecco su lor s'avventa— Quando per l'aria sibilar si sente Un colpo, e al suol repente Cade la belva—	NORMAN: But listen. Lucy some few weeks ago. Was walking home alone in the park. As she was passing near her mother's tomb. A furious bull pursued her; Death at that time seemed certain, When through the still air came the short, sharp ring Of a rifle; the ball sped truly; The bull fell lifeless.
ENRICO: E chi vibrò quel colpo?	HENRY: And who was he that saved her?
NORMANDO: Tal—che il suo nome ricopri d'un vela	NORMAN: One who in mystery still enshrouds himself.
ENRICO: Lucia, forse—	HENRY: And you think Lucy—
NORMANDO: L'amò!	NORMAN: She loves him!
ENRICO: Dunque il rivide?	HENRY: Then they have met since?
NORMANDO: Ogni alba!	NORMAN: Each morning.
ENRICO: E dove?	HENRY: Say where?
NORMANDO: In quel viale.	NORMAN: By that fountain.
ENRICO: Io fremo! Nè tu scopristi il seduttor:	HENRY: I tremble; Do you know the vile seducer's name?
NORMANDO: Sospetto Io n'ho soltanto—	NORMAN: Shrewdly I have suspicions—
ENRICO: Ah, parla!	HENRY: Proceed! speak!

NORMANDO: E tuo nemico!

RAIMONDO: (Oh, Ciel!)

NORMANDO: Tu lo detesti!

ENRICO: Esser potrebbe—Edgardo?

NORMANDO: Ah, lo dicesti!

ENRICO: Cruda, funesta smania tu m'hai svegliato in petto! è troppo, è troppo orribile, questo fatal sospetto! Mi fa gelare e fremere! solleva in fronte il crin, ah! mi fa gelare e fremere solleva in fronte, solleva in fronte il crin! Colma di tanto ob brobrio chi suora a me nascea! Ah! pria che d'amor si perfido a me svelarti rea se ti colpisse un fulmine, se ti colpisse un fulmine, fora menrio fora menrio dolor ah, fora menrio fora menrio fora menrio dolor.

NORMANDO: Pietoso al tuo decoro,
Io fu con te crudel!

RAIMONDO: La tua clemenza imploro!
Tu lo smentisci, o Ciel!

SCENA III

Coro di Cacciatori, e detti.

CORO: (entrandi). Il tuo dubbio è omai certezza.

NORMANDO: Odi tu?

ENRICO: Narrate!

RAIMONDO: (Oh, giorno!)

CORO: Como venti da stanchezza
Dupo lungo errare intorno,
Noi posammo della torre
Nel vesti bole cadente.
Ecco tosto lo trascorre
In silenzio un uom palente
Come appresoo ei n'è venuto,
Ravvisiam lo scono sciuto,
Ei su rapido destriero
S'involoò dal nostro guardo.
Qual s'appella un falconiero
Ne apprendeva qual s'appella.

ENRICO: E quale?

CORO: Edgardo!

ENRICO: Egli? Oh rabbia che m'accendi!
Contenerti un cor non può!

RAIMONDO: Ah no, non credere? no, no—
Deh sospendi—Ma—

ENRICO: No, no!

RAIMONDO: M'odi!

ENRICO: Udir non vuò.

NORMAN: That it is an enemy!

RAYMOND: (Oh, heaven!)

NORMAN: One you detest!

HENRY: Say who you mean. Is it Edgar?

NORMAN: Ah! You have named him!

HENRY: Each nerve with fury trembles at these dark thoughts you've awakened too frightful! too horrible! Say that you're mistaken! My blood congealed with rage freeze, And stagnant stands each vein, ah! My very blood congealed with rage freezes and stagnant, and stagnant stands each vein! Brother's counsel slighted, A sister's honor blighted! Ah! your black and matchless perfidy full soon shall be requited, On his head fall heaven's thunderbolt, On his head fall heaven's thunderbolt, Who our lineage, who our lineage would stain, Ah, who our lineage, who lineage, our lineage would stain.

NORMAN: It was cure for your wounded honor
That made me give you pain!

RAYMOND: Heaven, calm his angry feeling,
This fury now restrain!

SCENE III

Chorus of Hunters, and the above

CHORUS: Your suspicions are now confirmed.

NORMAN: Do you hear?

HENRY: Proceed!

RAYMOND: Oh, dark hour!

CHORUS: Long we wandered over the mountain,
Searched each cleft around the fountain,
Dale and hill, and vale and bower,
Until we reached the ruined tower.
There we saw a man who silently strode
From out the portal; mounting
Straight his steed, he rapidly rode Down the valley, at a bound
The torrent clearing.
Then like lightning disappearing.
From a falconer passing near us
We the intruder's name demanded.

HENRY: Who was it?

CHORUS: It was Edgar.

HENRY: Edgar? Ah, vengeance!
What deadly fury fires me.
Thus he dares to brave me!

RAYMOND: Ah, not believe it yet—
Suspend your anger—Lucy—

HENRY: No, no!

RAYMOND: Hear me!

HENRY: I'll hear no more!

ENRICO AND CHORUS: La pietade in suo favore miti sensi invan mi detta Se mi parli di vendetta solo in tenderti potrò! Sciagurati! il mio furore già su voi tremendo rugge, l'empia fiamma che vi strugge io colsangue spegnero, io col sangue, io col sangue l'empia fiamma che vi strugge spegnerò, spegnerò, col sangue spegnerò, l'empia fiamma chei vi strugge, l'empia fiamma che vi strugge io col sangue spegnerò, si, spegnerò, si, si, col sangue spegnerò, si, spegnerò, si, spegnerò, spegnerò, spegnerò, col sangue spegnerò.

NORMANDO E CORO: Quell' indegno al nuovo albore
L'iro tua fuggir non può.
(Ahi! qual nube di terrore Questa casa circondò!)
(Partone.)

SCENA IV

Parco. LUCIA ed ALISA.

LUCIA: Ancor non giunse!

ALISA: Incauta a che mi traggi?
Avventurarti or che il fratel qui venne
E folle ardir!

LUCIA: Ben parli. Edgardo sappia
Qual ne circonda orribile periglio!

ALISA: Perchè d' intorno il ciglio
Volgi alterrita?

LUCIA: Quella fonte, ah!
Mai senza temar non veggo.
Ah tulo sai; un Ravenswood ardende
Di geloso furor, l'amata donna
Colà trafisse; e l' infelice cadde
Nell' onda ed ivi rimanca sepolta.
M'apparve l'ombra sua.

ALISA: Che dici?

LUCIA: Ascolta.

LUCIA: Regnava nel silenzio alta la notte bruna, colpia la fonte un pallido raggio di te tra Luna, quando un sommesso gemito fra l'aureudir si fê, ed ecco, ecco su quel margine l'ombra mostrarsi, l'ombra mostrarsi a me, ah! qual di chi parla muoversi il labbro suo vedea, e con la manoesanime chiamarmia separea; stette un momento immobile, poi ratta dile gnò e l'onda pria si limpida di sangue rosseggiò, si, pria si, limpida di sangue rosseggio, si, pria si, limpida, ah, di rosseggio.
Ah, il pressagio orenda
E questa cancellar,
Dovrei dal petto
Il fatale amato oggnetto ma nol pos-

HENRY AND CHORUS: From my bosom all fear I banish, From my breast now mercy shall banish, For the wrongs this man has wrought me, Nothing but his blood can repay! Every pulse for revenge wildly bounding. Every nerve is strung to madness, And despair, with deadly fury, now to vengeance points the way, vengeance points the way. Nothing but blood my hate can allay, And despair with deadly fury unto vengeance points the way, Yes, points the way, Despair to vengeance points the way, Yes, despair points the way.

NORMAN AND CHORUS: He, your foe, can never escape you,
Let that thought allay your rage.
(Over your house dark clouds do lower
On this inauspicious day.)
(Exeunt.)

SCENE IV

A park. Enter LUCY AND ALICE.

LUCY: Still, still he does not come!

ALICE: You dare much in venturing here;
Think, should your brother suspect, or discover, anything
Your doom would be dark.

LUCY: It is too true! Ah, Edgar does not know
What fearful perils, what dangers circle round me!

ALICE: Why did you turn toward the fountain
That glance of terror!

LUCY: Yonder fountain! ah! Alice,
Whenever I behold it
Dark fears oppress me! A Ravenswood here
By jealousy inspired with mad fury.
His dear loved lady most foully murdered,
And she unhappy in those dark waters
Was cast, and there did find a sepulchre.
Her shade has once appeared to me.

ALICE: What are your saying?

LUCY: Dear Alice, ah, listen.

LUCY: Silence over all was reigning, Dark was the night and lowering, And over the fountain her pallid ray Yonder pale moon was pouring, Faintly a sharp but stifled sigh Fell on my startled ear, And straightway upon that same fountain's brink, The spectre did appear, spectre did appear, ah! Fast fixed it kept its bloodless lip, No further sound emitting, But slow on high its phantom hand, Threatening it did uprear, Stood for a moment immovable, Then vanished from my view, While that pure and limpid stream, had changed its hue to blood, While that pure limpid stream ah, had changed its hue.

so,
Egli è una luce e conforto al mio penar.

LUCIA: Quando rapita in estasi del più cocente ardore col favellar del core mi guira eterna fe gli affanni miei dimentico gioja di viene il pianto, parmi, che a lui d'accanto si schiuda il ciel per me si schiuda il ciel per me si schiuda il ciel per me a lui d'accanto si schiuda il ciel perme ah! si schiuda il ciel, il ciel per me, si, si, a lui d'accanto parche si schiuda il ciel per me.

ALISA: Egli s'avanza! La vicina soglia
Io cauta veglierò.

SCENA V

EDGARDO E LUCIA.

EDGARDO: Lucia perdona
Se ad ora inusitata
Io vederti chiedea—
Ragion possente a ciò mi trasse.
Pria che in Ciel biancheggi
L'alba novella, delle patrie sponde
Luncicarò.

LUCIA: Che dici?

EDGARDO: Pe' Franchi lidi amici
Sciolgo le vele—ivi trattar m'è dato
Le sorti della Scozia.

LUCIA: E me nel pianto
Abbandoni cosi?

EDGARDO: Pria di lasciarti
Ashton mi vegga—stenderè placato
A lui la destra, e la tua destra, pegno
Fra noi di pace, chiederò.

LUCIA: Che ascolto?
Ah, no! Rimanga nel silenzio avvolte .
Per or l'arcano affetto.

EDGARDO: Intendo. Di mia stirpe
Il reo persecutore
Ancor pago non è. Mi tolse il padre.
Il mio retaggio avito—nè basta?
Che brama ancor?
Quel cor feroce e rio?
La mia perdita intera? il sangue mio
Ei m'odia!

LUCIA: Ah, no!

EDGARDO: M'abborre!

LUCIA: Calma! Oh, Ciel, quell' ira estrema!

EDGARDO: Fiamma ardente in sen mi corre!
M'odi.

Oh, what horrid presage
Is this? I ought to banish the fatal, Loved object, from my heart, but I cannot, No, I cannot; it is my life,
And comfort to my suffering.

LUCY: Then swift as thought up cleared the sky, Out shone the stars with brilliance, Soft sighted the breeze, and from on high The moon poured forth her light, All nature seemed in smiles to sleep, Unto my wandering sight, And heaven, in ten-fold splendor Enrobed then the waning night, Heaven robed then the waning night, ah! in tenfold splendor robed the night, Ah, yes, in splendor robed the night, Heaven in splendor robed the night.

ALICE: At length he comes! Concealed behind the foliage
I'll keep a careful watch.
(Exit Alice.)

SCENE V

EDGAR AND LUCY

EDGAR: My Lucy, your pardon
That past the hour appointed
I've delayed our meeting.
Most powerful reasons detained me!
On the coming morn, love.
Before the break of dawn, I must depart my home and country.

LUCY: What are you saying?

EDGAR: To France I bend my steps, love!
Business of moment calls me early from you
Scotland needs my service!

LUCY: And unto misery
You abandon me!

EDGAR: Yet before I leave you
I'll seek your brother; to him in truth and friendship
This hand I'll tender, and as a pledge of peace
Between our houses I'll ask of him yours!

LUCY: What am I hearing?
Ah, no, I pray. In secrecy and silence
Still let our love be concealed!

EDGAR: I comprehend you. Your fell brother, My dark, relentless foe, Still yearns for blood, and will not forego vengeance. He killed my father,
He has taken away my heritage!
What more? That heart Ferocious, what would it? My entire utter ruin?
He'd take my life! Yes, he hates me!

LUCY: Ah, no!

EDGAR: Abhors me!

LUCY: Calm, oh, calm this fearful passion!

EDGAR: Deadly fury inflames my heart!
Hear me!

LUCIA: Edgardo!

EDGARDO: M'odi, e trema!
Sulla tomba che rinserra
Il tradito genitore,
Al tuo sangue eterna guerra
Io giurai nel mio furore!
Ma ti vidi, in cor mi nacque
Altro affetto, e l'ira tacque.
Pur quel voto non è infranto—
Io potrei compirlo ancor!

LUCIA: Deh, ti placa! deh, ti frena!
Può tradirne un solo accento!
Non ti basti la mia pena!
Vuoi ch'io mora di spavento?
Ceda, ceda ogn' altro affetto,
Solo amor t'infiammi il petto!
Ah, il più nobile, il più santo
De tuoi voti è un puro amor!

EDGARDO: Qui, di sposa eterna fede
Qui mi giura, al Cielo innante!
Dio ci ascolta, Dio ci vede!
Tempio ed ara è un core amante.
Al tuo fato unisco il mio:
Son tuo sposo!

LUCIA: E tua son io!
A' miei voti amore invoco!
A' miei voti invoco il Ciel!
Ah soltanto il nostro foco
Spegnerà di morte il gel.

EDGARDO: Separarci omai conviene.

LUCIA: Oh, parola a me funesta!
Il mio cor con te ne viene!

EDGARDO: Il mio cor con te qui resta!

LUCIA: Ah, talor del tuo pensiero
Venga un goflio messaggia
E la vita fuggitiva
Di speranza nudrirò!

EDGARDO: Io di te memoria viva
Sempre, o cara, serberò!

LUCIA: Verrano là sull' aure i miei sospiri ardenti, udrai nel mar che mormora l'eco de' miei lamenti, pensando ch'io di gemiti mi pasco e di dolor, spargi un amara lagrima su' questo pegno allor, ah! su questo pegno allor, ah, sù questo pegno allor, ah! su quel pegno allor. Ah! si, su quel pegno allor, Edgardo. Il tuo scritto sempre viva la memoria in meterrà! Ah! verranno a te sull'aure i tuoi sospiri ardenti udro nel marche mormora l'eco de tuoi lamenti pensando che di gemiti mi pascoe di dolor. Spargi su questo pegno allor, ah! Su questo pegno allor. Ah! su questo pegno allor. Ah! questo pegno allor.

LUCY: My Edgar!

EDGAR: Hear me, and tremble!
By this lone tomb, over the cold grave Where my father's bones lie molding, I swore to wage eternal warfare with your kin, to the death.
Ah! when I saw you my heart relented Of my dark vow I half repented;
But my oath remains unbroken,
Still I've power to redeem my gage.

LUCY: Ah! pray calm yourself; ah, restrain yourself; Think what misery will soon enthrall me; I can scarce from fear sustain me;
Would you have me die with terror?
Yield yield to the dictates of affection. It is a nobler, purer passion,
Let that thought your wrath assuage.

EDGAR: Here, then! here in the eye of heaven Swear, your true faith is given to me, Him above, who sees and hears us,
Witness these mutual vows of love!
Your fate forever united with mine!
You are mine love!

LUCY: Yes, I am yours, love.
You who see us, You who hear us,
Witness these our vows of love!
Power eternal, oh, grant your blessing,
Look down kindly from above.

EDGAR: Now at length we must part, love!

LUCY: That word falls heavy on my heart, love,
this heart will bear with you.

EDGAR: Mine will stay forever with you!

LUCY: Ah! you will not fail to write me?
Each dear letter you send me,
Each fond word you indite me,
will cheer many a lonely hour.

EDGAR: A cherished memory of you,
Dearest, shall ever be treasured.

LUCY: My sighs shall be borne on the balmy breeze That wafts here, love; Each murmuring wave shall echo how I do mourn your absence, love! Ah! think of me when far away, with nothing to cheer my heart, I shall bedew each thought of you with many a bitter tear! Ah! with many a bitter tear Ah! with many a bitter tear! Ah! many a bitter. Ah! with many a bitter tear, Edgar. Ah! You will not fail to write me, many a lonely hour will cheer; Ah! my sighs shall be borne on the balmy breeze that wafts here, love; Each murmuring wave shall echo make how I your absence do mourn, love! Ah! think of me when far away, with nothing my heart to cheer; Ah! dear love! with many a bitter tear, ah! with many a bitter tear, ah, ah, many a bitter tear!

EDGARDO: Verrano a te sull' aure i miei sospiri ardenti; udrai nel mar che mormora l'eco de miei lamenti pensando ch'io di gemiti mi pasco e di dolor, spargi un amara lagrima su questo pegno allor, ah! su questo pegno allor! Ah! su questo pegno allor; ah, su quel pegno allor. Ah! si! si, si, Lucia, si, si! ah! verrano a te sull' aure i miei sospiri ardenti, udrai nel marche mormora l'eco de miei lamenti! spargi un amara lagrima su questo pegno allor, ah! su questo pegno allor, ah! su questo pegno allor, ah! questo pegno allor.

NORMANDO: Non temer; la lunga assenza Del tuo nemico—i fogli Da noi rapiti e la bugiarda nuova Ch'egli s'accese di altra fiamma—in core di Lucia spegneranno il cieco amore.

ENRICO: Ella s'avanza! Il simulato foglio Porgimi; ed esci sulla via che tragge Alla città regina Di Scozia; e qui fra plausi e liete grida Conduci Arturo.
(Parte Normando.)

ENRICO e LUCIA

ENRICO: Appressati, Lucia.
Sperai più lieta in questo di vederti,
In questo di, che d'imeneo le faci
Si accendono per te. Mi guardi e taci?

LUCIA: Il pallor funesto orrendo che ricopre il volto mio ti rimprovero tacendo il mio strazio il mio dolore perdonare ti possa un Dio l'inumano tuo rigor, perdonar ti possa un Dio, ah, l'i numano tuo rigor, l'inumano tuo rigor, il tuo rigor, il tuo rigor e il mio dolor.

Ma si taccia del passato—
Tuo fratello io sono ancor;
Spenta è l'ira nel mio petto—
Spegni tu l'insano amor.
Nobil sposo—

LUCIA: Cessa! ah, cessa!
Ad altr' uom giurai la fè.

ENRICO: Nol potevi.

LUCIA: Enrico!

ENRICO: Basti!
Questo foglio appien ti dice,
Qual crudel, qual empio amasti

LUCIA: Il core mi balzò!

ENRICO: Tu vacilli!

LUCIA: Me infelice!
(Legge.)
Ahi la folgore piombò!

LUCIA: Soffriva nel pianto, languia nel dolore, la speme la vita riposi in un cor l'istante di morte e giunto per me quel core infedele ad altra ad altra si die!

ENRICO: Un folle t'acsese un perfido core tradisti il tuo sangue per vil sedetore ma degna del cielo ne avesti mercede quel core in fedele ad altra si die un folle t'accese un perfido amore tradisti il tuo sangue per vil seduttore, ma degna del cielo ne avesti merce quel core infedele quel core infedele ad altra si diè, ad altra si diè, si, si, si diè, ad altra, ad altra ad altra si diè.

(Gridi al di fuori.)

LUCIA: Che fia?

ENRICO: Suonar di giubilio
Odi la riva?

LUCIA: Ebbene?

ENRICO: Giunge il tuo sposo!

LUCIA: Un brivido
Mi corse per le vene!
Tremo!

EDGAR: The balmy breeze that bears your sigh, will waft one back from me, love; The murmuring waves reechoing still I'm ever constant to you love, Ah! think of me when far away with nothing to cheer my heart, I shall, bedew each thought of you with many a bitter tear! END OF THE FIRST ACT.

■ ACT II

SCENE I

An Apartment. HENRY and NORMAN.

NORMAN: Your sister will shortly now be here.

HENRY: I tremble
To meet her. The nuptial guests are fast assembling!
Within the castle my noble friends and kinsmen
Wait now to greet the bridegroom: for Arthur only
We wait! Should she still pertinaciously persist In opposing—

NORMAN: Have no fear! She mourns his long absence, the letters
We've intercepted, and the false news you'll tell her,
Will quench all hope that may linger.
Believing Edgar faithless, love will vanish, from her bosom.

HENRY: See, she approaches! You have that forged letter,
Give it to me—Now hurry to the northern entrance,
There keep watch, and wait
The approach of Arthur, and with all speed, on his arrival
Conduct him here!
(Exit Norman.)

SCENE II

HENRY AND LUCY.

HENRY: Draw nearer, my Lucy,
On this fair morn accept a brother's greeting!
May this glad day, sacred to love and Hymen,
Prove auspicious to you. Do you hear me? You're silent!

LUCY: See these cheeks so pale and haggard, See these features so worn with sadness! Do they not betray too plainly all, my anguish, All my despair, too? May you, not vainly, ask pardon from Heaven, for this your inhuman constraint, Pardon may you ask from Heaven for your inhuman, cruel constraint, This harsh, inhuman, cruel constraint, cruel constraint!

HENRY: Cease this wild recrimination,
To both of us degrading.
Of the past be silent!
I, your brother will make no further complaint!
My anger has flown! Banish your dejection,
Buried be all that could taint your honor
A noble husband—

LUCY: Cease to urge me!
I have sworn to another true faith.

HENRY: To another!

LUCY: My brother!

HENRY: It is well!
By this letter you may see
How he keeps his faith with you.
Read it!
(Hands her a letter.)

LUCY: How beats my fluttering heart!

HENRY: You falter—

LUCY: Ah! great Heaven!
(Reads.)
Break, poor heart!

LUCY: My sufferings and sorrows I've borne without repining, I hoped with tomorrow some comfort might dawn! All's lost now, forsaken, deserted, forlorn, My last hope departed, my true love, my love turned to scorn.

HENRY: Your name you disgraced, your blood you debased, your love he disdains. Yourself he defames, The judgment of Heaven at length overtakes you, Your race's dark foeman treats you with scorn. Yes, yes, with scorn, he treats you, he treats you, he treats you with scorn!

LUCY: Ah me, my sufferings and sorrows I bore unrepining, I hoped that tomorrow some comfort might dawn All's lost now! forsaken, deserted, forlorn! My last hope departed, My love treated with scorn, Ah, my love turned to scorn! Deserted, forlorn, deserted, forsaken, deserted, forlorn.
(Noise heard without.)

LUCY: What am I hearing?

HENRY: Those sounds of gladness
Tell the arrival—

LUCY: Of whom?

HENRY: Your destined husband.

LUCY: Through every vein
My blood seems to be congealing.
I tremble!

ENRICO: A te appresta il talamo.

LUCIA: La tomba a me s'appresta!

ENRICO: Ora fatale è questa!
Spento è Guglielmo ascendere
Vedremo il tron Maria.
Prostrata è nella polvere
La parte ch'io seguia;
Dal precipizio solo
Arturo può salvarmi sol egli.

LUCIA: Ed Io—

ENRICO: Salvarmi
Devi—

LUCIA: Enrico!

ENRICO: Vieni allo sposo.

ENRICO: Ad altri giurai.

ENRICO: Devi salvarmi?

LUCIA: Ma—

ENRICO: Il devi!

LUCIA: Oh, Ciel!

ENRICO: Se tradirmi tu potrai,
La mia sorte è già compita
Tu m' involi onore e vita:
Tu la scure appresti a me!
Ne' tuoi sogni mi vedrai
Ombra irata e minacciosa.
Quella scure sanguinosa
Starà sempre innanzi a te.

LUCIA: Tu, che vedi il pianto mio,—
Tu, che leggi in questo core,—
Se respinto il mie dolore,
Come in terra. in Ciel non è!
Tu mi togli, eterno Iddio!
Questa vita disperata!
Io son tanta sventurata,
Che la morte è un ben per me!
(Partone.)

SCENA III

LUCIA & RAIMONDO.

LUCIA: Ebben?

RAIMONDO: Di tua speranza
L'ultimo raggio tramontò.
Credei al tuo sospetto
Che il fratel chiudesse
Tutte le strade, onde sul Franco suolo,
All uom che amar giurasti
Non guingesser tue nuove;
Io stesso un foglio date vergato,
Per secura mano; recarglifeci
In vano! Tace mai sempre—
Quel silenzio assai d'infideltà ti parlà!

LUCIA: E me consigli?

RAIMONDO: Di piegarti al destino.

LUCIA: E il giuramento?

HENRY: The marriage rites await you now!

LUCY: I would rather the dark grave be my refuge!

HENRY: Oh, fatal hour of dark despair!
Hear me. The late rebellion
I was one who secretly abetted;
To Arthur, for my present safety
I'm alone indebted!
He from a foul, a traitor's doom,
Alone has power to save me.

LUCY: And I then?

HENRY: You must
Wed him.

LUCY: My brother!

HENRY: Come to the altar.

LUCY: I love another.

HENRY: Still do you falter?

LUCY: But—

HENRY: To the altar!

LUCY: Oh, heaven!

HENRY: I'm your guardian, dare you to brave me?
I'm your brother—will you save me?
From your hands my sister,
Must I meet a traitor's doom?
See the axe, by one thread hanging;
Hark; the deep-toned deathbell clanging.
Has affection lost all power?
Will you consign me to the tomb?

LUCY: I'm your sister, do you love me!
I am dying, will that move you!
From your hands my brother,
Must I meet now this dreadful doom!
Hopeless misery all surrounding,
Even while the marriage bell is sounding;
Fear and hate will be my dower;
Better had I wed the tomb.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE III

Corridor. LUCY and RAYMOND.

LUCY: Your news?

RAYMOND: Hope has departed,
Even the last faint ray has fled!
Believing as you suspect.
That perchance your brother,
His ends to answer, your notes had intercepted,
And bared all correspondence
Between you and young Edgar,
I took your letter! I sent it to France
By secure conveyance. He did receive it
Five weeks since! Still is he silent!
It is too certain that he has proved unfaithful to you.

LUCY: What do you counsel?

RAYMOND: To submit to your destiny.

LUCY: The oath I pledged him?

RAIMONDO: Tu pur veneggi!
I nuziati voti
Che il ministro di Dio non bene,
Nè il ciel nè il mondo riconosce.

LUCIA: Ah! cede persuasa la mente,
Ma sordo alla ragion resisto il core.

RAIMONDO: Vincerlo è forza.

LUCIA: Oh sventurato amore!

RAIMONDO: Ah, cedi, o più sciagure
Ti sovra stanti infe'ice,
Per te venere mie cure
Per l'estinta genitrice,
Il periglio d' un fratello
Deh ti muova e cangi il cor!
O la madre nell' avello
Fremerà per te d'orror.

LUCIA: Taci—

RAIMONDO: Cedi—

LUCIA: Ah, vincerti.
Non son tano suatuarata.

RAIMONDO: Oh! qual giosa; in me tu dest!
Oh qual nube hai dissipata!
Al ben de' tuoi vittima
Offri, Lucia, te stessa,
E tanto sagrifizio
Scritto nel ceil sarà,
Se la pietà degli uomini
A te non fia concessa,
V' è un Dio, che tergere
Il pianto tuo saprà.

LUCIA: Guidami tu, tu reggime
Son fuori, di me stessa!

SCENA IV

ENRICO, ARTURO, NORMANDO; Cavalieri & Dame congiunti di Ashton; Paggi, Armigeri; Abitanti di Lammermoor, e Domestici.

CHORUS: Per te d'immenso giubilo tuto s'avviva intorno, per te veggiam rinascera della speranza il giorno, qui l'amistà ti guida, qui ti conduce amore tutto ravviva intorno qui ti conduce amor, qual astro in notte infida qual riso nell dolor,—qual astro in notte infida qual riso nel dolor.

ARTURO: Per poco fra le tenebre
Sparsi la vostra stella,
Io la farò risorgere
Più fulgida e più bella,
La man mi porgi Enrico,
Ti stringi a questo cor,

RAYMOND: You talk wildly—
The holy nuptial vow
Through the priest can alone be sworn, at the altar,
Nor heaven nor man holds anything else binding.

LUCY: Ah, cease, pray; though my mind you're convinced,
Still deaf to reason's voice my heart resists!

RAYMOND: Be firm and conquer!

LUCY: What utter misery awaits me!

RAYMOND: Ah, resign yourself to your destiny calmly.
Horrors greater far will else befall you;
Incline yourself to the voice of affection
From her grave your mother calls you.
Save your brother from this peril.
It is a parent that implores.
See the angry shade uprise before you.
Mark the blood-stained scaffold drenched with gore.

LUCY: Cease—

RAYMOND: Save him!

LUCY: You have conquered.
I will act as you require.

RAYMOND: O what rapture! Confide in me
Every cloud now disappears
This your heroic sacrifice,
Laid on the shrine of duty,
Shall be by holy angels
Recorded in heaven above.
Though man may not regard it,
Though earth may not reward it,
Your Maker who rules your destiny marks this deed of love.

LUCY: Guide me, support me,
You have conquered, I confide in you!

SCENE IV

HENRY, ARTHUR, NORMAN; Knights and Ladies related to Ashton; Pages, Squires; Inhabitants of Lammermoor, and Domestics.

CHORUS: Hope brightly beams before you now, Ah, day of joy and gladness. Heaven sheds its sunlight over you now, No more of grief or sadness. Dark though the clouds did gather round, Fierce the storm did lower, Each dreaded portent banishing, Love reasserts his power. Your star, but so late declining, Rises with tenfold glory, It is shining radiantly forth, In this thrice happy hour.

ARTHUR: My friend, I joy to meet you;
As brother here I greet you!
Ever may this, our union
In friendship's bonds combining,
In friendship's bonds entwining,

A te ne vengo amico, fratello, e defensor
Dov' è Lucia?

ENRICO: Qui guingere or la vedrem.
Se in lei soverchia è la mestizia,
Ma ravigliarti non dei
Dal duolo oppressa e vinta
Piange la madre estinta.

ARTURO: M'è noto. Orsolvo un dubbio
Famo suonò, ch' Edgardo
Sovr' essa temerario
Alzare osò lo sguardo.

ENRICO: E vero, quel folle ardia, ma—

CORO: S' avvanza a te Lucia!
(Entra Lucia.)

ENRICO: Piange la madre estinta.
Eco il tuo sposo. (Incauta!
Perdermi vuoi!)

LUCIA: Gran Dio!

ARTURO: Ti piaccia i voti accogliere
Del tenero amor mio!

ENRICO: Omai si compia il rito—T'appressa!

ARTURO: Oh dolce invito!

LUCIA: (Io vado al sacrifizio!)

RAIMONDO: (Reggi, buon Dio, l'afflitta!)

ENRICO: Non esitar!

LUCIA: (Me misera!
La mia condanna ho scritta!)

ENRICO: (Respiro!)

LUCIA: (Io gelo ed ardo!
Io manco!)

TUTTI: Qual fragor!
Chi giunge?

SCENA V

EDGARDO, LUCIA, servi e detti.

EDGARDO: Edgardo!

LUCIA: Edgardo!
Oh, fulmine!

GLI ALTRI: Oh, terror!

EDGARDO: Chi mi frena in tal momento, chi troncò dell'ire il corso? Il suo duolo il suo spavento son la prova, son la prova d'un rimorso! Ma qual rosa ina ridita, ella sta fra morte e vita! Io son vinto son commosso! T'amo ingrata, t'amo ingrata, t'amo ancor!

ENRICO: Chi mi frena il mio furore, e la manche al brando corso? Della misera in favore nel mio petto un grido corse! E mio sangue! L'ho

Prove prosperous to you;
This hand I give shall henceforth be your defender.
But where is Lucy?

HENRY: Shortly now will she be here.
If she in tears perchance appears;
I pray you pardon her demeanor;
Her mother's death she mourns,
By grief her heart is torn.

ARTHUR: It is well, One thing tell me.
Fame says that young Edgar
Some months since, with mad presumption's boldness,
Of you did ask her hand—

HENRY: It is true he had that boldness, but—

CHORUS: See, Lucy comes!
(Enter Lucy.)

HENRY: Still for our mother weeping?
There stands your husband—Ingrate!
(Would he be my ruin?)

LUCY: Great Heaven!

ARTHUR: Your lover kneels before you,
Lowly at your feet.

HENRY: Do you hear, girl? Approach,
And sign your dower. We wait thee.

ARTHUR: Oh, blissful hour!

LUCY: (I go to the sacrifice!)

RAYMOND: (Heaven shield her in this trying hour.)

HENRY: (You know my power.)—
Sign it!

LUCY: Ah, misery! (She signs.)
It is done! I have signed it.

HENRY: (I breathe again!)

LUCY: (My blood seems turned to ice.
All is over!)

CHORUS: What does this mean?
Who comes?

SCENE V

EDGAR and the above.

EDGAR: It is Edgar!

LUCY: Edgar!
Oh, hide me, earth!

CHORUS: Fearful hour!

EDGAR: Instant vengeance, what restrains What stays my sword in scabbard? Is it affection that still remains And each angry thought, each angry thought enchains. Of your own blood you're betrayer! Now, between life and death she stands Ah! despair, my heart does wither, Yet, ungrateful one, I love you, yes, I love you still!

HENRY: Instant vengeance, what restrains What stays my sword in scabbard? Is it affection still remains And each angry, dark thought tradita, ella sta fra morte e vita! Ah! Che spegnere non posso i rimorsi del mio core, del mio cor!

LUCIA: (Io sperai che e me la vita
Tronca avesse il mio spavento;
Ma la morte non m'aita—
Vivo ancor per mio tormento!
Da' miei lumi cadde il velo—
Mi tradi la terra e il Cielo!
Vorrei pianger, ma non posso;
Ah! mi manca il pianto ancor!)

RAIMONDO: (Qual terribil momento!
Più formar non so parole;
Densa nube di spavento
Par che copra i rai del sole.
Come rosa inaridita
Ella sta fra morte e vita!
Chi per lei non è commosso
Ha di tigre in petto il cor.)

ENRICO, ARTURO, NORMANDO E CAVALIERI: T' allontana! sciagurato,
O il tuo sangue fia versato.

EDGARDO: Morizò; ma insiem col mio
Altro sangue scorrerà.

RAIMONDO: Rispettate in me di Dio
La tremenda maestà!
In suo nome io vel comando,
Deponete l'ira e il brando.
Pace, pace;—egli abborrisce
L'omicida, e scritto sta—
Chi di ferro altrui ferisce,
Pur di ferro perirà.

ENRICO: Ravenswood in queste porte
Chi ti guida?

EDGARDO: La mia sorte!
Il mio dritto; si, Lucia
La sua fede a me giurò!

RAIMONDO: Questo amor per sempre obblia
Alla è d'altri.

EDGARDO: D'altri! ah, no!

RAIMONDO: Mira!

EDGARDO: Tremi, ti confindi!
Son tue ciffre? A me rispondi!
Son tue ciffre?

LUCIA: Si!

EDGARDO: Riprendi
Il tuo pegno, infido cor!
Il mio dammi.

LUCIA: Almen—

enchains. Of my own blood I'm betrayer! Now, between life and death she stands Ah! despair her heart does wither, And remorse, it fills my heart, it fills my heart.

LUCY: (I had hoped that death had found me,
And in his drear fetters bound me,
But he does not come to relive me!
Ah! of life will none bereave me?
Still in dark despair I languish,
For nothing to hope but ceaseless anguish;
Even tears mine eyes abandon,
My cup of woe to fill.)

RAYMOND: (Time, you have wrought your worst, terrible moment, sense no longer has mastery over words;
Dense and impervious clouds of fear are seen,
As threatening even the brilliance of the sun,
Ah! like a rose that withers on the stem,
She now is hovering between death and life!
He who feels for he, no pity
Has the heart of a tiger.

HENRY, ARTHUR, NORMAN, AND CHORUS: You traitor, be gone!
Before our rage overwhelms us!

EDGAR: Dare advance one single step,
And other blood with mine shall flow!

RAYMOND: Stay, rash, impious men, forego your sinful purposes
I stand here, a servant of heaven
In your Maker's name, I command.
Sheathe your weapons! Know that the murderer
He abhors! What does His work say?
"He that wields the sword in anger
By the sword shall be laid low,"

HENRY: Vile intruder, say what you see within these walls.

EDGAR: I came here
for my bride. Your sister has sworn her faith to me.

RAYMOND: You must relinquish
all hope of her.
She's another's!

EDGAR: Another's? no!

RAYMOND: Read!
(to Lucy).

EDGAR: You tremble? Are you confounded?
Did you write this? I wait for your answer!
Did you write this?

LUCY: Yes.

EDGAR: You behold
This token? Perfidious heart!
I return it.

LUCY: Ah, no—

EDGARDO: Lo rendi! Hai tradito il Cielo e amor! Maledetto sia l'istante Che di te mi resi amante! Stirpe iniqua, abbominata— Io dovea da te fuggir! Ah, di Dio la mano irata Ti desperda!	EDGAR: Receive it— You fallen traitress to heaven, to Love, Accursed forever be the day on which I saw you. Blotted from time be that dark hour when first I met you! For your shameless, base desertion, You shall ask pardon vainly from above. May desolation grant your heart despair and anguish!
TUTTI: Insano ardir! Esci, fuggi il furor che m' accende, Solo un punto i suoi colpi sospende, Ma fra poco più atroce più fiero, Sul tuo capo abborrito cadrà!	HENRY AND CHORUS: dare no further. Be gone, before our anger overwhelms us. Be gone, if you regard your life. But a moment the blow is suspended; Tempt us no longer, we bid you, beware!
EDGARDO: Trucidatemi! e pronubo al rito Sia lo scempio d'un core tradito! Del mio sangue bagnata la soglia, Dolce vista per l'empia sarà: Calpestando l'e sangue mia spoglia All' altare più lieta ne andrà.	EDGAR: Strike, the frail strings of life now dividing, At her nuptials my pale corpse presiding. Drain my heart's blood at they wedding banquet. Strike! why do you pause? I'm ready; prepare.
LUCIA: Dio, lo salva! in si fiero momento D' una misera ascolta l' accento. E la prece d' immenso dolore Che più in terra speranza non ha: E l'estrema domanda del core, Che sul labbro spirando mi sta!	LUCY: Heaven, in mercy, oh save him, protect him, And through this fearful danger direct him! By the woe thou hast now heaped upon me, I do implore for him your kindly care. Since you have doomed me to a life of misery, Ah, refuse not my last, my dying prayer.
RAIMONDO, ALISIA E DAME: Infelice, t'invola—t'affretta: I tuoi giorni, il suo stato rispetta. Vivi! e forse il tuo duolo fia spento Tutto è lieve all' eterna pietà. Quante volte ad un solo tormento Mille gioje succeder non fa!	RAYMOND, ALICE AND LADIES: Unhappy man, fly from here—let prudence haste you, Your life, the claims of station, rank, respect. Live! it may be your grief may find an end; All woes must end by never-ending pity, How often is it to a single torture A thousand joys have in their turn succeeded!

■ ACT III

SCENA I

SCENE I

Sala terreno nella terre di Volfureng.	A Room in the Tower of Wolf's Crag.
EDGARDO: Orrida è questa notte Come il destino mio! Si, tuona, o cielo— Imperversate, o turbini—sconvolto Sia l'ardin di natura, e pera il mondo— Io non m' inganno! scalpitar d' appresse Odo un destrier—s' arresta— Chi mai della tempesta Fra le minaccie e l'ire, Chi puote a me venire?	EDGAR: Darkly the night is lowering, Even as is my destiny. Yes! roll on, you thunders! Flash, fierce forked lightning; convulsion, Shake the vast womb of nature, the world overwhelming! Ah! Is it deception? On the hard earth beating I hear a horse's hoof! It stops— Who is it that through the tempest With fierce and threatening gesture Comes at this hour to meet me!

SCENA II

SCENE II

Entra Enrico.	Enter Henry.
ENRICO: Io.	HENRY: It is I.
EDGARDO: Quale ardire!—Ashton!	EDGAR: Ha! what boldness! Ashton!
ENRICO: Si.	HENRY: Yes
EDGARDO: Fra queste mura Osi offrirti al mio cospetto?	EDGAR: Within these drear walls You dare present yourself at this hour.
ENRICO: Io vi sto per tua sciagura. Non venisti nel mio tetto!	HENRY: Does my presence not content you? I do but return your visit!
EDGARDO: Qui del padre ancor s' aggira L'ombra inulta—e par che frema! Morte ogn' aura a te qui spira! Il terren per te qui trema!— Nel varcar la soglia orrenda Ben dovesti palpitar, Come un uom che vivo scenda La sua tomba ad albergar!	EDGAR: See my father's shade uprising, For his wrongs revenge demanding! Death is in the air you breath; Even the earth shakes, trembles, where you're standing, When you did cross the threshold Did your heart not quake with fear, As a living man descending To your tomb with no help near?
ENRICO: Fu condutta al sacra rito, Quindi al talomo Lucia.	HENRY: Even now the bridal chamber Opens for the blooming bride!
EDGARDO: (Ei più squarcia il cor ferito! Oh tormento!—oh gelosia!)	EDGAR: Ah, infuriating this thought! Oh, what torments! what torture!
ENRICO: Ascolta. Di letizia il mio soggiorno, E di plausi rimbombava; Ma più forte al cor d'intorno La vendetta a me parlava! Qui mi trassi—in mezzo ai venti Le sua voce udia tuttor, E il furor degli elementi Rispondeva al mio furor.	HENRY: But listen though the sounds of mirth and gladness. Echoed far and wide around me, Stronger far than ties of pleasure Are the bonds in which hate for you has bound me, Friends, relations, guests forsaking, Flew I straight to meet you here, While the mad and furious tempest Shouted vengeance in my ear.
EDGARDO: Da me che brami?	EDGAR: What has brought you here?
ENRICO: Ascoltami: Onde punir l'offessa, De' miei la spada vindice Pende su te sospesa— Onde punir l'offessa, Ch'altri to spenga? Ah! mai— Chi dee svenarti il sai!	HENRY: You now shall hear. Think of the wrongs you have done me, And dare not to falter or shun me; Words were too poor to express them— This arm alone can redress them! I give you defiance to death— Nothing else can wipe away the stain.
EDGARDO: So che al paterno cenere Giurai strapparti il core.	EDGAR: By my dead father's ashes, Your heart's blood I will drain!
ENRICO: Tu!	HENRY: You!
EDGARDO: Quando?	EDGAR: When shall we meet?
ENRICO: Al primo sorgere del mattutino albore.	HENRY: At earliest dawning of the next approaching day.
EDGARDO: Ove?	EDGAR: Where?
ENRICO: Fra l' urne gelide De Ravenswood.	HENRY: By the icy tombs Of Ravenswood.
EDGARDO: Verrò.	EDGAR: Agreed.

ENRICO: Ivi a restar preparati.

EDGARDO: Ivi t'ucciderò.

EDGARDO AND ENRICO: O sole più ratto a sorger t'appresta ti cinga di sangue ghirlanda funesta con quella rischiara, l'orribile gara d'un odio mortale d'un cieco furore, O sole più ratto risorgi è rischiara d'un odio mortale il cieco, il cieco furor.

SCENA III

Sala.

CORO: D'immenzo giubilo
S'innalzi un grido
Corra di Scozia
Per ogni lido,
E avverta i perfidi
Nostri nemici,
Che più terribili,
Che più felici
Ne rende l'aura
D'alto favor;
Ch' a noi sorridono
Le stelle ancor.

SCENA IV

RAIMONDO, NORMANDO, e detti.

RAIMONDO: Cessi, ah cessi quel contento!

CORO: Sei cosparso di pallore!
Ciel, che rechi?

RAIMONDO: Un fiero evento!

CORO: Tu ne agghiacci di terrore!

RAIMONDO: Dalle stanze ove Lucia
Trassi già col suo consorte,
Un lamento, un grido uscia,
Come d'uom vicino a morte.
Corsi ratto in quelle mura:
Ahi! terribile sciagura!
Steso Arturo al suol giaceva
Muto, freddo, insanguinato;
E Lucia l'acciar stringeva—
Che fu già dei trucidato.
Ella in me le luci affisse:
"Il mio sposo ov' è?" mi disse;
E nel volto suo pallente
Un sorriso balenò.
Infelice! della mente
La virtude a lei mancò!

TUTTI: Oh! qual funesto avvenimento!
Tutti ne ingombra cupo spavento!
Notte, ricopri la ria sventura

HENRY: There you shall join your ancestors.

EDGAR: There too you shall fall.

EDGAR AND HENRY: Oh, haste, crimson morning, Bright sun of the morrow, Let red clouds give warning, Around you of sorrow. Like snails how you linger, slow moments delaying, That long the avenger from vengeance are staying, Oh haste, crimson morning, Bright sun of the morrow, Let the red clouds give the warning Of sorrow around.

SCENE III

Hall in Henry's Castle. Peasants and Domestics of the Castle.

CHORUS: Ah, happy, happy day,
Swell high the choral lay
Through all Scotland,
To all her shores
Tell the wretches,
Our enemies,
That more terrible,
As more happy,
The presence renders us
Of our great joy.
Ah! even the stars themselves
Smile happily down on us.

SCENE IV

Raymond, Norman, and the above.

RAYMOND: Cease, ah, cease these sounds of gladness!

CHORUS: You seem aghast with fear!
What has chanced?

RAYMOND: Horrible event!

CHORUS: You freeze our souls with terror.

RAYMOND: To their chamber the bride and bridegroom
Scarce a moment had departed,
When a shriek came, a cry of anguish!
As a man in death throes did languish.
Straight I forced the door; trembling entered;
terrible moment! sight of horror!
There poor Arthur, lay, upon the floor,
Pale and deathlike, besmeared with blood,
While Lucy, brandishing a sword,
Like some fell demon, stood threatening!
Then on me her eyes fast fixing,
"Where's the bridegroom?" she cried,
And a smile across her pallid face
With ghastly splendor shone.
Ah, unhappy maid! your reason
From you had forever flown!

CHORUS: Ah, dreadful moment, dire deed of horror;
Omen portentous, dark fears confound us.

Col tenebroso tuo denso vel!
Ah, quella destra di sangue impura
L'ira non chiami su noi del Ciel!

RAIMONDO: Eccolà!

SCENA V

LUCIA, ALISA, e detti.

LUCIA: Il dolce suono
Mi colpi di sua voce. Ah! quella voce
M' è qui nel cor discesa!
Edgardo, io ti son resa—
Fuggita lo son da' tuoi nemici. Un gelo
Mi serpeggia nel sen—trema ogni fibbra
Vacilla il piè, presso la fonte meco
T'assidi alquanto. Ahimè! sorge il tremendo
Fantasma e ne separa!
Un serto io voglio. Un armonia celeste
Di, non ascolti? Ah! l'inno
Suona di nozze. Il rito
Per noi s'appressa! oh! me felice!
Oh! gioia che si sente e non si dice!
Ardon gl'incensi—splendono
Le sacre faci intorno!—
Ecco il ministro! Porgini
La destra—oh! lièto giorno!
Alfin son, tua, alfin sei mio,
A me ti dona un Dio
Ogni piacer più grato
Si ogni piacere mi fia conte diviso.
Del ciel demente un riso
La vitá a noi sarà.

RAIMONDO: S' avanza Enrico!

SCENA VI

ENRICO, e detti.

ENRICO: Ditemi
Vera è l'atroce scena?

RAIMONDO: Vera, pur troppo!

ENRICO: Ah! perfida!
Ne avrai condegna pena—

ALISA, RAIMONDO E CORO: T'arresta oh, Ciel!

RAIMONDO: Non vedi
Lo stato suo?

LUCIA: Che chiedi?

ENRICO: O qual pallor!

LUCIA: Me misera!

Night, your dark mantle throw close around us;
Cover this deed with your densest veil.
Ah, let not the hand that this did compass your wrath entail upon her kindred.

RAYMOND: Ah! she comes!

SCENE V

Lucy, Alice, and the above.

LUCY: How sweetly, gently
Steals your voice on my ear. Ah, those dear accents
Once more, once more I hear.
My Edgar, at length I'm safe with you,
To you I've flown from all your enemies.
—What coldness
Shoots like ice through my veins!
Each fiber trembles;
My foot fails! Here, at the fountain.
Once more I'm at your side, love.
Oh, Heaven, do you see?
That dark, fearful phantom? Ah! it would part us!—
Hark, through the dark air heavenly harmony swells!
Say! do you hear it?.Ah, it is the hymn
Of our nuptials! They wait us
At the altar; oh, I am happy
The joy that fills my bosom words cannot tell you.
They light the incense! See now
The sacred tapers brightly are burning;
The priest approaches. Place your hand
In mine now! oh, blissful moment,
At length you're mine, love, and I am yours;
What boundless rapture for me is now preparing!
Each pleasure doubly sharing.
Yes! doubly enjoying, if it is shared with you,
Thanks, bounteous Heaven!
You have given new life to me!

RAYMOND: Here comes her brother!

SCENE VI

Henry and the above.

HENRY: Answer me.
Can this dark deed be real?

RAYMOND: But too surely.

HENRY: Abandoned one,
Your punishment condign shall be!

ALL: Stop yourself, oh, heaven!

RAYMOND: See you not
Her fearful state?

LUCY: What did you say?

HENRY: What death-like paleness!

LUCY: Ah, what misery!

RAIMONDO: Ha la ragion smarrita!

ENRICO: Gran Dio!—

RAIMONDO: Tremare, o barbaro!
Tu dei per la sua vita.

LUCIA: Non mi guardar si fiero;
Segnai quel foglio è vero;
Nell' ira sua terribile
Calpesta, oh Dio! l'anello—
Mi maledice! Ah! vittima
Fui d'un crudel fratello!
Ma ognor t'amai—lo giuro.
Chi mi nomasti—Arturo?
Ah, non fuggir! perdone!

LUCIA: Spargi d'amaro pianto il mio terrestre velo mentre lassù nel cielo io preghero, preghero per te al giunge tuo soltanto fia bello il ciel per me, per me, al, si! ah, si! per me! fia bello il ciel, il ciel per me, ah, si! ah, si! per me, per me, si, per me, per me, per me.

ENRICO: (Giorni d'amaro pianto Serva il rimorso a me.)
Si tragga altrove! Alisa, pietoso amico,
Deh! voi la misera vegliate
Io più me stesso in me non trovo!

RAIMONDO: Delator! gioisci dell' opra tuo!

NORMADO: Che parli?

RAIMONDO: Si, dell' incendio che divampa e strugge
Questa casa infelice,
Hai tu destata la primiera favilla.

NORMANDO: Io non credei—

RAIMONDO: Tu del versato sangue, impio! tu sei
La rai cagion!—Quel sangue
Al ciel t'accusa, e già la man suprema
Segna la tua sentenza—or vanne, e trema.
(Parte.)

SCENA VII

Parte esterna del Castello. Notte.

EDGARDO: Tombe degli avi miei, l'ultimo avanzo
D'una stirpe infelice,
Deh! raccogliete voi!
Cessò dell' ira il breve foco—
Sul nemico acciaro
Abbandonar mi vo'. Per me la vita
E orrendo peso—l' universo intero
E un deserto per me senza Lucia!
Di faci tutta via
Splende il castello! Ah! scarsa
Fu la notte al tripudio! Ingrata donna!

RAYMOND: Her reason has for ever fled from her!

HENRY: Great Heaven!—

RAYMOND: Tremble, heartless man,
You should for her life.

LUCY: Frown not so harshly on me,
Although it is true, that I signed it;
Ah, look not, love, so fearfully,
Break not the ring I gave you;
And do not curse me; I was the victim
Of a cruel brother.
I love only you , my Edgar!
Whom did you name? was it Arthur?
Ah! Do not leave me; have mercy, pray!

LUCY: Shed one tear of sorrow
Over my untimely grave, love:
While there, above, in heaven I pray for you! yes, I'll pray for you!
Even heaven, if you, love, are absent, will bring no joy to me! no joy, ah! no, even heaven will bring no joy to me! ah, no! even heaven, heaven will bring no joy to me.

HENRY: (Bitter remorse and misery Ever my lot will be.)
With care remove her! Alice, kinsmen and friends,
I pray you treat her with gentlest kindness;
Remorse is from now on my earthly portion!

RAYMOND: Man of blood, in this your work now exult.

NORMAN: What do you mean?

RAYMOND: You brought the brand that this dire flame engendered.
It was your fell hand that fired it!
Each spark that kindled, you did fan to a blaze.

NORMAN: But I believed not—

RAYMOND: You are author of this crime. Traitor! Even now
His blood cries for vengeance! At heaven's bar
It accuses you and there the hand supreme signs your awful sentence! Depart from here and tremble.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE VII

Exterior part of the Castle. Night.

EDGAR: Tombs of my far-famed ancestors, open wide your portal,
And the last fated scion
Of your doomed race receive!
My hate has vanished! Past is resentment.
On his vengeful blade now
How gladly would I fall. This life of misery.
I cannot bear it! The vast universe
Is but one desert, unless with her I share it!
The sounds of mirth and feasting

Mentr' io mi struggo in disperato pianto,
Tu ridi,—esulti accanto
Al felice consorte!
Tu delle gioje in seno,
Io-della morte!

EDGARDO: Fra poco a me ricovero darà negletto a vello, una pietosa lagrima non scenderà su quello, ah! fin degli estinti, ahi misero! manca il conforto a me. Tu pur, tu pur dimentica quel marmo dispreggiato: mai non passarvi o barbara, del tuo consorte a lato, ah! rispetta almen le ceneri di chi moria per te, rispetta almen leceneri di chi moria per te! Mai non passarvi, tu lo dimentica, rispetta al meno chi muore per te, mai non passarvi, tu lo dimentica rispetta almeno chi muore, chi muore per te, o barbara, io moro per te.

SCENA VIII

Abitanti di Lammermoor dal Castello e detto.

CORO: Oh meschina! oh, caso orrendo! Più sperar non giova omai.
Questo di che sta sorgendo, Tramontar tu non vedrai!

EDGARDO: Guisto Cielo! ah, rispondete!
Di, chi mai, di chi piangete?

CORO: Di Lucia!

EDGARDO: Lucia diceste?

CORO: Si; la misera sen muore.
Fur le nozze a lei funeste di ragion la trasse amore s'avvicina all'ore estreme e te chiede per te geme.
Questo di, questo sol chestà sorgendo tramontar, tramontar piu non vedra! di ragion le trasse amore, e te chiede per te geme.

EDGARDO: Ah Lucia! Lucia!

CORO: Rimbomba
Già la squilla in suon di morte!

EDGARDO: Ahi! quel suono al cor mi piomba!
E decisa la mia sorte:
Rivederla ancor vogl' io;
Rivederla, e poscia—

CORO: Oh Dio!
Qual trasporto sconsigliato!
Ah, desisti! ah, riedi in te!

Echo around me. Ah, swiftly
Flies the night mid their revelry.
Ungrateful woman,
While here I struggle, desperate in my anguish.
With mockery you deride me!
You most false, you most shameless!
Your heart bounds with rapture,
While death surrounds me.

EDGAR: The wild flowers soon will shed their bloom Around my sad and lonely tomb, No kindly tear shall bless the spot Where blighted love's forgotten Ah! my weary wounded soul to heaven. Shall wing its rapid flight Oh! Lucy, should you with your spouse Roam near the tomb you've made, here, in silence pass, a word of love Would rouse my sleeping shade Oh! respect at least, you faithless girl, The dust of him who died for you. In silence pass then, a word of happy love Would rouse, would waken my sleeping shade. In silence pass then, Respect, respect at least, You faithless girl The dust of him, of him who died for you, who died for you.

SCENE VIII

Inhabitants of Lammermoor coming from the Castle, and Edgar.

CHORUS: Poor forlorn one! oh, fate most fearful,
Hope of life at length has vanished.
Where on this dark night of sorrow
Morning dawns she'll be no more.

EDGAR: Gracious heaven! say, what do you mean?
What does this wailing cry mean?

CHORUS: It is for Lucy.

EDGAR: Did you say for Lucy?

CHORUS: She, alas, is surely dying. This unhappy, fatal marriage has quite deprived her of reason, All forlorn and brokenhearted, Life has near departed from her; Death his victim, his victim surely claims. Before the morning, the morning sun shall rise. Even while madness sense enthralls, Still on you for aid she calls.

EDGAR: Ah! Lucy, Lucy!

CHORUS: That sad
And solemn bell her end does tell.

EDGAR: It rings both hers and my knell!
Yes, my fate is now decided!
In death we will not be divided.
Soon I'll join you dearest Lucy!

CHORUS: Oh, heaven! Where are you going?
O calm yourself, nothing can now the past recall.

SCENA ULTIMA

RAIMONDO, e detti.

RAIMONDO: Ove corri, sventurato?
Ella in terra più non è.

EDGARDO: Lucia!

RAIMONDO: Sventurata.

EDGARDO: In terra più non è.
Ella dungue—

RAIMONDO: E in cielo.

EDGARDO: Tu che a Dio spiegasti l'ali, o bell' alma innamorata, ti rivolgi a me placata, teco ascendo teco ascendo il tuo fedel. Ah! se l'ira dei mortali fece a noi si cruda guerra, se divisi fummo in terra, ne congiunga il nume in ciel, o bell' alma innamorata, bell alma innamorata, ne congiunga il nume in ciel, o bell' alma innamorata bell' alma innamorata ne congiunga il nume in ciel.
Io ti seguo!

CORO: Ah, che fai?

EDGARDO: Morir voglio.

CORO: Ritorna in te.
(S' immerge il pugnale nel cuere.)

RAIMONDO E CORO: Che facesti?

EDGARDO: A te vengo a bell' alma—
Ti rivolgi al tuo federl;
Ah, se l'ira demorteli
Fe cruda guerra—
Ne congiunga il nume in ciel.

RAIMONDO: Sciagurato, pensa al ciel!

CORO: Quale orror!
Ahi tremendo! ahi crudo fato!
Dio, perdona un tanto error!
(Alzando le mani al cielo Edgardo spira.)

THE END.

SCENE THE LAST

Raymond and the above.

RAYMOND: Stay, rash man, what do you seek further?
She's forever lost to you.

EDGAR: My Lucy.

RAYMOND: All is over.

EDGAR: Forever lost to me!
She has departed—

RAYMOND: To heaven!

EDGAR: Though from earth you've flown before me, My adored, my only treasure, though from these fond arms they tore you, soon, soon, I'll follow you, I'll follow you above, Though the world frowned on our union, Though in this life they did part us, Yet on high in fond communion, shall our hearts be tuned to love. Though from these fond arms they tore you, from these fond arms they tore you soon I'll follow you above. Though from these fond arms they tore you, though from these arms they tore you, soon I'll follow, soon I'll follow you above.
Soon I'll join you.

CHORUS: Ah, what would you?

EDGAR: Die with her!

CHORUS: Forbear! or heaven forever is lost to you!
(Edgar plunges his poignard in his breast.)

RAYMOND: What has he done?

EDGAR: Die avenged then, O adored one:
Soon I'll follow you above—
Though in this world they did part us—
From these fond arms they did tear you,
Yet—we part not—above!

RAYMOND: Rash and impious, think of heaven!

CHORUS: Horror fills every breast,
Horror dire. Ah, may kind heaven
Grant him pardon from above.
(Raising his hands to heaven, Edgar expires.)

THE END.

La Favorita (1840)

The Favorite

MUSIC BY GAETANO DONIZETTI ■ LIBRETTO BY ALPHONSE ROYER, GUSTAVE VAËZ, AND AUGUSTIN EUGÈNE SCRIBE

This four-act grand opera, set to a libretto by Alphonse Royer, Gustave Vaëz and Augustin Eugène Scribe (based on Baculard d'Arnaud's play Le Comte de Comminges), was first performed at the Paris Opéra on December 2, 1840. The story takes place in Castille during the year 1340. Fernand, novice at the Monastery of St. James of Compostela, is disturbed by his love for a woman whom he has met. He confesses his feelings to Father Balthazar, his abbot, and chooses to give up life in the monastery. Blindfolded, he arrives on the island of St. León and is discovered by Inez. When Inez removes his blindfold, Fernand asks her if she knows the identity of the woman with whom he is in love, but she says nothing. This woman is Leonore of Gusman, mistress of King Alphonse of Castille, for whom the King has left the Queen. Fernand begs his mysterious lover to tell him who she is and to marry him, but she says this is impossible. She asks that they not meet again and gives him a letter which will greatly assist him in his new career in the army. Inez hurries in and announces that the King has arrived to pay a surprise visit. Fernand, still not realizing who his love is, decides that he must distinguish himself in the army so that he may win her over. The infidels are beaten in battle, and Fernand performs brilliantly—he saves the King's life and is to be honored for his bravery in a celebration at the Palace of the Alcazar. Leonore seeks her freedom from the King but is refused. During the festivities, the King intercepts a note from Fernand to Leonore. At this moment the Pope's messenger, Father Balthazar, bears a message to the King which criticizes his treatment of his wife. The Pope excommunicates the King. Fernand, unaware of the turn of events, comes to the King in triumph. The King asks Fernand how he would like to be rewarded for having saved his life and Fernand asks for Leonore's hand in marriage. She enters and is astonished to find that the King grants Fernand's request. Leonore, not wishing to deceive her future husband, asks Inez to tell Fernand the truth about her relationship with the King. Preparations are made for the wedding and the King confers many honors upon Fernand. Leonore believes that her beloved, who in fact still doesn't know the truth, accepts everything. When many of the courtiers refuse to shake Fernand's hand in congratulations for his marriage, Fernand becomes increasingly angry. Father Balthazar tells him why and Fernand believes that he has been deceived by Leonore and the King. He breaks his sword, tears off the decorations he has received and leaves with the abbot. Back at the monastery, Fernand is praying when an exhausted pilgrim arrives. It is Leonore, who has come to beg his pardon. He grants her forgiveness and she dies in his arms.

■ ATTO I

SCENA I

(Il teatro rappresenta l' estremita di una delle Galleri Interali che circondano il Convento di San Giacomo di Compostella. Dal lato diritto, fra le colonue della galleria, senopronsi gli alberi e le tombe del Chiostro. A sinistra si trova l' entrato della Cappella che rinserra le ceneri di San Giacomo. Il fondo del quadro é formato d' un muro di cinta, ove s' apre un cancello, I religiosi traversano la galleria per portarsi entro la Capella. Fernando, vestilo da Novizio, e Baldassre, il Superiore, compaiono gli ultimi.)

CORO DI RELIGIOSI: O santo ricetto!
Securi al tuo tetto,
La nostra preghiera
Leviamo al Signor.
L' aiuto divino
Qui cerca, qui spera
Fedel pellegrino,
Con viva fervor. (I Monaci entrano vella Cappella; Baldassare va per seguirli, ma scorgendo Fernando, che rimane immobile assorto ne' suoi pensieri, gli avvicina.)

BALDASSARE: Né con essi pregar vuoi tu?

FERNANDO: Nol posso.

BALDASSARE: Compres' io dunque del tuo cor le pene?
Dio più non basta a te?

FERNANDO: Dicesti il vero! In quest' ora solenne
Che un voto eterno me all' altar congiunge
Mal mio grado uno sguardo ai ben terrestri
Getto d'amore e di dolor.

BALDASSARE: Prosegui.

FERNANDO: All' ara che del santo
Jacopo serra le reliquie estrem,
Agli angeli porgea prego fervente,
Una vergine, un angel di Dio
Presso all' ara pregava con me;
Una speme, un terrore, un disio
Scese all' alma e di gioia l' empie,
Ah! mio padre! com' essa era bella,

■ ACT I

SCENE I

CHORUS OF MONKS, &c: Sacred monastery!
May our prayer
From your sanctuary
Ascend to heaven!
In this holy house
With zeal inspired,
A faithful pilgrim
Proffers his vows.
(The Monks enter the Chapel. Balthazzar is about to follow, but perceiving Fernando wrapped in deep thought, he approaches him.)

BALTHAZZAR: Do you not go to pray with them?

FERNANDO: I cannot.

BALTHAZZAR: Have I, then discovered the anguish of your heart? Does God no longer suffice?

FERNANDO: You have spoken truth. About to relinquish all my holy vows, despite myself, the world's bright joys excite my grief, regrets and love.

BALTHAZZAR: Proceed.

FERNANDO: At the holy altar of St. James, as my orisons I did offer to the radiant angels, one suddenly appeared to me: a virgin, an angel of God, by my side was praying at sight of whom I felt mixed joy and fear. Her beauty, holy father, has robbed my heart of peace; and

M' ha involato la pace del cor;
Volgo al nume la mente, ma quella
Allo sguardo presente m' é ognor!
L' onda santa le porsi, e mía mano
Di quell' angel la mano scontrò,
Questo chiostro, per impeto insano,
Pari a tefra prigion mi sembrò.
A' suoi giuri quest' alma ribella
Un conforto ricerca al Signor.
E gemente l' imploro, ma quella
Allo sguardo presente m' è ognor!

BALDASSARE: E fia vero—son desto o vaneggio?
Tu il sostegno, l' amor della fe,
Che me spento sull' inclito seggio
Dei sederti e succedere a me!

FERNANDO: Padre! Io l' amo!

BALDASSARE: Non sai tu che all' augusta tiara
Dei regnanti lo sceltro piegò?
Che mia mano conglunge o separa?
Che l' Iberia a mia voce tremo

FERNANDO: Padre! Io l' amo!

BALDASSARE: Ma rispondi, chi è dessa la bella
Che si facil trionfa di te?
La sua patria, i congiunti? favella;
Il suo nome, il suo rango qual' è?

FERNANDO: Io l' ignoro, ma l' amo! (Con passione.)

BALDASSARE: Vanne dunque frenetico, insano,
Lungi reca il profano tuo pie;
Ah! del nume la vindice mano
Non ricada tremenda su te!

FERNANDO: Cara luce, soave conforto,
Deh tu veglia propizia su me,
Tu mi salva, tu guidami al porto.

BALDASSARE: (arresta con la mâno Fernando, già pronto a partire, e gli dice con emozione). La perfidia, il tradimento,
Te, mio figlio, assalirà:
Fia tua vita un rio tormento,
Il dolor con te vivrà.
Forse, in grembo al flutto infido,
Un sospiro udrassi un dì;
Fia del naufrago che il lido
Va cercando che fuggì!

FERNANDO: (Cadendo in ginocchio). Io parto, O padre mio, mi benedici.

BALDASSARE: Vanne dunque, frenetico, insano, ecc. (Fernando esce pel cancello in fondo, e da lungi tende le braccia a Baldassare, che rivolge la faccia asciugandosi una lagrima, ed entra nella Cappella.) though to God I bend my knee, my heart, of hope bereft, beats high alone for her. In offering holy water to her, her angel hand encountered mine; since when, these cloisters seem a prison drear, which I would flee. Faithless to my vows, my soul rebels, though Heaven's aid I crave; and while to God I bend my knee, her image haunts my mind.

BALTHAZZAR: You! my son—my only hope! The strength and honor of our faith! Who, when the toils of life have passed, will fill the place I hold!

FERNANDO: Father! I love her.

BALTHAZZAR: Do you know that to the august tiara even kingly heads must bow? that I can join or disunite? that Spain fear my voice?

FERNANDO: Father! I love her.

BALTHAZZAR: Say, who then is she that has made this conquest? her hand—her birth—her name—her rank?

FERNANDO: (passionately). I know not, but I love her.

BALTHAZZAR: Begone, insensate youth! bear from here your profane thoughts! may the avenging hand of God not fall too heavy upon you!

FERNANDO: Light of my soul—my heart's best joy, I live alone for you. Propitiously watch over me, and guide my erring steps.

BALTHAZZAR: (takes Fernando by the hand as he is about leaving, and addresses him with much emotion). Treachery and perfidy, my son, will mark your life's career. Avoid the shoals where danger lurks to embitter all your days. Storm-tossed, perhaps you'll seek again the happy port you leave.

FERNANDO: (falling on his knees). I go, my father, bless me.

BALTHAZZAR: Begone! insensate youth, etc., etc.
(Fernando exit through the gate, extending his arms imploringly to Balthazzar, who turns away his head, wiping away a tear, and enters the Chapel).

SCENA II

(Il teatro rappresenta un luogo delizioso sulla riva dell' isola di Leon. Varie Giovinette sono raccolte sulla sponda del mare, ed empiono canestri di fiori; alcune schiave sospendono ai rami delle ricche stoffe per rendere l' ombra più spessa.)

INEZ, E LE GIOVANI SPAGNUOLE:

INEZ: (insieme al Coro). Bei raggi lucenti,
Bell' aure beate,
Il suolo smaltate
Di candidi fior,
Un genio divino
Ci veglia, ci guida,
Propizio ne affida,
D'un genio il favor,
Il lieto destino
Risponda il concento.
Ad esso l' accento Fia sacro del cor.

INEZ: Di gioie ridenti
Fragranza qui spira,
Ognor qui s' aggira,
La pace, l' amor.
Silenzio! è puro il mar,
L' aer sereno;
Il battello qui s' avanza
Lo dirige la speranza (Tutte si accostano alla riva e riguardano lungi, poi ripigliano.)
Dolce zeffiro, il seconda,
Lieve spira in sulla vela,
Finchè il tragga a questa sponda
L' amoroso suo distin:
Ed al giunger suo disvela,
Questo suolo a far più grato,
Il sospiro profumato
Degli aranci e gelsomin.

SCENA III

LE MEDESIME. FERNANDO

(che comparisce sur una barchetta circondato da alcune donzelle, e avendo sugl' occhi un velo che gli vien tolto).

FERNANDO: (a quella che lo aiuta a scendere dalla barca.) Messaggera gentil, tacita ninfa,
Che ognor su queste sponde
Il mio venir proteggi e il mio ritorno,
A che non odo di tua voce il suono?
(Le Donzelle volgono altrove la faccia, e fan segno che non possono rispondere.)
Ma taciturna sempre!
(Avvicinandosi ad Inez.)
Ah! ti scongiuro!
La tua donna e la mia persiste ancora
Il suo rango a celarmi, il nome? Ah parla!
Chi è dessa?

INEZ: (sorridendo). Vano è il dimanadar.

SCENE II

A beautiful view on the shores of the island of St. Leon. Young girls are grouped at the river side, filling baskets with flowers. Slaves are busy in suspending from trees rich hangings, to intercept the sun's heat.

INEZ AND SPANISH MAIDENS:

INEZ AND CHORUS: The sun's gold rays,
Mild zephyrs' breath,
This happy spot with perfumed flowers bedeck;
Where nothing breathes but pleasure, peace and love.

INEZ: With laughing joy, with fragrant breath,
This spot is redolent.
Here peace and love dwell.
Silence! the sea is still, the air is calm;
See, the barque advances, steered by hope.
(They all run to the river side, and look out).
Sweet zephyr, lightly swell the silken sails
And calmly speed it on
To where true love dwells
The ripping waves with odors load,
As onwards speeds the barque;
With orange and with jessamine
Make grateful all the air.

SCENE III

THE SAME. FERNANDO

(appears in a boat, surrounded by girls, a veil over his eyes, which they remove.)

FERNANDO: (to the girl who assists him to descend from the boat). Gentle messenger, silent nymph, who here each day protects my arrival and departure, why hear I not the sound of your voice? (The girls turn away, making signs that they cannot answer). What! silent ever? (Approaching Inez). I conjure you say, why your mistress, and mine, still refuses to tell her name and rank? Oh, speak! What are they?

INEZ: (smiling). She alone must tell.

FERNANDO: Tremendo dunque è l' arcan?

INEZ: Più assai che tu nol credi;
Ella ver noi s' avanza, a lei lo chiedi.

SCENA IV

FERNANDO, LEONORA.

LEONORA: Ah! mio bene, un dio t' invia.
Vieni, ah! vien, ch' io viva in te: Tu sei gioia all' alma mia,
Terra e ciel tu sei per me.

FERNANDO: Da' sacri altar lontano,
Per te solcata ho l' onda.

LEONORA: Ma vegliai, e non invano,
Quindi un pensier su te:
E ver l' amica sponda
Ei ti conduce a me.

FERNANDO: Felice io son!

LEONORA: Più misero Forse di te non v' è.

FERNANDO: Per pietade, a me disvela
Qual periglio qui si cela:
Del tuo cor è mio l' impero,
Vo la morte ad incontrar.

LEONORA: Ah! che il fato è a me severo!

FERNANDO: Chi sei tu?

LEONORA: Nol dimandar.

FERNANDO: Tacerò–ma pria rispondi
Se possente è in te l' amor.
Tuo destin col mio confondi,
Sposo tuo mi stringi al cor.

LEONORA: Il vorrei, ma nol poss' io.

FERNANDO: Che mai sento!–oh mio terror
Un istante, oh crudo fato!
Sventurato–appien mi fe'!

LEONORA: Ah! d' un Dio vendicator
Il furor–piombò su me
A te pensando ognor lo spirto amante,
(Mostrandogli poi una pergamena.)
Di queste cifre ti volea far dono,
Ma dubbio il cor–

FERNANDO: Ebben?

LEONORA: Non hai tu detto
Più fiate a me, Fernando,
Che il solo onor t' alberga in petto?

FERNANDO: Il dissi.

LEONORA: Or certo l' avvenire io qui ti rendo, Ma giura–

FERNANDO: E che?

LEONORA: Fuggirmi.

FERNANDO: O ciel! che intendo?
Fia vero? lasciarti!
E tu il chiedi a me?
Mia vita è l' amarti,

FERNANDO: The secret, then, is terrible?

INEZ: More so than you think.
(Inez and the girls exeunt.)

SCENE IV

FERNANDO, LEONORA.

LEONORA: Ah! my beloved Heaven has sent you! come, oh, come, I live for you alone—You brightest joy to my soul, to me you are both earth and heaven.

FERNANDO: For you alone have I abjured my vows—abandoned the Holy altar.

LEONORA: I have since watched over you—have thought of you, and you alone; and to this calm and friendly shore have guided secretly your steps.

FERNANDO: How blessed am I!

LEONORA: Perhaps not so; you may be wretched still.

FERNANDO: In pity's sake, at once confess what dangers we incur; if thus to me you yield your heart not death itself I fear.

LEONORA: Oh, cruel fate! sad destiny!

FERNANDO: Who are you?

LEONORA: Ask me not.

FERNANDO: I obey—one word only: if my ardent love meets a response then link your fate with mine; and, as my wife, rejoice my heart.

LEONORA: My heart consents, yet cannot.

FERNANDO: What do I hear? Be still, my heart, a moment yet—oh, cruel fate!

LEONORA: Ah! the wrath of an avenging God now falls upon me. (Shows Fernando a parchment). In you have centered all my thoughts, as this will prove—procured for you; but I have feared . . .

FERNANDO: Have feared?

LEOMORA: Have you not said, in confidence to me, Fernando, that honor was the goal of all your views?

FERNANDO: I have said so.

LEONORA: This, then, secures you a bright future, but it enjoins . . .

FERNANDO: Oh, speak!

LEONORA: That you shun me.

FERNANDO: Heavens! heard I aright? Impossible! shun you! you are all to me: my life—my love—my only hope! Cold shall be my Spirare per te.

Pria freddo il cor mio.
Per morte sarà,
Ma dirti l' addio
Ah! mai non potrà
Compiangermi ognora
Il mondo dovrà,
Non quei che t' adora
Tacciar di viltà.

LEONORA: Deh, vanne! deh, parti,
Deh fuggi da me:
M' è gioia l' amarti,
Delitto è per te.
Ah! freddo il cor mio
Per morte sarà,
Ma dirti l' addio
Dolente dovrà!
Compiangerti ognora
Il mondo potrà,
Ma indarno s' implora
Per me la pietà.

SCENA V

I MEDESIMI.
(Inez accorre tutta tremante.)

INEZ: Ah! signora. Il Re!

LEONORA: Che sento! Giusti numi!

FERNANDO: (sorpreso). Il Re!

LEONORA: O spavento! (Ad Inez.)
Io ti seguo.
(Rimettendo poi le carte a Fernando.)
Prendi e va.

LEONORA: Fuggi

FERNANDO: Ah! no.

LEONORA: Gran Dio, pietà!

FERNANDO: Fia vero? lasciarti! parti, ecc.

LEONORA: Deh! vanne, deh! parti, ecc.
(Leonora dà a Fernando un ultimo addio, poi esce precipitosamente.)

SCENA VI

FERNANDO, INEZ

FERNANDO: (che ha trattenuto Inez disposta a seguire Leonora).
E l' uom che la desia, è il Re?

INEZ: Sì, è Alfonso: ma taci.

FERNANDO: È sciolto il vel, sua cuna, il rango
L'avvicinano al soglio—ed io—chi sono?
Sventurato ed oscuro e senza gloria!

INEZ: Prudenza!
(Gli fa segno di tacere, e fugge via.) heart—life's blood be stayed—but say farewell. Oh! never, never. Accursed on earth, where wend my steps? without you, love, I cease to live.

LEONORA: Depart! forget! you must not stay. My joy, my love, my heart's delight! Though cold in death my heart should be, we both must part, must bid farewell. With sighs and tears my heart bewails your absence. Kind. Heaven! pity him and me.

SCENE V

THE SAME.
(Inez enters with much trepidations.)

INEZ: Ah! Signora. The King!

LEONORA: What is it? Oh, Heaven!

FERNANDO: (surprised). The King!

LEONORA: (to Inez). I follow you. (Giving the parchment to Fernando). Take this. Fly!

FERNANDO: Ah! no.

LEONORA: Great God, mercy!

FERNANDO: Impossible! Shun you etc., etc.

LEONORA: Depart! Forget, etc., etc. (She bids Fernando a last farewell, and exit suddenly).

SCENE VI

FERNANDO, INEZ.

FERNANDO: (who has withheld Inez about to follow Leonora). He of whom you spoke is King?

INEZ: It is—Alphonso!

FERNANDO: I know all. Her rank—her birth, connects her with the throne, and I -what am I? An inglorious and obscure adventurer.

INEZ: Prudence! (She makes signs to him to be silent, and exit.)

SCENA VII

FERNANDO: (solo). Io non meritava
Il suo amore, il suo cor!
(Guarda le carte rimessegli da Leonora e manda un grido di gioia.)
Gran Dio! Che degno
(rango.)
Io ne divenga or vuol! Sì—questo
Questo titol, e questo onor sublime!—
Io Capitan! – O donna, in un istante
Capitano e guerrier ti fai l'amante!
Sì, che un tuo solo accento
La voce egli è d'un Dio,
L'amor che in petto io sento
Accende il mio valor.
Ho dolce in cor la speme,
Se il tuo campion son io,
Che noi vivremo insieme
Beati nell'amor.
Addio terren diletto
Cui noto è il mio destin,
Tornare a te prometto
Cinto d'allori il crin.
Sì, che un tuo solo accento, ecc.

FINE DELL'ATTO PRIMO.

■ ATTO II

SCENA I

(Il Teatro rappresenta una Galleria aperta, attraverso la quale si scuoprono i Giardini e il Palazzo d'Alcazar.)

IL RE, DON GASPARE.

IL RE: Giardini d'Alcazar, de' Mauri Regi
Delizie ascose! oh, quanto
Alla vostr'ombra riandar m'è grato
I sogni dell'amore
Onde s'inebria il cor!

DON GASPARE: Del vinto il tetto
S'aspetta al vincitor: per voi la Fede
Trionfa ed Ismael fugge paventa.

IL RE: Si, di Marocco i Regi
E di Granata insiem, vider la luna
A Tarifa crollar.

DON GASPARE: Fu tua la gloria.

IL RE: Ah! non è ver : fu di Fernando, il prode
Nuovo guerrier, che un giorno sol fe' noto;
Che radunò l'armata,
Salvando il suo signor; ogg'io l'attendo
In Siviglia, e innanzi a tutti
Il suo valore d'onorar desio.

DON GASPARE: Del Pastor sommo or giunse
Un alto messagger.

SCENE VII

FERNANDO: (alone). I do not merit either her heart or her love! (Looks at the parchment Leonora gave him, and utters a cry of joy.) Oh heavens! Her aspiration is, that I may prove worthy of it! Yes! this title, this rank, is indeed an unexpected honor. A captain!—it is joy indeed!—captain, warrior and lover! The accents of her tuneful voice breathe a god-like sound; and urged by deep-felt love, my courage shall astound. Hope still lingers in my heart that fate will yet relent, and, blessed in mutual love, we may end our days in joy. Farewell, beloved spot, for you my fate decides. To you I will return, my brows with laurel crowned.

END OF ACT I.

■ ACT II

SCENE I

(An open Gallery, through which are seen the Gardens and the Palace of Alcazar.)

THE KING, DON GASPAR.

THE KING: Gardens of Alcazar—delight of Moorish kings, how much I prize your ancient sycamores, under whose shade I revel in dreams of love.

DON GASPAR: The palace of the conquered is now the conqueror's! The Faith, through you, has triumphed; and Ishmael wanders vanquished and forlorn.

THE KING: Yes; both the Kings of Morocco and Grenada, near Tarifa, have seen the crescent fall.

DON GASPAR: This glory, sire, is yours.

THE KINGS Not so. Fernando's arm the triumph claims!—the worthy warrior, till now unknown, who by his prowess my kingdom saved. This day, in Seville, I await his coming; and at my court let all due honor be shown unto him!

DON GASPAR: Some important message comes from the Holy Father.

IL RE: (da sè, con impazienza).
Ognor più grave
Omai divien suo scettro!
(A un cenno del Re, Don Gaspare rispettosamente s'inchina, e parte.)

SCENA II

IL RE: (solo, guardando dietro Don Gaspare che si allontana).
Ma de' malvagi invan sul capo mio
Sventure impreca il rio livore; e a Roma
Congiunto io lo discerno!
Per te, mia vita, affronterei l'averno.
Vien, Leonora, a' piedi tuoi
Serto e soglio il cor ti dona;
Ah! se amare il Re tu puoi,
Mai del don si pentirà,
Che per soglio e per corona
Gli riman la tua beltà!
De' nemici tuoi lo sdegno
Disfidar saprò per te,
Se ti cessi e l' alma e il regno,
Io per gli altri ancor son Re.
De' miei dì compagna io voglio
Farti o bella innanzi al ciel,
Al mio fianco unita in soglio,
Al mio fianco nell' avel.
(Andando verso Don Gaspare che appare in fondo, il Re gli dice.)
Per la festa previeni
Tutta la corte.
(Don Gaspare parte.)

SCENA III

IL RE, LEONORA ED INEZ (ch'entrano parlando a mezza voce).

LEONORA: Ebben, così si narra?

INEZ: E il prode vincitor.

LEONORA: Egli, Fernando?
A lui la gloria, oh ciel! a me l'infamia!

IL RE: (fa cenno ad Inez di ritirarsi, poi s'avvicina a Leonora). Ah! Leonora, il guardo sì mesto a che piegar?

LEONORA: Lieta mi credi
Se a te d'accanto io sono? Il cor non vedi?
Quando le soglie paterne varcai,
Debil fanciulla delusa nel cor,
Giunta qui teco divider sperai
Talamo offerto di sposa all'amor.

IL RE: Taci. (Con tenerezza.)

LEONORA: Sì, Alfonzo, traviata, avvilita,
M'hai tolto il padre, l' onore, la fe!
Fra l' ombre ascosa la bella e del Re,
Tacita e sola, dal mondo schernita,

THE KING: (to himself, impatiently). The sacred power exceeds its bounds!
(At a sign from the King Don Gasper bows respectfully and exit).

SCENE II

(The king alone, observing the departure of Don Gaspar).

THE KING: Accursed courtiers! who, torn by envy, have formed a treacherous league with Rome. Against my love in secret they conspire; – for Leonora, alone, will I confront them. For her I'll quit my throne and kingdom! My heart is hers! My crown—nay; heaven—is nothing to me without her love! My foes I scorn for her bright eyes; nor see I aught on earth but she! To her my freedom I resign; and in her chains thy king and lover hold! With her my joy will know no end—this earth her charms a heaven will make! For her alone I wish to live. (Re-enter Don Gaspar; the King advances towards him). Let all the court prepare for the festival.
(Don Gaspar exit).

SCENE III

THE KING, LEONORA AND INEZ. (Leonora enters with Inez, conversing in a subdued tone).

LEONORA: Is what I hear the truth?

INEZ: It is; he has achieved a glorious victory.

LEONORA: My Fernando! The glory his—the shame all mine.
(The King signs Inez to retire and approaches Leonora).

THE KING: Why sad, my Leonora? Some rankling care disturbs your calm.

LEONORA: You think it strange that I am joyless! The heart sees not! When I left my father's roof, fond hopes played round my youthful heart. I thought my fate had been happy; a husband's smiles I deemed were mine.

THE KING: (tenderly). No more.

LEONORA: Yes. Alphonso has betrayed, deceived me, my father, honor, love, and faith! These silent shades—these glittering domes, hide not contempt for the mistress of the king.

IL RE: In questo suolo, a lusingar tua cura
Regna il piacer, la via sparsa è di fior:
Se interno a te più bella appar natura,
Ahi! donde avvien che tanto è il tuo dolor?

LEONORA: In questo suol s'ammanta la sventura
Di gemme, d'oro e di leggiadri fior:
Ma vede il cielo la mortal mia cura,
Se ride il labbro, disperato è il cor.

IL RE: Ma di tue doglie la cagion primiera?

LEONORA: Ah! taci, indarno tu la chiedi a me.
Soffri che lungi da tua corte io pera?

IL RE: A ogni uom vo' noto l' amor mio per te.
Alfin vedrai se questo cor t'adora.

LEONORA: E vil Leonora, troppo grande è il Re.

IL RE: Ah! l' alto ardor che nutro in petto
In lei divien sterile affetto!
Non v'ha destin del suo miglior,
Pur grave, oh Dio! le pesa in cor!

LEONORA: Ah! l' alto ardor che nutro in petto
In lei divien soave affetto:
Ma splende invan, come fulgor,
Di tomba, oh Dio! nel muto orror!

IL RE: Poni tregua al dolor; siedi regina
Della festa che amore a te destina.

SCENA IV

IL RE, LEONORA, SIGNORI E DAME DELLA CORTE; PAGGI GUARDIE.
(I Signori e le Dame s' avanzano, ed inchinano al Re. Questo conduce Leonora per mano ai posti ove seggono per presiedere alla festa. I Signori si schierano ai lati. Al punto in cui la festa è per incominciare, Don Gaspare entra agitatissimo.)

DON GASPARE: Ah, sire!

IL RE: Che mai fu!

DON GASPARE: (a mezza voce).
Tua fede intera
Al suddito fedele ognor negasti:
Ebben, lei che colmasti
Di fortuna e di gloria, il suo sovrano
In segreto tradia.

IL RE: Tu menti.

DON GASPARE: Un schiavo Questo foglio recato avea per essa.
Ad Inez confidente. A quest' Inez—(Rimette una lettera nelle mani del Re)
Il labbro mio non mente.

THE KING: Here pleasure reigns, and you alone its queen. Your steps are strewn with flowers—around, bright smiles appear to greet you; yet still dark grief corrodes your heart.

LEONORA: The palace walls resound with sighs, which gold and jewels fail to quell. And heaven knows my hapless state—a smiling face, but broken heart.

THE KING: From where comes the cause for so much grief?

LEONORA: Oh, do not ask that. These splendid scenes, in pity's sake oh, let me quit!

THE KING: My heart in love to no man yields. Its truth—its faith, I'll prove.

LEONORA: I dare not look so high.

THE KING: The ardor I in silence cherished meets no return—all fruitless seems—joyless—she whom my heart adores with anquish deep is torn.

LEONORA: The ardor I in silence cherished consumes my soul in hopeless joys, and ghastly burns, like a funeral lamp, within the deadly tomb.

THE KING: Oh do not speak this way. Be now the queen my love prepares for you.

SCENE IV

THE KING, LEONORA: LORDS AND LADIES OF THE COURT, PAGES AND GUARDS.
(The Lords and Ladies advance and salute the King. The King conducts Leonora to her seat by his side; the rest range themselves on both sides of the stage. As the fête is about to commence, Don Gaspar enters in agitation).

DON GASPAR: Ah! sire!

THE KING: What means this?

DON GASPAR: You spurned the counsel a faithful subject dared to offer. She on whom you have conferred honor and glory has secretly betrayed her king.

THE KING: You lie!

DON GASPER: She gave this note to Inez, a slave, her confidante and friend. That Inez—(Giving the letter to the King). You'll find I have not lied.

IL RE: (allontanando col gesto i cortigient).
No, possibil non è!
(Poi a Leonora ponendole sott' ocni la lettera.)
Chi scriverti osa e parlarti d'amor?

LEONORA: (avendo riconosciuto il carattere). Un uomo che adoro.

IL RE: Oh! tradimento!—il nome?

LEONORA: Ah! pria la morte,
Che appagar tuo desire.

IL RE: Forse i tormenti l 'otterano.

LEONORA: Ah! sire!

SCENA V

I MEDESIMI, BALDASSARE (seguito da un Monaco che porta una pergamena col sigillo papale.—All' arrivo di Baldassare si manifesta una grande agitazione fra gli assistenti).

IL RE: Qual tumulto? Chi ardisce Inoltrar?

BALDASSARE: Io son quello, io son che l' ira
Or t'annunzio del ciel!

IL RE: Veglio! che parli?

BALDASSARE: Re di Castiglia, a te del Pastor sommo
Reco il voler di Dio.
Ove al dover t'opponi,
Il labbro mio pronunzia
L'anatema fatal che gli empi atterra.

IL RE: Ben so qual alto dessi
Rispetto al capo della Fe, ma obblio
Tu mai non prender che il tuo Re son io.

BALDASSARE: Si, per la scaltra e abbietta,
Che del tuo amor s' ammanta, a vil ripudio.
Dannar vuoi la regina

IL RE: E sacro è il mio voler! la fronte
Ornar della corona
D' altra donna mi piacque, e qual si fosse
Questa regal mia cura,
Giudice all'opra, il Re son io.

BALDASSARE: Sventura!
Ah! paventa il furor
D'un Dio vendicator;
Su' rei terribil scende
Se pace egli è al tapin.
Tu le procelle orrende
Affronti sconsigliato,
Ma già l'estremo fato
Minaccia il tuo destin.

THE KING: (beckoning to courtiers to retire). It cannot be! (To Leonora, showing her the letter). Who thus has dared to write to you, and speak of love?

LEONORA: (aside, recognizing the handwriting). One I love.

THE KING: Oh, treachery!—his name?

LEONORA: No, I'd rather die than ever divulge it.

THE KING: Torture may break your silence.

LEONORA: Ah! Sire!

SCENE V

THE SAME, BALTHAZZAR (accompannied by a monk, with a parchment, to which is attached the papal seal. At the appearance of Balthazzar consternation prevails).

THE KING: What means this tumult?

BALTHAZZAR: I am he who comes to proclaim to you the wrath of Heaven!

THE KING: What would you, Monk?

INEZ: King of Castile, I come to you with decrees from the papal throne, which if resisted, will carry with them the avenging anathema which seals your doom.

THE KING: I know my duty, and respect the Church; but you forget that I'm your king.

BALTHAZZAR: Enslaved by love, unholy and unchaste, you neglect your lawful queen repudiate.

THE KING: I will it so.

ALL: O Heaven!

THE KING: My will is sacred, and on her brow I'll place my crown. Alone I reign, nor master know. My words are law—my wish supreme! And I alone will judge myself.

BALTHAZZAR: Rash man! Avert Heaven's wrath, dare not its fury; it punishes sinners and pardons the righteous, brave not its rage; which even now impends. With timely repentence, you yet may be saved.

LEONORA: Io gelo di terror,
E sovra il mesto cor
L'ira terribil scende
Del crudo mio destin.
Fra le procelle orrende
E vedo estremo fato
Sorger dappresso alfin.

IL RE: Agli atti ed al furor,
Che gli arde in mezzo al cor,
Fiero il rimorso scende
Entro il mio petto alfin.
Ma le procelle orrende
Non mi vedran cangiato:
Tu trema sconsigliato
Sul nero tuo destin.

DON GASPARE E IL CORO: Io gelo di terror,
E sovra il mesto cor
L'ira terribil scende
Del barbaro destin.

BALDASSARE: Voi tutti che m' udite,
L'adultera fuggite;
Questa malnata femmina
Ha maledetta il ciel!

IL RE: Ah! Leonora!

TUTTI: Oh Dio!

LEONORA: Ch'io mora!

BALDASSARE: Ah! fuggite!

CORO: Ho agli occhi un vel.

IL RE: (con furore). E con qual dritto?

BALDASSARE: In nome Del gran gerarca, maledetti entrambi
Sian, se doman gli stolti
Non fian per sempre separati e sciolti.

IL RE: Ah! che diss' egli? Quel labbro infiammato
Di rovesciare il mio soglio ha tentato!
In petto m'arde tremendo disdegno
Pur la vendetta non scende del Re.
Ah! pria ch' io ceda, perisca il mio regno,
Lo scettro, il brando s'infranga con me.

LEONORA: Ah! che diss'egli? quel labbro infiammato
Me dalla terra, dal cielo ha scacciato:
Muta quest'alma non nutre un disegno,
Me la vendetta reclama del Re!
Amor, vergogna m'invade e disdegno;
Morte deh! scendi propizia su me.

DON GASPARE E CORO: Ah! che diss'egli, quel labbro infiammato
Face di guerra qui in mezzo ha gittato!
In petto gli arde tremendo disdegno,
Pur la vendetta non scende del Re!
Sia quest'infame bandita dal regno,
Sia maledetto chi asilo le diè!

BALDASSARE: (prendendo dalle mani del Monaco la pergamena spiegando agli occhi degli assistenti, tutti cadono genuflessi). Lo LEONORA: I tremble with fear. My heart's pulse is stilled. This fearful anger by me is brought down. O my cruel fate! I sink with terror. Why was I born for such affliction?

THE KING: This act of frenzy afflicts my heart, and remorse at length will enter it. The dire dismay which seizes all, makes me tremble at the stern decree.

DON GASPAR AND CHORUS: We tremble with fear. Our hearts' pulse is stilled—how cruel is fate—we sink with horror.

BALTHAZZAR: All present hear. Shun the adultress Avoid her! Accursed of God is she!

THE KING: My Leonora!

ALL: Great God!

LEONORA: I die!

BALTHAZZAR: Her presence shun!

CHORUS: Let us go.

THE KING: By what right?

BALTHAZZAR: In the name of Heaven and the Holy Father, I pronounce anathema on all, if by tomorrow's dawn she still is here!

THE KING: His words inflame. His baneful hate with scorn I dare defy nor shall my vengeance sleep while here I reign a King No; rather than yield I'll throw my sceptre and crown to the winds.

LEONORA: His words inflame. His holy lips bar heaven from me! My secret soul has no design to keep a monarch's heart. The love he feels, I disdain. Oh! open, earth to me!

DON GASPAR, INEZ AND CHORUS: His words inflame! His holy lips shut heaven from us if we dare brave the decree our Holy Father issues. Let her be driven from here, or malediction dread!

BALTHAZZAR: (takes the parchment from the Monk, opens it, and shows it). Behold our Holy Father's bull! (All fall on their stemma è questo del Pastor supremo.

Dio di vendetta decreto ha scagliato,
Di Gezzabelle rinnovisi il fato;
Quest'impia donna, a infame disegno,
Indarno spera vendetta dal Re.
Tutti fuggite, e del cielo lo sdegno.
Tutti invocate sovr'essa con me.

GLI ALTRI: Ah! che diss'egli? ecc., ecc.
(Leonora fugge nell'estrema confusione, nascondendo tra le mani la fronte.—Quadro.)

FINE DELL'ATTO SECONDO.

■ ATTO III

SCENA I

Una Sala nel Palazzo d'Alcazar.

FERNANDO: (solo). A lei son presso alfin: partiva ignoto
E riedo vincitor! Mentre in sua corte
M' appella il Re, d'amor più che d' orgoglio
Mi freme in petto il cor! Colei, che tanto
Adoro, qui soggiorna;
E a conoscerla alfin l'alma ritorna.
(Vedendo avvicinarsi il Re si ritira modestamente.) Il Re!

SCENA II

(Fernando in disparte; il Re che entra pensieroso senza vederlo; Don Gaspare, che segue il Re.)

DON GASPARE: Qual sarà di quell' empio il fato?

IL RE: (senza ascoltarlo parla tra sè).
D' un Monaco alle fole
Ceder dunque dev'io?

DON GASPARE: Ma il Re guistizia
A sè ricusa?

IL RE: Leonora inoltri: Inez complice sua, prigion rattieni.
(Don Gaspare s' inchina ed esce. Il Re scorgendo Fernando.)
Sei tu, mio nome tutelar, ti deve
La sua salvezza il Re.

FERNANDO: L' ambita gloria
Mi fe' contento appien.

IL RE: De'tuoi sudori,
Io stesso il vo' la ricompensa or chiedi.
All' accento del Re,t' affida e credi.

knees.) And mark! The clemency of heaven is withdrawn, as this decree will show, unless, indeed, the Jezebel be driven hence. The impious wretch abandon—fly; her base designs are now well known; yes, shun her—flee—nor o'er your heads draw down the Almighty's wrath.

CHORUS: His words inflame, etc., etc.
(Leonora exit, overpowered with emotion, concealing her face in her hands. Tableau.)

END OF ACT II.

■ ACT III

SCENE I

A saloon in the Palace of Alcazar.

FERNANDO: ,(alone). Near her once more. Unknown to fame I left, but now returned renowed. Summoned to court by royal command, my heart beats more with love than pride. The idol of my soul dwells here, I know, and soon shall see—know whom I love. (He perceives the king and retires modestly to back of stage.) It is the king!

SCENE II

The king enters in deep thought, not perceiving Fernando, followed by Don Gaspar.

DON GASPAR: His fate have you decided?

THE KING: (not listening to Don Gaspar, and aside). To the menaces of a monk I then have yielded.

DON GASPAR: But will the king do justice to himself?

THE KING: Bring Lenora here—detain her accomplice Inez as prisioner.
(Don Gaspar bows and exit.)

THE KING (perceiving Fernando). Ah it is you, my guardian genius, to you the king owed his safety.

FERNANDO: The glory I have acquired is ample recompense,
And I am well repaid with honor.

THE KING: Your valor claim some recompense. Ask, and by my kingly faith I promise all you ask.

FERNANDO: Sire, soldato misero,
Per nobil dama amor m' accende il petto,
E i mei trionfi io deggio,
La mia gloria al suo amor, questa ti chieggio.

IL RE:
Sia tua, la noma.
Ah, si, costei s' appella.
(Vedendo venir Leonora.)
Vedila. la più bella!

IL RE: (stupefatto). Leonora!

LEONORA: (O ciel! l' amante! Rea comparrgli innante!)

IL RE: (freddamente a Leonora).
Ei del suo cor la brama,
Ch' ei t' ama—or mi svelo!

LEONORA: (da sè). Quel sguardo m' agghiaccia!

IL RE: (c.s.). Potria piombar su te,
Poi che il tacer t' alletta,
La collera del Re.
Coll' alta sua vendetta!
(S' arresta e poi ripiglia più freddamente.) Fernando, a te la mano desia di sposo offrir.
Il sovrano a lui ti dona.

LEONORA E FERNANDO: O cielo.

LEONORA: Oh che di' tu?

IL RE: Doman tu dei partir.
(Volgendosi a Leonora con un po' di malcontento e tristezza.)
A tanto amor, Leonora, il tuo risponda;
Quand' ei felice non vivrà che in te,
Dolce la speme del suo cor seconda,
Ch' ei mai non debba maledir tua fe.

LEONORA E FERNANDO: Se inganno o sogno è questo, a me s' asconda
Per sempre il ver che rischiarar mi de'.

IL RE: Entro un' ora il sacro rito fia compito

FERNANDO: O mio signor! A' tuoi piè col sangue mio
Or vogl' io donarti il cor.

LEONORA: Ed il giuro!

IL RE: Ei fia serbato: (Piano a Leonora.)
Se ingannato io fu' da te,
Vendicarsi appien sa il Re.
(Il Re esce conducendo seco Fernando.)

FERNANDO: Sire, a noble lady claims my love, though but a humble soldier; to her I owe my fame and glory, and her hand I ask from you.

THE KING: It is yours, Her name?

FERNANDO: The fairest of your court. (Perceiving Leonora who enters.) Behold her charms!

THE KING: (stupified). Leonora! O Heaven! my love!

LEONORA: Oh Heaven—my lover! Thus guilty to appear before him.

THE KING: (coldly to Leonora). I have learned just now of the love he bears LEONORA: (aside). His looks freeze me with terror.

THE KING: Your silence, in another king, had drawn dark vengeance down. (He stops suddenly, and resumes, with coldness.) Fernando asks your hand in marriage.

FERNANDO: What do you say?

THE KING: And I, your king, bestow it.

LEONORA AND FERNANDO: Just heaven!

THE KING: Tomorrow you depart. (Addressing Leonora with bitterness and sadness.) Responsive beats your heart to his; his sole joy to live in you–second, then, his love with mutual warmth.

LEONORA AND FERNANDO: It is some delusion, sure–a joyous dream!
A vision rife with happiness.

THE KING: Within an hour the church's rites shall bind you in firm union.

FERNANDO: O noble sire! at your feet I fall, and vow eternal love and gratitude.

LEONORA: I vow the same!

KING: (aside to Leonora). And you will prove faithful? If I have been deceived in you, the king knows how to be avenged. (Exeunt the King and Fernando.)

SCENA III

LEONORA: (sola, cade sopra un divano).
Fia dunque vero? O ceil! desso! Fernando!
Lo sposo di Leonora!
Tutto mel dice, e dubbia l' alma è ancora
All' inattesa gioia! O Dio! sposarlo!
Oh mia vergogna estrema! In dote al prode
Recare il disonor? no, mai! dovesse
Esecrarmi, fuggir: saprà in brev' ora
Chi sia la donna che cotanto adora!
O mio Fernando, della terra il trono
A possederti, avria donato il cor,
Ma puro l' amor mio come il perdono,
Dannato ahi lassa! e a disperato orror!
Il ver fia noto, e in tuo dispregio estremo
La pena aurommi che maggior si de'?
Se il giusto tuo disdegno allor fia scemo.
Piombi, gran Dio, la folgor tua su me.
Su, crudeli, e chi v' arresta!
Scritto è in cielo il mio dolor!
Su, venite, ell' è una festa,
Sparsa l' ara sia di fior!
Già la tomba a me s' appresta
E coperta in negro vel.
Sia la trista fidanzata
Che, rigetta, disperata.
Non avrà perdono in ciel!

SCENA IV

LEONORA, INEZ.

LEONORA: Inez?

INEZ: Fia ver? Fernando a te consorte?

LEONORA: A me? che parli! la crudel fortuna
Tanta gioia al mio cor, no, non serbava.
Va di Fernando in traccia, e a lui disvela
Ch' io fu' del Re l' amante. Ah! s' egli m' abbandona, Nè un lamento darò, ma, se a Dio pari
Generosa perdona,
Postrata ognor servirlo,
Amarlo, benedirlo
Fia poco ancor; per lui son presta a morte.
Così gli parla; almen ch' ei sappia il vero,
E per me primo il sappia.
(Leonora parte.)

INEZ: Il zelo mio risponda: Io corro
Ad obbedirti. (S'incammina.)

SCENE III

(Leonora, alone, seating herself on a couch.)

LEONORA: Is this then true? O Heaven? Can it be, Leonora, wife of Fernando! yet all attests that it is so, although my heart still doubts such bliss is real. His wife–no, no–so dark a deed shall never be mine. Dishonor is my portion? Never! Though he spurn me from him, I will avow the truth–declare what I am. Fernando! the earth's best gifts were nothing compared to the possession of your heart; but though my love be pure as prayer, to drear despair it is doomed. I'll tell you attests that it is so, although my heart still all, even should contempt follow my avowal. If Heaven's justice be thus appeased. I'll die content, with joy quit life. Come on, then, hard of heart, my chastisement is written on high. Come on! to you it is festive sport! With flowers bedeck the altar, but let a tomb prepared be; cover with a somber veil the mourning bride, who accursed—repulsed, has lost all hope of heaven!

SCENE IV

LEONORA AND INEZ.

LEONORA: Inez!

INEZ: O lady, they say you are the affianced bride of Fernando.

LEONORA: Fernando's bride? Oh! no! For so much joy by heaven I am not reserved. Go, seek him quick–the fact disclose that I am mistress to the king. If then he hates, no sigh shall escape my bursting heart. But if perchance his love still lives, to him I'll kneel, and worship, as unto Heaven. I'd die, For him! Go, tell him all. He soon will learn the dreadful truth, and best it is he know it first from me. (Exit.)

INEZ: Your orders quick shall be obeyed; with zeal I go to do them. (She is going.)

SCENA V

INEZ; DON GASPARE (che entra per la dritta con la Prima Camerìera).

DON GASPARE: (ad Inez). Arresta. D' Alfonso ordin sovrano
T' impon che tosto a me prigion ti rendi. (Poi accennando la Cameriera.)
Dessa tu dei seguir.

INEZ: (turbata). Dio ci defendi! (Don Gaspare conduce Inez verso la Prima Camerìera, che la mena seco.)

SCENA VI

DON GASPARE, TUTTA LA CORTE, poi IL RE E FERNANDO.

CORO: Già nell' augusta cella
Di cui la volta splende,
Voce soave appella
Gli sposi al sacro altar.
Regni in què petti eterno
L'amor che sì li accende
Ed il favor superno
Di gioie spanda un mar.

FERNANDO: (entrando col Re). Ah! che da tanta gioia
Inebriato è il cor! Sogno avverato,
Insperato favor! Poss' io del pari
Ir dei più grandi al fianco.

IL RE: A ognun fia noto
Quant' io t' onori: O tu che mi salvasti,
Conte, e Marchese di Montreal t' eleggo.
(Fernando fa un gesto di sorpresa.)
Quest' ordin t' abbi ancora.
(Staccandosi una collana che gli scendeva sul petto, e mettendola al collo di Fernando, che pone un ginocchio a terra.)

DON GASPARE: (a voce bassa ai Signori che lo circondano.) Ebben che parvi?

I SIGNORI: Re son generosi!

DON GASPARE: Il prezzo è questo:
Dell' onta e dell' infamia.

I SIGNORI: È dunque vero l' imen?

DON GASPARE: Il Re gli unisce.
Insiem si conciliaro, e il patto indegno
Del pontefice dee frenar lo sdegno.

I SIGNORI: Ma vien Leonora!

DON GASPARE: Oh! la novella illustre!

SCENA VII

I MEDESIMI (Leonora entra pallida, vestita di bianco, e circondata da alcune Dame. Vedendola il Re esce con dolore.)

SCENE V

INEZ; DON GASPAR (who enters with the first Lady in waiting).

DON GASPAR: (stopping Inez). Stay! by order of the king I arrest you; (pointing to the lady in waiting) you will accompany her from here.

INEZ: (with emotion). May heaven protect me!
(Don Gaspar leads Inez to the lady, who takes her away with her.)

SCENE VI

DON GASPAR, ALL THE COURTIERS, THE KING AND FERNANDO.

CHORUS: Already in the chapel, under its splendid dome, the holy voice calls bride and bridegroom. May joy ever reign over faithful love, and happy day be theirs for age.

FERNANDO: (who has entered with the King). My heart overflows with joy! My dream proves true and I am blessed! I now may consort with Spain's best blood.

THE KING: That my esteem be known to, you, my savior—the victor of the Moors–Count Zamora, Marquis of Montreal, I you create. (Fernando expresses surprise.) This order, too, I now confer. (Fernando kneels, and the King invests him with the order.)

DON GASPAR: (to the Lords who are about him). My lords, what think you?

A LORD: The king is generous.

DON GASPAR: Thus honor is paid with shame and infamy.

A LORD: And is this marriage true?

DON GASPAR: The king unites them. It is all arranged. This shameful pact is made to stay the thunder of the Church.

A LORD: Leonora comes.

DON GASPAR: The new-made Marchioness.

SCENE VII

THE SAME.
(Leonora enters, pale, attired in white, accompanied by some ladies. As she enters, the King exit mournfully.)

LEONORA: (da sè). Io mi sorreggo appena!— (Accorgendosi che Fernando la guarda con amore.)
Oh ciel! gli sguardi
Senza rancor mi volge! il mio messaggio
Inez recava, ei mi perdona: oh sorte!

FERNANDO: (avvicinandosela). L' ara è presta, o gentil—

LEONORA: Gran Dio!

FERNANDO: Tu tremi?

LEONORA: Ah! sì, di gioia!

DON GASPARE: (ai Signori). Oh infame!

FERNANDO: Meco vieni,
E d' uno sposo al fianco ti sostieni.
(Fernando esce conducendo Leonora per mano. Le Dame e una parte dei Signori li seguono.)

SCENA VIII

DON GASPARE E UNA PARTE DEI SIGNORI.

DON GASPARE: Oh viltade! obbrobrio insano!

CORO: Questo è troppo in mia fe!

DON GASPARE: Di consorte offrir la mano—

CORO: Alla bella del Re!

DON GASPARE: Mortal di sangue abbietto!—

CORO: Senza fama ed onor!

DON GASPARE: Marchese il Re l' ha detto—

CORO: E sarà Prence ancor.

DON GASPARE: D' Alcantara l' onore a lui fu dato—
E dei tesori—

CORO: Un rango ed un portar.

TUTTI: Di sue virtudi e del suo cor bennato
Pagar fu dritto il vago avventurier.
(Ritronano i Signori usciti dal corteggio; gli altri vanno ad incontrarli, e pare domandono ragguagli della cerimonia. Il. matrimonio è fatto. Tutti manifestano la loro indignazione.)
Si tenti almen, se il nostro spregio ei sfida,
Che al vile orgoglio mai la sorte arrida:
Che alcun di noi non cerchi il suo favor,
Ch' egli abbia sol compagno il disonor!

SCENA IX

FERNANDO E I MEDESIMI.

LEONORA: I scarce can stand! To what, just heaven, am I still reserved! He knows now all. From Inez he has learnt it. My courage fails.
(She perceives Fernando, who contemplates her with joyful emotion.)

FERNANDO: (advancing). How rich in charms!

LEONORA: Oh! heaven!

FERNANDO: You dissemble.

LEONORA: With joy and love.

DON GASPAR: (to the Lords). The shameless wretch!

FERNANDO: Come love, a husband greets you now.
(Exit Fernando, leading Leonora by the hand, followed by the Ladies, and part of the Lords.)

SCENE VIII

DON GASPAR AND THE LORDS.

DON GASPAR: What deceit, unheard-of shame!

CHORUS: It is beyond belief!

DON GASPAR: A mistress thus to wed.

CHORUS: The mistress of the king!

DON GASPAR: By birth, of common blood!

CHORUS: With nor name nor honor!

DON GASPAR: A marquis is he now.

CHORUS: And will be a prince ere long.

DON GASPAR: The order, too of Alcantara, with gifts of price.

CHORUS: With rank and power. With his virtues and his goodness he has recompensed an adventurer. (The lords who left return, and are questioned relative to the marriage ceremony, which has been performed. All manifest their indignation.) Since thus he braves our deep contempt, his pride shall have a fall. Let all refuse his proffered hand; and alone with his dishonor leave him.

SCENE IX

THE SAME. FERNANDO.

FERNANDO: (nella massima gioia). Per me, del ciel propizio
Si dispiega il favor—ah! la mia gioia
Dividete voi pur; meco esultate
Di si lieto destin: ella è pur mia
Questa donna adorata: avvi ad un core
Ben più grande mel dite—

DON GASPARE E I SIGNORI: (freddamente). Avvi—l' onore!

FERNANDO: L' onor! sua nobil fiamma
A me fu sacra ognora, e dalla culla
Io la toglieva in dote, e tutti i beni,
Che posseder m' è data,
D' essa son fumo ai pari.

DON GASPARE E CORO: Un ve n' ha ch'è per te pensier più caro.

FERNANDO: Che diceste? Dell' ingiuria
Vo' ragion—no, m' ingannai—
Deh, parlate, io ve ne supplico,
Qua le destre, amici—

TUTTI: (ritirando le mani). Ah! mai. E questo nome augusto
In avvenir, Marchese,
Più non s' udrà per noi.

FERNANDO: (prorompendo). Gli atti perversi
Fian lavati col sangue.

TUTTI: Ebben si versi.

FERNANDO: Andiam.
(Tutti s' incamminano.)

SCENA X

I MEDESIMI, BALDASSARE.

BALDASSARE: Dove correte? Di quel cieco furo gl' impeti stolti Sospendete, o Cristiani.

FERNANDO: (accorrendo a lui). O Baldassare!

BALDASSARE: Figlio!
(Serrandolo tra le sue braccia.)

DON GASPARE: (ironico). Lo sposo di Leonora!

BALDASSARE: (sciogliendosi dalle braccia di Fernando e rispingendolo). O Dio!

FERNANDO: Ma che mai fu?

BALDASSARE: Deh taci! Tu sei disonorato!

FERNANDO: O! come! oh! quando
Il mio nome macchiai?

TUTTI: La destra or dando alla bella del Re!

FERNANDO: (annientado). Alla bella del Re! (Poi con gran forza.)
Che!–Lenora!–l'inferno arde sul capo mio!

BALDASSARE: Tu l' lignoravi?

FERNANDO: (con furore crescente). Alla bella del Re!

BALDASSARE: Figlio!

FERNANDO: (with much joy). Heaven smiles upon me! my lords, partake my joy; be witness of my happiness. She is mine—she whom I loved. No greater boon in heaven's gift.

DON GASPAR AND LORDS: (coolly). Yes, honor.

FERNANDO: Honor to me was ever sacred. I drank it at my mother's breast; not all the gifts on earth or heaven are half so dear to me.

DON GASPAR AND LORDS: There's one appears of higher price.

FERNANDO: What say you? This insult shall not pass! I am deceived— it cannot be; your hands, my friends.

ALL: (withdrawing their hands). That sacred name in future, my lord, do not apply to us.

FERNANDO: Blood alone can wipe out this outrage.

ALL: It shall be so.

FERNANDO: Then follow!
(They are about to follow.)

SCENE X

THE SAME, BALTHAZZAR.

BALTHAZZAR: Where do you go all? With passion blind, you hasten on to acts unworthy Christians.

FERNANDO: (running to him). Balthazzar here !

BALTHAZZAR: (embracing him). My son !

DON GASPAR: (ironically). Leonora's husband!

BALTHAZZAR: (disengages himself from Fernando, and rudely repulses him). My God!

FERNANDO: What is my crime?

BALTHAZZAR: You are dishonored.

FERNANDO: Dishonored?—how and when? My name is unsullied.

ALL: By wedding the king's mistress.

FERNANDO: (confounded). The king's mistress! (Passionately.) What! Leonora!—hell's flames do sear my brain.

BALTHAZZAR: Did you not know?

FERNANDO: (with increased rage). The king's mistress!

BALTHAZZAR: My son!

FERNANDO: Il lor sangue!
È a me devuto.

BALDASSARE: (guardando fuori di scena). Arrestati; alcun giunge.

FERNANDO: Io qui li attendo.

BALDASSARE: Fuggi.

FERNANDO: Ah no—vendetta
Adesso io vo!

BALDASSARE: Fernando, figlio mio!

FERNANDO: Padre, mi lascia, ora in me parla Iddio.

CORO: Qual furore in quell' aspetto! Il Re!

SCENA XI

I MEDESIMI, IL RE
(che tiene Leonora per mano).

FERNANDO: (andando gli incontro). Sire, io ti deggio—
Mia fortuna, mia vita.
Di Conte il nome, ogni splendor novello,
Dovizie, dignitá—beni supremi—
Che l' uom desia, ma—tu volesti—
O Dio!
Darli al prezzo crudel dell' onor mio?

IL RE: Oh ciel! di quell' alma
Il puro candor,
Perduto ha la calma
Si cangia in furor.
L' oltraggio che scende
Sul capo d' un Re,
Immobil mi rende,
Tremante mi fe'.

LEONORA: Se il ver di quell' alma
Turbava il candor.
Perchè nella calma
Serrommi al suo cor?
Ah! l'ire che intende
Rivolger sul re,
Crudeli tremende
Ricadon su me.

FERNANDO: Un giuro dell' alma
M' ha spento il candor,
A rendermi in calma,
Ritorna l'onor.
Le pene che intende
Rivolger su me,
Ricadan tremende
Sul capo del Re.

BALDASSARE: Oh ciel! di quell' alma
Il puro candor.
Perduto ha la calma,
Si cangia in furor.
L' oltraggio che scende
Sul capo del Re,
Immobil lo rende
Tremante lo fe'!

DON GASPARE E TULTI GLI ALTRI: L' oltraggio che scende
Sul capo d' un Re,
Immobil mi rende,
Tremante mi fe'.

IL RE: Or su, Fernando, ascoltami.

FERNANDO: Il tutto a me svelato.

FERNANDO: Their blood shall pay the outrage.

BALTHAZZAR: (looking off). Be calm—some one advances.

FERNANDO: Now, sweet revenge.

BALTHAZZAR: Fly.

FERNANDO: Oh! no, revenge and instantly.

BALTHAZZAR: Fernando, my son.

FERNANDO: Leave me, my father. 'Tis well they come!

CHORUS: What anger in his looks! The King.

SCENE XI

THE SAME, THE KING
(leading on Leonora).

FERNANDO: (advancing to the King). Sire, I owe you all – my fortune and my life—my noble titles, and my renown – wealth and dignity—supremest gifts that man can desire. But I have purchased them at the cruel cost of honor.

THE KING: The candor of his soul breaks forth in rage and indignation. This outrage, I own, sheds its shame upon me, and I feel all his pangs and despair.

LEONORA: If the candor of his soul is disturbed, why do not his pangs afflict my heart? The anger that now is reserved for the king should fall with force upon me.

FERNANDO: The vow that disturbs my soul's candor would be naught were my honor unsullied; the outrage intended to fall on me shall fall on the head of the king.

BALTHAZZAR: The candor of his soul breaks forth in rage and indignation. It would be nothing were his honor unsullied. The outrage intended to fall upon him shall fall on the head of the king.

DON GASPAR AND CHORUS: The outrage, etc., etc.

THE KING: A word, Fernando.

FERNANDO: I know all.

LEONORA: (Ei non sapea mio fato!)

FERNANDO: Manto d'infamia a tessermi,
Me sol sceglieva il Re.

IL RE (sdegnato). Marchese!—

FERNANDO: Io tal non sono.
Ogni pregiato dono
Saprà calcar mio pie.
Signori, a onor tornatemi;
Bersaglio della sorte,
In vado incontro a morte,
E il solo nome ognor
Avrò del genitor.

LEONORA: (nel maggior smarrimento). Inez, rispondi, ov' è? (Piano a Don Gaspare.)

DON GASPARE: (piano a Leonora). Inez, racchiusa in carcere—

LEONORA: (annientata). Or tutto è noto a me.

FERNANDO: (distaccandosi dal collo l'ordine ricevuto dal Re).
Quest' ordin venerato,
Prezzo d' infamia, io rendo.
(squainando la spada.)
Il brando profanato,
De' tuoi nemici al ciglio
Tanto finor tremendo,
Lo spezzo e sal perchè?
Sol perchè tu sei Re.

IL RE: Troppo, ah! troppo, in questo giorno.
Cadde in me d' oltraggio e scorno:
Trema, ingrato, i miei dolori
Tu raddoppi e il mio furor!
La vendetta che tu implori,
Nel rimorso è del mio cor.

LEONORA: Grazia, o Sire, in questo giorno!
Su noi cadde infausto scorno.
(A Fernando.)
Nobil alma, i tuoi furori
Sono strali pel mio cor.
La vendetta che tu implori,
Ben l' avrai ma m' odi ancor.
Maledetta è l' ora e il giorno
Che in me cadde un tanto scorno;
Che compenso a' miei sudori
Mi gittasti infamia ed or:
Serba, serba i tuoi tesori,
Lascia solo a me l' onor.

BALDASSARE: Re, sul capo in questo giorno
Ti ricadde e danno e scornio;
Del tuo manto agli splendori
Pur commisto è il disonor!
Vieni, o figlio, a' tuoi dolori
Calma implora dal Signor!

DON GASPARE E CORO: Su noi cadde in questo giorno
Il trimorso e insiem lo scorno!
Lo spregiammo, e di a alti onori
Degno è assai quel nobil cor.
Vanne, o prode, e a' tuoi dolori
Calma implora dal Signor.
(Movimento generale. Fernando esce seguito da Baldassare, i Signori rispettosamente aprono le loro file per lasciarlo passare e s'inchinano innanci a lui.)

LEONORA: (aside). He did not know my cruel fate.

FERNANDO: By you I was chosen as a cloak for all your infamy.

THE KING: (with anger). Marquis!

FERNANDO: I disown that title, and all your gifts alike despise. My lords, recall your contempt. The sport of fate I go, and with me carry the unstained honor of my ancestors.

LEONORA: (aside to Don Gaspar, wildly). Answer me, where is Inez?

DON GASPAR: (aside to Leonora). She is a prisoner.

LEONORA: (overshadowed). I see all now!

FERNANDO: (taking off the order he received from the king). This order, the price of shame, I return. (He draws his sword.) This degraded blade, once the terror of Spain's worst foes, I break. My reason?—because you art king. Accursed be the day and hour when so much shame fell on me which you did deem with gold to recompense. Keep wealth and power; to me be left my only treasure, honor.

THE KING: You say too much, that I enshared thee to scorn and shame. Tremble, ingrate lest my ire should overlook your pangs of heart – lest my vengeance should displace the remorse I feel for your wrongs.

LEONORA: Mercy, O King ! on us has fallen scorn and shame. (To Fernando) Oh! noble soul! your just despair lies heavy at my heart. The vengeance which you seek to wreak, oh ! wreak on me alone.

BALTHAZZAR: King! on you, this day, be all the shame and scorn! The splendor of your robes will not conceal your dishonor. Come my son, your grief assuage in prayer to God most high.

DON GASPAR AND CHORUS: This day on us falls shame and scorn, together with remorse! We despised him but his noble heart is worthy of the highest honor. Go, then, oh ! valiant one, and implore the Lord to calm thy griefs.
(General movement. Fernando and Balthazzar exeunt. The Lords respectfully making a passage for them, and saluting them as they pass.)

FIN DELL' ATTO TERZO.

■ ATTO IV

(Il teatro rappresenta il Chiostro del Convento di S. Giacomo. A dritto si trova il portico della Chiesa, in faccia una gran Croce sopra uno zocculo di marmo. Qua e la delle tombe e delle croci di legno. Il dì nascente rischiora solamente la parte scoperta del Chiostro; i primi piani sono ancora attenebrati per l' ombre gettate dai muri della Chicsa.)

SCENA I

RELIGIOSI, BALDASSARE.

(Alcuni Religiosi sono prostrati a pie della Croce: altri da lungi scavasse le loro tombe, e ad intervalli ripetono:)

CORO: Scaviano l'asilo ove il dolore ha tregua.
(Un religioso introduce de' Pellegrini, che si dirigono verso la Chiesa, c s' arrestano innanzi al portico ove comparisce Baldassare.)

BALDASSARE E CORO: Splendon più belle—in ciel le stelle
De' penitenti il puro cor:
Lungi del mondo dalle procelle,
Al nume ascenda con vivo ardor.
(I Religiosi si allontanano attraverso le arcute del chiostro: i Pellegrini entrano nella Cappella. Un solo Religioso è rimasto in piedi, immobile, col volto nascosto tra le mani: Fernando.)

SCENA II

FERNANDO E BALDASSARE.

BALDASSARE: O fratel mio, fra poco
Un giuramento eterno
Alla terra t' invola e ti congiunge
Eternamente al cielo.

FERNANDO: Allor che la bufera
Del mondo io scelsi, il porto
Abondonando, ben dicesti, "O figlio,
Tu riederai!" mi vedi!
Torno a cercar la pace
E l' obblio che qui dà la morte.

BALDASSARE: È vero. Su, coraggio, Fernando,
Se Dio t' appella, a lui pensar sol dei.
Giurato appena il santo voto, è pos-

END OF THE THIRD ACT.

■ ACT IV

(The Cloisters of the Convent of St. James. On the right, the portico of the Church, opposite which is seen a large Cross on a stone base. The rising sun illumines that part of the cloister which is seen. The other portions are obscured by the shadows thrown by the Church walls.)

SCENE I

MONKS, BALTHAZZAR.

(Some monks are seen kneeling before the Cross, others are seen in the distance digging their graves, who repeat at intervals:)

THE CHORUS: We dig the haven where we shall rest in peace. (A monk introduces some pilgrims, who proceed to the church and stop before the portico where Balthazzar appears.)

BALTHAZZAR AND CHORUS: What sight so great as the stars of heaven! The pious chants of guileless hearts reach the gracious throne of mercy in welcome accents.
(The monks exeunt through the arches of the Cloisters. The pilgrims enter the chapel; one monk remains, his face concealed in his hands, and motionless—it is Fernando.)

SCENE II

FERNANDO, BALTHAZZAR.

BALTHAZZAR: The time is near, my brother, when an eternal vow will sever you from earth, to join you unto heaven.

FERNANDO: When I left the haven of peace to brave the angry storms of the world, you then said, "O son! you soon again will seek its calm." I now return, and in its hallowed walls await that peace and oblivion which death alone can bring.

BALTHAZZAR: It is so! But courage, Fernando. When heaven calls upon you to it alone your thoughts devote. Your holy vow is now recorded, and henceforth between

Fra te e i pensier del mondo
Una tomba, che porta obblio profondo.

FERNANDO: Mi lasci?

BALDASSARE: Inoltra al tempio
Un novizio mi attende: in questa notte
Ei qui giungeva, misero ed infermo
Il mio soccorso chiede.

FERNANDO: Giovine ancora?

BALDASSARE: Nell' età più verde,
Abbattuto, tremante, egli omai vide
L' ultimo giorno!

FERNANDO: Ah! sì, la doglia uccide!
(Baldassare prende Fernando per le mani come per rinvigorirne il coraggio, poi parte.)

SCENA III

FERNANDO: (solo). Favorita del Re! Qual nero abisso,
Qual mai trama infernale, la gloria mia
Avvolse in un istante,
E ogni speme troncò del core amante.
Spirto gentil—ne' sogni miei
Brillasti un dì—ma ti perdei.
Fuggi dal cor—mentita speme,
Larve d'amor—fuggite insieme.
A te d'accanto—posi in obblio
Miei voti e Dio—virtù ed onor?
Nume clemente—torna a quest' alma
La dolce calma - sperdi l' amor!

SCENA IV

FERNANDO, BALDASSARE, RELIGIOSI.

BALDASSARE: Ebben, sei presto?

FERNANDO: O padr, all' ara santa
Ti seguo già.

BALDASSARE: Deh vieni, e voglia Iddio
Rivelarsi al tuo core!
(Baldassare e Fernando entrano nella cappella. I Religiosi li seguono in silenzio. Leonora comparisce sotto l' abito d' un Novizio, si pone innanzi al portico della Chiesa, cercando distinguere le sembianze del Religiosi, che passano col capo abbassato sotto i cappucci)

SCENA V

LEONORA, sola.

LEONORA: Fernando, ah! dov' egli è? di questo chiostro
Egli abita le mura! in tale ammanto
T' offendo, O Dio, ma fa che insino a lui
Mi fia dato inoltar; dal rio dolore
Oh! Come affranta io sono!

the world and you no more remembrance must exist.

FERNANDO: Why leave me?

BALTHZAAZR: Near to the temple a novice, who this night arrived—young, but of infirm health, and suffering, claims my earliest care.

FERNANDO: Is he still young?

BALTHAZZAR: In the bloom of life, health-broken and forlon; his days, I fear, are numbered.

FERNANDO: Ah! yes, for grief may kill. (Balthazzar takes the hand of Fernando as if to rouse him, and exit.)

SCENE III

FERNANDO alone.

FERNANDO: The king's mistress! The dreadful snare! Into what a dark abyss has all my glory sunk forever; and from this heart all hope is quite shut out. Gentle spirit, life of my dream, forever lost, though newly found—specious vision—deceitful love, no more my heart acknowledges you. For love of you my love for God grew weak, and virtue, honor nearly lost. In mercy's name restore my soul its former peace, and banish all memory of my love.

SCENE IV

FERNANDO, BALTHAZZAR AND MONKS.

BALTHAZZAR: Are you ready?

FERNANDO: I will follow you to the sacred altar.

BALTHAZZAR: Stay not; and may Heaven reveal itself unto you.
(Balthazzar and Fernando enter the Chapel, the monks following, in silence. Leonora appears, in the habit of a novice, and places herself before the church, endeavoring to distinguish the features of the monks who pass with their cowls over their heads.)

SCENE V

Leonora alone.

LEONORA: Fernando! ah! where is he? Within these cloisters now he dwells. In this disguise, grant, O God, whom I have so offended that I may meet him. With grief overwhelmed, I scarcely can stand. My death draws near. Life's breath I

Pressa a morir, della mia vita il dono
Prendi, gran Dio, ma di Fernando al piede
Deh! m' ottieni il perdono.

CORO DI RELIGIOSI: (nella Chiesa). Che te, l' Eterno di sue grazie imprima
Voto d' un' alma in santa prece assorta!

LEONORA: Che ascolto? un voto che dall' ara sorge!
E vola al cielo.

CORO: (c. s.). Udite vo del monte sulla cima
Voce dell' angiol che salute apporta?

LEONORA: Oh! qual sarà quest' alma
Che si toglie alla terra?

FERNANDO: (c. s.). Io mi consacro al culto tuo, Signor!
Vieni, e d' un raggio illumina il mio cor.

LEONORA: È desso, è desso!
Perduto al mondo! egli ritorna a Dio!
Fuggiam da queste soglie—ohimè!—noi posso!
La morte il cor m'agghiaccia!
(Cade spossata al piede della Croce.)

SCENA VI

LEONORA, FERNANDO.

FERNANDO: (esce agitato dalla Chiesa). I voti miei
Fur pronunziati! e, mal mio grado, io sento
Terror segreto in l'agitato spirto,
Io fuggii dall'altare.

LEONORA: (tentando levarsi) O Dio! qual pena!
Qual freddo! ohimè!

FERNANDO: (guardando intorno) Che ascolto?
Un infelice al suol!
(Avvicinandosi).
Deh! ti rincora.

LEONORA: O Dio!

FERNANDO: (riculando con orrore). È dessa!

LEONORA: (supplichevole). Non maledir, Leonora!

FERNANDO: Ah! va, t'invola, e questa terra
Più non profana il rio tuo piè!
Fa che io tranquillo scenda sotterra,
Non maledetto al par di te,
Nelle sue sale il Re t'appella,
D'oro e d'infamia ti coprirà;
Al fianco suo sarai più bella,
Tuo nome infame ognor sarà.

LEONORA: In fra i ghiacci, le rupi, i sterpi, i sassi, Ognor pregando, al chiostro tuo mi trassi.

freely yield to you my God; but grant me yet a little while, to crave Fernando's pardon.

CHORUS OF MONKS IN THE CHURCH: May Heaven's grace and holy joy succeed the vows you make.

LEONORA: What do I hear? Some blessed soul vowing eternal service to its Creator!

THE CHORUS: Hear you from the mountain top an angel's voice announcing salvation?

LEONORA: Oh! whose soul is it that is thus separated from the world?

FERNANDO (in the church). To your service I consecrate myself, O Lord! Oh! let your grace possess my soul.

LEONORA: It is he! it is he! to earth now lost! to heaven he now belongs. Oh! let me quit this spot!—Alas I cannot! My death-struck limbs refuse their office!
(She falls overpowered at the foot of the Cross.)

SCENE VI

LEONORA, FERNANDO.
(Fernando enters from the church in an agitated manner.)

FERNANDO: I have pronounced my vows! yet despite all, some secret terror pervades my soul. I have left the altar.

LEONORA: (endeavoring to rise). What pains! O God! my limbs are frozen!

FERNANDO: (looking around him). What did I hear? A suffering wretch on the cold earth. Let me assist. (Approaches.)

LEONORA: It is he!

FERNANDO: Just Heaven! (Recoiling from her.)

LEONORA: Ah! do not curse me!

FERNANDO: Hence, begone! nor thus profane this holy spot. In peace I seek to end my days. My malediction comes from you. The king your presence in his palace waits, to deck your brows with gold and shame! His love will soften all your cares, though infamous thy name will ever be.

LEONORA: I came to these cloisters praying; and kneeling oft, my bleeding wounds are torn and chafed and bleeding sore.

FERNANDO: O tu che m'ingannasti,
Che pretendi da me?

Leonora: D'ambo sul capo
Un solo error ricade,
Sperai che il nero arcano a te svelato
Inez avesse e il tuo perdon sperai,
Credimi, non si mente
Sull'orlo della tomba.
Infino, a te, Fernando,
Non giunse il messo, e fu celato il vero,
O ciel! Fernando, il tuo perdono io spero.
Clemente al par di Dio, ch'oggi accoglia tua fe,
Mira lo strazio mio. Abbi pietà di me
D'onta fatal segnata,
Null'altra speme ho in sen,
Che di morir beata
Del tuo perdono almen.
Al nero affanno, al mio tormento
Alfin pietà ti parli al cor.

FERNANDO: A quell'affanno, a quell'accento
Sento ahimè! stemprarsi il cor!
O giusto Dio, su me discondi,
Rendi all'alma il suo vigor.

LEONORA: Io tanto duolo, se non t'arrendi,
Io morrò più trista ancor.

FERNANDO: Addio, fuggir mi lascia.

LEONORA: Disarma il tuo furor.
Ah! di mia cruda ambascia
Pietà del mio dolor.
Al mio duolo, al mio spavento
Di conforto un solo accento!
Per tuo padre ei fia concesso,
Per la morte a cui son presso
Fa men crudo il mio dolore,
Per l'amor de' lieti dì.

FERNANDO: O Leonora! il mio furore!
Come foglia inaridì!

LEONORA: Tua mercede alfin mi dona,
O mi spingi nell'avel.
(Gettandosi a' piedi di lui.)

FERNANDO: Io t'amo. Iddio perdona—

LEONORA: E tu dunque?

FERNANDO: Io t'amo.

LEONORA: O ciel!

FERNANDO: Vieni, ah! vieni, io m'abbandono
Alla gioia che m'inebria;
Del mio cor t'è reso il trono,
Teco allato io vo' morir.
Come lampo sorge all'anima
Una voce ed un pensiero.
Fuggi, ascondi al mondo intero.
la tua vita, il tuo gioir.

LEONORA: E fia vero? io m'abbandono
Alla gioia che m'inebria!
Del suo cor m'è reso il trono,
Pago appieno è il mio desir,
(A Fernando.)
Ma risponder non sa l'anima
A tua voce, al tuo pensiero?
Deh, nascondi al mondo intero
La mia vita, il mio morir.

FERNANDO: Fuggiam, fuggiamo insieme.

LEONORA: Ah! taci, è vana speme.
(Si sente il coro de' Religiosi nella Chiesa.)

CORO: Che te l'Eterno di sue grazie imprima
Voto d'un'alma in santa prece assorta!

LEONORA: (spaventata). Quel concento odi ut?

FERNANDO: Fuggiamo.

LEONORA: È il cielo Che ti parla.

FERNANDO: Fuggiamo; in te riposto
Mio fato è sol, deh! vieni!

LEONORA: Pensa a'tuoi voti.

FERNANDO: Or più forte è l'amor; per possederti Io tutto affronterò, la terra e il cielo.

LEONORA: (sentendo mancarsi sempre più). Ah! del nume il favor, dal nero abisso
Ecco ti salva—addio!—poter supremo
Ti risparma un delitto, ah! di mia sorte
Io non mi lagno—Iddio, Fernando, il vuole.
Dell'onta—alfin ti lavo—
Colla morte—

FERNANDO: Fuggiam.

LEONORA: È vano—è vano!

FERNANDO: Leonora.

LEONORA: Il fier tormento—La mia vita è compiuta—

FERNANDO: O ciel! Leonora!

LEONORA: Io muoio perdonata—
Fernando!—e son—beata— oltre la tomba—
Riuniti sarem—addio! (Muore.)

Fernando: Leonora! (Piegandosi sul cadavere.)
Al soccorso! al soccorso! È la mia voce
Che ti richiama; i lumi ancor dischiudi,
Son io, son io tuo sposo! ah! tutto è indarno!
Al soccorso! al soccorso!

SCENA VII

(Leonora distesa in terra, Fernando, Baldassare, che esce dalla Chiesa, seguito da' Religiosi.)

FERNANDO: Oh! padre! è dessa!
Mira, Leonora!

BALDASSARE: Oh! chi veggio!

FERNANDO: Deceived by you, what seek you now from me?

LEONORA: The pains of a single error fall on us both. I thought that Inez had revealed the dark secret; and hoped for pardon. My grave now gapes; and therefore I speak nothing but truth I deemed the revelation had been made, Fernando. Refuse not, then, forgiveness. That heaven to which you now are vowed, its mercy extend to me. My tear-dimmed eyes your pity crave. Victim of a fatal shame, the earth to me has lost its charms; nor can I die in peace, unless you say your pardon I have gained. Deep is my anguish at my dark crimes; compassion, then, bestow.

FERNANDO: Her accents of despair afflict my heart. O God! watch over me lest my faltering soul succumb.

LEONORA: Turn not away compassion's ear, or sad my death will be.

FERNANDO: Farewell! I must not stay.

LEONORA: Dispel your wrath and let my grief by pity now be soothed. One word from you will bring comfort—my heart-wrung prayers, oh heed! I ask it in your father's name I feel my veins are dry. Relieve the anguish of my soul in memory of past love.

FERNANDO: Just Heaven! my heart now throbs with all the love I bore her once.

LEONORA: Forgive! your mercy I implore, or I die at your feet. (Throws herself at his feet).

FERNANDO: Ah! Leonora, Heaven forgives.

LEONORA: But you?

FERNANDO: I love you still.

LEONORA: Oh! joy!

FERNANDO: Come, ah! come! I yield to the intoxicating bliss. My heart's throne you resume with you I will live and die.

LEONORA: Fly then, and hide from the whole world thy past life, our fading joys. Can this be true? I yield to the intoxicating bliss. His heart's throne is once more mine, all my wishes are fulfilled. (To Fernando). But my soul cannot respond to your words or to your thoughts. Oh! may both my life and death be concealed from the whole world. Like the lightning's vivid flash, a thought, a word illumes my soul.

FERNANDO: Then let us fly together.

LEONORA: Ah! forbear; vain is the hope.
(The Chorus of monks is heard in the church).

THE CHORUS: May Heaven's grace and holy joy succeed the vows you make.

LEONORA: Do you hear those words?

FERNANDO: Let's leave. On you alone my hopes are fixed.

LEONORA: Think of your vows.

FERNANDO: My love is still more dear—for you I brave both heaven and earth.

LEONORA: (faintly). Heaven's grace will save him still from despair and perdition. Farewell! Oh! power supreme! I save you from a crime. I pine not now at fate—Fernando.—It is God's will! From shame I now absolve you—by my death –.

FERNANDO: We'll fly.

LEONORA: In vain—in vain, you say it!

FERNANDO: Leonora!

LEONORA: My heart's anguish—I feel I die!—

FERNANDO: O God! My Leonora!

LEONORA: You've pardoned—Fernando—I am—blessed.—Beyond the tomb—we'll meet—farewell. (She dies).

FERNANDO: Help! oh! help! It is my voice recalls you. Oh! smile once more! 'Tis I—your husband! I call in vain! Oh! help! help!

SCENE VII

(Leonora, dead. Fernando, Balthazzar, who enters from the church, followed by the monks).

FERNANDO: O father! it is she! See it is Leonora!

BALTHAZZAR: What do I see?

FERNANDO: Leonora!

BALDASSARE: Silenzio!
(Si avvicina a Leonora, ed abbassa il cappuccio sui di lei cappelli sparsi, Poi volgendosi ai Religiosi.)
Più non è! Spento è il novizio. Le vostre preci a lui, fratelli! (Tutti si prostrano.)

FERNANDO: Leonora!

BALTHAZZAR: Silence. (He approaches the body of Leonora and covers her dishevelled hair with the hood of her dress). Life is extinct ; the novic e is dead. My brethren, let us pray!
(They all kneel).

FERNANDO: O Dio! Avrò diman la stessa prece anch'io!

CALA LA TELA.

FERNANDO: O Heaven! tomorrow you will put up those same prayers for me .

CURTAIN FALLS.

La Figlia Del Reggimento (1840)

The Daughter of the Regiment

MUSIC BY GAETANO DONIZETTI ■ LIBRETTO BY JULES HENRI VERNOY DE SAINT-GEORGES & JEAN FRANÇOIS BAYARD

This two-act opera, set to a libretto by Jules Henri Vernoy de Saint-Georges and Jean Francois Bayard, premiered at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on February 11, 1840. La Fille du Regiment was Donizetti's first opera to be performed in French. The story takes place in Switzerland. Battle rages in a Swiss valley. The Marquise de Birkenfeld stops at a village and encounters Sulpice, sergeant of the Savoyard soldiers and Marie, the "daughter of the regiment," who grew up among the soldiers. Tonio, who is in love with Marie, is found following the troops and is arrested as a spy. Marie intervenes on his behalf, explaining that Tonio saved her life. Although she is in love with him, her regiment will only allow her to marry a grenadier. Tonio enlists. Sulpice, upon learning that the Marquise requires an escort to accompany her to Birkenfeld, remembers that a Captain Roberto Birkenfeld entrusted his daughter Marie to his regiment before his death. The Marquise is certain that Marie is her niece and takes her to her castle. Although she is happy to have found her family at long last, Marie misses Tonio and the regiment. Marie receives Sulpice at the castle; he finds her to be almost unrecognizable. Tonio, now an officer, arrives with the regiment at the castle. Tonio and Marie reaffirm their love, but the Marquise has arranged for Marie to marry the Duke of Krakentorp. The Marquise turns out to be Marie's mother and Marie feels that she must obey her wish. However, when faced with their mutual unhappiness, the Marquise has a change of heart and allows Marie and Tonio to marry.

SCENA I

(Alla destra una casipola; alla sinistra le prime case d'un villaggio; da lontano delle montagne. La Marchesa di Birkenfeld è assisa sopra un banco rustico alla sinistra. Ortensio sta a lato di lei. Paesani Tirolesi son aggruppati sopra una collinetta di dietro come di guardia, intanto le loro mogli e figlie si sono prostrate avanti in ginocchio, verso il lato sinistro, innanzi all'Immagine di pietra della Vergine.)

CORO: (sulla colonna). Armiamcei in silenzio,
Ci assista l'ardir.—
Che l'oste avversaria,
Già sembra venir,
Andiam—andiam.

CORO DI DONNE: (in ginocchio).
Cielo elemente,
Cielo possente
Prostrate a te,
Chiediam consiglio
In tal periglio
Danne mercè.

ORETENSIO: Ma si calma—via Marchesa,
Si remetta faccia cor!

LA MARCHESA: Da nemicei, oh Dio! sorpresa
Qui—ad un tratto-è un vero orror.

■ ACT I

SCENE I

(On the right is a cottage; on the left the first houses of a village; in the background are mountains. The Marchioness of Birkenfeld is seated on a rustic bench on the left, Ortensius standing by her side. Tyrolese Peasants are grouped on a rising ground behind, as if on the look-out, while their wives and daughters kneel in front, towards the left hand, before a stone Image of the Virgin.)

CHORUS OF MEN: Up! the foe's advancing;
To arms, friends, to arms!
For home we battle!
Who, then, will shrink from war's alarms?

CHORUS OF WOMEN: Santa Maria,
Gentle and holy,
Lo, lo! to you
We bend in prayer;
Maiden and mother,
Behold our despair.

ORTENSIUS: Take heart, I pray, my noble lady:
Our friends approach, and soon they will be here.

THE MARCHIONESS: Yes, but I doubt the enemy is closer;
Those sounds!—they seem so very near.

CORO: (un Paesan sulla Montagna). Son da nemici i monti abbandonati;
Coraggio, amici mici, siam salvati!

CORO: Eh! niente paura
Viva il piacer,
La loro ventura
Non dessi temer.
La pace bramata
Rallegra ogni cor.
La terra salvata
Rinasce all'amor.
È salvo l'onor, eh! niente paura.
Mi viva il piacer.—La, la, la, la!

LA MARCHESA: Deh! mi reggete per pietà—Ragazzi—
Deh! non m'abbandonate.

ORTENSIO: E chi poteva immaginarsi mai,
Che il giorno appunto, in cui vostra Eccellenza, di Lauffen rispettabile Marchesa, al nativo Castel volgea le Spalle, volesser le milizie di Savoja,
(Abbandonando a un tratto le frontiere)
Le marcie ripigliar?

LA MARCHESA: Ma che far deggio? andar inmanzi—
Oppur tornare addietro?

ORTENSIO: Ma—Eccellenza—

CHORUS: (Peasants entering from behind). Friends, rejoice; see the French retreating:
All the danger is past.

CHORUS: Rejoice, brave companions, for the peril's over;
Their star, it has set, and it rises no more.
Peace, life's greatest blessing,
Returns again;
An our songs of triumph
Sound on hill and plain.—
The heavens be praised!
Our country is saved, and no more shall we fear.
But live happily in our villages here.

THE MARCHIONESS: Alas! support me, for pity, my friends!
Alas! do not abandon me.

ORTENSIUS: And who would ever have imagined
That precisely on the day on which your Ladyship, the honored Marchioness of Laufen,
Returned to your native place, the castle.—
The armies of Savoy should have chosen
(Quitting, at once, the frontiers)
To resume their march?

THE MARCHIONESS: But what shall we do now? go on,
Or turn back?

ORTENSIUS: But—your ladyship—

LA MARCHESA: Indagate—vedete—esaminate—prendete
Lingua in somma; e la vettura, ditemi
Ortensio—sarà poi sicura?

ORTENSIO: In quanto a questo—

LA MARCHESA: Che fra costoro ad aspettarvi resto.
(Entra Sulpizio, poi Maria.)

SULPIZIO: Corpo di mille diavoli? che gambe hanno cotesti Svizzeri:
Temono della guerra ed invece abbiam la pace
Sul palmo della mano. In ogni vico sortito è il manifesto—
E tutti quelli che sdegnar di Savoja
Seguitar la bandiera,
Possono rimanersi e buona sera!
Ma chi arriva? Scommetto i camerati
No davvero—è Maria—la figlia nostra—
La perla e l'ornamento dell'undecimo invitto reggimento.
Eccola quà.—Veh! un po' s'ella è gentile!
Più felice esser puote il reggimento,
Che tal figlia possiede?

MARIA: Il reggimento mio! ne vo propria superba!
E desso che ha vegliato con affetto paterno
Agli anni miei primieri!

SULPIZIO: Non è vero?

MARIA: Ma poi—senza adularmi—di fargli enore lo credo.

SULPIZIO: Senza dubbio! gentil come un amore—

MARIA: D'un militare io chiudo in petto il core.

Apparvi alla luce,
Sul campo guerrier:
E il suon del tamburo,
Mio solo piacer.
S'affretta alla gloria
Intrepido il cor;
Savoja e vittoria!
E il grido d'onor.

SULPIZIO: Io l'ho educata, Non c'è che dire
Con quel sentire, Con quel vigor;
Una Duchessa Non può vantare
Più nobil fare,
Più amabil cor:—
No!

SULPIZIO: Oh! che bel giorno fu quel che il cielo,
Ancor fanciulla t'offerse a me
Quando il tuo pianto, turbò il silenzio
Del campo intero che accorse a te.

MARIA: Ognun qual padre dolce amoroso
Sul proprio dorso recommi allor.

SULPIZIO: E m'era il sacco di munizione, che bel dì!

THE MARCHIONESS: Consider—see—examine—take counsel!
And the carriage, tell me, Ortensio.
Will it, then, be safe?

ORTENSIUS: As to that—

THE MARCHIONESS: Go—be quick—
I will wait for you among those people.
(Enter Sulpizio, then Maria.)

SULPIZIO: A thousand devils! what legs those Swiss have!
They fear war, and therefore have thrust Peace upon us. Everywhere
The manifesto has gone forth—and all those who disdained
To follow the standard of Savoy may stay behind!
And farewell to them! But who comes here?
I guess some comrades—
No, indeed, it is Maria, our daughter,
The pearl and ornament of the unconquered Twentieth.
There she is. Ah, how beautiful!
Oh, how happy is the regiment
That possesses such a daughter!

MARIA: My regiment! I am proud of it indeed!
And it has watched with paternal affection
Over my youthful years.

SULPIZIO: Is it not true?

MARIA: But now—without flattery—I think I do them honor.

SULPIZIO: Without question. You are graceful as a Cupid.

MARIA: A soldier's heart pants in my bosom.

The camp was my birth-place,
Amongst men brave and free;
And the drum is the music that Sounds sweetest to me,
I march with the foremost
When dangers invite;
The fiercer the battle,
The more my delight.

SULPIZIO:
It is all my doing,
I own it freely;
And how genteelly
She marches on;
No duchess ever
Was half so clever
With pike, or sabre,
Or even with a gun.

SULPIZIO: How we then rejoiced to find you,
On the battle-field—deserted!
Each eye looked upon you in pity,
Each would claim you, then, for his own.

MARIA: You took me up, and bore me off,
With all the love that mothers feel.

SULPIZIO:
Glorious day!

MARIA: D'ogni altra culla ben più miglior!

SULPIZIO: E dolce sonno gustavi allor,
Mentre il tamburo facca rumor.

MARIA: E dolce sonno gustava allor,
Mentre il tamburo facea rumor.
Or poi che sono più grandicella
Ciascun la mano porta al bonnet.

SULPIZIO: E la consegna, ragazza bella,
E quest'omaggio dovuto a te.

MARIA: Con voi divido sul campo ognor
E strage, ieste e buon umor.

SULPIZIO: Ed ai feriti facendo cor
La destra stringi del vincitor.

MARIA: Quindi alla sera, alla cantina
Chi v'incoraggia? chi v'affascina?

SULPIZIO: In noi chi desta letizia e ardir?
Sei tu, sei tu—non c'è che dir.

MARIA: È quindi in merto del mio talento,
A voti unanimi il reggimento
Sua vivandiera mi nominò.

SULPIZIO: Sua vivandiera a voti unanimi.

MARIA: Ah! si.
Il reggimento mi nominò—

SULPIZIO: Il reggimento ti nominò.

MARIA: Son persuasissima che alla battaglia
Io pur cogli altri
Saprei pugnar.

SULPIZIO: Saprai pugnar.

MARIA: Si—e schioppi, e sciabole, bombe e mitraglia,
Con voi pugnando saprei sfidar.

SULPIZIO: Oh! saprei sfidar

MARIA: Se un figlio al padre dee somigliar.
Al mio somiglio.

SULPIZIO: Si—quest'è parlar.

MARIA: La gloria voglio.

SULPIZIO: Benone affè.

MARIA: Io vo' marciar.

SULPIZIO: Quest'è parlar!

MARIA: En avant—

SULPIZIO: En avant.

MARIA: Suol l'undecimo gridar—

SULPIZIO: Suol l'undecimo gridar.

MARIA: En avant—en avant—

MARIA: Yes, and then, instead of a cradle,
I was rocked in a cap of steel.

SULPIZIO: In which you seemed to be at home,
Sleeping to the rolling drum.

MARIA: In which I seemed to be at home.
Sleeping to the rolling drum.
But now, my friends, I've grown older
Sapperment!–they all salute me so.

SULPIZIO: Of course, of course; you fathers all
Salute à militaire, you know.

MARIA: On days of feast, in battle's tumult,
Still I'm first upon the field.

SULPIZIO: And give fresh courage to the wounded,
Making their shield of your breast.

MARIA: And then, who is it over the goblet
That sings at evening gay and wild?

SULPIZIO: Or plays a thousand tricks upon us?
It is still the regiment's gallant child.

MARIA: And better yet, to try my talent,
My fathers made me sutler to the corps–
There's an honor!–never conferred before.

SULPIZIO: We chose you by general consent.

MARIA: Oh yes;
All consented–sutler was I named by all.

SULPIZIO: All consented–sutler were you named by all.

MARIA: And in the day of glorious battle,
When cannons rattle,
I'm still the first.

SULPIZIO: She's still the first.

MARIA: Yes! I fear not swords nor the bullet,
And know to fight like one of you.

SULPIZIO: Ha! she fights like one of us!

MARIA: My kind father's fame, I hold, is sacred;
I've made it more.

SULPIZIO: Ha! she has made it more.

MARIA: And in the field–

SULPIZIO: And in the field–

MARIA: I'm still the first.

SULPIZIO: She's still the first.

MARIA: March away–

SULPIZIO: March away–

MARIA: Where the guns and sabres play–

SULPIZIO: Where the guns and sabres play–

MARIA: March away–march away–

SULPIZIO: En avant—en avant.

MARIA: Apparvi alla luce,
Sul campo guerrier.
E il suon del tamburo mio solo piacer
Rataplan, rataplan rataplan, rataplan.
En avant—rataplan, rataplan,
March!
Mi chiama l'onor—present!
Present! March!
Sargente del reggimento,
En avant, rataplan, rataplan.
Rataplan, rataplan rataplan, rataplan.

SULPIZIO: Apparve alla luce,
Sul campo guerrier.
Il suon del tamburo suo solo piacer.
Rataplan, rataplan rataplan, rataplan.
E il suo grido d'onor.
Savoja, vittoria è suo grido d'onor.
Vivandiera del reggimento,
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.
Present!
Rataplan, rataplan rataplan, rataplan.

SULPIZIO: No, no Maria; non va ben: da noi
Tu fosti adottata, protetta ed allevata,
Colle nostre mensili economie;
E ci devi riguardo e confidenza.

MARIA: Ma, Sulpizio, mio caro, abbi pazienza.

SULPIZIO: Abbila tu pur ora, e stammi attenta;
Sai che non fu possibile scoprir la
Tua famiglia, il tuo paese, in onta
Ad una lettera trovata su di te:
Riposta quindi nel fondo del mio sacco
A posto fisso, e che—

MARIA: Ma se so tutto?

SULPIZIO: E perchè dunque soletta e pensierosa,
Sorti dalla cantina fuggendo i camerata,
Eh?

MARIA: Perchè?

SULPIZIO: M'han detto che nell'ultimo nostro accampamento
T'han sorpresa in colloquio con un—ma non Sarà vero.

MARIA: Anzi è la verità—parlo sincero—
Con un giovine Svizzero, gentil, garbato.
E che mi tolse un giorno da sicuro

SULPIZIO: March away–march away–

MARIA: The camp was my birthplace,
Amongst men brave and free.
And the drum is the music that sounds sweetest to me.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.
Then advance– rataplan, rataplan!
March!
For fame and for honor–
Fame and renown!
Present! March!
The Regiment is my glory!
Then advance, rataplan, rataplan.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.

SULPIZIO: The camp was her birthplace,
Amongst men brave and free.
The sound of the drum must be sweet music.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.
Rataplan, it is the roll of the drum,
It leads us to honor, fame, and renown.
Present!
Vivandiere beloved by our regiment.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.

SULPIZIO:
No, no, Maria; it is not well:
You were adopted, protected, and brought up by us
By our little savings on the passing month:
And you owe us regard and confidence.

MARIA: But, my dear Sulpizio, be patient.

SULPIZIO: Have patience yourself, this time, and attend to me,
You know that it was not possible to discover
Your family, your country, although
A letter was found upon you;
It now lies at the bottom of my knapsack,
Safely kept; and that–

MARIA: But suppose I know all this?

SULPIZIO: And why, then, lonely and pensive,
Do you leave the canteen, and quit our society.
Eh?

MARIA: Why?

SULPIZIO: They have told me that,
when we were last encamped,
They surprised you in conversation with–but, no,
It cannot be true.

MARIA: It is true–I make no concealment–
With a young Swiss, handsome, agreeable, and who Rescued me once from certain danperiglio:

Ma pure tutto adesso è finito; egli è là
—Noi siam qua.

SULPIZIO: (udendo rumore).
Che cosa è stato?
Cose'è questo rumore indiavolato?
(Entra Caporale e Coro.)

CORO E CAPORALE: Avanti; andiamo—tutto si sa.
Fra noi ti spinse curiosità.

MARIA: (da parte). Che vedo! Oh ciel, è lui!

SULPIZIO: Sia tratto altrove.

MARIA: (ai soldati). Fermate!
(Sottovoce a Sulpizio.)
E lui!

SULPIZIO: Davvero! lo straniero che t'ama?

TONIO: (fissando Maria). Ah! pel mio core qual tràsporto!

MARIA: (piano a Tonio). E che mai vi guida a noi?

TONIO: Posso cercarvi, o cara—altri che voi?

CORO: È un briccone, un villanzone,
Che qui venne a specular;
Ma gagliardi Savojardi
Ci sapremo vendicar.

MARIA: (precipitandosi in mezzo ai soldati). Un istante amici miei
Deh! cedete al mio desir.
Che! la morte a colui che mi salvò
La vita?

CORO: Che dice?

SULPIZIO: Ha il ver parlato.

CORO E CAPORALE: Questa parola ha il suo destin cangiato.

MARIA: D'un precipizio in fondo, io stave per cader
Ei m'a salvata esponendo i suoi giorni,
Volete ancor ch'egli perisca?

SULPIZIO: No, davver!
S'ella è cosi, mio bravo camerata,
Sii nostro amico.

TONIO: (tendendogli la mano). E il voglio
Che cosi potrò allora avvicinarmi
A lei che l'alma adora.

SULPIZIO: Or via festeggiar il salvator di questa amabil
Figlia, beviam! Trinchiam al suo liberator!

CORO: Trinchiam al suo liberator!

SULPIZIO: In giro il rum.
(A Maria.)
E festa di famiglia.

ger; but, indeed
All that is over–he is there–we are here.

SULPIZIO: (hearing a noise).
What noise is that?
What is that diabolical noise?
(Enter Corporal Spontoon and Chorus.)

CHORUS AND CORPORAL: Forward, go on–all is known!
Among us we punish curiosity.

MARIA: (aside).
What do I see? O heaven, it is he!

SULPIZIO: Let him be dragged here.

MARIA: (to the soldiers). Stay!
(Aside to Sulpizio.)
It is he!

SULPIZIO: Indeed! the stranger that loves you?

TONIO: (looking at Maria). Ah, what transport reigns in my heart!

MARIA: (aside to Tonio). And whatever led you to us!

TONIO: Can I seek, dearest, any other than you?

CHORUS: He's a rogue, a peasant,
Who came hither to spy;
But the gallant Savoyards
Well know how to avenge themselves.

MARIA: (throwing herself into the midst of the soldiers). One instant, my friends,–
Ah, yield to my wish.
What! death for him who saved my life?

CHORUS: What says she?

SULPIZIO: She has spoken the truth.

CHORUS AND CORPORAL: That word has changed his destiny.

MARIA: I was near falling from the top of a precipice to the bottom;
He saved me by venturing his own life.
Is it yet your will that he should perish?

SULPIZIO: No indeed!
If it be as you say, let the brave fellow
Become our friend.

TONIO: And I will,
(extending his hand to them).
That so
I shall then be able to approach her whom my soul adores.

SULPIZIO: And now, the savior to welcome
Of this our amiable daughter, let us drink!
Let us drink the health of her deliverer!

CHORUS: Let us drink to her deliverer!

SULPIZIO: Pass 'round the wine.
(To Maria.)
It is a family festival.

CORO: È festa di famiglia.

SULPIZIO: Si, trinchiamo alla Svizzera, alla natal tua terra.

TONIO: Oh no! giammai! rompo piuttosto il mio bicchier!

CORO E CAPORALE: È pazzo?

TONIO: Viva Italia! e i nuovi amici miei!

SULPIZIO, CORO E CAPORALE:
Viva, dunque, Italia, e tu con lei!

SULPIZIO: Perchè la festa sia completa, intuona,
Figliuola mia, la nostra ronda usata.

CORO: Del reggimento è la canzon più grata.

MARIA: Ciascun lo dice,
Ciascun lo sa!
È il reggimento
Ch'egual non ha.
Il sol cui credito
Con amistà,
Facciam le bettole
Della città.
Il reggimento
Che ovunque andò;
Mariti e amanti
Disanimò,
Della beltà, oh! ben supremo!
Egli è là, egli è là davver;
Vedi là, egli è là, si, si;
Egli è là, dubbio non v'ha;
Ecco l'undecimo ch'egual non ha.

CORO: Egli è il davver! vedi là, si,
Ecco l'undecimo ch'egual non ha.

TONIO: Viva l'undecimo!

SULPIZIO: Silenzio, silenzio!

MARIA: Tante battaglie
Ei guadagnò,
Che il nostro principe
Già decretò.
Ch'ogni soldato,
Se in salvo andrà,
Generalissimo
Diventerà.
Perch'egli è
Questo il reggimento,
A cui sia facile
Ogni cimento.
Che un sesso teme,
Che l'altro adora.
Egli è là, ecc.
(Odesi un lontano suono di tamburo.)

SULPIZIO: (ai soldati). È l'ora dell'appello;
Andiamo e non si scherzi con il regolamento.

MARIA E TONIO: Ah, se ne vanno.

SULPIZIO: (a Tonio). E tu, ragazzo—via di qua.

MARIA: Egli è nostro prigioniero, e di lui noi rispondiamo.

CHORUS: It is a family festival.

SULPIZIO: Drink to Switzerland, your native land.

TONIO: Oh, no! never! Sooner would I break my glass.

CHORUS AND CORPORAL: Is he mad?

TONIO: Long live Italy! and my new friends!

SULPIZIO, CHORUS AND CORPORAL: Long live Italy, then, and you too!

SULPIZIO: That the festival may be complete, sing,
My daughter, our usual round.

CHORUS: Ah! sing to us the song of the Regiment.

MARIA: All men confess it,
Go where we will.
Our gallant Twentieth
Is welcome still.
Landlords, when surliest,
To us are kind,
And when we're merriest
They then are blind.
Husbands and lovers,
They dread our sight;
But oh! the fair,
We are their delight!
They are here, they are here,
With sword and spear they are here!
They are here, with sword and spear!
See, our brave Twentieth–none are like them!

CHORUS: Hear the drum!
They come, they come!
Here in your land they pitch their tent,
The gallant Twentieth Regiment.

TONIO: Long live the regiment!
The Twentieth regiment!

SULPIZIO: Be still–be silent!

MARIA: (resumed). Highest and lowest,
Heroes are we;
Any amongst us
May be Marshal.
Foremost in victory,
Last in retreat,
Death we can suffer,
But not defeat.
First in the battle,
First in the dance,
The brave hussar,
With sword and lance.
They are here, etc.
(The sound of a distant drum is heard.)

SULPIZIO: (to the soldiers). It is the hour of roll-call,
Let us go, and not trifle with the regulations.

MARIA AND TONIO: Ah, they are going!

SULPIZIO: (to Tonio). And, young man–away from here.

MARIA: He is my prisoner, and I will answer for him.

SULPIZIO: (piano a Maria). Ma non io, signorina!
(A Tonio che viene consegnato a due soldati, i quali lo conducono via per la montagna.)
Andiamo, andiamo.

SULPIZIO, CORO E CAPORALE:
Talvolta è un poco duro
Piegarsi ed obbedir,
Ma suona già il tamburo,
Plan e devesi servir.
In tempi così strani
Niun bada più al dolor,
Pugnando all'indomani,
Forse si vince o muor,
Ma suona già il tamburo
E devesi servir.
(Exeunt Sulpizio, Caporale e Coro.)

MARIA: L'hanno condotto seco; ed io che avrei cotanto
Volentier con lui parlato! Povero giovinetto!
Per vedermi esporsi in questa guisa!

TONIO: (correndo dalla montagna). Signorina!

MARIA: Ma come!—siete voi?

TONIO: Essi han creduto ch'io li seguissi; Eh si?
Non son venuto per chiacchierar con esse
Che non sono gentili. Affatto, quel vecchio poi—quel vecchio?

MARIA: Egli è mio padre.

TONIO: Il vecchio?—allor mi son sbagliato.
È l'altro?—quel piccolino!

MARIA: Egli è mio padre anch'esso.

TONIO: Anch'esso?—Gli altri adunque?

MARIA: E gli altri pure.

TONIO: Che diamine! Ne avete un reggimento?

MARIA: E appunto:—il reggimento è il mio padre
Adottivo; e lor deggio il mio stato—
L'educazione—tutto insomma—tutto.
E dipendo da lor unicamente; ma
Dite finalmente che volete da me,
Qual mai segreto vi condusse fra noi?

TONIO: Egli è ch'io bramo tutto aprirvi
Il mio cor—egli è che v'amo.

MARIA: Che? vio m'amate?

TONIO: Non ci credete? udite poi decidete.

MARIA: Vediam, udiam; ascoltiam e giudichiam.

SULPIZIO: (to Maria). But I will not, my little lady–
(To Tonio, who is placed under guard of two soldiers, and led away towards the mountains.)
Away! away with you.

CHORUS, SULPIZIO AND CORPORAL: This course is rather severe
To carry him away;
But already the drum beats,
And we must obey.
In times so strange as these,
No one thinks much of grief,
Before tomorrow, while fighting,
Perchance we conquer or die.
But already the drum sounds,
And we must obey.
(Exeunt Sulpizio, Corporal and chorus.)

MARIA: They have led him away with them;
And yet I wished so much
To have spoken to him.–Poor young man!
To have exposed himself to such danger for the sake of seeing me!

TONIO: (running down from the mountain). Fair lady!

MARIA: How!–Is it you?

TONIO: They thought I should follow them;
But I did not come to gossip with them,
Who are in fact scarcely civil.
Yet, that old man–who is he?

MARIA: He is my father also.

TONIO: That old man?–then I am mistaken.
And the other?–that little fellow!

MARIA: He is my father also.

TONIO: He also! And the others?

MARIA: And the others as well.

TONIO: The deuce! Have you a regiment of fathers?

MARIA: I have:–I was adopted by the whole regiment
And to them I owe my present position–
My education;–in fact, all–everything;
And I depend entirely on them.
But tell me, now, what do you wish from me–
What secret motive has brought you among us?

TONIO: It is that I wish to open all
My heart–it is that I love you!

MARIA: What?–you love me!

TONIO: Do you not believe me?–Hear me, and then decide.

MARIA: Let us hear and see–let us listen and judge.

TONIO: Da quell'istante che sul mio seno,
Io vi raccolsi venuta meno;
L'immagin vostra dolce e vezzosa,
Non mi dà posa la notte e il dì.

MARIA: Ma carin quest'è memoria,
È memoria e nulla più.

TONIO: No, non e tutto—c'è di peggio,
Si, mia cara,—c'è di più.

MARIA: Vediam, udiam; ascoltiam e giudichiam.

TONIO: Il bel soggiorno de tempi andati,
Tutti gli amici cotanto amati,
Per voi, Maria!—Sin d'or lo sento;
Senza tormento potrei lasciar.

MARIA: Ma una tale indifferenza,
È impossibil perdonar.

TONIO: E finalmente da voi lontano,
Tanto la vita fu in odio a me;
Che sfidar volli furente insano;
La morte stessa—ma al vostro piè!

MARIA: Ah! ch'io lo so! lo capisco! anch'io!
Ma i giorni dennosi, amico mio,
Per quei che s'amano assicurar.

MARIA: A voti cosi ardente!
Il misero mio cor!
Consiglio più non sente,
Non sente che l'amor!

TONIO: A voti cosi ardente!
Il tenero suo cor!
Si mostrerà clemente
Al prego dell'amor!

TONIO: Cara voi ben vedete ma—v'ama.

MARIA: Si? decidete.

TONIO: Vediam, udiam, ascoltiam e giudichiam.

MARIA: Civetta un tempo felice e lieta,
Di niun amante sentia pietà;
Ma l'alma adesso turbata, inquieta
Sa che v'è un'altra felicità.

TONIO: Va ben! va ben!

MARIA: E fra i nemici che debbo odiar;
Per un di questi degg'io tremar.

TONIO: Di bene in meglio.

MARIA: E in un giorno d'orror che i sensi invigorino,
All'olezzar d'un fior cospersi io lo sentii;
Del vostro pianto quel caro fior tesor
Pieno d'incanto mai da quel giorno.

TONIO: From the instant when
I clasped you to my bosom, reviving from affright,
Your fair and lovely image
Has left me no repose by night or day.

MARIA: (coquettishly). But my dear little friend, this is a recollection;–
And nothing more.

TONIO: No, indeed, it is more than a mere recollection;
It is true love.

MARIA: Let us see and hear, and–

TONIO: The beautiful abode of past days,
And all the friends so much beloved,
For you, Maria, I feel,
Without regret, I could leave them all.

MARIA: But such indifference as that
It is impossible to forgive.

TONIO: I could not live without you, dearest;
It were pain worse than death itself;
Hence, defying all, I've ventured here.
Let them now do their worst–I have seen you.

MARIA: Ah! I know it, I understand!
He who loves, my friend,
Respects his life!

MARIA: No longer can I doubt it!
His heart is given to me!
And mine, too, beats responding,
Oh, yes, it beats for you!

TONIO: No longer can I doubt it!
Her heart is given to me!
And mine, too, beats responding,
Oh, yes, it beats for you!

TONIO: You see it now, I love—
Perhaps, though, I love alone.

MARIA: Decide for yourself, sir.

TONIO: Well, then, tell your tale:
I will listen and decide it.

MARIA: Long time coquettish, so free and joyous,
I'd no notion of love's pains;
But too well now I read the secret,–
It is a lesson taught by love alone.

TONIO: Go on–go on.

MARIA: I loved only battle,
The noise and tumult of the camp,
But ah! I freely will confess it,
All my feelings now are changed.

TONIO: Oh, better still.

MARIA: Since the day when I met you,
Upon the steep abyss's edge depending
I plucked this flower, in its wild bed blooming
And wore it here as it had been your gift,
Till at length it withered on my heart.

TONIO E MARIA: Abbandonò il mio cor,
A voti così ardente, ecc., ecc.
Quest'alma è rapita nell'estasi d'amor.
Io perderò la vita ma fido al tuo bel cor.
(Partono.)
(Entra Sulpizio, la Marchesa e poi Ortensio.)

SULPIZIO: Lo dico con il cuore sulle labbra.
(Alla Marchesa che legge.)
Dovermi separar da quella cara
Amabile fanciulla è tal cordoglio
Che non lo so spiegar. Ma non c'è
Verso; se il Capital Roberto fu sposo
A lei segreto; a lei strettamente
Celate alla nobilissima casata dei
Marchesi di Lauffen.

LA MARCHESA: Onde astretta venni a tener occulto
Quest'imeneo cotanto desperato!

SULPIZIO: Poi lo scritto trovato vicino alla fanciulla.
È a lei diretto, parla chiaro abbastanza,
E aperto mostra che la figliuola è sua;
Che il capitano mortalmente ferito
Raccomandava a le materne cure
Quell'angiol di bontà.

LA MARCHESA: Ma vi scongiuro, a nessuno palese
Si faccia questo arcano; e siate certo
Che un compenso condegno a tante cure—

SULPIZIO: Eh! se lo tenga pure; che col perder
Maria, a tutto si perde!
Vado dunque a pigliarla.

LA MARCHESA: Io là v'aspetto.

SULPIZIO: Preferirci, le mille volte e mille
Morire dalla fame in alcuna città
Stretta d'assedio, che perderla così.
Non c'è rimedio.
(Parte.)

LA MARCHESA: Ortensio! presto, Ortensio! Andate
Subito a ordinar i cavalli! è necessario
Allontanarla testa da questi militari
Ad ogni costo.
(Entrano Caprolae e Soldati.)

CORO: Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan!
Militar non v'ha
Cui non batta il cor.
Del tamburo al bel fragor.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan!
Pien di zel—pien d'ardor—
Di fervor—a questo fragor
Risponde con amor.
Viva la pugna! gli affanni suoi
E la vittoria, e il guerreggiar!

MARIA AND TONIO: No longer can I doubt it,
His [her] heart is given to me;
And mine, too, beats responding;–
Oh yes, it beats for you!
(Exeunt.)
(Enter Sulpizio, the Marchioness, and afterwards Ortensio.)

SULPIZIO: I speak it with my heart upon my lips. (To the Marchioness, who is reading a letter.)
To be obliged to part from that dear
Amiable girl, is such a grief,
That I cannot express it.
But it cannot be helped.
If Captain Roberto was married
To her in secret, from her carefully Conceal the noble wardenship of the Marquis of Lauffen.

THE MARCHIONESS: Wherefore I have kept concealed
This unpropitious marriage!

SULPIZIO: Then, the writing found near the little girl,
And directed to you, speaks clearly enough;
And distinctly shows that the daughter
Is yours,—that the captain, when mortally wounded,
Commended to your maternal care
This angel of goodness.

THE MARCHIONESS: But, I conjure you, to none reveal
This secret; and be certain
That recompense adequate to such care–

SULPIZIO: Eh! Nothing will recompense me for losing Maria! Yet I must bring her here.

THE MARCHIONESS: I will expect her.

SULPIZIO: (aside). I should prefer, a thousand times,
To die of hunger in any city
Closely besieged, to losing her this way.
Yet it cannot be helped.
(Exit.)

THE MARCHIONESS: Ortensio! Hurry Ortensio! Oh,
Go quickly, and order the horses;
For it is expedient at once to remove her
From these most fearful soldiers
At any cost.
(Enter Corporal and soldiers.)

CHORUS: Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.
There is not a soldier whose heart does not beat.
At the lively rattle of the drum.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.
Full of zeal–full of ardor–of fervor
To that sound he responds with delight.
Hail to the battle, its shouts and its din

Viva la morte! che ognun di noi Nella battaglia vola a cercar.	Hail to the victors, their laurels who win Hail too to death, when we've fought the good fight! The brave will never compass their safety by flight!
IL CAPORALE: Ma chi diavolo viene? Oh! quel giovinotto Che fra noi questa mane & è capitato. Bravo! davvero, egli si fe' soldato. (Entra Tonio, con la coccarda francese al berretto.)	THE CORPORAL: Eh! but who comes? Oh, it is the youngster Who was taken this morning; bravo! surely He has enlisted–he has become a soldier. (Enter Tonio, with the French cockade in his cap.)
TONIO: Miei cari amici, che lieto giorno! Le vostre insegne io seguirò; Sol per amore a voi ritorno. E un grande eroe diventerò. Ah, si! colei ond'io sospiro Ebbe pietade del mio martiro; E questa speme desiata, ognor Altera i sensi ed il mio cor.	TONIO: My brave companions, this day so joyful! I've come to follow your much-prized flag. For love alone do I return to you;– And a great hero will I become. Ah yes! even she for whom I'm sighing Has pity on my deep felt passion, And this fond hope and joy long wished for, Affects my thoughts, enchants my heart!
CORO: Il camerata è innamorato.	CHORUS: Our comrade has fallen deeply in love.
TONIO: Ed in voi solo confida il cor.	TONIO: He confides his hopes to you alone!
CORO: Che?—Nostra figlia l'ha incatenato?	CHORUS: What! has our daughter enthralled you?
TONIO: Deh? m'ascoltate, deh! Deh! m'ascoltate suo genitor Le nozze stringere con lei non posso, Se il vostro mancami saldo favor.	TONIO: Ah! pray now hear me; hear! You who are her father, hear me, I pray. I cannot hope to gain her in marriage, If the consent of all of you be denied.
IL CAPORALE E CORO: La nostra figlia, s'è stabilito, Un inimico non prenderà, no! Le si conviene miglior partito, Tal'è d'un padre la volontà.	THE CORPORAL AND CHORUS: Our dearest daughter, it is resolved, Shall not be wedded to a foe. No! A match much better shall be accomplished, Of that her father will take care.
TONIO: Vi ricusate?	TONIO: Do you refuse her?
IL CAPORALE E CORO: Con fondamento: Mentr'ella da già promessa Al nostro reggimento.	THE CORPORAL AND CHORUS: With good sound reason;– She is pledged, not to marry Without consent of the regiment.
TONIO: Non lo poteva affatto, Se appunto mi son fatto, Per essa militar.	TONIO: Of which I have the honor to be one. I have become, for her sake, One of your regiment.
IL CAPORALE: Peggio per te!	THE CORPORAL: The worse for you!
TONIO: Signori miei—voi, suo buon padre, Deh! m'ascoltate!	TONIO: Gentlemen, hear me: you her good father– Ah, pray now, hear me!
CORO: Peggio per te!	CHORUS: We do not want you.
TONIO: La vostra figlia m'ama.	TONIO: Your beauteous daughter loves me.
CORO: Possibil mai?—La nostra figlia!	CHORUS: Can it be true?–our own dear daughter!
TONIO: Si, m'ama! lo giuro al ciel.	TONIO: She loves me; bear witness, Heaven!
CORO: Che dire! che fare? Poichè egli è piaciuto D'un padre avveduto al nodo assentir. Ma senza mistero, non sembra pur vero, Che questo bamboccio, ce l'abbia ghermir.	CHORUS: What do we say in answer? It is the duty Of a prudent father to give his consent. It seems, though unlikely, beyond even belief This youth should have won her, and call her his own.
TONIO: Ebben?	TONIO: But speak!
IL CAPORALE: Se dici il ver, suo padre adesso Il suo consentimento ci fa promesso.	THE CORPORAL: If he speaks truth, her fond loving fathers, In promise most faithful, will give their consent.
CORO: Si;—il suo consentimento, ci fa promesso.	CHORUS: Yes; in promise most faithful, we'll give our consent.
TONIO: Qual destino! qual favore! La sua mano, ed il suo core! Ah! finito è il mio penar— Son marito e militar. Suo padre me l'ha data!—è sposa mia! (Entra Sulpizio e Maria.)	TONIO: O, happy fate! oh, joyous hour! Her hand and heart I now have gained! Ah! my anguish is all ended– Now a husband and a soldier. Her fathers now have given her–she's wholly mine! (Enter Sulpizio and Maria.)
SULPIZIO: Esser non può d'alcun di che sua zia. Se la porta con sè—	SULPIZIO: She can belong to none but to her aunt. Should she take her away–
IL CAPORALE E CORO: Che! Nostra figlia portarla via? Sei pazzo.	CHORUS AND CORPORAL: What, our own daughter! take her away! What madness!
TONIO: Lungi da me condurla! e sarà ver mio Bene egli è un sogno crudel.	TONIO: Take her away from Tonio? And shall, indeed, My happiness pass away like a dream?
MARIA: Convien partir! o miei compagni d'arme; E d'ora in poi lontan da voi fuggir,— Ma per pietà celatemi quel pianto,— Ha il vostro duol per il cor Di Maria supremo incanto. Convien partir, convien partir; Ah! per pietà, celate il vostro pianto, Addio, addio; convien partir!	MARIA: Farewell! a long farewell! my dear companions, In pity, do not strive to hide your sorrow,– Those tears will be my comfort on the morrow. Farewell, my friends; farewell, my friends, farewell, In pity, do not strive to hide you sorrow,– Farewell, farewell; I now must leave!
SULPIZIO, TONIO ED IL CAPORALE: Io perdo, o cara, la sola speme Ogni mio bene perdendo te. A tant'affanno non regge il core Simil dolore non v'è per me.	SULPIZIO, TONIO AND CORPORAL: Break not my heart! Must we, then, part? Glory and arms Have now no charms.
MARIA: Convien partir—o voi che nel mio core; Destaste i primi palpiti d'amore! Ed il piacer, con me partiste e il pianto. M'offron dell'or—in cambio di quel ben puro soltanto. Convien partir, ecc.	MARIA: I must now go–but I can never forget you; No, live where I may, my heart is yours! I shall ever, in pomp and pleasure, still regret you; No friends can be so dear as those I leave behind me. Farewell, farewell, farewell, etc.
TONIO: Amici, ah! in ver ciò mai non sia; Partir non de'—non de'—Maria. Ah! no!	TONIO: My friends, in truth, this never must be;– You should not ever depart from here, Maria Ah! no!
IL CAPORALE: A tanto affanno regge il core; Simil dolore, non è per me.	THE CORPORAL: To lose you thus my heart is filled with pain; Such grief as this will never be mine again.

SULPIZIO: Io perdo, o cara! la sola speme:
Ogni mio bene perdendo te.

CORO: Partir, no, non de'!

TONIO: Ah! se vi mi lasciate io vengo via.

SULPIZIO: Ma ingaggiato non sei, bellezza mia.

MARIA: Tonio!

TONIO: Mia bene amata!

MARIA: Questo colpo mancava al mio tormento.

TONIO: Maria!

MARIA: Perderlo adesso? Ah! che morir mi sento.

SULPIZIO: Ma ingaggiata tu sei.

MARIA E TONIO: Questo colpo mancava al mio cor.
Ahimè!

IL CAPORALE, SULPIZIO E CORO: Oh! duol, oh! sorpresa, lasciarla partir
Al diavolo Marchesa, che ce la vuol rapir.
In ogni cimento, che s'abbia a sfidar
Del nostro reggimento è l'angelo tutelar.

MARIA E TONIO: Ah! non più speranze—non più piacere,
D'un giorno solo potrò goder.
Ah! ch'ogni bene disprezza il cor,
Se a tante pene lo danna amor!

LA MARCHESA: Andiam, nipote.

MARIA: Miei cari amici, addio! per sempre!
La man, o Pietro—la tua, Matteo;
La tua, vecchio Tommaso.

LA MARCHESA: Ah, qual orror!

MARIA: Che ancor bambina in braccio mi portavi:—
Abbracciami, Sulpizio!
Ah! di costoro io son l'amor!

LA MARCHESA: Oh, l'orror!

TONIO: Oh, l'orror!

CORO: Nostra figlia nostro amor.

TONIO: Il mio core è a te serbato;
E fedele a te sarò.
Ah, s'il mio core è di Maria
E fido a lei lo serberò.

LA MARCHESA: Andiam, partiam.

ORTENSIO: Andiam, Marchesa; su via pertiamo.

IL CAPORALE, SULPIZIO E CORO: Al diavol la Marchesa,
E con lei chi la porta.

SULPIZIO: I lose, beloved one, now my only hope;—
And every joy is gone in losing you!

CHORUS: To leave us!—No, it must not be!

TONIO: Yes, yes: if you do leave us, I must follow.

SULPIZIO: But are you not enlisted, my tender youngster?

MARIA: Tonio!

TONIO: My own beloved!

MARIA: This alone was wanted to complete my anguish.

TONIO: Maria!

MARIA: And I must leave him?
Ah, I feel it worse than death.

SULPIZIO: But you are enlisted.

MARIA AND TONIO: This dread blow will surely crush my fond heart.
Alas!

THE CORPORAL, SULPIZIO AND CHORUS: O grief, O surprise! to let her depart
With the cruel Marchioness.
In every trial that we have endured
She has been the tutelary angel of our regiment.

MARIA AND TONIO: Ah! no longer hope—no longer pleasure,
May I enjoy for a single day.
Ah! let my heart despise every delight,
If love condemns it to such pains as this!

THE MARCHIONESS: My niece, now let us depart.

MARIA: My dear friends, farewell! farewell for ever!
Your hand, dear Pietro—yours, too, Matteo;
And yours, old Tommaso.

THE MARCHIONESS: Ah, I am shocked!

MARIA: When yet a little child, in his arms he bore me—
Embrace me, dear Sulpizio!
Ah! by them I am beloved!

THE MARCHIONESS: I am shocked!

TONIO: So am I!

CHORUS: Our daughter dear is our best treasure!

TONIO: My heart now beats for you alone;
And constant will I ever be.
Ah, yes; my heart is now Maria's
And faithfully will I devote it to her.

THE MARCHIONESS: Let us away.

ORTENSIUS: Even so, my lady—we'll journey there.

THE CORPORAL, SULPIZIO AND CHORUS: The deuce take the Marchioness,
And him along with her

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO.

ATTO II

SCENA I

(Il teatro rappresenta un salone, che per mezzo di porte in fondo mette ad una galleria. Porte e finestre laterali. Un clavicembalo, tavolini, ecc.)

(Ortensio e Sulpizio, che avrà un braccio al collo, ma di tempo in tempo gestisce per provare che la ferita va meglio.)

ORTENSIO: Ecco le carte che il notaro invia.
Il duca e la sua madre
'Per le sei saran qui.' Feste! allegria!
(Via.)

SULPIZIO: Povera figlia! Io più non ho coraggio
Di vederla soffrir. Già da quattr'ore
Le van storpiando i piedi, perchè impari
Il minuetto—e quella, abituata
A saltare con noi liberamente,
Pianage — e ripete: Non ne faccio niente!
Vestita da gran dama—
(Entra Maria.)

MARIA: Oh, mio Sulpizio!
Io non ne posso più—vonno ammazzarmi—
Ma tel dissi, e il ripeto schiettamente,
Hanno un bel dir: 'Non ne faremo niente.'
Io Tonio voglio—e non baroni o duchi.
Tonio per me si fe' soldato, ed io—

SULPIZIO: La zia!—

MARIA: Che importa?

SULPIZIO: Zitti.
Miseriocordia! che toelette.
(Esce la Marchesa, in toupet.)

LA MARCHESA: La romanza in quistione è ritrovata.
E cosa prelibata—
Venere scende—

SULPIZIO: (E monta il mal umore.)

LA MARCHESA: Che dite?

SULPIZIO: Io? Nulla affatto—

LA MARCHESA: Venere scende fra la notte opaca,
Per vedere colui, che amor le inspira—
(Musica.)

MARIA: (Sulpizio, senti?)

SULPIZIO: (Oh, bello!)

END OF ACT I.

ACT II

SCENE I

(The Stage represents a Saloon opening by folding doors at the back on to a gallery. A clavecin, small tables, etc.)

(Ortensius and Sulpizio discovered, who has an arm in a sling, but makes signs from time to time, to show that the wound is better.)

ORTENSIUS: Here are the cards sent by the notary.
The Duke and his mother
Will be here at six o'clock.'
What pleasure!
(Exit.)

SULPIZIO: Poor girl! I have no longer courage
To see her suffer. For four hours has she been Twisting her feet in every direction, learning
The minuet; and she who has been used
To do just as she pleases with us,
Now weeps, and repeats: 'I can do nothing
Dressed as a grand lady.'
(Enter Maria.)

MARIA: Oh, Sulpizio,
I can do no more of it, if they kill me for it.
But I have already said, and I now repeat it.
We have a good saying: 'Against my will I will do nothing.'
I will have Tonio, and not barons and dukes.
Tonio for my sake became a soldier, and I—

SULPIZIO: Your aunt!—

MARIA: I care not for her!

SULPIZIO: Gently.
Mercy on us! what a toilette.
(Enter the Marchioness, in toupée.)

THE MARCHIONESS:
The romance in question is found,—
It is an exquisite gem.
Venus descends—

SULPIZIO: (And bad humor ascends.)

THE MARCHIONESS: What do you say?

SULPIZIO: I? Nothing, truly.

MARCHIONESS: Venus descends in the midst of night,
To see him who has inspired her with love.
(Music.)

MARIA: (Sulpizio, do you hear?)

SULPIZIO: (Oh, splendid!)

LA MARCHESA: Ebben, Maria, stupida resti. Andiamo;
Voi zitto; tu sta attenta—incominciamo.
(Si pone al clavicembalo, e suona con caricatura.)

MARIA: Sorgeva il di del bosco il seno,
E Vener bella scendea dal ciel,
Scendeva in questo soggiorno ameno.
Sulle orme amiche del suo fedel.

SULPIZIO: Il nostro canto era più bel.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan,
E il reggimento ch'egual non ha.

MARIA: Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan,
E il reggimento ch'equal non ha.

LA MARCHESA: E—ma che sento mai?

MARIA: Perdon—perdono!
Confusa un po' mi sono.
Ero distratta: perdon! perdon!
È quest'amante a cui Ciprigna,
Donava il premio del valor,
Il più gentile della città
La cui beltà—

SULPIZIO: Oh, ben supremo della beltà.

MARIA E SULPIZIO: Eccolo qua.
Ecco l'undecimo ch'egual non ha!

LA MARCHESA: Oh, quale infamia—che dite la?

MARIA: (a Sulpizio).
(Ohimè, che noja!)

LA MARCHESA: Andiamo avanti.

MARIA: Sia pur cosi.
(Alla Marchesa, con dispetto, poi piano a Sulpizio.)
Ma non c'è case—non c'entra qui.
Vener scorgendo tanto vezzosa,
L'eco del monte, della valle
Di Filomela l'ansia gelosa
Ripeteranno col suon d'amor.

LA MARCHESA: Via, sospiriamo siccome lei.

SULPIZIO: Io preferisco a que' sospiri
D'un buon tamburo il bel fragor.

MARIA: Ah! non ho più pazienza,— Troppo è ridicol cosa;
Io non ne posso più.

LA MARCHESA: Ohimè che sento! ah, qual risposta!

MARIA: En avant! En avant!
Rataplan—plan—plan!

THE MARCHIONESS: Well, Maria, you stand there like a stupid.
Come, pay attention—we will begin.
(She places herself at the piano, which she plays in an exaggerated style.)

MARIA: The light of early day was breaking,
When from the skies above
Fair Venus to her grot descended.
To seek the object of her love.

SULPIZIO: Our songs in camp were much more gay.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.
Roll on, roll on, and march away.

MARIA: Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan, rataplan.
Roll on, roll on, and march away.

THE MARCHIONESS: Eh! what in the name of fate do I hear?

MARIA: Forgive me, forgive me;
I m a little confused.
My thoughts were wandering; forgive me!
It is this lover, to whom Ciprynia
Gave the premium of valor,
The most charming in all the city,
Whose beauty–

SULPIZIO: Our regiment for beauty pre-eminent.

MARIA AND SULPIZIO: This is it.
The Eleventh remains without a rival.

THE MARCHIONESS: O, what infamy–what are you saying?

MARIA: (to Sulpizio).
(Oh, what an annoyance.)

THE MARCHIONESS: Let us continue.

MARIA: Be it so.
(To the Marchioness, with spitefulness, afterwards whispering to Sulpizio.)
But it is not so–it does not come in here.
Venus discovered so many charms,
That the echoes of the hills and valleys
Repeated with sounds of love
The jealous pangs of Philomel.

THE MARCHIONESS: Here you must sigh as she did.

SULPIZIO: I prefer to such sighs
The sound of a good drum.

MARIA: Ah! I have no more patience,–
It is truly ridiculous;
I will bear no more of it.

THE MARCHIONESS: What do I hear
Ah! what an answer!

MARIA: En avant! En avant!
Rataplan–plan–plan!

LA MARCHESA: Quale orror: possibil mai?
Che si possa avviluppar
Ad un canto si' gentile
La canzon d'un militar!
(La Marchesa allontana, sdegnata. Maria entra nelle proprie stanzè, e, mentre Sulpizio sta per andarsene dal fondo s'incontra con Ortensio.)

ORTENSIO: Giusto voi, granatiere.

SULPIZIO: Cos'è accaduto?

ORTENSIO: C'è abbasso un militar—ma di que' grossi!
Ha uno spallino d'or.

SULPIZIO: Uno spallino?
(Forse lui!—cospetton—ci vorria questa!
Che gazzabuglio allora e che tempesta.)
(Parte.)

ORTENSIO: Un giorno o l'altro—ed esser dee pur bello!
Dee cangiarsi in quartier tutto il castello.
(Via.)
(Entra Maria.)

MARIA: Per si' fatal contratto tutto è letizia intorno,
La mia sventura io compirò in tal giorno—
Ma cosa sento io mai?
Ciel!—ah, m'illudessi?
Questa marcia guerriera—
Ah, so pur dessi!
Oh, trasporto! oh, dolce ebbrezza!
Son gli amici del mio cor.
Bei piacer di giovinezza
Ritornate almen con lor;
Evviva l'Italia!
E i prodi guerrier;
Son dessi mia gioia,
Mio solo pensier.
Ad essi soltanto
Aspira il mio cor;
Con essi ritrovo
La gloria, l'amor.

CORO: È lei, nostra figlia.
Qual piacer, qual destin!
L'antica tua famiglia
Ti vede alfin.
(Entra Sulpizio, poi Tonio e Ortensio.)

SULPIZIO: O camerati! amici!

CORO: Oh! veh, Sulpizio!

SULPIZIO: Si, Sulpizio in persona,
Che vi stringe e v'abbraccia tutti quanti.
Tommaso—Ambrogio—Pietro—
Nessun manca all'appello!

MARIA: (cercando collo sguardo). Oh, si, nessuno!

TONIO: E neppur Tonio.

MARIA: (correndo ad esso). Ah, Tonio mio! ma, guardo,—
(A Sulpizio.)
Ha uno spallino.

THE MARCHIONESS: For shame!
Is it possible?
Thus dare to disfigure
With a noisy military tune
A song so charming as this!
(Exit the Marchioness, enraged.– Maria enter her own room; Sulpizio is also about to leave.– Ortensius enters.)

ORTENSIUS: You are just the person I wanted to see, grenadier.

SULPIZIO: What has happened?

ORTENSIUS: There is a soldier below–but one of the great ones;
He has a wounded shoulder.

SULPIZIO: A wounded shoulder?
(Perhaps it is he. Zounds! that this should happen!
What an uproar there will be!)
(Exit.)

ORTENSIUS: Every day there is something happening,
And the whole castle is turned topsy-turvy.
(Exit.)
(Enter Maria, alone.)

MARIA: All around rejoice at the fatal contract,
While I in one day see my misery complete,
But what do I hear?
Heavens!–is it an illusion?
This martial music!
Ah! it is they!
Oh! what happiness, what delight!
It is my heart's best friends.
Sweet pleasure of youth,
With them you return.
Long live my country,
And all its brave warriors;
They are my delight–
They are my sole thought;
For them–them alone,
Does my heart now long;
With them I should find
Love and glory once more.

CHORUS: It is she, our daughter.
What happiness! what joy!
Your loving family
Sees you at length again. (Enter Sulpizio, followed by Tonio and afterward Ortensio.)

SULPIZIO: Oh, comrades, friends!

CHORUS: Oh Sulpizio!

SULPIZIO: Yes, Sulpizio himself,
And he embraces every one of you.
Thomas–Ambrose–Peter–
None are missing at my call.

MARIA: (looking around). Oh yes, all are here.

TONIO: Ay, even Tonio.

MARIA: (running to him). Ah, my own Tonio! But look (To Sulpizio.)
He has a wounded shoulder.

TONIO: Per Bacco!
Quand'un si è messo in testa
Di morire sul campo dell'onore,
Non c'è a dir—o cale in alto, o more.

SULPIZIO: Ma voi, miei buoni amici, un bicchierino
Forse ne bevereste?

CORO: Figurarsi!

MARIA: E se torna la zia?

SULPIZIO: Staran celati
In fondo al parco. Ortensio!

ORTENSIO: Misericordia!

MARIA: Senza tante smanie,
A costor fate dare una bottiglia.

ORTENSIO: Ce ne vuole una botte?

SULPIZIO: Meno ciarle,
Sien gli ordini eseguiti, e se resiste—

ORTENSIO: Io poi—

SULPIZIO: Già intesi ciamo.

CORO: Andiam.

ORTENSIO: No, che non vengo.

CORO: Andiamo—andiamo.
(I soldati partono via da Ortensio.)

SULPIZIO, MARIA E TONIO:
Stretti insiem tutti tre,
Qual favor! qual piacer!
Tanto ben, tal mercè
Non può il cor sostener.

SULPIZIO: Dolce memoria!

TONIO: Bel tempo andato!

MARIA: Da noi lontano—

SULPIZIO: S'è trasportato.

TONIO: Ma tornera.

SULPIZIO: Lo spero invano.
Il tempo andato tornò per me,
A lui vicino, vicino a te.

SULPIZIO, MARIA E TONIO:
Stretti insiem tutti tre.
Qual favor! qual piacer
Tanto ben, tal mercè,
Non può il cor sostener.

TONIO: Tu parlerai per me—

MARIA: Per lui tu dèi parlar.

TONIO: Premiar la nostra fe'.

MARIA: Nè devi pi tardar.

SULPIZIO: Ma udite, udite almen.

TONIO: La tua promessa è urgente.

MARIA: Ei m'ama immensamente.

TONIO: Il core è la sua fe'.

SULPIZIO: Ma al diavolo voi e me.

TONIO: By Bacchus!
When a man has taken it into his head
To die on the field of honor,
No one can tell where the blow may fall.

SULPIZIO: But you, my dear friends,
Perhaps you would like a cup of wine.

CHORUS: Willingly.

MARIA: And if my aunt should return?

SULPIZIO: They shall be concealed
In the park. Ortensius!

ORTENSIUS: Good Heavens!

MARIA: Without more ado,
Go and get a cask of wine.

ORTENSIUS: Do you want a whole cask?

SULPIZIO: Without any prating.
Let the order be obeyed; and if you resist–

ORTENSIUS: I then–

SULPIZIO: We understand each other.

CHORUS: Let us go.

ORTENSIUS: No, do not come.

CHORUS: Let us go, let us go.
(The soldiers depart from Ortensius.)

SULPIZIO, MARIA AND TONIO:
All three united together again–
What a favor! what a pleasure!
The heart can scarcely sustain
Such unlooked-for happiness!

SULPIZIO: Sweet remembrances!

TONIO: Oh, days gone by!

MARIA: Far from us.

SULPIZIO: They are gone.

TONIO: But they will return.

SULPIZIO: I hope it, in vain;
But past times come again for him and me,
When near, oh, near to you.

SULPIZIO, MARIA AND TONIO:
All three united together again–
What a favor! what a pleasure!
The heart can scarcely sustain
Such unlooked-for happiness!

TONIO: You will speak for me–

MARIA: You must speak for him.

TONIO: And plead plighted faith.

MARIA: You must not delay.

SULPIZIO: But listen, listen at least.

TONIO: Your promise is urgent.

MARIA: He loves me immensely.

TONIO: With heart and soul.

SULPIZIO: The plague take you and me.

SULPIZIO, MARIA E TONIO:
Stretti insiem tutti tre.
Qual favor! qual piacer!
Tanto ben, tal mercè,
Non può cor sostener.
(Entra la Marchesa.)

LA MARCHESA: Che vedo! un ufficiale?—E voi, Sulpizio,
Qui rinchiuso con lor, che fate?

MARIA: Oh zia!
Questi è quel Tonio che salvommi un giorno
De certa morte—quest'è l'amor mio.
(Timida.)

LA MARCHESA: Che—amor!—che dite voi?

TONIO: Signora—

LA MARCHESA: Zitto!
Al Duca Krakentorp sposa è Maria.

SULPIZIO: Cioè (perdoni) sbaglia un po' la zia!
E promessa soltanto suo malgrado;
Ed or che Tonio capitano è fatto,
E che la vuol, va a monte ogni contratto.

LA MARCHESA: Come, Sulpizio?—voi—in tal guisa, voi—
Che sapete—

TONIO: Ma, signora—

LA MARCHESA: Escite!
(A Tonio.)
Nè qui osate mai più di porre il piede!

TONIO: (offeso). Qual baldanza è la vostra!
Vado e torno, Maria;
Sarai mia sposa al nuovo giorno.
(A Maria, che piange, e parte.)

SULPIZIO: Bravo!

LA MARCHESA: Che dite?

SULPIZIO: Addio le ho detto.

LA MARCHESA: (a Maria). Ritiratevi tosto; invan piangete.

MARIA: Parto—ma, Tonio—

LA MARCHESA: E quando ubbidirete?
(A tutti e duve, che andavan via. Maria dà uno squardo a Sulpizio, e parte.)
Fermatevi, Sulpizio—

LA MARCHESA: Un gran segreto confidar dovrei—
Alla vostra onestà. Lo leggete.

SULPIZIO: (legge) Educata nella mia gioventù troppo severamente, e toltami ogni via di conoscere la società—al primo comparir nel mondo vidi un giovane ufficiale—mi piacque—Io amai—partiva—e

SULPIZIO, MARIA AND TONIO:
All three united together again–
What a favor! what a pleasure!
The heart can scarcely sustain
Such unlooked-for happiness!
(Enter the Marchioness.)

THE MARCHIONESS: What do I see? and officer!–and you, Sulpizio,
You here with them–what are you about?

MARIA: Oh, aunt!
This is Tonio, who long ago saved me!
From certain death–this is my lover. (Timidly.)

THE MARCHIONESS: What–love!
What do you say?

TONIO: Lady–

THE MARCHIONESS: Be silent!
Maria is betrothed to the Duke of Krakenthorp.

SULPIZIO: This is–(your pardon)–a little mistake of her good aunt's;
She is promised only in defiance of herself;
And, now that Tonio is made a captain,
And that he will marry her, the contract is ended.

THE MARCHIONESS: What, Sulpizio?–you–in this manner–you
Who well know–

TONIO: But, signora–

THE MARCHIONESS: Go!
(To Tonio.)
And never dare to put your foot here again.

TONIO: (offended). What presumption is yours!
I go, but will return, Maria;
You shall be my wife by break of day.
(To Maria, who weeps.)

SULPIZIO: Bravo!

THE MARCHIONESS: What say you?

SULPIZIO: I merely said 'Good bye.'

THE MARCHIONESS: (to Maria). Withdraw immediately; you weep in vain.

MARIA: I go–but, Tonio–

THE MARCHIONESS: And when will you obey?
(To both, who are going. Maria gives a look at Sulpizio, and goes.)
Remain, Sulpizio–

THE MARCHIONESS: I am about to confide a great secret
To your discretion. Read this.

SULPIZIO: (reads). Brought up in my youth too strictly, and deprived of the opportunities of mixing in society, at my first appearance in the world I saw a young officer–he pleased me–and a daughter was the da un matrimonio clandestino n'ebbi una figlia. Ora, una mano celeste a me la guida; ma, per mio rossore, pubblicar non posso in faccia agli uomini, per legami di famiglia, per inimicizie nazionali, che fui sposa—e quella che ad ogni istante abbraccio—quella Maria che voi mi rendeste, quella è figlia mia.'

(La Marchesa quasi piangendo si getta a' suoi piedi)

SULPIZIO: Ah, signora!—
Disponete di me come vi piace—

LA MARCHESA: Al Duca Krakentorp la persuadete
A passar in isposa—e sopra tutto
Non svelate il mistero—

SULPIZIO: Vado—volo.'
(Entrano la Duchessa ed il Notaro.)

LA DUCHESSA: Mio figlio il Duca
Occupato alla corte, non può venir,
Ma ov'è vostra nipote?

LA MARCHESA: Tuttora alla toilette;
Ma verrà tosto.
(Entrano Maria e Sulpizio.)

LA MARCHESA: Maria!

MARIA: Cara madre!
(Piangendo.)

LA MARCHESA: Oh, figlia—zitto!

SULPIZIO: Giudizio—
(Ad entrambe sotto voce.)

LA MARCHESA: Un compimento avrà la festa!

MARIA: (alla Marchesa). Deggio segnar?

LA MARCHESA: Ah! la mia brama è questa.
(Odesi un improvviso rumore.)
(Entrano Tonio e soldati.)

TUTTI: Giusto Ciel! quali grida! qual chiasso!

TONIO: Mi seguite, compagni.

CORO: Ti rincora, amata figlia;
Per giovarti siamo qua,
Da ogni mal la tua famiglia,
Te difendere saprà.
Tergi il pianto, affrena il duolo.
In noi fede aver puoi solo.
Se ogni speme in te svani,
Per te sola ognun è qui.

TONIO: La misera forzata
Si vuol da noi salvata:
Lei sola è il nostro bene,
Nè trarla ad un imene,
Ch'ella non può compir.

SULPIZIO: Bravo, Tonio!

LA MARCHESA: Cosa fate?

SULPIZIO: Vivandiera al reggimento
L'ha veduta e l'adorò.

offspring of a clandestine marriage. Now a heavenly hand has brought her to me; but shame prevents me revealing in the face of the world that I forgot family ties and national enmities–that I became a wife–that she whom I embrace every moment–that Maria whom you restored to me, is my daughter.
(The Marchioness throws herself, weeping, at his feet.)

SULPIZIO: Oh, lady!
Dispose of me as you please.

THE MARCHIONESS: Persuade her to become the wife
Of the Duke of Krakenthorp; and, above all,
Do not reveal the secret.

SULPIZIO: I go–I fly.
(Enter the Duchess and a Notary.)

THE DUCHESS: My son the Duke
Is at the court so occupied,
That he cannot come.

THE MARCHIONESS: All things are here prepared,
And we have been waiting for him.
(Enter Maria and Sulpizio.)

THE MARCHIONESS: Maria.

MARIA: Dear mother.
(Weeping)

THE MARCHIONESS: Oh, daughter, hush!

SULPIZIO: Justice.
(Whispering to both.)

THE MARCHIONESS: The feast will be complete.

MARIA: (the Marchioness). Must I sign?

THE MARCHIONESS: Yes! such is my wish.
(An extraordinary noise is heard.)
(Enter Tonio and soldiers.)

ALL: Just Heaven! What cries! What a bustle!

TONIO: Follow me, companions.

CHORUS: We have come to free our child
Gallant, loving fathers we;
Oh, we soldiers know our duty.
Never fear them, never fear.
Spite of velvet, silk, and feather,
We'll the castle leave together.
Welcome to the field and tent,
Daughter of the regiment.

TONIO: From certain misery
We shall save her:
In her alone is our happiness,
And she shall not be forced
Into a detested union.

SULPIZIO: Bravo, Tonio.

THE MARCHIONESS: What are you doing?

SULPIZIO: When sutler of our regiment,
He saw her and adored her.

LA MARCHESA: Oh, rossore! oh, avvilimento!

SULPIZIO: (La Marchesa in cor gelò.)

MARIA: Quando il destino in mezzo a stragi era,
Nel lor seno fanciulla mi gettò,
Essi han raccolto la miseria mia,
E i primi passi miei ciascun guidò.
Potrebbe mai dimenticarli il cor
S'esisto per loro amor.

CORO: Infatti ella è gentile,
Ne può tener sia vile!
Se il vero ella confessa
Se aperto mostra il cor.
A vil non può tenersi,
S'ella confessa il vero;
S'è il labbro suo sincero,
Se mostra schietto il cor.

LA MARCHESA: (Or tutto è noto; non mi rimane che segnar.)

TONIO: Che dirà mai?

MARIA: Ne morirò.

LA MARCHESA: T'arresta!
Per me si' gran dolor—per me soltanto?

ALTRI: Cielo! che intende dir!

LA MARCHESA: Vieni, deh, vieni!
Sacrificar non voglio un cor si' bello.
In me taccia l'orgoglio,
E quel ch'ella sceglieva, amante onesto.
Alfin ottenga.

ALTRI: E qual'è desso?

LA MARCHESA: (ponendo Tonio nelle braccia di Maria.) È questo.

SULPIZIO: Bene!

MARIA: Tonio!

TONIO: Maria!

SULPIZIO: Brava, Signora Zia!
Se non avessi il mustaccio
Le darei proprio un militar abbraccio.

CORO DI DONNE: Oh, che scandalo, che orrore!
Questo Imen fa inorridir.
Andiam, partiam.

TUTTI: Salvezza alla Francia!
Ai suoi lieti di
Vivan le gioje
Che amor nudrì.

MARIA: (a Tonio). Dolce tesoro,
Han fin le pene;
Ah! mai sostiene
La gioia il cor.
Quanto lo t'adoro
Dir non saprei,
Per me tu sei
Un ciel d'amor.

FINE.

THE MARCHIONESS: Oh, shame! oh, disgrace!

SULPIZIO: (The Marchioness is melting.)

MARIA: When I was left, abandoned by all,
Where in the death-sleep thousands lie.
With these brave men I found protection,
And shall I now my friends deny?

CHORUS: Her heart is really noble
Although by soldiers nursed!
Such thought should surely give her
A place among the first.
No one can think it wrong,
That she the truth confesses:
The bashfulness of her tongue
Betokens the candor of her heart

THE MARCHIONESS: (Now everything is known,
There is nothing left to me but to sign.)

TONIO: What will she say?

MARIA: It will be the death of me.

THE MARCHIONESS: Stop!
Shall I cause such wretchedness–I alone?

THE OTHERS: Heavens, what do you mean?

THE MARCHIONESS: Come, oh come!
I will not sacrifice such a noble heart
Pride is silenced within me;
And the one she has chosen–
You, honest lover, shall obtain her.

THE OTHERS: And which is he?

THE MARCHIONESS: (bringing Tonio to Maria). This one.

SULPIZIO: Good!

MARIA: Tonio!

TONIO: Maria!

SULPIZIO: Bravo, Signora Aunt!
Were it not for my moustache,
I would give you a military salute.

CHORUS OF LADIES: What a scandal, what a horror!
This marriage shocks us.
Let us go and leave them.

ALL: Hurrah for France!
For all their living days
May the joys of love
Attend upon them.

MARIA: (to Tonio). Dearest treasure,
My griefs are ended;
Ah, scarcely can this head
Its joy sustain.
How much I love you
I cannot tell you.
For me you are
A heaven of love.

THE END.

Madame Sans-Gêne (1915)

The Lady Without Fear

MUSIC BY UMBERTO GIORDANO ■ LIBRETTO BY RENATO SIMONI

Madame Sans-Gêne premiered at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York on January 25, 1915. The three-act opera is set to a libretto by Renato Simoni based upon the comedy by Victorien Sardou and Emile Moreau. The opera opens in Paris on August 10, 1792, the day that the storming of the Tuileries takes place. Catherine Huebscher, a beautiful young Alsatian woman, is known as Madame Sans-Gêne for her carefree nature. She has a laundry, the customers of which include Fouché, am ambitious revolutionary whom Madame Sans-Gêne dislikes intensely. She prefers to take care of Napoléon Bonaparte, an officer who resides close to the laundry. Catherine is about to shut the door to the laundry when Count Neipperg, a wounded Austrian officer, enters and seeks shelter from his pursuers. A band of soldiers then arrives, led by Catherine's sweetheart, Sergeant Lefebvre. He finds the wounded officer but tells his soldiers that there is no one there. During the night Lefebvre and Catherine arrange Neipperg's escape. It is now September, 1811. Napoléon is at the pinnacle of his career. Madame Sans-Gêne is married to Lefebvre, who distinguished himself in the battle of Danzig and has been made Marshal and Duke of Danzig in return for his services. Catherine's behavior remains carefree as always, and the scandals surrounding her at court cause the Emperor to order Lefebvre to divorce her. Catherine and Lefebvre are deeply upset and are also concerned about Neipperg, whom the Emperor suspects of having an affair with his wife, Marie Louise. Catherine at a reception, makes a faux pas—the Emperor's sisters tease her, and she loses her temper at them. The Emperor's major-domo announces that Napoléon wishes to speak to her at once. Napoléon orders Catherine to get a divorce and to leave the court; she reminds him of the times when he was just a young officer and she served him. He is deeply moved by the recollection, but at that moment Neipperg is captured as he is about to enter Marie Louise's apartment. The Emperor orders his immediate execution. Catherine intervenes, proving Neipperg's innocence and saving his life. The Emperor is very impressed by her, and she leaves on his arm to begin the hunt.

■ ATTO PRIMO	■ ACT I
La lavanderia di Madame Sans-Gêne a Parigi il 10 Agosto 1792	Madame Sans-Gêne's Laundry Paris, August 10, 1792
Una bottega di lavandaia in via S. Anna. Grandi finestre a vetrate e porta principale anch'essa a vetrata, mostrano la strada. A destra, in primo piano, una porta d'ingresso dà sul cortile. A sinistra, ancora in primo piano, un'altra porta mette alla stanza da letto di CATERINA. Su corde tese molta biancheria posta ad asciugare: sottane a righe tricoli, camicette insieme a pizzi aristocratici. Una vesta tinnoza, è posata sopra un treppiede. Vicino alla porta del cortile c'è una credenza. Sul fondo, un camino a cappa con fornello per riscaldare i ferri da stirare. Tavole ed assi posate su caralletti per stirare. Sgabelli di legno. Una grande poltrona presso la tavola.	(Interior of a laundry in the rue Ste. Anne. Large windows and a door, with glass panes, show the street beyond. At the right front a door opens into a courtyard. At the left front another door leads to CATERINA'S bedroom. On cords stretched across the room a lot of laundry is hung up to dry: petticoats with three-colored lines, chemises with fine embroidery. A tub is placed on a three-legged stool. Near the door to the courtyard is a cupboard. At the back is a hooded stove with a little oven for heating the irons. Tables and boards on wooden horses for ironing. Wooden stools. A big armchair near the table.
All'aprirsi del velario, TONIOTTA, GUILIA e LA ROSSA stirano disattente e svogliate, sempre pronte a correre all'uscio a ogni strepito. Nella strada, una folla mobile, agitata e curiosa, di borghesi, di bottegai, guarda verso le Tuileries (a destra). C'è un via vai continuo. S'odono voci, commenti, esclamazioni. Da lontano, scoppi di fucilate e il rombo cupo del cannone.	(When the curtain rises, TONIOTTA, GIULLA and LA ROSSA are ironing with a distracted and unwilling air, always ready to run to the door at any sound. In the street a moving crowd, agitated and curious, of common people and shopkeepers, looks towards the Tuileries — right. — There is continuous coming and going. One hears voices, comments, exclamations. From afar comes the crack of rifles and the deep booming of the cannon.)
TONIOTTA: Sono in via della Scala! Li sentite? Urli e strepiti orrendi il vento porta!	TONIOTTA: They're in the rue d'Échelle! Do you hear? The wind Brings down their dreadful cries and groans this way!
GIULIA: Che paura, mio Dio!	GIULLA: O heaven! how terrible!
LA ROSSA: Se vengon qui!	LA ROSSA: They're coming here!
GIULIA: (cadendo ginocchioni) Vergine santa!	GIULLA: (falling on her knees) Mother in heaven!
TONIOTA: No! Qui non verrano. L'han con le Tuileries È il re che voglion mettere alla porta. (Romba, lontana, una cannonata)	TONIOTTA: No, no, they will not come. The Tuileries and the king Whom they would hurry out will keep them. (Far off a cannon booms.)
LA ROSSA: (turandosi le orecchie) Ci spezzeranno i vetri! (Movimento vivissimo nella via. Una guardia nazionale, ferita alla gamba, è portata a braccia entro la bottega del farmacista dirimpetto. Tutti si affollano davanti alla bottega, volgendo le spalle al pubblico)	LA ROSSA: (stopping her ears) They'll break the windows! (A lively movement in the street. A national guard, wounded in the leg, is carried by the arm into the pharmacy opposite. All crowd around the shop, turning their backs to the audience.)

TONIOTTA: (andando alla finestra) Ecco un ferito!

GIULIA: Una guardia!

TONIOTTA: infelice!

GIULIA: Io tremo tutta!
(Tuona ancora il cannone. Nella via la folla si agita; una parte di essa volge verso sinistra)

LA ROSSA: Il cannon romba e tuona!

TONIOTTA: E la padrona che non torna ancora!

LA ROSSA: Dio l'assista, la povera padrona!

TONIOTTA: S'è intestata ad uscire ad ogni costo!

GIULIA: Ah! Ti ricorderò, dieci d'agosto!

LA ROSSA: (guardando nella strada) Zitte! Avremo notizie! . . .
Ecco il cliente della casa vicina!

GIULIA: Ah, si, il Natese . . .

LA ROSSA: . . . odiatore furente dell' Austriaca e del Re!

TUTTE: (verso la strada, chiamando con la voce e con i cenni)
Olà, signor Fouché!
Signor Fouché! Signor Fouché!
(FOUCHÉ entra rapido, guardandosi indietro, come chi sospetti d'essere spiato. Porta una valigia, e impugna un ombrello rosso)

GUILIA: Signor Fouché! Che notizie recate?

FOUCHÉ: I patrioti hanno le beffe e il danno
e trionfa il tirano.
Su! La mia biancheria datemi presto, ch'io la metta nel sacco insieme al resto.
(TONIOTTA e GIULIA tolgono alcuni capi di biancheria non ancora lavata da un canestro. Egli ne fa dei rotoli, che caccia e stipa nella vaglia, sempre continuando a parlare)

LA ROSSA: Ahimè! Scappate!

FOUCHÉ: La parola è dura, parto con un zinzino di premura.

GIULIA: Dunque le Tuileries non sono prese?

FOUCHE: Osso duro! Osso duro!
Prima il colpo pareva sicuro!
Ora invece il disastro è completo!
(TONIOTTA dà a FOUCHÉ un fazzoletto di colore con un grosso strappo nel mezzo. FOUCHÉ lo esamina)
Non è mio! E trionfa Capeto.

TONIOTA: Ma sì, è vostro! Tenetelo! E vostro!

TONIOTTA: (going to the window) See there! a wounded man!

GIULIA: A guard!

TONIOTTA: Poor thing!

GIULIA: Oh, how I'm trembling!
(The cannon is heard again. In the street the crowd becomes agitated; part turn towards the left.)

LA ROSSA: The cannon booms far off!

TONIOTTA: Our mistress does not come.

LA ROSSA: May no harsh rebuff
Be keeping her!

TONIOTTA: If she would only stay
Safe out of danger.

GIULIA: Ah!
I never can forget this dreadful day
— the tenth of August!

LA ROSSA: (looking into the street) Be still! look there! here comes the man
Next door.

GIULIA: Natese!

LA ROSSA: He who puts his ban
Of hatred upon Austria and the king.

ALL: (towards the street, calling and gesticulating) Ha! monsieur Fouché! monsieur Fouché!
(Fouché enters rapidly, looking about him, as if suspicious of being spied upon. He carries a valise and holds tightly a red umbrella.)

GIULIA: Monsieur Fouché, what message do you bring?

FOUCHÉ: The patriots will lose by trick and wrong, —
The tyrant triumphs. Let me take my laundry along with my other things. Be quick!
(Toniotta and Giulia take some piles of laundry, not yet washed, from a basket. He rolls them up and stuffs them into his valise, always talking.)

LA ROSSA: Begone!

FOUCHÉ: That word is hard. With slight concern
I go, though.

GIULIA: Tell me now, when can we learn
The Tuileries is taken?

FOUCHÉ: It is hard to tell,
Alas! At first all seemed to be going well,
But now diaster seems complete.
(Toniotta gives Fouché a colored handkerchief, torn badly in the middle. FOUCHÉ examines it.)
No, no!
It is not mine.

TONIOTTA: It's yours — take it, and go!

FOUCHÉ: (mette il fazzoletto nella valigia)
La padrona?

GIULIA: É ancor fuori.

FOUCHÉ: Imprudente!
Star tappati oggi in casa conviene.
(Si avvia verso la porta d'uscita)

GIULIA: Le si è detto; mai, chi la tiene?

LA ROSSA: Vien chiamata Sans-Gêne della gente . . .

GIULIA: Ma quest'oggi Sans-Gêne si procura anche il nome di Senza Paura!

FOUCHÉ: Tarda!

GIULIA: (impensierita) È vero! Dovbrebbe tornare!

FOUCHÉ: Purchè torni.

TUTTE: Ci fate tremare.
(Due cannonate. Esclamazioni. Movimento nella via. Tamburi che battono la carica. FOUCHÉ che sta per uscire, si arresta)

VOCI DI FUORI: Ecco Sans-Gêne! è qui Sans-Gêne!
(CATERINA, seguita da un gruppo di gente, entra frettolosa e affannata, con un canestro di biancheria sotto il braccio. Tutte le giovani lavandaie le si affollano intorno festosamente)

TUTTE: (portando una sedia nel mezzo della scena, e offrendola a CATERINA.) Ah, padrona! Finalmente!

FOUCHÉ: Si teneva, si tremava!

CATERINA: Son qui tutta.

GIULIA: Cara!

FOUCHÉ: Brava!

CATERINA: Ah! Non ne posso più!

FOUCHÉ: Dunque, là in fondo?

CATERINA: Un inferno, un finimondo.

FOUCHÉ: Bolle sempre?

CATERINA: Bolle!

FOUCHÉ: Bene!
Raccontate quel che avviene.

CATERINA: Non ho visto proprio nulla.

FOUCHÉ: (deluso) Nulla?

GIULIA: Nulla?

CATERINA: (siede e parla affannata) Nulla!
Mentre andavo via leggera tra le grida, gli urli, i canti, batto il naso in una schiera di giganti
con la barba nera nera!
Un di quelli balza avanti
e comincia a domandare:
"Dove vai?,, "Dove mi pare!,, Dice: "Chiuso t'è il passaggio
se non paghi il tuo pedaggio.,,

FOUCHÉ: (putting handkerchief into his valise) Your mistress?

GIULIA: She's still out.

FOUCHÉ: It is wiser to stay at home
These days.

GIULIA: Yes — but she will roam.

LA ROSSA: They call her Without Care — the people here.

GIULIA: But these days that means also Without Fear.

FOUCHÉ: It's late.

GIULIA: (thoughtfully) It's true! I wish she would come back.

FOUCHÉ: Provided that she comes.

ALL: You make us tremble,
(Two cannon-shots. Exclamations. Movements in the street. Drums beat the attack. FOUCHÉ, who is on the point of going out, stops.)

VOICES OUTSIDE: Here is Sans-Gêne! here is Sans-Gêne!
(CATERINA, followed by a group of people, enters hastily and in alarm, with a basket of linen under her arm. All the young women in crowd around her joyfully.)

ALL: (carrying a seat to the middle of the stage and offering it to CATERINA) Our mistress! back at last!

FOUCHÉ: How did you save Yourself?

CATERINA: I'm quite all right.

GIULIA: So dear!

FOUCHÉ: So brave!

CATERINA: I am so faint!

FOUCHÉ: But what goes on? do tell.

CATERINA: Nothing but ruin — truly a perfect hell.

FOUCHÉ: It is more than bubbles?

CATERINA: Bubbles?

FOUCHÉ: Do say
What dreadful things have come to you today.

CATERINA: I have seen nothing.

FOUCHÉ: (deceived) Nothing?

GIULIA: Nothing?

CATERINA: (sitting down and talking excitedly) No!
While I tried to go with an easy gait
Where everyone was mad with groan and song
And desperate cries, I found myself among
A troop of giants, all with beards of black!
One of them seized on me and turned me back,
Asking, "Where are you going?" I

E m'afferra per la vita.
Mi solleva su su su e mi schiaccia
un gran bacio sulla faccia con quell'ispida baraccia! (si alza)
— Bestia! — grido invipertia; ride il mostro, e poi mi slancia tra la barba folta folta del vicin, che alla sua volta mi scaciucchia sulla guancia!
(facendo passare il paniere da un braccio all'altro, due volte)
E così di bocca in bocca passeggiare, ahimè, mi tocca tra le barbe di carbone
lungo tutto il battaglione!
Mi rassegno al mio destino, lascio fare a quegli audaci
che m'azzecan centro baci, profumati all'aglio e al vino!
Finchè libera mi stacco,
batto il tacco
svolto in fretta per la via e son giunta a casa mia.
(Tutti ridono)

VOCI DI FUORI: Viva la Nazione!
(Tutti si voltano e corrono alla porta)

FOUCHÉ: (Si fa largo e chiede, gridando, alla folla di fuori) Dite, voi cosa c'è?

VOCI DI FUORI: Il popolo vince
ed hanno la peggio
l'Austriaca ed il re.
Si son già rifugiati al maneggio!

FOUCHÉ: E gli Svizzeri?

VOCI DI FUORI: Cessano il tiro, non han più munizioni.

FOUCHÉ: (rientra e viene verso la ribalta fregandosi le mani) Respiro!
(Le voci, ripetendo, Viva la Nazione! si allontananoo. Restano in iscena FOUCHÉ, CATERINA e le ragazze)

CATERINA: (alle ragazze) Il popolo laggiù, fa il bucato
e noi facciamo il nostro. Su, figliuole, via dalla porta! Distendete al sole questi panni lavati nel cortil.
(TONIOTTA e GIULIA portano via la tinozza dalla porta di destra)
(alla ROSSA)
È tu, Rousotte, fila via!
All'ufficiale di via dei Mulini porta questa biancheria.
Non ne ha troppa. E non gli dare il conto. No ha da pagare.
È all'asciutto. (LA ROSSA, via) said, "Where I please."

"The road is closed." he said, "until the fees
We ask of you are paid." Then without grace
He picked me up and planted on my face
A kiss with his rough beard. (She rises.) "You beast!" I cried,
Maddened; the monster laughed, and at his side
Passed me on to the next man, who in turn
Made his foul kisses burn on my white cheek.
(She passes the basket twice from one arm to the other.)
Just so from mouth to mouth I had to pass,
And so be kissed by those black beards en masse.
I gave myself up then to destiny,
And let those hundred soldiers fling at me
Their kisses, sweet with garlic and with wine.
And then at last, when liberty was mine,
I did not seem to have much wish to roam
The streets, and so, my friends, I am at home.
(All laugh.)

VOICES OUTSIDE: Long live the Nation!
(All turn and rush to the door.)

FOUCHÉ: (expanding himself, and calling to the crowd in the street) Say, what is this burst?

VOICES: The people conquer, and have done their worst
To the Austrian and the king, who have taken flight
To the ministry!

FOUCHÉ: Where are the Swiss?

VOICES: Their fight
Is off — they have no powder.

FOUCHÉ: (reentering, rubbing his hands) I breathe again!
(The voices calling out "Long live the Nation!" go farther away. There remain on the stage FOUCHÉ, CATERINA, and the GIRLS.)

CATERINA: (to the girls) The people there begin to wash their hands
Of trouble. Let us do our wash.
While
The sun stands so high, put out this pile of stuff
Upon the lines.
(TONIOTTA and GIULIA take out the tub by the door at the right.)
(To LA ROSSA.)
And you, Roussotte, be off,
And take this laundry to the officer
Who lives in the rue des Moulins.
Do not stir
His mind to payment, for he's not to pay.
Be off!
(Exit LA ROSSA)

CATERINA: (chiamando un ragazzo ch'è in istrada) Ehi, Maturino, corri al posta di via Colbert,
a vedere se c'è
il sergente Lefebvre; e se c'è, digli che venga da me.

(*Il ragazzo corre via. La scena si vuota. Restasolo FOUCHÉ non visto da CATERINA.
Costei chiude i vetri delle finestre, lasciando aperte le imposte*)

(Durante tutta la seguente scena con FOUCHÉ, CATERINA si dà gran da fare. Prende dal fornello il catino d'acqua e amido e lo depone sulla tavola; stende su questa i panni per stirare, immerge cuffie e cravatte nell'amido, poi le strizza, le fa sgocciolare, le distende sopra un salvietta piegata in due; poi, arrolgendole in essa, ne fa un pacchetto che spreme tra le mani; poi s'accinge a stirare. Prende un ferro, lo accosta alla guancia, per sentire se è caldo, lo rimette sul fornello, ne prende un altro, lo netta, stira; con un ferro da arricciare increspa le trine di una cuffia, ecc. ecc.)

FOUCHÉ: Mia bella Caterina!

CATERINA: (voltandosi sorpresa) Voi siete ancora qui?

FOUCHÉ: Quel Lefebvre vi è assai caro, mi pare!?

CATERINA: È forse proibito d'amare?
È bello, è forte ed è cortese . . .
E poi è del mio paese,
Alsaziono come me.

FOUCHÉ: (s'accomoda sulla poltrona) Amore d'infanzia?

CATERINA: Ma che!
Lo conobbi non sono due mesi
al Wauxhall, a una festa da ballo.
. . . Un ceffo da scimmia m'apposta, mi sbircia, mi segue, s'accosta.
Pareva Berlicche! Sghignazza;
— T'invito, mia bella ragazza,
la fricassée a far con me.
— Gnornò, dico io.
— Perchè? dice lui.
— Perchè, dico io,
ballar non mi garba, signor!
— Smorfiosa, mi grida Berlicche,
sei forse la dama di picche?
Ma giunto alle picche, una pacca quell'orrido muso gli spacca.
La pacca era appunto . . .

FOUCHÉ: . . . Lefebvre!

(Calling to a boy in the street)
Ho! Maturino, without delay
Run to rue Colbert to the soldiers' post,
And see if sergeant Lefebvre is in the host
Of men that drift about there; if he's there,
Tell him that you have come from me.

(The boy runs off. The stage is empty, except FOUCHÉ, unseen by CATERINA. She closes the windows, but leaves open the shutters.)

(During all of the following scene with FOUCHÉ, CATERINA gives herself a lot to do. She takes from the oven the basin of water and starch, and puts it on the table; she spreads out clothes to iron, dips collars and cuffs in the starch, squeezes them out, spreads them on a napkin, folded twice; then, wrapping them up in it, makes a packet, which she squeezes in her hands; then gets ready to iron. She takes an iron, tries it on her cheek to see if it is hot, puts it back in the oven, takes another out, scours it and sets to work; with another iron she curls the edge of a cuff, etc., etc.)

FOUCHÉ: My fair
And lovely Caterina!

CATERINA: (turning around in surprise) You still here?

FOUCHÉ: Is this Lefebvre then to you so dear?

CATERINA: And is one not allowed to love? Command
And courtesy are his, and from my land
He comes—he is Alsatian like me.

FOUCHÉ (making himself comfortable in the armchair) A sentiment of childhood, then?

CATERINA: Not he.
We met a Vauxhall not two months ago,
Dancing.—A wretch, who thought himself a beau,
But had a monkey-face, made horrid eyes
At me, and followed me, through his disguise
Accosting me and laughing: "Pretty girl,"
He said, "come join with me the dancing whirl."
"Not I," I said. "Why not?" said he. "Because I like not dancing." And by now I was Enraged, for now I knew this man to be Berlicche. "Are you the queen of spades?" he cried.
But at that moment in a flash a blow fell upon his ugly face.—

FOUCHÉ: Lefebvre!

CATERINA: — Mercè, dico io,
— Macchè, dice lui!
Con slancio m'afferra,
con slancio lo stringo,
si pestano i piè, si sgambetta,
si salta, si piroetta!
Così ci siam cotti d'amore
ballando la fricassée!

FOUCHÉ: Dunque presto le nozze?

CATERINA: Presto si, se quel geloso non guasta tutto
coi suoi sospetti senza costrutto.
(colta da un pensiero, espressivo con un gesto della mano)
Anzi, filate!

FOUCHÉ: No!

CATERINA: Che aspettate?

FOUCHÉ: Che siano prese le Tuileries.

CATERINA: Ecco un uom formidabile a strillare viva la libertà, morte al tiranno.
Ma quando invece i patrioti vanno in battaglia, la zucca a cimentare, voi ve ne state qui a scaldar la sedia con le man sulla pancia. (ridendo)
Oh, che commedia!

FOUCHÉ: (calmo) Le parte compie ognun che gli è prescritta, e le rivoluzion c'è che le fa . . .

CATERINA: . . . e c'è che ne profitta.
(con ironia)
Dicon che siete state in seminario.

FOUCHÉ: Fui prete.

CATERINA: Ed ora?

FOUCHÉ: Rivoluzionario!

CATERINA: (con ironia) Ciò vi dà da mangiare?

FOUCHÉ: Non ancora!
Ma in seguito si spera.

CATERINA: (con sempre più viva ironia) Alla buon'ora!
È per voi che si picchiano laggiù.
È per farvi ministro.

FOUCHÉ: (mezzo serio, mezzo comico) Su per giù.

CATERINA: Ministro? Non della Guerra.
Piuttosto di Polizia.
Avete un musetto tagliente . . .

FOUCHÉ: Per annusare la gente!

CATERINA: Vi piace curiosare . . .

FOUCHÉ: Frugare . . .

CATERINA: Spiare
con quegli occhi vivi e scaltri . . .

FOUCHÉ: Con questi occhi vivi e scaltri . . .

CATERINA: . . . nei segreti degli altri.

CATERINA: "Thank you," I said,
"But why?" said he!
He flung
His arms with force about me, and I clung Close to him, as at once we madly let
Our feet turn, slide, jump, prance, and pirouette.

FOUCHÉ: The marriage is at once?

CATERINA: At once, indeed,
Unless someone needs
To spoil it all with false suspicions.
(Struck by a thought, which she expresses with a gesture.)
Come, now, be off!

FOUCHÉ: Not I!

CATERINA: Why do you wait?

FOUCHÉ: For the Tuileries to fall.

CATERINA: And you a perfectly able man to call Long live liberty! Death to the tyrant! When your patriotic men
Go forth into the fight and face things, you are safe from harm,
And keep the old armchair there nice and warm.
Oh, what a comedy!

FOUCHÉ: (calmly) The party does
What is prescribed to it, so now it is
The revolution which—

CATERINA: Which profits.
(With irony.)
I have been told that your career first was
In a seminary.

FOUCHÉ: Yes, I was a priest.

CATERINA: And now?

FOUCHÉ: A revolutionary.

CATERINA: (with irony) And does that give you what you need for food?

FOUCHÉ: Not yet! but I have hopes of livelihood.

CATERINA: (with increasing irony) And is it to make you minister they drown
Each other with their blows?

FOUCHÉ: (half serious, half joking) Life's up and down.

CATERINA: Minister? not of War, but of Police.
You have a face of keenness.

FOUCHÉ: More to please
The people!

CATERINA: You have curiosity.

FOUCHÉ: I like to search.

CATERINA: No, more—you like to spy,
With your sharp eyes—

FOUCHÉ: With my sharp eyes—

CATERINA: And get
Secrets from others.

FOUCHÉ: E sia,
vada per la polizia.

CATERINA: Ei ci crede e lo confessa!
(con uno scoppio di risa)
Ministro voi sarete quand'io sarò duchessa!
(con un inchino burlesco a FOUCHÉ)
Quando sarà chiamato al Ministero, mi pagherà il suo conto, non è vero?
Sono tre mesi, sa, Vostra Eccellenza, che la stiro e la inamido a credenza!

FOUCHÉ: (con malizia bonaria)
Non sono il solo! Un altro c'è che nel pagare somiglia a me!
C'è l'ufficial d'artiglieria!
La Roussotte or gli portò
la biancheria, ma il conto no . . .

CATERINA: Voi siete un fannullon, quello è un soldato.

FOUCHÉ: Disperato!
Ha perso il grado,
briga, intriga
per riaverlo e non l'avrà!

CATERINA: Proveretto!

FOUCHÉ: Per mangiare, l'orologio egli ha impegnato
iermattina da Fouvelet.

CATERINA: Non c'è vecchia portinaia ficcanaso come voi.

FOUCHÉ: Se aspettate che vi paghi quel signor Timoleon . . .

CATERINA: (correggendo) Napoleon!

FOUCHÉ: (insistendo) Timoleon!

CATERINA: (irritata) Napoleone Buonaparte!

FOUCHÉ: È un côrso selvatico, verdognolo e secco,
dall'occhio enigmatico,
dal naso che è un becco!
Lasciate che vada,
farà poca strada,
credetelo a me!

CATERINA: Crepi l'astrologo!
(Le campane suonano a stormo. Crescono lo strepito, lo scalpiccio e le voci. Rombo di cannone. GIULIA e TONIOTTA entrano dalla porta di destra e corrono al fondo. CATERINA corre anch'essa verso il fondo. FOUCHÉ la segue. Guardano fuori.)

FOUCHÉ: Nuvole di fumo!

CATERINA: Brucian le Tuileries!

FOUCHÉ: Ah! so be it! let Them come and question me.

CATERINA: You would confess!
(with a burst of laughter)
When I am duchess, you'll be minister!
(with a burlesque courtesy to FOUCHÉ)
When you are at the Ministry in state,
You'll pay your bill, perhaps a little late?
In three months' time, my lord, it will be due
For ironing and starching shirts for you!

FOUCHÉ: (with good-natured malice) But I am not alone. Do not forget
There is another that is in your debt!
There is an officer of the artillery,
To whom Roussotte just now took laundry—he
Was not to pay—

CATERINA: But you are of no use,
He is a soldier.

FOUCHÉ: Of bad character!
He's lost his rank, and strives with low intrigues
To win it back, but that will never be.

CATERINA: Poor fellow!

FOUCHÉ: And for cash to buy some bread
He pawned his watch at Fouvelet's yesterday.

CATERINA: There is no crabbed portress with a nose
As sharp as yours for gossip.

FOUCHÉ: Do you think
You will be paid by this Timoleon?

CATERINA: (correcting him) Napoleon!

FOUCHÉ: (insisting) Timoleon!

CATERINA: (irritated) Napoleon Bonaparte!

FOUCHÉ: That man
Is only a savage Corsican,
Of no experience and dry,
With an unfathomable eye,
And with a nose that's like a beak;
It's best to let him go and seek
What luck he can—he will not stir
Much trouble!

CATERINA: Hear the astrologer!
(The tocsin-bell is heard. Uproar, tramping and voices grow louder. The cannon booms. GIULIA and TONIOTTA enter by the door at the right and run to the back. CATERINA joins them, FOUCHÉ follows her, and all look out.)

FOUCHÉ: Look! clouds of smoke!

CATERINA: The Tuileries is burning!

FOUCHÉ: Respiro! Evviva!
(Grida e canti lontani di vittoria: Vittoria! Vittoria! Viva la Nazione! Entra VINAIGRE seguito e circondato dalla folla, nella quale è anche LA ROSSA)

CATERINA: Ecco Vinaigre, il tamburo!

VINAIGRE: (entrando, scalmanato, col tamburo alla cintola) Vittoria! Vittoria!

FOUCHÉ: Dunque il palazzo . . . ?

VINAIGRE: È preso.

FOUCHÉ: Ed io trionfo!
(Esce frettoloso abbandonando la sua valigia. VINAIGRE balza sul tavolo e grida alla folla che si addensa in fondo alla bottega e in istrada)

VINAIGRE: Popolo di Parigi!
L'austriaca e suo marito han dovuto sloggiare dalla reggia!
Il palazzo è del popolo, ed il popolo governa!

LA FOLLA: Evviva il popolo!

VINAIGRE: La Francia
va scalza alla vittoria, con le mani tinte di sangue . . .

LA FOLLA: Evviva il sangue e la Francia novella!

VINAIGRE: Cittadini! Chi vuol venir con me a visitare l'antro del tiranno?

TUTTI: (con un urlo) Tutti!

VINAIGRE: In marcia. Rataplan!
(Si allontana battendo la carica, accompagnato dalla folla che grida: Viva la Nazione! TUTTI, meno CATERINA, lo seguono. GIULIA, TONIOTTA e LA ROSSA chiudono le imposte delle finestre, ed escono. CATERINA serra la porta d'entrata e ne chiude le imposte; la scena si oscura. Preso il mantello, ella si appresta ad uscire per la porta di destra. Si odono due colpi di fucile assai vicini. La porta di destra si apre. Entre NEIPPERG, che la richiude rapidamente come un uomo inseguito)

CATERINA: (sorpressa) Ohè, dico . . .

NEIPPERG: (origliando alla porta) Per pietà! . . . Sono ferito . . .

CATERINA: Ferito?

NEIPPERG: (quasi svendendo) Hanno perduto le mie tracce . . .
Sono il conte di Neipperg, austriaco . . .

FOUCHÉ: I breathe again! Hooray!
(Cries and songs of victory in the distance: Victory! Victory! Victory! Long live the Nation! Enter VINAIGRE, followed and surrounded by the crowd, in which is also LA ROSSA.)

CATERINA: Here is Vinaigre,
The drummer!

VINAIGRE: (coming in, excited, with his drum at his belt.) Victory! Victory!

FOUCHÉ: And the palace?

VINAIGRE: Is taken.

FOUCHÉ: And I triumph!
(He goes out hastily, abandoning his valise. VINAIGRE jumps onto the table, and cries out to the crowd that is becoming thick in the back of the shop and in the street.)

VINAIGRE: People of Paris!
The Austrian and her husband have been thrust
Out of the palace; and the palace now
Is ours, the people's, and the people rule!

THE CROWD: Hooray for the people!

VINAIGRE: France goes barefoot up
To victory, with hands made red with blood—

THE CROWD: Hooray for the blood we shed and France, new France!

VINAIGRE: Good friends! Who wants to come with me and visit
The den of the tyrant?

THE CROWD: (with a yell) All!

VINAIGRE: In line! Rataplan!
(He goes away, beating his drum, and accompanied by the crowd, that cries out: Long live the Nation! All, except CATERINA, follow him. GIULIA, TONIOTTA and LA ROSSA close the shutters of the windows, and go out. CATERINA locks the entrance door and closes the shutters there. The stage is dark. Taking her cloak, she starts to go out by the door at the right. Two rifle-shots are heard quite near. The door at the right opens. Enter NEIPPERG, who closes it after him rapidly, like a man followed.)

CATERINA: (suprised) What's this?

NEIPPERG: (listening at the door) Have pity!—I am wounded—

CATERINA: Wounded?

NEIPPERG: (almost fainting) I have lost my way—I am the Count of Neipperg,
An Austrian—

CATERINA: (a distanza, con accento di disprezzo) Un realista . . . ?

NEIPPERG: Ho fatto il mio dovere cercando di salvare la Regina.

CATERINA: (con sdegno)
L'austriaca!
(Vedendo NEIPPERG pallido, quasi svenuto per la ferita, presa da pietà)
Ma un ferito,
è sacro! Non temete!

NEIPPERG: Ah! grazie!
(CATERINA corre a cercare delle bende in un canestro di biancheria. Passi di fuori, e voci, che si fermano alla porta)

NEIPPERG: (atterrito) Son scoperto!
(Strepito di fucili che picchiano sul selciato)

LEFEBVRE: (di fuori, spingendo la porta per aprirla) Caterina!

CATERINA: (sottovoce, sbigottita) Lefebvre!
(Indicando a NEIPPERG la porta della sua stanza)
Nella mia stanza, presto!

LEFEBVRE: (di fuori) Caterina!
Sei qui?

VOCI DI SOLDATI: Madame Sans-Gêne!

CATERINA: (forte) Vengo!
(a NEIPPERG, porgendogli le bende)
Fasciatevi da solo. Verrò poi . . . Ma se vi sentono, siete morto!
(NEIPPERG entra nella stanza di CATERINA, che chiude l'uscio e mette in tasca la chiave)

LEFEBVRE: Che fai dunque, lumaca?
(CATERINA corre ad aprire la porta. La scena si rischiara. LEFEBVRE entra con sei soldati. Uno di essi chiude l'uscio a vetri, lasciando aperte le imposte)
Non lo vuoi abbracciare il tuo soldato?

CATERINA: (con slancio) Nespole, se lo voglio!

LEFEBVRE: Son tornato vincitore, intatto e intero.

CATERINA: (maliziosa) Eh, lo spero!

LEFEBVRE: (presentando CATERINA ai suoi compagni) La signorina Caterina Hubscher, alsazianetta giuliva e viva, piccante, petulante, spumeggiante,
lesta di mano e schietta di parola,

CATERINA: (at a distance, with an accent of scorn) A royalist?

NEIPPERG: I have done
My duty trying to save the Queen.

CATERINA: (with contempt) The Austrian!
(Seeing NEIPPERG so pale, almost fainting from the wound, she begins to be sorry for him.)
Your wound—a wound is sacred—do not fear!

NEIPPERG: Ah, thank you!
(CATERINA runs to find some bandages in a basket of laundry. Steps outside and voices, which stop at the door.)

NEIPPERG: (alarmed) I am discovered!
(Sound of guns striking on the pavement.)

LEFEBVRE: (pushing at the door)
Caterina!

CATERINA: (in a low voice, dismayed) Lefebvre!
(Indicating to NEIPPERG the door of her room)
Quick, in my room!

LEFEBVRE: (outside) Caterina, are you there?

VOICES OF SOLDIERS: Madame Sans-Gêne!

CATERINA: (full voice) I'm coming!
(to NEIPPERG, taking him the bandages.)
Take these bands.
You'll have to bind yourself, and then I'll see—
But if they hear you it is certain death.
(NEIPPERG goes into CATERINA'S room; she closes door and puts key in her pocket.)

LEFEBVRE: What are you doing, snail?
(CATERINA runs to open the door. The stage becomes light again. LEFEBVRE comes in with six soldiers. One of them closes the door but leaves the shutters open.)
Have you no wish
To kiss your soldier?

CATERINA: (with abandon) Kiss me, for I wish it.

LEFEBVRE: I have come back victorious, and sound
In every limb.

CATERINA: (maliciously) For that fact I'll be bound.

LEFEBVRE: (presenting CATERINA to his companions) This is Mademoiselle Caterina Hubscher, Joyous and gay Alsacian, petulant,
Piquant and brimming over with life, just light
Enough of touch, sincere in happy

onde in tutto il quartier chiamata vien
Madame Sans-Gêne!

TUTTI: Madame Sans-Gêne!

LEFEBVRE: (andando a deporre il fucile in un angolo) Alle giubbe scarlatte diam la caccia,
ed ai vili sicari del tiranno!
Uno propio qui presso ci sfuggì.
Ma ha del piombo nell'ala e senza fallo l'acchiapperemo! Intanto un gotto. Abbiamo la gola asciutta ed arsa.
(accennando a una bottiglia di vino che sta sul canterano)
Ecco del vino!

CATERINA: Oh, ne ho di più meglio!
(Va alla credenza, ne toglie due bottiglie, un cavatappi e alcune scodelle, che posa sulla tavola)

LEFEBVRE: E venga il meglio!
(sturando la bottiglia che gli appresta CATERINA)
Ah, perdio, fu un travaglio rude. Dai tetti e dai balconi che gragnuola di piombo!
Pan! Pan! ad agni colpo era un grido, era sangue, era un caduto!
Or gli Svizzeri
inseguiti a fucilate son dispersi, son distrutti!
Il Palazzo ora è nostro!
Adesso la folla vi penetra;
son piene le sale, le stanze di grida, di canti e di danze!
Che gioia! La gente si abbraccia lacera e straccia
fa man bassa,
rompe, spacca, fracassa, scaraventa nella via specchi, bottiglie, mobili,
pentole e sguatteri!
Oh! che allegria!
(Risata generale. Ma LEFEBVRE si rabbuia ed esclama, mordendosi le mani) Penso a quel cane
che abbiam ferito
ed è fuggito!
Se lo riagguanto,
perdio, lo schianto!

CATERINA: Or che hai vinto, perdona e pensa a me.

LEFEBVRE: Tra un odio ed un amor sono diviso!
(Rinboccandosi una manica)
Guarda, su questo braccio, words,

Whence comes it that in all this quarter men
Call her Madame Sans-Gêne!

THE SOLDIERS: Madame Sans-Gêne!

LEFEBVRE: (going to put his gun in a corner) To the red-jackets gives she merry chace,
And to the dirty cutthroats of the tyrant.
A moment ago one got away from us;
He had some lead in his wing, though— without doubt
We'll get him yet. And now a drink!
Our throats
Are dry and burning.
(indicating a bottle of wine on the chest of drawers.)
There's some wine!

CATERINA: Oh, no!
I have some that is better.
(She goes to the cupboard, takes out two bottles, a corkscrew, and some bowls, which she puts on the table.)

LEFEBVRE: Here we are!
(uncorking the bottle that CATERINA gives him.)
By heaven! it's been a day of filthy work.
From roofs and balconies the shot hailed down,
Bang! bang! at every shot a cry, then blood,
And then a body lying there. The Swiss,
Driven back with rifles, are dispersed, destroyed;
The palace now is ours. The crowd already
Is thick inside, and furiously they prance
From room to room in their excited dance.
These people, bloody and in torn clothes, have gone
Madly about, and laid rough hands upon
Everything in sight, until you cannot pass
For all the tumult and the scattered mass
Of broken mirrors, bottles, furniture,
Of pots and pans — O, it is joy for sure!
(General laughter. But LEFEBVRE'S face suddenly darkens and he exclaims)
But I keep thinking of the dog we shot
And lost. If we should get him, he would not Have much of life to boast of — ah! the beast!

CATERINA: Now you are here, do you think of me, at least?

LEFEBVRE: O, I am torn amid the double alarm
Of hate and love.
(Turning back his sleeve.)

un artista provetto sotto al frigio beretto questo motto m'ha inciso:
"Morte ai tiranni!,,

TUTTI: (brindando con le scodelle colme di vino) Morte ai tiranni!

LEFEBVRE: (accennando all'altro braccio) Ma su quest'altro invece, bada, c'è un cuor trafitto,
e sotto il cuor sta scritto:
"Sans-Gêne mia per la vita!,,

CATERINA: (pavoneggiandosi, ma insieme intenerita) Sans- Gêne tua per la vita!

LEFEBVRE: Per la vita, in due . . .

CATERINA: . . . nella nostra piccola casa infiorata . . .

LEFEBVRE: Una casa con l'orto e il focolare pieno di vampe e pieno di faville, come al nostro paese!

CATERINA: U una cucina grande . . .

LEFEBVRE: E Sans-Gêne che corre . . .

CATERINA: . . . e attizza il fuoco.

LEFEBVRE: . . . il mio fucile appeso presso all'uscio.

CATERINA: Tu fummi la tua pipa, il fumo danza
e Sans-Gêne canta!

LEFEBVRE: Canta ed io benedico il dì che l'ho incontrata con la sua gota fresca e porporina . . .

CATERINA: (accennando ai soldati) Bada che i camerati ti sentono . . .

LEFEBVRE: (volgendosi ai soldati) Compagni, sono il vostro sergente! attenti a me!
Obbedienza e disciplina!
Mentre io parlo a Caterina, un, due e tre . . .
turatevi le orecchie! . . .
(I soldati ridono)
e poi mi piace
che sentan tutti,
l'esercito, la Francia, il mondo intero!
Oggi la vita è tutta una canzone!
Del vecchio tempo nulla più rimane;
mentre l'odio ha la voce del cannone,
l'amore squilla come le campane!
Nella luce del sol, giovine e bionda, in cospetto degli uomini e di Dio il mio braccio t'attira e ti circonda, figlia del mio paese, amore mio . . .

I SOLDATI: (a CATERINA e LEFEBVRE)
Basta smorfie, ragazzi;
all'Assemblea!

But look upon this arm —
Once an old artist with his instrument
Inscribed there "Death to the tyrants!"

THE SOLDIERS: (toasting with their bowls overflowing with wine.) "Death to the tyrants!"

LEFEBVRE: (pointing to the other arm) But on this other is instead the dent
Of a heart, and under it, "Sans-Gêne mine for life."

CATERINA: (walking about proudly, but at the same time affected) Sans-Gêne yours for life!

LEFEBVRE: For life together —

CATERINA: — in our little house
Covered with flowers.

LEFEBVRE: And its hearth aglow
With flames and sparks, as in our own dear land!

CATERINA: A great big kitchen —

LEFEBVRE: And Sans-Gêne to run —

CATERINA: And rake the fire.

LEFEBVRE: My gun hung on the wall.

CATERINA: You smoke your pipe;
the smoke floats idly up,
And Sans-Gêne sings.

LEFEBVRE: And while she sings I bless
The day I met her with her cheek so pink.

CATERINA: (pointing to the soldiers) That's all your comrades ought to hear.

LEFEBVRE: (turning to the soldiers) My friends,
Since what I have to say to Caterina appears
My own affair, obey — stop up your ears!
(The soldiers laugh)
And now I'd rather there should be unfurled
Before the army, France and all the world
My life, that is a song for evermore.
The past is gone; hate is the cannon's roar,
And love sounds sweeter than the evening bell.
And so in sight of men and God above
I draw you to me, happy in the spell
Of our dear fatherland and our own love.

THE SOLDIERS: (to Caterina and Lefebvre) Be done with affection, children, come,
Be off!

LEFEBVRE: (guardandosi la mani) Sacco in pacco, che mani!

CATERINA: Sono nere di polvere, ed è un nero che onora.

LEFEBVRE: Un po' d'acqua!
(Si dirige verso un catino che sta sopra una tavola e fa per lavarsi le mani)

CATERINA: Che fai?
Vuoi lavarti nell'amido?

LEFEBVRE: (dirigiendosi verso la stanza di CATERINA) Vado nella tua camera.
(si avvia dritto)

CATERINA: (con una certa inquietudine) Ma no, veni qui alla fontana; ecco il sapone. (Prende un pezzo di sapone di Marsiglia e apre la porta di destra che dà sulla corte)

LEFEBVRE: (che intanto ha cercato di aprire la porta di CATERINA) Perchè hai chiusa la porta?

CATERINA: Perchè sto per uscire.

LEFEBVRE: Perchè hai tolto la chiave?

CATERINA: (perdendo la pazienza) Perchè mi pare e piace.

LEFEBVRE: (minaccioso) E se volessi entrare?

CATERINA: C'entrerai, ma da marito.

LEFEBVRE: (cieco di gelosia) C'è qualcuno lì dentro!

CATERINA: (con Qudacia) E se fosse? Son libera!

LEFEBVRE: Voglio la chiave! Là c'è un amante! . . . Lo sgozzo! (Si slancia brutalmente su di lei. Ella, istintivamente, mette una mano alla tasca del gembiule. Egli vede l'atto e con violenza le strappa la chiave. I SOLDATI accorrono per difendere CATERINA. LEFEBVRE si divincola ed entra nella stanza. Silenzio).

CATERINA: (atterita) Nessuna voce!
Nessun remore!
(coprendosi le orecchie con le mani)
L'ucciderà! (chiamando)
Lefebvre!
(LEFEBVRE riappare sulla soglia, pallido, turbato)

I SOLDATI: Lefebvre, che c'è?

LEFEBVRE: (con finta gaiezza, facendo un grande sforzo per dissimulare il violento dubbio che lo affanna) C'è che mi ha peso in trappola!
C'è . . . (Con un riso falso)
. . . che non c'è nessuno! (Richiudendo la porta per impedir ai soldati di entrare)

I SOLDATI: (comicamente, invitandolo a far pace con CATERINA) Riappiccia!

LEFEBVRE: (con finta buffoneria) Riappiccio!
(Fa un cenno ai soldati di allontanarsi. I sei uomini vanno verso il fondo senza far rumore, e mentre segue l'azione riprendono i fucili volgendo il dorso alla scena. LEFEBVRE intanto s'avvicina lentamente a CATERINA. Questa, con la faccia al pubblico, non lo guardo. LEFEBVRE la osserva attento)
Perchè non dirmi che là c'era un morto?

CATERINA: (sorpresa) È morto?

LEFEBVRE: Morto! Ha una palla nel fianco.
Convien farlo portare alla sua casa.

CATERINA: Dove? Di lui soltanto so che ha nome
Conte di Neipperg. Me l'ha detto. È tutto.

LEFEBVRE: Non lo conosci?

CATERINA: Entrò mentre chiudevo,
e si reggeva appena. Voi giungeste feroci, se l'aveste trovato
dilaniato l'avreste.
(Si volge e vede che egli la osserva attentamente)
Perchè dunque mi guardi?

LEFEVBRE: (freddo, inquisitore)
E se fosse il tuo amante?

CATERINA: (alzando la voce) Il mio amante un austriaco?

LEFEBVRE: Parle piano, se t'odono . . .

CATERINA: (facendo spallucce)
Ora è morto . . .

LEFEBVRE: (sottovoce) Ora è vivo!

CATERINA: (volgendosi a lui contenta) Ma che hai detto?

LEFEBVRE: Mentivo.
Fu una prova perchè dubitavo di te.
Or non dubito più . . .
(CATERINA presa da una subita commozione, fa per abbracciarlo)

LEFEBVRE: (continua sottovoce)
Via non farti capire:
abbi cura di lui;
questa notte verrò,
lo faremo fuggiere.

LEFEBVRE: (looking at his hands) My gracious, what a sight, these hands of mine!

CATERINA: They're black with powder — it is the dirt of honour.

LEFEBVRE: A little water!
(He starts for a basin that is on a table, and is about to wash his hands.)

CATERINA: What are you doing there!
You're washing them in starch.

LEFEBVRE: (going towards Caterina's room) Then in your room —
(going straight ahead)

CATERINA: (with a certain uneasiness) No, no — come here to the fountain; here's some soap. (She places a piece of Marseilles soap and opens the door at the right which leads to the courtyard.)

LEFEBVRE: (who in the meantime has tried to open the door of CATERINA's room) Why is the door locked?

CATERINA: I was going out.

LEFEBVRE: Why did you take the key?

CATERINA: (losing patience) It was my fancy.

LEFEBVRE: (threateningly) And if I wish to enter?

CATERINA: You should enter,
But as my husband.

LEFEBVRE: (blind with jealousy) There is someone in there!

CATERINA: (with daring) And if there is? I'm free!

LEFEBVRE: I'll have the key!
You've got a lover there — I'll cut his throat!
(He falls brutally upon her. She instinctively puts her hand on the pocket of her apron. He sees the action, and with violence wrenches the key from her. The soldiers rush forward to defend CATERINA. LEFEBVRE gets away, and goes into the room. Silence.)

CATERINA: (terrified) No word!
no sound!
(covering her ears with her hands)
He'll kill the man!
(calling)
Lefebvre!
(Lefebvre reappears at the threshold, pale and disturbed.)

THE SOLDIERS: Lefebvre, what is it?

LEFEBVRE: (with a feint of gaiety, making a great effort to hide the doubt that alarms him) It is that I've been trapped!
It is — (with a false laugh) that there is no one there!

THE SOLDIERS: (comically, inviting him to make peace with CATERINA) Make up!

LEFEBVRE: (with a feint of buffoonery) Yes, I'll make up!
(He signals to the soldiers to go farther away. The six men go towards the back without a sound, and during the following action take up ther guns, keeping their backs turned. LEFEVBRE in the meantime goes slowly nearer to CATERINA. She, with her face to the audience, does not see him. He watches her attentively.)
And why did you not say
There was a dead man in there?

CATERINA: (surprised) Is he dead?

LEFEBVRE: Dead! He has got a bullet in his side.
We had better take him to his house.

CATERINA: But where?
From him alone I know that he's the Count
Of Neipperg. That he told me, and no more.

LEFEVBRE: You do not know him?

CATERINA: I was closing up,
And suddenly he entered, almost fainting.
Then you arrived outside, excitedly
Trying to come in here — if you had found
Him then, you would have torn the man in pieces.
(turns and sees him watching her attentively.)
Why do you watch me so?

LEFEVBRE: (cole and inquisitive)
And if he was
Your lover?

CATERINA: (raising her voice)
Could an Austrian be my lover?

LEFEVBRE: Speak softly — if they hear you —

CATERINA: (shrugging her shoulders) Now he is dead —

LEFEVBRE: (softly) He is alive!

CATERINA: (turning to him, relieved) But you just said —

LEFEVBRE: I lied.
It was a test of you — I had some doubt,
But now I doubt no more.
(CATERINA, with sudden emotion, starts to embrace him.)
Don't let it out.

LEFEBVRE: (continuing in a low voice) Just take good care of him — tonight you'll see;
In some way we'll arrange for him to flee.

(CATERINA con le lagrime nelle voce): Oh, mio Lefebvre, sei buono!

LEFEBVRE: Non mi serbi rancore?

CATERINA: Ti adoro e ti perdono!

LEFEBVRE: Sans-Gêne, qui sul mio cuore!
(l'abbraccia)

I SOLDATI: (si voltano e vedono)
La pace è fatta, evviva!

LEFEBVRE: E le nozze imminenti!

I SOLDATI: (aprendo la porta di fondo e le due finestre laterali) Attenti! Attenti!
I nazionali della sezione vanno al maneggio! Olà! Si va?

LEFEBVRE: Si va.
(CATERINA si getta nelle braccia di LEFEBVRE. Egli la baccia, poi si stacca da lei e va verso il fondo. Nella strada giungono da destra guardie nazionali e artiglieri col fuciele in ispalla, precediuti da due tamburi, di cui una è VINAIGRE, l'altro MATURINO. Passano sul fondo cantanto la Marsigliese. I sei soldati e LEFEBVRE, il quale manda ancora un bacio a CATERINA, si uniscono alla schiera che passa, seguiti dalla folla che acclama)

VERARIO.

ATTO SECONDO

Al castello di Compiègne. Settembre 1811

(Un grande e sontuoso salone del più puro stile impero. Sul fondo tre arcate, dalle quali entrano gli invitati. A destra, una grande porta, che conduce agli appartamenti interni)

(GELSOMINO attizza il fuoco nel caminetto. LEROY è in perdi presso la tavola, sulla quale sono tre scatole. Entra DESPRÉAUX)

DESPRÉAUX: La Duchesa di Danzica?

GELSONINO: (solenne) Vien subito! E avvisata
Che il sarto
(indicando LEROY)
qui l'attende.
La . . . Duchessa di Danzica! (sbotta a ridere)

DESPRÉAUX: (con grande sussiego) Scusi, perchè mi ride in faccia? . . .

CATERINA: (with tears in her voice) You are so kind!

LEFEVBRE: You blame me now no more?

CATERINA: I would do nothing but pardon and adore.

LEFEBVRE: Sans-Gêne, come to my heart.
(He embraces her.)

THE SOLDIERS: (turning and looking) Their peace is made, Hooray!

LEFEBVRE: Our wedding shall not be delayed.

THE SOLDIERS: (opening the door at the back and the side windows) Listen! listen! the winning people sway
Towards the administration! Shall we go?

LEFEVBRE: Away!
(CATERINA throws herself in LEFEBVRE'S arms. He kisses her, then leaves her, and goes to the back. In the street there arrive from the right the national guard and artillery with guns on their backs, preceded by two drummers, one of whom is VINAIGRE, the other MATURINO. They pass across the back, singing the Marseillaise. The six soldiers and LEFEBVRE, who throws another kiss to CATERINA, join the battalion that is passing, followed by the acclaiming crowd.)

CURTAIN

ACT II

The château of Compiègne. September, 1811.

(A large and sumptuous drawing-room in the purest Empire style. At the back three arches, through which the guests enter. At the right a large door, leading to the inner apartments.)

(GELSOMINO is stirring the fire in the fireplace. LEROY stands by a table on which are three boxes. Enter DESPRÉAUX.)

DESPRÉAUX: The Duchess of Danzig?

GELSOMINO: (solemnly) She will come at once.
She has been told the tailor awaits her here.
(He indicates LEROY.)
The — Duchess of Danzig!
(He bursts out laughing.)

DESPRÉAUX: (with gravity) I pray you, pardon me —
Why laugh you in my face?

GELSOMINO: Rido . . . ma non di Vostra Signoria!
Rido di certe nobiltà che sanno d'amido e ranno
e di lavanderia!
(accostandosi, a DESPRÉAUX con un inchino)
Signor Despréaux, io la conobbi quando ell'era direttore del balletto all'Opéra
(con pomposo orgoglio)
ed io ero valletto
del Duca di Penthièvre.
(con un sospiro)
Bei tempi! tempi fini
e pieni di fragranza, tempi d'ogni eleganza!

DESPRÉAUX: Che delicati inchini!
Che grazie! che portento di gesti e portamento!

LEROY: Le dame più squisite io le vestivo, ed era
come una primavera!

LEROY, GELSOMINO, DESPRÉAUX: Oh tempi soavi svaniti così!

GELSOMINO: Adesso gran titoli ducati, contee . . .

LEROY: Ma modi da sguatteri
e facce plebee!

DESPRÉAUX: È lustra la buccia, ma sotto . . . gentuccia.
(a tre)
Gentuccia, gentuccia, gentuccia!

LEROY: (a GELSOMINO) Il vostro padrone, sergente non era?

DESPRÉAUX: E lei vivandiera?

GELSOMINO: Or Duchi di Danzica! Capite! Capite!

LEROY: (con comico orrore) Danzica! Oh Dio! Che nome d'acquavite!

DESPÉAUX: Ah! per un uom di nascita e di gusto che disgusto!

CATERINA: (entre seguita dalla cameriera) Bon dì, signor Despréaux! (DESPREAUX e LEROY s'inchinano tre volte profondamente)

DESPRÉAUX e LEROY: Madama la Duchessa!
(GELSOMINO via)

CATERINA: (rivolgendosi a DESPRÉAUX) Venir per me a quest'ora è grande cortesia!
Voi avete sposato la Guimard, se non sbaglio . . .

DESPRÉAUX: Madama la Duchessa si ricorda di lei?

GELSOMINO: I laugh, but not,
My kind Monsieur, at you. I laugh because
Of some nobility whose fancy was
Once on a time for laundry tubs and starch.
(approaching DESPRÉAUX with a bow.)
Monsieur Despréaux, I knew you in the march
Of strange events — it was when you trained the ballet
At the opera, (with great pride) and I was the valet
Of the Duke of Penthièvre. (with a sigh)
Times gone by!
O lovely times, when happy luxury
Did gracefully and gloriously enhance
Our daily life with every elegance!

DESPRÉAUX: What delicacy of gesture! what a grace!

LEROY: I used to dress with satin and with lace
Most charming ladies — it was the spring of life!

LEROY, GELSOMINO, DESPRÉAUX: Oh, lovely times, vanished so soon in strife!

GELSOMINO: Now they have wondrous titles — duke and count —

LEROY: With loutish ways, to what do they amount?

DESPRÉAUX: Their skin glows warm, but underneath it — what?
(all three)
Ay! underneath it, what?

LEROY: (to GELSOMINO) Your master was a sergeant, was he not?

DESPRÉAUX: And she a canteen-keeper?

GELSOMINO: Duchess now
Of Danzig!

LEROY: (with comic horror) Danzig! Heavens! a name, I vow,
That sounds as if it ought to be a drink!

DESPRÉAUX: What a name to link to a man of breeding!

CATERINA: (enters, followed by her maid.) Good day, monsieur Despréaux!
(DESPRÉAUX and LEROY bow three times very low.)

DESPRÉAUX AND LEROY: Madame the Duchess!
(Gelsomino goes out.)

CATERINA: (turning to DESPRÉAUX) It is most kind of you to come tonight!
You married la Giumard — am I not right?

DESPRÉAUX: Madame the Duchess still remembers her?

CATERINA: Per bacco! Aveva certa biancheria! (rivolgendosi a LEROY) Caro signor Leroy, l'amazzone è già pronta?	CATERINA: My goodness, yes! I did her laundry, sir. (turning to LEROY) My good monsieur Leroy, is my court train Not ready?
LEROY: Pronta! Ed è un capo d'opera inaudito! Una cosa deliziosa, armoniosa . . .	LEROY: Ready? ah! you'll not refrain From greatest praise — it is a masterpiece Of style and delicacy —
CATERINA: (interrompendolo e indicandogli una sedia) Va bene . . . Ma si metta a cuccia un momento, mentr' io dico due parolette al signor venditor di piroette. (DESPRÉAUX fa una smorfia) (a DESPRÉAUX) Sono fuori dei gangheri! Devo mettermi in ghingheri per ricevere un mucchio di regine, principesse, duchesse ed altri generi . . . Se fosse gente del mio stampo, oh, allora quattro frittelle, quattro capriole, una padella di castagne arroste e ci sarebbe da crepar dal ridere! Ma son tutte damazze schizzinose che ti parlano sempre a bocca storta dimenando come anitre . . . la coda. Ci vogliono, per loro, dei saluti di prima qualità! Ho detto: Despréaux mi insegnerà, perchè lui . . . queste smorfie sono proprio la sua specialità . . .	CATERINA: (interrupting him and indicating a seat) I pray you cease Just for a moment. Sit down, while I get A word with the vendor of the pirouette. (DESPRÉAUX makes a face.) (to DESPRÉAUX.) I'm out of graces — how to get me style In which I can receive this pile of queens, Princesses, duchesses and other folk? If they were folk of my own class, why, then A plate of pancakes, some capriole, A dish of roasted chestnuts would be quite Enough to make them have a splended time. But all are ladies of disdainful manner, Who always talk with pinched and twisted mouths, Wriggling, as ducks do with their tails. For them I need some graces of the finest class! They said Despréaux would show me what to do, Because his specialty is grimaces.
DESPRÉAUX: (inchinandosi) Gran fortuna per me! (tra se, mortificato ed offeso) Smorfie!	DESPRÉAUX: (bowing) What fortune! (to himself, mortified and offended) Grimaces!
CATERINA: (a LEROY) Voi là! Svelto, proviamo. (La cameriera corre a prendere uno sgabello, che mette sotto ai piedi di CATERINA. LEROY s'inginocchia dinanzi a CATERINA e le calzi i coturni. Le sue abili mani avvolgono e stringolo il nastro attorno alle gambe della marescialla) Ehi, dico, sei giunto al polpaccio! Fai conto di andare più in su?	CATERINA: (to LEROY) Ho, there! lets's try it — Be quick! (The maid goes and gets a stool, which she puts under CATERINA'S feet. LEROY kneels down before CATERINA and puts on her buskins. His hands put the lacing around her legs and tie it up.) Hey, there! you're almost to my knees! Pray, how much farther do you think of going?
LEROY: (alzandosi) Madama è servita . . . (CATERINA si alza per provare l'amazzone. Mentre LEROY e la cameriera l'aiutano a indossarla, si volge a DESPRÉAUX)	LEROY: (rising) Madame is served. (CATERINA rises to try the court train. While LEROY and the maid are helping her to fasten it on her back, she turns to DESPRÉAUX.)
CATERINA: Caro signor Despréaux, vorrei qualche cosa di spiccio e insieme . . . di sopraffino . . .	CATERINA: My dear monsieur Despréaux, I wish for something rich and bountiful, Together with the finest.
DESPRÉAUX: (ispirato) Il semplice e il fino? L'inchino! Madama mi presti attenzione, mi ascolti con religione! L'inchino è l'essenza del passo di danza, è il ballo in potenza . . . è il ritmo in sostanza . . .	DESPRÉAUX: (inspired) Simple and fine! The bow! Pray watch me well while I do mine, And listen with religious reverence! The bow and courtesy are the innate sense Of all the art of graceful step and time. —
LEROY: (drappeggiando le pieghe della veste con gesti gravi e con sussiego) È molto migliore di quella che ho avuto l'onore di far per l'Imperatrice. Ahimè, non ho avuto il permesso di fare la prova io stesso! L'Imperatore non vuole . . .	LEROY: (draping the folds of the garment with grave gestures and all seriousness) This garment made for you is more sublime Than that I had the honor to create For the Empress. Ah! I had the tragic fate Of never trying it on! The Emperor Wished not —
DESPRÉAUX: Un . . . due . . . tre . . . leggermente . . . soavemente . . . non sia troppo commossa. Un . . . due . . . tre . . . oplà, vede? . . . c'è . . .	DESPRÉAUX: One — two — three — Lightly and gracefully — Do not be disturbed — Hopla — you see?
LEROY: È una cosa prodigiosa! Che destrezza! Che bellezza!	LEROY: It is extraordinary Now — what grace! What great dexterity!
DESPRÉAUX: Madama la Duchessa può gareggiar con le più esperte dame!	DESPRÉAUX: Madame the Duchess Will soon complete with the most expert ladies.
CATERINA: (si sveste) Davvero? non son poi troppo salame?	CATERINA: (taking the robe off) Really and truly? I am not too bad?
DESPRÉAUX: (inchinandosi) Madama la Duchessa, servitore!	DESPRÉAUX: (bowing) Madame the Duchess, your servant!
LEROY: (inchinandosi) Servitore, Madame la Duchessa! (Si avviano verso l'uscita. La cameriera esce a destra portando con se le scatole) (Entra LEFEBVRE, mentre i due ministri d'ogni eleganza, escono rinculando e inchinandosi)	LEROY: (bowing) Your servant, Madame the Duchess! (They go towards the door. The maid goes out at the right, taking the boxes. Enter LEFEBVRE, while the two retainers go out with every elegance, bowing and scraping.)
CATERINA: Oh! Lefebvre! (CATERINA lo guardo e lo vede accigliato) Hai due spanne di muso.	CATERINA: Oh! Lefebvre! (She looks at him, and sees that he looks dejected.) You've got a dreadful look.
LEFEBVRE: Colpa tua.	LEFEBVRE: It is your fault.
CATERINA: (con sorpresa) Dico, ti gira?	CATERINA: (with surprise) Tell me, what bothers you?
LEFEBVRE: Sai, l'Imperatore	LEFEBVRE: The Emperor has spoken to me of you.
CATERINA: Di me? Perchè?	CATERINA: Of me? Why so?
LEFEBVRE: Per i tuoi modi che gli dan fastidio.	LEFEBVRE: You grieve him with your ways.
CATERINA: Che modi?	CATERINA: What ways?
LEFEBVRE: Questi, corpo d'una sciabola! Torno, e ti trovo qui in camicia in mezzo a servi e fornitori, a tu per tu . . . Poi questa gente chiacchiera . . .	LEFEBVRE: These , body of a dagger! these! Here I come back, and find you so—half dressed, Gossiping here with furnishers and servants—
CATERINA: Lo so, e me n'infischio.	CATERINA: I know it, but I do not mind.

LEFEBVRE: (con ira) Io no.
Sei o non sei duchessa, santo diavolo!?
Mondo assassino! agisci da duchessa,
e non de serva, corpo d'una pipa!

CATERINA: (ridendo) Farò come fai tu.

LEFEVBRE: Sono un soldato
e parlo da soldato, e da soldato bestemmio . . .

CATERINA: Insomma, che t'ha detto?

LEFEBVRE: Ha detto:
"Dove diavolo ha preso il suo linguaggio vostra moglie? È uno scandalo! Si ride alle sue spalle ed alle vostre. Ma c'è un rimedio per tutto!
C'è il divorzio!,,

CATERINA: (con un violento sussulto) Eh?! Il divorzio?

CATERINA: E invece, caro, siamo sempre qui,
io con la coda, e tu pieno di fiocchi!
Se quand'eri bambino,
venendo al villaggio vicino,
tu m'avessi incontrata . . .

LEFEBVRE: Se t'avessero detto:
quel ragazzo cencioso
sarà il duca tuo sposo . . .?

CATERINA: Sarei crepata dal ridere! (ride)

LEFEBVRE: Sarei crepato dal ridere!
(ride: poi improvvisamente si tura la bocca, assumendo un aria seria)
Acciderba . . . che modo di parlare . . .
Non si dice: crepare . . .

CATERINA: Ah! per non dir spropositi, sai quel che faccio? Taccio!
e t'abbraccio . . .
(Gli siede sulle ginocchia e lo bacia. Entra GELSOMINO: vedendoli in quella posizione fa un gesto di disdegno, poi tossisce)

CATERINA: (balzando in piedi) Accidenti!

GELSOMINO: (annunziando) Il signor Conte di Neipperg!

NEIPPERG: (entra rannuvolato. CATERINA e LEFEBVRE gli vanno incontro festosi) Vengo, a dirvi addio . . .

CATERINA: Partite?

NEIPPERG: (con un gesto di sconforto) Per l'esilio!

LEFEBVRE: (with rage) I do.
Are you or are you not a duchess? hell!
By this foul world, you ought to act as one,
Not as a slave, by the body of my pipe!

CATERINA: (laughing) I'll do as you do.

LEFEBVRE: But I am a soldier—
I have the right to talk and swear like one.

CATERINA: But seriously, what did he say?

LEFEBVRE: He said:
"Where in the devil did your wife pick up
The language that she uses? It is a scandal!
They laugh behind her back and in her face.
There is a remedy for all!—it is divorce!"

CATERINA: (with a violent start) Divorce!

CATERINA: And here instead, my love, we ever stay,
I with my court train, you filled up with schemes.
If we had met as children long ago,
And in our rags and tatters whispered low:
"This ragged girl will be my wife someday" —

LEFEBVRE: "This boy my duke and husband far away" —

CATERINA: We should have split our sides with laughter gay. (She laughs.)

LEFEBVRE: We should have split our sides with laughter gay.
(He laughs, then suddenly stops up his mouth, assuming a serious air.)
My heavens! what a way for us to talk!
One does not say 'to split one's sides with laughter'.

CATERINA: Well then, not to say foolish things like this,
What shall I do instead? Be still! and — kiss.
(She sits upon his knees and he kisses her. Enter GELSOMINO; seeing them in this position, he makes a gesture of disgust, then coughs.)

CATERINA: (junping to her feet) My heavens!

GELSOMINO: (announcing) Monsieur the Count of Neipperg.

(NEIPPERG enters, looking sad. CATERINA and LEFEBVRE go towards him joyfully.) I've come to say good-bye.

CATERINA: What! leaving?

NEIPPERG: (in a discouraged tone) It's exile.

CATERINA e LEFEBVRE: (a due con sorpreso) Per l'esilio?

NEIPPERG: (con sdegno e dolore) L'imperatore mi scaccia. Ha scoperto un mio amor nella Reggia! Mi colpisce!
È un pretesto! Egli appaga un odio antico . . .

LAFEBVRE: (con tristezza, ma con dignità) E il padrone . . .

NEIPPERG: E obbedisco . . .

LEFEBVRE: Tristi gli addii quando la giovinezza declinando s'annebbia di tristezza . . .
Scoloran lentamente i dì felici
e il cuore cerca solo i vecchi amici . . .

NEIPPERG: E l'amico che va, senza ritorno, pensa la casa che gli fu ospitale
e sospira . . .

CATERINA: (con affettuosa malizia) E sospira la sua donna che lasacia qui . . .

NEIPPERG: (alza gli occhi, la fissa con dolore)

CATERINA: Perchè. perchè non dire che soffrite per lei, povero amico . . .?

NEIPPERG: (con profondo sconforto) Lasciar colei che si ama
e andarsene lontano
e sentir che ci chiama invano, invano . . .

CATERINA: Oggi l'imperatore
Dichiara la guerra all'amore!

LEFEBVRE: Tutti tre
abbiamo una pena nel cuore, abbiamo una pena d'amore
tutti tre!

NEIPPERG: (prorompendo) Ah, non posso tacere il mio martirio con voi! È una febbre! È un delirio!
È voglio rivederla! E fingerò di partir, ma stanotte tornerò.

LEFEBVRE: Voi siete pazzo.

NEIPPERG: (fuori di se) La rivedrò!
M'ha fatto dire di non partire senza vederla . . . e obbedirò.

CATERINA: Non so chi sia costei!
Tremo per voi . . .
Non dovete tornar!

NEIPPERG: La rivedrò!
(a LEFEBVRE)
Se vi togliesserò questa vostra donna diletta . . .

LEFEBVRE: Si provino, per Dio!

NEIPPERG: E volete ch'io fugga?

CATERINA AND LEFEVBRE: (surprised) Exile?

NEIPPERG: (with disdain and grief) The Emperor commands.
He has discovered that I have a love
In the palace! His keen eye has fallen on me.
It is a pretext — he repays old hatred.

LEFEBVRE: (with sadness and dignity) He is the master —

NEIPPERG: I obey.

LEFEBVRE: Sad are the partings when the flush of youth
Has sunk into the gloom of deeper truth;
When happiness with daylight slowly ends,
The heart turns back to find the old-time friends.

NEIPPERG: And now the friend who goes without return Thinks of the house that was to him his home,
And sighs —

CATERINA: (deeply moved) And sighs the lady whom he leaves.

(NEIPPERG raises his eyes, and fixes them upon her with sorrow.)

CATERINA: Ah! why not say you suffer for her, friend?

NEIPPERG: (with deep sorrow) To leave her whom one loves and go afar,
To feel she calls in vain, in vain—

CATERINA: A war
Against love has been declared by the Emperor.

LEFEBVRE: We all have pain at heart, the pain of love.

NEIPPERG: (bursting out) I cannot hide my agony from you!
It is a fever! It is delirium!
Again I must behold her! I will feign
To go, but in the night come back again.

LEFEBVRE: You are unwise.

NEIPPERG: (beside himself) I must see her again!
She made me promise that I would not go
Without—and I obey.

CATERINA: I do not know who this person is. O, I tremble for you—
Do not come back!

NEIPPERG: I must see her again!
(to LEFEBVRE)
If they had taken your dear wife from you!—

LEFEBVRE: Heaven forbid!

NEIPPERG: Yet you would have me flee?

GELSOMINO: (entra ed annunzia) Sua Eccellenza il Ministro di Polizia!

CATERINA: Silenzio, è qui Fouché!

FOUCHÉ: (entra)

NEIPPERG: Amici, addio!
(CATERINA gli presenta le guance, egli le bacia, stringe la mano a LEFEBVRE ed esce in fretta commosso)

FOUCHÉ: (salutando NEIPPERG con un inchino ironico) Buon viaggio, signor Conte.
(tre se)
E subito ritorno! . . .
(a CATERINA)
Marescialla, v'sannunzio
le Loro Serenissime
Altezze Imperiali.
Badate, c' è per aria una congiura: vogliono provocarvi a parlare, far nascere uno scandolo!
Sopportate prudente! Resistete all' attacco e cambiate discorso quando piglio tabacco.
(LEFEVBRE ha un gesto d'ira)

CATERINA: (sbuffando, minacciosa) La corda troppo tesa alla fine si strappa.
Vedremo!
(avviandosi verso l'uscio)
Perdonate! Vo' a metter la gualdrappa.
(Esce in fretta. Cominciano a giungere gli invitati)

LEFEBVRE: Vengon gli ospiti già.
(inquieto)
La marescialla con è pronta . . .
(Dal fondo entra stuolo variopinto di dame e di cavalieri: ufficiali, accademici, diplomatici. Uniformi fastose. Azione. LEFEBVRE saluta, va sul fondo, si perde tra la folla, riappare)
(Un gruppo di dame, sottovoce)

LE DAME: Una notizia! Una notizia!
—ch' è una primizia!— ch' è una primizia!

TUTTE: Neipperg partì! . . .
Perchè?
—Mah! . . . Chissà!
Si buccina, si chiacchiera, si mormora
Sotto voce—sotto vento—ma nessun conosce il vero.
Ah! come provoca, irrita e stuzzica questo mistero!
(rivolgendosi a FOUCHÉ)
Ma qui, Fouché
di tal partenza svelerà il perchè.

FOUCHÉ: E chi può mai saper, dame vezzose,
il perchè delle cose?
(tra se) Però, io lo so!

LE DAME: (circondano FOUCHÉ)
O taciturno, che tutto sapete, dite il segreto; saremo discrete!
Non appena in un orecchio

GELSOMINO: (enters and announces) His Excellency the Minister of Police!

CATERINA: Silence, here is Fouché!

(Enter FOUCHÉ.)

NEIPPERG: My friends, farewell!
(CATERINA presents her cheeks, which he kisses, grasps LEFEBVRE by the hand, and goes out in a hurry, much moved.)

FOUCHÉ (saluting NEIPPERG with an ironic bow) A happy journey to you, monsieur Count!
(to himself.)
And soon return!—
(to CATERINA.)
My lady, I announce,
Their Most Serene and Royal Highnesses.
Look out—there is conspiracy in the air:
They want to make you speak, and start a scandal!
So bear up prudently! Be proud enough,
And change the subject when I take my snuff.
(LEFEBVRE makes and angry gesture.)

CATERINA: (raging and menacing) The cord that's pulled too tight will sometime snap.
We'll see! (going towards the door.)
Your pardon! I must robe myself.
(She goes out in a hurry. The guests begin to arrive.)

LEFEBVRE: The guests are coming, and my wife
Is not yet here to receive them.
(troubled)
(From the back enters a motley band of ladies and cavaliers, officials, academicians, diplomats. Festive uniforms. Action. LEFEBVRE salutes, goes to the back, is lost in the crowd, reappears.)

A GROUP OF LADIES: (in a low voice) A notice has been given!—there is some reason.

ALL: Neipperg is gone! But why? and where?—
Who knows?
One hears strange murmurings and whisperings
Of something, but no person knows the truth.
How irritating is this mystery!
(turning to FOUCHÉ.)
Surely, Fouché, you can unveil the reason
Of this departure.

FOUCHÉ: Who, fair ladies, knows
The reason for anything? (to himself) And yet—I know!

THE LADIES: (surrounding FOUCHÉ) O silent creature, who knows everything, Tell us the secret, please; beyond il segreto profumato lieve sarà entrato,

fuor dall'altro sortirà.
Lo giuriamo.

FOUCHÉ: Lo giurate?
Bene! Allora immaginate
che sia entrato e uscito già.
(LE DAME protestano furiose, ma in quell' istante un confuso movimento che si propaga dal fondo, un brusìo improvviso, e il solenne silenzio che subito dopo si distende, preannunziano l'arrivo delle imperiali sorelle)

GELSOMINO: (dal fondo annunzia solennemente) Sua Maestà la Regina di Napoli . . .
Sua Altezza Imperial la Principessa di Lucca e di Piombino!
(Quadro. Tutti i presenti si levano in piedi e si allineano splendidi di ori, di galloni, di gioielli. Entrano CAROLINA ed ELISA, con dame di compagnia e cavalieri d'onore. LEFEBVRE si precipita incontro ad esse)

CAROLINA: (guardandosi intorno altera) La Duchessa di Danzica non vedo!

LEFEBVRE: (confuso) Vostra Maestà . . . perdoni! È sofferente . . .
Sarà qui tosto.
(tra se) Io sudo e gelo insieme.
(Le due regina aggrottano le ciglia. Intorno è un pesante silenzio pieno di imbarrazzo. Si precipita in iscena inciampando nella porta, frettoloso, affannata, turbata)

CAROLINA: (acida) Vi fate bene desiderar, Duchessa!

CATERINA: Io prego Sua Maestà,
Sua Altezza Imperiale
e tutta la compagnia di scusare il ritardo.
(strizzando l'occhio)
Ma per mettersi in . . . pompa
Ci vuole sempre un secolo.
(Risatina dietro i ventagli delle dame. FOUCHÉ tabacca rumorosamente. CATERINA rossa e impacciata, vede che tutte le dame si fanno vento, e, per darsi un contegno, si sventola anch'essa vivacemente. Poi, con subita risoluzione, come chi ha una trovata)
(a LEFEBVRE)
Maresciallo suvvia,
offri dunque da bere . . .
(chiamando il servo con voce acuta)
Pivert!

UNA DAMA: (alle altre, piano) Ah! Siamo all'osteria!

LE DAME: (mormorando, con risa soffocate e sventolandosi) —
È incredibile!—È inesprimibile!
È incomparabile!—È inimitabile!
(*Un valletto entra portando un

our ring
We will not breathe it! It will go in one ear
And out the other—we then will not know.
We swear it.

FOUCHÉ: Swear it? Well, then, without a doubt
You can imagine it's gone in and out.
(The ladies protest furiously, but at this moment a confused movement starting at the back, an unforeseen excitement, and the solemn silence that suddenly spreads, announce the arrival of the imperial sisters.)

GELSOMINO: (announcing from the back solemnly) Her Majesty the Queen of Naples—
Her Imperial Highness the Princess of Lucca and Piombino!
(Tableau. All present arrange themselves, splendid in gold, lace, and jewels. Enter CAROLINA and ELSIA, with ladies-in-waiting, and cavaliers of honor. LEFEBVRE rushes towards them.)

CAROLINA: (looking around) I do not see the Duchess of Danzig here!

LEFEBVRE: (confused) Pardon, your Majesty, she is not well.
She will be here at once. (to himself) I burn and freeze.
(The two queens frown. An embarrassing silence. CATERINA rushes in, stumbling on the threshold, in a hurry and frightened.)

CAROLINA: (sourly) You make yourself much wished for, Duchess!

CATERINA: I beg your Majesty,
your Royal Highness,
And all my guests to pardon my delay.
(winking)
To get me dressed for parties takes an age.
(Giggles behind ladies' fans. FOUCHÉ takes snuff, grumbling. CATERINA, red and confused, sees that the ladies are fanning themselves, and to give herself better deportment she begins to fan herself rapidly. Then, with a sudden resolution, as if finding something, to LEFEBVRE.)
My duke, be quick—offer them something to drink—
(calling the servant with a sharp voice.)
Pivert!

A LADY: (to the others, softly) Well, are we at a hostelry?

THE LADIES: (murmuring, suffocating their laughter, and fanning themselves) It is beyond belief, beyond all words,
It is inimitable, beyond compare!

vassoio di dolci che pone sulla tavola. Un altro valetto offre del punch agli uomini. CATERINA prende un bicchiere di punch dal vassoio e tocca, col suo, il bicchiere di un ufficiale)

CATERINA: (brindando) Alla tua!
(Ma nel momento in cui CATERINA allunga il braccio, FOUCHÉ tossisce e prende rumorosamente tabacco. Troppo tardi. CATERINA vede il gesto, e, intimidita, depone il bicchiere senza aver osato di bere. Poi va alla tavola, prende il vassoio di dolci e ne offre a CAROLINA)
Vostra Maestà, gradisce due frittelle?

CAROLINA: (con aria canzonatoria) No, le frittelle non mi tentan punto!
(Sorrisi, risatine in giro)

CATERINA: (a ELISA) Vostra Altezza?

ELISA: (ridendo con malizia) No, no!

CATERINA: (alle dame, con cortesia nelle quale bolle un principio di collera) Signore belle?

LE DAME: (tutte insieme, con aperta aria di derisione) No, non ci fanno gola le frittelle.

LEFEBVRE: (all' orecchio di CATERINA, con ira repressa) Non insister, ti dico, non insistere!
(FOUCHÉ tabacca ripetutamente, rumorosamente. CATERINA si volta per allontarsi, ma si trova con i piedi avviluppati nella coda. Tenta di liberarsi, e peggiora la sua posizione)

CATERINA: (gridando) Accidenti alla coda!
(Risata unanime. CATERINA sconcertata)
Mille scuse, Maestà!
Un momento . . . e mi srotolo . . .

CAROLINA: (conironia sorridente) È delizioso questo linguaggio che usano solo le pescivendole e le ragazze facili e grazili del Palais Royal . . .
(LEFEBVRE ha un gesto d'ira)

CATERINA: (fremendo, con le nari dilatate) Sento odore di polvere.

CAROLINA: In quel quartiere, appunto, mi fu detto, eravate . . .

CATERINA: (tagliandole la parola, con orgoglio) . . .lavandaia, Maestà!
(Risata unanime, clamorosa, CATERINA, volge un sguardo severo su chi ride)

(A valet enters, carrying a tray of sweets, which he puts on the table. Another valet offers some punch to the men. CATERINA takes a glass of punch from the tray and touches, with hers, the glass of an officer.)

CATERINA: (lifting her glass) Your health!
(But at the moment in which CATERINA puts her arm forward, FOUCHE coughs and takes snuff, grumbling. Too late. CATERINA sees the gesture, and, frightened, puts down the glass, without having dared to drink. Then she goes to the table, takes the tray of sweets and offers them to CAROLINA.)
Your Majesty will take two fritters?

CAROLINA: (with a scoffing air) The—what do you call them— fritters do not tempt me.
(Smiles and laughter among the people.)

CATERINA: (to ELISA) Your Highness?

ELISA: (smiling with malice) No, indeed!

CATERINA: (to the ladies with a courtesy in which is felt an undercurrent of wrath) Fair ladies, you?

THE LADIES: (all together, with an open air of derision) No, no, we have no taste for things like that.

LEFEBVRE: (in CATERINA'S ear, with repressed anger) Do not insist, I tell you, do not insist!
(FOUCHE takes snuff repeatedly. CATERINA starts to move away, but finds her feet tangled in her train. She tries to free herself, but makes her position worse.)

CATERINA: (screaming) The devil take this train!
(General laughter. CATERINA disconcerted.)
Your Majesty,
A moment while I get myself unwound—

CAROLINA: (with smiling irony) This language is most charming, that one hears
From idle beggars and from fishmongers
About the Palais Royal.
(LEFEBVRE makes a gesture of anger.)

CATERINA: (raging, with her nostrils dilated) I smell powder.

CAROLINA: Pray, in what quarter was I told you were—

CATERINA: (cutting off the word, with pride) A laundress, Majesty!
(General clamorous laughter. CATERINA turns a severe look on those who are laughing.)
Yes, I have got the slang that the

Ed ho il gergo del popolo
e del popolo ho il gesto, perchè popolo sono!
Siamo in tanti del resto!
Tutti usciti dal nulla! Non fu Brune stampatore?
Ney bottaio? Bessières barbiere?
Lannes tintore?
Fu garzon d'osteria Murat, vostro marito, sì che molti di quelli che lo chiaman Maestà,
gli avran detta: "ragazzo, porta un piatto pulito!,,

CAROLINA: (con ira e con alterigia) Ed avete l'audacia?

CATERINA: (con impeto) Oh! la gloria è sublime se, partendo dal basso, si raggiungon le cime!
Della Rivoluzione tutti figli se è,
ed in questo palazzo ch'Ella sola ci diè,
chi rinnega la madre, è un perverso e un vigliacco!

FOUCHÉ: (che tabacca invano, serra rumorosamente la tabacchiera esclamando) Patatrac!

CATERINA: E voi, caro Fouché, risparmiate il tabacco!

CAROLINA: (con acerbo disprezzo) Con chi parlo stasera?
È con la marescialla o con la vivandiera?

CATERINA: (con fierezza) Con tutte e due, Maestà!

CAROLINA: (esasperata) Completò la caserna la bottega . . .

ELISA: (furiosa, ironica) . . .e la cantina . . . dove si trinca e si bestemmia . . .

CAROLINA: . . . ed il bivacco dove si dorme, tra i soldati, sulla paglia!

CATERINA: (interrompendo, con forza) Se ce n' è!
Ma più spesso la terra era il giaciglio, per i nostri riposi!
Sì, dormii tra i soldati, più di voi rispettosi per la donna che sono, per nome che porto!
Ho trottato dal Reno al Danubio, di battaglia in battaglia,
con la santa canaglia,
sotto neve, pioggia, mitraglia,
tra la fame e gli stenti,
raccogliendo i feriti,
consolando i morenti,
chiudendo gli occhi ai morti!
E versando una goccia di liquore ai soldati
che vi davano un regno,
faticavo per voi,
per la vostra corona!
A voi facile fu
poi chinarvi, tuffare
dentro il sangue le dita
e raccoglierla su!

people use,
I've got their gestures, for I'm one of them!
We're all the same, all come right up from nothing.
Was not Ney a shoemaker, and Brune
A printer? Bersières a barbar? Lannes
A dyer? Murat, your husband, waiter in a tavern?
I bet you many that now call him Majesty
Have called to him: "Waiter, a clean plate!"

CAROLINA: (with wrath and arrogance) You have the audacity?

CATERINA: (impetuously) Sublime is glory
For those who leave the mire and reach the sky!
Sons of the Revolution are we all,
And in this palace that you give to us,
He who denies his mother is a villian!

FOUCHÉ: (who takes snuff in vain, shuts noisily his snuff-box, exclaiming) Patatrac!

CATERINA: And you, dear Fouché, save your snuff!

CAROLINA: (with bitter disapproval) I speak with whom this evening? with the duchess,
Or with the canteen-woman?

CATERINA: (with pride) Your Majesty,
With both!

CAROLINA: (exasperated) The scene of the barracks is complete—

ELISA: (furious, ironical) And the canteen, where they get drunk and swear.

CAROLINA: And the bivouac, where among the soliders
They sleep upon the straw.

CATERINA: (interrupting with force) And if it is!
More often was the earth the welcome couch
To our repose. I slept among the men,
Respected more than you for what I am.
I have travelled from the Danube to the Rhine,
From battle into battle, following on
After the blessed rabble, under the snow,
Rain, falling shot, hunger and misery,
Picking up wounded from the field, speaking
Some consolation to them as they died,
Closing their eyes a moment later. I poured
Water into their burning mouths—those men
Who've given to you your kingdom, toiled for you

(Le regine si alzano al colmo della sdegno)

CAROLINA: Rimpiangerete ben presto
Queste vostre parole.

CATERINA: Non più dell'altre, Maestà!

CAROLINA: Lo vedremo! Signore! Seguitemi!
(Le due sorelle dell'Imperatore escono seguite delle dame. Quadro)

BRIGODE: (entra dal fondo. Con fredda autorità) L'Imperatore invita la Duchessa di Danzica a recarsi sull'istante da lui . . .

CATERINA: Vi seguo.
(BRIGODE fa un inchino profondo ed esce)

CATERINA: (volgendosi agli ufficiali) Camerati, vado a combattere ancora una battaglia!
(tra scherzosa e commossa)
Presentate le armi!
(Tutti la salutano militarmente. CATERINA sulla porta, volgendosi con un sorriso pieno di bontà)
Buona notte!
(LEFEBVRE le va vicino, allarga le braccia)
Febvre! mio Febvre! Non ci commoviamo!
Vincerò, perchè t'amo!

QUADRO—VELARIO

And for your crown! For you it was so easy
To lean and put your fingers in their wounds,
And find that crown there and to lift it up!
(The queens rise, in haughtiest disdain.)

CAROLINA: You will regret these foolish words at once.

CATERINA: No more than others, Majesty!

CAROLINA: We'll see!
Ladies, you are to follow me!
(The two sisters of the Emperor go out, followed by the ladies. Tableau. Enter BRIGODE at the back.)

BRIGODE: (with cold authority)
The Emperor invites the Duchess of Danzig
To come to him at once.

CATERINA: I follow you.
(BRIGODE makes a profound bow and goes out.)
(Turning to the officials)
Comrades, I go to fight another battle!
(Between fun and emotion.)
Present arms!
(All salute her in military fashion. CATERINA at the door turns with a smile full of kindness.)
Good night!
(LEFEBVRE goes up to her, extending his arms.)
Febvre! my Febvre! We will not be afraid!
Through love of you my conquest will be made!

TABLEAU—CURTAIN

ATTO TERZO

Il gabinetto dell'Imperatore.

A destra, davanti al caminetto, dove arde un fuoco basso, il tavolo da lavoro dell'Imperatore, ingombro di carte e di giornali. A sinistra, un canapè, poltrone ed X. A destra, in primo piano, la porta che conduce agli appartamenti dell'Imperatore. Sul fondo, sempre a destra, una larga porta a doppia battente si apre sopra un grande corridoio illuminato da lampade che non si vedono; di là dal corridoio, in coincidenza con la porta, l'uscio della camera dell'Imperatrice. Ancora sul fondo, verso sinistra, si apre con due grandi porte un vestibolo che dà sopra il parco imperiale. Sulla tavola, una lampada dal pesante abat-jour, due calamai, uno grande ed uno piccolo, un mazzetto di violette, la cartella dell'Imperatore, una tazza ed una zuccheriera. La spada è sul caminetto. A sinistra, in primo piano, altra porta.

L'Imperatore, al suo tavolo, scorre qualche giornale. Roustan è in piedi, sul fondo, a destra. A sinistra, in fondo, stanno silenziosamente raccolti alcuni alti ufficiali e un capitano degli usseri. Tutta la scena è in una mezza luce. Solo il viso dell'Imperatore è vivamente illuminato dalla lampada che sta sul tavolo davanti a lui. Breve silenzio; poi Napoleone leva gli occhi dai giornali e si rivolge as capitano degli usseri.

NAPOLEONE: Ora il vostro rapporto, capitano.
(Il capitano va rapidamente al tavolo, saluta e presenta il rapporto. Entra FOUCHÉ. NAPOLEONE gli fa cenno. FOUCHÉ si avvicina al tavolo)
(sottovoce)
Dunque, Neipperg?

FOUCHÉ: Partì.

NAPOLEONE: Bene.
(Tabacca lentamente)

FOUCHÉ: (si allontana calmo, con la solita espressione di furberia sorniona e dice tra se:) E forse è ancor qui! . . .
(CONSTANT entra da destra con una caffettiera d'argento. Versa il caffè a NAPOLEONE e si pianta vicino alla porta di destra. Entra BRIGODE)

NAPOLEONE: (rivolgendosi a BRIGODE) La Duchessa di Danzica?

BRIGODE: Ora viene.
(Si apre la porta della stanza dell'Imperatrice. Si vedono in una luce rosa di veilleuse le dame d'onore inchinarsi per salutare la Sovrana che non si scorge. Poi le dame entrano in iscena; passano davanti a NAPOLEONE, inchinandosi; CAROLINA ed ELISA entrano prime. Le altre le seguono)

NAPOLEONE: (levandosi) La buona notte anch'io or dò all' Imperatrice.
Aspettate, Signore!

BRIGODE: (annunziando alla soglia, verso la stanza dell'Imperatrice) L'Imperatore!
(Napoleone entra nella stanza dell'Imperatrice. —LE DAME, in vari gruppi si accomodano sul canapè e sulle sedie. CAROLINA ed ELISA sono in primo piano)

ELISA: (bisbigliando) Ha la voce dei giorni cattivi.

CAROLINA: L'occhio torvo ed il gesto nervoso.

ACT III

The cabinet of the Emperor.

At the right, before the fireplace, where a low fire burns, the Emperor's worktable, piled up with papers and journals. At the left a sofa, armchair, etc. At the right, front, the door leading to the apartments of the Empress. At the back, still at the right, a large double door opens upon a wide corridor, lighted by lamps that one does not see; beyond the corridor, in range with the door, the entrance of the Empress's room. Again at the back, towards the left, a vestibule with wide doors opens into the imperial park. On the table, a lamp with a heavy lampshade, two inkstands, one large and the other small, a bunch of violets, the Emperor's pocket-book, a cup and a sugar bowl. The sword is on the mantelpiece. At the left front another door.

The Emperor, at his table, is running through some journals. ROUSTAN stands at the back right. At the left back stand together in silence some high officers and a captain of the Hussars. The whole stage is in a dim light. Only the face of the EMPERIOR is brilliantly illuminated by the light which stands on the table in front of him. A short silence; NAPOLEON raises his eyes from the journals and turns to the captain of the Hussars.

NAPOLEON: Now your report, captain.
(The captain goes rapidly to the table, salutes and presents the report. Enter FOUCHÉ. NAPOLEON signals to him. FOUCHÉ comes up to the table.)
(in a low voice.)
Well now, Neipperg?

FOUCHÉ: He's gone.

NAPOLEON: Good.
(takes snuff slowly.)

FOUCHÉ: (going away calmly, and saying to himself with an expression of knavery) But perhaps is back again!—
(CONSTANT enters with a silver coffee tray. He pours out the coffee for NAPOLEON, goes and stands near the door at the right. Enter BRIGODE.)

NAPOLEON: (turning to BRIGODE) The Duchess of Danzig?

BRIGODE: She will come at once.
(The door of the Empress's room opens. One sees in a rosy shaded light the ladies of honor bending to salute the Sovereign, who is not visible. Then the ladies enter on the stage; they pass before NAPOLEON, bowing; CAROLINA and ELISA enter first, the others follow them.)

NAPOLEON: (rising) I also will go in to say good night
To the Empress. Ladies, await me.

BRIGODE: (announcing on the threshold, towards the Empress's room) The Emperor!
(NAPOLEON goes into the Empress's room. The ladies arrange themselves in various groups on the sofa and chairs. CAROLINA and ELISA remain in front.)

ELISA: (whispering) He has the voice of his bad days.

CAROLINA: His eye
Is wild and he is nervous with his hands.

ELISA, CAROLINA e LE DAME: È sdegnato, è furente, è geloso!
(A FOUCHÉ, in tono di scherzo)
Oh, Fouché, dite un po' . . . dite un po' . . .

FOUCHÉ: (con esagerata galanteria, sorridendo) Comandate, e obbedirvi saprò.

ELISA, CAROLINA e LE DAME: Si sussurra che egli apra indiscreto
Fin le lettere della sua sposa.

FOUCHÉ: (con aria maliziosa) Non so nulla!

ELISA, CAROLINA e LE DAME: Parlare non osa!

FOUCHÉ: So serbare, Signore, un segreto.

ELISA, CAROLINA e LE DAME: Oh, Fouché, dite un po' . . . dite un po' . . .

FOUCHÉ: Non affermo e non dico di no!

BRIGODE: (annunziando) L'Imperatore!
(NAPOLEONE rientra. La stanza dell'Imperatrice si chiude)

NAPOLEONE: (alle Dame) Alle quattro la caccia comincia, Signore,
andate a riposare
e non manchi nessuna.

BRIGODE: (annunziando) La Duchessa di Danzica.
(MADAME SANS-GÊNE entra lentamente con la pelliccia sulle spalle, mentre le Dame escono. Sulla soglia, ELISA e CAROLINA hanno un tenue riso di scherno, e fulminano con occhiate superbe CATERINA, che si è fermata presso la porta. Quando tutti sono usciti, NAPOLEONE fa cenno bruscamente a MADAME SANS-GÊNE di sedere sul canapè. Poi si aggira un po' imbronciato per la stanza. Infine le si pianta davanti e le parla con ira contenuata e con piglio imperioso)

NAPOLEONE: Signora, voi coprite di redicolo me, la mia Corte, il vincitor di Danzica . . .
Io non voglio! Lefebvre v'ha già parlato?

CATERINA: Sì, m'ha detto:
l'Imperator m'ha proposto di separarmi da te.

NAPOLEONE: E che avete risposto?

CATERINA: (con molta semplicità) Io gli ho riso sul muso!
Ecco tutto, Maestà!

NAPOLEONE: (con uno scatto d'ira) E la mia volontà?

ELISA, CAROLINA AND THE LADIES: He is indignant, furious, and jealous!
(To FOUCHÉ, in a playful tone.)
Ah, good Fouché, tell us a little something.

FOUCHÉ: (with exaggerated galantry, smiling) Command, and I will know just how to obey.

ELISA, CAROLINA AND THE LADIES: It is whispered theat he opens even the letters of his wife without discretion!

FOUCHÉ: (with a malicious air) I know not.

ELISA, CAROLINA AND THE LADIES: You dare not speak.

FOUCHÉ: But I can keep a secret.

ELISA, CAROLINA, AND THE LADIES: Oh, good Fouché, tell us a little about it.

FOUCHÉ: I make no affirmation nor denial.

BRIGODE: (announcing) The Emperor!
(NAPOLEON reenters. The Empress's room is closed.)

NAPOLEON: (to the Ladies) At four o'clock, Ladies,
The hunt begins. Go now, and get repose,
And let no one be absent.

BRIGODE: (announcing) The Duchess of Danzig.
(Madame SANS-GÊNE enters slowly with her pellisse on her shoulders, while the Ladies go out. On the threshold, ELISA and CAROLINA give a light laugh of scorn, and with superb eyes glare at CATERINA, who has stopped near the door. When all have gone out, NAPOLEON makes an abrupt sign to Madame SANS-GÊNE to sit on the sofa. Then he moves about the room in a irritated way. At last he plants himself in front of her and speaks to her with repressed wrath and with an imperious look.)

NAPOLEON: Madame, you cover with your ridicule
Myself, my court, the conqueror of Danzig—
I like it not! Lefebvre has spoken of this?

CATERINA: He said to me: the Emperor has proposed
To separate me from you.

NAPOLEON: And you answered?

CATERINA: (with great simplicity) I simply laughed in his face—and that was all,
Your Majesty!

NAPOLEON: (showing his anger) But how about my will?

CATERINA: (con calma, quasi con bonarietà, ma con fermezza) Spazzare i troni, al mondo mutar faccia, ah, questo sì, Vostra Maestà lo può!
Ma strappare Lefebvre dalle mie braccia
e dalle sue strapparmi . . . ah! questo no!

NAPOLEONE: (facendo spallucce) Sentiremo Lefebvre . . .

CATERINA: Cambiar non mi vorrà con una principessa tutta boria, che sempre in lui vedrà
il figlio d'un mugnaio . . .

NAPOLEONE: (interrompendola con forza) Il figlio della gloria!

CATERINA: (sempre con semplicità) Sì, ma un villan rifatto . . .
come Vostra Maestà!

NAPOLEONE: (una vampata di collera gli illividisce il volto; poi egli si domina e dice bruscamente): È con questo linguaggio che stasera
uno scandalo avete provocato!

CATERINA: Uno scandalo! È vero! Le sorelle di Vostra Maestà schernir così l'esercito . . .

NAPOLEONE: (con stupore) L'esercito?

CATERINA: Sì, nella mia persona, visto che servii sotto la bandiera.

NAPOLEONE: Voi?

CATERINA: La fiaschetta al fianco.

NAPOLEONE: Vivandiera?

CATERINA: (con impeto crescente) Con Febvre. Armata dei Vosgi,
Armata della Mosella,
Armata di Sambra e Mosa
ed Armata del Reno!
Trentasei mesi di battaglia, dodici combattimenti e una ferita al braccio!

NAPOLEONE: (che s'è andato entusiasmando durante l'enumerazione) Una ferita? Bene! Conservate i galloni che avete guadagnato!
Duchessa, se la gloria
vi battezzò in un giorno di vittoria, l'Imperator conferma!
(sorridendo)
Ma la Corte
non è fatta per voi . . .

CATERINA: (allegra) C'è troppa folla.

NAPOLEONE: (con gaiezza bonaria) C'è troppe cerimonie.

CATERINA: E troppa colla.

CATERINA: (with calm, almost with good nature, but with firmness) To empty thrones and change about the world,
Your Majesty can do this with scarcecly a blow!
But to imagine my Lefebvre hurled
Out of my arms and me from his—ah, no!

NAPOLEON: (with a shrug) We'll hear Lefebvre on this—

CATERINA: He would not exchange
Me for the proudest princess in the world,
For I will never see in him the son
Of the miller.

NAPOLEON: (interrupting her with force) No, the son of glory!

CATERINA: (always with simplicity) Yes,
But a remade peasant, like your Majesty.
(A sudden fit of anger makes his face pale, but he controls himself, and says abruptly)

NAPOLEON: And with such language did you start a scandal tonight!

CATERINA: A scandal! ah! your Majesty's
Two sisters thus to scorn the army!

NAPOLEON: (stupified) The army?

CATERINA: Yes, in my person—I served beneath its flag.

NAPOLEON: You?

CATERINA: My flask at my side.

NAPOLEON: A canteen-women?

CATERINA: (with growing impetuosity) With Febvre—in the army of the Vosges,
The army of the Moselle, the Sambre and Meuse,
The army of the Rhine! had thirty-six Months of it, twelve battles, and a wound
In the arm.

NAPOLEON: (who has been walking about enthusiastically during the enumeration) A wound? Splendid! Pray preserve
The ribbons you have won! If glory, Duchess,
Baptized you in a day of victory,
The Emperor confirms it!
(Smiling) But the court
Is not made to your taste.

CATERINA: (lightly) It is too foolish.

NAPOLEON: (with gay good nature) It is too ceremonious.

CATERINA: And stiff necked.

NAPOLEONE: (ridendo) Dunque non ci venite. Io vi dispenso!
(con allegria)
Una festa al sobborgo è assai più gaia . . .

CATERINA: (con vivacità) Mi ricordo quand'ero lavandaia . . .

NAPOLEONE: (furente, tagliandole la parola) Lavandaia? Anche questo? Lavandaia?
Tutti i mestieri avete fatto?

CATERINA: Due;
Ed ho dovuto chiudere bottega per colpa dei cattivi pagatori!
Alla Corte c'è un tale che mi deve sessanta franchi e non se ne ricorda.

NAPOLEONE: (alzando le spalle) Sia lode al cielo!
(Siede allo scrittoio e tenta di scrivere: la penna non va. La getta nervosamente; ne prende un'altra)

CATERINA: Gli ho portato il conto, così, per rinfrescargli la memoria.
(Estrae dal corsetto una logora lettera a cui è appuntato con uno spillo un conto. Apre la lettera, si avvicina alla lampada e legge a fatica)
"Con la mia magra paga di soldato
"devo . . .,, È scritta da cane! . . .
"devo . . . aiutar mia madre,
"che ha lasciato la Corsica . . .,,

NAPOLEONE: (colpito) La Corsica? Che dite?
(Si alza vivamente, le corre vicino, le strappa di mano la lettera, guarda la firma, legge sorpreso, sorridendo subito dopo)
"Buonaparte.

CATERINA: Ecco, Sire, un cattivo pagatore.
(Siede sulla poltrona con comica aria di trionfo)

NAPOLEONE: Lasciate che vi guardi! Ah, Vi ravviso!
Siete voi . . . siete voi . . .
(Cerca nella memoria il nomignolo vivace della Duchessa)

CATERINA: (suggerendoglielo) . . . Madame Sans-Gêne.

NAPOLEONE: (ridendo) Madame Sans-Gêne,
La mia allegra vicina!

CATERINA: In persona, Maestà!

NAPOLEONE: Quella buona figliuola!

CATERINA: In persona, Maestà!

NAPOLEONE: (reste assorto, guardando la lettera) Questo logoro foglio scolorito, quanti ricordi suscita! Mi vedo

NAPOLEON: (laughing) You need not come. I will dispense with that.
(with joy)
A frolic in the suburbs is more fun—

CATERINA: (with vivacity) I remember when I was a washerwoman—

NAPOLEON: (furious, cutting off the word) A washerwoman? That too? A washerwomen?
Have you done every kind of trade?

CATERINA: Just two;
I had to close my shop because of those
Who did not pay their bills! Here in the court
There is a man who owes me sixty francs—
He never remembers it.

NAPOLEON: (shrugging his shoulders) Praise be to Heaven!
(He sits down at his desk and tries to write; the pen does not go; he throws it away nervously, and takes another.)

CATERINA: I've got the bill here to refresh my mind.
(She takes from her corsage a worn-out letter to which is pinned a bill. She opens the letter, goes the lamp and reads it with difficulty.)
"Out of my soldier's pay, which is but little,
I must"—this devilish writing!—
"I must aid
My mother, who has come from Corsica."

NAPOLEON: (astounded) From Corsica? What say you?
(He rises quickly, comes near her, snatches the letter from her hand, looks at the signature, reads with surprise, smiling immediately after.)
"Bonaparte."

CATERINA: This man pays badly, sir.
(She sits down in the armchair with a comic air of triumph.)

NAPOLEON: Let me look at you!
I seem to recognize— but cannot quite—
You are—you are—
(He searches his memory for the nickname of the Duchess.)

CATERINA: (suggesting it to him) Madame Sans-Gêne.

NAPOLEON: (laughing) Ah, yes—
My little neighbor!

CATERINA: In person, Majesty!

NAPOLEON: That charming girl!

CATERINA: In person, Majesty!

NAPOLEON: (standing absorbed, as he looks at the letter) This old, dicolored paper brings me back
What memories! I see myself alone, solo, pensoso, senza più speranza in una nuda stanza al quarto piano . . .

CATERINA: . . . al quinto . . .

NAPOLEONE: . . . al quarto . . .

CATERINA: . . . al quinto!
fin sotto i tetti v'eravate spinto!

NAPOLEONE: (sorridendo) È vero, è vero, mi ricordo, sì!
(raccogliendo nella sintesi di un gesto largo tutto il fasto della Reggia)
E fa piacere ricordarlo qui! (scuotendosi, uscendo dai ricordi e riprendendo il tono vivace)
Madame Sans-Gêne, or discutiamo il conto. (esaminandolo in tono di burla)
È salato!

CATERINA: Ma no!

NAPOLEONE: Ma sì! Via, via, quaranta frachi di soli rammendi!

CATERINA: Ah, Sire, se sapeste che lavoro!
La vostra biancheria era come un traforo!

NAPOLEONE: Non facciam paragoni!
In breve,
Bonaparte vi deve?

CATERINA: (allungando la mano) Tre Napoleoni!

NAPOLEONE: (si furga in tasca) Ahimè, cara vicina, non li ho!

CATERINA: Pazienza, aspetterò . . .
Vi fo credito ancora
per qualche ora!

NAPOLEONE: (sedendo vicino a lei, esaminandola tutta, rapidamente) Madame Sans-Gêne, voi siete una donnina tutta malizia . . .
(Le tira scherzosamente l'orecchio) con l'orecchia fina
(guardandole il viso)
e fino il viso, e vivido lo sguardo . . .

CATERINA: (con allegro rimprovero e quasi confidenzialmente) Vostra Maestà lo nota un po' in ritardo.

NAPOLEONE: Che vuol dir?

CATERINA: (sorridendo) Che in quel tempo io pensavo:
"Accidenti, se questo
tenentin mi domanda qualche cosa
io gli dono anche il resto!,, Un giorno soprattutto! Ero venuta da voi tutta ridente e fresca e lucida, la sciarpa al vento e un ghirbizzo in testa!
E salgo, oh, quante scale!
E picchio! oh Dio, che palpiti!

Thoughtful and hopeless, in an empty room
Up four long flights of stairs, unknown, aloof.

CATERINA: Up five—

NAPOLEON: Up four—

CATERINA: Up five—it was on the roof.

NAPOLEON: (smiling) Yes, I remember—it is all quite clear.
(Stretching out his arms, as if to indicate by the gesture all the pomp of his kingdom)
It does me good to think of all that here!
(Shaking himself, he comes out of his dream and takes up his usual quick tone.)
Madame Sans-Gêne, we will dicuss the account.
(Examining it in a joking way.)
It is too much!

CATERINA: It's not.

NAPOLEON: It is! See here!
You charged me forty frances for mending holes!

CATERINA: Oh, sir, if you but knew how I had worked!
Your laundry was as full of holes as lace.

NAPOLEON: Comparisons are odious! In short
Bonaparte owes you?

CATERINA: (putting out her hand) Three Napoleons!

NAPOLEON: (hunting in his pocketbook) Alas! dear neighbor, I have not got it.

CATERINA: With patience I will wait—I'll credit you Still a few hours.

NAPOLEON: (sitting down by her, examining her, rapidly) Madame Sans-Gêne, you are
A crafty lady—
(He pinches her ear playfully.)
With your pretty ear
(Looking at her face.)
And pretty face, and glance so fine and keen.

CATERINA: (with slight reproach and half confidentially) Your Majesty remarks it rather late.

NAPOLEON: What do you mean?

CATERINA: (smiling) That in those times I thought:
"By heaven! if this lieutenant only sought Something of me, why, he would have much more!"
One day especially! Icame to you
Happy and laughing, full of strange delight,
Fancies within me, my scarf behind in flight!
I mounted up such endless lengths

Ed entro . . . e mi tremavano i ginocchi!
Depongo il cesto della biancheria . . .
Vostra Maestà non leva neanche gli occhi da una carta geografica. Io mi dico:
“Vediam se lascia la sui geografia per occuparsi un poco della mia!,,
E m'aggiro, e vi sfioro, e fo tic tac coi tacchetti inquieti sul piancito e la stanza gelata vi riscaldo di gioventù, di strepito e d'invito.
Ma voi, sempre più freddo e cieco e muto,
non vedeste l'amor ch'era venuto,
non vedeste l'amor che se n'è andato!
E così fu
che a casa riportai la mia tirtù, intatta sì, ma furibonda . . .

NAPOLEONE: (prendendole la mano) Stolto ben fui quel giorno a non vedere questa piccola man che m'era offerta, caro pegno d'amore . . .

CATERINA: (in tono di burla) Ecco un conquistatore.

NAPOLEONE: E la ferita?

CATERINA: (indicando il braccio) È qui.

NAPOLEONE: (facendo l'atto di baciarle il braccio) Voi permettete?

CATERINA: Il saluto ai feriti, sempre.

NAPOLEONE: (bacia la cicatrice e poi con le lebbra più in su, sempre più in su) No, Sire, no!
Non cercate più in su, ferite non ce n è più!

NAPOLEONE: (insinuante) Via, poichè pàgo i conti del tenente . . .

CATERINA: (alzandosi con un gesto dignitoso e inchinandosi)
L'Imperator non mi dovrà più niente!

NAPOLEONE: (serio) È giusto!
Ora vi faccio accompagnare.
(chiamando forte)
Roustan! (Entra Roustan)
Un ufficiale di servizio!

ROUSTAN: (attraversa la scena per obbedire all'Imperatore, che intanto si è avvicinato a CATERINA e l'ha aiutata a indossare la pelliccia. Ma il mammalucco ha appena varcata la porta di fondo, che si arresta e ascolta attentamente)
(NAPOLEONE fa un gesto de interrogazione) of stair.

And knocked, and entered, and when I stood there
Before you I was trembling, and I laid
The box of laundry down. You never made
The slightest sign, you never raised your head
From the map that you were studying. I said:
“I'll see if for a moment I can trap
His fixed attention from this wretched map!
I moved about, I dropped some flowers, I kept
A dreadful noise up, as I madly stepped,
Filling the room with youth and charms to wind
About you. You, always more cold and blind,
Saw not the love that came and went away,
and so in virtue I was doomed to stay.

NAPOLEON: (taking her hand)
Stupid was I then not to see the hand
You offered me, the symbol sweet of love.—

CATERINA: (in a joking tone) This is the conqueror.

NAPOLEON: And the wound?

CATERINA: (indicating her arm) It is here.

NAPOLEON: (making the action of kissing her arm) You will permit?

CATERINA: Salute to the wounded always.

(NAPOLEON kisses the scar, and then moves his lips further and further upward.)
No, kiss no higher, there is no wound there!

NAPOLEON: (insinuatingly)
There, that is how I pay the lieutenant's bebts.

CATERINA: (rising with dignified gesture and bowing) The Emperor owes me nothing more!

NAPOLEON: (seriously) It is just.
Now I will have you accompanied.
(calling loudly.)
Roustan!
(Enter ROUSTAN.)
An officer of service.

(ROUSTAN crosses the stage to obey the Emperor, who at the same time approaches CATERINA and helps her put on her pellisse. But the officer has scarcely left the door at the back, when he stops and listens attentively.)
(NAPOLEON makes a gesture of interrogation)

ROUSTAN: (sottovoce) Hanno aperto la porta segreta . . .

NAPOLEONE: A quest'ora?

ROUSTAN: Odo un passo . . .

NAPOLEONE: (facendogli segno di prendere la lampada che illumina la stanza) Va e vedi!
(Poi, colto da un subito pensiero)
No.
(additando a ROUSTAN la porta della sua camera)
Là, e chiudi la porta . . . Se chiamo, corri.
(ROUSTAN esce con la lampada. La scena è tutta buia)

NAPOLEONE: (a CATERINA, duramente, a bassa voce) E silenzio!
(Nella stanza oscura entra furtiva la signora DE BOULOW; si guarda intorno, esamina il gabinetto che le sembra deserto, si inoltra nella direzione della stanza dell'Imperatore poi nell'anticamera. Rassicurata, torna sui suoi passi, riapre l'uscio dal quale è passata e fa cenno a NEIPPERG di avanzarsi. Quando NEIPPERG è entrato, essa lo prende per mano e lo conduce verso la porta dell'Imperatrice. A questo punto l'Imperatore si avanza rapido, pone bruscamente una mano sulla spalla di NEIPPERG e chiama, gridando:)

NAPOLEONE: Roustan
(ROUSTAN entra subito con la lampada, che posa sulla tavola. La scena si illumina)

LA SIGNORA DE BOULOW: (atterrita) L'Imperatore!

NAPOLEONE: (con uno scoppio sordo di furore) Neipperg!

CATERINA: (tra se) Ah, disgraziato, era lui!

NAPOLEONE: (con voce suffocata, tutto fremente di collera) Voi!?
A quest' ora? Qui? Voi?
(a ROUSTAN, indicando la Signora de BOULOW)
Via questa donna! Via!
(ROUSTAN fa uscire la SIGNORA DE BOULOW, poi fitorna verso il fondo della scena e rimane immobile e attento)

NEIPPERG: Son venuto a prender commiato dall' Imperatrice, com'è mio diritto.

NAPOLEONE: (con un grido suffocato, al colmo dello sdegno) Ed il mio, trovandovi di notte, a quella porta,
è di trattarvi come un malfattore colto sul fatto e sopprimervi qui.

NEIPPERG: (con calma) Voi ne avete il potere . . .

ROUSTAN: (in a low voice) The secret door
Is open.

NAPOLEON: At this hour?

ROUSTAN: I hear a step.

NAPOLEON: (making a sign to him to take the lamp which lights the room) Go then and see!
(Struck by a new idea.)
No.
(indicating to ROUSTAN the door of his room.)
There, shut the door—
If I should call, hurry.
(ROUSTAN goes out with the lamp. The stage is entirely dark.)

(To CATERINA in a low, hard voice.)
Silence now!
Enter stealthily MADAME DE BOULOW; she looks carefully about, examining the cabinet which seems deserted; she advances in the direction of the Emperor's room, then towards the antechamber. Reassured, she retraces her steps, and opens again the door where she entered, and makes a sign to NEIPPERG to come in. When NEIPPERG has come in, she takes him by the hand and leads him towards the Empress's door. At this point the Emperor steps forward rapidly, puts roughly a hand on NEIPPERG'S shoulder, and calls out:)

NAPOLEON: Roustan!
(ROUSTAN enters at once with the lamp, which he puts on the table. The stage is light again.)

MADAME DE BOULOW: (terrified) The Emperor!

NAPOLEON: (with an explosion of fury) Neipperg!

CATERINA: (to herself) Disgrace! it's he!

NAPOLEON: (in a smothered voice, trembling with rage) You!
at this hour! You? Here?
(To ROUSTAN, indicating MADAME DE BOULOW)
Away with her! away!
(ROUSTAN takes out MADAME DE BOULOW, then returns to the back of the stage, where he remains, motionless and attentive.)

NEIPPERG: I have come, your Majesty, to take my leave
Of the Empress, which I had the right to do.

NAPOLEON: (with a smothered cry, at the height of fury) And my right, finding your before this door
By night, is to treat you as a malefactor
Caught in the act and to suppress you here.

NEIPPERG: (calmly) You have the power—

NAPOLEONE: (con forza) E ne uso! Roustan, qui la tua gente!
(ROUSTAN corre alla porta, fa un segno e subito due mammalucchi appariscono sulla soglia)

NAPOLEONE: (a ROUSTAN) Portate via costui!

CATERINA: (interponendosi, fuor di se) Se fanno un passo, grido.
(Gli uomini, che stavano per avvicinarsi a NEIPPERG, a questa minaccia s arrestano incerti)

NAPOLEONE: E osate?!

CATERINA: Grido! Grido: "Qui si sgozza un uomo!,, NAPOLEONE: (a ROUSTAN) E fatela tacere!

CATERINA: (disperata, piangente) E un assassinio!
(Inginocchiandosi e aggrappandosi a NAPOLEONE, che la respinge)
Ah, grazia, Sire, per la vostra gloria, grazia, grazia, vi supplico!

NAPOLEONE: (a ROUSTAN) Obbedite . . .
(ROUSTAN e i due mammalucchi si avanzano verso NEIPPERG, che getta sul canapè il suo mantello e li ferma col gesto)

NEIPPERG: (a NAPOLEONE) Ma trattatemi almeno da soldato!
Fattemi facilar vigliaccamente come il duca d'Enghien!

NAPOLEONE: (fuori di se) No! troppo onore per un bandito, degno solamente ch'io gli strappi
le insegne e lo schiaffeggi con esse.
(Gli strappa i cordoni delle insegne e fa il gesto di percuoterlo. — NEIPPERG fa un salto indietro e sfodera la spada)

NEIPPERG: Fate dunque!
(I mammalucchi si gettano su di lui e lo atterrano)

CATERINA: (gridando) Aiuto! Aiuto!
(*Accorrono tre ufficiali, ad uno dei quali
ROUSTAN consegna la spada di NEIPPERG.
L'ufficiale la depone sullo scrittoio*)

NEIPPERG: (dibattendosi ancora) Un vero Côrso avrebbe tratto il suo coltello . . .
(ai mammalucchi)
Manigoldi! . . .

NAPOLEONE: (mostranandogli i cordoni delle insegne) Strangolare con queste io vi dovrei! Ma non lo faccio per rispetto del

NAPOLEON: (with force) Which I will use! Roustan,
Bring in your people!
(ROUSTAN hurries to the door, makes a sign and at once two men appear on the threshold.)
(To ROUSTAN.)
Take this man away!

CATERINA: (putting herself between them, beside herself) One step, and I will scream.
(The men, who were about to approach NEIPPERG, at this menace stop uncertain.)

NAPOLEON: And you would dare?

CATERINA: I will cry out: "A man here cuts his throat!"

NAPOLEON: (to ROUSTAN) Make her be silent!

CATERINA: (desperate, weeping)
He is an assassin!
(Kneeling down and grasping NAPOLEON, who repulses her.)
Ah, pity, pity, for your glory, pity!

NAPOLEON: (to ROUSTAN)
Obey!
(ROUSTAN and the men advance towards NEIPPERG, who throws his mantle on the sofa and stops them with a gesture.)

NEIPPERG: (to NAPOLEON) And you would treat me less than a soldier!
You'd shoot me as a coward, like the Duke
Of Enghien!

NAPOLEON: (beside himself) No! for that is too much honor!
But as a bandit, whose desert is but
That I should snatch his medals from his breast,
And strike his face with them.
(He snatches the strings of his medals and makes the gesture of striking him. NEIPPERG jumps back and unsheathes his sword.)

NEIPPERG: Then do it!

CATERINA: (crying out) Help!
(Three officers rush in, to one of whom ROUSTAN consigns NEIPPERG'S sword. The officer puts it on the writing desk.)

NEIPPERG: (still striking) A true Corsican would have drawn his knife—
(To the men.)
Executioners!

NAPOLEON: (showing him the strings of his medals) I should strangle you
With these! But I will not do so
Out of respect to your Emperor!

vostro Imperatore! . . .
(Getta lontano i cordoni con disprezzo e risàle a destra della tavola. — Ai tre ufficiali, con autorità)
Quest' uomo su di me levò la spada!
Fouché e Lefebvre
sian chiamati qui e tutto sia finito avanti il giorno!
(CATERINA, disperata, cade su una sedia)

QUADRO — VELARIO

ATTO QUARTO

Il gabinetto dell' Imperatore come nell' atto precedente.

(Le candele stanno per spegnersi, il fuoco muore. Accasciata sulla sedia, col mento tra le mani CATERINA pensa, dolorosamente assorta. Entra dalla sinistra LEFEBVRE, frettoloso e inquieto, in uniforme di servizio.)

CATERINA: (gli va incontro e gli prende la mano) Febvre, Febvre, mio Febvre!
Neipperg fu colto là su quella porta
(indicando la porta dell' Imperatrice)
e alzò la spada sull' Imperatore!

LEFEBVRE: Ah, disgraziato, egli è perduto!

CATERINA: No, non dirlo, no, salvalo tu!

LEFEBVRE: (disperato) È perduto! è perduto! Ed io dovrò dir la parola che lo ucciderà!

CATERINA: (stringendosi a lui e parlando con la voce piena di lagrime) Febvre, la vita che gli concedesti un gioirno, or gli rotogli . . .

LEFEBVRE: (commosso) Ah, non guardarmi e taci!
Se tu mi preghi, che risponderò?
Il destino è segnato, io sono l'arma del destino, e spietato obbedirò!
Ma quando torno, fa che non le vedo le tue lagrime, o cara! Ch'io non trovi il tuo pallido viso sulla soglia . . .
. . . E fuggirò dove la casa è più

NAPOLEONE: Ah, la vostra paura, più sincera di voi,
confessa e lo condanna!
(con grande forza)
Muoia, dunque!

CATERINA: (con un grido) No, Sire!

NAPOLEONE: (con un gesto imperioso) Entrate!

(He throws the strings away, and goes to the right of the table. To the three officers, with authority.)
This man has dared to raise his sword against me!
Let Fouché and Lefebvre be summoned here
And everything be ended ere the dawn.
(CATERINA, desperate, falls on a chair.)

TABLEAU—CURTAIN

ACT IV

The Emperor's cabinet, as in the preceding act.

(The candles are burning out, the fire is dying. Sitting weak on a chair, with her chin in her hands, CATERINA is tragically absorbed in her thoughts. Enter from the left LEFEBVRE hastily and restlessly, in service uniform.)

CATERINA: (going towards him and taking his hand) Febvre, Febvre,
My Febvre! Neipperg was caught here at the door.
(indicating the door of the Empress's room.)
And raised his sword against the Emperor.

LEFEBVRE: He is disgraced—and lost!

CATERINA: No, say it not—
No, you must save him!

LEFEBVRE: He is lost, he is lost!
And I must give the word to seal his doom!

CATERINA: (clinging to him and speaking with a voice full of emotion)
Febvre, the life we spared so long ago
Comes wheeling back at us—

LEFEBVRE: Do not look at me—
Be still! If you pleas thus, what shall I say?
His destiny is signed, I am the arm
Of destiny, and under careful watch
I must obey! But when the deed is done,
Let me not see your tears, let me not see
Your pallid face in the doorway. I shall flee
Away to where the house is solitary.

NAPOLEON: Your fear, sincerer than yourself,
Confesses and condemns you!
(With great force.)
Will you go?

CATERINA: (with a cry) No, Sire!

NAPOLEON: (with an imperative gesture) Enter!

CATERINA: (esitante, agitata tra propositi diversi, con la voce piena di pianto) Che tortura!
(Ancora ripugnante, si dirige lentamente verso la porta che mette all'appartamento dell'Imperatrice. NAPOLEONE la fissa con i suoi occhi pieni d'irresistibile comando. Smarita come un automa, ella si avanza, apre la porta. ROUSTAN, ch'è tuttora fermo nel vestibolo, le lascia il passo e rientra nel gabinetto imperiale. CATERINA, giunta all'uscio dell'Imperatrice, alza la mano per bussare, ma la mano le ricade ed ella si volge ancora in atto d'implorare verso l'Imperatore)

NAPOLEONE: (implacabile le comanda col gesto, di entrare. Abbassa la fiamma della lampada. La stanza si fa oscura; CATERINA bussa e apre la porta)

LA VOCE DELL'IMPERATRICE: Ah, siete voi, signora de Boulow?

CATERINA: (tremante, con un filo de voce) Maestà, Neipperg è qui!

LA VOCE DELL'IMPERATRICE: Bene . . . Dategli questo . . .
(s'intravede il braccio nudo dell'Imperatrice, che consegna a CATERINA una grande busta sigillata) E addio! . . .
CATERINA chiude la porta, non ha la forza di avanzarsi verso l'Imperatore. Egli corre a lei, con una mano l'afferra per un polso, e la trascina mezzo svenuta verso la scrivania, con l'altra mano le strappa la lettera, alza convulsamente la fiamma, mentre CATERINA piomba spossata e disperta sopra una poltrona)

NAPOLEONE: (leggendo l'indirizzo della lettera) "A Sua Maestà l'Imperatore d'Austria . . .,, (sorpreso)
Suo padre?
(Esita un momento, poi scrolla le spalle e rompe i suggelli, leggendo)
"Signore e Caro Padre, poichè il ministro di polizia apre le mie lettere, ricorro al conte di
Neipperg per inviarvi in segreto la presente . . .
Le sue assiduità . . . turbano me e l'Imperatore . . .
trattenetelo a Vienna . . .,,

CATERINA: (con un'esplosione di gioia) È innocente, è innocente!

NAPOLEONE: (con l'espressione di chi è sollevato da un gran peso, e con calma voluta) Il mio cuore non ne ha mai dubitato!

CATERINA: (tra se) Che razza disfacciata!

CATERINA: (hesitating, agitated between different intentions, with a voice full of tears) This is torture, torture!
(Still hesitant, she goes towards the door which leads to the Empress's apartment with slow steps. NAPOLEON fixes her with eyes full of irresistible command. Bewildered, like an automaton she advances and opens the door. ROUSTAN, still standing firmly in the vestibule, makes way for her and reenters the imperial cabinet. CATERINA, arriving at the Empress's door, raises her hand to knock, but the hand falls powerless at her side and she turns toward the Emperor again in the act of supplication NAPOLEON implacably commands her with a gesture to enter. He turns down the lamp. The room is dark; CATERINA knocks, and opens the door.)

THE VOICE OF THE EMPRESS: Ah, it is you, Madame de Bulow?

CATERINA: (trembling, very softly) Majesty,
Neipperg is here!

THE VOICES OF THE EMPRESS: It is well—Give this to him.— (One catches the glimpse of a bare arm of the Empress, which consigns to CATERINA a large sealed packet.)
And my farewell!
(CATERINA closes the door, has not the strength to advance towards the Emperor. He hurries to her, with one hand seizes her by the wrist and drags her half fainting to the writing desk, with the other he snatches the letter from her, and excitedly puts up the light, while she falls, weak and desperate, in an armchair.)

NAPOLEON: (reading the address of the letter) "His Majesty the Emperor of Austria."
(surprised.)
Her father!
(He hesitates a moment, then shrugs his shoulders and breaks the seal, reading)
"Honored and dear father, since the minister of police opens my letters, I am taking recourse to the Count of Neipperg, to send this by him in secret. His assiduity troubles me and the Emperor. Entertain him in Vienna."

CATERINA: (with a burst of joy) He's innocent, he's innocent!

NAPOLEON: (with the expression of one from whom a great weight has fallen and with desired calm)
My heart
Never doubted it!

CATERINA: (to herself) What bold impudence!

NAPOLEONE: (consegnando a ROUSTAN la lettera) Risigilla e riporta
(ROUSTAN esce.— Entrano LEFEBVRE, FOUCHÉ)

FOUCHÉ: (presentando a NAPOLEONE un foglio) Sire, ecco la sentenza!

CATERINA: (con un gesto vivacemente popolaresco) Che sentenza d'Egitto!
(Accorre a LEFEBVRE e gli parla frettolosamente sottovoce)

NAPOLEONE: (prende sul suo scrittoio la spada di NEIPPERG e la consegna a FOUCHÉ) Consegnatela a Neipperg!
Fo'grazia! Parta subito!
(FOUCHÉ esce.— NAPOLEONE, volgendosi con piglio burbero a LEFEBVRE)
Quanto al vostro divorzio . . .
Il mio colere è questo:

(accostandosi a CATERINA, tirandole l'orecchio e cambiando tono di voce)
Che tu la tenga sul tuo cor serrata, che tu ringrazi il Ciel che te l'ha data!
(Volta le spalle ed entra nella sua stanza.— Si sentono fuori gli squilli dei corni da caccia. I servi aprono le porte di fondo. Penetra la luce a grandi flotti nella stanza.)

CATERINA: (a LEFEBVRE con gaia vivacità) O vecchio mio, più mai sfuggirmi non potrai!
Il tuo destino è al mio destin legato:
Dio mi ti ha dato
e chi ti tocca, guai!

LEFEBVRE: Il dì che splende già, sorridendo ci guarda, e ci ridà
e l'amore e l'amico!
Io benedico
la mia rinata felicità!

CORO DI CACCIATORI: (di fuori) Entro i sentieri, foschi dei boschi,
bisbiglia fresco il dì!
Alalì, alalì!
Nell'ombra già s'inselva la belva che dal covile uscì! Alaì, alaì!
Ma la ferina traccia la caccia tra l'erba discoprì! Alalì, alalì
(L'atrio che dà sul parco si va popolando di cavalieri e di amazzoni. Il giardino imperiale appare luminoso, pieno di cavalleggeri, di cacciatori, di canattieri. È uno splendore di uniformi, un brusìo, un parlare, un agitarsi, uno squillar di corni da caccia.)
(CAROLINA ed ELISA entrano nel gabinetto, in costume di amazzone, seguite dalla loro scorta d'onore)

NAPOLEON: (giving the letter to ROUSTAN) Seal this again and take it.
(ROUSTAN goes out. Enter LEFEBVRE and FOUCHÉ.)

FOUCHÉ: (presenting a paper to NAPOLEON) Sire, the sentence!

CATERINA: (with a quick common gesture) Sentence of Egypt!
(She hurries to LEFEBVRE and speaks to him rapidly in a low voice.)

NAPOLEON: (taking from his desk NEIPPERG'S sword and giving it to FOUCHÉ) Consign this to Neipperg!
I thank you! Go at once!
(FOUCHÉ goes out. NAPOLEON turns with a savage look to LEFEBVRE.)
As to your divorce—
My wish is this:

(Turning to CATERINA, taking her by the ear and changing the tone of his voice.)
Hold her forever, true—
Give thanks to heaven for giving her to you!
(He turns his back and goes into his room. From outside comes the sound of hunting-horns. Light in great waves comes into the room.)

CATERINA: (to LEFEBVRE, with gay vivacity) My dear old friend, you'll not escape me now!
Your fate is bound to mine with more than a vow.
God gave me you—who touches you, beware!

LEFEBVRE: The smiling day, that looks upon us there,
Laughs with our love and friendship, and I bless
This glowing dawn, my newborn happiness!

CHORUS OF HUNTSMEN: (outside) Within the shaded paths beyond the lea
Whispers the freshness of the day!
Alalì!
Already through the brush there creeps along
The furious boar to meet us—hear our song!
The wild beast leads us on to his own woe
Among the open grasses there—halloa!
(Through the opening to the park one sees crowds of cavaliers and amazons. The imperial garden seems luminous, full of riders, huntsmen, and dog-keepers. There is the color of uniforms, general noise and movement, the sound of hunting-horns. CAROLINA and ELISA enter the cabinet, in riding-costume, followed by their escort of honor.)

NAPOLEONE: (ritornando dalla sua stanza in redingote grigia, cappello e stivaloni)
(a tutta la Corte)
Signori, andiamo!
(Volgendosi a CATERINA)
Datemi la mano. Fino alla vostra soglia vi condurrò, per farvi giusto onore!

CATERINA: (a NAPOLEONE) Ah, come potrò dirvi quanta sia la gioia che mi palpita nel sen?

NAPOLEONE: (sottolineando le parole e in modo che tutti possano intendere, soprattutto ELISA e CAROLINA) La Duchessa di Danzica mi sia fida,
Come mi fu Madame Sans-Gêne!
(NAPOLEONE si inchina, prende la mano di CATERINA e gliela bacia rispettosamente. CATERINA, al colmo della gioia, volge lo sguardo, con una mezza smorfia, a ELISA e CAROLINA. NAPOLEONE, tenendo sempre per mano CATERINA, si avvia verso il fondo, seguito da LEFEBVRE e da tutta la Corte. Quando è sulla soglia, ROUSTAN grida)

ROUSTAN: L'Imperatore!

UNA VOCE PIÙ LONTANA: (annunciando) L'Imperatore!

TUTTE LE VOCI: (di fuori, in un grido formidabile) Viva l'Imperatore!

FINE

NAPOLEON: (returning from his room in a gray coat, hat and big boots, to the court) My friends let us be off!
(turning to CATERINA) Give me your hand.
I will lead you back to your own threshold.
To do you worthy honour!

CATERINA: (to NAPOLEON) How can I describe
The joy that throbs within me?

NAPOLEON: (emphasizing the words and in a way that all may hear, especially ELISA and CAROLINA) May
The Duchess of Danzig be as true again
To me as was Madame Sans-Gêne!
(NAPOLEON bows, takes CATERINA'S hand and kisses it respectfully. CATERINA, at the height of joy, throws a glance, half of disdain, upon ELISA and CAROLINA. NAPOLEON, always holding CATERINA'S hand, goes towards the back, followed by LEFEBVRE and the whole court. When he is at the door, ROUSTAN cries out.)

ROUSTAN: The Emperor!

A VOICE FAR AWAY: (announcing) The Emperor!

ALL THE VOICES: (outside, with a great cry) Long live the Emperor!

THE END

André Chénier (1896)

MUSIC BY UMBERTO GIORDANO ■ LIBRETTO BY LUIGI ILLICA

This four-act dramma di ambiente storico, set to a libretto by Luigi Illica, premiered at the La Scala on March 28, 1896. The year is 1789. A ball is to be held at the Château de Coigny. Carlo Gérard, a servant, detests all of his noble masters except for Maddalena de Coigny, daughter of the house, whom he secretly loves. The guests to arrive; among them, the novelist Fléville, André Chénier, a poet, and the Abate. The Abate brings unfortunate tidings from Paris, but the guests are distracted by Fléville's reading of a pastoral. Chénier reads a poem that denounces the injustices of the church and the aristocracy against the common people. Cérard, leading a band of peasants, interrupts the ball; the Contessa gets rid of them, fires Gérard and orders the dancing to carry on. In Paris, the age of the Terror rages. Chénier is constantly under surveillance, watched by a spy for the revolutionary Government, to which Gérard has given his allegiance. Chénier tells Roucher, his friend, about an unknown woman who has written to him to ask for his protection. Roucher suggests that he flee Paris at once, but he insists on finding out the woman's identity. Gérard gives the spy a description of Maddalena with instructions to find her. She is Chénier's unknown letter writer; on seeing the two together, the spy reports back to Gérard. Not recognizing Chénier, Gérard challenges him to a duel. Chénier wounds Gérard, who finally recognizes Chénier, and warns him that he is in grave danger. The police arrive, Gérard says that he does not know his attacker. At the Revolutionary Tribunal, Gérard hears of Chénier's arrest; that he himself must write out the bill of indictment. He signs the documents, and Maddalena comes to plead for Chénier's life. She offers herself to her former servant if he will help Chénier, and Gérard agrees to her proposal. With the support of Gérard, Chénier defends himself eloquently in front of the Tribunal, but the poet is still sentenced to death. In the courtyard of St.-Lazare prison, Chénier reads his last poem to Roucher. Maddelena enters with Gérard, who makes one last plea for their lives. Maddelena bribes the jailer so that she may take another female prisoner's place. Thus she and Chénier, together until the end, can face their imminent death with the strength of their love for one another.

■ ACT I

(The Ball-room at the Château de Coigny. As the curtain rises enter the Major-domo, followed by Servants carrying furniture with which to ornament the rooms. Gerard, in livery, helps other servants to carry in a heavy sofa.)

MAJOR-DOMO: Set the blue sofa down
There, in its place!
(The Major-domo moves on to rooms beyond, leaving Gerard behind, who smoothes the cushions of the couch and dusts the faded silk.)

GERARD: (to the Sofa). You have patiently listened,
As gallant beaux to dames whose charms had ripened,
Their passion here protested!
Here, Corin came to woo,
As he said with a sigh:
"Orynthia! O Chloris! Oh, nymphs with paint bedizened
"To deck your features wizened
"I implore you,
"Have pity upon him who must adore you!"
It is the mode of the moment!
(Gerard's father enters, carrying commosso allontanarsi il padre).

Son sessantanni, o vecchio, che tu servi!
A'tuoi protervi
arroganti signori
hai prodigato fedeltà, sudori, la forza dei tuoi nervi,
l'anima tua, la mente
e—quasi non bastasse la tua vita a renderne infinita eternamente
l'orrenda sofferenza—
hai data l'esistenza dei figli tuoi
Hai figliato dei servi!
(si asciuga sdegnosamente le lagrime. e torna a guardare fieramente intorno a sè la gran serra.)
T'odio, casa dorata!
L'imagin sei d'un secolo incipriato e vano!
Fasti, splendori, orgogli di Re Sole!
Regno di Cortigiane tu, o Reggenza, e dei Lebel onnipotenza
tu, Luigi Lussuria!
O vaghi dami in seta ed in merletti, volgono al fin le gaje vostre giornate
e le serate
a inchini e a minuetti!
Fissa è la vostra sorte!
Razza leggiadra e rea,
figlio di servi e servo,
qui—giudice in livrèa—
ti grido:—È giunta l'ora della

a flower-stand, and as the old man departs by the garden-way, Gerard gazes at him wistfully.)
Full sixty years, oh! my father,
You have served them,
Devoting ever to your arrogant masters
Strength of your manhood, loyally unbounded;
For them your limbs have toiled
They had your brain, your spirit,
And yet, as though your life were not sufficient,
A life of drudgery and toil unending,
Its load of shame and sorrow
Have been (by you) transmitted to your sons! You are a father to slaves!
(Surveying the sumptuous apartment.)
Gilded house, I abhor you!
Of that vain world the image,
As fair, and false and painted!
Pretty ladies, in rich brocade and laces,
Swift advancing,
Dance minuets and gay gavottes
With your modish airs and graces!
Dance! yet your doom awaits you,
Frivolous, infamous gang!
Lackey, and son of a lackey,
Though a menial, yet your judge, I warn you:
The hour of doom is near!
(The Countess, Madeleine, and Bersi appear at back. The Count-

Morte!—
(La contessa, Maddalena e Bersi appajono al di là dell'arco d'ingresso alla serra.—La contessa si sofferma a dare alcuni ordini al Maestro di Casa. Maddalena si avanza lentamente con la Bersi.)

MADDALENA: Il giorno intorno gia s'insera
lentamente!
In queste misteriose
ombre forme fantastiche
assumono le cose!
Or l'anime s'acquetano umanamente!
(Già si anima tutto il castello.—I valletti corono animatamente in su ed in giù apparecchiando le torcie nell'attesa delle slitte.)

CONTESSA: (nervosa, imparte ordini, ora all'uno, ora all'altro.)
Presto avvertite i cori;
ed a tempo opportuno
pastorelle e pastori!
E che non manchi alcuno!
Su, presto, i suonatori in cantoria!
(Il Maestro di Casa annuncia ad alta voce.)

MAESTRO DI CASA: Madama de Bissy e il cavaliere di Villacerf!

CONTESSA: (al cavaliere di Villacerf.) Oh! quanto commifò!
Come elegante
e voi gentil Galante!

MAESTRO DI CASA: La marchesa d'Entragnes e il barone Berwik!

CONTESSA: (al barone) Vera galanteria!

MAESTRO DI CASA: La duchessa di Villemain e il marchese d'Harcout!

CONTESSA: (al marchese) A ben più d'una brama la vostra dama
accender saprà l'esca!

MAESTRO DI CASA: La principessa di Saint-Médard e il conte d'Aubetaire!

CONTESSA: (alla principessa). Mi ricordate
i dì della Reggenza
La Parabère, ecco, mi rassembrate!

MAESTRO DI CASA: Donna Anna da Torcy e don Enrico de Nangis!

CONTESSA: (a don Enrico de Nangis). Quanta munificenza!

MAESTRO DI CASA: La contessa Etiolle d'Etoile e il reverendo Fragmont!

CONTESSA: (alla vecchia dama, colla quale senza inchinarsi si abbracciano, vecchia dama che ha a cavaliere un grosso ecclesiastico). Appariscente e fresca sempre!—Contessa, sempre, sempre la stessa!

MAESTRO DI CASA: La marchesa di Lorge e il conte Fleuri!

ess stops to speak to the Major-domo. Madeleine with Bersi slowly enters.)

MADELEINE: The daylight fades;
And dusk around is gently falling:
Now, in the dim mysterious twilight,
Things take another shape,
Ethereal, fantastic:
Now to weary spirits Nature yields her solace!

COUNTESS: (to her servants).
Hasten to call the singers
And, at the proper time,
The shepherds and the shepherdesses;
See that none are missing;
Hurry! send the musicians up to the stand!

MAJOR-DOMO: Madame de Bissy and Chev. Villacerf!

COUNTESS: Oh, How stylish
And fashionable you are!
A gallant cavalier indeed!
(to Villacerf).

MAJOR-DOMO: The Marquise d'Entragnes and Baron Berwick!

COUNTESS: Vastly gallant, I vow!
(to the Baron).

MAJOR-DOMO: The Duchess of Villemain and the Marquis of Harcourt!

COUNTESS: Oh! take care, my lord Marquis!
Your lady's eyes will surely work fresh havoc! (to the Marquis).

MAJOR-DOMO: The Princess of St. Médard and the Count of Aubetaire!

COUNTESS: You remind me
Of the days under the Regency
And of the beautiful Parabére! (to the Princess).

MAJOR-DOMO: Donna Anna da Torcy and Don Henry de Nangis!

COUNTESS: What a kingly guest!
(to Nangis).

MAJOR-DOMO: The countess d'Etoile and Rev. Fragnont!

COUNTESS: Why, you're as fair and young as ever!
Yes, Countess, just as youthful as ever! (to the old dame).

MAJOR-DOMO: The Marquise of Sorge and Count Fleury!

CONTESSA: (alla bella marchesina, accarezzandole la guancia).
Come siete vezzosa!
Siete un amore!

MAESTRO DI CASA: La baronessa Boisguilbert e l'abate Crècy!

CONTESSA: (all'abate Crècy).
Con voi me ne congratulo
Quale amica! Perfetta!
(alla baronessa).
Sublime! Quanta grazia!
(ad altra dama).
Dotta maestra! Invero è maestria!
Mirabile toeletta!
(Cavalieri e dame si affannano intorno alla Contessa interrogandola:)
Chi avremo? Dite!
Mesmer?
Dugazon?
L'arlecchino Bordier?
Vestri?
Jeannot?

CONTESSA: (misteriosa abbassando la voce). L'Abate!

TUTTI: (con gridi di gioja).
L'Abatino?
(Entrano Fléville, l'Abate e Chénier.)

MAGGIORDOMO: Il cavaliere Anton Pietro Fléville.

FLÉVILLE: Commosso lusingato a tanti complimenti
e a questo, più che omaggio amabil persiflaggio!
Ch'io vi presenti Flandro Fiorinelli, è cavaliere, italiano e musico!
e Andrea Chénier
un che fa versi e che promette molto.
(Maddalena entra).

IL MAGGIORDOMO:
(annuncia). Sua Reverenza
l'Abate
(Le dame a questo annuncio si commuovono, rompono l'ordine fino allora tenuto e rumorosamente, con piccoli gemiti di gioja, attorniano il nuovo personaggio, soffocandolo quasi sotto le cortesie).

LE DAME: L'Abate!
È l'Abate!

I CAVALIERI: È l'Abate!

I MARITI: Finalmente!

LE DAME: Venite da Parigi?

TUTTI: Da Parigi?

LE DAME: Sì?

I CAVALIERI: Dite?

I MARITI: Che novelle della Corte?

LE DAME: Noi siam curiose!

I CAVALIERI: Presto!

TUTTI: Dite! dite!

L'ABATINO: Debole è il Re

COUNTESS: Oh! How sweet and charming;
How lovely you are! (to the Marquise).

MAJOR-DOMO: The Baroness Boisguilbert and the Abbé Crecy!

COUNTESS: I congratulate you;
Your friend is perfectly sweet!
(to the Abbé).
Sublime! How graceful!
(to the Baroness).
Very clever indeed!
You're wonderfully dressed!
(to another lady).
(The hostess is being surrounded by inquisitive guests eagerly questioning her:)
Do tell us who is coming!
Will he be Mesmer?
Or Dugazon?
That harlequin Bordier?
Is he Vestri? or Jeannot?

COUNTESS: (mysteriously, in a whisper). The Abbé!

ALL: (joyously). The little Abbé!

MAJOR-DOMO: Chevalier Antoine Pierre Fléville.
(Enter Fléville, the Abbé, and Chénier.)

FLÉVILLE: Delighted, I assure you,
At this auspicious meeting;
And flattered, vastly flattered,
By such a cordial greeting!
Let me present Fernando Fiorinelli,
A distinguished Italian musician—
André Chénier—writer of verses,
Who so they say, has talent!
(Enter Madeleine).

MAJOR-DOMO: His reverence the Abbé!
(The Ladies leaving their places in confusion rush toward the new comer and eagerly surround him. The Abbe is fairly smothered with courtesies.)

THE LADIES: The Abbé at last!
It is the Abbé.

THE GENTLEMEN: At last!

MADELEINE: So you've just come back from Paris!

CHORUS: From Paris?

THE LADIES: Is it true?

THE GENTLEMEN: Anything new?

COUNTESS: What news at Court, I pray you?

MADELEINE: We are dying to hear,

THE LADIES: Yes, do tell us, please!

CHORUS: Let us hear, quickly!

ABBÉ: The King, alas, is weak!

MARITI: Ha ceduto?

L'ABATINO: Fu male consigliato!

CONTESSA: Necker?

L'ABATINO: Non ne parliamo! (Degusta la marmellata sospirando in atto di suprema affizione.)

TUTTI: Quel Necker!

DAME: Noi moriamo
dalla curiosita!

L'ABATINO: (questa volta attacca risolutamente la marmellata penetrandovi con tutto il cucchiajo.) Abbiamo un Terzo stato!

TUTTI: Oh! Ah! Ah! Oh!
Ma no! Ma no!

L'ABATINO: E ho veduto offender

TUTTI: Chi?

L'ABATINO: La statua di Enrico IV!

TUTTI: Orroe!

DONNE: Dove andremo a finire?

L'ABATINO: Cosi giudico anch'io!

CONTESSA: Non temono più Dio!

L'ABATINO: Assai, madame belle,
sono dolente de le mie novelle

FLÉVILLE: Passiam la sera allegramente!—Della primavera a i zefiri gentili codeste nubi svaniranno! Il sole noi rivedremo e rose a gigli e viole e udrem ne l'aria satura de' fiori l'eco ridir l'egloghe de' pastori—

TUTTI: (a vicenda). O soave bisbiglio!
È il vento!
È zefiro!
È mormorìo di fonte!
È fruscìo d'ali
Bacio è di nubi!
Molce il cuor!
Vallea
veggiamo aprica!
Io, un prato!
Un ruscelletto
ascolto mormorar!
Parlan le fronde!
Sospira un salce!
Querula la canna
di Dafne geme.
Ecco il suo gregge!
Rezzo
divin!

FLÉVILLE: È questo il mio romanzo!

THE GENTLEMAN: Is he yielding?

ABBÉ: He has been ill-advised!

COUNTESS: Ah, Necker!

ABBÉ: (Sadly helping himself to a marmelade.) Let us not speak of him!

CHORUS: That Necker!
We are dying to know; yes, we are!

ABBÉ: (Vigorously attacking the marmelade with his spoon.)
We've now the "Third Estate"!

CHORUS: Oh! Oh! This seems absurd!

ABBÉ: And they've insulted even—

CHORUS: Whom?

ABBÉ: The statue of Henri Quatre!

CHORUS: Oh, horror!

THE LADIES: Gracious! where will it end?

ABBÉ: That's what I'd like to know!

COUNTESS: No fear have they of God!

ABBÉ: Enough, my beauteous ladies:
I am sorry that I only bring bad news
.

FLÉVILLE: What does that matter, my friends?
We'll all be merry;
And before returns the spring-tide,
With light, and scent of flowers,
Dispersed shall be the storm that lowers!
There, on a bank of violets and fragrant roses,
The breeze shall bear to us, on pinion light,
Echoes of song, chants of the merry shepherd!
It is the sigh of the breezes!

ABBÉ: It is the zephyrs!

CHORUS: It is the wind!

FLÉVILLE: It is the murmor of the fountain!

CHORUS: It is the sound of wings!

ABBÉ: I thought I heard the rippling stream!

FLÉVILLE: Behold, my dream comes true!

PASTORELLI: Pastorelli, addio! Ne andiamo verso, ahi! lidi ignoti e strani!
Ahi! sarem lungi dimani!
Questi lochi abbandoniamo!
Non avrà, fino al ritorno, gioje il cuore!
Non piacer fino a quel giorno,
non amore!

PASTORELLI: O pastori, ahi! che dolori agli acerbi vostri detti!
Treman dentro ai nostri petti languidetti i nostri cori!
Ed ahi! ahi! fino al ritorno che cruciori!
Non piacer fino a quel giorno,
non amori!

L'ABATINO: "Il Volpe e l'Uva, favola.
"Un volpe rodomonte—sospinto dalla fame
"sovra alta vite tremula, vermilia
"rama carca di grappoli
"adocchia e cura
"ammalïato.
"Ma oh! come
"tropp' alto pende il pampino!
"E il volpe esclama! Oh, cosa vana
"l'uva immatura!—
"E, sospirando, s'allontana!
"Del volpe chi sa il nome?
"Terzo stato!"

CONTESSA: (si avvicina a Chénier.) Signor Chénier

CHÉNIER: Madama la Contessa?

CONTESSA: La vostra Musa tace?

CHÉNIER: È una ritrosa che di tacer desìa.

CONTESSA: La vostra Musa è la Malinconia!
(à Fléville). Davver poco cortese!

FLÉVILLE: È un po' bizzarro!

ABATINO: Musa ognor pronta è donna a molti vieta!

CONTESSA: Musa ognor pronta! È ver Ecco il poeta!
(Prende il braccio dell'Abatino e con lui si avvicina a Fiorinelli, inducendolo gentilmente al clavicembalo).

MADDALENA: (alle compagne)
Io lo farò poetare! Scommettiamo?
(si avvicina a Chénier).

MADDALENA: Al mio dire perdono ed al mio ardire!
Ma viva bramosia.
mi spinge Poi son donna e son curiosa riosa!
Bramo di udire
un'egloga da voi o una poesia
per monaca o per sposa.

CHORUS: Oh, gentle nymphs, adieu!
We're flying to lands afar.
Oh, hear us, a-sighing!
Heigho! Heigho!
To distant lands we roam
Before tomorrow;
To part with you, alas!
Brings bitter sorrow.
Ah, well-a-day!
Adieu! we must away!

CHORUS: Alas! The bitter pain
In our trembling heart
Now that we must part
Heigho! Heigho!
Until you come back
How it will ache
And our mind will rove
For want of pleasure
And of love!

ABBÉ: A hungry fox was spying
With an envious eye
The sweet ripe grape
Hanging from a high vine
But seeing that it was
So hard to reach it
She went away musing:
It is sour after all!
Now that fox has a name
and it is?—"Third Estate."

COUNTESS: (approaching Chénier).
Monsieur Chénier!

CHÉNIER: Madame, your most obedient!

COUNTESS: Your Muse, in truth, is silent!

CHÉNIER: Aye, for 'tis wayward,
And rather would be dumb!

COUNTESS: Your Muse is Melancholy so it seems:
(to Fléville). Indeed, 'twas scarcely courteous!

FLÉVILLE: He's so eccentric!

ABBÉ: Rare is the dower of ready song, we know it!

COUNTESS: Well said! Behold our poet!
(Takes the Abbé's arm and approaches Fiorinelli, whom she leads to the harpsichord).

MADELEINE: (to her companions.) I'll make him rhyme, I warrant!
Shall we wager?
(approaches Chénier).

MADELEINE: I would pray you to pardon
My seeming boldness;
A woman, as you know,
Is nothing if not curious.
Will you not favor us with something of your own?
Some harmless poem—that might amuse a school-girl?

LE AMICHE: Benissimo!
Per monaca o per sposa!

CHÉNIER: Desio che muove da due labbra rosa
è comando gentile a gentil cuore.
Ma—ohimè—la fantasia
non si piega a comando o a prece umile
è capricciosa assai la poesia
a guisa dell'amore!
(Maddalena e le ragazze ridono.)

CONTESSA: Perchè ridete voi?
Che c' è?
Che c'è?
Che avviene?
Dite!

LE AMICHE: Udite! Udite che il
racconto è bello!
Il poetino è caduto in un tranello.

MADDALENA: A tua preghiera, mamma, disdegnoso opponeva un rifiuto
Allor bizzarro
pensier mi venne

LE AMICHE: È vero
La vendetta!

MADDALENA: Io dissi: Scommettiano?

CONTESSA E TUTTI: Di che cosa?

MADDALENA: Che nel risponder alle preci nostre
volgarmente parlato avria d'amore.

CONTESSA: Ebben?

TUTTI: Ebben?

CHÉNIER: (in atto di preghiera).
No, signorina!

MADDALENA: Ebbene
(imita Chénier).
Levò la fronte al cielo!—
Chiamò la Musa!—E la implorata musa per sua bocca ridisse la parola
che a me voi,
(si rivolge ad un vecchio ridicolo).
voi,
(a un abate).
e voi,
(a un marchese grasso).
e voi, più volte
(a un giovinotto strano per la sua bruttezza).
a me dite ogni sera senza Musa.
(tutti ridono).

CHÉNIER: Colpito qui m'avete ov'io geloso
celo il più puro palpitar dell'anima.
Or vedrete, fanciulla, qual poema.
è la parola "Amore" per voi scherno!
Un dì all'azzurro spazio guardai profondo,
e ai prati colmi di viole, pioveva l'oro il sole
e folgorava d'oro
il mondo;
parea la Terra un immane tesoro,

CHORUS: That might amuse a school-girl!

CHÉNIER: Your request, mademoiselle,
Is a command for me.
Yet, alas! sweet Fancy's coy,
Nor will heed, though commanded,
Or even entreated.
Most capricious is the Muse,
As fanciful as Love!
(Madeleine and her friends burst out laughing).

COUNTESS: What causes all this mirth?

CHORUS: What is it?
Oh, listen, for it is vastly diverting!
He is trapped in a way most disconcerting.

MADELEINE: When your entreaty, mother,
He curtly refused,
I thought I'd try—it was in sport—

CHORUS: Just for mischief!

MADELEINE: I said: Girls, let us wager—

COUNTESS: Wager what, pray?

MADELEINE: That I would make him speak of love!

COUNTESS: Yes—well?

MADELEINE: (mockingly). He summoned the Muse,
And she, the capricious nymph,
Through his lips has discoursed
Of the theme of which to me—
(addressing a ridiculous dotard).
You!
(to an Abbé). And you!
(to a fat Marquis). Ah, yes, and you, too—
(to a singularly ugly youth),
And you, often speak,
Unaided by the Muses!
(General mirth)

CHÉNIER: Your scorn has touched me here,
Where jealously
All the secrets of the soul inviolate are guarded:
You shall know, now, fair maiden,
What a poem lies in that little word
"love,"
By you derided!
I gazed over the blue expanse of heaven unclouded;
Over fields with violets enammelled;
The world around, above me,

e a lei servìa di scrigno il firmamento.
Dal cuore de la Terra a la mia fronte veniva una carezza viva, un bacio.
Gridai, vinto d'amore: T'amo, t'amo
tu che mi baci, tu divinamente
bella, o patria!
E volli pien d'amore
pregar!
Varcai d'una chiesa la soglia;
là un prete ne le nicchie
de'santi e de la Vergine accumulava doni e al sordo orecchic un tremulo vegliardo invano chiedeva pane e invan stendea la mano!
(Sensazione).
Entrai nell'abituro;
un uom vi calunniava bestemmiando il suolo che l'erario a pena sazia e contra a Dio scagliava e contro a li uomini
le lacrime de' figli.
In cotanta miseria
e di cose e di genti—qui la patrizia prole
a che pensa e che fa?
Sol l'occhio vostro esprime umanamente qui un guardo di pietà ond'io ho guardato a voi sì come a ur angelo.
E dissi: Se bugiardo fu il miraggio che mi venne dal sole, eccola la bellezza della vita
nel glauco raggio
soave di pietà che vibra in voi!
Ma, poi,
a le vostre parole,
un novello dolore
m'ha còlto in pieno petto
O giovinetta bella, d'un poeta non disprezzate il detto:
Udite!—Amate pria
e prima di schernir sappiate Amore!
(Indignazione generale).

MADDALENA: (a Chénier). Perdonatemi!

CONTESSA: Creatura strana assai!
Va perdonata!
È capricciosa e un po' romantichetta.
Ma udite! È il gajo suon de la gavotta.
Su, cavalieri!—Ognun scelga la dama!
(Mentre i servi fanno posto e i cavalieri e le dame si preparano, lontanissime, si sentono venire avvicinandosi confuse cantilene).

In glimmering golden glory was shrouded;
The spacious earth seemed as one mighty gem
Enclosed within her casket, the boundless heaven!
Softly from earth, to me as a greeting,
There floated upon the wanton breezes a caress!
Then, in a transport I cried:
Ah! I love you, my country,
Divine in all your beauty, oh land,
mine own!
By Love inspired, I sought to pray;
Swift through a church-door then I passed:
A priest collected offerings for the Virgin,
By all the faithful given; yet never heeded
Nor heard its piteous pleading
Of one poor aged beggar,
With hands held out in vain!
(Sensation).
And then I entered a workman's hut,
Where one in desperation loudly
cursed his country;
He cursed his rich employers;
To God above in fury,
And unto men he hurled them,
His children's bitter tears!
Ah! ye pampered patricians,
How do you right all this wrong?
It was in your eyes alone,
Oh, lovely maiden, that gentle pity seemed to dwell,
And so I turned to you, as to an angel fair, and said
'Love is shining from out those beauteous eyes!"
But when, as in scorn you address
me,
It was then that my heart by grief
anew was shaken!
Believe me, beauteous maiden—
Do not despise—the word of a poet!
Oh, Listen! you know nothing of love!
Hear me—Love is divine;
Spare it your scorn!
The flame that lights the universe,
Is Love!
(General indignation.)

MADELEINE: (to Chénier). I pray you, pardon me!

COUNTESS: (to he Guests) She's such a flighty girl!
(to Madeleine).
There, I forgive you!
She's so capricious!
Inclined to be romantic:
But listen! The merry sound of the gavotte!
Now, cavaliers, pray choose your partners!
(As the dance is about to begin, a dismal sound of chanting is heard without. Gerard appears at the head of a group of ragged beggars.)

LE VOCI: (si avviciano.—Sono lugubremente dolorose, gemiti che risuonano cupi e minacciosi).
La notte e il giorno portiamo intorno
il dolore;—
Siam genti grame
che di fame
or si muore;—
A mammelle avvizzite chieggon le vite
de'bimbi moribondi!
Affamati, languenti cadiam morenti
sovra suoli infecondi!
(All'arco d'ingresso della serra appare Gérard alla testa di una folla di gente stracciata).

GÉRARD: (imitando il maggiordomo). È Sua Grandezza la Miseria!
(mentre quegli straccioni, lamentosamente stendendo le mani, susurrano:)
Anime umane,
deh, le nostre preghiere
non ci tornino vane!
Genti cristiane,
sollievo a queste fiere
torture aspre, inumane!

CONTESSA: (livida dall'ira). Chi ha introdotto costoro?

GÉRARD: Io, Gérard!

CONTESSA: (ai suoi valletti, lacchè). Questa ciurmaglia via!
(a Gérard).
E tu pel primo!

GÉRARD: Sì, me ne vo—Contessa!
questa livrea—m'è di tortura;
è vile per me il pane
che qui mi sfama!
La voce di chi soffre a sè mi chiama!
Vien, padre mio, con me!
(al padre che intercede).
Perchè ti curvi ai piè
di chi non ode voce di pietà?
(poi, strappandosi la livrea di dosso, grida:)
Dalle mie carni via questa viltà

CONTESSA: (imbizzita). Via! Via! Via!
(Il Maestro di Casa, i servi, i lacchè gli staffieri, respingono la folla.—La Contessa si lascia cadere sul sofà ansante dalla bile).
Ah! quel Gérard! L'ha rovinato il leggere!
Credetemi Fu l'Enciclopedia!
Ed io che tutti i giorni facevo l'elemosina
e a non fare arrossire di sé la povertà perfin m'ho fatto un abito costume di pietà!
(al Maestro di Casa che torna).
Son tutti andati?

MAESTRO DI CASA: Sì.

CHORUS OF PAUPERS: Each day, each morrow,
Brings woe and sorrow;
For bread we're crying;
Our children are dying.
We're starving! Will no one hear us calling?
Oh, save us from famine appalling!

GERARD: (mimicking the pompous Major-domo). His Serene Highness, Prince Poverty!

COUNTESS: (angrily). Who admitted those beggars?

GERARD: I did, Gerard!

COUNTESS: Out! drive the rabble out!
And go you first!

GERARD: Yes, I'll be gone, my lady!
I'll be rid of this hateful livery
That I loathe and detest!
Your bread, your food, it chokes me,
While round me all my fellow-men are starving!
(to his father, who intercedes).
Come, father, come with me!
Why do you bend the knee to them,
Since pity dwells not in their hearts!
(stripping off his livery).
Off with this vile livery!
Off accursed badge!
(The footmen eject the beggars and Gerard is hustled out).

COUNTESS: (as she sinks prostrate upon a couch).
Oh! that Gerard!
Reading has ruined him!
To me, of all people!
I who daily give to the poor!
Through regard for their feelings,
When I supply their needs,
I wear a modest gown, designed
For charitable deeds!
(to the Major-domo.)
They have all gone, then?

MAJOR-DOMO: Yes, my lady!

CONTESSA: (agli invitati) Scusate! L'interrotta, mie dame, ripigliamo, gentil, nobil gavotta
Invitate le dame!
Ritorni l'allegria!

CALA LA TELA.

QUADRO II

(Parigi in un giorno del Giugno 1794, col Caffè Hottot e la Loggia dei Fogliantisti. A dritta un altare dedicato a Marat con su un busto diquesti. Dietro la, "Cours-la-Reine" e il ponte Perronet sulla Senna. Chénier seduto solo ad una tavola. Mathieu "Populus" indica ad Orazio Coclite il busto di Marat che egli ha tolto dall'altare e ripulisce, a sferzate energiche di fazzoletto, dalla polvere).

MATHIEU: Per l'ex inferno!
ecco ancor della polvere
sul capo di Marat!
(strizza l'occhio all'amico e accenna alla Bersi seduta con la Spia.)
Che ci covasse scherno?
Ah, troppo spesso
da un poco sgualdrineggiano
quelle donnine là!
E male! male! male!
Benedetto, o Rasojo nazionale!
Tu sol, tu solo non risenti il sesso!
(Entrano degli strilloni. Mathieu compra un giornale, ma si accorge che è vecchio.)
M'ha appioppato un giornale di cinque mesi fa!

BERSI: (all'Incredibile.) È ver che Robespierre allevi spie?

L'INCREDIBILE: Vuoi dire, cittadina "Osservatori dello spirito pubblico"

BERSI: Come tu vuoi.

L'INCREDIBILE: Non so,
nè lo posso sapere!
Hai tu a temere?

BERSI: Temer? Perchè? Perchè temer dovrò?
Non sono, come te, una vera figlia autentica della Rivoluzione?
Amo viver così! Vivere in fretta di questa febbre gaja d'un godere rapido, acuto e quasi inconsciente!
Qui il giuoco ed il piacere là la morte!
Qui il suon de le monete e il biribisso!
Laggiù il cannone e il rullo de'tamburi!
Qui inebria il vino laggiù inebria il sangue
Qui riso e amore;
là si pensa e s'odia!
Qui la Meravigliosa e l'Incredibile
che brindan col Bordeaux, collo Sciampagna;

COUNTESS: (to her guests). Excuse me, ladies fair!
Our gavotte, by your leave, let us finish.
Now mirth once more shall reign!

CURTAIN.

ACT II

(The Scene shows us Paris on a day in June, 1794, with the Café Hottot and the Terrasse des Feuillants. To the right an altar dedicated to Marat, on which stands his bust. At the back, the 'Cours la Reine' and the Peronnet Bridge across the Seine. At one of the tables Chénier is seated alone. Mathieu and Horace are arranging the altar, and Mathieu is dusting Marat's bust with a handkerchief. Bersi and the Spy are seen at one of the tables.)

MATHIEU: By all that's infernal!
There's still such a heap of dust on the had of Marat!
(Newsboys enter and Mathieu buys a paper. Soon he discovers that it is an old one.)
Why, he's sold me a paper that's fully five months old!

BERSI: (to the Spy). Is it true that Robespierre has chartered spies?

SPY: Not ‘spies‘ my worthy citizen;
‘Observers of the temper of the public!‘

BERSI: As you will!

SPY: I know not;
Indeed, why do you ask me?
Are you afraid, then?

BERSI: Afraid? Not I!
What cause have I to fear?
Am I not, like yourself, a true and loyal child
Of the glorious Revolution?
No life but this for me!
Swift as a whirlwind, borne ever onward
Down the tide of pleasure;
Never a pause to think;
Not a moment of leisure;
Here, gambling, song, and laughter;
And yonder, death!
Here, chink of golden louis and rattle of dice-box;
There, boom of cannon, rolling of the drum!
Here, wine intoxicates;
Down there, they're drunk with

(Verso l'ex Cours-la-Reine di dove sbocca il "piccolo paniere" carico di condannati condotti alla ghigliottina.)
le mercatine là e le pescivendole
e la carretta di Sanson che passa!
(esce.)

L'INCREDIBILE: No, non m'inganno! Era proprio con lei la bella bionda! Ho scovato la traccia!
(estrae di tasca un piccolo taccuino e vi scrive su rapidamente:)
La cittadina Bersi, far sospetto di corruzione non spontanea;
guardò Chénier di sottecchi. Osservarla!
Andrea Chénier per qualche ora in attesa con febbril ansia evidente. Osservarlo!
(esce.)
(Roucher entra dal Cours-la-Reine.)

CHÉNIER: (vedendolo). Roucher!

ROUCHER: Chénier! Tutto il giorno ti cerco!
La tua salvezza tengo!

CHÉNIER: Un passaporto?

ROUCHER: Qui tutto intorno è periglio per te!
La tua preziosa vita salva—parti!

CHÉNIER: Il mio nome mentir! Fuggire! No!

ROUCHER: Te ne prego, Chénier!

CHÉNIER: Credi al destino? Io credo! Credo a una possanze arcana che benigna o maligna i nostri passi or guida or svia pei diversi sentieri de l'esistenza umana!—Una possanza che dice a un uomo:—Tu sarai poeta!
A un altro:—A te una spada, sii soldato!
Or bene, il mio destin forse qui vuolmi!
Se quel che bramo mi si avvera, resto!

ROUCHER: Se non si avvera?

CHÉNIER: Allora partirò!
Seguo il destino umano dell'amore.
Io non ho amato ancor!
Pure sovente—nella vita ho sentita
sul mio cammin vicina
passar la donna che il destin fa mia; passare tutta bella—ideal, divina
come la poesia;
passar con lei sul mio cammin
l'amor!
Si più volte ha parlato
la sua voce al mio cuore;
udita io l'ho sovente

blood!
Here, smiles and friendship; there, undying hate!
While here we quaff our brimming bumper of champagne,
Out in the market, there,
Folk sell their fish and fruit—
Meanwhile the headsman's cart goes past!
(The death-cart passes, followed by an excited crowd.)
(Exit.)

SPY: (aside). I'm not mistaken!
It was with her I saw the blonde-haired beauty!
Now I've discovered the clue!
(writing in his book.)
'Citoyenne Bersi rouses suspicion
Of conduct one may call seditious.
She gave Chénier such a sly glance
Watch her closely!
André Chénier has waited here several hours,
No doubt for some important message.
Watch him closely!'
(Exit).
(Roucher enters from the Cours la Reine.)

CHÉNIER: (seeing Roucher). Roucher!

ROUCHER: Chénier!
All day long have I looked for you!
Here I have it! your safeguard!

CHÉNIER: Ah! It's a passport!

ROUCHER: On every side there is danger for you;
Ah! Save your life; It is precious; flee!

CHÉNIER: What? Escape like a coward?
Not I!

ROUCHER: Nay, hear me, Chénier!

CHÉNIER: No! No!
Do you believe in Fate, as I do?
I have faith in a secret power
That guides the steps of mortals,
For good, or else for ill,
Along the devious pathways of existence.
It is this that says to one man: 'Be a poet!'
And to another: 'Wield the soldier's sword!'
Maybe Fate bids me to stay here!
If what I long for comes to pass, I'll stay.

ROUCHER: If not, what then?

CHÉNIER: Why, then, my friend, I'll go!
The destiny that guides me is none other than Love.
I never yet have loved!
Though the bright presence long-desired
Of beauteous lady hath my life inspired;
Of one alone
That fate shall make mine own!
Ideal divine; star of my stormy sea;
With her, then life were Paradise for me!

con la sua voce ardente
dirmi: "Credi all'amore;
tu sei Chénier, amato!
(e preso sottobraccio Roucher la allontana dal caffè Hottot, narrandogli confidenzialmente.)
Da tempo mi pervengon strane lettere or soavi ed or gravi—or rampogne, or consigli!
Scrive una donna misteriosa ognora!
In quelle sue parole vibra un'anima!
Chi sia, indagato ho invano!

ROUCHER: Ancor?

CHÉNIER: Finora! Ma or guarda!

ROUCHER: (legge). Qui un ritrovo?

CHÉNIER: Ah! la vedrò!

ROUCHER: La misteriosa alfin solleva il velo!

CHÉNIER: Non ridere!

ROUCHER: Vediam!
Calligrafia
invero femminil! Carta elegante!
Ma, ohimè! profumo "alla Rivoluzione!!"
Questo gentil biglietto,
a profumo di rosa,
provocatore,
non m'inganno, io giuro,
esce da un salottino
troppo noto all'amore:
Chénier, te l'assicuro,
il tuo destino
ti ha dato il cuor d'una Meravigliosa
Riprendi il passaporto e via la lettera.

CHÉNIER: Non credo!

ROUCHER: Tu non credi?

CHÉNIER: No, non credo!

ROUCHER: Le femminil marea parigina in gaje onde irrequiete or qui rovescia!
Io le conosco tutte! Passeranno, ed io ti mostrerò la misteriosa!

CHÉNIER: (colpito). Una Meravigliosa la bella creatura
del mio pensier sognata?!
Non donna, ma

ROUCHER: una cosa.

CHÉNIER: Una caricatura?!
Una moda?!

ROUCHER: Una faccia imbellettata!

CHÉNIER: La sconosciuta mia?

ROUCHER: La tua divina
soave poesia

Often in my dreams,
Like some strange haunting melody
Her voice from out the midnight
Calls me in tones enchanting,
And murmurs: 'Love is divine!'
'Chénier, at last it's you!'
For long while past,
I've received strange letters;
Sometimes charming,
Or alarming,
To reprove me or to warn me!
It is a woman writes
In such strange fashion;
Her words upon the page
They glow with passion;
Vainly I sought to find her.

ROUCHER: Vainly, did you say?

CHÉNIER: Until now,
But see here!

ROUCHER: A rendezvous?

CHÉNIER: At last I shall meet her!

ROUCHER: The mysterious woman unveils?

CHÉNIER: Why do you laugh?

ROUCHER: Let me see!
(looking at letter).
Yes, it's indeed a thorough woman's hand!
Choicest of paper!
But oh! the perfume reeks of Revolution!
This little dainty letter,
With its perfume designed to fetter the senses,
Chénier, I swear it, believe me
It comes from a salon noted
For the cult of the tender passion.
The Fate you trust rewards you with the heart
Of some fine dame of fashion!
Come! Take your passport; fling aside the letter!

CHÉNIER: I doubt you!

ROUCHER: Do you?

CHÉNIER: Rather!

ROUCHER: The modish dames of Paris
By way of diversion, frequent this café;
I know them all by sight; and as they pass
To you will I point out your most mysterious fair!

CHÉNIER: (in amazement). Some fine lady of fashion,
She, the beautiful being divine
Of whom I dreamed?
Not a woman, but—

ROUCHER: A mere thing.

CHÉNIER: Just a caricature or a fashion plate?

ROUCHER: A painted face.

CHÉNIER: That of my unknown Dame?

ROUCHER: The beauteous lady that your life inspired Wears a Bastille Foulard.

CHÉNIER: in fisciù a la Bastiglia! ed il nero alle ciglia?!	CHÉNIER: And has darkened lashes?
ROUCHER: e con rimesse chiome!	ROUCHER: And hair all crimpled.
CHÉNIER: Oh, cosa senza nome! Accetto il passaporto!	CHÉNIER: Oh! the nameless thing! Here! Give me the passport!
ROUCHER: É provvido consiglio! Vedi? al ponte Peronnet s'agglomera la folla.	ROUCHER: Aye, take my good advice! See how yonder, by the bridge, A surging mob assembles.
CHÉNIER: La eterna cortigiana! Vi si schiera per incurvar la fronte al nuovo iddio!	CHÉNIER: The eternal courtesan Bending low, in abject adoration To their new idol.
MATHIEU: Evviva Robespierre!	MATHIEU: Long live Robespierre!
CHÉNIER: (accennando a Robespierre). Egli cammina solo.	CHÉNIER: (pointing to Robespierre). He goes alone.
ROUCHER: E quanto spazio ad arte fra il nume e i sacerdoti! Ecco Tallien!	ROUCHER: And what gulf between idol and adorers! Here comes Gallien
CHÉNIER: L'enigma!	CHÉNIER: The sphynx.
ROUCHER: Ultimo, vedi?	ROUCHER: And Robespierre's brother Comes last.
CHÉNIER: (ironico). Robespierre il piccolo!	CHÉNIER: (ironical). A little Robespierre. (Enter Gerard.)
LA FOLLA: Ecco laggiù Gérard! Gérard! Viva Gérard! (Entra Gérard.) (entra Robespierre). Evviva Robespiere! Barère! Collot d'Herbois! Quello è Couthon! Saint-Just! David. Tallien! Fréron! Barras! GÉRARD: Azzurro occhio di cielo sotta una fronte candida: bionda la chioma con riflessi d'oro una dolcezza in viso ed un sorriso di donna non umano; nel suo vestir modesto; pudico velo sovra il tesoro d'un puro sen virgineo ed una bianca cuffia sulla testa. —Dammi codesta creatura vaga! ti dissi—Cerca! Indaga! Dinanzi mi è passata qual baleno un di, ma poscia io l'ho perduta! Io piu non vivo; peno! Mi salva tu da questa grande angoscia e tutto avrai!	GERARD: Her eyes are blue as the heavens; Her beauteous brow whiter than snow And all her hair more bright than burnished gold; The sweetest of all faces; Her smile has graces Entrancing to behold; Most neat her dress and simple; She wears a wimple, White, yet not whiter than her bosom sweet; It shrouds her head, and meets at her waist, Find me this lovely maid that I adore; I pray you search, explore! Before my gaze she flashed Like a flame in the night; But now that I have lost her, Life is void of delight! If you can save me from this torture, Then all is yours!
L'INCREDIBILE: Stasera la vedrai!	SPY: This evening you shall see her!
ROUCHER: (a Chénier). Eccole! Strani tempi! Là vanno i pensatori. Qui lo stormo chiassoso, di que' vivi bagliori. Tu presso a me ti poni! Di qui facile cosa sarà scoprir chi sia la tua misterïosa!	ROUCHER: Here they come! Strange times, indeed! First march the careworn thinkers, Then the seekers of pleasure! And now, as they pass by us, We'll mark your dame mysterious.
CHÉNIER: Partiamo!	CHÉNIER: Let us depart.
ROUCHER: Guarda! Guarda!	ROUCHER: Now just look there!
CHÉNIER: No! non voglio: partiamo!	CHÉNIER: No. Let's go.
BERSI: (a Roucher). Non mi saluti? (Rapidamente gli susurra.) Qui trattien Chénier. Son spiata! qui fra poco tornerò!	BERSI: (to Roucher). Won't you salute me? (In a rapid whisper.) Beware! Keep Chénier here! I'm being watched!
L'INCREDIBILE: Procace Bersi, qui sono ancor per te! Meco giù scendi?	SPY: My good friend, Bersi, I'm at your service, now; Shall we go in, then?
BERSI: (sorridendogli indifferente). Per poco?	BERSI: If you like.
L'INCREDIBILE: Non ti chiedo che una Trenitz.	SPY: I should like some light refreshment.
BERSI: E perchè no?
L'INCREDIBILE: Scendiam?
BERSI: Scendiam! (Scendono nei sotterranei del Caffè.)	BERSI: So should I! Let's go! (They enter the café.)

	MADELEINE: Do you remember?
	CHÉNIER: Yes–I remember!
MADDALENA: Ancor ricordi?Ascolta! (e Maddalena, per richiamarglisi allamente, gli ricorda le parole che Chénier le ha rivolto la sera del loro incontro al castello di Coigny.)	MADELEINE: (repeating his words addressed to her once at Coigny). 'You know nothing of Love! 'Hear me–Love is divine; 'Spare it your scorn!'
CHÉNIER: Sì: mi ricordo! Udita io ti ho di già! Ah nuova la tua voce non mi parla. Ch'io ti vegga!	CHÉNIER: Where have I heard that strange, sweet voice? Let me see you!
MADDALENA: Guardatemi!	MADELEINE: Behold my face!
CHÉNIER: Ah, Maddalena di Coigny!	CHÉNIER: Ah! Madeleine de Coigny! You!
L'INCREDIBILE: Ah è lei! La bionda! Or tosto da Gérard! (e cautamente si allontana).	SPY: (aside). It is she! the blonde! Now I'll inform Gerard! (Exit.)
CHÉNIER: Voi? Voi!
MADDALENA: (atterrsas). Guardate là!
CHÉNIER: Dove?
MADDALENA: Là! Un'ombra!	MADELEINE: (terror-struck). See yonder there! A phantom!
CHÉNIER: (va all'angolo dove prima era l'incredibile, ma non vede alcuno). Nessun! Pur questo loco è periglioso E qui sola	CHÉNIER: There's no one! And yet this place is one of peril!
MADDALENA: Fu Bersi che l'ha scelto. Or essa è là, giù, al giuoco e se un periglio ne minacciasse Sono un'officiosa che le viene a recar la sua mantiglia!	MADELEINE: It was Bersi chose it; But if danger now should threaten I'll play the serving-maid Who's brought a mantle for her mistress.
CHÉNIER: La mia scrittrice? Voi la mia celata amica ognor fuggente?!	CHÉNIER: You, my fair scribe? Was it you the friend so long unknown, And lost so long?
MADDALENA: Eravate possente, io invece minacciata;— pur nella mia tristezza pensai sovente d'impetrar da voi pace e salvezza, ma non l'osai! E ognora il mio destino sul mio cammino vi sospingea! Ognora io vi seguivo, e strano assai, ognor pensavo a voi come a un fratello!— E allora vi scriveva quanto il cuore o il cervello dettavami alla mente. Sì, il cuore mi diceva che difeso avreste quella che v'ha un giorno offeso. Al mondo Bersi sola mi vuol bene (è lei che m'ha nascosta). Ma da une mese v'ha chi mi spia e m'insegue. E Bersi pure! Mutammo nascondiglio, e più veemente era la caccia!Ove fuggir?Fu allora che pure voi non più potente seppi, e son venuta.—Udite! Sono sola! Son sola e minacciata! Io più non reggo! Son sola al mondo! Sola ed ho paura lo spero in voi! Proteggermi volete?	MADELEINE: In the day of your power By peril grave was I threatened; Yet often in my sadness I fondly hoped to gain, through you, Safety and gladness. I dared not, then; but not it is Fate's decree That thrown together we should be. Hope had I no other; My trust I gave to you– Gave, as to a brother. Then, letters I wrote you often, By heart or brain dictated, In days and hours ill-fated. I knew your loyal heart Would have nobly requited Her who long since your genius slighted. In all the world no friend have I but Bersi; (It was she who helped to hide me!) But now for a month by spies am I hunted; How to escape? Then came the news that you had fallen from power; To you I come! Ah! Hear me! I'm alone, beset by danger; All helpers fail me, Dark fears assail me, Oh! say, will you protect me? In you I trust!

QUADRO III

(L'aula del Tribunale rivoluzionario, Accanto a un'urna colossale su'l banco della presidenza Mathieu arringa la folla e sollecita contribuzioni).

MATHIEU: Dumouriez traditore
(muoja presto!)
è passato ai nemici (il furfantaccio!);—
Coburgo, Brunswick (Pitt crepi di peste!)
e il vecchio lupanare dell'Europa tutta, contro ci stanno! Oro e soldati!
Onde quest'urna ed io che parlo a voi rappresentiam l'imagin della patria!
(Un gran silenzio accoglie il discorso di Mathieu, però nessuno va ad ofrire).
Nessun si muove? Che la ghigliottina ripassi a ognun la testa e la coscienza!
(Alcuni, pochi, vanno e gittano nella grande urna oggetti e denari. Mathieu riprende).
È la patria in periglio! A Nostra Donna il vessil nero sventola! Io pure or, come già Barère, io levo il grido di Louverture: Liberta' e patate!
(vedendo sopraggiungere Gérard)
Ma, to' laggiù à Gérard! Convalescente appena accorre ove il dover lo chiama.
Ei vi trarrà di tasca gli ex luigi con paroline ch'io non so M'infischio
io de'bei motti Ed anche me ne vanto!

TUTTI: Cittadino Gérard, salute!
Evviva!

MATHIEU: La tua ferita?

GÉRARD: Grazie, cittandini!
La forte fibra mia m'ha conservato alla mia patria ancora!

MATHIEU: (indicandogli l'urna). Ecco il tuo posto!
(poscia sempre colla sua voce monotona accennando al drappo si rivolge al pubblico ripetendo).
È la patria in pe
(ma, accortosi che la pipa gli si è spenta, conclude indicando Gérard).
Cedo la parola.

GÉRARD: (con vero accento di dolore). Lacrime e sangue dà la Francia! Udite!
Laudun ha inalberato vessillo bianco!
È in fiamme la Vandea!
E la Bretagna ognora ne minaccia!
E Austriaci, e Prussiani, e Inglesi, e tutti
nel petto della Francia

ACT III

(The Court of the Revolutionary Tribunal. On the President's table a colossal urn, near which stands Mathieu, haranguing the crowd, and inviting contributions.)

MATHIEU: Dumouriez the traitor, the villain,
Has gone over to the enemy! (lying scoundrel!)
Coburg and Brunswick,
(Pitt, the devil take him!)
That ancient lupanar called Europe,
All are in arms against us!
Money and soldiers! That's what we need.
This urn and I we're pleading now today
For funds to help our country!
(Profound silence; yet no one contributes.)
Will none come forward?
Then may the guillotine make short work of you all!
(Some advance and throw contributions into the urn.)
Our country's in danger!
Barére, he's told you so,
And to my cry now listen all: penny?'
(As Gerard approaches.)
But here's our worthy Gerard!
Maybe he'll draw the money from your pockets
With words that I could never find.
A plague on pretty speeches!
They're not my style at all!

CHORUS: To our worthy Gerard welcome and greeting!

MATHIEU: Your wound is better?

GERARD: Thank you, fellow-citizens: my constitution's sound;
This has saved me yet to serve my country.

MATHIEU: (to Gerard). Your place is there.
(Drawling out once more:) And the country's in– (Finding that his pipe is out and stopping short.)
(to Gerard.)
Speak to them yourself!

GERARD: Citizens!
France now sheds her tears of blood!
Loudun the white flag has hoisted;
La Vendée is in flames; Brittany threatens us;
While Austria, Prussia, England–all Europe
With vast and mighty armies
Now strives to crush our Father-gli artigli armati affondano!

Occorre e l'oro, il sangue!
L'inutil oro e gemma ai vostri vezzi,
donne francesi, date!
Donate i vostri figli alla gran madre,
o voi, madri francesi!

LE DONNE: (commosse, gittano dentro tutto quanto hanno in dosso di denaro o d'ornamento).
Prendi! È un ricordo!
A te! un anello!
È un braccialetto!
Otto dì di lavoro!
Una fibbia d'argento!
Quanto posseggo!
Son due bottoni d'oro!
(S'avanza una vecchia cieca con un giovinetto guindicenne).

LA VECCHIA: Fatemi largo, fatemi!
Son la vecchia Madelon; mio figlio è morto;
avea nome Roger; morì alla presa della Bastiglia; il primo figlio suo ebbe a Valmy galloni e sepoltura.
Ancora pochi giorni, e io pur morrò.
È il figlio di Roger! L'ultimo figlio, l'ultima goccia del mio vecchio sangue
Prendetelo!
Non dite che è un fanciullo!
È forte! Può combattere e morire!

GÉRARD: Noi l'accettiamo! Dinne il nome suo?

LA VECCHIA: Roger Alberto.

GÉRARD: A sera partirà!
(allora la vecchia abbraccia forte il fanciullo che la bacia).

LA VECCHIA: Prendetemelo via!
Chi mi dà il braccio?
(Brancola intorno per un appoggio e vien condotta fuori).

CORO: (ballando al suona della Carmagnola)
Amici, orsù! Beviam! Danziam ognor
Colmo bicchier—Allieta il cor!
Cantare e ber!
Viva la libertà!
Danziam la Carmagnola
al tuon, al suon—del cannon!
(L'Incredibile si avvicina a Gérard).

L'INCREDIBILE: L'uccello è nella rete!

GÉRARD: Lei?!

L'INCREDIBILE: No; il maschio.
È al Lussemburgo!

GÉRARD: Quando?

L'INCREDIBILE: Stamattina.

GÉRARD: E come?

L'INCREDIBILE: Il caso!

land!
She needs your gold, your blood!
The useless gold on all your trinkets,
Women of France, now give!
And give your stalwart sons to the Great Mother,
Mothers of France!
(The women fling coin and trinkets into the urn.)

THE WOMEN: Take them! They're my earrings!
And this! Here's my bracelet!
My brooch! And here's my last week's wages!
Here's an old silver buckle!
And here are two gold buttons!
Here's all I possess!
Here's my little cross!
(And old blind woman advances with a lad of fifteen.)

OLD WOMAN: Make way, there!
I am old Madelon!
My son is dead; his name was Roger;
He was killed at the siege of the Bastille.
His eldest boy, who fought at Valmy,
Promotion won, yet perished.
It is but a little while and I shall die!
Here I've brought you Roger's son,
The youngest, the last;
He's all I live for; he is all I love!
Take him! Don't say he's but a child!
He's strong, though, and for France can fight and die!

GERARD: Yes we'll accept him.
What is his name?

OLD WOMAN: Albert Roger!

GERARD: He'll be sent away tonight.

OLD WOMAN: (as she tearfully bids the lad good-bye.) Darling, good-bye!
Take my darling boy!
Who will give me an arm?
(Groping for support, she is led out.)

CHORUS: (as they dance to the tune of the Carmagnole). Come dance and drink, good friends, today;
With song and wine drive care away!
The flagon fill that cheers the heart,
And bids all sorrow swift depart.
Drink, then, to Freedom's cause!
Dow with the despot's laws!
We'll dance the Carmagnole,
Though loud the cannon roar!

SPY: (approaching Gerard). The bird is in the snare!

GERARD: She?

SPY: No, the man!
He's at the Luxembourg.

GERARD: Since when?

SPY: Since this morning.

GERARD: Why, how's that?

SPY: A mere chance!

GÉRARD: Dove?

L'INCREDIBILE: Là a Passy, presso a un amico.

GÉRARD: E lei?

L'INCREDIBILE: Nessuna traccia!
Ma tal richiamo è il maschio per la femmina che volontariamente (penso e credo!)
essa a noi ne verrà.

GÉRARD: No; non verrà!
(Lontano un gridio acuto e confuso da ogni parte.)

L'INCREDIBILE: Ascolta!

GÉRARD: Grida son
Monelli aizzati.

L'INCREDIBILE: No; i soliti strilloni!
(Passa—e lo si vede dall'arco di ingresso della sezione—venendo dalla via di destra—une strillone che urla a tutta gola:)
L'arresto importantissimo d'Andrea Chénier, nemico della patria!

L'INCREDIBILE: Queste grida arriveranno a lei!

GÉRARD: Va, tentatore!
E poscia?Ebben?

L'INCREDIBILE: Donnina innamorata che d'aspettar s'annoja, se è già passata
l'ora e il perchè non sa di quel ritardo del suo amico al nido, sfido! (e ch' io muoja!)
se la bella presaga
all'ansia vinta non ti discende ratta per la via così, com'è, discinta!
Esce correndo E indaga!
E vola! E scruta! E spia!
To'! passa uno strillone? E vocia un nome?
Oh, come tutta impàllida!
Ma non vacilla o china!
Possanza dell'amor!
In quel dolor
cessa la donna ed eccola eroina!
Tutto oserà!
Laonde, per mia scienza
tu la vedrai! Pazienza!
Sì, a te verrà!
Sì; questo è il mio pensiero un po'incredibil, ma altrettanto vero!

MADDELENA: (entrando). Carlo Gérard?

MATHIEU: Sì; c'è!—Entra!—Sta là!

MADDELENA: (con voce tremante). Se ancor vi sovvenite di me, non so!
Son Maddalena di Coigny.
Ah, non m'allontanate! Deh, mi udite!

GERARD: Where was he?

SPY: At Passy, at his friend's.

GERARD: And she?

SPY: As yet, no trace of her;
But for the 'she' the 'he' has such attraction,
That, if I'm not mistaken,
She'll come back of her own accord.

GERARD: Nay, she'll not come!
(Cries heard without.)

SPY: Do you hear the street-lads selling papers?
(Boys passes shouting out, 'Arrest of André Chénier!')
That cry is bound to reach her ears!

GERARD: What of that?

SPY: When a love-sick dame, complaining,
Awaits her laggard lover,
And trysting-time is over,
What resource has she remaining?
Alarmed and most dejected
To find herself neglected,
If love won't bind him,
She'll go herself and try to find him!
Swift through the streets she's flying,
And watching, waiting, prying–
Ha! There's a newsboy bawling;
What's that he's calling?
What name? Oh, Heaven, his name!
Endowed with stoic courage,
By Love's tremendous power,
In grief's dark hour,
Weak woman gains a fortitude heroic!
For Love she would risk all!
Mark what I say; it's true.
Patience! She'll come to you
Before the fall of night.
It sounds unlikely; but I'm right!

MADELEINE: (entering.) Can I see Charles Gerard?

MATHIEU: Here, this way, please!

MADELEINE: Maybe you remember me no longer?
Who knows! I'm Madeleine de Coigny!
Ah! Do not drive me away!
Since, if you will not hear me, I am lost!

GÉRARD: Io t'aspettava! Io ti voleva qui!
Io son che come veltri ho a te lanciato
ordre di spie!
Entro a tutte le vie
la mia pupilla è penetrata
e ad ogni istante!
Io, per averti qui, preso ho il tuo amante!

MADDELENA: A voi!—Qui sto!
Signore, vendicatevi!

GÉRARD: Non odio!

MADDELENA: Vendicatevi! Son l'ultima
del nome mio!

GÉRARD: Non odio!

MADDELENA: Perchè, dunque, m'avete qui voluta?

GÉRARD: Perchè ciò è scritto nella vita mia!
Perchè ciò è scritto nella vita tua!
Perchè ciò volle il mio voler possente!
Era fatale, e, vedi, s'è avverato!
Io l'ho voluto allora
che tu piccina
giù pel gran prato
con me correvi lieta in quell'aroma d'erbi infiorate e di selvaggie rose!
e poi lo volli il dì che mi fu detto:
"Ecco la tua livrea!"—e, come fu lasera,
entre tu studïavi il minuetto,
Io, gallonato e muto,
aprivo o rinchiudevo una portiera
Ah, poscia un'altra sera io l'ho voluto!
Fu quella sera allor che dentrol all'anima mi venne il gran disio di farti mia.
Per te sognavo il genio! Ma, ironia!
sovra altra fronte già splendea: Chénier!
Ed il destin che trama le commedie de le diverse vite, quasi a prologo quella sera ci unìa! Vidi il tuo amore!
Innamorato e odiando son fuggito!
e poscia no non m'ha Chénier ferito
ma il grido tuo d'orrore, il tuo: Gérard!
Pure anche allora, e sempre, t'ho voluta!
La poesia in te cosi gentile,
di me fa invece un pazzo grande e vile!
Ebben? Che importa? Sia!
E, fosse un'ora sola,
io voglio quell' ebrezza
de' tuoi occhî profondi!
Io pur, io pur, io pur voglio affondare le mani mie nel mare
de' tuoi capelli biondi!
Or dimmi che farai contro il mio amore?

MADDELENA: Là giù! nella via corro! Il nome mio vi grido! Ed è la morte che mi salva!
(Gérard va a frapporsi tra Maddalena e le due uscite)

GERARD: I was waiting for you;
It's I that brought you here;
It's I that have beset your path
With swarms of crafty spies!
Watching in street and by-way,
Mine eye at every moment
Was always fixed upon you;
Thus, to secure you, I have seized your lover!

MADELEINE: Well, here I am!
Take your revenge!

GERARD: No, not revenge!

MADELEINE: Take your revenge. I am the last survivor of my house.

GERARD: No, not revenge!

MADELEINE: Then wherefore would you have me here?

GERARD: Why would I have you here?
Because I desire you!
Because it is written in the book of Fate;
Because my will would have it so, my will supreme
It is Fate's decree; and lo! It has come to pass!
I longed for you while you were yet a little maid,
With me you wandered
Down the daisied meadows
Through fragrant lane in blossom,
Adorned with wilding roses!
For you I longed that day they told me:
'Here! don thy livery'
And when at evening,
As there you practiced the measure of a minuet,
I, rigid, mute, in livery,
Threw back or closed the curtains at the doorway.
And now, once more do I desire you!
It is the charm, the poetry of your presence
That enrages me, goads me on to madness!
What matter? Be it so!
Though were but one short hour,
I'll feast me on the beauty of those enthralling eyes!
I, too, I hunger for your soft caresses–
Would plunge my hand within the ocean
Of those bright golden tresses!
Say, who shall save you now from my great love?

MADELEINE: I'll rush through all the streets,
Denounce myself to the mob!–
From death, say, who shall save me, then?

GÉRARD: No, tu non lo farai!—No!
tuo malgrado
tu mia sarai!

MADDELENA: (gittando un grido di terrore fugge; ma, presa da improvvisa idea, movendo risoluta verso Gérard gli dice:) Se de la vita sua tu fai prezzo il mio corpo ebbene, prendimi!

GÉRARD: (da sè). Come sa amare!

MADDELENA: La mamma morta m'hanno a la porta
là de la stanza mia;—
moriva e mi salvava!
poscia—a notte alta—io con la Bersi errava,— quando, ad un tratto, un livido bagliore guizza e rischiara innanzi a' passi miei la cupa via!—
Guardo! Bruciava il loco di mia culla!
Così fui sola! E intorno il nulla!
Fame e miseria!
Il bisogno e il periglio!
Caddi malata!
E Bersi, buona e pura
(ed a narrarlo mancan le parole) ha del suo corpo fatto un mercato, un contratto per me!—Porto sventura
a chi bene mi vuole!
Fu in quel dolore
che a me venne l'amore!
Voce gentile piena d'armonia che mi susurra: "Spera!"
e dice: "Vivi ancora! Io son la vita!
Ne' miei occhi è il tuo cielo!
Tu non sei sola! Le lagrime tue io le raccolgo! Io sto sul tuo cammino e ti sorreggo il fianco
affaticato e stanco!
Sorridi e spera ancora! Son l'amore!
Intorno è sangue e fango? Io son divino!
Io sono il paradiso! Io son l'oblio!
Io sono il dio
che sovra il mondo scende da l'empireo, muta gli umani in angioli,
fa della terra il ciel!
Io son l'amore!
L'angiol tremante allor le labbra smorte
della mia bocca bacia E or vi bacia la morte!
Corpo di moribonda è il corpo mio!
Prendilo dunque! Io son già morta cosa!

GÉRARD: (guardando dei fogli che gli vengono consegnati). Perduto!
Ah, la mia vita per salvarlo!

MADDELENA: Voi lo potete!
Appena stamattina
egli arrestato fu.

GERARD: (barring her passage.)
That you shall never do!
Ah! though you hate me, you are mine!

MADELEINE: (Shrieks and endeavors to escape; then, suddenly, with great calmness, she approaches him.) If you will save his life
At the price of my honor–
I am yours! Take me!

GERARD: (aside) Ah! how she loves him!

MADELEINE: Before death had taken
My darling mother
Leaving me forsaken,
In dying, she strove to save me!
In darkest midnight I fled with Bersi;
Then suddenly a lurid glare
Lit up the path that lay before.
The cruel flames devoured my home.
And I was homeless, with nothing before me
But hunger, misery, and peril dire!
Then I fell sick, and Bersi nursed me,
Spent all her savings on me, noble soul!
To such as love me, see, I bring misfortune!
It was in such sorrow
That first I heard the voice of Love!
In accents sweet, it murmured:
'The Star of Love shall guide you,
'Even though grief betides me,
'Love, the immortal fire from heaven.
'Boon to mourners given,
'Am I Love's self; oh hear me calling:
'I'll guard you, guide you, save you from falling!
'Hope on, hope ever!
'Love fails you never!
'Though dark the road, and foes assail you,
'I will not fail you;
'I am Love whose magic power,
'My name is Love!
'Like golden sunlight falling from the skies,
'All this world can change to Paradise!
'Love's very self am I!'
And then the angel kissed me:
In me that hour the light of life did die!
Take me, then, take me; but a corpse am I!
(Papers are handed to Gerard.)

GERARD: (reading). He's lost. I'd give my life to save him!

MADELEINE: Ah! you can save him!
This morning only was he arrested!

GÉRARD: Ma per Chénier un uomo che l'odiava ha preparato per oggi il suo giudiziola sua morte!
(A un tratto dalla strada viene un mormorio, un bisbiglio di folla.)
La folla già! La maledetta folla curiosa ed avida di sangue e lacrime
(Rumore dei fucili e delle baionette)
Sono i gendarmi!
E là sta già Chénier!

MADDELENA: (disperatamente) Salvatelo! Salvatelo! Salvatelo!

GÉRARD: Ah, la Rivoluzione i figli suoi divora! Non perdona! Fin di sangue per tutti
(scrivendo un biglietto al Vice Presidente Dumas.)
Io l'ho perduto? Lo difenderò!
Il tuo perdono è la mia forza! Io spero!
(il pubblico, si rovescia tumultuante, rumoroso, eccitato, nell' aula.)

CORO DI VECCHIE: Mamma Cadet!
Presso alla sbarra, qui!
Di qui si vede e si ode a perfezione.
Qui si gode
la vista d'ogni cosa.
Voi state bene?
Sì.
E voi?
—Così così
Dal mercato venite?
Vengo dalla barriera!
Notizie ce ne avete?
No! E voi nulla sapete?
Hanno cresciuto il pane!
Eh lo so è un tiro
Dite!
È un tiro di quel cane
d'inglese detto Pitt!

UN'ALTRA: Venite?

L'AMICA: Sì!

MATHIEU: Un po' di discrezione, cittidina!

CORO DI VECCHIE: Più in là!
Venite qua, cittadina!
Dite, oggidì
grande infornata, pare!
Sì.
Molti ex!
(Entrano giudici e giurati).

MATHIEU: E c' e un poeta!
l'asso ai giurati, o popolo!

GÉRARD: (A Maddalena). Eccoli, i giudici.

LE MERCATINE: (si levano ritte sulle panche esaminando i giudici). Chi presiede é Dumas!

GERARD: But one who hates him
Has hurried on his case for trial;
And he must die!
(Sounds of the noisy crowd heard without.)
The cruel mob comes back,
Athirst for blood and tears and carnage!
(Clatter of soldiers' arms.)
Do you hear their sabres clanking?
They're the gendarmes; they've got him, in there!

MADELEINE: (despairingly). Ah! save him!

GERARD: The Revolution does devour the sons that serve her!
(Writing a note for presentation to the President of the Court.)
Your sweet forgiveness shall make me bold!
Courage! It is not too late;
I'll save him, if I can!
(The mob now noisily enters the Court.)

CHORUS: Well, how are you?
I'm just so-so!
Have you come back from market?
No, from the barrier.
You've heard the news? No!
Not heard the news?
They've raised the price of bread!
Yes, yes! I know!
They say it is all that scoundrel,
That English villain, Pitt!

ONE OF THEM: Are you coming?

A FRIEND: Here I am!

MATHIEU: Now, then, what a noise you're making!

CHORUS OF OLD WOMEN: Mother Cadet! sit by the barrier, here!
Here's the best place for seeing and hearing!
Come over here, good Mother Babet!
Here one sees things to perfections.
There'll be lots of prisoners!
There's Legray! And a poet! Come this way!
Move up, do! No, I shall not!
(Enter the Judges and Jury.)

MATHIEU: Make way for the jury!

GERARD: (to Madeleine.) Those are the judges.

CHORUS: Here they come, the judges!
That's the President Dumas!
There's Vilate, the painter!

ALTRI: (nominando i giudici.)
Vilate

MERCATINE: pittore!
L'altro è lo stampatore tribuno Nicolas!

UNA VOCE: Ecco laggiù Fouquier!

TUTTI: L'accusatore pubblico!

MADDELENA: (a Gérard). E gli accusati?

GÉRARD: (indicando la porta). Di làpresso ai giurati!

MADDELENA: (vedendo schiudersi la porta, soffocando un grido). Ecco

GÉRARD: Tacete!

MADDELENA: Mi manca l'anima!
(Entrano i prigionieri)
Egli non guarda! Non mi crede qui!
Ma pensa a me! Io sono in quel pensiero!

MATHIEU: Silenzio!

DUMAS: (leggendo i nomi). Gravier de Vergennes.

FOUQUIER TINVILLE: (legendo una nota). Un ex referendario!
(fa un rapido gesto e ripone la nota)

PUBBLICO: È un traditore!
(succede un silenzio profondo)

DUMAS: (legge un altro nome) Laval Montmorency

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: (c. s.).
Convento di Montmartre!

CALZETTAJE, MERCATINE, PESCIVENDOLE: (urlano). Aristocratica!

IL PUBBLICO: (le grida ironico).
A che parlar? Sei vecchia! Taci.

DUMAS: Ti tolgo la parola! Abbiamo fretta!
(La monaca lascia. Cadere uno sguardo di sprezzo—poi siede dignitosa.—Il pubblico la applaude deridendola)

DUMAS: (c. s.) Legray!
(Si leva una donna giovane che vuol parlare ma è zittita dal pubblico e si lascia cadere sulla panca piangendo.)

DUMAS: Andrea Chénier!

GÉRARD: (a Maddalena). Coraggio!

MADDELENA: (guardando Chénier). O amore! o amore!

The other one's a printer, Tribune Nicolas!
See! there he goes! That's Fouquier,
The great Attorney-General!

MADELEINE: (to Gerard). Where are the accused?

GERARD: (pointing to door). In there, next to the jury!

MADELEINE: (as the door opens).
Heavens! My courage fails me!
(The prisoners enter; Chénier walks last.)
He does not heed us!
Perchance he thinks of me!

MATHIEU: Silence!

DUMAS: (reading out the names.) Gravier de Vergennes–

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: (consulting his notes.) An ex-Chancery officer!
(Motions the accused to be seated.)

CHORUS: Then he's a traitor!

DUMAS: (reading). Laval Montmorency–

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: From the convent of Mont-Martre!

CHORUS: A cursed aristocrat!
Best hold your tongue you hag!
Silence! Die! Ha! ha! ha!

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: I can't let you speak; we are in a hurry.

DUMAS: (reading). Legray–
(A woman rises, and would speak, but is silenced by the mob. She sinks back, sobbing piteously.)

DUMAS: (reading). André Chénier–

GERARD: (to Madeleine.) Courage!

MADELEINE: (gazing at Chénier). Beloved one!

PUBBLICO: Ecco, è il poeta!
Fouquier Tinville attentamente legge!
Lunga è l'accusa dunque!
È un accusato
pericoloso?
Sì!

MATHIEU: Scrittore e basta!

FOUQUIER TINVILLE: Andrea Chénier, poeta giornalista.
Costui violento scrisse contro agli uomini de la Rivoluzione. Fu soldato con Dumouriez e

PUBBLICO: Un traditor!

CHÉNIER: (a Fouquier Tinville).
Tu menti!

GÉRARD: (fra sè, terribile, con disperazione a Maddalena). Ah, Maddalena, io sono che ciò feci!

DUMAS: (a Chénier). Siediti e taci!

GÉRARD: (fortissimo). Parli!

ALCUNI: Parli!

TUTTI: (interessandosi) Parli!

DUMAS: (violento). No, nego la parola!

TUTTI: Parli! parli!

CHÉNIER: Sì, fui soldato
e glorios affrontata
ho la morte che vil qui mi vien data.
Fui letterato,
ho fatto di mia penna arma feroce
contro gli ipocriti!
Colla mia voce
ho cantato la patria!
Pura la vita mia
passa nella mia mente
come una bianca vela;
essa inciela
le antenne, ali allargate
ad un eterno volo,
al sole che le indora,
e affonda
la spumante prora
ne l'azzurro dell'onda
Va la mia nave spinta dalla sorte a la scogliera bianca de la morte?
Son giunto? E sia!
Ma ancor io salgo a poppa e una bandiear
trionfal disciolgo ai venti!
De' mille e mille miei combattimenti
è la bandiera e su vi è scritto: "Patria!"
(verso Fouquier Tinville)
A lei non sale
il tuo fango, o Fouquier!
Essa ognora s'insola immacolata.
Essa è immortale!
Non sono un traditore.
Uccidi? E sia! Ma lasciami l'onore.

FOUQUIER TINVILLE: (subito)
Udiamo i testimoni!

GÉRARD: (con voce possente) Il passo datemi!
Carlo Gérard.

CHORUS: There's the poet!
Fouquier-Tinville reads the charge with interest;
No doubt that he's a dangerous fellow.

MATHIEU: A writer–that's all!

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: He has written against the Revolution;
Was a soldier with Dumouriez–

CHORUS: He's a traitor!

CHÉNIER: (to Fouquier). You lie!

GERARD: (to Madeleine.) It was I who thus denounced him!

DUMAS: (to Chénier.) Silence!

GERARD: Let him speak!

CHORUS: Speak, then! Prove you're not guilty!

DUMAS: I will not allow it!

CHORUS: Let him speak!

CHÉNIER: Yes, as a soldier
Once I faced a glorious death,
Not such a vile one as you offer!
I was a writer; and I made my pen a scourge
Wherewith to lash all lying hypocrites!
And, as a poet, ever sang my country's praise.
Life was for me a ship
Set in a boundless ocean
With snowy sail outspread
To catch the morning glory;
It rode upon the crested waves,
Forth to remote horizons.
Now is my bark the sport of Fate,
And driven upon the rocks,
The ghostly rocks of Death,
Will it founder? Maybe!
But lo! from the mast
Floats a bright banner triumphant in the breeze;
Thereon is written My Country!'
(to Fouquier-Tinville.)
Your filth shall never soil that banner!
In truth am I no traitor!
Kill me, it is well! But leave my honor bright!

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: Now we'll hear the witnesses!

GERARD: (forcing a passage through the crowd.) Let me pass!
I'm Gerard!

DUMAS: Sta bene; puoi parlare.

GÉRARD: L'atto d'accusa è orribile menzogna.

FOUQUIER TINVILLE: (sorpreso). Se tu l'hai scritto?!

GÉRARD: E ho denunciato il falso
Or lo confesso.
(un gran movimento)

FOUQUIER TINVILLE: Io non ti credo!

GÉRARD: Giuro!

DUMAS: Dinne il perchè.

GÉRARD: L'odiavo!

DUMAS: Non ti credo!

FOUQUIER TINVILLE: (levandosi ritto e picchiando febbrilmente sul foglio scritto da Gérard). Mie faccio queste accuse e le rinnovo!

DUMAS: Ti do il consiglio de tacerti!

GÉRARD: No!
Il tuo consiglio è una viltà!

FOUQUIER TINVILLE: Tu offendi la patria e la guistizia!

IL PUBBLICO: Basta! Taci!
Imponigil silenzio tu, o Dumas!

MERCATINE: In istato d'accusa dichiaratelo!

SANCULOTTI: Sì; fuori della legge!

TUTTI: Alla lanterna
Esso è un sospetto!
Fu comprato!
Taci!

GÉRARD: La patria! La guistizia osi tu dire?
La tua Giustizia ha nome Tirannia!
L'amore della patria? Qui?! No, è un' orgia d'odî e vendette! Il sangue della patria qui còla! E siam noi stessi che feriamo il petto della Francia!
Basti il sangue!
Andrea Chénier della Rivoluzione
è figlio!—È il figlio più glorioso suo!

MERCATINE e CALZETTAJE: Con gli accusati tosto giudicatelo!
Alla lanterna!
Morte!
Alla lanterna! (lontano rullare i tamburi)

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: Fine!
Speak!

GERARD: The indictment is a monstrous lie!

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: (astonished). It was you who wrote it!

GERARD: But the charge is a false one, I confess it!
(Sensation).

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: I don't believe it.

GERARD: I swear it is true.

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: Why did you do that, then?

GERARD: I hated him.

DUMAS: I don't believe it.

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: (Pounding the papers containing the indictment.) I, too, have made these charges,
Now I repeat them!

DUMAS: I advise you to keep silent.

GERARD: Then such an act is vile!

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: It is an insult to country, to justice!
Enough!

THE AUDIENCE: Let Dumas silence him!

FISHWIVES: Indict him!

SANCULOTS: Outlaw him!

ALL: Ha! most suspicious! They've bribed him!
Silence!

GERARD: Here, all your justice is but cruel tyranny!
An vile orgy of hate and vengeance!
Can such as you be counted patriots?
Bloodthirsty villains, who stab the heart of France!
Chénier's a son of the glorious Revolution;
Crown him with laurel, never let him die!
(A sound of drums heard without.)
Do you hear it, citizens?
There speaks the real Fatherland,
Whose gallant sons all perish for her now!
Not here, where they are murdering her poets!
(Rushes to Chénier and embraces him.)

GÉRARD: Laggiù, è la patria! Odila, o popolo!
È la sua voce!
Eccola! È là la patria;
ove si muore colla spada in pugno!
Non qui dove le uccidi i suoi poeti!
(Gérard corre a Chénier e lo abbraccia).

CHÉNIER: O generoso! O grande!
Vedi? Io piango!

GÉRARD: Guarda laggiù! Quel bianco viso È lei!

CHÉNIER: Lei?
Maddalena! Ancor l'ho riveduta!
Or muojo lieto!

GÉRARD: Io spero ancora!
(i giurati rientrano.)

DUMAS: (dà una rapida occhiata al verdetto). Morte!

FOUQUIER TINVILLE: Via i condannati!

MADDELENA: (mentre Chénier esce) Andrea!
Rivederlo!

CALA LA TELA

CHÉNIER: Oh, noble heart and generous! See my tears!
(Exeunt Jurors).

GERARD: Look, over there, that pallid face! It is she!

CHÉNIER: She? Madeleine?
I've seen her once again!
Now I die happy!
(The jury come back into court.)

GERARD: I yet have hope!

DUMAS: (glancing at the verdict handed to him by the foreman). Death!

FOUQUIER-TINVILLE: Lead them away.

MADELEINE: (as Chénier is lead away). André! André! Farewell!

CURTAIN:

QUADRO IV

(Il cortile delle prigioni di San Lazzaro a mezzanotte. Andrea Chénier scrive a tavolino. Roucher gli è vicino.)

SCHMIDT: (a Roucher). Cittadino, men duol, ma è tardi assai.

ROUCHER: (dandogli del denaro). Pazienta ancora un attimo!

CHÉNIER: (cessa di scrivere). Non più

ROUCHER: Ah, leggi!

CHÉNIER: Pochi versi

ROUCHER: Leggi! Leggi!

CHÉNIER: Come un bel dì di maggio che con bacio di vento—e carezza di raggio si spegne in firmamento,
col bacio io d'una rima,
carezza di poesia—salgo l'estrema cima
de l'esistenza mia.
La sfera che cammina per ogni umano sorte—ecco già mi avvicina all'ora della morte,
e forse pria che l'ultima mia strofe sia finita,— m'annunciera il carnefiice la fine della vita.
(con grande entusiasmo.)
Sia!—Strofe, ultima Dea, dà ancor al tuo poeta—la sfolgorante idea,
la fiamma consueta;
io, a te, mentre tu vivida

ACT IV

(The Courtyard of the Prison of St. Lazare at midnight. André Chénier seated at a table, writing. Roucher is beside him.)

SCHMIDT: (to Roucher). I'm sorry, but the hour is late!

ROUCHER: (giving him money). No, wait a moment longer!

CHÉNIER: (as he stops writing). It is done!
Verses?

CHÉNIER: Just a few lines.

ROUCHER: Read them!

CHÉNIER: 'Like summer day that closes
'While the breezes are sighing
'All for love of the roses,
'In dreamy twilight dying;
'So now my life is ending,
'As yet one last tender kiss
'The Muse now accords me
'Before I to Death surrender.
'The joys of life are over;
'Fond Hope now forsakes me;
'Love is lost to the lover;
'Lo! cruel Death must take me.
'As in these lines the Heavenly Muse
'Is calling farewell to me,
'The headsman grim shall summon me
'To meet my doom appalling!
(with great enthusiasm.)
'Hail! Poetry, glorious goddess!
'Unto your votary, oh! grant, I pray you,

a me sgorghi dal cuore,—darò per rima il bacio ultimo di chi muore.
(Roucher e Chénier si abbracciano e ●●● si separano.)
(Si picchia al portone della prigione. Entrano Gérard, e Maddalena.)

SCHMIDT: (gli s'inchina deferente.) Tu qui, Gérard?

GÉRARD: Viene a costei concesso un ultimo colloquio

SCHMIDT: (interrompendolo). Il condannato?
Il nome?

MADDELENA: Andrea Chénier!

SCHMIDT: Sta ben!
Attendi!

MADDELENA: (a Gérard, risoluta) Il vostro giuramento vi sovvengo!
(rivolgendosi a Schmidt).
Odi! Fra i condannati di dimani è una giovane donna.

SCHMIDT: La legray!

MADDELENA: Or ene viver deve!

SCHMIDT: Cancellare
or come da la lista il nome suo?

MADDELENA: Che importa il nome se in sua vece un' altra per lei risponderà?

SCHMIDT: Sta ben! Ma, e l'altra?

MADDELENA: Eccola!

SCHMIDT: Come?! Lei?
Tu, cittadina?

MADDELENA: (a Schmidt porgendogli pochi giojelli e una piccola borsa contenente alcuni luigi). A voi! Giojelli son! Questo è denaro.

SCHMIDT: Evento strano in tempo di assegnati!
Io non vorrei
Capite? Io non so nulla!
(A Maddalena)
Al nome di Legray salite in fretta!
(esce)

GÉRARD: O Maddalena, tu fai della morte la più invidiata sorte!

MADDELENA: Benedico il destino!
Benedico la morte!

GÉRARD: Salvarli! Ancor da Robespierre! Ancora!
(esce)
(Schmidt ritorno con Chénier).

CHÉNIER: Vicino a te s'aqueta l'irrequïeta anima mia;
tu sei la mèta
d'ogni desio e bisogno

'The living flame of fancy, the fir sublime, immortal!
'Behold this song I bring to you,
'Blended with my sighing,
'Let one last strain of melody
'Greet you from poet, dying!'
(Roucher and Chénier embrace and then part.) (Knocking heard without. Enter Gerard and Madeleine).

SCHMIDT: (lowing respectfully.) You here, Gerard?

GERARD: This lady is permitted to have a final interview with–

SCHMIDT: (interrupting). Which prisoner? Tell me his name.

MADELEINE: André Chénier!

SCHMIDT: Fine! Wait!

MADELEINE: (to Gerard). The oath that you have sworn to me remember!
(to Schmidt.)
Listen! Among those who are to die tomorrow, there is a young woman!

SCHMIDT: Yes, Legray!

MADELEINE: Well, mark you, she must live!

SCHMIDT: But how can I now strike her name off of the death-roll?

MADELEINE: The name is nothing, if, when she's called, another should reply!

SCHMIDT: And who is that other?

MADELEINE: 'Tis I!

SCHMIDT: You? You would replace her?

MADELEINE: (giving jewels and gold.) See here! I'll give you these! Money and jewels!

SCHMIDT: It is an evil wind that blows no good to some one!
(to Gerard).
I hardly like to risk it!
Well there! I know nothing!
(Madeleine.)
But–when I call for Legray, at once come forward!
(Exit.)

GERARD: Oh! Madeleine your love victorious
Make shameful death most glorious!

MADELEINE: Blessed Fate that requites us!
Blessed Death that unites us!

GERARD: (aside). How to save them? I'll go once more to Robespierre!
(Exit.)
(Schmidt returns with Chénier.)

CHÉNIER: From you, beloved, my restless soul
New joy and peace borrows;
You are the goal of my desire,

e d'ogni sogno
e d'ogni poesia!
Entro al tuo sguardo
l'iridescenza scerno
de li spazî infinit, lo son già eterno
Ti guardo;
e in questo fiotto verde
di tua larga pupilla erro coll'anima!
Questa è la luce arcana
delle plaghe serene!
Mi avvolge! Si allontana lungi e si perde
ogni ricordo di cose terrene!
Tu sei la poesia
che alfin si dona tutta al suo poeta!
Tu sei la mèta
dell'esistenza mia!
Il nostro è amore d'anime!

MADDELENA: Il nostro è amore d'anime!

CHÉNIER: Che tu viva se muojo, di', che vale?
È l'anima immortale;
ovunque tu sarai, sì, io là sarò!

MADDELENA: Per non lasciarti son qui; non è un addio!
Vengo a morire,
vengo a morire anch'io
con te!
Finì il soffrire
La morte nell'amarti!
Chi la parola estrema
dalle labbra raccoglie
è Lui l'Amor! Come gemine foglie da l'albero di vita
cadiamo e il vento
ne avvolge insieme dentro alla infinita luce del firmamento!
In quell'ora suprema
de l'ultimo cammino
ogni dolor finisce
col tuo bacio; il divino!
Ah, se anche è del carnefice la man che insiem ci unisce, quella sua mano è pia
se la tua bocca—tocca
la morta bocca mia.
Salvo una madre! Maddalena all'alba ha nome per la morte Idia Legray!
Vedi? La luce incerta del crepuscolo giù pe'squallidi androni già lumeggia.
Abbracciami, mio amante! Amante, baciami!

CHÉNIER: Orgoglio di bellezza!
Trïonfo tu de l'anima!
O mia fortuna il premio
di questa tua carezza!
Il tuo amore, sublime amante, è mare,
è ciel, luce di sole e d'astri È il mondo!

CHÉNIER: La nostra morte è il trionfo d'amore!

MADDELENA: La nostra morte è il trionfo d'amore!

CHÉNIER: Viva la morte!

MADDALENA: Viva la morte!

CHÉNIER: È la morte!

The solace of my sorrow;
In your blue eyes gazing,
All Heaven appears before me,
Starry spaces, bright and boundless;
The yard the gates, the shining portal
Of a fair realm immortal,
Where I with you would dwell!

MADELEINE: Our love is of the soul, divine

CHÉNIER: You are the life of me

MADELEINE: With you I'll stay to the last
Nor say farewell!
With you I come to die!
All suffering ended! By death to you united!
Let the last word upon my lips be this:
"I love you!"
When comes the Morning,
Madeleine goes to death as Idia Legray!

CHÉNIER: Pride of beauty.
Triumph of the soul!
You, my happy thought,
The prize of my good luck!
Your love, my queen, is for me
A sea, a heaven, a sun,
The very light of day, Tis all!

CHÉNIER: Our death is love's triumph!

MADELEINE: Our death is the crown of love!

CHÉNIER: I welcome Death!

MADELEINE: Welcome, welcome!

CHÉNIER: It is coming!

MADDELENA: È la morte!	MADELEINE: Death is coming!
CHÉNIER: Ella viene col sole!	CHÉNIER: It is coming with the sun beams!
MADDELENA: Ella vien col mattino!	MADELEINE: Death comes in the wake of morn

Orfeo ed Euridice (1762)

MUSIC BY CRISTOPH WILLIBALD GLUCK ■ LIBRETTO BY RAINIERI DE CALZABIGI

This three-act azione teatrale, set to a libretto by Ranieri Calzabigi, was first performed at the Burgtheater in Vienna on October 5, 1762. A revised version, described as tragédie-opéra or drame héroïque, was performed at the Paris Opera on August 2, 1774. The story in Gluck's opera is somewhat different than that of Monteverdi. It opens in a grotto where, beside the tomb of Euridice, shepherds and nymphs mourn for her. Orfeo, desperate for his beloved, leaves behind his friends and prepares to go to Hades to rescue her. Amor, Jove's messenger, comes with the news that Orfeo has been given permission to go. If his singing can melt the heart of the demons, he can have Euridice back; however, if he turns around to look at her while leading her out of Hades, he will lose her forever. Orfeo goes off on his journey. Beyond the river Cocytus, the Furies and Shades dance gruesomely, trying their best to block Orfeo's path. However, Orfeo's singing is so beautiful that the demons fade away. Orfeo reaches the Elysian Fields, admiring their beauty, and the Blessed Spirits perform a dance especially for him. His only desire is to get to Euridice as quickly as possible—soon she is brought to him and, without looking at her, he takes her hand and leads her back to earth. As they continue on their journey, Euridice continually asks Orfeo questions—how was he able to get to Hades, why doesn't he look at her, doesn't he love her—and Orfeo, unable to help himself, turns around. At that moment, Euridice dies. Orfeo, in his grief, cries out that he would rather die than live without her. Once more Amor comes, and the gods give Euridice back to Orfeo. The opera ends at the temple dedicated to Amor, where the happy couple, heroes, heroines, nymphs and shepherds celebrate Euridice's return to life and the victory of love.

■ ATTO PRIMO

SCENA I

Il teatro rappresenta un ameno boschetto, ma solitario ove si vede la tomba di Euridice circondata d' allori e di cipressi. La scena è occupata da pastori e ninfe del sequito d' Orfeo e di Euridice. Altri portano ghirlande di mirto, altri vasi onde gli antichi servinansi nelle cerimonie fine-bri, alcuni poi sono intesi a sparger profumi e coprir di fiori la tomba, sulla quale sta appoggiata la statua d' Imene con la torcia rovesciata.

Orfeo, Pastori e Ninfe del sequito d' Euridice; coro del sequito d' Orfeo, e ballo delle Ninfe.
Orfeo seduto contra un albero ove ha appeso il caschetto e la lira interamente abbandonato al dolore, e non facendo altro che continuamente ripetere il nome di Euridice.

CORO: S' in questo bosco oscuro e queto,
Euridice, il tuo spierto
Ode ancor?
Deh tu oscolta a' nostri preghi
Vedi il pianto, vedi il duol.
Abbi picta dell' infelice Orfeo,
Ei sospira per te.
Compiange il suo destino.
L' amorosa tortorella
Cempre fida all' amor suo
Cosi sospira o muore di dolor.

ORFEO: Il vostro sospirar
Aumenta il mio dolor : All' ombra fida
D' Euridice rendete
Onor, e ne coprite
L' avel di fior.

CORO: S' in questo bosco oscuro e queto, etc.

ORFEO: Lasciatemi, conviene
Che qui rimanga io sol,
Non vo compagni avere
Nel mio supremo duol.
(Il sequito d'Orfeo si ritira, e si disperde nel bosco.)

SCENA II

ORFEO: (solo). Euridice! spirto caro,
Vieni a me. Del tuo fedel,
Deh tu ascolta il pianto amaro.
Egli invoca per te il ciel.
Nel dolore suo crudel,
Ma l'eco sol, aimè! risponde al prego.
Te cerco, o mia fedel,
Quando il dì torna in ciel,
Quando s' asconde.
O vano mio dolor,
L' idolo del mio cor,
Non mi risponde!
Euridice, del tuo nome,
E'l' aer pien : le valli, i boschi
Il colle, il pian,
Sulla pianta che muore,
Sulla scorza crescente

■ ACT I

SCENE I

An attractive, secluded grove surrounding the tomb of Euridice. A group of shepherds and shepherdesses are performing funeral rites, strewing flowers on the tomb, carrying vases, garlands, etc.

Orpheus, slightly downstage from the others, is seen leaning against a tree. Occasionally he joins in the lament of the others by sighing the name of Euridice.

CHORUS: Throughout this grove all joy has ended,
Wings of darkness have descended,
Our Euridice has died.
Hear our pleading,
Witness our sufferings,
See our anguish, see our sorrow,
See the tears our burning eyes have cried.
Orpheus, abandoned, lonely and forsaken,
See him weep at our side
In grief for his departed bride,
Like the tender dove is dying.
Weak and weary from bitter crying,
His ravished heart
Dies in pain and despair.

ORPHEUS: Your sorrow and your grief
Increase my desolation.
In final, devout invocation
Appeal to her gods in your gloom
By strewing flowers on her tomb!

CHORUS: Throughout this grove etc.

ORPHEUS: I bid you leave. Alone
My sorrow-stricken breast
Shall once more sigh her name
Where she will rest in death.
(The Chorus leaves.)

SCENE II

ORPHEUS: (Alone)
Dearest shadow, my beloved,
My Euridice, why no reply, no hope?
Hear your husband, forlorn, in dismay
Crying out to the darkness forever,
Pleading in fear and horror.
The winds, alas, drown out
My cry of sorrow!
Now you, my love, have gone,
Vainly, I ask the dawn
Where I should go to be near you.
My heart shall call for you
Long after night must fall,
Hoping to hear you.
Ah, beloved, my beloved!
All that I see sings your name.
The brook sings its praise to the

Il nome tuo scolpi
La mano mia dolente.
Euridice morì,
Ed io respiro ancor.
O ciel, la rendi a me,
O chiudi anco i miei dì.
Ah! vinto dal mio duol,
Il più remoto suol,
Io vo cercando.
Pietoso il nome mio
Nel suo cammino il rio,
Va mormorando.
Divinità del cupo imper, ministri
Di terror; del soggiorno
Dell' ombre voi che nella trista valle
Fate che sia compito
Il voler di Plutone,
Voi che mai gioventù
Disarmò, ne beltade,
Da voi tolta mi fu,
La mia felicitade.
Oh memoria fatal! Aimè! le grazie
Del suo bel volto,
Dal più crudel destino
Non la poter salvar.
Implacabili Dei!
Ve la voglio involar.
Io saprò penetrar
Fino nel cupo abisso.
Ammolir tal rigor
La lira mia saprà,
Il vostro sdegno io sento
Che affrontare potrà.

SCENA III

AMORE: (entra). Darà soccorso
Amore
Al più tenero amante,
Non disperar, di te
Giove senti pietà,
Nel buio eterno
Tu scender puoi,
Va a trovar Euridice
Della morte nel sen.
Se col dolce suon di tua lira,
Se col tuo cantar divin,
De' numi dell' averno
Placar tu puoi l' ira,
A te ritornerà.
Dal tenebroso impero
A te ritornerà.

ORFEO: Ciel la rivedrò!

AMORE: Si, ma per tanto aver
Esser pronto convien a compier l' ordine.
Che da me devi udir.

ORFEO: Chi mai potrà . . . a me 'l vietar
A tutto io son disposto.

AMORE: Odi dunque del ciel qual è il volere.
Su quest' amante . . . tanto adorata
T' è vietato lasciar,
Uno sguardo cader,
O per sempre da te trees,

And the leaves to the stones.
Cut in branches, the name of Euridice
Will sing of happiness and beauty.
Euridice has died,
I prefer death myself.
Gods, give her back to me
Or let me die with her!
Filled with woe and despair,
Rending the air with sighs.
My heart is sinking.
The brook alone shall know
How freely my tears can flow,
It is drinking tears.
You, gods of Acheron's domain,
You grim and fearsome lords
O the kingdom of darkness,
You, whom down among the shadows
Pluto's despotic power
So cruelly commands,
Heartless you are, and blind
To her youth and her beauty.
You have stolen from me
What made my world enchanted,
What has gladdened my life.
Alas, the blossom you have broken,
And in her tender heart
Have plunged your ruthless knife.
Fiendish ghosts of the night,
I ask of you my wife.
Without fear I descend
To your infernal regions
Where the pleas of my grief
Will at last cool your ire.
In your breast this eternal hatred?
Shall subside before my passion's fire!

SCENE III

THE GOD OF LOVE: (enters)
Your plea is not in vain.
Your appeal has been heeded.
The God of Love, I come here
To grant you your request.
For to your wish the gods have acceded:
You shall find your beloved
Where she rests in death.
Let your tender lyre's sweet endeavor
Fill the air with its harmony.
Its song the savage fiends
Shall becalm in their lair.
She will be yours once more,
Yours to behold forever.

ORPHEUS: Gods, I could see her again!

LOVE: Yes. Yet, before you go
You must know the will of the gods.
Mark their word and make your decision!

ORPHEUS: Nothing can alter my intent,
For her my heart shall never waver!

LOVE: Then learn from me the gods' decree:
You, when ascending from Hades,
Shall refrain from beholding
Your wife while you flee.
If you weaken but once
You will lose her forever.

Resterà separata.
Di Giove or sai la volontà qual è
Degno ti mostra della sua mercè.
L' adore raffrena,
Restringi il desio,
E tosto ogni pena
O duolo più rio
Sparito sarà.
Tu sai che un amante,
Discreto e costante
Nel cor d' un amata,
Ha sempre trovata
La dolce pietà.
(esce Amore.)

SCENA IV

ORFEO: (solo). Chi vidi! chi parlò.
Euridice vivrài? Clemente cielo
Un dio propizio
La rende a me.
Ma che? io non potrò
Ritornando alla vita,
La serrar sul mio sen
O dolce amica!
O qual favor!
O qual ordin crudel!
Prevedo il suo timor
Il sospetto, il dolor.
A che il pensier soltanto
D' una prova si cruda
Mi fa di ghiaccio il cor,
Si lo potrò, lo giuro
Amore, m' assisterà,
Nell' immenso mio duolo
Temer di sua pietà,
Sarebbe a te far torto,
Fia così. Giove il vuol
A te sommesso io son.
(Orfeo prende la lira e si mette il caschetto.)
La speme in sen ritorna.
Fine avran le mie pene
Al mio supremo bene,
La vita io vo ridar.
L' averno invan fra noi
Con tutti i mostri suoi
Non vincerà l' amor.
Al mio supremo bene
Vo dar la vita ancor.

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO

■ ATTO SECONDO

SCENA I

Il teatro rappresenta la porte dell' inferno, donde vedesi uscire denso fumo misto a fiamme.
Stuolo di demoni e di furie, Orfeo.
Ballo delle furie.
Orfeo fa sentire il suono della lira. Gli spettri, e le furie ne interrompono co' loro balli gli accordi, e cercano di fare a lui spavento.

CORO DEI DEMONI: Chi mai dell' Erebo
Fra le caligini,
Sull' orme d' Ercole
Di morte impavido,

This is the gods' command
And you must obey it
To be worthy of their trust.
In silence to suffer,
Your loved one so near,
Is part of this offer.
But
Your torment and fear soon will be ended.
To love in distress
Shows faith and devotion.
Her tender caress
Will soothe your emotion,
You soon will confess.
(The God of Love disappears.)

SCENE IV

ORPHEUS: (alone). How wondrous! Did I dream?
Euridice will return, be mine forever?
A god of light, a god of mercy
Will bring her back?
But I must turn away
From the one I love so dearly
Until we are back on earth
O, my beloved, harsh is the price
That restores you to me!
I can see all her doubts,
The despair which she feels
While this frightful ordeal,
So severe and inhuman
Turns my blood to ice.
I shall proceed without fear to endure it.
The God of Love will harden my heart,
Let his faith be defended!
If Love should fail me now,
My own life shall be ended!
Mighty gods, I proceed,
Obeying your command!
Oh Love, I call you to guide me,
To firmly stand beside me.
Your wondrous armor hide me
In danger and in fear!
Now death shall hold her no longer.
My heart will prove stronger,
And Love will guide her here,
Yes, Love will walk beside me
And gently guide her here.

END OF THE FIRST ACT

■ ACT II

SCENE I

A frightening, rocky landscape near the gates of the Underworld, veiled in a dark mist occasionally pierced by flames. The dance of the Furies and Monsters is interrupted by sounds of the lyre of the approaching Orpheus. When he comes into view they all join in the ensuing chorus.

CHORUS: Who can the mortal be,
Wanton and bold,
Who has found the gate to this world of hate,
Daring a frightening fate,

Conduce il piò?
D' orror lo ingombrino
Le fiere Eumenidi
E lo spaventino,
Gli urli di Cerbero,
Se un dio non è.

ORFEO: (avvicinandosi ai demoni, sempre suonando la lira). Deh calmate tanto ardor!
Furie, larve, ombre sdegnate
Deh sentite alfin pietate,
Del mio barbaro dolor.

CORO: No, no, no.

ORFEO: Deh calmate, etc.

CORO: Misero giovane,
Che vuoi? che mediti?
Altro non abita
Che lutto e gemito,
In queste orribili
Soglie del duol.

ORFEO: Ah l' ardor che mi divora
Cento volte è ben più rio,
Ah l' inferno duol non ha
Pari a quel che in sen mi sta.

CORO: O quale incognito
Affetto flebile
Viene a sospendere
L' imperturbabile
Nostro furor.

ORFEO: Se il mio affanno, ah! voi sapeste
Se vedeste il mio dolore.
Dello strazio del mio core
Forse avreste allor pietà.
(I demoni inteneriti al canto di Orfeo.)

CORO: Le porte stridano
Su neri cardini.
E il passo lascino
Sicuro e libero
Al vincitor.
Tutto al dolcissimo
Suo canto piegasi,
E vincitor.
(Durante questo coro le porte dell' inferno si schiudono Orfeo si apre il passo in mezzo agli spetri incantati al suono della lira, ed entra negli abessi.)

FINE DELL' ATTO SECONDO

ATTO TERZO

SCENA I

Il teatro rappresenta i campi Elisi. Vi zi vedono degli archi fioriti, dei boschetti, delle fontane e de tapeti d' erbetta verde sopra i quali riposano le ombre dei giusti, divise in differenti gruppi.

Ballo delle ombre felice.

Terror shall strike his heart,
Tearing his mind apart,
When howling hellhound's roar,
Foam-dripping fangs ajar,
Bar him from the door.

ORPHEUS: (Playing the lyre) Ah, have pity, have pity on me!
Furies! Monsters! Shadows so fearful,
Oh hear my song so tearful,
And your heart may heed my plea.

CHORUS: No! No! No! No!

ORPHEUS: Ah, have pity etc.

CHORUS: Having defied your fear
Tell us who brought you here!
Here there is no room for life -
Nothing but night and gloom,
Nothing but the cries of
The damned in their doom.

ORPHEUS: All the torments Hell has to offer
My heart must suffer hundredfold.
The world has never known such grief
As that from which I seek relief.

CHORUS: The song he sings, strangely,
Brings out of the night
Balm to our wild fury
Turning our beguiled hearts
Peaceful and mild.

ORPHEUS: Here before you
I implore you
So your wrath may soon abate.
Tears shall tell you and compel you
To allow me through the gate.
(The Monsters and Furies are softened by the beauty of Orpheus' plea.)

CHORUS: Beauty unknown to us,
Warm and melodious,
Melting our wrath away,
Holding our hearts in sway
Open his way!
So through the portals wide
In may the mortal stride.
He by the singer's art
Conquered the monsters' heart,
Winning his bride.
(During the last chorus, the gates of the Underworld are thrown open. Orpheus makes his way through the monsters and descends into Hades.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT

ACT III

SCENE I

The Elysian Fields, domain of the Blessed Spirits. An enchanting landscape with bushes, flowers, brooklets etc. Various groups of Spirits are seen on stage.

Ballet

Un ombra felice e coperta di lungo velo sequita da molte altre ombre. Aria alternativamente col Coro del seguito di Euridice.

L' OMBRA FELICE: Questo prato sempre ameno
Del riposo è il dolce asil
Questo è il bel lido sereno
Ove sempre ha regno April.
Nulla qui la mente oscura
Qui si gode l'aura pura,
Dolce incanto infiamma il sen
E la misera tristezza,
Cessa in questo asilo amen.
Quest' è 'l suol ridente e tranquillo
Dove la pace in trono sta.

CORO: Quest' è il ridente asil
Della felicità.
(Le ombre si allontano.)

SCENA II

ORFEO: (entra). Di qual splendor, qui brilla il sol?
Più puro è 'l ciel
Più chiaro il dì.
Dolce aura lusinghiera
Sento aleggiar nel bosco,
Degli augelli il gorgheggiar,
De' ruscelli il mormorar
E il dolce fiato dell' aura.
Si gode in questo asil,
Di vera pace il ben
Ma la calma che qui respiro
Il mio dolor blandir non val,
O mio ben d'amor soave oggetto,
Tu sola puoi calmar
Lo strazio del mio petto
Te mirar, la tua voce udir,
Star vicin sempre a te.
Ah il tuo sospiro,
E il solo ben, che ognor desire.

CORO NELLA QUINTE: Giunge Euridice.
Al soggiorno del riposo,
Vieni, o dolce amante e sposo
Vieni e scorda il tuo dolor.
Euridice amor ti rende
Euridice gia riprende
Di beltade il bel tesor.

SCENA III

Le ombre ed Orfeo.

ORFEO: O larve che m' udite,
Ah tollerate in pace
I caldi miei sospir.
Se voi portaste in seno
L' ardor che mi divora
Gia stretto sul mio cor
Avrei l' amato ben,
Offrite al mio pregar
La beltà che qui cerco,
Che qui vengo a implorar.

CORO DELLE OMBRE: E il destin risponde a te.

ONE BLESSED SPIRIT: Lovely fields so gentle and peaceful
Where with joy is filled the air,
Friendly domain of Blessed Spirits,
Free of care.
Though the world beyond be grey and tearful,
Here our bond is gay and cheerful.
In timeless bliss the days go by
While all sadness turns to gladness
And to laughter every sigh.

CHORUS: Friendly domain of Blessed Spirits,
Free of care!
(The chorus disperses.)

SCENE II

ORPHEUS: Out of the sky, wondrous and bright,
Down came a light to charm my eye.
Oh delight Abounds.
My feathered companions are singing
In their old, mysterious tongue.
The brooklet's lively song
Joins in the wind's gentle sighing
As everything around
Speaks of eternal peace.
Yet, this enchantment,
This quiet rapture
Cannot end my despair and grief.
For you, only you,
My beloved, my wife,
Euridice, can give me back my life!
Once again to listen to her voice,
Rejoice in her smile,
Once more to see her . . .
Grant me, you gods, this only favor!

CHORUS: Come, the Blessed Fields invite you,
Husband tender, love shall delight you,
Come, and banish sorrow and pain!
Soon your loving wife will greet you,
Yes, Euridice will meet you,
Never to depart again.

SCENE III

Orpheus and the Blessed Spirits

ORPHEUS: But now, shadows that surround me,
Do not longer withhold my loved one
From my arms!
Ah, could you feel with me
The torments that confound me,
If you had known just once
A faithful lover's fire,
I should behold her face
Without all this delay.

CHORUS: So be it. Your wish shall be fulfilled!

SCENA IV

Le ombre, Orfeo, Euridice velata in tontananza.

Danza delle Ombre.

Durante il coro le ombre consegnano Euridice nelle mani di Orfeo, che la riceve senza guardarla, e manifestando il più vivo trasporto d' amore e di gioia.

CORO DELLE OMBRE, AD EURIDICE:
Torna, o bella at tuo consorte,
Che non vuol che più diviso,
Sia da te pietoso il ciel.
Non lagnarti di tua sorte
Che può dirsi un altro Eliso
Uno sposo io fedel.
(Le ombre felici seguono Orfeo ed Euridice.)

FINE DELL' ATTO TERZO

SCENE IV

The Blessed Spirits, Orpheus, and Euridice, covered by a veil.

Ballet of the Blessed Spirits.

(During the ensuing chorus Euridice is brought to Orpheus who takes her hand without looking at her, but betraying great emotion.)

CHORUS: (To Euridice).
Near the one whose love so tender
Made the gods of death surrender
Shall you find a blissful life.
Be reborn, united with him
Whose undaunted heart is plighted
To his faithful, loving wife.
(The Blessed Spirits follow Orpheus and Euridice.)

END OF THE THIRD ACT

■ ATTO QUARTO

SCENA I

Il teatro rappresenta una caverna oscura, per sentieri interrotti e che conducono fuori dell' inferno.

Orfeo i Euridice.

Orfeo tenendo Euridice per la mano, ma senza alzarle gli occhi in volto comparisce in distanza, e s' innoltra con aria inquieta.

ORFEO: Ah! vieni Euridice,
Son io, del più constante amore il mio
Unico e dolce oggetto.

EURIDICE: Sei tu? se tu davver?
Ciel non è quest' un delir?

ORFEO: Si tu vidi il tuo amore,
Son io che vivo ancor.
E dal regno de' morti
Or ti vengo a salvar.
Del mio fedele ardor
Il pianto Giove udì,
Di nuovo tu vivrai.

EURIDICE: Che! vivrò! E per ti!
Sommi dei, qual bontà!

ORFEO: Euridice, partiam,
Ci affrettiam a godere
Di tal favor celeste,
Usciam da questo
Asil funesto,
Un' ombra più non sei
E la face d'amor ancor più viva
Arderà nel mio sen.

EURIDICE: Che ascolto? E sarà ver?
Oh sorte a noi felice!
E che noi risserrar
Potrem d' amore i nodi!

■ ACT IV

SCENE I

A dark subterranean vault indicating a labyrinth of passageways.

Orpheus and Euridice

(Orpheus appears, leading Euridice by the hand without looking at her. He is nervous and impatient.)

ORPHEUS: Oh come, Euridice, oh come!
Once more you return to blissful life,
And to my love.

EURIDICE: Is it you? Can it be?
Gods, I cannot believe it!

ORPHEUS: Yes, you see your husband.
My distress and my pain
Gave me courage to tear you
From Orcus again.
My pleas and bitter tears
Have wakened in the gods
Compassion and mercy.

EURIDICE: I, alive and with you?
Ah, great gods, what delight!

ORPHEUS: But, Euridice, come with me!
Let us tarry no more,
Blessed by our fortune's favor!
Away at last from all this horror,
From death and desolation!
Back to earth we ascend
Where all our sorrow shall end.

EURIDICE: But, tell me, how can this be?
Such ecstasy, such rapture!
And so, once again, you and I
Shall be united in happiness.

ORFEO: Si, presto andiam
Più non tardar.

EURIDICE: Ma la tua mano, o ciel, io più non sento
Che! non son quella più,
Che tanto amasti un dì!
Dal sen per Euridice
L' amore tuo fuggì?
O non trovi più in me
La beltà del mio volto.

ORFEO: (a parte). O cielo qual divieto!
Euridice andiam,
Di qui presto andiamo, preme il tempo,
Palesare vorrei
L' eccesso del mio amore
Legge fatal!
O barbaro destin!

EURIDICE: Ti chiedo un guardo sol.
Crudel son questi forse i lieti dì,
Che il tuo cuor mi prepara?
E questa ì la mercè
Di tanto amore?
O gelosa fortuna! Orfeo! aimè!
Tu rifiuti in tal dì
Gl' innocenti sospir,
Di quella che tant' ami?

ORFEO: Co' tuoi timor, or più non mi affannar.

EURIDICE: Tu mi dai vita sol
Per ricondurmi al duol.
Ciel, deh riprendi il don, io lo detesto
Sposo crudele, ah! lasciami.

ORFEO: Vieni, ah! vieni al tuo consorte

EURIDICE: No, crudel
M' è più caro ancor morir
Che di vivere con te.

ORFEO: Vedi il duol.

EURIDICE: Lasciami in pace.

ORFEO: No, mia vita, ombra seguace
Sarò sempre intorno a te.

EURIDICE: Parla, a chè sei si tiranno?

ORFEO: Potrò pria morir d' affanno
Ma giammai dirò perchè.

EURIDICE E ORFEO: Siate a me propizi, o Dei,
Ah vedete i pianti miei
Il dolor che in seno io porto
Più soffribile non è.
(Orfeo sta immerso nella più grande agitazione s' appoggia contra la rupe.)

EURIDICE: (a parte). Ma perchè a serbare
Tal silenzio persiste?
Quale arcan vuole a me celar?
Della pace all' asil,
Ei ritrar mi dovrà
Per me insultar can tantra indifer-

ORPHEUS: Yes.
Let us flee without delay!

EURIDICE: Yet, now your hand no longer touches mine.
Why, averting your eyes,
Do you flee my glance?
Your heart, has it forgotten
How to beat tender and warm?
Have I faded in death,
Lost my beauty and charm?

ORPHEUS: (Aside). Oh gods, how can I bear it?
(Aloud) Let us leave here at once,
Forsake this domain! We must hurry.
(Aside) How I wish I could show her
My delirious passion!
(Aside) It cannot be. O terrible decree!

EURIDICE: One look into my eyes!
Ah, you traitor!
Now I see in your heart
All the grief that awaits me.
Is this what love
May claim as sweet reward?
Oh deceitful mischance!
My husband's heart can no longer afford
To bestow on his wife
A single loving glance!

ORPHEUS: Oh do not yield, dear one,
To fear and doubt!

EURIDICE. Why return me to life
If now you cast me out?
Gods, your compassion is vain and unwanted.
Lonely and betrayed, leave me here!

ORPHEUS: Come! See how your sorrows aggrieve me!

EURIDICE: No, I stay. Death again relieve me
Of bitter deception and pain!

ORPHEUS: See my torment!

EURIDICE: Leave me behind you!

ORPHEUS: Ah, you wrong me.
How could I find you?
United, we never part again.

EURIDICE: Tell me your secret, I beseech you!

ORPHEUS: My secret I cannot teach you.
I still must remain silent.

ORPHEUS AND EURIDICE.
Mighty gods, I now implore you,
Oh see me weeping here before
You!
My distress is past enduring.
Oh, what despair
Has my tortured heart to bear!
(Orpheus, overcome with grief, leans against a rock.)

EURIDICE: (aside). Yet, why should he persist
In this ominous silence?
What is the secret sealing his lips?
Could it be that he tore me
From heavenly bliss
To kill me anew by disdain and enza.

O barbara sorte,
Mi togli da more
Per farmi la preda,
D' un nuovo dolor.
D' una tranquilla pace
Io gustava il riposo,
Gli affanni il pianto or sottentrati sono
A quei felici dì.

ORFEO: Quel vano suo sospetto
Accresce il mio dolor,
Che dire mai? che fare?
Son quasi disperato,
Come poss' io calmar
Sa tema del suo cor.

EURIDICE: Io vacillo, io tremo
Io mi perdo, io gemo.

ORFEO: Quanto son da compiangere
Non mi so contenere.

EURIDICE: Oh barbara sort, etc.

ORFEO: Oh qual prova credele.

EURIDICE: Tu m' abbandoni, Orfeo
Non hai pietà
La desolata sposa,
Soccorso invoca invan,
O Dei, sentite i miei martir.
Di vita devo uscir
Senza attenere un guardo solo.

ORFEO: Mi sento il coraggio mancar,
E perdo la ragion.
Da tanto amor portato,
Io scordo la difesa
Euridice e me stesso.
(Fa un movimento per voltarsi indietro, e a un tratto si trattiene.)

EURIDICE: Caro sposo, appena
Io posso respirar.
(Cade contro una rocca.)

ORFEO: Non disperare
Or ti vo dire, o ciel che faccio
Giusti dei, quando avrà fine il mio martire.

EURIDICE: Questo aimè sia l' estremo addio.
Non ti scordar d'Euridice.

ORFEO: Dove son? più resistere non posso
Giusto ciel! chi soffrì sì grave affano?
O mia cara Euridice!

EURIDICE: Orfeo! Oimè! io moro.

coldness?
Oh fiendish delusion,
Treacherous illusion,
You give me back a life
Filled with torment and woe.
Why, gods above, oh why
Do you torture me so?
In recent enchantment,
Surrounded by beauty,
Now bitter, rejected,
Bereaved and dejected
My heart sighs in pain.

ORPHEUS: Her suspicion and doubt
Sink daggers in my heart.
Her sorrow and sadness
Turn my despair to madness.
Where to find relief
For her distress and grief?

EURIDICE: I am failing, I tremble.

ORPHEUS: May the gods make me stronger!
I can bear it no longer.

EURIDICE: Oh fiendish delusion etc.

ORPHEUS: Gods, your command is inhuman.

EURIDICE: Ah, do not flee, beloved husband!
Do not desert, in this hour of gloom
And sorrow, the one who needs you,
Your wife.
O gods, lend your help to my plea!
Ere I shall end my life,
Grant me, my love, a final glance!

ORPHEUS: My heart can no longer resist.
Slowly my mind turns mad,
As in a hellish trance.
My wife, myself, my promise . . .
I must cast you to your chance!
(He starts turning towards her but takes hold of himself immediately.)

EURIDICE: On my heart I feel
The icy hand of death.
(She sinks down against a rock.)

ORPHEUS: You shall not die . . .
For I shall tell you . . . I have . . .
Great heavens!
Gods above, when will you relent
In your fury?

EURIDICE: So shall end
Euridice's great love . . .
Remember her . . . farewell . . .

ORPHEUS: Where am I?
The command of the gods I defy.
No, my wife shall not die,
For the gods cannot will it!
(Turns to her suddenly)
Euridice beloved . . .

EURIDICE: (tries to rise, but sinks back again and dies)
My Orpheus . . . farewell . . . forever . . .

ORFEO: Sventurato che fui!
In qual orrido abisso,
Mi gettò tal funesto amore
Cara sposa! Euridice!
Ella muor Dì fatal!
Più il miò ben non vedrò.
Io son, io che spensi i tuoi bei di
Legge iniqua, destin crudel!
Dolor non avri eguale,
In ora sì funesta
Il mio delir, la morte
E sol quel che mi resta.
Che farò senz' Euridice
Dove andrò senza il mio ben,
Euridice, o Dio, rispondi,
Io son pure il tuo fedel.
Euridice, ah! non m' avvanza
Più soccorso, ne speranza.
Ne' dal mondo ne' dal ciel.
Mortal silenzio
Nulla m' avvanza,
O qual martir!
Si spezza il cor.
Ah per sempre io t' ho perduta!
Ogni speme or disparì.
Del dolor l'ora è venuta.
Ogni ben da me fuggì.
Ah, possa il mio martir
Finir con la mia vita!
Sorviver non potrei
Ad un affanno egual.
Son presso ancor d'averno alla città
Raggiunto presto avrò,
La mia diletta sposa.
Sì, vengo a te, mio bene, mio sol ben,
M'aspetto, più non mi sarai repita.
Sì la morte al tuo sen
Riconducami ancor.
(Orfeo tira la spada per uccidersi, ma l'Amore che gli appare ad un tratto gli arresta il braccio.)

SCENA II

Orfeo, Euridice, e L'Amore.

AMORE: T'arresta Orfeo.

ORFEO: O Ciel!
Chi sei tu che ardisci or trattenare
Del miò core il trasporto?

AMORE: Deh! calma il tuo furor, o uom demente,
T' arresta, e riconosci,
Amor che veglio sopra il tuo destino.

ORFEO: E che vuoi tu da me?

AMORE: Modello in te trovai
Di costanza e di fè
Or vo por fin a' tuoi guai.
(Amore tocca Euridice e le dà anima.)
Euridice respira!
Del più amoroso cor
Vieni a premiar l'ardor.

ORPHEUS: What, great gods, have I done!
What a frightful disaster
Brought on by my tortured love!
See me weeping here before you,
My beloved, I implore you!
She can hear me no more.
I have lost her again.
And I, yes, I, have sealed
Her final doom!
All is over, the end has come.
I can no longer bear it.
Gods, as a final favor let me remain
With her. In death we be united!
Now my love has gone forever.
All my days have turned to night.
From my heart, gone forever
Every ray of hope and light,
None can know my bitter plight.
My beloved, can you hear me?
Oh tell me, are you near me!
Hear my voice so sad and sighing
In tears and terror,
In fears and sorrow crying.
Can you hear me, are you near me?
No sound has found me.
Silence around me!
Sorrow has crowned me.
All has ended in pain and fright.
My overwhelming grief
Shall find its grim conclusion.
I never can survive
A fate too harsh to bear.
So once again I shall descend to Hades
And soon shall be with her,
Euridice, my wife.
Yes, I shall follow you, my love,
To the grave, and stay with you forever.
No one shall ever take you from me
After death does unite
What cannot live apart!
(During the last words, Orpheus has pulled a dagger and is now about to stab himself when the God of Love suddenly appears and stops him.)

SCENE II

The God of Love, Orpheus, Euridice.

LOVE: Desist, mortal!

ORPHEUS: Great gods, who can mock my Despair, can intrude on my grief,
On my sacred resolve?

LOVE: Master your despair and your raving!
See here! I am the God of Love
Who rules the destiny you challenge.

ORPHEUS: What brings you here to me?

LOVE: You have withstood the test
Of devotion and love,
And your suffering and pain shall be ended.
Euridice, awaken!
He who loves you so truly,
Shall have his just reward!

ORFEO: (con trasporto). Oh, Euridice!

EURIDICE: Orfeo!

ORFEO: Oh giusto ciel qual è
La mia riconoscenza!

AMORE: Più non negar
La mia potenza.
Dal doloroso imper,
Vi vengo a liberar.
Dato or v' è di goder
De' favor dell' amor.

SCENA III

Entra il seguito d' Orfeo e d' Euridice.

CORO: Di Pafo il Signor e di Gnido
Infiamma sol il mondo inter,
Nel vuoto ciel giunger sa
L' augel veloce
Le figliuole di Dori accende
Fin nel sen del vasto mar,
Più lieta fa giovinezza
Ei giunge in un la grazia e la beltà
E lui che adorna la saggezza
E di fior sparge il suo sentier,
E desso ancor che ne consola
Quando noi perdiam i suoi favor
E quando pur da noi s' invola
Ne lascia sempre l' amistà
Per temperare il duol.

FINE

ORPHEUS: My Euridice!

EURIDICE: My Orpheus!

ORPHEUS: Almighty gods,
Our gratitude shall be unbounded.

LOVE: Your fears and doubts
you find unfounded.
But now without delay
To brighter spheres above,
To enjoy, as you may,
The delights of your love!

SCENE III

Enter friends and companions of Orpheus and Euridice.

All: Let love triumphant
Be your guide in all endeavors,
Rule forever beauty's domain!
His chains will unite us,
Charm, and delight us.
Slaves, we are happy in his blessed reign.
Pained, in anguish, in doubt and sorrow,
Many a heart knows rain and storm.
Yet, the sun will shine tomorrow,
Loving and healing, so tender and warm.
Jealous and wild, my heart may suffer,
Tender thoughts may flee my breast;
Yet true love will have to offer
Healing balm and sweetest rest.
Let love triumphant etc.

Armide (1777)

MUSIC BY CRISTOPH WILLIBALD GLUCK ■ LIBRETTO BY PHILLIPE QUINAULT

This heroic opera in five acts, set to a libretto by Philippe Quinault (adapted from Tasso's Gerusalemme Liberata), was first performed at the Paris Opéra on September 23, 1777. Glory and Wisdom praise Renaud's virtue, stating that he has the knowledge to follow honor's path. Armide seduces all other knights of the crusades except for Renaud, who does not fall for her. Her uncle Hidraot, King of Damascus, along with nymphs, shepherds and shepherdesses (who are in fact evil spirits), assist her in kidnapping Renaud. She takes him to an enchanted island where Hidraot, using his magical skills, causes Renaud to fall in love with her. Armide however, is torn between love and hate when she realizes that Renaud loves her not for her beauty but due only to the magic. Love wins out, and Armide persuades Renaud to stay with her. He lives a life of total pleasure there, forgetting entirely about the crusades. Two of his fellow crusaders come to look for him, and though initially stopped by Armide's magic, they eventually find him. They prove to him that he has been the victim of magical seduction. Renaud is ashamed of himself for his folly and chooses to resume his duties. Armide begs him to stay, but he has made his choice. She calls upon the gods of the Underworld to sink the enchanted island to the bottom of the sea.

■ ACTE PREMIER	■ ACT I
La scène représente une salle du palais d'Armide; au fond une place publique de la ville de Damas, ornée d'un arc de triomphe.	The scene represents a hall in the palace of Armide; at rear is shown a public square in the city of Damascus, in which is a triumphant arch.
SCÈNE I	SCENE I
Armide, Phénice, Sidonie.	Armide, Phenice, Sidonie
PHÉNICE: Dans un jour de triomphe, au milieu des plaisirs, Qui peut vous inspirer une sombre tristesse? La gloire, la grandeur, la beauté, la jeunesse, Tous les biens comblent vos désirs.	PHENICE: On the day of triumph, in the midst of pleasures, Who can inspire you with dreary sadness. Glory, grandeur, beauty, youth, All benefits crown your wishes.
SIDONIE: Vous allumez une fatale flamme Que vous ne ressentez jamais; L'Amour n'ose troubler la paix Qui régne dans votre âme.	SIDONIE: You light a fatal flame You do not feel; Love dares not dim the peace Which reigns in your heart
PHÉNICE et SIDONIE: Quel sort a plus d'appas Et qui peut être heureux si vous ne l'êtes pas?	PHENICE and SIDONIE: What lot has more allurements? And who can be happy if you are not?
PHÉNICE: Si la guerre aujourd'hui fait craindre ses ravages, C'est aux bords du Jourdain qu'ils doivent s'arrêter Nos tranquilles rivages N'ont rien à redouter.	PHENICE: If war brings its ravages today Our peaceful land Has nothing to fear.
SIDONIE: Les Enfers, s'il le faut prendront pour nous les armes. Et vous savez leur imposer la loi.	SIDONIE: Hades, if need be, would take up arms for us Your law rules there.
PHÉNICE: Vos yeux n'ont eu besoin que de leurs propres charmes, Pour affaiblir le camp de Godefroy.	PHENICE: Your eyes only needed their charm, To vanquish the camp of Godfrey.
SIDONIE: Ses plus vaillants guerriers contre vous sans défense. Sonte tombés en votre puissance!	SIDONIE: Before you his most valiant warriors are helpless, They cede to your power!
ARMIDE: Je ne triomphe pas du plus vaillant de tous. Renaud, pour qui ma haine a tant de violence. L'indomptable Renaud échappe à mon courroux. Tout le camp ennemi pour moi devient sensible. Et lui seul, toujours invincible, Fit gloire de me voir d'un oeil indifferent. Il est l'âge aimable où sans effort on aime. Non, je ne puis manquer, sansun depit extrême, La conquête d'un coeur si superbe et si grand.	ARMIDE: I triumph not over the bravest of all. Renaud—my most hated enemy he— The unconquered Renaud escapes my fury. The enemy's camp yields to me. He alone, invincible always, Takes glory in scorning me proudly. Of a lovable age he is, when love comes readily . . . No I cannot abandon that conquest beloved, That heart so superb and so great.
SIDONIE: Qu'importe qu'un captif manque à votre victoire? On en voit dans vos fers assez d'autres témoins. Et pour un esclave de moins, Un triomphe si beau perdra de sa gloire.	SIDONIE: What matters one captive less to your victory? You lead so many others in chains For but a single slave, Little of your great glory is lost.
PHÉNICE: Pourquoi voulez-vous songer A ce qui peut vous déplaire? Il est plus sûr de se venger Par l'oubli que par la colère.	PHENICE: Why would you think Of what displeases? Surer vengeance lies Not in anger, but—forgetting
ARMIDE: Les Enfers ont prédit cent fois Que contre ce guerrier nos armes seront vaines. Et qu'il vaincra nos plus grands rois: de chaines, Et d'arrêter le cours de ses exploits! Que je le hais! Que son mépris m'outrage! Qu'il sera fier d'éviter l'esclavage Où je tiens tant d'autres héros! Incessamment son importune image Malgré moi trouble mon repos. Un songe affreux m'inspire une fureur nouvelle Contre ce funeste ennemi.	ARMIDE: Hades has predicted a hundred times That our arms are useless against this warrior. He shall conquer our greatest kings. How pleasing then to lead in chains This warrior and end his prowess. How I hate him! How his scorn rouses me! How proud he is, escaping the bondage like this that Other heroes must endure for me. Constantly his ever present image Haunts my sleep, despite me. An awful dream inspires a new fury in me.

J'ai cru le voir, J'en ai frémi,
J'ai cru qu'il me frappait d'une atteinte mortello,
Je suis tombée aux pieds de ce cruel vainqueur.
Rien ne fléchissait sa rigueur,
Et par un charme inconcevable,
Je me sentais contrainte à le trouver aimable,
Dans le fatal moment qu'il me perçait le coeur.

SIDONIE: Vous troublez-vous d'une image légère
Que le sommeil produit?
Le beau jour qui vous luit
Doit dissiper cette vaine chimère,
Ainsi qu'il a détruit
Les ombres de la nuit.

SCÈNE II

Hidraot et Sa Suite, Armide, Phénice, Sidonie.

HIDRAOT: Armide, que le sang qui m'unit avec vous
Me rend sensible aux soins que l'on prend pour vous plaire!
Que votre triomphe m'est doux!
Que j'aime à voir briller le beau jour qui l'éclaire.
Je n'aurais plus de voeux à faire,
Si vous choisissiez un époux.
Je vois de près la mort qui me menace,
Et bientôt l'âge me glace
Va m'accabler sous son pesant fardeau:
C'est le dernier bien où j'aspire
Que devoir votre hymen promettre à cet Empire
Des rois formés d'un sang si beau,
Sans me plaindre du sort je cesserai de vivre,
Si ce doux espoir peut me suivre
Dans l'affreuse nuit du tombeau.

ARMIDE: La chaine de l'hymen m'étonnne,
Je crains les plus aimables noeuds.
Ah! qu'un coeur devient malheureux.
Quand la liberté l'abandonne!

HIDRAOT: Pour vous, quand il vous plait, tout l'Enfer est armé:
Vous ètes plus savante en mon art, que moi-même:
De grands rois à vos pieds mettent leur diadème,
Qui vous voit un moment, est pour jamais charmé.
Pouvez-vous mieux goûter votre bonheur extrême
Qu'avec un époux qui vous aime,
Et qui soit digne d'être aimé?
Pour vous, quannd il vous plaît, etc.

ARMIDE: Contre mes ennemis, à mon gré je déchaîne
Le noir Empire des Enfers,
L'Amour met des Rois dans mes fers,
Je suis de mille amants maitresse souveraine,
Mais je fais mon plus grand bonheur,
D'être maîtresse de mon coeur.

HIDRAOT: Bornez-vous vos désirs à la gloire cruelle
Des maux que fait votre beauté?
Ne ferez-vous jamais votre felicité
Du bonheur d'un amant fidèle?

ARMIDE: Si je dois m'engager un jour,
Au moins vous devez croire
Qu'il faudra que ce soit la Gloire
Qui livre mon coeur à l'Amour.
Pour devenir mon maître,
Ce n'est point assez d'être roi:
Ce sera la valeur qui me fera connaître
Celui qui mérite ma foi:
Le vainqueur de Renaud, si quelqu'un le peut être
Sera digne de moi.

SCÈNE III

Troupe de peuples du royaume de Damas.

Hidraot, Armide, Phénice, Sidonie.

Les peuples du royaume de Damas, témoignennt par des danses et par des chants, la joie qu'ils ont de l'avantage que la beauté de cette princesse (Armide) a remporté sur les chevaliers du camp de Godefroy.

HIDRAOT: Armide est encor plus aimable
Qu'elle n'est redoutable:
Que son triomphe est glorieux!
Ses charmes les plus forts sont ceux de ses beaux yeux.
Elle n'a pas besoin d'emprunter l'art terrible
Qui sait, quand il lui plaît, faire armer les Enfers,
Sa beauté trouve tout possible:
Nos plus fiers ennemis gémissennt dans ses fers.

HIDRAOT ET LE CHOEUR: Armide est encor plus aimable
Qu'elle n'est redoutable:
Que son triomphe est glorieux!
Ses charmes les plus forts sont ceux de ses beaux yeux.

PHÉNICE ET LE CHOEUR: Suivons Armide, et chantons sa victoire,
Tout l'Univers retentit de sa gloire.

PHÉNICE: Nos ennemis, affaiblis et troublés,
N'étendront plus le progrès de leurs armes,
Ah! quel bonheur! Nos désirs sont comblés,
Sans nous coûter ni de sang, ni de larmes.

LE CHOEUR: Suivons Armide, etc.

Against this deadly enemy.
I thought I saw him, and I trembled,
I thought he struck me a mortal blow.
I fell before him, vanquished.
His rage, it was implacable;
Yet with inconceivable charm,
I found him admirable,
That fatal moment when he pierced my heart.

SIDONIE: You but torment yourself— It is but the fleeting image of a dream.
Before the light of day, that chimera,
Like the shades of night,
Must vanish.

SCENE II

Hidraot and her attendants, Armide, Phenice, Sidonie

HIDRAOT: May the blood, Armide, which unites me to you,
Render me grateful for your care.
How sweet to me is your triumph!
I love the day which lights it with beauty.
No further wish would I have
If you would choose a spouse.
My death draws near, menacing,
And soon I'll bow beneath the weight of years
My last, and only longing is this—
To see the promise of a race of kings
Sprung from your union. Unregretting I would die.
If I could only take such a hope as this
Into the dark, deep tomb with me.

ARMIDE: Hymen's chain frightens me,
I dread its loving ties.
Ah! How wretched is that heart,
From which all liberty has fled!

HIDRAOT: For you, if you but will, all Hades arms itself:
In my art, far wiser you than I:
At your feet the mighty kings lay down their crowns;
Who sees you for just an instant, is forever charmed by you.
Can your happiness still be greater, sweeter,
With a spouse you love—
One worthy of your trust?
For you, if you but will, etc.

ARMIDE: Against my enemies I unchain at will
The dreary Kingdom of the doomed,
Kings are brought by Love, as my slaves.
I am Sovereign of a thousand lovers
But my greatest happiness is to be Mistress of my heart.

HIDRAOT: Can you restrict your wishes to that cruel glory
Of the ills your beauty causes?
Will you never find your happiness
In the joy of a faithful lover?

ARMIDE: If I must be entangled one day
Believe, at least, that Glory only
My heart shall yield to Love.
My master must be more than king.
Valor alone shall win my faith:
Who conquers Renaud—if he can be conquered
Will earn my love.

SCENE III

Populace of the kingdom of Damascus.

Hidraot, Armide, Phenice, Sidonie

The people of the kingdom of Damascus, by dancing and singing, evince the joy they feel at the advantage which the beauty of this princess (Armide) has had over the knights of Godfrey's camp.

HIDRAOT: More lovable is Armide,—
More lovable than redoubtable:
How glorious is her triumph!
Her strongest charms lie in her eyes.
She has no need of using that terrible art of hers,
Which, if she did, would arm all Hades.
Her beauty is superme!
In her chains our proudest enemies groan, enthralled.

HIDAROT and CHORUS: More lovable is Armide,—
More lovable than redoubtable:
How glorious is her triumph!
Her strongest charms lie in her eyes.

PHENICE and CHORUS: Let us follow Armide and her victory chant.
Her glory resounds through heaven and earth.

PHENICE: Our enemies, afraid and weakened,
No longer shall boast their prowess,
Ah! What joy! Our wishes are crowned.
And we have shed no blood or tears.

CHORUS: Let us follow Armide, etc.

PHÉNICE: L'ardent Amour qui la suit en tous lieux,
S'attache aux coeurs qu'elle veut qu'il enflamme,
Il est content de régner dans ses yeux,
Et n'ose encor passer jusqu'à son âme.

LE CHOEUR: Suivons Armide, etc.

SIDONIE ET LE CHOEUR: Que la douceur d'un triomphe est extrème,
Quand on n'en doit tout l'honneur qu'à soi-même!

SIDONIE: Nous n'avons point fait armer nos soldats,
Sans leur secours, Armide est triomphante,
Tout son pouvoir est dans ses doux appas,
Rien n'est si fort que sa beauté charmante.

LE CHOEUR: Que la douceur, etc.

SIDONIE: La belle Armide a su vaincre aisément
De fiers guerriers, plus craints que le tonnerre,
Et ses regards ont en moins d'un moment
Donné des lois aux vainqueurs de la terre.

PHÉNICE ET LE CHOEUR: Que la douceur d'un triomphe est extrême,
Quand on n'en doit tout l'honneur qu'à soi-même!

(Le triomphe d'Armide est interrompé par l'arrivée d'Aronte, qui avait été chargé de la conduite des chevaliers captifs, et qui revient blessé, tenait à la main un tronçon d'épée).

SCÈNE IV

Aronte, Hidraot, Armide, Phénice, Sidonie.

Troupes de peuples de Damas.

ARONTE: O ciel! O disgrâce cruelle!
Je conduisais vos captifs avec soin,
J'ai tout tenté pour vous marquer mon zèle,
Mon sang qui coule en est témoin.

ARMIDE: Mais, où sont mes captifs?

ARONTE: Un guerrier redoutable
Les a délivrés tous.

ARMIDE ET HIDRAOT: Un seul guerrier! Que dites-vous? Ciel!

ARONTE: De nos ennemis c'est le plus redoutable.
Nos plus vaillants soldats sont tombés sous ses coups,
Rien ne peut résister à sa valeur extrême . . .

PHENICE: Ardent love, pursuing her
Stays with the hearts she wishes enflamed;
He is content to reign in her eyes,
Not daring to enter her soul.

CHORUS: Let us follow Armide, etc.

SIDONIE and CHORUS: How extreme is the sweetness of triumph,
When all the honor is due to one's self!

SIDONIE: We have not armed our soldiers,
Unaided, Armide has triumphed;
In her sweet allurements lies all her power,
Nothing is so strong as her beauty.

CHORUS: How extreme is the sweetness, etc.

SIDONIE: Beautiful Armide has easily won,
She has conquered the warriors, more feared than the thunder.
In less than a moment her eyes have conquered;
Laws they have given to the victors of earth.

PHENICE and CHORUS: How extreme is the sweetness of triumph,
When to one's self all the honor is due.

Armide's triumph is interrupted by the arrival of Aronte, who had been charged with the care of the captive knights, and who returns wounded, carrying in his hand the half of a sword.

SCENE IV

Aronte, Hidraot, Armide, Phenice and Sidonie.

Populace of Damascus.

ARONTE: O Heaven! O cruel disgrace!
I led your captives with care;
I showed my zeal to you—
My blood bears witness.

ARMIDE: But where are my captives?

ARONTE: A redoubtable warrior
Recued them all.

ARMIDE and HIDRAOT: A single warrior! What did you say?

ARONTE: Of all our enemies he is the most redoubtable.
Before him, our most valiant warriors succumb;
Nothing can resist him in his valor supreme.

ARMIDE: O ciel! C'est Renaud.

ARONTE: C'est lui-même. (Il tombe mort sur la scène, son corps est emporté par deux guerriers.)

ARMIDE ET HIDRAOT: Poursuivons jusqu'au trépas
L'ennemi qui nous offense:
Qu'il n'échappe pas
A notre vengeance.

FIN DE L'ACTE I.

ACTE DEUXIÈME

Le théâtre représente un désert.

SCÈNE I

Artémidore, Renaud.

ARTÉMIDORE: Invincible héros, c'est par votre courage
Que j'échappe aux rigueurs d'un funeste esclavage:
Après ce généreux secours,
Puis-je me dispenser de vous suivre toujours?

RENAUD: Allez, allez remplir ma place
Aux lieux d'où mon malheur me chasse.
Le fier Gernand m'a contraint à punir
Sa criminelle audace:
D'une indigne prison Godefroy me menace,
Et de son camp m'oblige à me bannir.
Je m'en éloigne avec contrainte,
Heureux, si j'avais pu consacrer mes exploits
A délivrer la cité sainte
Qui gémit sous de dures lois.
Suivez les guerriers qu'un beau zèle
Presse de signaler leur valeur et leur foi:
Cherchez une gloire immortelle,
Je veux dans mon exil n'envelopper que moi.

ARTÉMIDORE: San vous, que peut-on entreprendre?
Celui qui vous bannit ne pourra se défendre
De souhaiter votre retour.
S'il faut que je vous quitte, au moins ne puis-je apprendre
En quels lieux vous allez choisir votre séjour?

RENAUD: Le repos me fait violence,
La seule gloire a pour moi des appas,
Je prétends adresser mes pas
Où la Justice et l'Innocence
Auront besoin du sécours de mon bras.

ARMIDE: Oh, Heavens! It is Renaud!

ARONTE: He himself. (He falls dead upon the stage; his body is borne away by two soldiers).

ARMIDE and HIDRAOT: Vengeance pursue him,
This enemy who assails us;
He shall not escape
Our wrath.

END OF ACT 1.

ACT II

The stage represents a desert.

SCENE I

Artemidore, Renaud.

ARTEMIDORE: Invincible hero, by your courage
I have escaped the rigors of a cruel slavery.
After this noble rescue,
Can I refuse to follow you ever?

RENAUD: Come, take my place,
Here from where misfortune drives me.
Proud Gernand compels me to punish
His rash audacity:
Godfrey menaces me with vile imprisonment,
And I am banished from his camp.
Reluctantly I keep away,
Happy, if I could devote my deeds
To the rescue of the holy city
Which groans beneath oppressive laws.
You follow those warriors whose noble zeal
Fires their valor and their faith:
Seek immortal fame,
I would, alone, conceal myself in exile.

ARTEMIDORE: Without you, what can be done?
One who banishes you, only wish
For your return
If I must leave you, then at least inform me
In what place you seek asylum.

RENAUD: Rest is distasteful to me,
Only glory draws me.
I shall turn my steps
Where Innocence and Justice
Need my arms' assistance.

ARTÉMIDORE: Fuyez les lieux où règne Armide,
Si vous cherchez á vivre heureux,
Pour le coeur le plus intrépide,
Elle a des charmes dangereux.
C'est une ennemie implacable,
Evitez ses ressentiments,
Puisse le ciel à mes voeux favorable
Vous garantir de ses enchantements.

RENAUD: Par une heureuse indifférence
Mon coeur s'est dérobé sans peine à sa puissance,
Je la vis seulement d'un regard curieux.
Est-il plus malaisé d'éviter sa vengeance
Que d'échapper au pouvoir de ses yeux?
J'aime la liberté, rien ne m'a pu contraindre
A m'engager jusqu'à ce jour.
Quand on peut mépriser le charme de l'amour,
Quels enchantements peut-on craindre?

SCÈNE II

—Une Bois enchantée.

Hidraot, Armide.

HIDRAOT: Arrêtons-nous ici, c'est dans ce lieu fatal
Que la fureur qui nous anime
Ordonne à l'Empire infernal
De conduire notre victime.

ARMIDE: Que l'Enfer aujourd'hui tarde à suivre nos lois!

HIDRAOT: Pour achever le charme il faut unir nos voix.

HIDRAOT ET ARMIDE: Esprits de haine et de rage,
Démons, obéissez-nous.
Livrez à notre courroux
L'ennemi qui nous outrage.
Esprits de haine et de rage,
Démons, obéeissez-nous.

ARMIDE: Démons affreux, cachez-vous
Sous une agréable image.
Enchantez ce fier courage
Par les charmes les plus doux.

HIDRAOT ET ARMIDE: Esprits de haine et de rage,
Démons, obéissez-nous.
(Armide aperçoit Renaud qui s'approche des bords de la rivière).

ARMIDE: Dans le piège fatal notre ennemi s'engage.

HIDRAOT: Nos soldats sont cachés dans le prochain bocage,
Il faut que sur Renaud ils viennent fondre tous.

ARMIDE: Cette victime est mon partage,
Laissez-moi l'immoler, laissez-moi l'avantage
De voir ce coeur superbe expirer de mes coups.

ARTEMIDORE: Fly to the place where reigns Armide,
If happy you would love;
For the most intrepid heart
She possesses dangerous attractions.
She is an implaceable enemy,
Beware her vengeance!
May heaven grant my wishes
And guard you from her charms.

RENAUD: A happy indifference.
My heart guards me easily from her power
I view her only with curiosity.
Is it harder to avoid her vengeance
Than to escape the power of her eyes?
Liberty I love, I am free,
My heart untouched, and if one scorns the charms of love
What fear is there
That other allurements may beguile?

SCENE II

— Enchanted Woods.

Hidraot, Armide.

HIDRAOT: Let us halt here, the fatal place is this,
Where fury, urging us,
Bids the infernal kingdom
Our victim lead.

ARMIDE: May Hades now our laws obey but slowly!

HIDRAOT: To complete the charm our voices raise in unison.

HIDRAOT and ARMIDE: Spirits of hate and rage,
Demons, obey us.
Deliver to our wrath
The outraging enemy.
Spirits of hate and rage,
Demons, obey us.

ARMIDE: Frightful demons, hide yourselves
Beneath a pleasing image.
This haughty courage now enchant
With sweetest charms.

HIDRAOT and ARMIDE: Spirits of hate and rage,
Demons, obey us.
(Armide catches sight of Renaud, who is approaching along the bank of the river).

ARMIDE: Our enemy comes to the fatal net.

HIDRAOT: Our soldiers are hidden in the wood, near by,
Ready to pounce on Renaud.

ARMIDE: This victim is mine; leave him to me,
Mine the advantage to destroy
That proud heart.
(Hidraot and Armide retire. Renaud stops to admire the river; he relieves himself of part of his armor, to enjoy the breeze).

(Hidraot et Armide se retirent).
(Renaud s'arrête pour considérer les bords du fleuve et quitte une partie de ses armes pour prendre le frais).

SCÈNE III

RENAUD: (seul). Plus j'observe ces lieux et plus je les admire.
Ce fleuve coule lentement
Et s'éloigne à regret d'un séjour si charmant.
Les plus aimables fleurs, et le plus doux Zéphire
Parfument l'air qu'on y respire.
Non, je ne puis quitter des rivages si beaux.
Un son harmonieux se mêle au bruit des eaux.
Les oiseaux enchantés se taisent pour l'entendre,
Des charmes du sommeil j'ai peine à me défendre,
Ce gazon, cet ombrage frais,
Tout m'invite au repos sous ce feuillage épais.
(Renaud s'endort sur en gazon, au bord de la rivière).

SCÈNE IV

Renaud (endormi), une Naïade (qui sort du fleúve), Troupe de Nymphes, Troupe de Bergers, Troupe de Bergères.

UNE NAÏADE: Au temps heureux où l'on sait plaire,
Qu'il est doux d'aimer tendrement!
Pourquoi dans les périls, avec pressement
Chercher d'un vain honneur et l'imaginaire?
Pour une trompeuse chimère,
Faut-il quitter un bien charmant?
Au temps heureux où l'on sait plaire,
Qu'il est doux d'aimer tendrement!
(Les Démons sous la figure des Nymphes, des Bergers et des Bergères, enchantent Renaud, et l'enchaînent durant son sommeil avec des guirlandes de fleurs.)

UNE BERGÈRE: On s'étonnerait moins que la saison nouvelle
Revînt sans amener les fleurs et les Zéphirs,
Que de voir de nos ans la saison la plus belle Sans l'Amour et sans les plaisirs.
Laissons au tendre Amour la jeunesse en partage;
La Sagesse a son temps, il ne vient que trop tôt:
Ce n'est pas être sage
D'être plus sage qu'il ne faut.

SCÈNE V

Armide, Renaud, endormi.

SCENE III

RENAUD: (alone). The more I see this spot, the more am I charmed.
This river, gently flowing,
Quits regretfully these pleasant banks.
Flowers rare, and softest zephyrs
Perfume the air.
I cannot leave these pleasing brinks.
Sweet sounds are mingling with the rippling waters.
Feathered songsters pause to listen,
Sleep's dear charms assail me,
This grass, this cooling shade,
Invite me to repose beneath these sheltering leaves.
(Renaud falls asleep upon the grass beside the river).

SCENE IV

Renaud (asleep), A Naiad (who comes out of the river), Troop of Nymphs, Troop of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

A NAIAD: In the happy springtime,
How sweet it is to love!
Why then seek with haste the dangers
Of a vain and fleeting honor?
For deceiving chimeras
Shall one leave a charming present?
In the happy springtime,
How sweet it is to love!
(The Demons disguised as Nymphs, and the Shepherds and Shepherdesses enchant Renaud, and bind him while asleep, with garlands of flowers).

A SHEPHERDESS: One would be less astonished
If springtime came bereft of flowers and zephyrs,
Than to see our sweetest season
Bereft of Love and pleasures.
Let us leave to tender Love the care of youth;
Wisdom has its innings, but slow it comes;
It is not wisdom.
Needless to be wise.

SCENE V

Armide, Renaud (asleep).

ARMIDE: (tenant un dard à sa main). Enfin, il est en ma puissance,
Ce fatal ennemi, ce superbe vainqueur.
Le charme du sommeil le livre à ma vengeance.
Je vais percer son invincible coeur.
Par lui, tous mes captifs sont sortis d'esclavage,
Qu'il éprouve toute ma rage . . .
(Armide va pour frapper Renaud et ne peut exécuter le dessein qu'elle a de lui ôter la vie.)
Quel trouble me saisit, qui me fait hésiter!
Qu'est-ce qu'en sa faveur la pitié me veut dire?
Frappons . . . Ciel! qui peut m'arrêter?
Achevons . . . je frémis! Vengeons-nous . . . je soupire!
Est-ce ainsi que je dois me venger aujourd'hui!
Ma colère s'éteint quand j'approche de lui.
Plus je le vois, plus ma fureur est vain.
Mon bras tremblant se refuse à ma haine.
Ah! Quelle cruauté de lui ravir le jour!
A ce jeune héros tout cède sur la terre.
Qui croirait qu'il fût né seulement pour la guerre?
Il semble être fait pour l'Amour.
Ne puis-je me venger à moins qu'il ne périsse?
Hé! ne suffit-il pas que l'Amour punisse?
Puisqu'il n'a pu trouver mes yeux assez charmants,
Qu'il m'aime au moins par mes enchantements
Que s'il se peut, je le haïsse.
Venez, secondez mes désirs,
Démons, transformez-vous en d'aimables Zéphirs.
Je cède à ce vainqueur, la pitié me surmonte,
Cachez ma faiblesse et ma honte
Dans les plus reculés Déserts:
Volez, conduisez-nous au bout de l'Univers.
(Les Démons transformés en Zéphirs, enlèvent Renaud et Armide).

FIN DE L'ACTE II.

■ ACTE TROISIÈME

Le théâtre représente un paysage sauvage.

SCÈNE I

ARMIDE: (seule). Ah! si la liberté me doit être ravie,
Est-ce à toi d'être mon vainqueur?
Trop funeste ennemi du bonheur de ma vie,

ARMIDE: (holding an arrow in her hand) He is in my power at last,
This fatal enemy, this mighty victor.
For my vengeance the charms of sleep ensnare him.
His invincible heart I now shall pierce,
Through him my captives all are free,
Now let him feel my rage.
(Armide is about to strike Renaud, but stops in the act of taking his life.)
What trouble now assails me, and halts my hand!
In his favor, what would pity whisper?
Let me strike . . . what would prevent me?
Be done . . . I tremble! Take vengeance . . . I falter!
Is it thus I must myself avenge today?
My anger fails beside him.
The more I see him, the vainer my fury grows.
My trembling arm responds not to my hate.
What cruelty to take from him the light!
All earthly things before him bow — this youthful hero.
And was he born for war alone?
He seems intended for Love.
My vengeance only comes by death!
Is not love's punishment enough?
Since he has found no charm within my eyes,
Then let him love at least my ravishment,
Whatever be, I hate him.
Come, second my desires.
Demons, the pleasing forms of Zephyrs take.
I bow before this victor, pity rules me now;
Hide my weakness and my shame
In farthest deserts:
Fly, conduct us to the ends of Earth.
(The Demons transformed as Zephyrs, bear away Renaud and Armide).

END OF ACT II.

■ ACT III

The stage represents a rough and wild landscape.

SCENE I

ARMIDE: (alone). Ah! If liberty is lost to me,
Must you be my conqueror?
Too hated enemy of my life's sweet happiness,

Faut-il que malgré moi tu règnes dans mon cœur?
Le désir de ta mort fut ma plus chère envie,
Comment as-tu changé ma colère en langueur?
En vain, de mille amans je me voyais suivie,
Aucun n'a fléchi ma rigueur.
Se peut-il que Renaud tienne Armide asservie?
Ah! si la liberté me doit être ravie,
Est-ce à toi d'être mon vainqueur?
Trop funeste ennemi du bonheur de ma vie,
Faut-il que malgré moi tu règnes dans mon cœur?

SCÈNE II

Armide, Phénice, Sidonie.

PHÉNICE: Que ne peut point votre art? La force en est extrême
Quel prodige, quel changement!
Renaud, qui fut si fier, vous aime,
On n'a jamais aimé si tendrement.

SIDONIE: Montrez-vous à ses yeux, soyez témoin vous-même
Du merveilleux effet de votre enchantement.

ARMIDE: L'enfer n'a pas encor rempli mon espérance,
Il faut qu'un nouveau charme assure ma vengeance.

SIDONIE: Sur des bords séparés du séjour des humains,
Qui peut arracher de vos mains
Un ennemi qui vous adore?
Vous enchantez Renaud, que craignez vous encore?

ARMIDE: Hélas! c'est mon coeur que je crains
J'ai recours aux Enfers pour allumer sa flamme,
C'est l'effort de mon art qui peut tout sur son âme,
Ma faible beauté n'y peut rien.
Par son propre mérite il suspend ma vengeance,
Sans secours, sans effort, même sans qu'il y pense,
Il enchaine mon coeur d'un trop charmant lien.
Hélas! que mon amour est différent du sien!
Quelle vengeance ai-je à prétendre
Si je le veux aimer toujours?
Quoi, céder sans rien entreprendre?
Non, il faut appeler la Haine à mon secours.
L'horreur de ces lieux solitaires
Par mon art va se redoubler.
Détournez vos regards de mes affreux mystères,
Et surtout, empêchez Renaud de me troubler.

Despite me, must you rule my heart?
Your death was once my dearest wish,
How have you changed my anger?
In vain a thousand lovers sought me,
None could touch my heart.
Must only Renaud hold Armide enslaved?
Ah! If liberty is lost to me,
Must you be my conqueror?
Too hated enemy of my life's sweet happiness,
Despite me, must you rule my heart?

SCENE II

Armide, Phenice, Sidonie.

PHENICE: What can your art not accomplish?
Its power is irresistible. Ah! enchantment!
Renaud, once so proud, now loves you,
And never was love so tender.

SIDONIE: Reveal yourself to him, be witness
Of the marvellous enchantment you possess.

ARMIDE: Hades has not yet fulfilled my hope,
Another charm must bring my vengeance.

SIDONIE: On the secluded banks where mortals linger,
Who can release your enemy from you?
Renaud you have enchanted,
What do you fear now?

ARMIDE: Alas! I fear my heart.
I've called on Hades to light its flame,
This effort of my art can all accomplish
On his soul. — My feeble beauty is of little worth.
His own merit checks my vengeance.
Unaided, and with trifling effort,
He enchains my heart with far too charming ties.
Alas! how different is my love to his!
Towards what vengeance dare I now aspire,
If I would love him still?
What! shall I yield in helplessness!
No, to my aid I'll summon Hate.
The honor of these lonely places
Shall be increased by my art.
Turn your vision from my fearsome mysteries.
And keep Renaud from troubling me.

SCÈNE III

ARMIDE: (seule). Venez, venez, Haine implacable,
Sortez du gouffre épouvantable
Où vous faites régner une éternelle horreur.
Sauvez-moi de l'Amour, rien n'est si redoutable,
Contre un ennemi trop aimable
Rendez-moi mon courroux, rallumez ma fureur.
Venez, venez, Haine implicable,
(La scène se change en l'enfer.)
Sortez du gouffre épouvantable
Oú vous faites régner une éternelle horreur.
(La Haine sort des Enfers accompagnée des Furies, de la Cruauté, de la Vengeance, de la Rage et des Passions qui dépendent de la Haine.)

SCÈNE IV

Armide, La Haine, Suite de la Haine.

LA HAINE: Je réponds à tes voeux, ta voix s'est fait entendre
Jusque dans le fond des Enfers.
Pour toi, contre l'Amour je vais tout entreprendre,
Et quand on veut bien s'en défendre,
On peut se garantir de ses indignes fers.

LA HAINE ET SA SUITE: Plus on connaît l'Amour, et plus on le déteste,
Détruisons son pouvoir funeste,
Rompons ses noeuds, déchirons son bandeau,
Brûlons ses traits, éteignons son flambeau.
(Le choeur répète ces quatre derniers vers. La Suite de la Haine s'empresse à briser et à brûler les armes dont l'Amour se sert.)

LA HAINE ET SA SUITE: Amour, sors pour jamais, sors d'un coeur qui te chasse,
Que la Haine règne en ta place,
Tu fais trop souffrir sous ta loi,
Non, tout l'Enfer n'a rien de si cruel que toi.
(La Suite de la Haine témoigne qu'elle se prépare avec plaisir à triompher de l'Amour.)

LA HAINE: (approchant d'Armide). Sors, sors du sein d'Armide, Amour, brise ta chaine.

ARMIDE: Arrête, arrête, affreuse Haine!
Laisse-moi, sous les lois d'un si charmant vainqueur,
Laisse-moi, je renonce à ton secours horrible,
Non, non, n'achève pas, non, il n'est pas possible
De m'ôter mon amour sans m'arracher le coeur.

SCENE III

ARMIDE: (alone). Come, implacable Hate,
Quit your noisome depths,
Where terror of you reigns eternally,
Save me from Love, nothing so daring,
Against a foe too yielding,
Restore my anger, rekindle my fury.
Come, implacable Hate,
(Scene changes to Inferno.)
Quit your noisome depths,
Where terror of you reigns eternally.
(Hate emerges from Hades, accompanied by the Furies, by Cruelty, Vengeance, Rage and the Passions who are dependents of Hate.)

SCENE IV

Armide, Hate, Attendants of Hate.

HATE: I obey your summons; your voice has reached deepest Hades.
Against Love, for you, I'll undertake all things,
And when one meets him stubbornly,
There's no need to fear his chains.

HATE and her ATTENDANTS: The more one knows Love, the more one hates him,
Let us now destroy his wretched power,
Let us break his bonds, undo his chains.
Let us extinguish his torch.
(The chorus repeats the four lines. The Attendants of Hate hurry to break and burn the arms used by Love.)

HATE and her ATTENDANTS: Love, now and forever, quit the heart that chases you,
Let Hate reign in your place;
Your law oppresses.
Nothing so cruel exists in Hades.
(The Attendants of Hate evince, by signs, that she is preparing with pleasure to triumph over Love.)

HATE (approaching Armide). Here now from the bosom of Armide, Love, break your chain.

ARMIDE: Stop, frightful Hate!
Leave me beneath this charming victor's laws,
Leave me, renounce your aid,
No, no, it is not possible
To take my love without my heart.

LA HAINE: N'implores-tu mon assistance
Que pour mépriser ma puissance?
Suis l'Amour, puisque tu le veux
Infortunée Armide,
Suis l'Amour qui te guide
Dans un abime affreux.
Sur ces bords écartés, c'est un vain que tu caches
Le Héros dont ton coeur s'est trop laissé toucher:
La gloire à qui tu l'arraches,
Doit bientôt te l'arracher,
Malgré tes soins, au mépris de tes larmes,
Tu le verras échapper à tes charmes.
Tu me rappelleras, peut-être, dès ce jour
Et ton attente sera vaine:
Je vais te quitter sans retour,
Je ne puis te punir d'une plus rude peine
Que de t'abandonner pour jamais à l'Amour.
(La Haine et sa Suite s'abîment.)

SCÈNE V

La scène se change en un paysage sauvage.

ARMIDE: O ciel, quelle horrible menace!
Je fremis . . . tout mon sang se glace!
Amour, pouissant Amour, viens calmer
Mon effroi, et prends jutré d'un coeur
Qui s'abandonne à toi.

FIN DE L'ACTE III.

ACTE QUATRIÈME

SCÈNE I

—Un Paysage Sauvage.

Ubalde et Le Chevalier Danois.

Ubalde porte un bouclier de diamant, et tient un sceptre d'or, qui lui ont été donnés par un magicien pour dissiper les enchantements d'Armide et pour délivrer Renaud.

Le Chevalier Danois porte une épée qu'il doit présenter à Renaud.

Une vapeur s'élève et se répand dans le Désert qui a paru au troisième acte. Des antres et des abîmes s'ouvrent, et il en sort des bêtes farouches et des monstres épouvantables.

UBALE ET LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: (ensemble). Nous ne trouvons partout que des gouffres ouverts.
Armide a dans ces lieux transporté

HATE: Did you implore my assistance
Only to mock my power?
Then follow Love, since you would follow.
Unfortunate Armide,
Follow the Love that leads you
Into an awful abyss,
Upon those lonely banks, in vain you hide
The Hero, by whom your heart is touched too deeply:
Glory, from whom you took him,
Soon shall take him from you,
Despite your care, your tears,
He shall escape your charms.
You may call me again that day,
But vain shall be your summons.
I quit you never to return,
For so rude a treatment
I abandon you to Love.
(Hate and her Attendants sink out of sight).

SCENE V

Scene changes to a rough and wild landscape.

ARMIDE: O Heavens, what a terrible threat!
I shudder — my blood is frozen!
Love, all powerful Love, approach and calm
My fear. Pity a heart abandoned to them.

END OF ACT III.

ACT IV

SCENE I

— Wild, rugged landscape.

Ubalde and the Danish Knight.

Ubalde wears a shield studded with diamonds, and carries a golden sceptre both given to him by a magician to exorcise the enchantments of Armide, and to deliver Renaud.

The Danish Knight carries a sword, which he is to present to Renaud.

A vapor is rising and spreading over the desert shown in the third act. Caves and chasms open, from which come forth wild beasts and frightful monsters.

UBALDE and the DANISH KNIGHT: (together). On every hand we see these yawning gulfs.
Hades has Armide here transported.
Ah! what horrible sights!

les Enfers.
Ah! que d'objets horribles!
Que de monstres terribles?
(Le Chevalier Danois attaque les monstres, Ubalde le retient, et lui montre le sceptre d'or qu'il porte et qui lui a été donné pour dissiper les Enchantements).

UBALDE: Celui qui nous envoie a prévu ce danger
Et nous a montré l'art de nous en dégager.
Ne craignons point Armide ni ses charmes,
Par ce secours plus puissant que nos armes,
Nous en serons aisément garantis.
Laissez-nous un libre passage,
Monstres, allez cacher votre inutile rage
Dans l'abime profond d'où vous êtes sortis.
(Les monstres s'abîment, la vapeur se dissipe, le Dèsert disparaît, et se change en une campagne agréable, bordèe d'arbres chargés de fruits, et arrosée de ruisseaux).

LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: Allons chercher Renaud, le ciel nous favorise
Dans notre pénible entreprise
Ce qui peut flatter nos desirs,
Doit à son tour tenter de nous surprendre
C'est le connais du charme des plaisirs
Que nous voudrons à nous defendre

UBALDE ET LE CHEVALIER DANO: (ensemble). Redoublons nos soins, gardons nous Des périls agréables,
Les enchantements les plus doux
Sont les plus redoutables.

UBALDE: On voit d'ici le séjour enchanté
D'Armide et du Héros qu'elle aime!
Dans ce palais Renaud est arreté.
Par un charme fatal dont la force est extrême
C'est lá que ce vainqueur si fier, si redouté,
Oubliant tout jusqu'à lui-même,
Est réduit a languir avec indignité
Dans une molle oisiveté.

LE CHAVALIER DANOIS: En vain, tout l'enfer s'interéresse
Dans l'amour qui séduit un coeur si glorieux:
Si sur ce bouclier Renaud tourne les yeux,
Il rougira de sa faiblesse,
Et nous l'engagerons à partir de ces lieux.

SCÈNE II

—Un Bois enchantée.

What terrible monsters!
(The Danish Knight attacks the monsters, Ubalde lays hold of him and shows him the golden sceptre which he carries, and which was given to him to exorcise enchantments.)

UBALDE: He who sent us here foresaw this danger,
And the means provided to escape it.
Fear neither Armide nor yet her charms.
By this aid, more potent than our arms.
We shall easily escape.
A free path open to us, monsters,
Your useless rage conceal
There in the depths from which you came.
(The monsters sink out of sight, the vapor is dissipated, the desert disappears, and the scene becomes an agreeable country, bordered by fruit trees, and watered by brooks).

THE DANISH KNIGHT: Come, let us seek Renaud, the heavens favor us
In our weighty enterprise.
What ever can flatter our wishes
Must seek to surprise us first.
Henceforth it is the charms of pleasures
We must beware.

UBALDE and the DANISH KNIGHT: (together). We must be more watchful,
Beware agreeable perils!
The best enchantments and the sweetest
Are those to fear the most.

UBALDE: From here see the enchanted dwelling,
Where lives Armide with him she loves!
In that palace Renaud lingers,
By a fatal charm, of force extreme;
It is there the proud and gallant victor stays.
Forgetting all, forgetting himself,
Reduced to shameful languor,
In weakest laziness.

THE DANISH KNIGHT: In vain all Hades interests itself
In this love that seduces a heart so glorious,
If Rennaud turns his eyes on this shield,
For his weakness he must blush,
And we shall lead him from here.

SCENE II

— Enchanted Wood.

Un Démon, sous la figure de Lucinde, Fille Danoise, aimée du Chevalier Danois. Troupe de Demons transformés en habitants champêtres de l'île qu'Armide a choisie pour y retenir Renaud enchanté.

Ubalde, Le Chevalier Danois.

LUCINDE: Voici la charmante retraite
De la félicité parfaite,
Voici l'heureux séjour
Des Jeux et de l'Amour.
(Le choeur répète ce quatrain. Les habitants champêtres dansent).

UBALDE: (parlant au Chevalier Danois). Allons, qui vous retient encore?
Allons, c'est trop nous arrêter.

LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: Je vois la beauté que j'adore,
C'est elle, je n'en puis douter.

LUCINDE ET LE CHOEUR: Jamais dans ces beaux lieux notre attente n'est vaine
Le bien que nous cherchons se vient offrir à nous,
Et pour l'avoir trouvé peine,
Nous ne l'en trouvons pas moins doux.

LE CHOEUR: Voici la charmante retraite
De la félicité parfaite,
Voici l'heureux séjour
Des Jeux et de l'Amour.

SCÈNE III

LUCINDE (parlant au Chevalier Danois). Enfin, je vois l'amant pour qui mon coeur soupire:
Je retrouve le bien que j'ai tant souhaité

LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: Puis-je voir ici la beauté
Qui m'a soumis à empire?

UBALDE: Non, ce n'est qu'un charme trompeur
Dont il faut garder votre coeur.

LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: Si loin des bords glacés où vous prîtes naissance,
Qui peut vous offrir à mes yeux?

LUCINDE: Par une magique puissance
Armide m'a conduite en ces aimables lieux!
Et je vivais dans la douce espérance
D'y voir bientôt ce que j'aime le mieux.
Goûtons les doux plaisirs que pour nos coeurs fidèles,
Dans cet heureux séjour l'Amour a préparés.
Le devoir par des lois cruelles,
Ne nous a que trop séparés.

UBALDE: Fuyez, faites-vous violence.

A Demon, disguised as Lucinde, a Danish Girl, beloved by the Danish Knight. A Troop of Demons, disguised as peasants of the islet where Armide has chosen to retain Renaud enchanted.

Ubalde, The Danish Knight.

LUCINDE: Behold the sweet retreat
Of perfect bliss;
Behold the happy home
Of Play and Love.
(The Chorus repeats this quatrain, the peasants dance).

UBALDE: (speaking to the Danish Knight). Come, what keeps you here?
Come, we have lingered long.

THE DANISH KNIGHT: I see the beauty I adore,
It is she, I am not mistaken.

LUCINDE and the CHORUS: Never do we linger vainly in these pleasant places.
The good we seek comes ever to us.
And having found it easily,
Does not rob its sweetness from it.

CHORUS: Behold the sweet retreat
Of perfect bliss,
Behold the happy home
Of Play and Love.

SCENE III

LUCINDE (speaking to the Danish Knight). At last I see the lover, for whom I sigh:
I find the good I so much wished.

THE DANISH KNIGHT: Here can I see that beauty
Which rules my heart supreme?

UBALDE: No, it is only a deceiving charm,
Protect your heart against it.

THE DANISH KNIGHT: So distant from the frozen shores that gave you birth,
What brings you here to my sight?

LUCINDE: By magic power
Armide has led me to this pleasant spot,
And I lived in sweetest hope
Of seeing, here, the one I love the best.
Let us taste the pleasure Love provides
For faithful hearts here meeting.
Duty's cruel laws
Have kept us both apart.

UBALDE: Fly, rouse yourself.

LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: L'amour ne me le permet pas,
Contre de si charmants appas,
Mon coeur est sans défense.

UBALDE: Est-ce là cette fermeté
Dont vous vous êtes tant vanté?

LE CHEVALIER DANOIS ET LUCINDE: (ensemble). Jouissons d'un bonheur extrême.
Hé! quel autre bien peut valoir
Le plaisir de voir ce qu'on aime?
Hé! quel autre bien peut valoir
Le plaisir de vous voir?

UBALDE: Malgrè la puissance infernale,
Malgrè vous-même, il faut vous dètromper.
Ce sceptre d'or peut dissiper
Une erreur si fatale.
(Ubalde touche Lucinde avec le sceptre d'or qu'il tient et Lucinde disparaît aussitôt).

SCÈNE IV

Le Chevalier Danois, Ubalde.

LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: Je tourne en vain mes yeux de toutes parts,
Je ne vois plus cette beauté si chère.
Elle échappe à mes regards
Comme une vapeur légère.

UBALDE: Ce que l'Amour a de charmant
N'est qu'une illusion qui ne laisse après elle
Qu'une honte éternelle.
Ce que l'Amour a de charmant
N'est qu'un funeste enchantement.
D'une nouvelle erreur songeons à nous défendre.
Evitons de trompeurs attraits.
Ne nous détournons plus du chemin qu'il faut prendre
Pour arriver à ce palais.

UBALDE et LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: Fuyons les douceurs dangereuses
Des illusions amoureuses:
On s'égare quand on les fuit,
Heureux qui n'en est pas séduit!

FIN DE L'ACTE IV.

■ ACTE CINQUIÈME

Le théâtre représente un autre endroit du Jardin.

SCÈNE I

Renaud, Armide.

RENAUD (sans armes, et paré de guirlandes de fleurs.) Armide, vous m'allez quitter!

THE DANISH KNIGHT: Love permits me not,
Against such sweet allurements
My heart is helpless.

UBALDE: Is this then that firmness
You so vaunt about?

THE DANISH KNIGHT and LUCINDE: (together). Let us enjoy this happiness.
What other good is worth
The pleasure of seeing one you love?
Ah! what other good is worth
The pleasure of seeing you?

UBALDE: Despite infernal influence,
Despite yourself, you must be saved.
This golden sceptre has the power
To banish fatal errors.
(Ubalde touches Lucinde with the golden sceptre which he carries, and Lucinde at once disappears).

SCENE IV

The Danish Knight, Ubalde.

THE DANISH KNIGHT: Everywhere I turn my eyes in vain
Seeking that beauty, dear.
She escapes my vision
Like thinnest vapor.

UBALDE: The charming things of Love
Are only illusions, leaving naught
But shame behind them.
The charming things of Love
Let us now beware of new errors,
And of false attractions.
Never must we leave the path before us
To reach that palace.

UBALDE and the DANISH KNIGHT: Let us beware of dangerous attractions
Such as Love's illusions:
Happy is he who escapes
Their blandishments.

END OF ACT IV.

■ ACT V

The stage represents another part of the Garden.

SCENE I

Renaud, Armide.

RENAUD: (without his arms, and bedecked with garlands of flowers). Armide, can you leave me?

ARMIDE: J'ai besoin des Enfers, je vais les consulter,
Mon art veut de la solitude.
L'amour que j'ai pour vous cause l'inquiétude
Dont mon coeur se sent agiter.

RENAUD: Armide, vous m'allez quitter!

ARMIDE: Voyez en quels lieux je vous laisse.

RENAUD: Puis-je rien que voir que vos appas?

ARMIDE: Les plaisirs vous suivront sans cesse.

RENAUD: En est-il où vous n'êtes pas?

ARMIDE: Un noir pressentiment me trouble et me tourmente,
Il m'annonce un malheur que je veux prévenir,
Et plus notre bonheur m'enchante,
Plus je crains de le voir finir.

RENAUD: D'une vaine terreur pouvez-vous être atteinte,
Vous qui faites tembler le ténébreux séjour?

ARMIDE: Vous m'apprenez à connaître l'Amour,
L'Amour m'apprend à connaître la crainte.
Vous brûliez pour la Gloire avant que de m'aimer,
Vous la cherchiez partout d'une ardeur sans égale:
La Gloire est une rivale
Qui doit toujours m'alarmer.

RENAUD: Que j'étais insensé de croire
Qu'un vain laurier donné par la victoire,
De tous les biens fût le plus précieux!
Tout l'éclat dont brille la Gloire
Vaut-il un regard de vos yeux?
Est-il un bien si charmant et si rare
Que celui dont l'Amour veut combler mon espoir?

ARMIDE: La sévère Raison et le Devoir barbare
Sur les Héros n'ont que trop de pouvoir.

RENAUD: J'en suis plus amoureux plus la Raison m'éclaire.
Vous aimer, belle Armide, est mon premier devoir,
Je fais ma gloire de vous plaire
Et tout mon bonheur de vous voir.

ARMIDE: Que sous d'aimables lois mon âme est asservie!

RENAUD: Qu'il m'est doux de vous voir partager ma langueur!

ARMIDE: Qu'il m'est doux d'enchaîner un si fameux vainqueur!

RENAUD: Que mes fers sont dignes d'envie!

ARMIDE: I have need of Hades, I must consult with him,
My heart needs solitude.
The love I bear you causes unrest
I feel it in my heart.

RENAUD: Armide, would you leave me?

ARMIDE: See in what place I leave you.

RENAUD: Can I see nothing but your allurements?

ARMIDE: Pleasures will follow you always.

RENAUD: Do they exist where you are absent?

ARMIDE: A dark presentiment haunts me,
Announcing ills I would escape.
The more our happiness enchants me,
The more I dread its end.

RENAUD: Are you not afflicted by a vain terror,
You who make all Hades tremble?

ARMIDE: You have taught me to know Love,
Love teaches me to know Fear.
Before you loved me, you burned for Glory,
You sought her everywhere with matchless ardor:
Glory is a rival whom I must always dread.

RENAUD: How foolish I was to believe
That a vain laurel, given by victory,
Was the most precious of gifts!
All Glory's brilliant acclaims,
Do they equal a glance from your eyes?
Is there a boon, so charming, so rare,
As that which fires my hope through Love?

ARMIDE: Stern Reason and inflexible Duty,
These govern all heroes.

RENAUD: I am too much in love for Reason to teach me.
To love you, my beautiful Armide, is my principal duty,
It is my glory to please you,
And all my happiness to see you, Armide.

ARMIDE: Under such gentle rule, how weak is my soul!

RENAUD: How sweet to see you share my leisure.

ARMIDE: How sweet to be enchanted by so famous a victor!

RENAUD: How enviable are my chain.

RENAUD et ARMIDE: (ensembel). Aimons-nous, tout nous y convie.
Ah! si vous aviez la rigueur
De m'ôter votre, coeur,
Vous m'ôteriez le vie.

ARMIDE: Témoins de notre amour extrême,
Vous, qui suivez mes lois dans ce séjour heureux,
Jusques à mon retour, par d'agréables jeux,
Occupez le Héros que j'aime.
(Les Plaisirs, et une troupe d'Amants fortunés et d'Amantes heureuses, viennent divertir Renaud par des chants et par des danses).

SCÈNE II

Renaud, les Plaisirs, Troupe d'Amants Fortunés et d'Amantes Heureuses.

UN AMANT FORTUNÉ et LES CHOEURS: Les plaisirs ont choisi pour asile
Ce séjour agréable et tranquille.
Que ces lieux sont charmants,
Pour les heureux amants!
(Gavotte).
C'est l'Amour qui retient dans ses chaînes
Mille oiseaux qu'en nos bois nuit et jour on entend
Si l'Amour ne causait que des peines,
Les oiseaux amoureux ne chanteraient pas tant.
(Menuet, puis Sicilienne).
Jeunes coeurs, tout vous est favorable.
Profitez d'un bonheur peu durable.
Dans l'hiver de nos ans, l'amour ne règne plus,
Les beaux jours que l'on perd sont pour jamais perdus.
Les plaisirs ont choisi pour asile
Ce séjour agréable et tranquille.
Que ces lieux sont charmants
Pour les heureux amants!

RENAUD: Allez, éloignez-vous de moi,
Doux Plaisirs, attendez qu'Armide vous ramène.
Sans la beauté qui me tient sous sa loi,
Rien ne me plaît, tout augmente ma peine.
Allez, éloignez-vous de moi,
Doux plaisirs, attendez qu'Armide vous remène.
(Les Plaisirs, les Amants fortunés et les Amantes heureuses se retirent).

SCÈNE III

Renaud, Ubalde, Le Chevalier Danois.

RENAUD and ARMIDE: (together). Let us love each other.
Ah! If your's was the power
To reclaim your heart,
You would take my life.

ARMIDE: Witnesses of our love extreme,
You, who here obey my laws,
Awaiting my return, with pleasant games,
Amuse the hero whom I love.
(Pleasures, and a Troop of Happy Lovers come to entertain Renaud with songs and dances).

SCENE II

Renaud, Pleasures, Troop of Happy Lovers.

A HAPPY LOVER and CHORUS: For its asylum, Pleasure has chosen
This tranquil, agreeable abode.
How charming is this place
For happy lovers.
(Gavotte).
It is Love which enchains
A thousand birds that sing, both night and day.
If love caused only trouble,
The feathered lover would sing much less.
(Minuet, then a Sicilian dance).
Youthful hearts, all favored,
Seize a fleeting happiness.
Love does not rule
The winter of our years.
Fine days, when lost are lost forever.
For its asylum, Pleasure hs chosen
This tranquil, agreeable abode.
How charming is this place
For happy Lovers!

RENAUD: Leave me, sweet Pleasures,
Await Armide's return.
Without that beauty nothing pleases me.
Leave me, sweet Pleasures,
Await Armide's return.
(Pleasures and the Troop of Happy Lovers retire.)

SCENE III

Renaud, Ubalde, The Danish Knight.

UBALDE: Il est seul; profitons d'un temps si précieux.
(Ubalde présente le bouclier de diamant aux yeux de Renaud).

RENAUD: Que vois-je! Quel éclat me vient frapper les yeux?

UBALDE: Le ciel veut vous faire connaître
L'erreur dont vos sens sont séduits.

RENAUD: Ciel! quelle honte de paraître
Dans l'indigne état où je suis!

UBALDE: Notre général vous rappelle,
La Victoire vous garde une palme immortelle.
Tout doit presser votre retour.
De cent divers climats chacun court à la guerre,
Renaud seul, au bout de la Terre,
Caché dans un charmant séjour,
Veut-il suivre un honteux Amour?

RENAUD: Vains ornements d'une indigne mollesse,
Ne m'offrez plus vos frivoles attraits:
Restes honteux de ma faiblesse,
Allez, quittez-moi pour jamais.
(Renaud arrache les guirlandes de fleurs et les autres ornements inutiles dont il est paré. Il reçoit le bouclier de diamants que lui donne Ubalde, et une épée que lui présente le Chevalier Danois).

LE CHEVALIER DANOIS: Dérobez-vous aux pleurs d'Armide.
C'est l'unique danger dont votre âme intrépide
A besoin de se garantir.
Dans ces lieux enchantés la volupté préside,
Vous n'en sauriez trop tôt sortir.

RANAUD: Allons, hâtons-nous de partir.

SCÈNE IV

Armide, Renaud, Ubalde, Le Chevalier Danois.

ARMIDE: (suivant Renaud). Renaud! Ciel! O mortelle peine!
Vous partez! Renaud! Vous partez!
Démons, suivez ses pas, volez, et l'arrêtez.
Hélas! tout me trahit, et ma puissance est vaine!
Renaud! Ciel! O mortelle peine!
Mes cris ne sont pas écoutés!
Vous partez! Renaud! vous partez!
(Renaud s'arrête pour écouter Armide, qui continue à lui parler.)
Si je ne vous plus, croyez-vous que je vive?
Ai-je pu mériter un si cruel tourment?
Au moins, comme ennemi, si ce n'est comme amant,
Emmenez Armide captive.
J'irai dans les combats, j'irai m'offrir aux coups

UBALDE: He's alone, let us seize the propitious moment. (Ubalde holds the diamond shield before Renaud's eyes).

RENAUD: What do I see! What dazzling light is this?

UBALDE: Heaven wills that you should know
The error cast over your senses.

RENAUD: Heavens! How ashamed am I to be Seen thus attired!

UBALDE: Our general calls you,
Victory reserves immortal palms for you.
All must hasten your return.
From divers climates each one hastes to war,
Renaud alone, so far away,
A midst pleasant scenes conceared,
Would follow shameful Love?

RENAUD: Vain ornaments of a shameful leisure,
Your frivolous attractions cease from offering.
Hence, forever leave me.
(Renaud tears off the garlands of flowers and other useless ornaments with which he is decked, he receives the diamond shield which Ubalde gives him and the sword presented by the Danish Knight).

THE DANISH KNIGHT: Leave behind your Armide and her tears—
The only danger your intrepid soul fears.
Pleasure resides in such places as these.
The sooner you leave them the better.

RENAUD: Come, let us hasten.

SCENE IV

Armide, Renaud, Ubalde, The Danish Knight.

ARMIDE: (following Renaud).
Renaud! O mortal pain!
You go! Renaud! You go!
Demons, follow in his footsteps, quick, detain him.
Alas! I am betrayed by all, my power is vain!
Renaud! O mortal pain!
My cries remain unheard!
You go! Renaud! you go!
(Renaud stops to listen to Armide, who continues speaking to him.)
If no more I see you, can I live?
How have I earned such cruel treatment?
If not my lover, as my enemy
Take Armide with you, a captive.
I will go to war, I'll stand between you
And the blows for you intended.
Renaud, if I can only follow you,

Qui seront destinés pour vous.
Renaud, pourvu que je vous suive,
Le sort le plus affreux me paraîtra trop doux.

RENAUD: Armide, il est temps que j'évite
Le péril trop chamant que je trouve à vous voir.
La Gloire veut que je vous quitte,
Elle ordonne à l'Amour de céder au Devoir.
Si vous souffrez, vous pouvez croire
Que je m'éloigne à regret de vos yeux,
Vous régnerez toujours dans ma mémoire,
Vous serez après la Gloire
Ce que j'aimerai le mieux.

ARMIDE: Non, jamais de l'Amour tu n'as senti le charme.
Tu te plais à causer de funestes malheurs,
Tu m'entends soupirer, tu vois couler mes pleurs,
Sans me rendre un soupir, san verser une larme.
Par les noeuds les plus doux je te conjure en vain,
Tu suis un fier Devoir, tu veux qu'il nous sépare.
Non, non, ton coeur n'a rien d'humain,
Le coeur d'un tigre est moins barbare.
Je mourrai si tu pars, et tu n'en peux douter,
Ingrat, sans toi je ne puis vivre.
Mais après mon trépas ne crois pas éviter
Mon ombre obstinée à te suivre.
Tu la verras s'armer contre ton coeur sans foi.
Tu la trouveras inflexible!
Comme tu l'as été pour moi;
Et sa fureur, s'il est possible
Egalera l'amour dont j'ai brûlé pour toi . . .
Ah! la lumière m'est ravie!
Barbare, es-tu content?
Tu jouis, en partant.
Du plaisir de m'ôter la vie.
(Armide tombe et s'évanouit.)

The worst fate will seem to me but sweet.

RENAUD: Armide, it's time I leave behind
The far too charming peril of your presence.
Glory bids me leave you,
She commands that Love should yield to Duty.
If you suffer, then believe, Armide,
That I go with regret,
You always shall reign in my memory.
Next to Glory
I shall love you best.

ARMIDE: No, never have you felt the charm of Love.
It pleases you to cause affliction,
My sighs you hear, my tears are seen,
But you, hard hearted, sigh not, nor weep in return.
By the tenderest ties I plead in vain,
You follow a vaunted Duty, you obey gladly.
No, No, your heart has nothing human,
Less savage is the tiger's heart.
If you go I shall die, and well you know
Ingrate, that without you I must die.
But believe this, my shade shall ever pursue you.
You shall see it armed against your faithless heart.
You shall find it inflexible!
As you have been to me,
And its fury—be that possible—
Shall equal the love I bear you
Ah! the light has left me!
Rogue, are you content?
It pleases you in going,
To take from me my life.
(Armide falls, fainting.)

RENAUD: Trop malheureuse Armide, hélas!
Que ton destin est déplorable!

SCÈNE V ET DERNIÈRE

ARMIDE: (seule). Le perfide Renaud me fuit,
Tout perfide qu'il est, mon lâche coeur le suit.
Il me laisse mourante, il veut que je périsse.
A regret je revois la clarté qui me luit,
L'horreur de l'éternelle nuit
Cède à l'horreur de mon supplice.
Le perfide Renaud me fuit,
Tout perfide qu'il est, mon lâche coeur le suit.
Quand le barbare éait en ma puissance,
Que n'ai-je cru la Haine et la Vengeance!
Que n'ai-je suivi leurs transports!
Il m'échappe, il s'éloigne, il va quitter ces bords,
Il brave l'Enfer et ma rage,
Il est déjà près du rivage,
Je fais pour m'y trainer d'inutiles efforts
Traître, attends . . . je le tiens, je tiens son coeur perfide.
Ah! je l'immole à ma fureur . . .
Que dis-je! où suis-je, hélas! Infortunée Armide!
Où t'emporte une aveugle erreur?
L'espoir de la vengeance est le seul qui me reste.
Fuyez, Plaisirs, fuyez, perdez tous vos attraits.
Démons, détruisez ce palais.
Partons, et s'il le faut, que mon amour funeste
Demeure enseveli dans ces lieux pour jamais.
(Les Démons détruisent le Palais enchanté, et Armide part sur un Char Volant).

FIN.

RENAUD: Too unhappy Armide alas!
How grievous is your lot!

SCENE V AND LAST

ARMIDE: (alone). Perfidious Renaud had left me;
Perifidious though he be, my wretched heart must follow him.
He leaves me dying, he wishes my death;
With regret I see again the light of day;
The horror of eternal night
Yields to the horror of my pain.
Perfidious Renaud has left me;
Perfidious though he may be, my wretched heart must follow him.
When he was in my power,
Why thought I not of Hate and Vengeance!
Why followed not their transport!
He has escaped me, he has left these shores;
He braves Hades and my wrath,
Already is he near the brink,
Useless are my efforts to restrain him.
Traitor await . . . I hold him, I hold his perfidious heart.
Ah! I immolate him to my fury . . .
What say I! where am I, alas! Unfortunate Armide!
Where does my blinding error lead?
Hope of vengeance is the only hope remaining.
Hence, Pleasures, hence, all your attractions hide.
Demons destroy this palace.
Let us leave it, henceforth let my wretched love
Remain entombed here for ever.
(The Demons destroy the enchanted Palace, and Armide leaves in a flying Car).

THE END.

Roméo et Juliette (1867)

Romeo and Juliet

MUSIC BY CHARLES GOUNOD ■ LIBRETTO BY JULES BARBIER & MICHEL CARRÉ ■ BASED ON THE PLAY BY WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

This five-act opera, set to a libretto by Jules Barbier and Michel Carré and based on Shakespeare's tragedy, premiered at the Théâtre-Lyrique in Paris on April 27, 1867. Roméo, a Montague and thus an enemy of the Capulets, sneaks in to a Capulet ball wearing a mask. When he lays eyes on Juliette, a Capulet, he falls in love with her at once and she with him. Tybalt, Juliette's cousin, vows to seek vengeance. Roméo comes in secret to see Juliette, who waits for him on her balcony. Some Capulet servants catch him and try to kill him, but he escapes and returns later. The young lovers want to get married in spite of their families' enmity. Frére Laurent, Juliette's confessor, helps the young couple. Soon after the ceremony, a huge brawl erupts. Roméo tries to stop the fight between the Capulets and the Montagues, to no avail, refusing to take up Tybalt's challenge because of his love for Juliette. But when Mercutio is slain, he kills Typbalt in revenge. The Duke of Verona banishes him. Roméo spends the night with his bride before departing. Juliette's father tells her in Frére Laurent's presence that Tybalt's last request was for her to marry Count Paris. Frére Laurent comforts her and advises her to take a sleeping potion that will make everyone, except for Roméo, think she is dead. Roméo is the only one who will know differently. Juliette collapses at the wedding her family has arranged for her. Roméo, who fails to receive Frére Laurent's message explaining Juliette's "death," sneaks into the Capulet tomb to see his beloved one last time. He poisons himself; Juliette awakens. He dies, and as he does, she stabs herself with his dagger. They are united in death.

Prologue.

LE CHOEUR: Vérone vit jadis deux familles rivales,
Les Montaigus, les Capulets,
De leurs guerres sans fin, à toutes deux la tales,
Ensanglanter le seuil de ses palais.
Comme un rayon vermeil brille en un ciel d'orage,
Juliette parut, et Roméo l'aima!
Et tous deux, oubliant le nom qui les outrage,
Un même amour les enflamma.
Sort funeste! aveugles colères!
Ces malheureux amants payèrent de leurs jours
La fin des haines séculaires
Qui virent naître leurs amours!

■ ACTE PREMIER.

SCÈNE I

Une galérie splendidement illuminée, chez les Capulets.

Seugneurs et Dames, en dominos et masques.

CHOEUR: L'heure s'envole,
Joyeuse et folle;
Au passage il faut la saisir!
Cueillons les roses
Pour nous écloses
Dans la joie et dans le plaisir!

Prologue.

CHORUS: There were once in Verona
Two rival families,
The Montagues and the Capulets.
By their endless wars,
To both fatal,
they stained their palaces with blood.
As a glittering ray in a cloudy sky
Juliette came and Romeo loved her;
Forgetting their family dissensions
The same love united them.
Sorrowful fate! Blind ill-fortune!
The unhappy lovers paid with their lives
For the hatred of centuries which had nurtured their love.

■ ACT I.

SCENE I.

A ball magnificently decorated in Capulet's house.

Lords and Ladies in masks and dominoes.

CHORUS: Swift hours of pleasure
Pass to gay measure
Danced in the maze of glimmering feet;
While at the closes
Red wreck of roses
From our chaplets fall crushed but sweet!

LES HOMMES: Choeur fantasque
Des amours,
Sous le masque
De velours,
Ton empire
Nous attire
D'un sourire,
D'un regard!
Et, complice,
Le coeur glisse
Au caprice
Du hasard!

LES FEMMES: Nuit d'ivresse!
Folle nuit!
L'on nous presse,
L'on nous suit!
Le moins tendre
Va se rendre,
Et se prendre
Dans nos rêts.
De la belle Qui l'appelle
Tout révèle
Les attraits.

TOUS: L'heure s'envole, etc.

SCÈNE II

Les Mêmes, Tybalt, Pâris.

(Tybalt et Pâris entrent en scène, leur masque à la main.)

TYBALT: Eh bien! cher Pâris, que vous semble
De la fête des Capulets?

PÂRIS: Richesse et beauté tout ensemble
Sont les hôtes de ce palais.

LORDS: Happy masks that kiss a fair maid,
Do but tell the grace they shade,
Half concealing,
Half revealing,
Love, in every charm arrayed!
Gleams of heaven—but sparely given—
Yet for these a heart is paid!

LADIES: Night of fancy—lustrous night,
All your stars to love invite;
Sweet laugh calling,
Light foot falling,
And low cadence,
Sung by maidens,
Smooths a rough man to a woman's will!

CHORUS: Swift hours of pleasure, etc.

SCENE II.

Paris, Tybalt, and the above.

(Enter Paris and Tybalt with their masks in their hands)

TYBALT: Well, Paris, my friend, what do you think of the feast of the Capulets?

PARIS: What earth holds of excelling beauty
Has assembled as a guest in these halls.

TYBALT: Vous n'en voyez pas la merveille; le trésor unique et sans prix
Qu'on destine à l'heureux Pâris.

PÂRIS: Si mon coeur encore sommeille,
Le moment est proche où l'amour
Viendra l'éveiller à son tour.

TYBALT: (souriant). Il s'éveillera, je l'espère.
Regardez! . . . la voici, conduite par son père.

SCÈNE III

Les Mêmes, Capulet, Juliette.

(Capulet entre en scène conduisant Juliette par la maison son aspect tout le monde se démasque.)

CAPULET: Soyez les bienvenus, amis, dans ma maison!
A cette fête de famille
La joie est de saison! . . .
Pareil jour vit naître ma fille;
Mon coeur bat de plaisir encore en y songeant! . . .
Mais excusez ma tendresse indiscrète!
(Présentant Juliette.)
Voici ma Juliette! . . .
Accueillez-la d'un regard indulgent.

LES HOMMES: (à demi-voix). Ah! qu'elle est belle!
On dirait une fleur nouvelle
Qui s'épanouit au matin!

LES FEMMES: (de même). Ah! qu'lle est belle!
Elle semble porter en elle
Toutes les faveurs du destin! . . .

TOUS: (à demi-voix). Ah! qu'elle est belle!
(On entend le prélude d'un air de danse).

JULIET: Ecoutez! écoutez! C'est le son des instruments joyeux; Qui nous appelle et nous convie! Ah! Tout un monde enchanté semble naitre à mes yeux! Tout me fête et m'enivre, Tout me fête et m'enivre!
Et mon âme ravie
S'élance dans la vie,
Comme un oiseau s'envole aux cieux!

CAPULET: Allons! jeunes gens! Allons! belles dames! Aux plus diligents. Ces yeux pleins des flammes. Ces yeux, ces yeux pleins de flammes! Nargue! Nargue! des censeurs qui grondent, qui grondent, qui grondent sans cesse! Fêtez la jeunesse! Fêtez la jeunesse! Fêtez la jeunesse: Et place aux danseurs!
Qui reste à sa place
Et ne danse pas
De quelque disgrâce
Fait l'aveu tout bas.
O regret extrême!
Quand j'étais moins vieux,
Je guidais moi-même
Vos ébats joyeux.
Les douces paroles
Ne me coûtaient rien.
Que d'aveux frivoles
Dont je me souviens!
O folles années
Qu'emporte le temps!
O fleurs du printemps
A jamais fanées! . . .

LE CHOEUR: Nargue des censeurs
Qui grondent sans cesse!
Fêtons la jeunesse!
Et place aux danseurs!
(Tout le monde s'éloigne et circule dans les galéries sines, Juliette sort au bras de Pâris. Capulet et Tybalt suivant en causant. Roméo et Mercutio paraissent ave leurs amis.) Roméo, Mercutio, Benvolio, et quelques de leurs amis.)

SCÈNE IV

MERCUTIO: La place est libre, mes amis!
Pour un instant qu'il soit permis
D'ôter son masque!

ROMÉO: Non! . . . non! vous l'avez promis;
Soyons prudents! nul ne doit nous naître.
Quittons cette maison sans affronter maître.

MERCUTIO: Bah! si les Capulets sont gens à se fâcher
C'est lâcheté de nous cacher,
(Frappant sur son épée.)
Car nous avons tous là de quoi leur tenir tête!

ROMÉO: Mieux eût valu, ne pas nous mêler à la fête!

MERCUTIO: Pourquoi?

ROMÉO: J'ai fait un rêve!

MERCUTIO: O présage alarmant!
La reine Mab t'a visité?

ROMÉO: Comment?

MERCUTIO: Mab, la reine des mensonges, Préside aux songes. Plus légère, plus légère que le vent Décevant, A travers l'espace, A travers la nuit, Elle passe, Elle fuit, Elle passe, Elle fuit.
Son char, que l'atôme rapide
Entraîne dans l'éther limpide,
Fut fait d'une noisette vide

TYBALT: Still you are thinking of just one, it seems,
The marvel and pride of us all—
Fariest Juliet—your promised bride!

PARIS: Ay! my heart ever dreams of her,
And will dream, till, radiant and bright,
She rises star-like on the dark of night!

TYBALT: Then you will awake—happy Paris!
Lo! she comes—her father leads
The timid maiden!

SCENE III.

Capulet, Juliet, and the above.

(Enter Capulet with Juliet, all the guests unmask.)

CAPULET: I bid you welcome, gentlemen,
To my house! And you, fair ladies;
Tonight we hold an old accustomed feast.
This, my child, I now commend unto you,
A slip that has not seen the change
Of many years. Of all earth's hopes
She alone now is left me—my Juliet!
Sweetest daughter! I pray you pardon me—
A father's weak heart!

LORDS: (in a low voice) Ah! she is charming,
No such beauty in all Verona,
And our summer has no such flower!

LADIES: (same as a bove) Ah! she is charming,
All the radiance of heaven indwelling,
All the grace of earth for her dower!

ALL: Ah, she is charming, etc.
(Prelude of the dance heard.)

JULIET: Listen all! listen all! It is the sound of joyous instruments; that calls us and bids us assemble, Ah! . . . The whole enchanted world, seems to be born in front of my eyes! All now fires me, all inspires me, All enflames and inspires me.
Light to life now is flowing,
Strange hopes are in me glowing.
Bird-like the starry vault I'd dare
For now my home seems lying there.

CAPULET: Come! gallant youths! Come! beautiful ladies! Come, champion, so bold. Your eyes filled with flames! Your eyes, your eyes filled with flames! Banish; banish each thought of care, That scolds us, us without ceasing. Celebrate youth! Celebrate youth! Celebrate youth! Give pleasure its share.
Ha! my mistresses—will you foot it now?
If you do not—then your toes have corns, I'll vow!
By're lady! my day
For a measure is gone,
Though gallant more gay
Never vizor put on!
To ladies' ear oft
A love-tale I'd tell,
And whispering soft,
I'd please her right well!
Gone! lady and lover—
My beard now is hoar,
I'll mask me no more
My gay time is over!
Come, gallant youths! Come!
Give pleasure its share;
Give pleasure its share.

CHORUS: Banish each thought of care that scolds without ceasing! Celebrate youth! And make way for the dancers!
(All the guests go off by the various entrances, Juliet leaning on Paris' arm. Capulet and Tybalt follow them. Enter Romeo, Mercutio, and Benvolio, with half a dozen friends.)

SCENE IV.

Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, and friends.

MERCUTIO: Al last we are alone, my friends!
O beetle brows that blush for me, I now
May be rid of you.

ROMEO: No, you have promised
Be prudent still—that no one may suspect us!
The Capulet's our foe—beware his anger!

MERCUTIO: Bah! If they think we come to scorn and jeer
Their feast—why then we're not the cowards to hide!
And should they question us, our swords shall give
The answer!

ROMEO: Pray you, wait—
My soul is sad with foreboding—

MERCUTIO: Why?

ROMEO: I had a dream!

MERCUTIO: Ah! but dreams often lie!
So then Queen Mab has been with you?

ROMEO: Pardon?

MERCUTIO: Mab, the fairy queen of falsehood, presides over visions, Lighter than, lighter than the soft summer wind, Across time and space, Across the night, Journeying onward like a flash, Journeying onward like a flash. For atoms draw her,
Up to poor sleeping mortals' noses,

Par Ver-de-Terre, le charron;
Les harnais, subtile dentelle,
Ont été découpés dans l'aile
De quelque verte sauterelle
Par son cocher, le moucheron;
Un os de grillon sert de manche
A son fouet, dont la mèche blanche
Est prise au rayon qui s'épanche
De Phoebé rassemblant sa cour;
Chaque nuit, dans cet équipage,
Mab visite sur son passage
L'epoux, qui rêve de veuvage,
Et l'amant, qui rêve d'amour!
A son approche, la coquette
Rêve d'atours et de toilette;
Le courtisan fait la courbette;
Le poète rim ses vers;
A l'avare, en son gîte sombre,
Elle offre des trésors sans nombre;
Et la liberté rit dans l'ombre
Au prisonnier chargé de fers!
Le soldat rêve d'embuscades,
De batailles et d'estocades;
Elle lui verse les rasades
Dont ses lauriers sont arrosés;
—Et toi qu'un soupir effarouche,
Quand tu reposes sur ta couche,
O vierge, elle effleure ta bouche,
Et te fait rêver de baisers!
Mab, la reine des mensonges, etc.

ROMÉO: Eh bien! . . . que l'avertissement
Me vienne de Mab ou d'un autre,
Sous ce toit qui n'est pas le nôtre,
Je me sens attristé d'un noir pressentiment.

MERCUTIO: Ta tristesse, je le devine, Est de ne pas trouver ici ta Rosaline;
Cent autres dans ce bal te feront oublier
Ton fol amour d'écolier!
Viens! . . .

ROMÉO: (regardent au dehors). Ah! voyez!

MERCUTIO: Qu'est-ce donc?

ROMÉO: Cette beauté céleste
Qui semble un rayon dans la nuit!

MERCUTIO: Le porte-respect qui la suit
Est d'une beauté plus modeste!

ROMÉO: O trésor digne des cieux!
Quelle clarté soudaine a dessillé mes yeux?
Je ne connaissais pas la beauté véritable!

In a chariot then she reposes,
Made of a hazel-nut;
And the wagon-spokes, of the spinner's legs, slender and long;
The coachman, a small gray-coated gnat,
Who wields a cricket-bone whip, filmed for a thong!
The traces are made of a small spider's web,
Collars of the moonshine's watery beam,
So she comes in royal state,
While we sleep and dream!
While he sleeps—the husband dreaming of widowhood,
The lover dreaming of love,
And a better living to boot!
Then the miser in dreams beholds
Vain wealth that wicked Mab upholds,
And to a captive pining all alone,
Liberty smiles through bar and stone!
Over the neck of the soldier driving,
He dreams of swift foreign battle,
Of Spanish blade and cannon's rattle,
Then wakes—and swears a prayer or two!
To you Mab will come, gentle maiden,
Sleeping arrayed in your tender grace,
And, sly kisses bestowing on you,
Make you dream of love's kisses too!
Mab! Queen Mab, etc.

ROMEO: No more—Might the advice
Come from Mab or others,
In this home which is not ours.
My mind misgives me of some sad consequence.

MERCUTIO: Little marvel
Your sad demeanor. The pretty Rosaline
Is not among the dancers. But faces fair
There are here that, once you see them
Will make you think your swan is but a crow!
Come!

ROMEO: (looking off). Ah! Look!

MERCUTIO: What is it now?

ROMEO: Beauty that shows the torches
To burn more bright in the darkness!

MERCUTIO: The beldame that follows behind
Is not, by my word, so lovely!

ROMEO: Like a rich gem on an Ethiop's ear,
Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night!
Oh, never till this hour

Ai-je aimé jusqu'ici? . . .

MERCUTIO: (en riant, à Benvolio et aux autres jeunes gens).
Bon! Bon! voilà Rosaline au diable!
Et nous avions prévu ceci!
On la congédie
Sans plus de souci;
Et la comédie
Se termine ainsi!

TOUS: (moins Roméo, à demi-voix, et en riant). On la congédie
Sans plus de souci, etc.
(Mercutio entraîne Roméo, au moment où paraît Juliette suivie de Gertrude.)

SCÈNE V

Juliette, Gertrude.

JULIETTE: Voyons, nourrice, on m'attend! parle vite!

GERTRUDE: Respirez un moment! . . . est-ce moi qu'on évite,
Ou le comte Pâris que l'on cherche?

JULIETTE: Pâris?

GERTRUDE: Vous aurez là, dit-on, la perle des maris!

JULIETTE: (riant) Ah! ah! je songe bien vraiment au mariage!

GERTRUDE: Par ma vertu! j'étais marié à votre âge!

JULIETTE: Non, non; je ne veux pas t'écouter plus longtemps;
Laisse mon âme à son printemps! . . .
Je veux vivre Dans le rêve qui m'enivre ce jour encore! douce flamme, Je te garde dans mon âme
Comme un trésor!
Cette ivresse
De jeunesse
Ne dure, hélas! qu'un jour!
Puis vient l'heure
Où l'on pleure;
Le coeur cède à l'amour,
Et le bonheur fuit sans retour!
Loin de l'hiver morose
Laisse-moi sommeiller,
Et respirer la rose
Avant de l'effeuiller!
Je veux vivre, etc.
(Grégorio paraît au fond et se rencontre avec Roméo.)

SCÈNE VI

Les Mêmes, Grégorio, Roméo.

Have I met with true beauty! Did my heart
Love them before? No—never till now!

MERCUTIO: (In laughter, to Benvolio and the other young gentlemen).
Good!
Gone is Rosaline's dominion,
Dead the old desire lies!
The fair he groaned for, and would gladly die,
With the tender Juliet matched, is now not fair!

ALL: (except Roméo, half-voiced, with laughter). Gone is Rosaline's dominion, etc.
(Mercutio, Romeo, etc., exeunt just as Juliet, followed by Gertrude, appears.)

SCENE V.

Juliet, Gertrude.

JULIET: What is it you want to tell me? Good nurse, speak!
Speak, I pray you!

GERTRUDE: Take breath! Is it me you escape,
Or Paris you endeavor to meet?

JULIET: Paris!

GERTRUDE: A proper man, I think; you've made a happy choice.

JULIET: (laughing). Ah, Ah! Good nurse, my maiden heart
Thinks not of marriage.

GERTRUDE: Go to! go to!
At your age, I was married.

JULIET: No more! Leave me now, I beg, to the fair dream
Of youth!
I want to live In the dream that exhilarates me again today!
Sweet flames I am guarding in my soul Like a treasure!
As in a fair dream enveloped,
Born of pure fantasy,
Spirits from fairy lands of old,
Come to me now!
Ah! forever would this gladness
Shine on me as brightly as now,
Would that never age and sadness
Threw their shade over my brow!
But short as day,
Youth passes away!
Then before the summer's failing,
Pluck the rose that blooms to die,
Love with its breath inhaling,
Love that steals in its odorous sigh!
In the calmness of a vision, etc.
(Gregorio enters at back and meets Romeo.)

SCENE VI.

(Romeo, Gregorio, and the above)

ROMÉO: (à Grégorio, en lui montrant Juliette). Le nom de cette belle enfant?	ROMEO: The name of that beautiful child?
GRÉGORIO: Vous l'ignorez? C'est Gertrude!	GREGORIO: Easily told; that is Gertrude.
GERTRUDE: (se retournant). Plaît-il?	GERTRUDE: Who calls?
GRÉGORIO: (à Gertrude). Très-gracieuse dame, Pour les soins du souper je crois qu'on vous réclame.	GREGORIO: (to Gertrude). Lady! they're seeking you; and the varlets Are alone without you to excite them.
GERTRUDE: C'est bien! me voici!	GERTRUDE: Goodness! it's true!
JULIETTE: Va! (Gertrude sort avec Grégorio. Roméo arrête Juliette au moment où elle va sortir.)	JULIET: Go! (Juliet is following when Romeo restrains her.)

SCENE VII

SCENE VII.

Roméo, Juliette.	(Romeo and Juliet).
ROMÉO: De grâce, demeurez! (Il se démasque et prend la main de Juliette.) Ange adorable, Ma main coupable Profane, en l'osant toucher, La main divine Dont j'imagine Que une n'a droit d'approcher! Voila, je pense, La pénitence Qu'il convient de m'imposer, C'est qu j'efface L'indigne trace De ma main par un baiser.	ROMEO: I pray you, do not go yet! Fair angel, my guilty hand profanes, to touch, The divine hand that I imagine; That no one is worthy of approaching! So then, I think, the punishment that should be imposed—A kiss, that effaces Unworthy traces This hand has left behind.
JULIETTE: Calmez vos craintes! A ces étreintes Du pélerin prosterné Les saintes même, Pourvu qu'il aime, Ont d'avance pardonné; Mais à sa bouche La main qu'il touche Doit prudemment refuser Cette caresse Enchanteresse Qu'il implore en un baiser!	JULIET: Your hand, good pilgrim, this fine but wrongs, For you blame it too much, To pure devotion surely belongs, Saintly palm that you may touch. There are hands, sacred to pilgrim's greeting, But, ah me! not such as this, Palm to palm, not red lips meeting, Is a holy palmer's kiss!
ROMÉO: Les saintes ont pourtant une bouche vermeille.	ROMEO: To palmer and to saint, have not lips too been given?
JULIETTE: Pour prier seulement.	JULIET: Yes, but only for prayer!
ROMÉO: N'entendent-elles pas la voix qui leur conseille Un arrêt plus clément?	ROMEO: Then grant my prayer, dear saint, or faith may else be driven Into deepest despair!
JULIETTE: Aux prières d'amour leur coeur rest insensible Même en les exauçant.	JULIET: Know, the saints are never moved, And if they grant a prayer, it is for the prayer's sake!
ROMÉO: Exaucez donc mes voeux, et gardez impassible Votre front rougissant! (Il baise la main de Juliette.)	ROMEO: Then do not move, sweetest saint, While the effect of my prayer, I shall take from your lips! (He kisses her hand.)
JULIETTE: (souriant). Ah! je n'ai pu m'en défendre! J'ai pris le péché pour moi!	JULIET: (smiling). Ah! now my lips, from yours, burning, Have the sin that they have taken.
ROMÉO: Pour apaiser votre émoi. Vous plait-il de me le rendre?	ROMEO: O give that sin back again, To my lips their fault returning.
JULIETTE ET ROMÉO: Non! je l'ai pris! . . . Laissez-le moi! Vous l'avez pris! . . . rendez-le moi!	JULIET and ROMEO: No, not again! no, not again! O give the sin to me again!

SCÈNE VIII

SCENE VIII.

Les Mêmes, Tybalt.	(Tybalt, and the above.)
ROMÉO: Quelqu'un! (Il remet son masque.)	ROMEO: Who comes? (Romeo remasks.)
JULIETTE: C'est mon cousin Tybalt.	JULIET: Tybalt, my dear cousin!
ROMÉO: Eh! quoi! vous êtes? . . .	ROMEO: Then say, who are you?
JULIETTE: La fille du seigneur Capulet.	JULIET: Daughter Of Capulet, sir, am I!
ROMÉO: (à part). Dieu! . . .	ROMEO: Ah!
TYBALT: (s'avançant). Pardon, Cousine! . . . nos amis déserteront nos fêtes, Si vous fuyez ainsi leurs regards. Venez donc! (Bas.) Quel est ce beau galant qui s'est masqué si vite En me voyant venir?	TYBALT: (coming down). Pardon, sweet Juliet, though our sport Be not yet at the best, still our guests will go, And you are not there! Come away—come away! (Aside to Juliet.) And tell me true, sweet coz; Do you know That strange pilgrim, who so quickly masked?
JULIETTE: Je ne sais.	JULIET: No—not I!
TYBALT: (avec défiance). On dirait qu'il m'évite!	TYBALT: (with suspicion) It would seem that he shuns me!
ROMÉO: Dieu vous garde, seigneur. (Il sort.)	ROMEO: (to Tybalt). Sir, I bid you good night! (Exit.)

SCÈNE IX

SCENE IX.

Tybalt, Juliette, puis Capulet.	(Tybalt, Juliet, afterwards Capulet.)
TYBALT: Ah! je le reconnais à sa voix! . . . à ma haine! C'est lui! C'est Roméo!	TYBALT: Ah! I recognize his voice! It is he that I hate! It's him! It's Romeo! Even so—it is he, I'll swear!
JULIETTE: (à part). Roméo!	JULIET: (aside). Romeo!
TYBALT: Sur l'honneur, Je punirai le traître, et sa mort est certaine! (Il sort.)	TYBALT: On my family's honor, I'll punish the traitor, and his death is certain. (Exit.)
JULIETTE: (seule). C'était Roméo! Ah! je l'ai vu trop tôt sans le connaître! La haine est le berceau de cet amour fatal! C'en est fait, si je ne puis être A lui, que le cercueil soit mon lit nuptial! (Elle s'éloigne lentement; les invités reparaissent.—Tybalt entre d'un côté avec Pâris, Roméo, Mercutio, Benvolio, et leurs amis masqués entrent de l'autre.)	JULIET: (alone). It was Romeo, he said! Ah! it was the only son of our great foe— The cold grave then is to be my wedding-bed! —Only love springing from my only hate! Seen all too early—and known all too late! (She slowly withdraws; the guests reappear).

SCÈNE X

SCENE X.

Tybalt, Pâris, Roméo, Mercutio, Benvolio, Invités, puis Capulet.	(Tybalt, Paris, Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, guests, afterwards Capulet.)
TYBALT: (apercevant Roméo). Le voici!	TYBALT: (Seeing Romeo). There he stands!
PÂRIS: (abordant Tybalt). Qu'est-ce donc?	PARIS: (Approaching Tybalt). What is it now?

TYBALT: (lui montrant Roméo). Roméo!
(Tybalt va pour s'élancer vers le groupe dès qui rentre en scène; il lui montre Roméo; Capulet, d'un geste impérieux lui impose silence.)

ROMÉO: (à part). Mon nom même
Est un crime à ses yeux!
O douleur! . . . Capulet est son père! et je l'aime!

MERCUTIO: (bas à ses amis). Voyez de quel air furieux
Tybalt nous regarde! Un orage
Est dans l'air!

TYBALT: Je tremble de rage!

CAPULET: (à ses invités). Quoi! partez-vous déjà! demeurez un instant!
Un souper joyeux vous attend!

TYBALT, PÂRIS ET QUELQUES JEUNES GENS: Patience! patience!
De cette mortelle offense
Roméo, j'en fais serment,
Subira le châtiment!

MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO ET LEURS AMIS: On nous observe! silence!
Il faut user de prudence!
N'attendons pas follement,
Un funeste évènement!

CAPULET: (à ses invités). Que la fête recommence!
Que l'on boive et que l'on danse!
Nous autres, j'en fais serment,
Nous dansions plus vaillamment!

LE CHOEUR: Que la fête recommence!
Que l'on boive et que l'on danse!
Le plaisir n'a qu'un moment,
Terminons la nuit gaîment!
(Mercutio entraine Roméo; ils sont suivis de Benvolio et de leurs amis.)

TYBALT: (à demi-voix). Il nous échappe!
Qui veut me suivre! . . .
—Je le frappe
De mon gant au visage!
(Il se dispose à suivre Roméo avec Pâris et quelques jeunes gens.)

CAPULET: (qui s'est rapproché de Tybalt, à demi-voix). Et moi, je ne veux pas D'esclandre, tu m'entends? . . .
Laisse en paix ce jeune homme!
Il me plaît d'ignorer de quel nom il se nomme!
Je te défends de faire un pas!
(à ses invités.)
Allons! jeunes gens!
Allons! belles dames!
Aux plus diligents,
Ces yeux pleins de flammes!

TYBALT: (pointing off to Romeo). Romeo's there!
(Tybalt is about to face the group of the Montagues when he is met by Capulet entering, who makes him silent at a sign.)

ROMEO: (aside). To be Romeo is a crime in her eyes! fatal name!
Capulet is her father; and I love her!

MERCUTIO: (to his friends). Beware—
For see how with anger the fiery Tybalt is chafing:
There's a storm brewing fast!

TYBALT: I burn for vengeance!

CAPULET: What! quit the floor so soon? No, then, gentlemen,
Do not prepare to leave, for a trifling banquet awaits.

TYBALT, PARIS, and FRIENDS: Vengeance comes! Vengeance comes!
And for this shameful intrusion, blood
Alone shall make amends; death to Romeo
I swear!

BENVOLIO, MERCUTIO and FRIENDS: See how they watch us!
No, stir not—and use your wit more than valor;
We heard the foe in their camp; let us not
Wake their ire!

CAPULET: Rouse again the sound of pleasure,
Crush the wine-cup, tread the measure,
Time has been (I swear to you)
When I danced and drank for two!

CHORUS: Rouse again the sound of pleasure,
Crush the wine-cup, tread the measure,
Youth will not endure,
Nothing beyond the present's sure!
(Mercutio drags Romeo away, followed by Benvolio and friends. Exeunt.)

TYBALT: Romeo will escape me!
let who will, follow.
I shall stroke his pretty face with my gauntlet.
(Makes as if to pursue Romeo.)

CAPULET: (aside to Tybalt) Not so! I will not brook disorder!
Do you hear? You shall not follow Romeo!
What a plague it is to me what this youngster is called?
From this place you shall not stir!
(To the guests.)
A hall, sirs, a hall!
Lead forth now each maiden,
Earth treading stars all,
With bright beauty laden!
Like to April on the heel

Nargue des rêveurs
Qui grondent sans cesse,
Fêtez la jeunesse,
Et place aux danseurs!

LE CHOEUR: Nargue des rêveurs
Qui grondent sans cesse,
Fêtons la jeunesse,
Et place aux danseurs!
(La toile tombe.)

ACTE DEUXIÈME.

SCÈNE I

Un jardin. A gauche le pavillon habité par Juliette. La premier étage, une fenêtre avec un balcon. Au fond un balustrade dominant d'autres jardins.

Stéfano, Roméo.

(Stéfano, appuyé contre la balustrade du fond, tient une échelle de corde et aide Roméo à escalader la balustrade; puis il se retire en emportant l'échelle.)

ROMÉO: (seule). O nuit sous tes ailes obscures Abrite moi!

LA VOIX DE MERCUTIO: (au dehors). Roméo! Roméo!

ROMÉO: C'est la voix de Mercutio!
Celui-la se rit des blessures
Qui n'en reçut jamais!

MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO ET LEURS AMIS: (au dehors). Mysterieux et sombre, Roméo ne nous entend pas!
L'amour se plaît dans l'ombre;
Puisse l'amour guider ses pas!
(Les voix s'éloignent.)

ROMÉO: L'amour! . . . Oui, son ardeur a troublé tout mon être!
(La fenêtre de Juliette s'éclaire.)
Mais quelle soudaine clarté
Resplendit à cette fenêtre!
C'est la que dans la nuit rayonne sa beauté!

ROMÉO: Ah! lève toi soleil! fais pâlir les étoiles, qui, dans l'azur sans voiles, Brillent aux firmament. Ah! lève toi! ah! lève toi! parais! parais! astre pur et charmant! Elle rêve! elle dènoue Une boucle de cheveux qui vient caresser sa joue! Amour! Amour! porte lui mes voeux! Elle parle! Qu'elle est belle! Ah! je n'ai rien entendu!
Mais ses yeux parlent pour elle,
Et mon coeur a repondu!
Ah! lève-toi, soleil! etc.

Of lame Winter pressing,
Its coldness caressing,
So love young hearts feel!

CHORUS: Like to April on the heel
Of lame Winter pressing,
Its coldness caressing,
So love young hearts feel!
(The curtain falls.)

ACT II.

SCENE I.

A garden. Juliet's apartments. Practicable window and balcony. At back a parapet overhanging the gardens.

(Stephano and Romeo.)

(Stephano, the page, discovered against the parapet, helping up Romeo by means of a rope ladder. Exit the page, bearing away the ladder.)

ROMEO: O night! spread your pinions above me,
And hide me now!

MERCUTIO: (off). Romeo! Romeo!

ROMEO: 'Tis Mercutio that mocking calls! Ever so
He jests at scars that never felt a wound!

MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO and CHORUS: (off). Love sick, sad and pining,
Here Romeo was seen to wend;
May night, fond lovers shrining,
Now to the pair a covert lend!
(The voices fade off.)

ROMEO: Ah! it is love that has stirred all my being.
(A light is seen at the window.)
Soft! what is that light that so sudden and strange,
Breaks from yonder window? O heart,
It is the east and Juliet is the sun!

ROMEO: Rise, fairest sun in heaven! Pale the stars with your brightness, That over the vault at evening Shines with a feeble light.—Oh! rise again!—Oh! rise again;—and banish Night's dark shades, bid them vanish. She wakes, Ah! ever untwining From their bonds her tresses shining! If my prayer's, love, shall reach your hearing, Love; Love! All my fond vows bearing, Now she speaks. Ah! how lovely!
What she said I have not heard,
But her sparkling eyes speak for her and my heart responds
Ah! fairest sun, arise. Etc.
(The window opens, Juliet comes onto the balcony. Romeo conceals himself.)

SCÈNE II

Roméo, Juliette.
(La fenêtre s'ouvre. Juliette parait à son balcon. Roméo se cache dans l'ombre.)

JULIETTE: Hélas! . . . moi, le haïr! . . . haine aveugle et barbare!
O Roméo! pourquoi ce nom est-il le tien!
Abjure-le, ce nom fatal qui nous sépare,
Ou j'abjure le mien! . . .

ROMÉO: (s'avançant). Est-il vrai? . . . l'as-tu dit? . . . Ah! dissipe le doute
D'un coeur trop heureux!

JULIETTE: Qui m'écoute,
Et surprend mes secrets sous le voile des nuits.

ROMÉO: Je n'ose, en me nommant, te dire qui je suis!

JULIETTE: N'es-tu pas Roméo!

ROMÉO: Non! je ne veux plus l'être,
Si ce nom détesté me sépare de toi!
Pour t'aimer, laisse-moi renaître
Dans un autre que moi!

JULIETTE: Ah! Tu sais que la nuit te cache mon visage!
Tu le sais! . . . Si tes yeux en voyaient la rougeur.
Elle te rendrait témoignage
De la pureté de mon coeur? . . .
Adieu les vains détours! . . . M'aimes-tu? Je devine
Ce que tu répondras. Ne fais pas de serments!
Phoebé, de ses rayons inconstants, j'imagine.
Eclaire le parjure et se rit des amants! . . .
Cher Roméo, dis-moi loyalement: je t'aime!
Et je te crois! . . . Et mon honneur
Se fie au tien, ô mon seigneur,
Comme tu peux te fier à moi-même! . . .
N'accuse pas mon coeur, dont tu sais le secret,
D'être léger, pour n'avoir pu se taire;
Mais accuse la nuit dont le voile indiscret
A trahi le mistère!

ROMÉO: Devant Dieu qui m'entend, je t'engage ma foi!

JULIETTE: Ecoute! . . . on vient! . . . Silence! . . . éloigne-toi! . . .
(Roméo s'éloigne et disparait sous les arbres.—Juliette sa retire du balcon.)

SCENE II.

(Romeo and Juliet.)

JULIET: Ah, me!—And still I love him!
Romeo, why are you Romeo?
Refuse then your name, for it is no part,
My love, of you! What rose we call
By any other name would smell as sweetly;
You are no foe, it is your name!

ROMEO: Can it be
That you are mine? Romeo
I never more will be!

JULIET: Who are you, say,
That, be-screened by the night,
So stumbles on my dream?

ROMEO: I do not know how
To tell you who I am by name.

JULIET: You are Romeo, I know!

ROMEO: No,
Never shall I be known again, dear saint,
By a name that is a foe to you!
Yet, oh, speak!—speak to my soul, bright angel,
To the night you are glorious, as a messenger from heaven!

JULIET: Ah! you know the mask of night
Is on my face,—or my brow would be red
With a maidenly blush for the words
I've spoken to you; wherefore yet deny
What I've said! then, compliment, farewell!
Do you love me?
If so, answer me, yes,
Swear not by the moon—
the inconstant moon
That changes monthly in circled orb;
But by your gracious self, and the oath I'll believe!
If you love me—pronounce it faithfully.
'I love you!'—and I am yours!
O impute not to light love
My passion so true, which the night has discovered!

ROMEO: Ah! my heart is true—and it is all, love, for you!

JULIET: But hearken!—a noise, ah, Romeo
Fly, if they come.
(Exit from balcony.)
(Romeo hides among the trees.)

SCÈNE III

Grégorio, quelques valets, puis Gertrude.

(Grégorio et les valets entrent en scène avec des lanternes sourdes à la main.)

GRÉGORIO Et Les VALETS: Personne! personne!
Le page aura fui!
Au diable on le donne!
Le diable est pour lui!

GRÉGORIO: Le fourbe, le traître
Attendait son maître!
Le destin jaloux
L'arrache à nos coups;
Et demain peut-être
Il rira de nous!

GRÉGORIO Et Les VALETS: Personne! personne, etc.

GERTRUDE: (entrant en scène). De qui parlez-vous donc?

GRÉGORIO: D'un page
Des Montaigus—Maître et valet,
En passant notre seuil, ont osé faire outrage
Au seigneur Capulet.

GERTRUDE: Vous moquez-vous?

GRÉGORIO: Non, sur ma tête!
Un des Montaigus s'est permis
De venir avec ses amis
A notre fête!

GERTRUDE Et Les VALETS: Un Montaigu!

LES VALETS: (à Gertrude) Est-ce pour vos beaux yeux que le traître est venu?

GERTRUDE: Qu'il vienne encore, et sur ma vie!
Je vous le ferai marcher droit,
Si droit, qu'il n'aura pas envie
De recommencer!

GRÉGORIO: On vous croit!

LES VALETS: (riant). Pour cela, nourrice, on vous croit.

GRÉGORIO Et Les VALETS: Bonne nuit, charmante nourrice!
Joignez la grace à vos vertus!
Que le ciel vous bénisse,
Et confonde les Montaigus!
(Grégorio et les valets s'éloignent.)

SCÈNE IV

Gertrude, puis Juliette.

GERTRUDE: Béni soit le bâton qui tôt ou tard me venge
De ces coquins!

JULIETTE: (paraissant sur le seuil du pavillon). C'est toi, Gertrude?

GERTRUDE: Oui, mon bel ange!
Mais comment à cette heure
Ne reposez-vous pas?

JULIETTE: Je t'attendais! . . .

GERTRUDE: Rentrons!

SCENE III.

(Gregorio, Servants, then Gertrude.)

(Gregorio enters with retainers, all have lanterns in their hands.)

GREGORIO and RETAINERS: There's no one—there's no one,
The page has fled,
Satan his patron
Has protected him.

GREGORIO: The sorry, scurvy knave
Was waiting for his master!
Jealous fortune
Saved him from our blows;
He will tell tomorrow
How the slip he gave!

CHORUS: There's no one—there's no one! Etc.

GERTRUDE: (entering). Whom are you speaking of!

GREGORIO: Of a page of the Montagues!
Page and master have dared
To outrage Capulet,
In passing this door!

GERTRUDE: You are mad!

GREGORIO: No! By heavens!
With his friends, a Montague
Has come to this festival!

GERTRUDE and SERVANTS: One of the Montagues!

THE SERVANTS: (to Gertrude). Has love for you, Gertrude, Brought him here?

GERTRUDE: Let him come again, and on my life
I will so well receive him
That he no more will fancy to return!

GREGORIO: This we believe.

SERVANTS: (laughing). This we believe!

GREGORIO and SERVANTS: Good night, charming nurse!
May heaven bless your virtues,
And confound the Montagues!
(Gregorio and Servants exeunt.)

SCENE IV.

(Gertrude, then Juliet.)

GERTRUDE: Blessed be the one
Who would avenge me
Of those rascals! . . .

JULIET: (appears at the door of the pavillon). Is it you, Gertrude?

GERTRUDE: Yes, my angel!
But how is it you aren't sleeping
At this time of night?

JULIET: I was waiting for you!

GERTRUDE: Come in!

JULIETTE: Ne gronde pas!
(Elle jette un regard autour d'elle et rentre dans le pavillon, suivie de Gertrude. Roméo reparait.)

SCÈNE V

Roméo, puis Juliette.

ROMÉO: O nuit divine! je t'implore!
Laisse mon coeur à ce rêve enchanté!
Je crains de m'éveiller et n'ose croire encore
A sa réalité!

JULIETTE: (reparaissant sur le seuil du pavillon, à demi-voix). Roméo!

ROMÉO: (se retournant). Douce amie!

JULIETTE: (l'arrêtant du geste et toujours sur le seuil). Un seul mot! puis adieu!
Quelqu'un ira demain te trouver! . . . Sur ton âme,
Si tu me veux pour femme
Fais-moi dire quelque jour, à quelle heure, en quel lieu
Notre union sera bénie!
Alors, ô mon seigneur, sois mon unique loi!
Je te livre ma vie entière, et je renie
Tout ce qui n'est pas toi!
Mais, si ta tendresse
Ne veut de moi que de folles amours . . .
Ah! je t'en conjure alors
Par cette heure d'ivresse,
Ne me revois plus, et me laisse
A la douleur qui remplira mes jours!

ROMÉO: (à genoux devant Juliette). Ah! je te l'ai dit! . . . je t'adore! . . .
Dissipe ma nuit! sois l'aurore
Où va mon coeur, où vont mes yeux!
Dispose en reine de ma vie!
Verse à mon âme inassouvie
Toute la lumière des cieux!

JULIETTE: On m'appelle!

ROMÉO: (se relevant et saisissant la main de Juliette) Ah! Déjà!

JULIETTE: Pars! Je tremble
Qu'on ne nous voie ensemble!
Je viens!

ROMÉO: Écoute-moi!

JULIETTE: Plus bas!

ROMÉO: (attirant Juliette à lui l'amenant en scène). Non! non! l'on ne t'appelle pas.

JULIETTE: Plus bas! Parle plus bas!

ROMÉO: Ah! ne fuis pas encore!
Ah! ne fuis pas encore! Laisse, laisse ma main s'oublier dans ta main!

JULIET: Pray do not scold!
(She looks around and, followed by Gertrude, steps inside, Romeo reappears.)

SCENE V.

(Romeo, then Juliet.)

ROMEO: Oh blessed night! I am fearful,
Being in night, this is all but a dream,
That, waking, I may find too flattering sweet,
To bide the dawn.
(Enter Juliet from house.)

JULIET: (in a low voice). Romeo!

ROMEO: (turning around). Speak, my dearest!

JULIET: (stopping him). But a word,
Then farewell!
If the faith you pledge be true,
If you want me as your wife,
The tomorrow, my love, send a message to me,
Telling me where and when the rite of marriage will be performed
Then all I have, my lord,
I'll lay low at your feet; through the whole world
I'll follow your steps, though my kinsmen,
Dearest, should say no!
If you are feigning true love,
And your vows all are vain,
I do beseech you then
Cease your wooing and leave me—
Leave me to my grief that will always fill my days!

ROMEO: (kneeling before Juliet).
Do not doubt my affection,
For so thrive my soul, I do love you!
And my life is in your love;
Like a queen dispose of my life!
Fill my unsatiated soul
With all the bliss of the heavens!

JULIET: She is calling!

ROMEO: (seizing Juliet's hand). Ah, not yet!

JULIET: Go! I tremble!
Someone might see us together!
I come!

ROMEO: A moment more!

JULIET: Speak low.

ROMEO: (drawing Juliet to him).
No! no! they don't call you!

JULIET: Beware! I pray you, beware!

ROMEO: Ah! do not flee yet! Ah! do not flee yet! Let me, let me once more kiss your dear hand.

JULIETTE: Ah! l'on peut nous surprendre! Ah! l'on peut nous surprendre! Laisse, laisse ma main s'échapper de ta main. Adieu!

ROMÉO: Adieu!

JULIETTE: Adieu!

LES DEUX: Adieu! De cet adieu si douce est la tristesse Que je voudrais te dire adieu jusqu'a demain!

JULIETTE: Maintenant, je t'en supplie,
Pars!

ROMÉO: Ah! cruelle! . . .
(Roméo s'en va involontairement, elle lui fait signe à revenir.)

JULIETTE: Pourquoi?
Te rappelais-je, ô folie?
A peine es-tu près de moi
Que soudain mon coeur l'oublie!
Je te voudrais parti, pas trop loin cependant
Comme un oiseau captif que la main d'un enfant
Tient enchaîné d'un fil de soie,
A peine vole-t-il, dans l'espace emporté,
Que l'enfant le remène avec des cris de joie,
Tant son amour jaloux lui plaint la liberté!

ROMÉO: Ah! ne fuis pas encore!

JULIETTE: Hélas! il le faut! Adieu!

ENSEMBLE: Adieu! De cet adieu si douce est la tristesse,
Que je voudrais te dire adieu jusqu'à demain!

JULIETTE: Adieu, mille fois! . . .
(elle s'échappe des bras de Roméo et rentre dans le pavillon).

ROMÉO: (seule). Va! . . . repose en paix! sommeille!
Qu'un sourire d'enfant sur ta bouche vermeille.
Vienne doucement se poser! . . .
Et, murmurant encore: Je t'aime! à ton oreille,
Que la brise des nuits te porte ce baiser! (Il s'éloigne.—La toile tombe.)

ACTE TROISIÈME.

SCÈNE I

La cellule du Frère Laurent.

Frère Laurent, Roméo.

ROMÉO: Mon père, Dieu vous garde! . . .

JULIET: Silence, a step is near us, someone, I fear will hear us, Let me, let me at least take my hand from your keeping. Good night!

ROMEO: Good night!

JULIET: Good night!

BOTH: Good night! Dearest, this sweet good night is such sorrow, That I should say, good night, good night—till it be dawn.

JULIET: Now indeed, I do entreat you—go!

ROMEO: Ah! cruel one! . . .
(Is going, when she beckons him involuntarily to return.)

JULIET: For what do I recall thee?
Ah, I know not! and when you're near me,
All the less do I remember. Yes!
I would have you gone, but no further from me,
Than hops the captive bird from lady's idle hand,
With silken gyves its flight restraining,
And as she plucks it back with a gentle command,
So, if you were my bird within my bower remaining,
I too would hold you captive, bound with silken hand!

ROMEO: Ah, might I stay forever?

JULIET: Alas, we must part!
Farewell!

BOTH: Farewell, parting from you is, oh, so sweet a sorrow,
That I could say 'good night' till dawn!

JULIET: Good night, O my love!
(withdraws from Romeo's arms and exit to the house.)

ROMEO: (alone.) Peaceful be your repose! . . . Sleep!
Let a youthful smile of thy rosy lips
Whisper again! I love you! . . .
Let the night breeze bring this kiss to you.
(Exit. Curtain falls.)

ACT III.

SCENE I.

The cell of Frair Lawrence.

(Friar Lawrence and Romeo.)

ROMEO: Holy Father, may God have you in His mercy.

FRÈRE LAURENT: Eh! quoi! le jour à peine
Se lève, et le sommeil te fuit?
Quel espoir vers moi te conduit?
Quel amoureux souci t'amène?

ROMÉO: Vous l'avez deviné, mon père! c'est l'amour.

FRÈRE LAURENT: Eh! quoi! l'indigne Rosaline? . . .

ROMÉO: Quel nom prononcez-vous? Je ne le connais pas!
L'oeil des élus s'ouvrant à la clarté divine
Se s'ouvient-il encore des ombres d'ici-bas?
Aime-t-on Rosaline, ayant vu Juliette?

FRÈRE LAURENT:
Quoi! . . . Juliette Capulet?
(Juliette parait suivie de Gertrude.)

SCÈNE II

Les Mêmes, Juliette, Gertrude.

ROMÉO: La voici!

JULIETTE: (s'élançant dans les bras de Roméo). Roméo! . . .

ROMÉO: Mon âme t'appelait!
Je te vois! . . . ma bouche est muette! . . .

JULIETTE: (à Frère Laurent). Mon père, voici mon époux;
Vous connaissez ce coeur que je lui donne,
A son amour je m'abandonne.
Devant le ciel unissons-nous!

FRÈRE LAURENT: Oui! dussé-je affronter une aveugle colère
Je vous prêterai mon secours.
Puisse de vos maisons la haine séculaire,
S'éteindre en vos jeunes amours!

ROMÉO: (à Gertrude). Toi veille au dehors! . . .
(Gertrude sort.)

SCÈNE III

Roméo, Juliette, Frère Laurent.

FRÈRE LAURENT: Témoin de vos promesses,
Gardien de vos tendresses.
Que le Seigneur soit avec vous!
A genoux!

ROMÉO ET JULIETTE: A genoux!
(Ils s'agenouillent.)

FRÈRE LAURENT: Dieu, qui fit l'homme à ton image,
Et de sa chair et de son sang
Créas la femme, et, l'unissant
A l'homme par le mariage,
Consacras du haut de Sion
Leur inséparable union! . . .

LAWRENCE: Romeo! Why do you come so early?
What brings you to me?
Are you uproused by some secret care,
Or is it love alone that brings you?

ROMEO: You have guessed right, holy father,
It is love.

LAWRENCE: How! Rosaline?

ROMEO: I do not know the name you pronounce,
Shall then the eye
That opens on the light of morning, weep,
With fond regret, the darkness that has fled!
Rosaline is no match, I say,
For my fairest Juliet.

LAWRENCE: What is it then, Juliet Capulet?
(Juliet enters, followed by Gertrude.)

SCENE II.

(The above, Juliet and Gertrude.)

ROMEO: Lo! She comes!

JULIET: (throwing herself into Romeo's arms). Romeo!

ROMEO: My heart was calling you!
You are here now! I can speak no more!

JULIET: (to Lawrence). My father!
It is marriage we seek;
To none but Romeo shall I ever be wedded,
So we come to seek your office,
That holy church makes us one!

LAWRENCE: Strange! that children of two rival houses
Should marry; but in this your help I shall prove;
Who knows this match may bind the foes
Together, and turn all their rancor to love!

ROMEO: (to Gertrude). Nurse, wait outside.
(Exit Gertrude.)

SCENE III.

(Romeo, Juliet, Friar Lawrence.)

LAWRENCE: Guardian of your love,
And of your promises,
May the Lord be with you!
Let us pray.

ROMEO and JULIET: Let us pray.
(They kneel.)

LAWRENCE: God, who made man to his image,
Also created the woman,
And uniting them both
By the scared links of marriage,
On the heights of Sion,
Consecrated their inseparable

Regard d'un oeil favorable
Ta créature misérable
Qui se prosterne devant toi! . . .

ROMÉO ET JULIETTE: Seigneur, nous promettons d'orbéir à tu loi.

FRÈRE LAURENT: Entends ma prière fervente!
Fais que le joug de ta servante
Soit un joug d'amour et de paix!
Que la vertu soit sa richesse,
Que pour soutenir sa faiblesse
Elle arme son coeur du devoin.

ROMÉO ET JULIETTE: Seigneur!
Sois mon appui,
Sois mon espoir!

FRÈRE LAURENT: Que leur vieillesse heureuse voie leurs enfants marchant dans ta loi,
Et les enfants de leurs enfants!

ROMÉO ET JULIETTE: Seigneur! du noir péché c'est toi qui nous défends!

FRÈRE LAURENT: Que ce couple chaste et fidèle,
Uni dans la vie éternelle,
Parvienne au royaume des cieux! . . .

ROMÉO ET JULIETTE: Seigneur, sur notre amour daigne abaisser les yeux!

FRÈRE LAURENT: Roméo, tu choisis Juliette pour femme?

ROMÉO: Oui, mon père.

FRÈRE LAURENT: (à Juliette). Tu prends Roméo pour époux?

JULIETTE: Oui, mon père.
(Roméo et Juliette échange leurs anneaux.)

FRÈRE LAURENT: (mettant la main de Juliette dans celle de Roméo). Devant Dieu qui lit dans votre âme, Je vous unis! . . . Relevez-vous!
(Roméo et Juliette se relèvant.)

SCÈNE IV

Les Mêmes, Gertrude.

(Roméo et Juliette dans les bras l'un de l'autre.)

ENSEMBLE: O pur bonheur! ô joie immense!
Le ciel reçoit nos serments amoureux!
Dieu de bonté, Dieu de clémence,
Sois béni par deux coeurs heureux!
(Roméo et Juliette se séparent.—Juliette sort avec Gertrude.—Roméo sort avec Frère Laurent.)

SCÈNE V

Une rue. A gauche la maison des Capulets.

union.
O Lord, in your mercy,
Cast a favorable eye on them!
Who bows before your throne!

ROMEO and JULIET: O Lord, meekly we promise your laws to obey.

LAWRENCE: Support them in each good endeavor,
Grant that this union may be ever
One of peaceful joy and of love.
Bless them with virture's heavenly riches,
Make them pure and holy, O Lord,
In hearts like spirits above.

ROMEO and JULIET: O Lord, be our leader, be our love.

LAWRENCE: Then, as old age advances,
May they behold their children walk uprightly,
As in your fear, from day to day.

ROMEO and JULIET: O Lord, preserve, we pray, our souls from error's way.

LAWRENCE: And when life and love both are over,
And death breaks the dream of the lover,
O grant that they yet meet above!

ROMEO and JULIET: O father of all! deign now to bless our love!

LAWRENCE: Romeo, say, for your wife you take now this woman!

ROMEO: Yes, my father!

LAWRENCE: (to Juliet). For your husband you take this man?

JULIET: Yes, my father!
(They exchange rings.)

LAWRENCE: (joining their hands together). In his name who marriage ordains,
I join your hands—be man and wife!
(Romeo and Juliet rise.)

SCENE IV.

(The above, Gertrude.)

(Romeo and Juliet embrace each other.)

ALL: Holy father, O heavenly bliss,
Heaven has received our oaths!
To hearts now one, no more to sever!
Bless your name, O Lord.
(Romeo and Juliet exeunt separately, Juliet with Gertrude, Romeo with Lawrence.)

SCENE V.

A street in Verona. Capulet's house at left.

Stephano, seul

STEPHANO: Depuis hier je cherche en vain mon maître!
Est-il encor chez vous, ô Capulets?
Voyons un peu si vos dignes valets
A ma voix ce matin oseront reparaître!
(Il fait mine de pincer de la guitare sur son épée.)
Que fais-tu, blanche tourterelle,
Dans ce nid de vautours?
Quelque jour, déplayant ton aîle,
Tu suivras les amours!
Aux vautours il faut la bataille
Pour frapper d'estoc et de taille,
Leurs becs sont aiguisés!
Laisse-là ces oiseaux de proie,
Tourterelle qui fais ta joie
Des amoureux baisers! . . .
Gardez bien la belle!
Qui vivra verra!
Votre tourterelle
Vous échappera!
Un ramier, loin du vert bocage
Par l'amour attiré,
A l'entour de ce nid sauvage
A, je crois, soupiré.
Les vautours sont à la curée:
Leurs chansons, que fuit Cythérée,
Résonnent à grand bruit!
Cependant qu'en leur douce ivresse
Nos amants content leur tendresse
Aux astres de la nuit! . . .
Gardez bien la belle!
Qui vivra verra!
Votre tourterelle
Vous échappera!

SCÈNE VI

Stephano, Grégorio, Valets.

STEPHANO: Ah! ah! voici nos gens! . . .

GRÉGORIO: Qui diable à notre porte
S'en vient roucouler de la sorte?

STEPHANO: (à part, en riant). La chanson leur déplaît!

GRÉGORIO: (aux autres valets).
Mais parblue! n'est-ce point
Celui que nous chassions heir la dague au poing?

LES VALETS: C'est lui-même!

GRÉGORIO: L'audace est forte!

STEPHANO: Gardez bien la belle!

GRÉGORIO: Est-ce pour nous narguer, mon jeune camarade,
Que vous nous régalez de votre sérénade!

STEPHANO: J'aime la musique!

(Enter Stephano)

STEPHANO: Since yesterday, I've sought my master in vain.
O Capulet, perchance he yet honors your house.
I'll sing a tune, so the servants will rouse.
(He seems to play guitar on his shoulder.)
What do you do, white turtledove,
In this nest of vultures?
One day fly with outspread pinions,
You follow the lovers!
You battle with the vultures,
Young, alone, with claws they will wound thee,
Talons strong, and cruel beak.
Unlike yours, soft and true and slender,
Unlike yours, laid to lips more tender,
In kisses warm and long!
See you guard her safely,
They that live will know;
Or your dove may flutter
From her cage and go!
Now it happened that a ring-dove flying
From his wood-land so green,
To that eyrie came one evening sighing
For her young love, I ween!
Over a banquet of prey they'd mangled,
In the vale the vultures loud wrangled,
Harsh rose their cry afar;
But the doves, for the past atoning,
Heeded not, while their love-vows moaning;
And rose the first bright star!
See you guard her safely,
They that live will know;
Or your dove may flutter
From her cage and go!

SCENE VI.

(Stephano, Gregorio and retainers)

STEPHANO: At last the warriors come!

GREGORIO: In truth I'm in a passion!
Disturbed in this fashion!

STEPHANO: (aside, laughing).
They object to my song!

GREGORIO: What! By god
It is the page, that, sword in hand, last night
We hunted to the door!

CHORUS: It is the rascal!

GREGORIO: Audacious varlet!

STEPHANO: See you guard her safely!

GREGORIO: Do you seek a quarrel,
O most alarming minstrel?
And is it to provoke
You serenade with songs so charming?

STEPHANO: I'm fond of music!

GRÉGORIO: C'est clair;
On t'aura sur le dos, en pareille équipée,
Cassé ta guitare, mon cher!

STEPHANO: Pour guitare j'ai mon épée,
Et j'en sais jouer plus d'un air.

GRÉGORIO: Ah! pardieu! pour cette musique
On peut te donner la réplique!

STEPHANO: (dégainant). Viens donc en prendre une leçon!

GRÉGORIO: (dégainant). En garde!

LES VALETS: (riant). Ecoutons leur chanson!
(Pendant que Grégorio et Stephano se battent.)
Quelle rage!
Vertudieu!
Bon courage,
Et franc jeu!
Voyez comme
Cet enfant
Contre un homme
Se défend!
Fine lame,
Sur mon âme!
Il se bat
En soldat!
(Mercutio et Benvolio entrent en scène.)

SCÈNE VII

Les Mêmes, Mercutio, Benvolio, puis Tybalt, Pâris, Roméo et Partisans des deux maisons.

MERCUTIO: Attaquer un enfant!
(Il tire l'épée et se jette entre les combattants.)
Morbleu! c'est une honte
Digne des Capulets!
Tels maîtres, tels valets!
(Tybalt entre en scène suivi de Pâris et de quelques amis.)

TYBALT: Vous avez la parole prompte, Monsieur!

MERCUTIO: Moins prompte que le bras!

TYBALT: C'est ce qu'il faudrait voir!

MERCUTIO: C'est ce que tu verras!
(Au moment où ils se mettent en garde, Roméo entre en scène et se précipite entre eux.)

ROMÉO: Arrêtez!

MERCUTIO: Roméo!

TYBALT: Roméo! Son démon me l'amène!
(A Mercutio.)
Permettez que sur vous je lui donne le pas!
(A Roméo.)

GREGORIO: Of course—of course!
Yet I've known for such pranks the gay serenader
Has had his guitar broke in two!

STEPHANO: Ah!
Very likely—but then, good fellow,
My guitar's a sword, hard to break!

GREGORIO: Save my soul! if that is your music,
Perhaps we may give you the answer!

STEPHANO: (drawing). Let's try then, if we are in tune!

GREGORIO: (drawing). Have at you!
(They fight.)

CHORUS: (laughing.) We will hear how they play!
How they parry
—how they thrust,
Quick as lightning;
soon shall one bite the dust!
Strong the boy is in defense;
Faith! the issue's in suspense!
Was a soldier ever bolder,
Than this slip of a boy?
(Enter Mercutio and Benvolio.)

SCENE VII.

(The above, Mercutio, Benvolio, then Tybalt, Paris, Romeo and retainers of the two houses.)

MERCUTIO: So you draw on a child! Go to!
It's an achievement worthy of Capulet's fame:
Like master—so, like man!
(Enter Tybalt, Paris and friends.)

TYBALT: (drawing, to Mercutio).
Sir, your word
Seems over-ready to me!

MERCUTIO: We'll join it
With a blow!

TYBALT: You'll find me apt enough.

MERCUTIO: That I can prove at once!
(They engage. Romeo enters hastily and throws himself between them.)

ROMEO: Stop!

MERCUTIO: Romeo!

TYBALT: Romeo here!
It is fate that has led him!
(To Mercutio, with ironical politeness.)
For a time peace be with you; here comes

ROMÉO: Je ne t'ai jamais offensé Le temps des haines est passé!	ROMEO: Never have I wronged you, I do protest! Your name to me is dear as my own.
MERCUTIO: Tu souffrirais ce nom de lâche? O Roméo, t'ai-je entendu? Eh bien, donc, si ton bras doit faillir à sa tâche. C'est à moi désormais que l'honneur en est du!	MERCUTIO: Calm and dishonorable yielding! How is this? Heard I right? So be it! I'll reply with an à la stoccata. (Draws.) So, sir, pluck out your sword—for now I am your man!

MERCUTIO: Non! . . . Je vengerai ton injure! . . . Misérable Tybalt, en garde, et défends-toi!	MERCUTIO: No! Come now, sir, Show your passion; draw, you ratcatcher, draw.
TYBALT: Je suis à toi!	TYBALT: I am for you!
ROMÉO: Ecoute-moi!	ROMEO: Listen to me!
MERCUTIO: Non! laisse-moi!	MERCUTIO: No! let us be!
STEPHANO, BENVOLIO et les MONTAIGUS: Bein! sur ma foi!	STEPHANO, BENVOLIO and the MONTAGUES: It is well! On honor!
PÂRIS et les CAPULETS: En lui j'ai foi! Montaigus! . . . race immonde! Frémissez de terreur! Et que l'enfer seconde Sa haine et sa fureur!	PARIS and the CAPULETS: I trust in him! Montagues—Montagues—offensive race, Tremble in alarm; May demon, lending dark aid, Now nerve his avenging arm!
STEPHANO, BENVOLIO et les MONTAIGUS: Capulets! race immonde! Frémissez de terreur! Et qu l'enfer seconde Sa haine et sa fureur!	BENVOLIO, STEPHANO and MONTAGUE'S RETAINERS: Capulets— Capulets—offensive race, Tremble in alarm; May demon, dark aid lending, Now nerve his avenging arm!

ROMÉO: Haine en malheurs féconde, Dois-tu par ta fureur Toujours donner au monde Un spectacle d'horreur? (Tybalt et Mercutio se battent.)	ROMEO: Rancor and hate never ending, From age to age grow stronger; Rending our homes In sorrow and in woe! (They fight.)
MERCUTIO: Ah blessé!	MERCUTIO: I am wounded!
ROMÉO: Blessé? . . .	ROMEO: Wounded?
MERCUTIO: Que le diable Soit de vos deux maisons! . . . Pourquoi Te jeter entre nous?	MERCUTIO: Plague of your houses, both! . . . but why Did you come between us?
ROMÉO: O sort impitoyable! (À ses amis.) Secourez-le!	ROMEO: Alas! Hurt for my honor! (To his friends.) A surgeon, quick!
MERCUTIO: (chancelant). Soutenez-moi! (On emmène Mercutio.)	MERCUTIO: (staggering). Now help me, there! (Exit, leaning on his friends.)
ROMÉO: Ah! maintenant, remonte au ciel, prudence infâme! Et toi, fureur à l'oeil de flamme, Sois de mon coeur l'unique loi! (Tirant son épée.) Tybalt, il n'est ici d'autre lâche que toi! (poussant une botte à Tybalt). A toi! (Tybalt est touché et chancelle; Capulet entre en scène court à lui et le soutient dans ses bras.—On cesse de se battre.)	ROMEO: Ah! he is slain!—Away to heaven, O shameful caution! And you, O fire-eyed fury, Shall be alone my conduct now. (Drawing sword and advancing.) Tybalt! There is no coward here but you. Fall on! *(Wounds him mortally. Tybalt totters, and falls. ROMÉO: (à part). Ah! qu'ai-je fait? . . . Moi, fuir! maudit par elle!	ROMEO: (aside). O, evil fate—dead!— And he was her kinsman!
BENVOLIO: C'est la mort qui t'attend!	BENVOLIO: If you stay, death awaits you!
ROMÉO: (avec désespoir). Qu'elle vienne donc! Je l'appelle!	ROMEO: Let it then be so. (With despair.) I am ready!
TYBALT: (d'une voix mourante). Un dernier mot! et sur votre âme . . . exauces-moi!	TYBALT: (dying, to Capulet). Yet a word more— This my last prayer—

LE BOURGEOIS: Qu'est-ce donc? . . . C'est Tybalt! il meurt!	CITIZENS: How now? Tybalt is slain!
CAPULET: (à Tybalt). Reviens à toi! (On entend des fanfares.)	CAPULET: (to Tybalt). Revive again! (Procession march heard off.)
LE CHOEUR: O jour de deuil! ô jour de larmes! Un aveugle courroux, Ensanglante nos armes! Et le malheur plane sur nous.	CHORUS: O day of woe! O day of weeping! Blind revenge of our blades In their blood now been steeping And baleful stars hang over our

Le Duc! Le Duc!
(Le Duc entre en scène suivi de son cortège de gentilshommes et de pages portant des torches.)

CAPULET: (se relevant). Justice!

LES CAPULETS: Justice!

CAPULET: (montrant le corps de Tybalt). C'est Tybalt . . . mon neveu . . . tué par Roméo!

ROMÉO: Il avait le premier, frappé Mercutio!
J'ai vengé mon ami, que mon sort s'accomplisse!

LES MONTAIGUS: Justice!

TOUS: Justice!

LE DUC: Eh quoi! toujours du sang!—De vos coeurs inhumains
Rien ne pourra calmer les fureurs criminelles!
Rien ne fera tomber les armes de vos mains,
Et je serai moi-même atteint par vos querelles!
(à Roméo).
Selon nos lois, ton crime a mérité la mort!
Mais tu n'es pas l'agresseur! . . . Je t'exile!

ROMÉO: Ciel!

LE DUC: Et vous, dont la haine en prétextes fertiles
Entretient la discorde et l'effroi dans la ville.
Prêtez tous devant moi le serment solennel.
D'obéissance aux lois et du prince et du ciel!

ROMÉO et les AUTRES: Ah! jour de deuil et d'horreur et d'alarmes,
Mon coeur se brise éperdu de douleur!
Injuste arrêt qui trop tard nous désarmes,
Tu mets le comble à ce jour de malheur!
Je vois périr dans le sang et les larmes
Tous les espoirs et tous les voeux de mon coeur!

LE DUC: Tu quitteras la ville dès ce soir.

ROMÉO: O désespoir! l'exil!
Non! je mourrai—
Mais je veux la revoir!

CHOEUR: La paix? non! jamais!
(La toile tombe.)

ACTE QUATRIÈME

SCÈNE I

La chambre de Juliette. Il fait nuit. La scène est éclairée par un flambeau.

Roméo, Juliette.

heads.
The Duke! The Duke!
(Enter the Duke with suite and torch-bearers.)

CAPULET: (to Duke). Avenge me!

RETAINERS: Avenge us!

CAPULET: (pointing to Tybalt's corpse). Tybalt's slain — my near friend; on Romeo
Is his blood.

ROMEO: From Mercutio first
He struck out lusty life. Then I swore
His revenge; I am ready for my fate!

MONTAGUES: Avenge us!

ALL: Avenge us!

DUKE: How now? In ths sad fray
Has your anger found vent? In your inhuman hearts,
Nothing can calm your criminal furies!
Nothing seems strong enough to keep your hands
From your hilts. Who knows, I
May be next victim of your faction!
(To Romeo.)
For this offense, Romeo, you
Deserve death; but as you did speak him fair,
Then you are banished!

ROMEO: Banished!

DUKE: And you, who in hate ever prone to occasion,
Do inflame in our town woeful strife and aggression,
Swear all on your lives, or at home or abroad,
You will obey the laws of the Duke and your God!

ROMEO and the OTHERS: Ah! direful day, day of woe and of mourning,
Breaking, my heart fails in pain and despair!
Though we disarm, how untimely the warning!
For we may never the ravage repair!
Every desire, every hope grimly scorning,
Only in weeping and blood may we share.

DUKE: Do avoid the city until the night.

ROMEO: Oh, I am banished! Despair!
No! Though I die, I will see her again.

CHORUS: Disarm? No! Revenge!
(The curtain falls.)

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

The chamber of Juliet. It is night. The room is lit by a torch.

(Romeo and Juliet)

(Juliette est assise; Roméo est à ses pieds.)

JULIETTE: Va! je t'ai pardonné! Tybalt voulait ta mort;
S'il n'avait succombé, tu succombais toi-même
Loin de moi la douleur! loin de moi le remords!
Il te haïssait! . . . et je t'aime!

ROMÉO: Ah! redis-le, ce mot si doux!

JULIETTE: Je t'aime, ô Roméo! je t'aime, ô mon epoux!

JULIETTE ET ROMÉO: Nuit d'humenée! O douce nuit d'amour! La destinée M'enchaîne à toi sans retour. O volupté de vivre! O charmes tout puissants! Ton doux regard m'enivre, Ta voix ravit mes sens! Sous tes baisers de flamme voix ravit mes sens! Sous tes baisers de Sous tes baisers de flamme Le ciel, le ciel rayonne flamme Sous tes baiser de flamme Le ciel rayonne.
Je t'ai donne mon âme!
A toi! . . . toujours à toi! . . .
(Les premières lueurs du jour éclairent les vitraux de la fenêtre.—On extend chanter l'alouette.)

JULIETTE: Roméo, qu'as tu donc?

ROMÉO: (se levant). Ecoute, ô Juliette!
L'alouette déjà nous annonce le jour!

JULIETTE: (le retenant). Non! ce n'est pas le jour,
Ce n'est pas l'alouette
Dont te chant a frappé ton oreille inquiète!
C'est le doux rossignol, confident de l'amour!

ROMÉO: C'est l'alouette, hélas! messagère du jour.
(Ils s'approchent de la fenêtre.)
Vois ces rayons jaloux dont l'horizon se dore!
Les flambeaux de la nuit pâlissent! . . . et l'aurore
Dans les vapeurs de l'orient
Se lève en souriant!

JULIETTE: Non! . . . ce n'est pas le jour!—Cette lueur funeste
N'est qu'un doux reflet de l'astre des nuits!
Reste! Reste!

ROMÉO: (serrant Juliette dans ses bras). Ah! Vienne donc la mort! . . . je reste!

JULIETTE: Ah! tu dis vrai! . . . C'est le jour! . . . fuis!
Il faut quitter ta Juliette!

(Juliet discovered on a couch, Romeo at her feet.)

JULIET: Yes, I pardon you—
That Tybalt you have killed; for if Tybalt
Had lived, perchance you would have fallen.
Comfort me! It was your life he sought,
And I love you!

ROMEO: O speak again
That word so fair!

JULIET: Ah, Romeo,
I love you—my husband—dear to me!

JULIET and ROMEO: Oh! blessed night hymenial, Oh sweet night of love! Destiny enchains me forever. Oh voluptuous life! Oh all powerful charms! Your sweet regard enraptures me, Your voice ravages Your sweet regard enraptures me, my senses Under your flaming kisses your voice ravages my senses, Under your flaming, Under your flaming kisses the sky, the sky, beams kisses, Under your flaming kisses, the sky beams.
I give you my soul
It is your, yours forever.
(Day breaks; the lark is heard.)

JULIET: Romeo, what are you doing?

ROMEO: (rising). Ah, listen, Juliet!
Dearest Juliet, The lark that you hear,
Is the herald of morn.

JULIET: (restraining him). No! It is not yet near day,
No lark pierced your ear, love.
It is the nightingale's note,
That she nightly sings there!

ROMEO: No, it is the lark, alas!
Early herald of morn; look, love,
(They come to the window.)
What envious streaks, clouds in the east
Are lacing! now night's candles
Are burning pale; on the mountains,
On tip-toe stands jocund day.

JULIET: No, love, it is not day—
Rather some wandering meteor.
Remain!
Remain!
(Romeo embraces Juliet passionately.)

ROMEO: Let me be put to death—
I'm staying.

JULIET: Ah! you were right, it is day!
Go! go away—wait no longer!

ROMÉO: Non! Non! ce n'est pas le jour, ce n'est pas l'alouette! C'est le doux rossignol, confident de l'amour!	ROMEO: No, no! It is not yet near day, It was no lark pierced thine ear, love; It was the nightingale's note On the pomegranate tree!
JULIETTE: C'est l'alouette, hélas! messagère du jour! Pars, ma vie!	JULIET: No! It is the lark; alas! early herald of morn, Love, now leave me!
ROMÉO: Un baiser, et je pars! . . .	ROMEO: One more kiss, And I go!
JULIETTE: (s'abandonnant à l'étreinte de Roméo). Loi cruelle!	JULIET: (leaving Romero's embrace). Cruel fate!
ROMÉO: Ah! reste! reste encore dans mes bras enlacés! Un jour il sera doux à notre amour fidèle De se ressouvenir de ses tourments passés!	ROMEO: Yet doubt not That we'll meet, my Juliet, again! And all these woes shall serve, love, For sweet discourses in our time to come!
JULIETTE: Il faut partir, hélas! Il faut quitter ces bras Où je te presse, Et t'arracher à cette ardente ivresse!	JULIET: But now indeed farewell! For dawn does end the spell With young love glowing, And you my soul's delight Are going afar!
ROMÉO: Il faut partir, hélas! Alors qu'entre ses bras Elle me presse! Et c'en est fait de cette ardente ivresse!	ROMEO: But now indeed farewell! For dawn does end the spell With young love glowing, From you my soul's delight I'm going afar!
JULIETTE: Ah! que le sort Qui de toi me sépare Plus que la mort Est cruel et barbare!	JULIET: O fortune, grant Though we part now in sorrow, Our love may blossom More brightly tomorrow!
ROMÉO: Adieu, mon âme! Adieu, ma vie! . . . (Roméo franchit le balcon et disparait.)	ROMEO: Farewell! my soul, my love! (Romeo goes off the balcony. Juliet watches his descent.)
JULIETTE: Adieu! toujours à toi! Anges du ciel, à vous je le confie! . . .	JULIET: Farewell, oh, dear one! Angels above, To you, to you. I now confide my love!
SCÈNE II	SCENE II.
Juliette, Gertrude, puis Capulet et Frère Laurent.	(Juliet, Gertrude, afterwards Capulet and Friar Lawrence.)
GERTRUDE: (paraissant). Juliette! . . . Ah! le ciel soit loué! . . . votre époux Est parti! Voici votre père!	GERTRUDE: (entering). Where is Juliet? (Sees her.) Ah! a mercy, my child, That your husband is gone! your father is coming!
JULIETTE: Dieu! saurait-il? . . .	JULIET: Heaven! will he know?
GERTRUDE: Rien, j'espère! . . . Frère Laurent le suit.	GERTRUDE: Nay, that he will not; The friar comes with him—
JULIETTE: Seigneur! protège-nous! (Entre Capulet suivi de Frère Laurent.)	JULIET: In heaven I put my trust! (Enter Capulet and Friar Lawrence.)
CAPULET: Quoi! ma fille, la nuit est à peine achevée, Et tes yeux sont ouverts, et te voilà levée! Hélas! notre souci, je le vois, est pareil, Que l'hymne nuptial succède au bruit des armes! Fidèle au dernier voeu que Tybalt à formé! Reçois de lui l'époux que sa bouche à nommé Souris au milieu des tes larmes!	CAPULET: How now, daughter? the daylight yet is young In heaven—and behold! you are awake, As if you had not slumberred. Alack! On you too, weighs my care, I can see, And a deep regret for the youth we have lost! Let the nuptial hymns Succeed to shocks of arm! And faithful to Tybalt's last thought! Receive the husband he has named! And smile amid your tears!
JULIETTE: Cet époux, quel est-il?	JULIET: Who is he I'm to wed?
CAPULET: Le plus noble entre tous. Le comte Pâris!	CAPULET: The noblest of us all! Paris, brave and true!
JULIETTE: (à part). Dieu!	JULIET: (in terror). Ah!
FRÈRE LAURENT: (bas à Juliette). Silence!	LAWRENCE: (aside to Juliet). Be silent!
GERTRUDE: (de même). Calmez-vous!	GERTRUDE: (aside to Juliet). On your guard!
CAPULET: L'autel est préparé; Pâris a ma parole, Soyez unis tous deux sans attendre à demain! Que l'ombre de Tybalt, présente à cet hymen, S'apaise enfin et se console! La volonté des morts, Comme celle de Dieu lui-même, Est une loi sainte, une loi suprême; Nous devons respecter la volonté des morts.	CAPULET: The altar is ready! Paris has my word! Be married this very day! That the soul of Tybalt, Present to the marriage, May rest in peace! The will of the dead As that of God itself, Is a supreme and holy law Which we must respect.
JULIETTE: (à part). Ne crains rien, Roméo, mon coeur est sans remords!	JULIET: (aside). Still my heart is yours, my love, for always.
GERTRUDE: (à part). Dans leur tombe laissons dormir en paix les morts!	GERTRUDE: (aside). Let the dead in cold obstruction rest forever!
FRÈRE LAURENT: Elle tremble! et mon coeur partage ses remords!	LAWRENCE: How she trembles! still her heart will obey love.
CAPULET: Frère Laurent saura te dicter ton devoir. Nos amis vont venir; je vais les recevoir. (Il sort, suivi de Gertrude.)	CAPULET: You, holy father, can instruct her in duty, I know; Our friends are coming, I go to receive them! (Exit, followed by Gertrude.)
SCÈNE III	SCENE III.
Frère Laurent, Juliette.	(Friar Lawrence and Juliet.)
JULIETTE: (avec désespoir). Tout est perdu, mon père! tout m'accable! J'ai pour vous obéir, Caché mon désespoir et mon amour coupable! C'est à vous de me secourir, A vous de m'arracher à mon sort misérable! Parlez, mon père! . . . ou bien je suis prête à mourir! (Elle lui montre un poignard.)	JULIET: (in despair). My father! I am past cure, past hope, past help; Love, and my secret troth I've kept hid in my breast, For you did so advise me. In my need Now to you I turn; from out your long Experience, O give present counsel. O give me, my father, a hope—if not, Then I'm ready to die! (She takes a dagger from her breast.)
FRÈRE LAURENT: Ainsi la mort ne trouble point votre âme?	LAWRENCE: My child! then death has for you no terrors?
JULIETTE: Non, non, plutôt la mort que ce mensonge infâme!	JULIET: No!—none—far worse than death Living a wife, shame-stained! (Lawrence takes out a vial.)
FRÈRE LAURENT: (lui présentant un flacon). Buvez donc ce breuvage, et des membres au coeur, Va soudain se répandre une froide langueur	LAWRENCE: Drink then, drink of this potion, When you are alone! quickly a drowsy humor. Shall run though your veins: and

De la mort mensongère image;
Dans vos veines bientôt le sang s'arrêtera;
Bientôt une pâleur livide effacera
Les roses de votre visage.
Vos yeux seront fermés ainsi que dans la mort!
En vain éclateront alors les cris d'alarmes
"Elle n'est plus!" diront vos compagnes en larmes;
Et les anges du ciel répondront: "Elle dort!"
Dans la nuit du tombeau vous dormirez comme eux.
C'est là qu'après un jour votre corps et votre âme,
Comme d'un foyer mort se ranime la flamme.
Sortiront de ce lourd sommeil.
Par l'ombre protégés, votre époux et moi-même
Nous épîrons votre réveil,
Et vous fuirez au bras de celui qui vous aime!
Hésitez-vous?

JULIETTE: (prenant le flacon).
Non! non! à votre main
J'abandonne ma vie!

FRÈRE LAURENT: A demain!

JULIETTE: A demain!
(Frère Laurent sort.)

SCÈNE IV

Juliette, seule.

JULIETTE: Dieu! quel frisson court dans mes veines?
Si ce breuvage était sans pouvoir! . . . craintes vaines!
Je n'appartiendrai pas au comte malgré moi! Non!
(Cachant le poignard dans son sein.)
Non! ce poignard sera le gardien de ma foi!—Viens!
Amour, ranime mon courage,
Et de mon coeur chasse l'effroi!
Hésiter, c'est te faire outrage!
Trembler est un manque de foi!
Verse toi-même ce breuvage! . . .
O Roméo, je bois à toi!
(Après avoir versé le contenu du flacon dans une coupe, elle s'arrête.)
Mais, si demain pourtant, en ces caveaux funèbres,
Je m'éveillais avant son retour! . . .
Dieu puissant!
Cette pensée horrible a glacé tout mon sang!
Que deviendrai-je en ces ténèbres,
Dans ce séjour de mort et de gémissements
Que les siècles passés ont rempli d'ossements?
Où Tybalt, tout saignant encore de shall seize on

Each vital spirit: Then its progress
Shall keep no pulse, but shall cease to beat!
All soon the roses on your lips, and on
Your cheek shall wither and fade into ashes;
Your eyelids too will close—as life is shut
By death.
Loud will they raise the sound of lamentation
'Juliet is dead!' 'Juliet is dead!' for so Shall they deem you reposing. But
The angels above will reply 'she but sleeps!'
for two-and-forty hours, you shall lie in death's seeming.
And then, to life awakening as from a pleasant dreaming,
From the ancient vault you shall haste away;
Your husband shall be there, in the night, to watch over thee,
Nigh to you ever, on your waking we will stay,
so shall this drink once more to life and love restore you;
Are you afraid?

JULIET: (taking the vial). No! no! in your hand
I give up my life!

LAWRENCE: Till tomorrow!

JULIET: Till tomorrow!
(Lawrence exit.)

SCENE IV.

(Juliet alone)

JULIET: O Lord! what icy thrill pervades my veins!
Should this potion be without effect!
Vain fears! never against my will Shall I be the Count's bride.
(Hiding the dagger in her bosom.)
No! this dagger shall be the keeper of my faith! Come!
O Love! give strength and courage
To my heart. To hesitate is an outrage!
To tremble is a want of faith.
O! pour yourself this beverage! . . .
O Romeo, I drink to you!
(Having poured the contents of the vial in a cup, she stops.)
Ah! But if in those funeral cells!
I should awake before his return! . . .
Almighty God! this awful thought
Has struck me with horror,
What shall I become in that darkness!
In that abode of death and groans,
That the past centuries have filled with corpses!
Where Tybalt, yet bloody from his wounds
In the dark night, by my side shall rest, sa blessure

Près de moi, dans la nuit obscure,
Dormira? . . . Dieu! ma main rencontrera sa main!
(Avec égarement.)
Quelle est cette ombre à la mort échapée?
C'est Tybalt! . . . Il m'appelle! . . . Il veut de mon chemin
Ecarter mon époux, et sa fatale épée . . .
Non! . . . fantômes, disparaissez!
Dissipe-toi, funeste rêve!
Que l'aube du bonheur se lève
Sur l'ombre des tourments passés! . . .
(Saisissant la coupe.)
Viens! Viens!
Amour, ranime mon courage,
Et de mon coeur chasse l'effroi;
Hésiter, c'est te faire outrage;
Trembler, est un manque de foi;
Verse toi-même ce breuvage,
O Roméo,je bois à toi!
(Elle boit.—Gertrude paraît au fond suivie de jeunes filles. Juliette va à leur rencontre et sort avec elles.)

SCÈNE V

Une galérie du palais.—Au fond, les portes de la chapelle.

Capulet, Pâris, Frère Laurent, Grégorio, Juliette, Gertrude, jeunes filles, amies et serviteurs des Capulets. Cortège nuptial.

(Un prélude d'orgue se fait entendre; les portes de la chapelle s'ouvrent; un cortège de cleres et d'enfants de choeur entre en scène.)

CAPULET: (offrant la main à Juliette). Ma fille, cède aux voeux du fiancé qui t'aime;
Le ciel va vous unir par des voeux éternels;
Le bonheur vous attend au pied des saints autels;
De cet hymen béni voici l'instant suprême!
(Pâris s'avance et se dispose à passer son anneau au doigt de Juliette.)

JULIETTE: (Retirant sa main et à demi-voix, comme dans un rêve). La haine est le berceau de cet amour fatal! . . .
Que le cercueil soit mon lit nuptial! . . .
(Elle porte la main à sa tête et en détache sa couronne de fiancée; ses cheveux se déroulent et tombent sur ses épaules.)

CAPULET: Juliette! . . . reviens à toi! . . .

JULIETTE: Dieu . . . je chancelle! . . .
(On l'entoure et on la soutient.)
Quelle nuit m'environne? . . . et

Oh! should my hand meet his!
(With madness.)
What ghost is that, from death escaped?
It is Tybalt; he calls me! . . . he wants
From my way to drive my husband
And his fatal sword! . . .
No!—Away, you ghosts—
And you! fatal dreams! away!
Let the dawn of happiness rise
Over the shadows of past torment.
(Seizing the cup.)
O Love! give strength and courage
To my heart! To hesitate is an outrage!
To tremble is a want of faith,
O pour yourself this beverage!
O! Romeo! I drink to you! . . . .
(She drinks,—enter Gertrude followed by girls. Juliet goes to meet them, and departs with them.)

SCENE V.

A hall of the Palace—At back the door of the chapel.

Capulet, Paris, Friar Lawrence, Gregorio, Juliet, Gertrude, girls, friends, and retainers of the Capalets Wedding train.

(The organ is heard, the doors of the Chapel open, a procession of clergy and chorus children enter.)

CAPULET: (taking Juliet's hand). Daughter, yield to the will of the betrothed who loves you.
God is going to unite you with eternal bonds;
Happiness waiting for you at the foot of the holy altars,
From that blessed Hymn here is the supreme moment.
(Paris comes forward to place the ring on the finger of Juliet.)

JULIET: (withdrawing her hand, and as in a dream). Hatred is the source of this fatal love!
Let a coffin be my wedding couch.
(She detaches her bridal wreath; her hair falls on her shoulders.)

CAPULET: O Juliet! come back to your senses!

JULIET: O Lord!—I totter! . . .
(They surround her.)
Whose is that voice that calls me?
Can it be death!

quelle voix m'appelle?
Est-ce la mort? . . . j'ai peur! . . . mon père! . . . adieu! . . .
